Nilesh Ojha's

HUMAN RIGHTS MANUAL

HUMAN RIGHTS BEST PRACTICES FOR CRIMINAL COURTS & POLICE

(VOLUME - I)

HOW TO PROSECUTE JUDGES, POLICE AND GOVT. PLEADERS

WITH

HOW TO GET BAIL

(A COMPLETE GUIDE FOR GETTING BAIL)

(Revised 2nd Edition 2014)

By

Adv. Nilesh C. Ojha

National President
Human Rights Security Council (NGO)
Advocate, Supreme Court & High Court

Co-Author

Adv. Vivek Ramteke
Advocate, Bombay High Court

Adv. Shanti Krishna Teli
Advocate, Bombay High Court

WITH THE BLESSINGS OF 'ALL MIGHTY ALLAH'

ABOUT THE BOOK.

- Second Edition : April, 2014.
- Published by : Shri. Rashid Khan Pathan

For Human Rights Security Council, NagpurPrinted

by :

Also available with our Branch Office, Throughout the State.

Distibutors

1) Tripathi Law House Dhotiwala complex, Biyani Chowk garden near D-mart ,Camp road Amaravati- 444602 Mob- 9422915076
2) Ashirwad Law Book, Nagpur

Publishers Note/Disclaimer

Every effort has been made to avoid errors or omissions in this publication. In spite of this, errors may creep in. Any mistake, error or discrepancy noted may be brought to our notice which shall be taken care of in the next edition. That book wiil be / is sold on the condition and understanding that, it is meant only for the purpose of refrence at private use of the members of the organization, Human Rights Security Council, and not as legal precedents. Neither the publisher nor the author or seller will be responsible for any damage or loss of action to anyone, of any kind, in any manner, therefrom. It is suggested that to avoid any doubt the reader should crosscheck all the facts, law and contents of the publication with original publication such as Criminal LAW JOURNAL, AIR, ALL MR ETC. Our members are not responsible for the result of any action taken on the basis of this work nor any error or omission to any person. Whether a purchaser of this book or not.

****

-: THIS BOOK IS DEDICATED TO :-

1) Prophet Muhammad
2) Swami Vivekananda
3) Rashtrapita Mahatma Gandhi
4) Bharatratna Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar
5) Martin Luther King
6) Spiritual Guru Shri. Pyarebhai,Pusad
7) Parents Sau. Suman & Chandrabhushan Ojha
8) Master Navmesh, Kaushal, Raj, Ku. Kunjika & Ku. Manya

AND - All Human Rights Activists and all those who directly and indirectly help us in publishing this book

****

CONTENTS

OUR INSPIRATION

Hon'ble Mr. Justice N.D. Ojha
Former Judge Supreme Court

PROFILE

- Mr. Justice Narayan Dutta Ojha, Born on 19th January, 1926 in District Pratapgarh (U.P.). Passed High School Examination from Daraganj High School, Allahabad in 1939 and Intermediate Examination from the K.P. Intermediate College, Allahabad in 1941. Did his B.A. In1943 and L.L.B. In 1945 from University of Allahabad. Married to Savitri Devi on 15th June, 1948. Practised for a few years as a Pleader in the District Courts of Allahabad. Enrolled Advocate of the Allahabad High Court on 20th December, 1951. Conducted civil and constitutional cases in the Allahabad High Court. Appointed Additonal Judge of the Allahabad High Court with effect from 3rd September,1971 and permanent Judge of that High Court on 12th December, 1972. Was Acting Chief Justice of the Allahabad High Court from 18th August, 1986 to 30th September, 1986. Appointed Chief Justice of Madhya Pradesh High Court on 8th January, 1987. Discharged the functions of governor Madhya Pradesh from 1st December, 1987 to 29th December, 1987 and thereafter continued as Chief Justice of Madhya Pradesh High Court.
- Appointed Judge of the Supreme Court on 18th January, 1988.
- Retired on 18.1.1991.

Judges are bound by precedents and procedure:-

Justice Gopal Oza,

Former Judge, Supreme Court of India.

==========

AIR 1990 SUPREME COURT 261

Constitution of India, Art.141- PRECEDENTS - Judges are bound by precedents and procedure - They could use their discretion only when there is no declared principle to be found, no rule and no authority - where a single judge or a Division Bench does not agree with the decision of a Bench of co-ordinate jurisdiction, the matter shall be referred to a larger Bench. It is a subversion of judicial process not to follow this procedure - it is the duty of judges of superior courts and tribunals to make the law more predictable. The question of law directly arising in the case should not be dealt with apologetic approaches. The law must be made more effective as a guide to behaviour. It must be determined with reasons which carry convictions within the Courts, profession and public. Otherwise, the lawyers would be in a predicament and would not know how to advise their clients. Sub-ordinate courts would find themselves in an embarrassing position to choose between the conflicting opinions. The general public would be in dilemma to obey or not to obey such law and it ultimately falls into disrepute- One must remember that pursuit of the law, however glamorous it is, has its own limitation on the Bench.

==========

OUR INSPIRATION

Hon'ble Mr. Justice G.L. Oza
Former Judge, Supreme Court

Term of Supreme Court: 29/10/1985 to 11/12/1989

PROFILE

- Shri Justice Goverdhan Lal Oza was born on 12th December, 1924 at Ujjain. His father Shri Jamnalalji Oza has been a well known Social worker of Ujjain. He had his early education at Madhav College, Ujjain.
- In the student days he took active part in student politics and the freedom movement called 'Quit India' under the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi. As a student, he also led the agitation against the rulers of the Holkar State who wanted not to merge with the Indian Union and ultimately the ruler accepted the merger of the State in the Indian Union. In 1948, he joined the Bar at Indore. In the early days at the Bar he was actively associated with the politics in the country and attended the Asian Socialist Conference at Rangoon (Burma) in December, 1952 as a delegate from India.
- He has been a lawyer of outstanding merit. He has worked in Constitutional, Civil, Criminal, Labour and other cases. He has been associated with practically all the important and sensational cases at Indore for about a decade before elevation to the Bench.
- On 29th July, 1968, he was sworn in as Additional Judge of the M.P. High Court at Jabalpur. He joined the Indore Bench of the High Court. Indore Bar welcomed the appointment of their colleagues with acclamation.
- As a Judge he was the pioneer in starting the work of legal aid and founded a voluntary legal aid and education society. It continued to function till the State Government took over the legal aid programme.
- On 3rd January, 1984 he took over as the Chief Justice of the State and was Acting Chief Justice till 1st of December, 1984 when he was appointed as the permanent Chief Justice of the High Court of Madhya Pradesh.
- On 29th of October, 1985 he took the oath of office as a Judge of the Supreme Court of India.
- Retired on 11th Dec 1989

OUR NGO WILL ALWAYS REMAIN GREATFUL TO FOLLOWING HON'BLE JUDGES FOR THEIR LANDMARK JUDGEMENTS

1) Justice A.M.Ahmadi, Former Chief Justice of India
2) Justice V.R Krishna Aiyyar Judge, Supreme Court
3) Justice Dr. Dalveer Bhandari, Judge, Supreme Court
4) Justice K.S.P. Radhakrishnan, Judge, Supreme Court
5) Justice N. Santosh Hegde, Former Judge, Supreme Court
6) Justice B.S. Chauhan Judge, Supreme Court
7) Justice Dr. A.S. Anand ,Former Judge, Supreme Court
8) Justice Kuldip Singh Former Judge, Supreme Court
9) Justice S.C Agrawal Former Judge, Supreme Court
10) Justice Saghir Ahmad, Former Judge, Supreme Court
11) Justice P.N. Bhagwati, Former Judge, Supreme Court
12) Justice Y.V Chandrachud, Former Judge, Supreme Court
13) Justice K. Ramaswamy, Former Judge, Supreme Court
14) Justice G.B. Patnaik , Former Judge, Supreme Court
15) Justice S.C. Sen, Former Judge, Supreme Court
16) Justice G.S. Singhavi Judge, Supreme Court
17) Justice H.L Dattu Judge, Supreme Court
18) Justice Gopal Oza, Former Judge, Supreme Court
19) Justice Sharad Bobade Judge, Supreme
20) Justice A.M.Khanwilkar, Chief Justice,Himachal Pradesh HighCourt
21) Justice B.R. Gavai Judge, Bombay High Court
22) Justice Arun Choudhary Judge, Bombay High Court
23) Justice R.M.S. Khandeparkar, Former Chief Justice, High Court
24) Justice Abhay Thispe , Judge Bombay High Court.
25) Justice V.M. Kanade, Judge, Bombay High Court
26) Justice A.V. Potdar, Judge, Bombay High Court
24) Justice R.C. Chavan, Former Judge, Bombay High Court
25) Justice R. Basant, Former Judge , Keria High court
26) Justice S.S Parkar, Former Judge, Bombay High Court
27) Justice S.P. Kukdey, Former Judge, Bombay High Court.

& all other Hon'ble Judges delivering judgments which protect and uphold Human Rights

-: WE ARE THANKFUL TO :-

1) Adv. Onkareshwar Kakade, High Court, Nagpur.
2) Adv. Shailesh Narnawre, High Court, Nagpur.
3) Adv. Rajendrasingh Kakan, Pusad.
4) Dr. Uma Mangesh Hindlekar, Devgad, Sindhudurga.
5) Adv. Ashish Deshmukh, Chairman , Bar Council of Maharashtra & Goa
6) Adv. Anil Goverdipe, Vice -Chairman , Bar Council of Maharashtra & Goa
7) Adv. Ashok Mundargi , Senior Counsel, High Court, Mumbai.
8) Adv. Shirish Gupte , Senior Counsel, High Court, Mumbai.
9) Adv. Satyajeet Desai, Supreme Court, New Delhi.
10) Adv. Nishant Katneshwarkar, Supreme Court, New Delhi.
11) Adv. Awatarsingh Gurunasinghani, Arvi, Wardha.
12) Adv. Arunchandra Kapadiya, High Court, Aurangabad.
13) Adv. S.S. Quazi, High Court, Aurangabad.
14) Adv. Subhash Jha , High Court, Mumbai.
15) Adv. Hardik Vyas , High Court, Mumbai.
16) Adv. Niranjan Mogre , High Court, Mumbai.
17) Adv. Haresh Bhandari , Thane.
18) Adv. Amit Sheth , High Court, Mumbai.
19) Adv. Sharad P. Pawar, High Court, Nagpur.
20) Adv. Shrikant H. Sudame , Nagpur
21) Adv. Ravi Ade, High Court, Aurangabad.
22) Adv. Gopal M. Karhale, Umerkhed.
23) Adv. Pramod Dethe, High Court, Nagpur.
24) Adv. Pravin Chawre, Umerkhed.
25) Adv. Ramesh Patil,Pusad.
26) Adv. Balaji Kapte, Pusad.
27) Adv. Prashant Deshmukh, Pusad.
28) Adv Gajanan Deshmukh, Pusad.
29) Adv. Prashant Pande, Pusad.
30) Adv C.L. Thool, Yavatmal.

31) Adv. Deepak Gosavi, Amravati.
32) Adv. Dinesh Rathod. Pusad.
33) Adv. Gajanan Chavan, Thane.
34) Adv. Rajy Gaikwad, Thane.
35) Adv. Rajan Salunke, Thane
36) Adv. Santosh Bhalerao, Thane
37) Adv. Sudeep S. Jaiswal, President, District Bar Association,, Nagpur
38) Adv.Manoj A. Sable , General Secretary, District Bar Association,, Nagpur
39) Adv. Sandeep Dongre, District Court, Nagpur.
40) Adv. Mahesh H. Rahangdale, District Court, Bhandara.
41) Adv. Najib Shaikh, District Court, Akola.
42) Adv. Juned Khan, Karanja, Washim.
43) Adv. Taterao Deshmukh, Kalamnuri, Hingoli.
44) Adv. Krishna Sonule, Hadgaon, Nanded
45) Adv. Madhukar Gore, Hadgaon, Nanded.
46) Adv. Vitthal Makhane, Kalamnuri, Hingoli.
47) Adv. Bharat Jadhav , Pusad.
48) Adv. Vivek Pande, Pusad.
49) Adv. Azhar Khan, Pusad
50) Adv. Zahir Khan, Pusad
51) Adv. Nasrullah Khan, Pusad
52) Adv. Arjun Rathod , Pusad.
53) Adv. Manoj Ghadge , Pusad.
54) Adv. Madhav Mane, Pusad.
55) Adv. Yogendra Pathak, Pusad.
56) Adv. Shivaji Kharate, Pusad
57) Adv. Gitesh Pande, Pusad.
58) Adv. Meghraj Dhule, Pusad, Yavatmal.
59) Adv. Abhijeet Rode, Darwha, Yavatmal.
60) Adv. Ravi Indoriya, Pusad
61) CA. Yogesh R. Jagiwala, Mumbai.
62) CA. Rajesh Shukla, Yavatmal.
63) Miss. Barbie Sanghvi, Bhayander , Thane.
64) Miss. Chhaya Pawar , Bhayander , Thane.
65) Adv. Amol Kotamkar, Wardha.
66) Adv. Vinod Gangwal, High Court , Mumbai.

Preserve Everyone's Human Rights

Shri. Raj Khilnani
Addl. Director General
Of Police Maharashtra.

Amravati :-

POLICEMEN should not feel that the Human Rights Act puts restrictions on their work. The Act is actually meant to help them to work within the frame of constitution.

Human Rights commission and the Act have been made because of the demand and pressure from common people. We always talk about human rights of the accused and the criminals. We should not forget that it is also the rights of witnesses in court, complainants, common people and police. We should strive for maintaining rights of everyone. Besides accused, common people should also be considered within the sphere of Human Rights.

People who are victims of bomb blasts at various places also come under Human Rights.

Clash between police and accused regarding Human Rights occurs mostly because of ego problems. Police should try to keep there emotions in control and use techniques like meditation to keep their cool.

Date 17 January 2007

Courtesy : The Hitwada 18/01/2007

****

CAN THE POLICE DO THEIR JOBS OF ARRESTING THE GUILTY WITH SO MANY RESTRICTIONS ?

First of all it is not the job of the police to decide who is guilty or who is not. The police are only to apprehend or catch suspects and accused people. But they cannot behave as if the person is already guilty and they have the right to punish them. That is a job for the courts. Meanwhile, people in custody must be given every protection from flase accusations and mistreatment. That is why the "restrictions" are there. Actually they are not restrictions at all, but just procedures designed to make sure that everyone has a fair chance before the courts.

Courtesy – Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative

****

****

Don't see "Who" is Right,

But see "What" is Right

Then only there will be impartial justice.

****

……. Adv. Nilesh C. Ojha

****

Any Judge Who Seeks

Immunity from truth under

The cover of the robe

Robs the rights of we

The people of India."

…….. Justice V R Krishna Iyer

****

****

-: CHAPTER =1 :-

TOPICAL INDEX OF CASE LAWS

****

TOPICAL INDEX

1	Bail - Can be granted even if prima facie case exists against accused.	2013 ALL MR(CRI) 2112 = LAWS(BOM)-2013-1-190	111
2	Anticipatory bail - I.P.C. S. 302 – Murder case - Frivolity in prosecution should always be considered - If there is some doubt then accused is entitled to order of bail - It has to be examined that whether Whether there is family dispute between them - If connivance between the complainant and investigating officer is established then action be taken against investigating officer. B.Accused is presumed to be innocent unless proved guilty by the court - The rate of conviction is less than 10% then Police should be slow in arresting the accused. - Therefore it is suggested that the accused be directed to join the investigation and only when the accused does not co-operate with the investigating agency then only the accused be arrested - When court is of the opinion that the accused had joined the investigation and not likely to abscond then custodial interrogation (PCR) should be avoided - The accused should be granted anticipatory bail. D.Proper course of action to be adopted by court - After evaluating records of the case if anticipatory bail is to be granted - at first interim bail should be granted and notice should be issued to Public Prosecutor - After hearing both the parties court my grant Anticipatory bail or reject it. E.Anticipatory Bail - Duration of - Anticipatory bail granted should ordinarily be continued till end of trial of the case- F.Cr. P.C. & 438 & 437 - The plentitude of S. 438 must be given its full play - There is no requirement that accused must make out a 'Special case' for exercise of power to grant anticipatory bail- G.The arrest should be the last option and it should be restricted to those exceptional cases where arresting the accused is imperative in the facts and circumstances of that case. H.Anticipatory Bail – Judges with good track record only to be entrusted with such work – Both individual and society have vital interest in such orders.	2011 (1) SCC (Cri.) 514; 2011 (I) SCC 694	113

3	Bail - Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists- Sections 406, 420,34 of IPC- [2013]	2013	148
4	a) Bail - Interpretation – A case required to be put forth for bail, is less stronger than that would be required for a discharge - accused is not required to show sufficient grounds that case against him is not made out but to so only reasonable grounds- If accused is able to show the reasonable ground not sufficient grounds that case against him is not made out then bail can be granted - Judging existence of prima facie case at stage of bail would be different from prima facie case at stage of framing a charge- an accused would never be required to put forth a stronger case for bail, than that would be required for a discharge - It is not that the court is required to come to a positive finding that the applicant for bail is not guilty of an crime before grant of bail. b) Maharashtra Control of Organized Crimes Act (1999), S.21(4) - Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (1967), S.43D - Criminal P.C. (1973), S.437 - Bail - Complaint of organized crime and terrorist act — Use of" phrase "reasonable ground" not to be confused with "sufficient grounds"-while evaluating of materials by court a little deeper probe into the matter would be required when the offence relates to special Act curtailing discretion of court in matters of grant of bail- Applicant alleged to be one of the conspirators to kill first informant - Materials against him consist of statement of four witnesses and Call Data Records(CDRs) - Inconsistent and not supporting prosecution case - In fact raising doubts as these materials were gathered only after arrest of applicant — Then on what basis applicant was arrested, not made clear - Whether allegations against accused would constitute terrorist act, doubtful – Motives and objectives behind crime as alleged by prosecution, also conflicting and inconsistent – Reasonable grounds exist to believe that applicant not guilty – Bail application allowed.	2013 ALL MR (Cri) 2273	152
5	Criminal P.C. (1973), S. 438 – Anticipatory bail – Grant of – Offence of abetment to commit suicide and hurt - Applicant alleged to have beaten up victim for not sharing expenses of treatment– Dead body of victim found after eight days – There was a chit in pocket of victim alleging that applicant among others was respondents for victims suicide – Held, applicant is not required to be in custody for purpose of investigation into alleged offence – Anticipatory bail granted to	2012 ALL MR (Cri.) 68	165

	applicant subject to conditions.
6	A)Cri. P.c. 439, 437, Bail – Bail is the Rule and Jail an exception – Accused entitled for presumption of innocence till he is convicted – constitutionally protected liberty of accused must be respected unless detention becomes necessary – If any accused is detained before conviction then it will put unnecessary burden on state to keep a person who is not proved guilty – Normally bail should be granted to accused – Apprehension of tampering of evidence without sound proof could not be accepted and this ground could not be considered in each case to deny the bail. B)Discretion while granting bail – The Jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well settled principles and not in arbitrary manner- The law in regard to grant or refusal of bail is very well settled. The Court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. At the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken. C)DISCRETION : Any order devoid of reasons would suffer from non-application of mind. In the case of Gudikatil Narasimhulu V. Public Prosecutor, (1978) 1 SCC 240, V.R. Krishna Iyer, J., sitting as Chamber Judge, Enunciated the principles of bail thus D)Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 – Ss. 437 and 439 – Prejudices which may be avoided in deciding bail matters – Public Scams, scandal and heinous offences – Public sentiments and disapproval of alleged misconduct – Bail, held, ought not be denied to teach lesson to a person whose offence is yet to be proved – Conditional bail, is a solution in such types of cases. E)The approach adopted by the trial court and affirmed by the High Court, is a denial of the whole basis of the Indian system of law and normal rule of bail system. It transcends respect for the requirement that a man shall be considered innocent until he is found guilty. If such power is recognized, then it may lead to chaotic situation and would jeopardize the personal liberty of an individual. Bail is the rule and committal to jail an exception. Refuse of bail is a restriction on the personal liberty of the individual guaranteed under Article 21 of the constitution. When there is a delay in trail, bail should be granted to the accused. F)Cr. P.C. Sec. 437, 439 – Change in circumstances –	2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26	167

	Pre-Charge and post – charge stages – SLP before supreme court dismissed before farming of charges – Bail application filed after framing charges – Held, is change in circumstances – Earlier order is no bar in granting bail to the appellant.
7	A) Anticipatory Bail – Cr. P.C. SS. 438 – 173 – Grant of anticipatory bail after charge – sheet is filed – Anticipatory bail can be granted at any time so long the applicant has not been arrested - The merits of these issues shall have to be assessed at the time of the trial of the accused persons and denial of anticipatory bail only on the ground that the challan has been presented would not satisfy the requirements of Sections 437 and 438 cr. P. C. B) The defence put forward by accused cannot be ignored – The plea of accused that the dispute between him and complainant is purely of a Civil nature – Anticipatory bail is therefore granted to the petitioner. THE salutary provision contained in section 438 Cr. P. C. was introduced to enable the Court to prevent the deprivation of personal liberty. It cannot be permitted to be jettisoned on technicalities such as "the challan having been presented anticipatory bail cannot be granted". We may notice here some more observations made by this Court in the case of Gurbaksh Singh (supra)	2010-MH L.J.(CRI)-1-283 , 2010-Crimes(SC)-1-30, 2010 (I) SCC (Cri) 884	186
8	CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE : S. 438, 173(8), S.190, S.41 - Indian Penal Code, 1860- Section 406 and 409/34 – Rejection of anticipatory bail does not mean that accused should be arrested –Anticipatory Bail applications under Section 438 Cr.P.C. rejected –High Court directing State to arrest the directors of MAPL.	[2002] 10 JT 482 = [2003] Crimes (SC) 302= [2003]2 SCC 649	191
9	Penal Code (1860), S.366-A - Criminal P.C. (1973), S.438 - Anticipatory bail - Grant of- Applicant eloped with girl of 17 years 8 months on date of complaint - Girl gone with applicant willingly - Applicant 18 years of age as of today -Application for grant of anticipatory bail allowed. (Para 4)	2009 ALL MR (Cri) 2923	204
10	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.439 - BAIL - Bail - Grant of - Factors to be considered - Are substantially same whether application is under S.438 or S.439- the principle that governs S.439 as regards the maintainability of the application is also attracted to an application under S.438- The only distinction is that in a case under S.438 the person who approaches the court	1989 CRI. L. J. 252	205

	apprehends arrest, whereas under S.439 such person approaches the court after his arrest.
11	Criminal P.C. (1973), S. 438- Anticipatory bail- Breach of condition – Accused failed to remain present before police station on one date- Held, on a single failure to attend police station, bail would not be automatically cancelled – If there is a failure to comply with a condition , the court is required to seek explanation from the accused persons and then decide whether the failure was willful and deliberate- And whether for that lapse , the extreme step of cancellation of bail should be taken or not .	2014 ALL MR (Cri)543	209
12	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.437- Bail- Application for Allegation that applicant deceived in respect of Rs.6 lac due to which three persons in a family committed suicide - Prima facie, commission of suicide for money belonging to others, does not appeal to reason-That apart, applicant is in custody since 45 days –Investigation agency not able to trace amount except Rs.1 Lac from applicant –Bail granted subjected to certain condition	2014 ALL MR (Cri)581	210
13	Criminal Manul (Bomaby High Court), chap.I Para 3-III – Treatment of arrested person by police – Magistrate is not barred from taking cognizance of offence when victim narrates the incident. (para 9,10)	2014 ALL MR(Cri)654	212
14	Bail – cash surety instead of solvent surety – Oral prayer accepted- Counsel for applicant submits that it is difficult to obtain a solvency certificate therefore prayers for permission to furnish cash surety –Held , oral prayer is accepted – Applicant to submit solvency certificate within three weeks. (para 16)	NO. 992 OF 2013	213
15	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.438 - Anticipatory bail - Grant of - Rape case - Delay in lodging complaint - Sections 328, 376 and 383 of IPC - It is alleged by the complainant /prosecutrix that she was, under false representation, made to travel by the accused with him - she was taken to a hotel and offered some drink and on consumption of said drink she started feeling giddiness, next day, she noticed that she was subjected to sexual intercourse- complaint was lodged against accused of inducing her to have sexual intercourse with him and she further threatened on that count to pay a sum of Rs.5 Lacs - Complaint filed almost about 9 months after the alleged incident - Prosecutrix aged 27 years, possessing degree - It is a fit case to grant anticipatory bail.	2007 ALL MR (Cri) 1693	220
16	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 - Penal Code (1860), Ss.376, 342, 506(2) - Bail - Grant of - While considering the bail application, the Court is not	2010 ALL MR (Cri) 92	222

	supposed to deal with the submissions in minute details and pronounce correctness or otherwise of the same - Applicant in custody since last 3-1/2 months - No need for any custodial interrogation at this stage- Bail granted with conditions - while dealing with the bail application the well recognized two guiding factors assume greater significance and the same are (1) possibility of the Applicant fleeing from justice in the event he is enlarged on bail and (2) possibility of the Applicant tampering with the evidence.
17	Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.167, S.496, S.497 - BAIL - INVESTIGATION - ARREST - Arrest illegal - Effect - It will be wrong for a Magistrate either to order detention of the accused u/S.167 or to call upon him to produce sureties if the arrest is illegal. (B) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.498, S.514 - ARREST - BAIL - SURETY - Illegal arrest - Bail by Sessions Judge - Enforcement of bail bond against sureties. The bond taken on a bail granted by the Sessions Judge to a person who has been illegally committed to prison will itself be invalid and such an invalid bail bond cannot be enforced against the sureties. (C) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.496 - BAIL - APPEARANCE - Bail bond - Construction - Person required to appear before court to answer charge - Person cannot be asked to appear before charge is framed.	1962 (1) Cri. L. J. 673	229
18	(A) Cr. P.C. S. 437 – Bail – Bail is rule jail is exception – In case of offences not punishable with death or imprisonment for life, grant of bail is rule, and jail an exception- Observation made by sessions Judge that offence in question was serious one and therefore, applicant ought not to be released on bail – Held, while rejecting bail application the sessions Judge was more influenced by morality than the Principles of law – Accused directed to be released on bail – Court should not get swayed by perception of morality but should confine its decision to the requirement of law – In case of offences not punishable with death or imprisonment for life grant of bail is rule and jail is an exception. (B) Arrest of accused by police – Allegations of abaterment of offence having punishment up to 5 years – No arrest can be made in a routine manner – A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence .	2002-BCR-(1)-689	235
19	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.438 - BAIL - orders -	2003 CRI. L.	241

	Practice and - Copies of orders in every bail application (whether regular or anticipatory) - Should be furnished to accused/counsel free of cost immediately after pronouncement of orders on same day as mandated in the S. 363(1), Cr.P.C. (B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.438 - BAIL - Disposal of application - Courts including Sessions Court should ensure that bail applications are disposed of within the outer limit of three working days. (C) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.439 - BAIL - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - High Court can exercise jurisdiction even if the Sessions Court were not called upon earlier to exercise such jurisdiction.	J. 3928
20	Bail – No need of custody for Search and recovery - the State opposed the application for bail stating that the appellant's presence is necessary for making a search and recovery of certain documents – Held- accused need not be in custody for the purpose of search – contention of state rejected– Bail granted- it is made clear that the appellant shall appear for interrogation by the police whenever reasonably required, subject to her right under Article 20 (3) of the Constitution.	1978 Cr. L. J. 744, AIR 1978 SC 1016	251
21	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.438 - Anticipatory bail – Parity - Applicant apprehending his arrest in case where custodial interrogation is not necessary - Main accused arrested and released on bail - Applicant entitled to get anticipatory bail – Anticipatory bail granted.	2001 ALL MR (Cri) 1892	253
22	Bail – Parity – Co-accused similarly placed granted bail – Appellant should be released on Bail – I.P.C. Section 120-B, 417, 420, 468, 471.	April 18, 2011	255
23	Criminal Procedure Code, 1973- Section 439 - Appellants Involved in case for which there was counter case— Appellants could be released on ball on bond of Rs. 25000/- with surety.	2001(3) Crimes 188 (SC)	256
24	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437 - Interim bail during pendency of regular bail application - Court has inherent power to grant interim bail to a person pending final disposal of the bail application – It should be decided on same day when petitioner files before the court -When a person applies for regular bail then the court concerned ordinarily lists that application after a few days so that it can look into the case diary which has to be obtained from the police authorities and in the meantime the applicant has to go to jail. Even if the applicant is released on bail thereafter, his reputation may be tarnished irreparably in society. The reputation	2010 CRI. L. J. 1435	257

	of a person is his valuable asset, and is a facet of his right under Article 21 of the Constitution.
25	Interim bail should be granted pending disposal of final bail application since arrest and detention of a person cause irrepairable loss to a person's reputation.	2010 ALL MR (Cri) 2030, 2009-Crimes (SC)-2-4 , 2009-SCC-4-437 Cr. P.C. 437	258
26	I.P.C. section 186, 353, 356, 379 – Constitution of India, - Arts 226, 21 – Cri. P.C., (1973), S. 46 – Arrest – Power of Police to arrest the accused – Held, the investigation has to be made without touching the offender – The question of touching the offender would arise only while submitting a charge-sheet – Compensation of Rs. 25,000/- granted to accused – State directed to take action against police officer responsible for violation of fundamental rights of accused.	2008-All MR(Cri)-0-2432,	260
27	Wrongful arrest & detention in police custody – IPC Ss. 420 & 471 Cr.P.C. S.41-Police Officer is not expected to act in a mechanical manner and in all cases to arrest accused as soon as report of cognizable offence is lodged – Existence of power to arrest is another thing & justification for exercise of it is another thing there must be some reasonable justification in opinion of officer effecting arrest that it was necessary and justified – Except in heinous offences arrest should be avoided – If Police Officer issue notice to a person to attend the Police Station and not leave the station without permission would do – offence u.s. 420, 471, 468 of IPC are not herious offences – Arrest illegal. B] Compensation- Petitioner was arrested by respondent Police Officer in case registered U/s 420, 468, 471. If IPC – Offences are not heinous offences - Arrest found malafide and mischievous & not protected by element of good faith – Infringement of fundamental right of a citizen cannot stop by giving a mere declaration – Compensatory relief is to be provided under – Cost of Rs. 25,000/- imposed on Police Officer who arrested the petitioner.	2003-ALL MR(CRI)-0-1096,2003-BCR(Cri)-0-1655, 2004(I) Crimes1 (Bom) (DB)	265
28	Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974) - S. 438 Anticipatory bail - Serious allegations by petitioner against ACP for threatening him to falsely implicate him in case of cheating - Story set up by police and complainant does not inspiring confidence – Held, Bail granted to Petitioner and investigation transeferred to crime Branch.	2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 398 (P. & H.)	273

29	Cr - P.C. S. 438 – IPC SS 452, 323, 294 and 506 – Applicant earlier lodged a complaint against police officials and to take revenge police wanted to arrest applicant – Fit case for protection of anticipatory bail under S. 438 of Cr. P.C. – Anticipatory bail granted.	2005 (2) Crimes 299 (HC)	277
30	Criminal P.C. S. 437 – Bail – Grant of - If the case is not covered by cls (i) and (ii) of S. 437(1) of Cr. P.C. i.e. the offences are not punishable with death or imprisonment of life and the accused is not previously convicted for seven years imprisonment or two times for 3 years or more - Held- the accused is entitled to get bail – Therefore ordinarily a person suspected to having committed an offence u.s. 420, 120(B) of I.P.C. would be entitled to bail.	1997 CRI. L. J. 3124, AIR 1997 SC 2575,	278
31	Bail – Power of Magistrate to grant bail in session triable cases – offence under S.C. & S. T. Act – Held, Magistrate has power to grant bail to accused even if the offence is triable by Court of session.	2005-MhLR-4-111 , 2005-Cri.L.J.-0-2984	283
32	P.C.R. – Request for Police custody – Order of rejecting Police custody – Once application for P.C.R. is rejected – Police cannot repeat and make a application again for Police custody. (A) Cr. P.C. S. 437(1) – Penal code S.S. 467, 409 – The offences are punishable with life or for 10 years imprisonment – Magistrate has powers to grant bail to the accused – Restriction under S. 437 (1) is in respect of offences which are punishable with alternative sentence of death or life imprisonment. In case under Sec. 326 of I.P.C. also the Magistrate has power to grant bail.	2010-AD(CR)-4-466 , 2010-ALLMR(CRI)-0-2775	288
33	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - BAIL - COURT OF SESSIONS - CUSTODIAL REMAND - Bail - Application for - Is maintainable even if filed during period of police remand granted by Magistrate - Sessions Court cannot reject application for bail on that ground - Bail application should be entertained and considered on merits even if there is order of police remand.	2011 CRI. L. J. 2065	300
34	Cr. P.C. – S. 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Case of Complainant doughtful -Different versions given in different complaints – I.P.C. - Section 395, 397, 467, 468 and 471 – Grant of anticipatory bail to accused justified.	2010 (3) SCC (Cri) 469, 2010-TLPRE-0-452 , 2010-JT-6-656	303

35	] Cr. P.C. – Section 438 – Anticipatory Bail – I.P.C. – 304 – B, 406, 498 – A, 34 – Accused and Complainant relying on documentary evidenc – Bail should be granted - Wife Committing Suicide – Allegation of demand of dowry made by her parents – Accused taking defence that she was suffering mental illness- Both sides relying on documentary evidence – Held - accused relying on documentary evidence genuineness of that document can be decided by the trial court- however in such case the accused are entitled to be released on anticipatory bail. B] Media Trial – Supreme Court condemned the act of publishing and holding of media trials of the matters which is subjudice before Court. Note :- See also – 2007 ALL MR (Cri.) 674 (Bom) – Bail granted in Rape case sec. 376 I.P.C.- as accused relied on love letters.	2005 Cri. L. J. 1416, 2005-Crimes(SC)-1-283 , 2005-AIR(SC)-0-790	307
36	Cr. P.C. – Section 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Murder Case – I.P.C. 302, 34 – There is no allegations against petitioner that he hit the deceased with dangerous weapons – Anticipatory bail granted.	2009-ALL MR(CRI)-0-3289	310
37	Cri.P.C.(1973),S.439-Bail-Offenceofmurder-- Investigation was complete and charge- had already been filed - Trial was not likely to take off – Applicant entitle to bail - Application allowed with conditions.	2013 ALL MR (Cri) 1317	311
38	Cr. P.C. – 437 – I.P.C. 302 Murder Trial – Two set of evidences inconsistent with each other – one incriminating the accused, while the other indicating his absence at relevant time on the spot – Accused deserves to be granted bail.	2002-ALLMR(CRI)-0-573	313
39	Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, Section 439 (2)-Constitution of India, Article 21-Cancellation of bail— When two views are possible in respect of commission of crime, , justifying or not justifying the grant of bail, then the view which leans in favour of accused must be favoured.	[2008(4) B Cr C 716 (SC)]	314
40	(A) Bail – Murder Case – I.P.C. 302 – Mere gravity of offence and severity of punishment is no ground for rejection of bail - The nature of evidence, part played by the accused and the likely hood of the accused absconding has to be taken in to account – the allegations against accused are that they hold the deceased and other accused pelted stones – nIt does not mean that accused have common	2003-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-59 , 2003-Cri.L.J.-0-736	321

	intention of murder. (B) There is no allegation that if released on bail the accused are likely to abscond with a view to evade the trial – Accused entitled to get bail. Plea that accused if released may be assaulted by complainant party not tenable – Bail granted in Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 (3) Rec Cri R 137 : (1994 Cri L.J. 2201) (SC).
41	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.436 – Transit BAIL - Rejection by Magistrate by simply stating that alleged offence had been committed beyond his jurisdiction – Illegal - The Magistrate has ample jurisdiction to consider the question of bail - Such bail, if granted, must be for a temporary period to enable the accused person to appear before the proper Court within a fixed period and it would not be open to Magistrate to reject bail application straightaway. [See also 2001 ALL MR (Cri.) 1696]	1999 CRI. L. J. 1084	325
42	A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.71, S.482 - INHERENT POWERS - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Dishonour Of Cheque - Anticipatory bail - Grant of - Issuance of non-bailable warrant directly by Magistrate without first issuing bailable warrant is illegal - Court in exercise of power under S. 482 granted anticipatory bail.	2006 CRI. L. J. 4332	327
43	Cri. P.C. Section 436 or 437- Bail to accused against WHOM warrant of arrest is issued by the Court - WHEN an accused, against whom a warrant of arrest has been issued, appears before the court where the offences are neither punishable with death nor imprisonment for life nor otherwise of a grave nature, the magistrate should examine granting interim bail till such time as objections, if any, are filed by the prosecution and thereafter decide on the merits of the bail application	LAWS(KAR)-2000-4-39=ILR(Kar)-2000-0-4000	329
44	Summons Case – N. I. Act – Sec. 138 – When accused appears pursuant to the Summons issued by court there is no need for him to move bail application and furnish personal bond – Impugned order asking accused to furnish security for his enlargement is illegal – Order quashed.	1998 DCR 249, ILR 1997 KAR 2560	332
45	Cases triable by the Magistrate- Factor to be taken in to consideration while dealing with the bail application -	2000 (I) RCR (Cri)	334

	Cases in which 7 years or more punishment is provided are triable by Magistrate First Class who has the jurisdiction to award the maximum sentence of 3 years- This factor has to be taken in to consideration while dealing with the bail application - The Magistrate or the Sessions Judge, while considering the application for grant of bail are also required to see whether the offence is triable by First Class Magistrate or by the Court of Session- They should not forget that many of the cases in which 7 years or more punishment is provided are triable by Magistrate First Class who has the jurisdiction to award the maximum sentence of 3 years. At this stage the court considering the bail application must not forget that if the accused is ultimately convicted he cannot be awarded a sentence of more than 3 years. B] Cr. P.C. SS. 437, 439 – Change in circumstance- Delay is change in circumstances - Second bail application not to be dismissed on the ground that previous application was rejected on merits – Each days delay and detention of accused should be taken as relevant consideration while considering the second application –The court considering the application must again look into the facts, the nature of the allegation, character of the evidence collected and should also see whether the allegations made are making out a prima facie case against the accused or the allegations even on their face entitle the accused to bail. There may be cases where on the first occasion considering the totality of the circumstances the Judge may reject the bail but after filing of the Challan or after discharge of the complainant from the hospital or after recovery of certain articles or after collection of certain other evidence the accused may be in a position to persuade the Judge to admit him to bail. It is not possible for this Court to give a myriad example but the court while applying its wisdom to the facts of the case must not forget that it has a discretion to grant bail and unless very strong evidence is produced before the Court, the personal liberty of the accused should not be interfered by unnecessarily keeping him in jail. ' A Judge while deciding the application should not derive a sadistic pleasure in keeping the person in jail and he should not reject the application just for nothing. In a case like present the rejection of the application, on the ground that the earlier application was rejected after considering the merits, was not only contrary to the provisions of law but shows non-application of mind.	399,1999-TLMPH-0-106 ,1999-MPL.J.-2-663
46	Cr. P.C. Sec. 438 – I.P.C. 420, 467, 468, 471, 120 (B) – Bail should not be withheld as a punishment – The	2005-ALLMR(CRI)(J	338

	requirement of bail is to secure the attendance of the prisoner at trial - Anticipatory Bail –Accused entitled to be granted with anticipatory bail.	OUR)-0-12 , 2004-Cri.L.J.4576
47	Bail – Remand of accused to custody when he appears before court – Held -when a Court issues summons and not a warrant in a non – baillable case – then the accused should be released on bail when he appears before the Court - he should not be committed to custody.	2008-CRIMES-4-327 , 2008-ILR(Ker)-3-604	342
48	Bail – Parity – Co-accused with similar allegations have been granted anticipatory bail – Held- the appellant entititled to be granted anticipatory bail	2005-SCC-7-226 , 2006-AIR(SCW)-0-4723	344
49	Cr. P.C. & 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Interim Bail – Presence of accused – Held, the order directing accused to remain present can not be passed without granting interim bail to the accused.	2010-ALL MR(CRI) -0-2524	344
50	Bail – Condition – Imposition of – Held- Condition can only be imposed in non-bailable offences having punishment more than 7 years – But for other non-bailable offences conditions could not be imposed.	2007-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-24 , 2006-GLR-3-2529	355
51	Cr. P.C. 209 – Commitment of case under Attrocities Act to sessions Court– Court insisting accused to obtain bail is improprer. It is not a requirement u/s 209 of Cr. P.C. – Magistrate can commit the case by taking personal bond from him to appear before special court ensuring his attendance before said court till conclusion of trial.	2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 364 (A.P.)	359
52	Cri. P.c. S. 167 and 109 – Procedure for remand of accused – Duty of Magistrate – It is duty of Magistrate to safeguard liberty of a citizen – Court should not behave as an agent of the Executive to help the police in detaining persons in custody at the wish of the police – When the person detained informs the Magistrate that he was not told of the reasons for his arrest then it should be seen that such a person is informed of the grounds of his arrest – There is no provision u.s. 109 of Cri. P.c. to detain a person in jail.	1963 (1) Cri. L. J. 451 (1), AIR 1963 MANIPUR 12	361
53	Criminal P.C. – Section 439 – Murder – No direct evidence of offence – Admission on the part of applicant before police regarding commission of offence could hardly a ground to deny a bail, even in murder case –	2004-ALLMR(CRI)-0-646 , 2004 (1) Crimes	366

	Accused granted bail – If the accused belong to other state proper condition be imposed to secure his presence at the trial.	202
54	Bail – charges against accused having assets disproportionate to their known source of Income – Prevention of corruption Act section 5 (2) (e). The accused have statutory right to render explaination before the trial court – The apprehension that the accused will flee away if enlarged on bail cannot viewed with seriousness as they have deep root in the society and social status – The petitioner required to be admitted to bail.	1998-Cri.L.J.-0-2656	368
55	Cr. P.C. Sec. 438 - Anticipatory Bail – Murder case – IPC 302, 149 –Accused name not in F.I.R. – The appellant was included amongs others as a result of further investigation – He is not named in F.I.R. – The appeallant be directed to be released on bail if he surrender before Police.	2000 Cri. L. J. 4660, 2000-AIR(SCW)-0-3349	371
56	Bail by invoking provisions of sec. 482 of Cri. P.C. and Art. 226 of the Constitution of India -Penal code (1860), Ss. 498-A, 406 – F.I.R. against petitioner who is not relative of husband – S. 498-A does not get attracted – Allegations against petitioner – about not returning jwellery which belonged to the complainant Held, The allegations are extremely wild and disgusting – In such cases interests of accused required to be protected – The petitioner accused would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by the court to do so and that too in the case of extreme necessity – Similarly no step shall be taken against her – She shall be granted bail by the court trying the case – The Trial Court shall be careful while considering the framing of charge – The appellant shall not be tried for offence u.s. 498 – A of I.P.C.	2010-JT-6-498 , 2010-TLPRE-0-407	372
57	Article 226 of constitution of India – Even if the offence is committed outside the jurisdiction of the High Court – The High Court can grant anticipatory bail even by using provisions of Article 226 of the constitution of India.	1991 Cr. L.J. 950, 1990-ILR(Del)-2-203 , 1992-CCR-1-708	376
58	Anticipatory Bail – I.P.C. 406, 409, 420. 467, 468, 471, 120 B – Petitioner Director of the company – Complainant company signed MOU – Contract with petitioner – Failure to fulfil promise – Security deposit of complainant not returned – Held, Dispute is purely of civil nature – The tendency in the business circles to convert purely civil disputes in to criminal cases highly deprecated by Supureme Court – Co-accused already granted bail – Petitioners also entitled to be released on	2006-DLT-134-390, 2006-AD(Del)-7-589	385

	Anticipatory Bail.
59	Cr. P. C. 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Delay in lodging in F.I.R. Sections 295, 354, 500, 506, 509, 34 of IPC – Documents shows that the victim tried to falsely implicate the accused – FIR lodged after a delay of 1 year – Charges made are not free from doubt Accused entitles to be granted anticipatory bail.	2001-Cr L. J. -0-3739, 2001-Crimes-3-409	389
60	Cr. P.C. 438, 437, 439 – Anticipatory bail – Refusal of anticipatory bail is no ground to refuse regular bail to accused under Sec. 437 or 439. – Considerations for grantirng anticipatory regular bail are different than that of regular bail. Cr. P.C. 438, 437, 439 – Anticipatory bail – Refusal of anticipatory bail is no ground to refuse regular bail to accused under Sec. 437 or 439. – Considerations for grantirng anticipatory regular bail are different than that of regular bail.	2009-CRI.L.J.-1031	396
61	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - BAIL - Ball - Cancellation of - Conduct of accused subsequent to his release on bail and supervening circumstances alone are relevant. (A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Cancellation of - Dispute Inter se petitioner and accused persons relates to immovable property which is more of civil in nature - No allegations of any attempt by any of accused persons to avoid their presence before Investigating Officer for Investigation purposes - Anticipatory bail granted to accused persons - Cannot be cancelled.	2009 CRI. L. J. 1067	400
62	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL – SC & ST ACT (POA) - Anticipatory bail - Grant of - Offence alleged under Atrocities Act - F.I.R., recommendations of Superintendent of Police not prima facie disclosing commission of offence - Anticipatory bail to be granted.	2006 Cri. L. J. 4346	405

63	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act (33 of 1989), S.18, S.3(1)(x) - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - - If complaint is found to be false, anticipatory bail cannot be denied - Complaint lodged after delay of 14 days - It raises doubt about genuineness of complaint - Further there was dispute going on between accused official and complainant - In such circumstances, accused entitled to anticipatory bail. [See also : 2010 ALL MR (Cri.) 1223 :- One day delay is ground for anticipatory bail.	2004 CRI. L. J. 680	408
64	Cr. P.C. Sec. 438 – Anticipatory bail – I. P.C. sec. 366 – Applicant's name does not appear in F.I.R. – Accused already grnted bail – Applicant belongs to respectable family -Deserves to be granted with anticipatory bail.	1986-Crimes(2) 61	414
65	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.204 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Can be granted even after summons or warrant is issued by Magistrate - It is not possible to hold as a proposition of law that Sessions Court or the High Court will have no power to entertain the application for anticipatory bail where either summons or warrants have been issued against the accused. The Court has the jurisdiction to grant anticipatory bail on being satisfied that the accused apprehends arrest in a non-bailable offence B)Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Grant of - Petitioner in Government service - No apprehension of his absconding – He entitled for anticipatory bail.	1998 CRI. L. J. 3969	421
66	Cr. P.C. SS. 205, 251, 71 – Issurance of Non – bailable warrants – It should be issued as alast resort – Magistrate may issue a summons and then a bailable warrant and only if presence of accused is not secured then only N.B.W. may be issued – Magistrate should not insist on the presence of the accused at all times unless it is necessary – There is no need for accused or his advocate to apply for exemption on every date of hearing – If the accused makes even the first appearance through a counsel, he may be allowed to do so.	2010 ALL MR (Cri) 2368 , 2010-Crimes-3-604 ,	427
67	Application for cancellation of Non – bailable warrant – There is no necessity for accused to remain present – Warrant can be cancelled in absence of accused – Court can not require presence of accused before dealing with application.	4429 OF 2013	431

68	Application for cancellation of Non – bailable warrant – There is no necessity for accused to remain present – Warrant can be cancelled in absence of accused – Court can not require presence of accused before dealing with application.	2001-DCR-1-500 , 2001-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-33	432
69	Trail in absence of accused – Non – bailable warrant issued against accused- Held- Nothing to show thant any order was passed on previous dates asking accused to remain present – Held, issurance of warrant unjustified – Hence quashed.	2009-Cri.L.J.-0-523,2009-AIR JharR-2-203 Cr. P.C. S. 317	436
70	Cr. P.C. 438 – Anticipatory Bail – I.P.c. 376, 343, r/w 34 and u.s 5 of prevention of Immoral Traffic act – All the applicants are Social Workers, Politicians and Police officers – As such having deep roots in the society – No possibility of fleeing away from the ends of justice – Court inclined to allow bail application.	2007-AllMR(Cri)-0-2283 , 2008-CRIMES-4-151	441
71	Cr. P.C. 439, 389 – Accused convicted U.S. 307 of I.P.C. – conflicting version of accused and prosecution witnesses – Prima facie case made out for granting bail – Bail granted.	2009-All MR (Cri)-0-433	445
72	Cri. P.C. S. 439 – I.P.c. – 363, 366, 376 – Bail – Accused was alleged to have induced girl – Prosecutrix, aged 17 years to go with him promising her to marry with her – Held, the prosecutrix moved with applicant from place to place – Fit case to grant bail.	2003-CRIMES-1-558	446
73	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.436, S.437 - BAIL – Bailable OFFENCE - In case of bailable offence, there is no question of discretion in granting bail. (Para 6) (B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.436 - Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.500 - BAIL - DEFAMATION - Bail - Release of person accused of bailable offence - Court is not bound to issue notice to complainant and hear him - Cancellation of bail on ground that complainant was not heard and thus principles of natural justice were violated – is illegal.	2009 CRI. L. J. 1887	447
74	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.70, S.482 - BAIL - Non-bailable warrant - Execution - Stay of - Accused is willing to surrender himself and seeking permission to appear before Court - Execution of non-bailable warrant issued against him stayed in interest of justice.	2001 CRI. L. J. 2835	452
75	Cr. P.C. Sec. 439, 389 - Murder case –Conviction – Bail-Disclosure Statement of accused was not properly recorded – Also, there is no evidence on motive –	2010-ALLMR(CRI)-0-1798 ,	454

	Accused entitled to bail.
76	Criminal Procedure Code (2 of 1974), S. 438 — Anticipatory bail — Court Cannot impose conditions which are harsh, onerous of excessive so as to frustrate the very object of grant of anticipatory bail - Court should be extremely chary in imposing conditions while enlarging an acc used on bail —— Accused cannot be subjected to any irrelevant condition at all — To subject an accused to any other condition than mentioned in sections 437 and 438 would be beyond jurisdiction of the power conferred on Court — Condition imposed by the High Court directing appellant to pay a sum of Rs. 12,500/- per month as maintenance to his wife and child is onerous, unwarranted and is liable to be set aside, (Para 8)	[2009(3) Mh.L.J.(Cri.)19]	456
77	Cr. P.C.S. 437 – Bail – Conditions – I.P.C. 363, 392 – Accused directed to pay cash deposit of Rs. 10,000/- - Held- insistence on cash deposit is illegal and liable to be quashed.	2003-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-45, 2003-Cr. L.J-0-353	459
78	Section 120B—Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988—Sections 7, 8, 12, 13(2) rw/s 13(l)(d) —Bail—Grant of—Petitioner - Prosecution case that petitioner demanded and agreed to accept an illegal gratification of Rs. 7,00,000 from one 'MKB'— Allegations that 'MKB' demanded Rs. 10,00,000 from an Advocate representing a faction of a company who was to get in touch with the petitioner for getting an favourable judgment in the matter of appointing President of the company—Recovery of an amount of Rs. 55,00,000 in cash from residence of petitioner—Recovery of Rs. 1,21,23,800 from a number of lockers of petitioner—Petitioner was arrested on 23.11.2009—Petitioner entitled to be released on bail-	2010(3) Crimes 151 (Del)	461
79	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 –Capacity of accused - Court should examine capacity of prisoner before fixing amount of bail bond - Amount of bail bond reduced from Rs. 2,00,000/- to Rs. 50,000/-	2000 ALL MR (Cri) 1898	468
80	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.436 – Absconding is not a ground to be given weight age in grant of bail - Court would not be impressed by the surmises and conjectures- While considering the prayer for bail, the Court has to consider the strength of material which the investigating agency has collected for going to the trial against the accused. Fact of absconding would not by itself disentitle the accused to get the bail. It is a matter of experience that on some occasions even innocent persons hide	2002 ALL MR (Cri) 565	469 themselves from police on account of fear.

81	Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, Sec. 167(2)(a)(ii) -Bail application- On ground that charge-sheet when filed was incomplete because chemical analyst's report was not filed - That Chemical Analyzers report was filed much after 90 days period, hence he was entitled to a bail - Held, in this case seizure was affected on an information and contents had been tested positive for contraband with help of a field kit On merits contraband herein is Acetic Anhydride being a "controlled substance" which is a versatile substance, can be used in manufacture of innocuous medicines. Quantity seized is also less.	2009 (1) Bom.C.R.(Cri.) 411	471
82	Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974), S. 446 — Issuance of warrant for recovery of security bond — Accused was absconding — Forfeiture of bail bonds - Sureties producing accused before Court — Matter of recovery of amount of bail bond from sureties would require reconsideration — Order passed by trial Court for issuing the recovery warrant against surety is set aside.	2009 CRI. L. J. 160	480
83	Cri.P.C.Sec. 438 – Anitcipatory Bail can be granted even if charge-sheet is filed and cognizance is taken by the court. The gravity of the offence, need for custodial interrogation, fact of filing of charge sheet etc. cannot by themselves be construed as a prohibition against the grant of anticipatory bail. The object of S.438 is to prevent undue harassment of the accused persons by pre-trial arrest and detention. The fact, that a Court has either taken cognizance of the complaint or the investigating agency has filed a charge-sheet, would not by itself, prevent the concerned Courts from granting anticipatory bail in appropriate cases. The Courts i.e. the Court of Sessions, High Court or Apex Court has the necessary power vested in them to grant anticipatory bail in non-bailable offences under S.438 of the Crl. P. C. even when cognizance is taken or charge-sheet is filed provided the facts of the case require the Court to do so.	2003 ALL MR (Cri) 2379 (S.C.)	482 injuries resulting in death -Grant of bail to him justified.
84	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.437 – Bail – Murder - Long-lasting litigation between two groups - Complainant and family members wanted to take forcible possession - Cross-firing and attack followed - Several persons from both sides receiving injuries - It was not possible to say that respondent applicant had caused injuries to deceased and was the only person responsible for	2008 ALL SCR 1480	485

85	Bail – Murder case – oppose by state- Held- whenever the state opposes an application for grant of bil to an under trial prisoner it has to ensure a speedy trial – failure to take appropriate steps by state accused is entitled to get bail.	1987-Cri.L.J.-0-1100 , 1987-MPL.J.-0-380	487
86	Indian Penal Code, 1860— Section 120-B/406/409/420/468/ 471—Anticipatory Bail—Facts of purely civil nature-—Business transaction— Co-accused already on bail;— Held—Where petitioner have done no criminal wrong who had roots in the society - There is no apprehension of absconding—Petitioner cannot be denied of bail – Anticipatory bail granted.	2007 (1) CRJ 635	489
87	Indian Penal Code, i860—Section 363/366/342/506 and 376—Bail—Petitioner is in custody—Victim already examined—Victim has married to some one else and has a child therefrom—Witnesses also examined—Held—No question arises to tempering the evidence—Accused entitled to bail.	2005 (6) CRJ 443	493
88	Cr. P.C. – Section 439 – Accused was a of High Court – Arrested under section 120 – B, IPC r/w sec. 7,8,11,12,13 (1) of prevention of corruption Act.- Charges of misuse of power for passing favourable order – Petitioner/accused is having relationship with another accused – Petitioner used to enjoy his hospitality in terms of wine and women – 12 days police remand granted but nothing incriminating was found – Petitioner's wife is ill – Held petitioner entitled to be released on bail.	2003-DRJ-70-327 ,	494
89	Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974) - S. 439 Bail -Allegation of causing bomb explosion against petitioner – On consideration of over all facts and circumstances of case as well as evidence on record, - It will be proper to release petitioner on bail without going in to merits of controversy (Para 10)	2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 415 (RAJ.)	496
90	Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974) - S. 439 - Bail- Case of abetment of suicide - Allegation in complaint that petitioners teachers searched victim by stripping her clothes for theft of cash and as a result, she had committed suicide by hanging herself at her residence - Allegation of searching victim by stripping her clothes not mentioned in suicidal note - Petitioners are ladies and they are very much available in the college premises and there is no allegation that they are attempting to evade	2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 430 (MAD.)	499

	the due process of law by absconding or fleeing from justice – They entitled to bail. (Paras 19,22)
91	Cri. P.c. Section 439 – Bail – Grant of – Accused in jail – Trial is going very slow – Unnecessary harassment to accused – Held – It appeared that the Judge forgotten his duties towards poor accused who is in jail – An expeditious criminal trial is an fundamental right of the accused – High Court granted bail to the accused even though it was rejected	1992 CRI. L. J. 2873	506
92	[A]Police – Arrest – Guidelines by Supreme Court – It shall be the duty of the Magistrate before whom the arrested person is produced to satisfy himself that the guidelines regarding arrest are complied by the Police. [B]Right of arrestee to consult privately with lawyer are fundamental rights. [C] No arrest can be made in routing manner immediately after the registration of crime – Except in heinous offences arrest must be avoided – If a Police Officer issues notice to attend the station house and not to leave the area without permission can be made, because it is lawful for the police officer to do so – The existence of the power to arrest is one thing but the justification for arrest is another thing. – The Police officer must be able to justify the arrest - Arrest and detention in police lock up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self esteem of a person-D.G.P. of all states shall issue necessary instructions requiring due observance of guidelines issued by Supreme Court.	1994-IJR-0-267 , 1994-AIR(SC)-0-1349	509
93	A] Criminal procedure code, 1973 – Sec 160 (1), 161 (2), - Constitution of India Article 20 (3) and 22(1) – Rights to keep silence – Held – Accused has constitutional right to keep silence till end of the trial – the Police Officer cannot pressurize the accused to give answer to their questions– Secondly the Police cannot summon a woman at Police Station – Compelled Testimony includes both physical and psychological compulsion – Threats of prosecution for failure to answer and manner of delivery of answers amounts to compulsion – Proceeding against accused quashed – Appellant – accused given protection under Article 20 (3) that he should not be compelled to answer the questions asked by the police which are self incriminating. B] Use of torture/third degree is not permissible – However worthy the end is, it will not be permissible to	1978-AIR(SC)-0-1025 , 1978-SCC-2-424	515

	achieve it by sacrificing the dignity of the individual and freedom of the human person by improper means – We have to draw up clear lines between whirl – Pool and the rock where the safety of society and the worth of the human person may co-exist in peace. C] Police cannot be the law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. If the alibi is that the Sessions Court had directed the accused to appear at the police station, that is no absolution for a police officer from disobedience of the law. D] Before discussing the core issues, we wish to note our regret, in this case, at a higher level police officer, ignorantly insisting on a woman appearing at the police station, in flagrant contravention of the whole-some proviso to Section 160 (1) of the Cr. P. C. Such deviance must be visited with prompt punishment since policemen may not be a law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. The wages of indifference is reprimand, of intransigence disciplinary action. If the alibi is that the Sessions Court had directed the accused to appear at the police station, that is no absolution for a police officer from disobedience of the law. There is public policy, not complimentary to the police personnel, behind this legislative proscription which keeps juveniles and females from Police Company except at the former's safe residence. May be, in later years, community confidence and consciousness will regard the police force as entitled to better trust and soften the stigmatizing or suspicious provisions now writ across the Code.
94	BAIL- I.P.C. Sections 302,307, 325/34 - Murder - In an attack by Respondent, when appellant alongwith his supporters was going to attend a meeting, one died and others injured - FIR filed - Charge-sheet served - Application for bail, objected to by appellant on the ground that threats to life were being received from respondent for pursuing the case - High Court granted conditional bail - Justification - Respondent in jail since long time - Two important witnesses already examined - Adequate protection given to appellant - Assurance by State that trial will not be prolonged. Held, on facts no interference is needed specially when High Court has granted conditional bail and liberty to trial court to jail respondent in case of breach of conditions. Proper steps to be taken if fresh threats are given.	JT 2012 (1) SC 159, LAWS(SC)-2012-1-28, ACC-2012-76-792	543
95	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437 BAIL - Bail - Grant of - Murder case – Different versions of dying declaration and investigation – Grant of bail and transfer of investigation - FIR and dying declaration of deceased showing names	2002 CRI. L. J. 165	547

	of actual culprits who participated in incident - However, later part of investigation showing different thing and turned narration of facts recorded in F.I.R. and dying declaration, resulting in making brother of deceased as an accused - Further though FIR and dying declaration are on record brother of deceased is arrested, challan is filled, charge is framed against him and he is detained in custody - Facts of case such as requiring investigation by C.B.I. - C.B.I. enquiry accordingly ordered - But since enquiry will take long time applicant (brother of deceased) ordered to be released on furnishing personal bond in sum of Rs. 50, 000/- and two solvent sureties in like amount.
96	Criminal P.C. (1989), S. 499 – Imposing Condition in bail which keeps the accused away from his family and also keeping away from the means of livelihood is impossible to comply for any one and should never be imposed. Held, such condition should never be imposed – How can a man in ordinary circumstances afford to live at place 'X' when his family lived at 'Y' and in all probability his sole means of livelihood was at 'Y' – The contention of sessions Judge that the petitioner will tamper with the witnesses at place 'Y' if he allowed to enter that place is not proper because it is common knowledge that in every bail case the police allege that there is danger of tampering with witnesses, if witnesses can be tampered in this way it shows inefficiency of police – The condition imposed is such that it is not possible for any person to comply with – it tantamount to refusing bail – The order of Sessions Judge illegal and therefore set aside – Accused directed to be released on bail unconditionally.	AIR (36) 1949 Calcutta 582 [C.N.159]	550
97	WHEN POLICE ARE ACCUSED :- A. Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 439(2) and 437(5) Bail — Cancellation of —Police acting as contract killers — Accused policemen allegedly killed deceased in a false police encounter at behest of third person — Held, position and standing of accused, etc. are factors other than misuse of bail to be considered for bail cancellation — Witnesses can have no security to their life if policemen who are supposed to uphold and protect law become predators — In the circumstances of case, held, High Court rightly cancelled bail as there exists prima facie case against accused policemen which disentitles them to bail — Human and Civil Rights. B. Constitution of India — Art. 21 — Fake encounter killing(s) by police — Death sentence warranted — Held, where a fake encounter is proved against policemen in a trial, they must be given death sentence, treating it as the rarest of rare.	2011 (2) SUPREME COURT CASES (CrI) 848, 2011 (6) SUPREME COURT CASES 189	552

	c.Rule of Law – Anarchy – Matsyanayaya – larger fish devouring the smaller ones or the strong despoiling the weak – Observed, the country is heading towards such a state of lawlessness.
98	Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 - Cancellation of bail - Police Officers and staff engaged by some private persons to kill their opponent - Police Officers and staff acting as contract killers - Strong apprehension in mind of witnesses about their own safety - Held, very strong reasons and circumstances exist in the present case for cancellation of bail.	2011 ALL MR (Cri) 1122	560
99	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.439 - BAIL - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Bail - Regular or anticipatory - Considerations for granting are substantionally same - Not substantially different- only difference is that the anticipatory bail is before arrest and regular bail is after arrest.	2012 CRI. L. J. 2101	567
100	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.498A - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - CRUELTY BY HUSBAND OR HIS RELATIVE - Anticipatory bail - Accused persons married sister-in-laws of complainant and their husbands alleged to have instigated other accused persons i.e., husband, father-in-law etc. to harass complainant - One sister-in-law and her husband were residing in U. S. A. - Held, it is very difficult to believe that accused used to harass complainant, all the way - Accused persons entitled to anticipatory bail.	2008 CRI. L. J. 1083	573
101	(A) Bail - Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), S.50 - Sanction to take cognizance of offences - Failure to obtain sanction by prosecuting agency - Accused entitled to bail - Similarly, we cannot ignore the fact that Section 50 opens with the non-obstante clause and prohibits the Special Court from taking cognizance without valid sanction from the appropriate Govt. Prima facie taking into consideratio n the above referred factors, the appellant has made out a case for grant of bail. AIR 1996 SC 204 and AIR 1963 SC 765 - Followed. (Paras [91 , 92 and 93]) (B) Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), Ss.30(1), 32(1) – Confession before specific Police Officer - Admissibility of in evidence - Confession shall be admissible in trial of such person only for an offence under this Act and Rules made thereunder - Confession made by accused, cannot be a substantive piece of evidence against co-accused, abettor or conspirator who is being tried jointly for the same offences - Such a confessional statement not a ground to refuse bail to accused. (C) Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), S.50 - Sanction	2010 ALL MR (Cri) 1466	576

	to take cognizance of offences - Sanction by competent authority is condition precedent for taking cognizance of the offence - Court is forbidden from taking cognizance of the offence without such sanction - If Special Court takes cognizance of the offence without a valid sanction, such action is without jurisdiction and any proceedings adopted thereunder will be without jurisdiction. (Paras 54 & 55) As far as provisions of Sections 21(2) and 22(3) are concerned, the word 'knowledge' used in these provisions needs to be construed on the backdrop of the concept of mens rea. In case of other criminal offences, mens rea and intention are required. So far as the offences contemplated under sub-section (2) of Section 21 and sub-section (3) of Section 22 of POTA are concerned, the offender needs to have knowledge without which it will be difficult to fasten criminal liability on a person under these provisions of POTA. Absolute liability is not to be lightly presumed but has to be clearly established. (D) Evidence Act (1872), S.34 - Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), S.21(3) - Entry made in loose chit - Admissibility of, in evidence - Amount of Rs.36,60,000/- allegedly paid by accused to Naxalite group - Mere loose paper/chit and entries made thereunder – is not sufficient to connect accused with the crime in question. (E) Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), Ss.49(7), 50, 32(1) - Grant of bail – If any evidence is inadmissible then it is a ground to be considered while deciding the bail application - Charge under POTA - At the stage of grant or refusal of bail, evidence cannot be appreciated - However admissibility/inadmissibility of evidence will have a positive bearing in considering the aspect of grant or refusal of bail and therefore, this aspect cannot be ignored by the court - However, it cannot be ignored that what is inadmissible in law at this stage cannot become admissible at the later point of time unless it depends upon further evidence to be adduced by prosecution and, therefore, such issues and such legal aspects are prima facie required to be considered by the Judge of the Special Court, particularly keeping in view the mandate of Section 49(7) of the POTA. However, admissibility/inadmissibility of evidence will have a positive bearing in considering the aspect of grant or refusal of bail and, therefore, this aspect cannot be ignored by the court. While passing the impugned order, dated 16-11-2002, the Judge of the Special Court has not considered all these issues in the light of the law laid down by the Apex Court in this regard and, therefore, the order is unsustainable in law. (Para [93])

102	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.309(2), S.167(2) - REMAND - Powers of remand - Exercise of - Remand of accused to custody on filing of chargesheet - Can only be under S. 309(2) and that too after cognizance is taken - Time lag between date of filing of charge sheet and date of cognizance of custody for intervening period - Is unauthorised - Same entitles him to bail, as the custody was neither under section 167, Cr.P.C. nor under Sec. 309 Cr.P.C	2004 CRI. L. J. 1506	590
103	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437 - BAIL - Bail - Delayed trial - Prosecution failing to produce some witnesses for two years, seeking eight adjournments - Accused not responsible for delay - Bail to be granted. (Para 4 ,5)	1993 CRI. L. J. 2621	652
104	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.439, S.441 - BAIL - MURDER - Bail-Grant of-Accused charged for murder-Proceedings being conducted carelessly and slowly-Accused can be granted bail on personal bond and sureties - The right to life and liberty is guaranteed by Art.21 of the Constitution and the liberty of the person who even may be an accused person, cannot be curtailed unless the circumstances so require. When a person is an accused of a criminal offence and is behind bar, the least that is expected from a judicial Court is to see that the trial Court proceeds at a reasonable pace so that the liberty of the accused person is not curtailed unnecessarily for a long time. Where the accused charged for murder was behind the bars since 25 months and the prosecution had examined only 11 witnesses out of 22 and approach of the trial court was very careless and casual and prosecution was wasting time and prolonging the trial, the accused should be granted bail on furnishing personal bond and sureties to the satisfaction of the trial Court. (Paras 4, 5, 6)	1991 CRI. L. J. 1176	655
105	(A) Constitution of India, Art.22(2) - Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.57 - - Meaning of - Commencement of arrest.	1990 CRI. L. J. 2201	657
106	I.P.C. 302, 201 r/w 34 - Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.167(2), S.173 and S.2(c) - CHARGE SHEET - INVESTIGATION - BAIL - Charge sheet under S.173 can be filed only after completion of investigation of case - Case involving several cognizable offences- I.P.C. 302, 201 r/w 34 - Investigator filing first charge-sheet relating to some of offences before expiry of 90 days with reference that opinion of expert is awaiting -	1984 CRI. L. J. 1277	669

	Second charge-sheet relating to remaining offences filed after expiry of 90 days - Investigation of case must be taken as completed when second-charge-sheet was filed - Since it was completed after 90 days, accused were entitled to bail under S.167 (2) Proviso(a) (i). (Bail - Delay in investigation and filing charge-sheet). The provisions in Chap. XII. relating to power of police to investigate indicate that the investigation is to be of a case which would mean all the offences involved therein. Therefore, when S.173, speaks of completion of investigation, it must ordinarily be taken to refer to completion of investigation of all the facts and circumstances relating to the case whether it involves one offence or plurality of offences. Therefore, a final report or charge-sheet under S.173, can be filed only after completion of investigation in the case relating to all the offences arising in the case. The investigation of the case does not end with the collection of evidence but includes the formation of opinion by the investigator as to whether on the evidence collected there is a case to place the accused before a Court for trial and if so taking the necessary steps for the same by filing a charge-sheet. Therefore, where in a case involving several cognizable offences the first charge-sheet against the accused persons in respect of some of the offences was filed by the investigator within the period of 90 days, referred to in S.167 (2) Proviso (a) (i) and the second charge-sheet relating to the remaining offences was filed after the expiry of 90 days on the ground that the investigator had been awaiting expert legal opinion as to whether a charge would lie in respect of those offences, it must be taken that the investigation was not complete on the date of filing of the first charge-sheet and in was complete only when the second charge-sheet was filed. Thus, since the investigation was completed only after the expiry of 90 days, the accused were entitled to be released on bail under S.167 (2) Proviso (a) (i). The defective investigation and filing of the charge-sheet would not, however, vitiate the proceedings before the Magistrate. The proceedings would only be irregular and the irregularity was cured when the Magistrate acting on the second charge-sheet clubbed it with the first for the purpose of committal of the case to the Sessions Court.
107	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.167, S.173, S.190, S.309(2), S.437 - BAIL - INVESTIGATION - REMAND - Murder case - Detention of accused. illegal - if the detention is illegal, it cannot be validated by order of remand subsequently made by the Judicial Magistrate or by Additional Sessions Judge under S.309(2) of the Cri. P.C.	1982 CRI. L. J. 2319	677

	- In this view of the matter, the Additional Sessions Judge should have accepted the application for bail filed by the petitioners in both the cases and should have released them on bail.- Accused must be released on bail. (Paras 6, 7)
108	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.167(2), Proviso (a) and S.309 - ADJOURNMENTS - INVESTIGATION - BAIL - Accused in custody for sixty days – Police filed preliminary charge-sheet – Such a incomplete charge-sheet is not a police report within the meaning of Section 173(2) – Court cannot take the cognizance of offence on the basis of such charge-sheet - Investigation not complete - Accused has to be released on bail - Prosecution cannot invoke, S.309. 309 on the basis of a preliminary charge-sheet. Such a preliminary charge-sheet is not a police report within the meaning of Section 173(2) and hence the question of the Magistrate's taking cognizance of the offence and remanding the accused under Section 309 does not arise. 1975 Cri LJ 647 (Gauhati) and 1966 Cri LJ 1377 (Andh Pra), Relied on. (Paras 9, 14, 15)	1976 CRI. L. J. 1247	680
109	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.57, S.151, S.154 - Accused - Person when becomes 'accused person' - Person does not become an accused simply on lodging of FIR or on being arrested or detained - Such person becomes an accused only after there are grounds of believing that information against him is well founded. (Para 13) (B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.319 - Addition of accused - Expression 'person not being accused' - Does not cover person figuring as accused in case at any stage - Three persons named as accused in complaint - Cognizance taken only against two of them and not the third accused i.e. the petitioner - Petitioner could not be described as 'any person not being an accused' - Cannot thus be added as an accused. (Paras 27, 28)	1998 CRI. L. J. 2807	686
110	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.167(2) - CUSTODIAL REMAND - During 15 days mentioned in S.167(2) Magistrate can alter judicial custody to police custody and vice versa.	1982 CRI. L. J. 1103	695
111	Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.167 – ILLEGAL DETENTION Detention by police in contravention of S.167 is illegal - it must be noted that although police had power under the Criminal Procedure Code to arrest any person suspected of having committed an offence without a warrant, he could not detain that person in police custody for more	AIR 1961 BOMBAY 42 (V 48 C 8)	704 than 24 hours. The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, expressly require a police officer to produce the person arrested for commission of a cognizable offence before the Magistrate within 24 hours. If he fails to do it, he will be certainly guilty of wrongful detention. (Para 5)

112	(A) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.60, S.61 and S.167(1) - ARREST - INVESTIGATION - Duty of Police to produce arrested person before Magistrate forthwith - Unless a Police Officer considers that he can complete the investigation within a period of 24 hours, it is his duty to produce the accused forthwith before the Magistrate. (B) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.497 - BAIL - Application for bail can be made orally - Section 497 does not contemplate any written application for bail at all. When a person accused of any non-bailable offence appears or is brought before a Court, he can either himself or through a lawyer apply even orally for bail. There is nothing wrong or illegal in making successive applications for bail, when the accused person remains in custody. Such applications should be disposed of by the Court without any delay and it is the duty of the Police to co-operate with the Court in doing so. (Para 22) (C) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.167 - INVESTIGATION - Provisions to be strictly complied - Magistrate can release accused by rejecting prayer for remand (P.C.R.) ` If the police do not transmit to the Court a copy of the entries in the diary relating to the case, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to direct the detention of the arrested person. It is toe duty of the police to comply with the provisions of Section 167(1) and the Magistrate should insist on such strict compliance and if the police do not satisfy the Magistrate with the documents that a remand was necessary, for the purpose of investigation, the Magistrate may release the accused. (Paras 25, 26) (D) Previous involvement of accused in Criminal case and his desperate character are no grounds for refusing bail.	AIR 1964 MANIPUR 39	706
113	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - BAIL - Constitution of India, Art.21- Bail – Bail can be granted when Sessions Judge completely forgotten their duties towards the accused who are in jail- Dowry death alleged - Non-recording of statements of witnesses though available, on lame excuse, by Sessions Court - Delay in trial by adjourning case for long periods - Violation of fundamental right of accused of speedy trial, especially when he is in jail - Delay in trial deprecated and bail granted though it was earlier refused - It is really	1992 CRI. L. J. 2873	716

	disturbing that the trial courts are so unaware of liberties of the citizens - An expeditious criminal trial is a fundamental right of the accused, especially when he is in jail. No accused can be kept in jail for uncertain period, as a under-trial prisoner, especially when there is no fault on his part. In Criminal cases in which the accused is in jail, it is the duty of the presiding Officer to complete the trial as expeditiously as possible and to record the statements of the prosecution witnesses without any delay, rather day to day; and all efforts are to be made through the police agency to secure the attendance of the witnesses on the date fixed for recording their statements. It is also his duty not to grant adjournment unless it is found extremely necessary. Even if the case has to be adjourned, then the next date should not be after a long period
114	Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.220 - WRONGFUL CONFINEMENT - Malicious confinement- Malkiat Singh respondent is in police service and at the particular time he was posted as an A.S.I, at police-station Sangrur - he arrested complainant with a view to put pressure on the person confined to come to terms with a certain person in whom the accused is interested - the offence for which Sita Ram was arrested was a bailable one - The bail, though offered, was not accepted - respondent in going to the mandi, arresting Sita Bam there and taking him hand-cuffed through the bazar was simply to put pressure upon him to come to terms with one Bhagwati Prasad. It has also been found that the offence for which Sita Ram was arrested was a bailable one - The bail, though offered, was not accepted. The learned Sessions Judge concurred with these findings. Bhagwati Prashad was complainant in the case in which Sita Ram was arrested and Malkiat Singh was a tenant of Bhagwati Parshad. The unlawful commitment to confinement was wilful, without any excuse and with a view to put pressure on Sita Ram to come to terms with Bhagwati Parshad, in whom Malkiat Singh was interested. -where the unlawful commitment to confinement is wilful, without any excuse and with a view to put pressure on the person confined to come to terms with a certain person in whom the accused is interested, the accused can safely be said to have acted "maliciously." (Para 6)	AIR 1956 PEPSU 30 (Vol. 43, C. 10 Mar.)	720
115	Criminal P.C. (1973), Ss.239, 301, 302 - Application for assist to PP - First informant Opportunity of hearing cannot be refused to him ,his role will be limited and he cannot take place of	2012 ALL MR (Cri) 1624	724

	Public Prosecutor - He, cannot be allowed to take over the control of prosecution by allowing to address the court directly.
116	INTERIM BAIL AND GENERAL		735
	-: CHAPTER = 2:- APPLICABILITY & BINDING NATURE OF CASE LAW/CITATION
117	Contempt by Judge - Arrest of accused - Bail - Non compliance of direction given by High Court and Apex Court - Non granting bail to accused - The Session Judge was shown with the case Law/Order passed by the Supreme Court and Bombay High Court but the Sessions Judge refused to grant bail to accused- He did not follow the guidelines without justifiable reasons or recording any reason in writing - Held, if any Sessions Judge is found not following the directions of Higher Courts then besides taking administrative action against such Sessions Judge, he shall be liable for action of contempt of this Court.	2012 ALL MR (Cri) 271	838
118	Constitution of India, Art.141- PRECEDENTS - Judges are bound by precedents and procedure - They could use their discretion only when there is no declared principle to be found, no rule and no authority - where a single judge or a Division Bench does not agree with the decision of a Bench of co-ordinate jurisdiction, the matter shall be referred to a larger Bench. It is a subversion of judicial process not to follow this procedure - it is the duty of judges of superior courts and tribunals to make the law more predictable. The question of law directly arising in the case should not be dealt with apologetic approaches. The law must be made more effective as a guide to behaviour. It must be determined with reasons which carry convictions within the Courts, profession and public. Otherwise, the lawyers would be in a predicament and would not know how to advise their clients. Sub-ordinate courts would find themselves in an embarrassing position to choose between the conflicting opinions. The general public would be in dilemma to obey or not to obey such law and it ultimately falls into disrepute- One must remember that pursuit of the law, however glamorous it is, has its own limitation on the Bench. (Paras 17, 20)	AIR 1990 SUPREME COURT 261 = 1991 AIR SCW 2124	845

	AIR 1960 SC 936, AIR 1965 SC 1767 and AIR 1989 SC 1933 Rel. on. Civil Writ Petn. No. 3420 of 1983, D/-14-8-1985 (Bom) Reversed. AIR 1980 SC 882 Foll. (Para 24)
119	Case Law – Duty of the Judge – The Judge dismissed the complaint by a cryptic order without discussing case Laws – The Courts are not expected to pass such Cryptic orders – The Judge should record reasons in his order demonstrating how case law Cited by Party is applicable to the case in hand – The Judge should exhibit from the conduct and from their orders concern for the justice and not casualness.	2006-ALL MR(CRI)-0-2269 , 2006-MH LJ-5-264	854
120	Law of precedent- Judicial propriety- Applicability of the case law – Duty of the Court / Tribunal - The decision relied upon by the party has not considered and/or dealt with – Held, it appears that the learned tribunal has not considered and/or dealt with the aforesaid decision relied upon by the assessee at all -Whenever any decision has been relied upon and/or cited by the assessee and/or any party, the authority/tribunal is bound to consider and/or deal with the same and opine whether in the facts and circumstances of the particular case, the same will be applicable or not. In the instant case, the tribunal has failed to consider and/or deal with the aforesaid decision cited and relied upon by the assessee- Under the circumstances, all these appeals are required to be remanded to the tribunal to consider the addition made and to take appropriate decision in accordance with law and on merits. (Para 4)	21/10/2013	855
121	Precedents – How to deal with case law relied by the party - Sessions Judge merely reproduced the head notes/placitums - The Magistrate also did not discuss the case law with reference to the ratio of the decisions - Held, many Judicial Officers follow practice of reproducing the head notes/placitum from the reported precedents. The Judicial Officers need to understand that the head notes are drawn by editors/staff members of the Law Journals. It is necessary to read the precedent in entirety. The judicial Officer is required thereafter to cull out the ratio of the authority. The matching of facts and circumstances would then enable the Court to examine whether such ratio is applicable to the case with which the Court is required to deal with- the Judicial Officers shall avoid such practice. They shall not merely quote the head notes/placitum appearing from the indexes or the prelude to the judgments reported in the law Journal.(Para 6)	2008-0-751 = LAWS(BOM)-2008-2-146	860

122	JUDICIAL ADVENTURISM – Order by ignoring case laws of Supreme Court - The appellant would be entitled to costs quantified at Rs. 20,000.00 - Sub ordinate Courts should not pass orders by ignoring law settled by Higher Courts – When a position, in law, is well settled as a result of judicial pronouncement of this Court, it would amount to judicial impropriety to say the least, for the subordinate Courts including the High Courts to ignore the settled decisions and then to pass a judicial order which is clearly contrary to the settled legal position. Such judicial adventurism cannot be permitted and we strongly deprecate the tendency of the subordinate Courts in not applying the settled principles and in passing whimsical orders which necessarily has the effect of granting wrongful and unwarranted relief to one of the parties. It is time that this tendency stops - It is unfortunate, that notwithstanding the authoritative pronouncements of this Court, the High Courts and the Courts subordinate thereto, still seem intent on affording to this Court innumerable opportunities for dealing with this area of law, thought by this Court to be well settled - The observation of the High Court that reference to judicial decisions will not be of much importance was clearly a method adopted by it in avoiding to follow and apply the law as laid down by this Court- (Para 32 ,33,29)	1997-AIR(SC)-0-2477 , 1997-SCC-6-450	868
	-: CHAPTER = 3:- LAW RELATING TO CRIMINAL PROSECUTION AGAINST JUDGES
123	A) Contempt of Court - Constitution of India— Arts. 141, 142 and 144 — Flouting of the order of Supreme Court by High Court - Power of Supreme Court to initiate contempt proceedings against the erring Judges of High Court - Supreme Court's order to High Court— Even if it is only in the form of a request instead of explicit command or direction, it is a judicial order and is binding and enforceable throughout the territory of India— In case of flouting of the order by High Court, it is open to Supreme Court to initiate contempt proceedings against the erring Judges of High Court— Supreme Court while adjourning the case asking the parties to approach High Court for early disposal of a matter pending before it and	(1995) 1 Supreme Court Cases 259	877 to apprise it on the next date of hearing the result of it and adding. We have no doubt that the High Court... would give the matter due attention as is expected by us. — Division Bench of the High Court finding nothing important in the matter, directing that the appellant before it to a take his chance strictly in order in which he approached this Court by filing these appeals. — Held, High Court flouted the order of Supreme Court by causing deliberate and conscious obstruction to compliance with that order— Having regard to advice obtained from Solicitor General of India and counsel appearing for the parties as regards the action to be taken against the Judges of the High Court, request reiterated by Supreme Court to the High Court to dispose of the matter expeditiously; at any rate within one month. B) Practice and procedure— Supreme Court's order to High Court— It should normally be in the form of a request, not command or direction- The language of request often employed by the Supreme Court in such situations is to be read by the High Court as an obligation, in carrying out'the constitutional mandate, maintaining the writ of the Supreme Court running large throughout the country.

124	Cri. P.C. Sec. 197 – I.P.C. Sec. 167, 465, 466 and 471 – Prosecution of Judge who made interpolation in the order sheet – The appellant was posted as first class Magistrate – Accused whose case was pending in his Court filed transfer petition before District Judge to transfer case to another Court – The appellant Judge made some interpolation in the order sheet to show that some orders had passed earlier – After enquiry ADJ sent report to District Magistrate for initiation of proceeding against appellant – Magistrate – The report of District Magistrate forwarded to state Govt., Who accorded sanction for prosecution – The senior District prosecutor filed a complaint in the court against appellant u.s. 167, 465, 466 471 of I.P.C. – Charges framed against appellant – The appellant raised objection that there is bar under sec. 195 of cri. P.C. in taking cognizance – Held – The proceeding against appellant the then Judge is valid and legal-proceeding not liable to be dropped.	1971-AIR(SC)-0-1708 , 1971-SCC-3-329	884
125	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.197 - SANCTION FOR PROSECUTION - Prosecution of judges and public servants - Complaint under Section 504 I.P.C. - Use of words "non-sense" and 'bloody fool' by Presiding Officer against complainant - Sanction to prosecute, not necessary – This is not the part of his official duty.	1993 CRI. L. J. 499	890

	A Presiding Judge is expected to maintain decorum in the proceedings before him. He is expected also to act with restraint- One would expect him to be sober, unruffled and temperate in language even when faced with a situation where those appearing before him may tend to lose their composure. In this scheme of things any vituperative outburst on the part of the Presiding Officer, howsoever grave the provocation to him, cannot be countenanced as an action sustainable as one performed by him "while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duty."
126	I.P.C. Sec. 193, 196, 466, 471, 474, r/w 09 – Criminal Procedure code, 1978, Sec. 344 – Summary trail for fabricating false evidence against Judicial Magistrate ,P.P., Police Officer,and others– Trial court acquitting accused on basis of forged dying declaration not produced by the prosecution – Trial Judge without clarifying anywhere as to who produced the dying declaration directly taking it on record – Held Acquittal set aside – High Court issued show cause notice to Advocate for accused, Additional public Prosecutor for State, PSI, Special, Judicial Magistrate calling explanation as to why they should not be tried summarily for giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence	ALLMR(CRI)-0-2640 , 2003-MhLR-2-117	895
127	A) Constitution of India – Handcuffing – Contempt of court by S.P. and Magistrate – The accused were handicuffed by the police – When produced before Magistrate he did not perform his duty by directing removal of handcuff – This is clear violation of supreme court's direction in Prem Shankar Shukla case (AIR1980 SC 1535 – Contempt notice issued by Supreme court to S.P. , concerned police and Magistrate – While filing reply S.P. did not taken stern action against erring police officials – it means that S.P. has approved the illegality committed by the police and therefore he is guilty of contempt of Supreme Court – Strong disapproval of Supreme Court is directed to be placed in personal file of S.P. and all erring police officers. B) Contempt by Magistrate – Contemnor B.K. Nigam was J.M.F.C. – When prisoners were produced before him he did not take any action against handcuffing by police – The magistrate simply passed order calling explanation by police – Held, the Magistrate was bound to take immediate actions for removal of handcuffs – Magistrate was completely insensitive about the serious violation of the human rights – This is a serious lapse on the part of judicial officer – The Magistrate was expected	1996-AIR(SC)-0-2299 , 1996-SCC-4-152	914 to ensure that the basic human rights of the citizens are not violated – The Magistrate should also expected to take action against police officer for bringing the accused to the court in handcuffs and taking them away in the handcuffs without his authorization – Keeping in view that contemnor Magistrate is a young judicial officer Supreme court did not imposed punishment on him – However recorded strong disapproval of his conduct and directed that a note of this disapproval shall be kept in his personal file. C) Handcuffing – Authorisation – The Police and jail authorities on their own have no authority to direct the handcuffing of any inmate from jail to court and elsewhere. D) Handcuffing – Permission by Magistrate – The Magistrate should have concrete proof regarding proneness of the prisoner to violence, his tendency to escape- he being so dangerous/ desperate and finding that no other practical way of forbidding escape is available then only Magistrate can grant permission for handcuffing – It could not be done in a routine way but in rarest of rare case.

128	A]Cri. P.C. Sec. 197 – Sanction for prosecution – Accused are Additional High Court Judge, Suprintendant of Police Sanjeev Bhatt and others – The accused hatched conspiracy to falsely implicate a shop owner in a case under N.D.P.S. Act and when shop owner submitted to their demands he was discharged – Complaint u.s. 120-B, 195, 196, 342, 347, 357, 368, 388, 458, 482, I.P.c. and Sec. 17, 58 (1), (2) of NDPS Act – Held – there is no connection between official duty and offence – No sanction is required for prosecution – Registration of F.I.R. and investigation legal and proper. B]Cri. P.C. Sec. 156 – Investigation against accused Addl. High Court Judge – Whether prior consultation with Chief Justice is necessary prior filling of F.I.R. against a High Court Judge as has been laid down by Supreme Court in K. Veerswami's case (1991) (3) SCC 655) – Held – In K. Veerswami's case Supreme Court observed that the Judges are liable to be dealt with just the same as any other person in respect of criminal offence and only in offence regarding corruption the sanction for criminal prosecution is required – the directions issued by Hon'ble Supreme Court are not applicable in instant case. C]The applicant – Ram Lal Addl. High Court Judge	2001 CRI. L. J. 800	924 hatched criminal conspiracy – The Bar Association submitted a representation to Hon'ble Chief Justice of India on 11-09-1997 requesting to not to confirm Raman Lal as Judge of the High Court – Later on he was transferred to Principal Judge of city Civil and Sessions Court at Ahmedabad – S.P. (C.I.D.) Jaipur sent a questionnaire through the registrar, Gujrat High Court to accused Addl. High Court Judge – Chief Justice granted permission to I.O. to interrogate – Later on I.O. sent letter to applicant to remain present before Chief Judicial Magistrate at the time of filing the charge-sheet – Applicant filed petition before High Court challenging it – Petition of applicant was rejected by High Court and Supreme Court in limine – No relief is required to be granted to petitioner in view of the facts of the case. D]Conspiracy – I.P.C. Sec. 120 (B) – Apex court made it clear that an inference of conspiracy has to be drawn on the basis of circumstantial evidence only because it becomes difficult to get direct evidence on such issue – The offence can only be proved largely from the inference drawn from acts or illegal ommission committed by them in furtherance of a common design – Once such a conspiracy is proved, act of one conspirator becomes the act of the others – A Co-conspirator who joins subsequently and commits overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy must also be held liable – Proceeding against accused cannot be quashed. E]Jurisdiction – Continuing offence – Held – Where complainants allegations are of stinking magnitude and the authority which ought to have redressed it have closed its eyes and not even trid to find out the real offender and the clues for illegal arrest and harassment are not enquired then he can not be let at the mercy of such law enforcing agencies who adopted an entirely indifferent attitude – Legal maxim Necessiatas sub lege Non contineture Quia Qua Quad Alias Non Est Lictum Necessitas facit Lictum, Means necessity is not restrained by laws – Since what otherwise is not lawful necessity makes it lawful – Proceeding proper cannot be quashed.

129	Contempt of Supreme Court by High Court- High Court passed order in breach of Supreme Court directions- It is contempt of order of Supreme Court by the High Court	2010-SCC-6-417 , 2010-AD(CR)-3-353	954 protection regard to his act of illegal arrest. B] First class Magistrate issued letter to appear and directed to show cause against prosecution on the petition filed by another person – When petitioner appeared he was detained to custody – The bail bond furnished by the petitioner were rejected by the Magistrate deliberately – Petitioner claimed that due to such illegal, unauthorized and malafide conduct of the Magistrate in arresting him, he has lowered in the estimation of the public and claimed for the damage – The action of the Magistrate by putting the petitioner under arrest for realinsing the certificate dues by adopting questionable and unlawful method is highly deplorable – It was unbecoming of a Magistrate – It is relevant to investigate to find out the motive, the propriety and the legality of the action of the Magistrate in arresting the petitioner – It is not a judicial act although exercised during the Judicial proceedings – The Magistrate exercised its power with the ulterior object of coercing the petitioner. C] At page 178 of the 14th Edition of Salmond on Torts it is said - "The wrong of false imprisonment consists in the act of arresting or imprisoning any person without lawful justification, or otherwise preventing him without lawful justification from exercising his right of leaving the place in which he is." In my opinion, defendant No. 1 has committed the wrong of false imprisonment in this case. D] But - "Wherever protection of the exercise of judicial powers applies, it is so absolute that no allegation that the acts or words complained of were done or spoken mala fide, maliciously, corruptly, or without reasonable or probable cause suffices to found an action." Further it has been pointed out under the title "Liability of Magistrates" at page 160 of Volume 25 of Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd Edition, that - "Protection is afforded by common law and by statute to justices in respect of acts done in the execution of their duty as such; but this protection does not extend to cases where they have acted either maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, or without or in excess of their jurisdiction, and in such cases they are liable to an action for damages at the suit of the party "aggrieved," A similar passage occurs at page 768 of Volume 38 of the Halsbury's Laws of England, 3rd Edition - A Magistrate or other person acting In a judicial capacity is not liable for acts done within his jurisdiction, but he is liable to an action for false imprisonment If he unlawfully commits a person to prison in a matter in which he has no jurisdiction, provided that he has knowledge, or the means of knowledge of the facts which show that he has no jurisdiction."
130	A] Action against Judicial Officer causing illegal arrest– Magistrate acting illegally and without jurisdiction in the matter of arrest is not protected – Magistrate has no absolute	1969-AIR(PAT)-0-194	955

131	Equality before law and equal protection of law – constitution of India Article 14 – criminal trial – Held- article 14 assures to the citizen equality not only in respect substantive law but also procedural law- the procedure is still available where these substantive right of relief and defence secured- when two persons are equally situated (para4)	1956-ILR(BOM)-0-930 , 1956-CRLJ-0-1297	978
132	Contempt of Courts Act (32 of 1952), S.3 - CONTEMPT OF COURT - Criminal Contempt committed by judicial officer - Standard of proof - Revision petition against interim order by Magistrate was pending before High Court - No stay was granted - the Magistrate instead of waiting result of order by High Court passed order in favour of to respondents - A petition in the High Court complaining that R-l, R-2, R-3, R-4 and R-5 had committed contempt of the High Court within the meaning of Section 3 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1952 and prayed that the respondents be punished for committing that contempt - The High Court found them (including R-3, the Magistrate) guilty of contempt of Court. On appeal to Supreme Court — Held, the Magistrate was aware that P's revision petition against his interim orderwas then pending in the High Court. In such a situation, the prudent course for him was to postpone the making of any final order in regard to the subject matter till the final disposal of the revision petition by the High Court. It would also have been proper for him to issue notice to 'P' and give an opportunity of being heard before making any order-the Magistrate had at the most committed only a technical contempt of High Court, in absence of any mens rea penal action was not called for. (Para 32,33)	1976 CRI. L. J. 641 = AIR 1976 SUPREME COURT 859	985

133	JUDICIAL PROPRIETY – Whenever petition relating to the subject matter is pending before Higher Courts and even if no stay is granted in the case then also it is matter of propriety that the Judges of lower courts should stay their hands away and wait till further orders to be passed by High Court – The order passed by family court during pendency of petition before High Court is illegal and therefore quashed.	2007-AIR Bom R-3-219 , 2007-BCR-3-279	993
134	Code Of Criminal Procedure. 1973:- S.190 – Illegal cognizance by Magistrate – The complaint disclosed no offence but the Magistrate going out of the way and for extraneous consideration issued process against the accused – The order of Magistrate does not show that how he come to the conclusion that how and what offence disclosed - observation by Magistrate that it is a case for full fledged trial is illegal - it appears that for some reasons not on record the learned Magistrate took cognizance of offence without having been himself satisfied that any offence was in fact committed. The order of learned Magistrate if read in its entirety, clearly shows that the Magistrate was aware that complaint discloses no offence and in spite of having become aware, he issued the process for reasons which can only be extraneous – proceeding quashed – Accused granted compensation of Rs. 10,000/-	2002 LAWS(BOM) - 3-26, MHLJ-2002-2-830	995
135	(B) Constitution of India, Art.141 - SUPREME COURT - PRECEDENT - Obiter dictum by Supreme Court - Is expected to be obeyed and followed. (Para 19) (D) Constitution of India, Art.226, Art.14 - ADMINISTRATIVE TRIBUNAL - NATURAL JUSTICE - Powers of Court - Drawing its own conclusions by Court on basis of the notings in files without giving parties, against whom inferences were drawn any opportunity to explain the same - Violative of basic rule of natural justice.	AIR 1995 SUPREME COURT 1729 = 1995 AIR SCW 2706	999
136	Judicial Discipline – Judgement of another High court – Observations of trial Magistrate that the judgement of Kerala High Court is not binding on him – Further observing the legality and correctness of the judgement of another High Court is against the judicial discipline and propriety – Registrar General directed to take suitable action against concerned Judge. (Paras 42, 43, 44, 45)	2011 (4) AIR Bom R 238	1009
137	PRECEDENT - Precedents - Rule of per incuriam - When applies -Rule of per incurium can be applied where a Court omits to consider a binding precedent of the same	AIR 2000 SUPREME COURT 1729	1019

	Court or the superior Court rendered on the same issue or where a Court omits to consider any statute while deciding that issue. (Para 8)	= 2000 AIR SCW 1561
138	(A) Precedents - Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction should have consistent opinions in respect of identical set of facts or on a question of law - If this rule is not followed instead of achieving harmony in the judicial system, it will lead to judicial anarchy - Hence like questions should be decided alike, otherwise on same question of law or same set of facts different persons approaching a court may get different orders – Supreme Court judgment in Hari Singh case followed. (Para [13]) (B) Constitution of India , Art.226 - Criminal P.C. (1973), S.482 - Quashing of proceedings under S.420, IPC - Court can quash proceedings even if discharge application is either not filed or is pending, if no offence is disclosed by the complaint - On facts held issue of process and further proceedings could not be sustained and the dispute was of a civil nature.	2004 ALL MR (Cri) 1802	1021
139	Section 156(3) Cr.P.C.- requirement of application of mind by the Magistrate before exercising jurisdiction under Section 156(3) Cr.P.C. – Held, The application of mind by the Magistrate should be reflected in the order. The mere statement that he has gone through the complaint, documents and heard the complainant, as such, as reflected in the order, will not be sufficient. After going through the complaint, documents and hearing the complainant, what weighed with the Magistrate to order investigation under Section 156(3) Cr.P.C., should be reflected in the order, though a detailed expression of his views is neither required nor warranted.	2013	1030
140	Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 S.482 S.2O2 S.200 Indian Penal Code, 1860 S.506(2) S.386 S.452 S.451 Complaint case has to be decided urgently - issue Of process - Validity - Process issued after over one year of complaint splitting the offences - Held, Section 200 does not permit the Magistrate to wait for such a long time on a complaint filed by the complainant under Section 200 I.P.C.It should bear in mind that Section 200 cr.P.C.Is an alternative protection for a citizen who suffers, against the reluctant attitude of the police either to entertain his complaint or a police officer May be baised against the accused.In that circumstances, a complaint filed under Section 200 should be Acted with a sense of urgency.Here, an year has been taken.The complaint was filed on 5-2-90 and verification has been taken for	1999(0)ALLMR(CRI)8; 1999(0)CRLJ 554; 1999(1)MHLJ 377	1038

	the reasons best known to the Magistrate only on 6-3-1990 and the Actual verification process started on 5-6-1990 and again evidence was called for on 2-2-1991.Ultimately, the endorsement was made by the advocate on 2-4-1991 and the order was passed for issuing summons against the petitioner on 2-4-1991.The time spent by the Magistrate is not in the ordinary course of business of the Court.Such delay is not admissible in the light of the provisions of Sections 200, 202, 203, and 204 of cr.P.C.The Magistrate cannot split offences according to the wishes of the complainant as is done in this case.The procedure adopted by the Magistrate is clearly an instance of mis-carriage of justiceand liable to be Quashed.
	VOLUME – II
114	Cr. P.C. – Section 111, 117 – Magistrate has no power to arrest and detain a person – His power is to require to show cause and if necessary start enquiry – Powers are often misused by untrained Magistrates – Directions issued for safety of citizens – Sufficient time shall be given to arrange for surety – If any person is sent to Jail then the Executive Magistrate shall sent a copy of the order to the Principal DistrIct Judge, Who shall go through the order and if finds case of revision shall intervene SUO-MOTU u.s. 397 of Cr. P.C. – The copy of order must also be sent to superior officers also.	2009-MhL.J. (Cri)-3-155 , 2009-MhL.J.-5-723	1073
142	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.110, S.41, S.482 - Chapter proceedings - Quashing of - Petitioner arrested and chapter proceedings initiated against him on basis of pendency of criminal cases and statement of witnesses etc. - Said statement of witnesses recorded three months prior to arrest - No case of emergency - Arrest of petitioner and initiation of chapter proceedings against him - Is illegal. (Paras 29, 31, 32) (B) Constitution of India, Art.21, Art.226 - DETENTION - Compensation - Illegal detention - Arrest of petitioner and chapter proceedings initiated against him found illegal - Further petitioner detained for non furnishing interim bond - Petitioner entitled to compensation for his arrest – Compensation of Rs. 4,000/- granted.	1999 CRI. L. J. 2676	1077
143	(A) Cr. P.C. Section 106 to 110 – Mandatory procedure must be followed – Passing of final order without show cause notice is illegal proceeding quashed.	2001-ALLMR(CRI)-0-2079 , 2001-MhL.J.-	1089

	(B) Petitioner was tortured in police custody causing him serious injury – He was detained illegally without following the procedures provided under sections III and 116 – Compensation of Rs. 20,000 granted.	4-601,(2002) 104 BOMLR 34
144	(A) Cr. P.C. 1973, Sections 106 to 110 – Power to direct security for peace and good behavior – It is of nature being direct interference with liberty of individual – hence order must reflect application of judicial mind by magistrate – The order must be a reasoned and speaking order. (B) Cr. P.C. 1973 , Section 116 (3) – Execution of bond – Amount of bond should not be excessive – The bond should be of such amount for which there is fair probability of being able to find security – The bond shall not be excessive. (C) 'Cross – Surety' – The Magistrate have no right to aske for surety from caste, creed and religion. (D) Cr. P.C. 1973, Section 106 to 116 – constitution of India, Article 22 (I) Enquiry in to chapter cases – Discouraging a person to engage lawyer of his own choice violates Article 22 (I) of constitution – It not only obstructs the course of justice but also pollutes the same and is contempt of court. (E) Depriving and discouraging a person to engage lawyer – if special executive Magistrate and its staff finds inconvenience about peresence of lawyer with a person it means that they wants to extort money.	2006 (2) B. Cr. C. 489, 2006 (5) Mh L.J. 243	1102
145	Cr. P.C. – Section 107 – Condition imposed by Magistrate that the sureties must be from particular faith/community and well educated is arbitrary – Proceedings quashed	(1999) 101 BOMLR 566	1113
146	Protection of Human Rights Act, 1993 – Custodial Death – Illegal arrest – Section 151 of Cri. P.C. – The victim was asenior citizen of 78 years old – He was illegally detained by P.S.O. U.S. 151 of cri. P.C. under directions of S.P Wardha Smt. Ashwati Dorje – The Victim was not granted bail by the Tahsildar Deepak Karande – The victim died in jail – The son of victim filed petition before state Human Rights commission, Mumbai through Shri. Nilesh C. Ojha National President of Manav Adhikar Suraksha Parishad – Commission accepted the contention of the petitioner and directed Home secretary to take action against Smt. Ashwati Dorje, S.P. Wardha	2010-TLMHH-0-510 ,	1116

	Shri. Deepak Karande, Tahsildar, Wardha and Shri V.D. Boite Jail Supreintendant, Wardha. The petitioner filed Writ petition challenging the legality of the order - It has been held by High court that the order is legal and does not require interference.
147	Cr. P.C. – Section 111, 110 (e) (g) – Direction to furnish interim bond without recording reasons in writing. The sub-section (3) of section 116 specifically requires that the Magistrate is required to record reasons in writing – The express statutory provisions are completely ignored by the Magistrate and the entire proceedings have been conducted contrary to the provision of the code – Such order is liable to be quashed.	2009-Mh L J(Cri)-3-47 , 2009-ALLMR(CRI)-0-2929	1118
148	Cr. P.C. – Section 107 – Interim bond – Held in proceedings u.s. 107 there can be no insistence to execute a interim bond – Order illegal – Liable to be quashed.	2006-MH L J (Cri)-1-655	1121
149	Cr. P.c. S. 110 – Police has no power to arrest a persion against whom proceeding u.s. 110 is initiated – The Magistrate if thinks proper can issue a production warrant – Similarly the action of the Magistrate in calling upon the peititioner to execute a bond even though the enquiry had not commenced is without jurisdiction.	2000 Cr. L.J. 1888	1123
150	(A) Cr.P.C. – Section 111, 116 – For the purpose of this section the allegation against a person being so dangerous and habitual offender must be supported by evidence of general (repute) (B) Cr.P.C. – Section 251 – It mandates that particulars of offence must be put to accused and he will be asked whether he plead guilty or not – The P.I. acting as Executive Magistrate without following the procedure straightway asked the petitioner to execute a bond which is in printed cyclostyled form – The procedure is unjust, unfair and contarary to law – Roznama of case proves malafideds of P.I. – Proceeding is liable to be quashed – copy of order forwarded to Home Secretary.	2006-MH L J(Cri)-1-265 , 2006-Cri.L.J.-0-1135	1125

151	(A) Cr. P.C. – Section 110 – Notice – Printed Cycostyled Proforma used by Magistrate – Shows non-application of judicial mind and is abuse of process of court – The proceeding based on such vague notice is quashed. (B) The notice issued by Magistrate is based on report of station officer – Nothing material to show how applicant was so dangerous and despirate – Notice is vague – Entire proceeding vitiated .	2008-JIC-2-418 , 2008-ADJ-4-529	1134
152	Cr. P.C. – Section 107, 151 – Dispute between two parties – Complaint disclosed no Cognizable offence – Police Officer to help the criminals detained the petitioner U.S. 151 of Cr. P.C. – Held, proceeding against petitioner is illegal and unlawful – Proceeding quashed – Petitioner gratned with a token compensation of Rs. 50,000/- for illegally detaining him – Commissioner directed to initiate proceeding against erring police personels.	2009-Chand Cri C-1-153 , 2008-Cr. L.J.-2333	1137
153	Cr. P.C. – Section 151 – Illegal proceeding and wrongful confinement – A token compensation of Rs. 50,000 granted to petitioner.	2009-Chand Cri.C.-1-149 , 2008-AD(Cr)-3-165	1134
	-: CHAPTER = :- LAW RELATING TO PROSECUTION AGAINST POLICE MISUSING POWER TO HARASS PEOPLE
154	Cr. P.C. – Section 151 – Illegal proceeding and wrongful confinement – A token compensation of Rs. 50,000 granted to petitioner.	2009-Chand Cri.C.-1-149 , 2008-AD(Cr)-3-165	1139
155	Cri. P.C. Sec. 340 – False entries in case diary by the Police Officer – Police Officials interpolated the entries in the case diary to create false story to falsely implicate the accused – Accused detained for possessing illegal arms – Evidence of official making arrest not supported by independent witnesses – Time of arrest interpolated – Order of conviction liable to be set aside – Show cause notice issued to Police Officer for Prosecution under section 193, 195, 211 of I.P.C. – Commissioner of police directed to keep the Daily Diary Book in sealed cover until further orders.	1998 CRI. L. J. 2908 , AIR 1998 SC 2023, 1998 AIR SCW 1877	1147

156	Police Atrocities – Police falsely implicated a Journalist who published certain articles against some police officer working in the Traffic Department of the Police at Solapur – Police cooked up a false story of offering of bribe by the applicant and offence u.s. 12, 7 of the prevention of corruption Act was registered against him – Noticing from the nature of allegations the police custody of the accused was not at all necessary – The case was not handed over to Anti-Corruption bureu – It is a glaring example wherein police machinery has attempted to take vengeance against the petitioner – The commissioner of Police shown undue interest in the matter and has acted in contravention of practice of transferring the investigation to Anti Corruption Bureu – Held – Show cause notice issued to Shri. Himmatrao Deshbhratar, Commissioner of Police, Solapur as to why action should not be taken against him for acting contrary to the law and causing undue hardship to a citizen thereby depriving him of his personal liberty as guaranteed under Article 21 of the constitution of India – Notice also issued to Shri. Shirish S. Tandalekar A.C.P. and Shri. Vikas R. Ramugade P.I. who sought police custody of the petitioner as to why action should not also be taken against them for abuse of the powers vested in them.	2011	1150
157	Unfair Investigation – Abuse of Power by Police – False implication of accused in a serious charge of murder – Police arresting the petitioner in a charge of murder and extorting false voluntary statement by torture - The victim is found alive -Held - State is liable to pay compensation even no bias has been pleaded by the petitioner – Rs. 50,000 to each is awarded as compensation- state is free to take action against police officers responsible for such highly illegal acts, so that police personal will discharge duty/obligation in right direction and without involving innocent persons in grave crimes, as in this case, and will transperacy and accountability so that the confidence of the public be reposed on police.	1999 CRI. L. J. 1915	1152 had commenced portrays the abuse of police power – The Power to quash had to be necessarily exercised for the investigation locking in bonafides – The liberty of an individual so sacred and sacrosanct has be protected zealously by the Court as observed by Hon'ble Supreme Court in AIR 1982 SC 949 – The F.I.R. and all proceedings quashed.
158	Cri. P.C. Sec. 482 – Quashing of F.I.R. and investigation – F.I.R. is registered by the Police to harass the accused who is persuing the case against Dy. S.P. – Offence u/s 420 of I.P.C. registered – Held, When the Police machinery is used for ulterior purposes then such F.I.R. and investigation has to be quashed even if the F.I.R. disclose a cognizable offence – The subsequent investigation had negativated it – The very manner in which an unusually quick and spontaneous investigation	1991 CRI. L. J. 1963	1157

159	(A) Cr. P.C. – S. 482 – Tainted investigation – Quashing of investigation which is tainted and baised, suffers from irregualtities and conducted in malafide exercise of power by police causing serios prejudice and harassment to any party then such investigation is vitiated and any other order passed by investigating agency on basis of such vititated investigation is laible to be quashed – charge sheet is quashed. (B) Article 20, 21 of the constitution – Fair investigation – Investigation must be fiar, transparent and judicious – Police cannot be permitted to harass any party on basis of tainted investigation – Such tainted investigation has to be quashed- fresh investigation may be ordered from other investigation agencies.	2011 (1) SCC (Cri) 336, 2010-TLPRE-0-595	1169
160	A]One sided Investigation – Police is bound to investigate the plea of accused also – A dishonest, unfair or one sided investigation violate the constitutional guarantee and justify interference by Court of Law – Such proceeding has be quashed B]To put an accused person to long lasting trial on an incomplete and one sided investigation and promise to consider full facts only when they are brought before the court at defence stage amounts to ignoring default of the I.O. and clothe him with the authority to harass accused. It may even amount to judicial sanction of substitution of rule of law by the Police Raj, and subversion of our constitutional ideals. These consequences deserve notice of the Session Judge while interpreting his own authority and jurisdiction in the matter. [Note :-The same principle is reiterated by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case 2007 ALL MR (Cri) 555 (SC) where, it has been held that,	1190 CRI.C.J.2257	1181
161	Criminal P.C.(1973), S.24-Duty of Prosecution – It is not the job of prosecution to try only for the convition of accused, but it is their duty to place all the facts on record- The proceedings before trial Court show that the prosecution has been not fair at all to the accused-	2007 ALL MR (CRI.) 648, LAWS(BOM)-2007-1-17	1185

	prosecution and it has to be stated that the trial was not at all fair. Both the prosecution and trial court are to be blamed for this lapse-FOR all these reasons, this appeal is required to be allowed and the accused is entitled to be acquitted.
162	Constitution of India, Article 21—Fair Trial—Prosecution withholding statements of witness who do not support prosecution case- Held, prosecution cannot convert itself in to persecution- withholding statements of witness who do not support prosecution case would amount to jeopardize concept of fair trial- the investigating agency and the prosecution both represent the State. Every action of the State is legally required "to be fair, just and reasonable".	2007(1) B.Cr.C.143= LAWS(BOM)-2006-12-114	1188
163	Contempt of lawful order by Police – Officer – The police officer arrested the accuse even if he was granted bail by the Court – The Police officer was found to be guilty of contempt of Court – He was sentenced to imprisonment of 7 days – While confirming the sentences Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that, (1) Police Officers are supposed to be the members of a disciplined force. It is of utmost importance to curb any tendency in them to flout orders of the court. It is more so when flouting of order results in deprivation of personal liberty of an individual. If protectors of law, to take revenge, defy court orders they will have to be sternly dealt with and appropriate punishment inflicted also with a view to send a message across the board that such an act cannot be countenanced. (2) The rule of law is the foundation of the democratic society. The judiciary is the guardian of the rule of law. If the orders of the court are disobeyed with impunity by those who owe an obligation to the society to preserve the rule of law, not only would individual litigants suffer, the whole administration of justice would be brought into disrepute. (3) Lastly, it was contended that instead of imprisonment, fine be imposed on the appellant. In a matter of this nature, where a police officer, disregarding the bail order, arrests a person because case against him is of alleged assault on one of police official, we do not think that mere sentence of the fine would meet the ends of justice. No interference is called for in the judgment and order in the High Court. The appeal is accordingly dismissed.	2003-AIR(SC)-0-657 , 2003-SCC-1-644	1197
164	Contempt of Courts Act (70 of 1971), S.12(3) - CONTEMPT OF COURT - BAIL - POLICE ATROCITIES -	1993 CRI. L. J. 3311	1200

	Deterrent punishment - Police officials arresting person in violation of order of anticipatory bail passed by Court - Art. 21 of Constitution violated - Sentence of fine would not meet ends of justice, especially when condemner was police official - Civil imprisonment for seven days awarded – Police officer are protector of Law – If they violates the law they should be punished severely.
165	Cri. P.C. Sec. 197 – Abuse of Power by police – Sanction for prosecution – Complainant went to lodge F.I.R. at Police Station – Officer in charge of Police station did not register F.I.R. but tore it and abused complainant – Held – Refusal to receive complaint and toering it can not be considered as official duty – Rather it is a serious lapse on the on his part – The police officer by refusing to record the information has not only omitted or neglected to perform his official duty but also thereby facilitated an offender to escape from the criminal liability – Such police officer cannot be protected – They has to face the prosecution – No sanction is required for prosecution of such Police Officers.	2010 CRI. L. J. 60	1207
166	[A]Article 226 of constitution of India - Prosecution of erring Police Officer for their criminal negligence – Petitioners daughter died due to harassment by accused – The Police officer's conduct was to shield the real culprits and allowing him to got scot free – Appropriate action is required to be taken against erring police officers and personnel – Including disciplinary action and criminal proceedings – They would also liable to pay costs of Rs. 10,000/- to the petitioner. [B]Prosecution of Police under I.P.C. 201. Bombay Police Act 145 (2) (c) (d). - Mere availability of alternate remedy is not an absolute bar for exercise of writ jurisdiction to direct initiation of criminal proceedings against erring police officers. [c] The reply affidavit filed by the police officer is a classic example of how all these three police officers are in connivance with each other in attempt to justify their deliberate inaction – The members of the public who approach the police authorities with the hope and expectation that the wrongdoers should be punished, would lose trust in the police department, if such erring police officers are not punished – Govt. directed to take action – Failure to do so by the Govt. The petitioner is at liberty to approach the court afresh	2008-MhLJ(Cri)-3-182 , 2008-BCR(Cri)-2-273	1209

167	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.154 - FIR - F.I.R. against police - Written complaint to Commissioner of Police disclosing information regarding commission of cognizable offence against Police Officers - It has to be registered as F.I.R. in terms of S.154 of Code. In such type of cases , Commissioner of Police should ensure that inquiry was done by independent agency such as C.I.D. - Enquiry by officers associated with same Police Station should not be ordered if done is illegal (Para 14,15)	2004 CRI. L. J. 2278	1228
168	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.197 - SANCTION FOR PROSECUTION – Abuse of power by police during investigation - No sanction is required – Held -- the Deputy Suprintendent of police was alleged to have - In respect of prosecution for excesses or misuse of authority, no protection can be demanded by the public servant concerned - Where the Deputy Superintendent of Police was alleged to have committed acts of extortion and criminal intimidation while conducting investigation of case the acts cannot be said to be part of the duties of the Investigating Officer while investigating an offence entitling him to get protection of S. 197- No sanction is required.	2009 CRI. L. J. 1318	1243
169	India Penal code sec. 341, 342 – Conviction of Police Officer for illegally Summoning a accused/witnesses – Held –The Police Officer cannot Summon a woman or a male under fifteen years of age – Such persons must be asked to attend interrogation at the place where they reside – This is mandatory provision of section 160 of Cr. P.C. – The Police Officer by calling the witnesses at police station kept them under wrongful restraint - The Police Officer is guilty under section 341 of I.P.C. – His conviction is proper.	1971-SCC-3-945 , 1972-SCC(Cr)-0-193	1247
170	(A) Cri. P.C., S. 156 (3) – Registration of F.I.R. against police officer on the complaint sent to police station by Magistrate – Held- Police officer bound to register an offence and proceed to investigate in to crime. (B) Cr. P.C. 197 – Sanction – Held- for investigation no sanction is required – Preparation of false record of investigation cannot be a part of duty done in discharge of official duty –IF in such cases protection is granted to the police officer then they can show the investigation having been carried out even sitting at home	2007-MHLJ(Cri)-2-960 ; 2007-AIRBomR-5-547; 2007 ALL MR (crI.)2737	1251
171	A] Penal Code section 201,218,468 –	1975-	1256

	Prosecution of police Officer – Preparation of incorrect and forged record of investigation of the case with the fraudulent and dishonest intention of misleading his superior officers and inducing them to do or omit to do the legal and lawful actions – Held – The accused police officer framed the record in a manner which he knews to be incorrect with intent to save or knowing to be likely that he will thereby save the true offender from legal punishment is liable to be punished u.s 218/ 468 of I.P.C. – The Co-accused who facilitated and intentionally aided in preparation of the false and forged record is also liable to be convicted B] The position of accused A-2 was very different. He was a Police officer and as such was expected to discharge the duties entrusted to him by law with fidelity and accuracy. He was required to ascertain the cause of the death and to investigate the circumstances and the manner in which it was brought about. His duty was to make honest efforts to reach at the truth. But he flagrantly abused the trust reposed in him by law. He intentionally fabricated false clues. laid false trails, drew many red herring across the net smothered the truth, burked the inquest, falsified official records and shortcircuited the procedural safeguards. In short, he did everything against public justice which is by Section 201, Penal Code. The other circumstantial evidence apart the series of these designed acts of omission and commission on the part of A-2, were eloquent enough to indicate in no uncertain terms that A-2 knew or had reasons to believe that Kalarani's death was homicidal.	AIR(SC)-0-1925 , 1975-SCC-2-570
172	I.P.C. 499, 500 – False entries by Police officer in the enquiry report – Complainant filed complaint at Police station – The Police investigatin Officer send 'B' summary report stating that the complaint was mischivious, vexatious and flase – The said 'B' summary report was challenged before High Court- High Court held that the complaint was not flase and 'B' summary report prepared by the I.O. was not proper – Thereafter the complainant filed complaint u.s. 500 of I.P.C. – The trial Court issued the process against the accused police officer – The order of issue process is challenged on grund of exception embodied in S. 499 – Defence of action done in good faith was taken – Held – No case of exceptions is made out to grant any relief to accused police officer – Proceeding against him not to be quashed.	2004-ALLMR(CRI)-0-65 , 2003-TLMHH-0-112	1269

173	A]I.P.C. 193 – Prosecution of S.P. and other Police personnel – I.O. during enquiry illegally detained a minor boy and warned that he could be released only when his father surrender before Police - Petition filed before Supreme Court – Report is called form S.P. – False and misleading report submitted by S.P. – Supreme Court being doubtful of report called the report from C.B.I. – It proved the malafides of S.P. – S.P. is guilty u.s. 193 of I.P.C. and	AIR 1996 SC 2326	1271
174	Prosecution of Police Officer (S.P.) for filing false affidavit/ enquiry report before Court – A undertrial prisoner was brutally beaten by Police who died up – Bar Association send letter to Supreme Court – Treated as writ – Court called report from S.P. – S.P. A.K. Sinha Kasshyap filed a false report to save guilty police officer – Court not satisfied with reply called report from C.B.I. – C.B.I. pointed out the disdendful role played by S.P. said to be against all tenents of law and morality – The report and affidavit submitted by S.P. ound to be false/ fabricated – Supreme Court issued a Show cause notice to S.P – In reply to the notice S.P. again try to mislead to court and try to justified his illegal acts – S.P. is guilty of ontempt of Court sentenced to imprisonment for three months.	1996-AIR(SC)-0-1925 , 1996-SCC-9-74	1286
175	Constitution of India – Art. 21 – Torture and harassment by police officer – Compensation of Rs. 2 Lacs - A boy was summoned by Police – The investigation was going to be done without registering of offence – The boy did not return to home – National Human Rights Commission called enquiry from S.P. of Amravati Gramin – S.P. filed enquiry report and try to defend guilty police officers – The commission did not find police version convincing – Commission ordered a sopot enquiry on 5/03/1998 – During enquiry commission recorded finding that without registering the offence at the police station the boy was called at the police station which is illegal and there was a manipulation in the entries recorded in the station diary – High Court ordered investigation by C.I.D. by officer not below the rank of S.P. – Held that – Though the boy was picked up by police no ground of arrest were informed to him and instead doubtful entries have been made in the stationdiary to show that boy absconded from the police station.	2005-All MR(Cri)-0-1638	1298
176	A]Constitution of India, Arts 21, 226 – Police atrocities – A triabal girl of 13 years age falsely implicated by police in Criminal case by alleging that she is having links with naxalites – Court acquitted her for want of evidence – Detention found to be illegal – Victim entitled to	2006-MHLJ(Cri)-1-452 , 2006-CrLJ-0-2202, 2006 ALL MR	1306

	compensation – Rs. 5 lakhs awarded as compensation. B]Police Attrocities – There is lack of accountability of the Police force is also major factor in custodial violence – The Police are policed mostly by themselves and therefore the police personnel committing excesses on citizen are not going to be punished – They succeed to manage in getting away slot free – In present case the illegal detention of the minor girl cannot be said to have been done without facit consent of senior police officials – The state was expected to conduct fair enquiry and made offer before the court their willingness to punish all those officer who were connected with the investigation and prosecution – It is unfortunate that instead doing so the state tried to cover their misdeeds therefore they are bound to compensate petitioner. C] Police Torture – Delay in filing petition – Held – Victim approaching Court after some assistance from organization (NGO) – State can not oppose the petition on ground of delay and latches – state is supposed to protect fundamental and human rights of a citizen. Further we have no hesitation to add that the fact brought on record does go to show that the petitioner had no access to justice though she suffered flagrant violation of her fundamental rights under Articles 21 and 22 of the constitution of India and human rights till Non-governmental Organisation intervened in her matter and look her issue not only with the State Government but also sought assistance of the National and States Human Rights commissions.	(Cri)1018
177	Constitution of India, Art. 21 – Fundamental rights – Violation by Police – Compensation – Appellant a was prosecuted u.s. 420 of I.P.C. – Raid was conducted in his house – He was handcuffed – Photograph of handcuff – Published in newspaper – His sister was shocked and expired when she saw his photograph with handcuff in newspaper – He was unnecessary handcuffed by the police – After trial the applicant was acquitted – Held – Compensation of Rs. 70,000/- awarded to the appellant to be paid by state.	2008 CRI. L. J. 3281	1320
178	Illegal arrest and detention by Police – Writ petition filed before High Court – Superintendent of Police and Home Secretary though served with notice did not appear before High Court in petition – Petitioner was arrested and detained and after some period of time he was allowed to leave Police station – The respondent who did not shown their appearance in the petition said to have admitted allegations against them – The allegations	2010 All MR. (Cri) 2849	1325 against them are unrebutted – Compensation of Rs. 1,00,000/- (One Lakh) granted to petitioner to be paid by guilty Police officers.

179	Constitution of India Art 21 – Personal liberty - Violation of – Handcuffing and parading the accused through streets for investigation – Held, even though the accused was charged under case of Murder the police have no right to handcuff him and parade through the streets – It was alleged by the police that the accused had long criminal record but not a single case was pointed out in which he was convicted – The accused was subjected to wholly unwarranted humiliation and indignity which cannot be done to any citizen of India irrespective of whether he was accused of minor offence or major offence – the action of Police Inspector was unjustified – Accused entitled to compensation – Rs, 10,000 awarded as compensation would be paid by police Inspector	1991-Cri.L.J.-0-2344, 1990-BCR-2-242 .	1327
180	Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 – S. 12 – Accused was Handcuffed and produced before Magistrate after being paraded from station to District Court – Keeping in view of fact that charges u/s 220, IPC have already been framed against police personal and departmental action also taken against guilty police personal – No need to take further action.	2000-AIR(SC)-0-3632 , 2000-ALT(Cri)(SC)-1-36	1336
181	Violation of human rights - Petition against handcuffing and parading the accused in public by Police - Petition registered as Public Interest Litigation - It would be improper after a lapse of almost three years to shut the doors of the Court and direct that the petitioners should seek reliefs elsewhere or approach the Human Rights Commission – Compensation of Rs. 15,000/- is granted to each accused. (Para 15)	2006 ALL MR (Cri) 1241	1338
182	A]Protection of Human Rights – Abuse of power by Govt. officers, Police Illegal Confinement and brutal torture by Revenue officer – Victim lodge report to police – Police conducted biased enquiry – The accused R.D.O. was allowed to continue to work as RDO in the very same jurisdiction during the enquiry period is highly illegal – Tahsildar/Trainee Magistrate and Police constable and sub-Inspector of Police helped the accused by exceeding their limit – When the statutory authority, namely Police failed to perform their duty under section 154 of Cri. P.C., it is the bounden duty of the High Court to invoke the power u.s. 482 of Cr. P.c. to give suitable direction to register FIR and investigate – The judiciary which is the sentinel of the great liberty of citizens would certainly intervene in the cases where the human dignity is wounded in order to uphold human values and to protect the rights guaranteed under the constitution – Dy. S.P. ,	2001 CRI. L. J. 4092	1347

	C.I.D. was directed to register FIR and take suitable action against the concerned officials. B]No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is a part of Universal Declaration of Human Rights. C]The victim was beaten brutally by the RDO and Policemen. He was produced before trainee Magistrate and remand order was obtained even without recording his complaint of torture – the primary report called from the CID support the allegations of petitioner. D]Human Rights commission – The petitioner sent a petition to the Commission which was referred to the collector – Collector sent a report to the commission to drop the action as allegations were not proved so commission closed the case and directed the victim that if aggrieved he can approach to any other courts for vindication of his rights – dropping of enquiry by Human Rights Commission is a no obstacle for the proposed registration of FIR against guilty officers – The judiciary cannot keep quiet by shutting its eyes to the illegalities commited by govt. officials.
183	Contempt of Court by police Officer – In a petition to transfer investigation the respondent I.O. Shri Mandar Dharmadhikari – Asstt-P.O., Cuff Parade. Police Station Mumbai, made a false statement with ulterior motive that the petition will be dismissed – It is an act of interference with the administration of justice – the apology tendered by I.O. at belated stage is nothing but mere realization of the contemnor that his adventure has turned into a misadventure as he failed in misleading the Court to get the petition dismissed – I.O. is guilty of committing Criminal Contempt – Cost of Rs. 50,000/- imposed imprisonment till rising of court ordered. B]Contempt of Courts Act (1971), SS. 2 (c) (ii), 13 – Criminal contempt – Making a false statement in judicial proceeding or filing false affidavit before Court or the other statements which result in misleading the court or disclose even an attempt to deceive the court, could result in mischievous consequence to the administration of justice and warrant criminal contempt. C]Abuse of process of court – Abusing the court's process may mean different types of acts – Most serious example is an act which is intended to deceive the Court,	2005 CRI. L. J. 765	1362 for example by deliberate suppression of facts or by the presentation of falsehood is as much abuse of Court's process as the act of bringing frivolous and vexatious and oppresive proceedings. D] The concept of criminal contempt was well explained in the matter of Hastings Mill Limited v. Hira Singh reported in 1978 Cri LJ 560. Shri Justice A. K. Sen, speaking for the Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court

184	[A] Constitution of India Art. 21 & 22 custodial violence Guidelines regarding Arrest – Violation of – Failure to Comply with requirements of guidelines laid down by Supreme court shall apart from rendering the concerned official liable for departmental action also render him liable to be punished for contempt of Court and the proceedings for it may be instituted in any High court of India having territorial jurisdiction. [B] PROOF OF CUSTODIAL TORTURE – Held – It is impossible to have direct evidence of custodial torture by the police – It is difficult to secure evidence against the policemen responsible for resorting to third degree method since they are in charge of police station records which they can manipulate – The witnesses are either police men or co-prisoners who are highly reluctant as prosecution witnesses due to fear of retaliation by the superior officers of the Police – The Courts are required to change their outlook and attitude particularly in cases involving custodial crimes - They should adopt a realistic approach rather than a narrow technical approach so that the guilty should not escape – The victim of the crime should have satisfaction that ultimately the Majesty of law has prevailed.	1997 (1) SCC 416	1374
185	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.160, S.91 - SUMMONS - PERSONAL APPEARANCE and Attendance of witnesses - Enforcement of - Petitioners were residents of Delhi and said to be acquainted with facts of case - Were summoned for their personal attendance by police officer at Shillong - Since police officer making investigation can enforce attendance of persons u/S.160 only if witness resides within limits of his or adjoining police station - Hence, notices issued seeking personal attendance were liable to be quashed. (Para 5)	2010 CRI. L. J. 56	1397
186	(A) Delhi Police Act (1978), S.140 - Offence by Police Officer - Bar to prosecution lodged after three months - Shelter of period of three months can be taken only if act done by police officer is under colour of duty - Case	2011 CRI. L. J. 2908	1402 of murder by police officials - Will not fall within expression 'colour of duty' occurring in S. 140. (Paras 35, 36, 42) (B) Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.300, Exception 3 - MURDER - POLICE OFFICERS - Death by police officials - Benefit of exception 3 to S.300 - Obligation to prove an exception is on preponderance of probabilities but it nevertheless lies on defence - Accused police party had fired without provocation at car killing two innocent persons and injuring one - Incident occurred on account of mistaken identity of deceased as wanted criminal by police party - Defence of police party that deceased had first resorted to firing - Found unacceptable as it was proved, that 7.65 mm pistol had been surreptitiously placed in car to create defence - Though police party was acquitted to plant pistol in car on grounds that it was not possible to pinpoint culprit who had done so - This can, by no stretch of imagination, be taken to mean that pistol had been planted in car has been disbelieved by High Court - Accused police party not entitled to benefit of exception 3 to S. 300. (Para 14)

	-: CHAPTER = :- LAW RELATING TO PROSECUTION AGAINST MEDIA
187	A]Cr. P.C. Sec. 154 – F.I.R. registered against a Newspaper's Editor – The Newspaper published some news items regarding involvement of a person in an incident about prosecution by women – On the basis of newspaper reporting an enquiry was launched by Police – During enquiry the news item was found to be flase against the person – On the basis of enquiry report F.I.R. registered against Editor of news Paper under Sections 465, 467, 471 and 120-B of I.P.C. as the C.D. on basis of which news was published was also found to be interpolated – Editor challenged the F.I.R. by filing petition – Held that – the F.I.R. and proceedings are legal and proper and cannot be qushed. B]Necessary Party – Allegation of malafides in petition against a person who is not respondent can not be accepted.	2006 CRI. L. J. 3643	1428
188	PUBLICATION OF NEWS WITH ATTRACTIVE HEADING AMOUNTS TO DEFAMATION ,- In view of that, the imputation published in "the BRIEF" has to be viewed,- The petitioner has published that imputation as alleged by the complainant. The matter starts with heading in	MHLJ-4-705 , 2004-BCR(Cri)-1-450	1442

	very big letters "the Director behind barsl" It is sure to invite anybody's attention by its nature itself. In that case the person looking to it would be gathering the impression that the aged director has gone behind the bars. Prima facie it would create a stigma to him. The petitioner has not published the remaining portion of the item in the same size of the letters. The remaining portion of the matter is in small letters. The remaining portion of the matter is in small letters. Even that also starts with some sentences which are prima facie damaging the reputation of the aged director who has been reported to be behind bars. The said heading has been decorated with exclamation mark. That has given more strength to the impact which is likely to be created by it. The reporting of the talk ensued between the Brief spokesperson and Shri kapadia (original complainant) has been mentioned in the said news item at last but one paragraph. Before reading that paragraph one has to read paragraph 1 and paragraph 2. WHILE considering a complaint of defamation, the Court has to consider the imputation as a whole and the prima facie impact which is likely to be created by it also. In the present case, the impact would create a prima facie case in favour of respondent Kapadia. Therefore, this Court does not find that the Trial Court has committed any error in issuing the process against the petitioner Mr. Anil Thakeraney, because the defence which the present petitioner may take, will have to undergo the process of judicial consideration. He would be obliged to make out a case that he published the said matter with due care and caution. IT is to be noted that whoever publishes the account of a judicial proceeding, is under an obligation to publish it correctly and in a sober way. There has to be no addition to create "mirch masala" to it at the cost of the person against whom such matter has been published. But tendency of printing Court proceedings by giving pungent heading is at increasing trend. The prestige lost once cannot be restored later on and, therefore, the legislature has put alarms of caution by providing explanations, exceptions and illustrations to section 499 of the I. P. C. Everybody has an important right to live in the society with dignity and remark slinging has been decided to be curbed out by Legislature and, therefore, section 499 has come with its faces as it is. Whoever endeavours in publishing anything against anybody has to be careful enough to see that he commits no offence and he remains well within four corners of the exceptions satisfactorily.

	-: CHAPTER = :- HOW TO USE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 340 OF CR.P.C. TO PROSECUTE THE PERSON WHO FILES FALSE AND MISLEADING SAY / DOCUMENTS IN COURT AND ALSO FALSE COMPLAINT BEFORE COURT AND POLICE
189	Criminal P.C., Sec. 340 – Forged documents filed during Civil Proceedings – Preliminary enquiry before filing complaint – There is no obligation on Court to afford on opportunity of hearing to claimants/ land owners who sought big amount of compensation by producing forged sale deeds – Order for initiation of prosecution proceeding before Magistrate can be passed directly – Opportunity of hearing would be accused is not required to be given.	2002 CRI. L. J. 548 (AIR 2002 SC 236 = 2001 AIR SCW 4910)	1446
190	(A)Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 — S. 2(c) — Criminal contempt — Filing of false affidavit intentionally — Held, amounts to contempt of court — On facts held, P by making a false statement on affidavit with the intention of inducing the Supreme Court not to pass any adverse order against NOIDA Authorities had committed contempt of court (Para 7) (B)Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 — S. 12 — filing false affidavit intentionally — He submitting that apology tendered should be accepted and/or in any event fine would suffice — Held on facts, apology tendered was worthless since it was not genuine and bona fide and was tendered only after it was found that false statement had been made on oath — did not on his own point it out — Further held, it was only an attempt to get out of consequences of having been caught — Hence, sentence of simple imprisonment for one week imposed	2010-SCC(Cr)-3-586 , 2003-AIR(SC)-0-2723,	1451
191	A]Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S. 340 – IPC, 193 – Filling of false affidavit in judicial proceedings – Order directing prosecution of accused for offence under S. 193 of I.P.C. – Accused coming with defence of bonafide mistake – Held – Court cannot examine defence of accused - Order passed by Addl. District Judge does not require any interference B] Filing of false affidavit – Effect of – It needs to be highlighted that filing a false affidavit or giving a false evidence in a Judicial proceeding is a serious matter – Supreme Court in AIR 1995 SC 795 observed that,	1999 CRI. L. J. 4743	1454
192	Cri. P.c. S. 340 – 195- Petitioner filed Civil suit – In reply to the suit the respondent officer of Amritsar	2002 CRI. L. J. 4485	1456

	Improvement Trust filed a false and misleading reply in Court to frustrate claim of petitioner – Thereafter petitioner filed application under section 340 of Cri. P.C. – Respondent officer filed application of adducing defence evidence which is allowed by Civil Judge – Held- During course of enquiry under sec. 340 of cr. P.c. the Court cannot grant permission to accused to produce defence evidence the order is illegal, hence set aside.
193	Criminal P.C. Sec. 340, 341 – Filing of false affidavit in civil suit – Proceeding under Sec. 340 of Cri. P.C. – The main civil suit was at the end stage and fixed for final arguments held Merely because civil suit was pending that did not prevent the civil Judge from entering in to an enquiry - The Civil Judge should register such application as Miscellaneous Judicial case and then proceed to decide the application according to the provisions of Sec. 340 of Cr. P.C. – Civil suit and application under section 340 of Cr. P.C. has to be decided independently.	2007-ALLMR(CRI)-0-2281 , 2007-MHLJ(Cri)-2-860	1459
194	Cri. P.C. Section 340, 195 – F.I.R. and investigation in the matter documents related to proceedings before Court is barred – F.I.R. and all proceeding are abuse of process of Court – Hence quashed – The proper procedure is to approach before the concerned Court.	2007-ALLMR(CRI)-0-3401 , 2007-MHLJ(Cri)-2-701	1461
195	Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.476 - FORGERY - CONTRACT - Suit on forged contract - Party found to have committed forgery - - Expediency of prosecuting accused.- Where it was found as a fact that in the suit on a contract the party, had committed acts of deliberate forgery in concocting a false contract in support of his claim, such a person is obviously a danger to society and this is a typical case where the Court should file a complaint under S. 476 Cr. P.C.	AIR 1959 ANDHRA PRADESH 204	464
196	Constitution of India , Arts. 32,226-Malafides- Pleadings- If allegations of malafides remain unrebutted and unanswered court is bound constrained to accept them.	2009 ALL SCR (O.C.C) 193=AIR 1986 SC 872	1470
197	Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.191, S.192, S.193 - The course adopted by the applicant is impermissible and his application is based on mis-conception of law and facts. No. litigant has a right to unlimited drought on the Court time and public money in order to get his affairs settled in the manner as he wishes. Easy access to justice should not be misused as a licence to file misconceived or frivolous petitions- We	1996 CRI. L. J. 3983 = AIR 1996 SC 2687 = 1996 AIR SCW 3356	16471

	have referred to the history of the case only to show how the applicant has, thanks to the permissiveness of the judicial system, filed one petition after another to question the validity-.(para 6&11)
198	Evidence Act (1 of 1872), S.44 - EVIDENCE - JUDGMENT - FRAUD - Proceeding in court - Fraud on Court by litigant - Withholding of vital document relevant to well as on the opposite party.	AIR 1994 SUPREME COURT 853 =	1472
199	Malice in law— Natural justice— Mala fide— Malice in fact and malice in law— Difference between the two concepts— But question of malice immaterial where discretionary power is used for unauthorised purpose— Malice in law is different from malice in fact and may be assumed from the doing of a wrongful act intentionally but without just cause or excuse, or for want of reasonable or probable cause - Held, gross abuse of legal power to use a rule to a purpose and in a manner unwarranted by it - Order infected with an abuse of power as is based on nonexisting facts (Para 5)	(1979) 2 Supreme Court Cases 491	1476
200	A) Practice and Procedure— Abuse of process— New creed of dishonest litigants, misleading court and suppressing facts noticed and strongly deprecated— No relief should be granted to such persons- A litigant, who attempts to pollute the stream of justice or who touches the pure fountain of justice with tainted hands, is not entitled to any relief, interim or final .	(2010) 2 Supreme Court Cases 114	1477
	-: CHAPTER = :- LAW RELATING TO PROSECUTION OF GOVERNMENT PLEADERS AND ADVOCATES
201	I.P.C. 466, 193 – A Vakil was sentenced to two rigorous imprisonment of 5 years for filling document containing false statement – Held, If Legal practitioner signs a document it is presumed that he fixes signatory with knowledge of contents – A Vakil so signing cannot plead that he did not know the contents – A man who signs his name to a document makes himself responsible in every way – He is bound to answer for every word, line, sentence and paragraph, and it will be no defence that somebody else wrote it and he only signed it – signature implies association and carries responsibility – He will be bound by all the implications arising from it just as much as if he had written every word – Practitioners must realize that if they associate themselves with statements which they know to be dishonest and untruthful for the purpose of misleading	A.I.R. 1927 ALLAHABAD 45 (FULL BENCH)	1494

	the Court then they should be punished - practitioner suspended.
201	Advocates Act – Professional ethics – Resolution of Bar Association that none of its members will appear for a particular accused is against constitution – Such resolution is in fact, a disgrace to the legal community – All such resolutions of Bar Association in India are declared as null and void – The right minded lawyers should ignore and defy such resolutions if they want democracy and rule of law to be upheld in this country – It is the duty of lawyer to defend irrespective of consequences – To put quietus to the FIR against both the parties stands quashed – Without going in to merits of controversy compensation of Rs. 1,50,000/- awarded to appellant and F.I.R. against him also quashed.	AIR 2011 SC (Criminal)193	1498
202	[A]Change of Advocate – A litigant must have the freedom to change his advocate when he feels that the advocate engaged by him is not capable of handling the case or his conduct is prejudicial to the case of the litigant for any other reason – If for whatever reason the client does not want to continue the engagement of a particular advocate then that advocate is bound to return the brief to the client – It is absolute right of the litigant to get back his brief – The advocate cannot withhold the brief for any reason including his outstanding fee – Failure to observe this procedure is a professional misconduct and the advocate is liable for action. [B]Civil P.C. order 3, Rule 4 (1) – Article 22 (1) of the constitution – Right to have advocate of his choice – Held- Supreme Court in earlier decision (in AIR 1966 SC 1910) made it clear that the word 'of his choice' in Article 22(1) indicate that the right of the accused to change an advocate whom he once engaged in the same case, cannot be whittled down by that advocate by withholding the case bundle on the premise that he has to get fees for the services already rendered to the client. [C]Professional Misconduct – Advocates Act Sec.35 – Professional Misconduct may consist in betraying the confidence of a client, in attempting by any means to practice a fraud or deceive the court or the adverse party or his counsel, and any conduct which tends to bring reproach on the legal profession – OR – Anything done which would be regarded as disgraceful or dishonorable by his professional brethren of good repute and competency. [D]Quantum of Punishment – As the Supreme court had not pronounced any Judgment on this issue earlier therefore the advocate would have bonafidely believed in the light of	2000 SCC (7) 264 SUPREME COURT	1503

	decisions of certain High courts that his act is legal – Therefore, it is not desirable to impose a harsh punishment – A reprimand would be Sufficient in the interest of justice – However it is made clear that the lesser punishment imposed now need not, be counted as a precedent.
203	Advocate to gain private profit and to gain ulterior purposes filed petition and claiming it to be in the interest of public-official document annexed to the petition but no explanation is given as to how he come in possession thereof –the attractive brand name of public interest litigation should not be used for suspicious product of mischief and it should not be publicity oriented or founded on personal vendetta – Bar Council and Bar Association directed to ensure that no member of the bar becomes party as petitioner file frivolous petitions- no one should be permitted to bring disgrace to the noble profession and high traditions of the bar. Imposition of cost Rs 25000/ on advocate is proper- Copy of order sent to Bar Council for necerry action against advocate.	2005-ALLMR-5-270 , 2005-AIR(SC)-0-540	1510
204	[A]Criminal Trial – Representation by Advocate without filing vakalatnama – Like in Civil cases the advocate need not to file Vakalatnama in criminal cases – Filing of memo of appearance is sufficient – Court should be liberal in such type of cases – The prosecution have no right to put objection on the memo of appearance by the advocate. [B]Failure by Junior Advocate to file Vakaltnama and memo of appearance on behalf of accused can be no ground for the court to reject the application for exemption filed by the junior advocate – The act of Magistrate rejecting the application and issuing N.B.W. is illegal – Order is set aside and N.B.W. recalled.	2003 CRI. L. J. 350	1515
205	Cri. P.C. Sec 4 (1) (r) and Sec. 205 – Appearance of advocate without vakalatnama – District Magistrate rejected application on ground that no Vakalatnama is filed by said advocate – Held – Rejection of application by ADM is illegal – In criminal cases the advocate need not to file Vakalatnama – the advocate can act on behalf of accused without any formal vakalatnama in his favour – His own declaration of his being authorized by the accused is sufficient – The act of Addl. Dist. Magistrate is highly illegal – Such order betray a lamentable lack of judicial mind and approach – Judge is warned that he shall not pass such puerile orders hereafter and waste time not only of his own but also of higher Courts – Order of A.D.M. is quashed and set aside.	1975 CRI. L. J. 1808	1516 by lawyer of choice of accused is constitutional mandate- Non providing opportunity to defend the case by engaging lawyer of choice of accused - Offends provisions of S. 303 of Cri. P.C. and Arts. 22 and 14of Constitution-trial vitiated – Conviction set aside.
206	Central Reserve Police Force Act (66 of 1949), S.9 - CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE - Opportunity to be defended	2003 CRI. L. J. 4302	1517

207	Constitution of India, Art.226 - Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.304 - COURT OF SESSIONS – Right of accused to be defended by advocate during trial - Duty is cast on public prosecutor to bring it to notice of Court, so that Court can appoint somebody to defend accused – Non following the procedure entire trial is vitiated- even if the accused at one stage intimated that he would have his own defence but on the date of hearing he is undefended, a duty is cast on the public prosecutor to bring it to the notice of the Court so that the Court can appoint somebody to defend the accused. If none is available as per the list, a gentleman of the Bar present in Court may be requested to defend the accused. The object underlying this provision is that no accused who is accused of a charge which may lead to the extreme penalty under the law should be deprived of a defence. Otherwise this leads to inadequate defence of the accused persons before the court of session and the entire trial is vitiated for the accused not having got a proper and fair trial. (Para 7)	1970 CRI. L. J. 396 (V. 76, C. N. 91)	1522
208	Advocate Act – There is no total bar for the private person/non advocate to represent the case of litigant - Court can allow power of attorney holder of a party to appear before the Court. It is the choice of the party to decide who should represent him or her and such right having been assured in terms of Article 19(1) (A) of the constitution of India and there being no bar for non-advocate being allowed to represent a party in a proceeding – Supreme Court Judgment AIR 1978 SC 1019 relied and referred to.	2004-BCR-5-196 , 2004-MhLJ-2-810	1525
209	Contempt of Court by Advocate - Criminal contempt – Malicious statement made by an Advocate before Court during pendency of cases is criminal contempt – He is an advocate and not layman – He made statement with having knowledge that the malicious statement is per se contemptuous – Mere offer of unconditional apology by contemnor should not allow him to go scot-free – Contemnor advocate liable to be punished – Fine of Rs. 2000/- imposed and in default to go 3 months imprisonment.	2002 CRI. L. J. 788	1530
210	Duty of Advocates towards Court – Held, he has to act fairly and place all the truth even if it is against his client – he should not withhold the authority or documents which tells against his client – It is a mistake to suppose that he is a mouthpiece of his client to say that he wants – He is supposed to disregard with instruction of his client which	1987-SCC-3-258	1532

	conflicts with their duty to the Court. (para 10, 11 & 12)
211	Contempt of Courts Act (1971), S.23 - Contempt of Courts (CAT) Rules (1992), Rr.10, 11, 12 - Advocates Act (1961), Ss.30, 34, 49 - Right to appear in Advocate's robes before Court is statutory right - It is available to person who appears in his capacity as Advocate for any other party and not in his own cause.	2011 ALL MR (Cri) 381	1538
212	Advocates Act (25 of 1961), Ss. 38, 35 – Advocate attested forged affidavit causing wrongful loss to party – Respondent – On basis of that forged document income tax clearance certificate obtained – Bar council failed to take stern action but only condemned the conduct of advocate – Held, Reprimand was no punishment strict sense – Supreme Court criticized the lenient view taken by the Bar Council - It has been held that if this not a profession misconduct then it would be time to wind up this jurisdiction – The act of advocate is of unbecoming of member of noble profession-advocate is guilty of gross professional misconduct and must be suspended from practice for five years.	1985-AIR(SC)-0-28 , 1984-SCC-Supp1-571	1539
213	A. Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 301, 302 and 225 & 24 — Duty of the Public Prosecutor to act fairly and not merely to obtain conviction by any means fair or foul — If the accused is entitled to any legitimate benefit the Public Prosecutor should make it available to him or inform the court even if the defence counsel overlooked it . B. Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 301 and 302 — Unlike S. 302, S. 301 is applicable to all courts of criminal jurisdiction- Right of private counsel to conduct prosecution in a Sessions Court — Prosecution in sessions case cannot be conducted by anyone other than the Public Prosecutor — Role of private counsel is limited to act under the direction of the Public Prosecutor — However, he can submit written arguments after closure of the evidence with prior permission of the court.	(1999) Supreme Court Case 467	1551
214	Criminal P.C. (1973), Ss.239, 301, 302 -Application for discharge - First informant- No right to address orally - Opportunity of hearing cannot be refused to him - His role will be limited and he cannot take place of Public Prosecutor - He cannot be allowed to take over the control of prosecution by allowing to address the court directly	2012 ALL MR (CRI) 1624, LAWS(BOM)-2012-2-115	1558

215	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S. 438 – Anticipatory bail- Application for – Has to be decided expeditiously – Court deciding application for anticipatory bail has to balance right of applicant of his liberty – Investigating expected to be ready with reply at earliest point of time and to cooperate with court for early disposal of application of anticipatory bail – Pendency of such applications for considerable length of time seriously prejudices applicant in case no interim protection is granted. (Paras 18,19) (B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974) ,S. 438- Anticipatory bail- Complainant/first informant is entitled to be heard by court while deciding application for anticipatory bail- However , his rights are not unfettered and cannot be construed as giving him liberty to make submissions for any length of time –Interest of justice would be served if he is called upon to file his say, in writing containing facts and legal submissions pointing out as to why anticipatory bail should not be granted – If such a course is adopted , it would save valuable time of court(Para 21)	2013 Cri. L. J. (NOC)301	1565
	-: CHAPTER = :- PROTECTION FOR ADVOCATES
216	Contempt of Courts Act (32 of 1952), S.1 - CONTEMPT OF COURT -Threatening by a party to prosecute plaintiff's Advocate in course of argument before Judge- The threat was intended to operate upon the mind of the Advocate so that he should flinch from performing his duties towards his client amounts to contempt of Court - Not words but conduct is essence of matter- Disrespect or disregard to an advocate in certain circumstances so as to deter him from discharging his duties would amount to contempt of Court. Conduct which is intended or calculated to bring pressure upon a party and his advocate, not to pursue the matter according to his choice, amounts to interference with the administration of justice even though such threat is not direct, in the sense that the contemner specifically asserted that he would take such action- In Nandlal Bhalla v. Kishori Lal, 48 Cri LJ 757 (Lah) the Inspector of Police issued threats and used insulting language towards an advocate. It was held that the Advocate was threatened in the performance of his duties, and although there was no contempt of the Court directly, there was contempt inasmuch as an officer of the Court such as an advocate appearing for the party- In (1824) 1 Hog 134 an insult was given to a counsel while he was attending in the Master's office, which was situated within the precincts of the Court. It was held that "Advocates who appear for the parties being officers of Court, any abuse or insult or aspersions	AIR 1966 BOMBAY 19 (Vol. 53, C. 5)	1574 cast on them, which would interfere with the course of administration of justice, must necessarily be held to amount in contempt of Court."

217	A) Advocates — Duties — Legal opinion rendered by advocate — Negligent or improper legal advice or opinion — Criminal liability cannot be fastened — Criminal conspiracy to defraud Bank — Panel Advocate of Bank when can be made liable for such criminal conspiracy — Need for evidence to show that lawyer in question aided or abetted the other conspirators — Held, although a lawyer owes an unremitting loyalty to clients interest, however , merely because his legal opinion may not be acceptable (in present case respondent Panel Advocate had been given ownership documents of conspirators' pledged properties, for vetting), he cannot be fastened with criminal prosecution in absence of tangible evidence that he had aided or abetted other conspirators — At the most, he may be liable for gross negligence or professional misconduct if established by evidence — In present case, there being no such tangible evidence against respondent, criminal proceedings against him, held, rightly quashed . B) Tort Law — Negligence — Professional negligence — Standard of requisite skill applicable — Held, a professional's only assurance which can be given by implication is that: (1) he is possessed of the requisite skill in that branch of profession which he is practising, and (2) while undertaking performance of the task entrusted to him, he would exercise his skill with reasonable competence —A professional may thus be held liable for negligence on one of the two findings viz. either he was not possessed of the requisite skill which he professed to have possessed, or, he did not exercise, with reasonable. C) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 227, 228 and 209 — Framing of charge /Discharge of accused — Exercise of jurisdiction— Held, Judicial Magistrate enquiring into a case is not to act as a mere post office or mouth piece of the prosecution and has to arrive at a conclusion whether the case before him is fit for commitment of accused to Court of Session — He is entitled to sift and weigh materials on record, but only to see whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment, not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction — If Magistrate finds no prim a facie evidence or evidence placed on record is totally unworthy of credit, it is his duty to discharge accused at once — While exercising jurisdiction under S. 227, Magistrate should not make a roving enquiry into pros and cons of the matter or weigh the evidence as if he were conducting a trial (para 14)	(201) 3Supe meCo urtCas es(Cri) 1183	1589

218	A] Wrongful arrest & detention in police custody – IPC Ss. 420 & 471 Cr.P.C. S.41-Police Officer is not expected to act in a mechanical manner and in all cases to arrest accused as soon as report of cognizable offence is lodged – Existence of power to arrest is another thing & justification for exercise of it is another thing there must be some reasonable justification in opinion of officer effecting arrest that it was necessary and justified – Except in heinous offences arrest should be avoided – If Police Officer issue notice to a person to attend the Police Station and not leave the station without permission would do – offence u.s. 420, 471, 468 of IPC are not herious offences – Arrest illegal. B] Compensation- Petitioner was arrested by respondent Police Officer in case registered U/s 420, 468, 471. If IPC – Offences are not heinous offences - Arrest found malafide and mischievous & not protected by element of good faith – Infringement of fundamental right of a citizen cannot stop by giving a mere declaration – Compensatory relief is to be provided under – Cost of Rs. 25,000/- imposed on Police Officer who arrested the petitioner.	2004(I) Crimes 1 (Bom) (DB) = 2003-BCR(Cri)1655,	1602
219	(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437(5) - BAIL – Accused an advocate - Application for bail - Rejected by Magistrate - Copies for rejection order made available within few hours - On same day application for release on bail filed before Sessions Court - Such fact could not disentitle Sessions Judge to pass order allowing bail application - More so when applicant was advocate and to avoid revolt by members of bar, the order could have been passed - Moreover as the accused- applicant was an advocate, to avoid situation like the members of the Bar going up in arms and rising in revolt against the Judicial Officers as soon as one of their colleagues is either remanded to custody or is refused the prayer for bail the order for allowing bail could have been passed. It could have been one of the reasons for directing the release of the accused on the same day on which his prayer was rejected by the Chief Judicial Magistrate.	2007 CRI. L. J. 2890	1603
	-: CHAPTER = :- SOME LANDMARK CASES HANDLED BY NGO THROUGH NATIONAL PRESIDENT AND AUTHOR OF THIS BOOK ADV. NILESH OJHA
	-: CHAPTER = :- PROSECUTION OF PUBLIC / GOVT. SERVANTS

220	Cri. P.c. 439, 437, Bail – Bail is the Rule and Jail an exception – Accused entitled for presumption of innocence till he is convicted – constitutionally protected liberty of accused must be respected unless detention becomes necessary – If any accused is detained before conviction then it will put unnecessary burden on state to keep a person who is not proved guilty – Normally bail should be granted to accused – Apprehension of tampering of evidence without sound proof could not be accepted and this ground could not be considered in each case to deny the bail.	2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26	1642
221	Cr. P.C. 151- Illegal Arrest – Petitioner Lady and her son were detained and sent to Judicial custody alleging that she wants to commit suicide –Held, we are constrained to come to the conclusion that the petitioners on the day they were called to the police station had not taken any steps at committing suicide. In fact, the petitioners had withdrawn such a threat. The petitioners were called to the police station under a false pretext that an offence would be wregistered on the basis of the report of the first petitioner. We find no reason to question the case of the petitioners that they were detained in the police station and, thereafter, suddenly produced in the court of the Magistrate and to their dismay learnt that they had been arrested. There was no impending threat of the petitioners for committing suicide and in passing, therefore, we may say that their arrest and detention itself was not justified - the authorities have committed a blatant violation of the directives of the Supreme Court in D. K. Basu's case and the petition on that score deserves to succeed - petition is partly allowed. We direct the respondents to pay each of the petitioners an amount of Rs.3,00,000/- (Rupees Three Lakhs Only) within a period of eight weeks	13th June 2013	1644
222	Protection of Human Rights Act, 1993 – Custodial Death – Illegal arrest – Section 151 of Cri. P.C. – The victim was asenior citizen of 78 years old – He was illegally detained by P.S.O. U.S. 151 of cri. P.C. under directions of S.P Wardha Smt. Ashwati Dorje – The Victim was not granted bail by the Tahsildar Deepak Karande – The victim died in jail – The son of victim filed petition before State Human Rights commission, Mumbai through Shri. Nilesh C. Ojha National President of Manav Adhikar Suraksha Parishad – Commission accepted the contention of the petitioner and directed Home secretary to take action against Smt. Ashwati Dorje, S.P. Wardha Shri. Deepak Karande, Tahsildar, Wardha and Shri V.D. Boite Jail Supreintendant, Wardha. The petitioner filed Writ petition challenging the legality of the order - It has been held by High court that the order passed by State Human Rights commission is legal and does not require interference.	2010-TLMHH-0-510	1654

223	A. Inference regarding mala fide exercise of power — When can be made — Undue haste — Allegedly public authority awarding similar work to contractor without inviting tenders (when there was no urgency for said haste) — On account of such haste in the absence of any urgency, Court can draw an adverse inference regarding the conduct of said public authority — Therefore, it is a matter of investigation to find out whether there was any ulterior motive – C.B.I. directed to conduct preliminary enquiry.B. Constitution of India — Arts. 32, 14 and 21 — Public Interest Litigation (PIL) — Alleged corruption by public servant — Preliminary CBI inquiry — (public servant) allegedly indulging in illegal, arbitrary and colourable exercise of power for favouring himself in allotment and conversion of land and also favouring contractors in awarding tenders and illegally "extending" contractual work for large sums - Respondent 4 awarding to same contractor additional work worth crores more than the original work without inviting fresh tenders, without following prescribed procedure and without verifying as to whether contractor was eligible for said additional work — Said award of contract, held, is not permissible — Awarding the contract under the garb of so-called extension amounts to doing something indirectly which may not be permissible to be done directly — Work being worth in crore more than the amount of original contract cannot be termed as an "addition" or "additional work" C. Administrative Action — Administrative or Executive Function — Doctrine of public trust and manner of utilisation of power vested in State and public authorities, reiterated — Actions of State or its instrumentality must be reasonable and fair and must be exercised for a bona fide purpose Constitution of India—Arts. 14 and 21 The State or the public authority which holds the property for the public or which has been assigned the duty of grant of largesse, etc., acts as a trustee and, therefore, has to act fairly and reasonably. A public authority is ultimately accountable to the people in whom the sovereignty vests. (Para 38)	(2011) 2 Supreme Court Cases (Cri) 1015 (2011) 6 Supreme Court Cases 508	1666
224	(A)CONTEMPT OF COURT – deliberate attempt on the part bureaucracy to circumvent order of court and try to take recourse to one justification or other– this shows complete lack of grace in accepting the order of the Court -this tendency of undermining the court's order cannot be countenanced –in democracy the role of Court cannot be subservient to the administrative fiat – the executive and legislature had to work within constitution framework and judiciary has been given role of watch dog to keep the legislature and executive within check- the appellant office flouted order of this court is guilty of contempt of court.	2005-RAJLW-1-84 , 2004-CCC(SC)-4-295	1680

NOTES OF ARGUMENTS

(FOR REFRENCE)

FOR GETTING ANTICIPATORY AND REGULAR BAIL
REJECTION OF POLICE CUSTODY (FOR ALL CASES INCLUDING MURDER)

It is constitutional mandate that 'Every accused is presumed to be innocent unless proved guilty by the competent Court.' The police officer/prosecution agency is not a judge to decide who is right and who is wrong.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the landmark Judgement in Siddharam Mehetre –Vs- State of Maharashtra 2011 (1) SCC (Cri) 514 specifically laid down the guidelines in the nature of direction that the arrest should be avoided and investigation can be done by issuing notice to the accused. The above guidelines are irrespective of the nature of offences, Because Hon'ble Supreme Court granted anticipatory bail in Murder case in abovesaid case. While deciding issue of avoiding PCR i. e. custodial interrogation, Hon'ble Supreme Court observed as under,

> A. Anticipatory Bail - Code of Criminal Procedure S. 438 - General guidelines including Murder case - I.P.C. S. 302 - Frivolity in prosecution should always be considered - If there is some doubt then accused is entitled to order of bail - It has to be examined that whether the complainant has filed a false or frivolous complaint on earlier occasion - Whether there is family dispute between them - If connivance between the complainant and investigating officer is established then action be taken against investigating officer.
>
> B. Accused is innocent unless proved guilty by the court - The rate of conviction is less than 10% then Police should be slow in arresting the accused. - The National Police commission's Report suggest that nearly 60% of the arrest are unjustified - The power of arrest is one of the chief sources of corruption of police - Therefore it is suggested that the accused be directed to join the investigation and only when the accused does not co-operate with the investigating agency then only the accused be arrested - When court is of the opinion that the accused had joined the investigation and not likely to abscond then custodial interrogation (PCR) should be avoided - The accused should be granted anticipatory bail.

C. The gravity of charge and the exact role of the accused must be properly comprehended. - The I.O. Must record the valid reasons which led to the arrest - These remark and observations of the arresting officer has to be properly evaluated by the court while dealing with the bail applications - Power of police regarding arrest is another thing but its justification is altogether a different thing.

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the landmark Judgement in Shashikant Goma Patil –Vs- State of Maharashtra 2013 ALL MR (Cri)2112 'blaid down that even if prima facie case of involvement of accused is made out then also bail can be granted if further detention of accused is not essential from the point of view of investigation. In 2013 ALL MR (Cri.)1347 It is ruled that for filing application for anticipatory bail there is no need that the F.I.R. should be registered. Application is maintainable even if F.I.R. is not registered and applicant apprehends arrest.

As Per amended provisions of Cr.P.C. and as per law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the Case of Ku.Hema Mishra-vs-State 2014 ALL MR (Cri) 1503 (S.C) in the case where punishment is upto seven years such as 419,420 etc then police cannot arrest straight a way to the accused and investigation can be done by issuing notice to accused.

Division Bench of Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Antonio S. Mervyn –Vs-State 2008 ALL MR (CRI) 2432 laid down that the investigation has to be made without touching the offender – The question of touching the offender would arise only while submitting the charge-sheet. Arrest before completion of investigation is illegal & compensation of Rs. 25,000/- granted to accused – State directed to take action against police officer responsible for violation of fundamental rights of accused. The Principles of above ruling appreciated by Hon'ble High Court in the case of G.N.Gawade –Vs- State 2012 ALL MR (Cri) 3942 (Bom) (DB) also in the case of Dinkarrao R. Pole –Vs-State of Maharashtra 2004 (1) Crimes 1 (Bom) (DB) Hon'ble Bombay High Court imposed cost of Rs. 25,000/- on Police Officer who arrested the accused in case under section 420, 471, 468 of IPC holding that as per law except in heinous crimes arrest should be avoided.

Constitution Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the landmark Judgement on 12th Nov 2013 in Lalita Kumari –Vs- Govt. of U.P. in Writ Petition (Crl.) No. 68 of 2008 specifically laid down the guidelines in the nature of direction that the arrest should be avoided and investigation can be done by issuing notice to the accused.

> The registration of FIR under Section 154 of the Code and arrest of an accused person under Section 41 are two entirely different things. It is not correct to say that just because FIR is registered, the accused person can be arrested immediatelyExcept in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave the Station without permission would do(Para 100)
>
> It is also relevant to note that in Joginder Kumar vs. State of U.P. & Ors. (1994) 4 SCC 260, this Court has held that arrest cannot be made by police in a routine manner.
>
> Some important observations are reproduced as under:-
>
> > "20…No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified. Except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave the Station without permission would do." (Para 99)

Considerations for Regular Bail u.s. 439, 437 of Cr.P.C. and Anticipatory Bail u.s. 438 of Cr.P.C. are substantially same – Therefore the case laws of any bail are applicable to each other [2012 Cri.L.J. 2101, 1989 Cri.L.J. 252 (Bom)]

In Sanjay Chandra –Vs- C.B.I. 2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26 Hon'ble Supreme Court held, that

(A) Cri. P.c. 439, 437, Bail – Bail is the Rule and Jail an exception – Accused entitled for presumption of innocence till he is convicted – constitutionally protected liberty of accused must be respected unless detention becomes necessary – If any accused is detained before conviction then it will put unnecessary burden on state to keep a person who is not proved guilty – Normally bail should be granted to accused – Apprehension of tampering of evidence without sound proof could not be accepted and this ground could not be considered in each case to deny the bail.

B) Discretion while granting bail – The Jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well settled principles and not in arbitrary manner- The law in regard to grant or refusal of bail is very well settled. The Court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. At the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken.

C) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 – Ss. 437 and 439 – Prejudices which may be avoided in deciding bail matters – Public Scams, scandal and heinous offences – Public sentiments and disapproval of alleged misconduct – Bail, held, ought not be denied to teach lesson to a person whose offence is yet to be proved – Conditional bail, is a solution in such types of cases.

D) The approach adopted by the trial court and affirmed by the High Court, is a denial of the whole basis of the Indian system of law and normal rule of bail system. It transcends respect for the requirement that a man shall be considered innocent until he is found guilty. If such power is recognized, then it may lead to chaotic situation and would jeopardize the personal liberty of an individual. Bail is the rule and committal to jail an exception. Refuse of bail is a restriction on the personal liberty of the individual guaranteed under Article 21 of the constitution. When there is a delay in trail, bail should be granted to the accused.

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO.514 OF 2013 Lalit Soni ..Vs. .. Union held that ;

Index Note – Bail - Sections 406 and 420 of the Indian Penal Code (IPC) read with Section 34 - The learned Magistrate directed the applicants to be released on bail - The Sessions Judge canceled the bail granted by the Magistrate- High Court confirmed order of Magistrate granting Bail- Held, Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists-

It is not possible to accept the reasoning of the learned Sessions Judge - The principles governing grant of bail are well settled. Grant of bail is discretionary. The law does not favour pretrial detention for an unduly long period. It is also well settled that the power to refuse bail is not to be exercised, as if punishment before the trial, is being imposed - All said and done, the elementary principle that 'pretrial detention can never be punitive in nature', has not undergone any change over the years- Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists (except in cases of statutory prohibition, as imposed by some special statutes) Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists (except in cases of statutory prohibition, as imposed by some special statutes) - The learned Sessions Judge overlooked the basic concept of bail and rather unnecessarily criticized the order passed by the learned Magistrate - The orders passed by the learned Sessions Judge, canceling the bail granted to the applicants, are set aside - The applicants shall remain on bail. (Para 8,9,13,14)

Moreover Hon'ble Supreme Court (3-Judge Bench) in the case of Chandraswami –Vs- C.B.I. 1997 Cri. L.J. 3124 laid down that whenever accused appears or brough before the court and if the offences are not covered by c/s (i) and (ii) of Sec. 437 (i) of Cri.P.C. then the accused would be released on bail. [e.g. in cases of I.P.C. 420, 471 etc.] Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Khemlo Sawant –Vs- State 2002 BCR (1) 689 also held that in all cases except punishable with death or for life the bail is rule and jail is an exception. (Head Note and Para 13)

In a landmark judgement in the case of Ambarish R. Patnigire – Vs. – State of Maharashtra 2010 ALL MR (Cri) 2775 (Bom) Hon'ble Bombay High Court clarified that when punishment is up to life only then Magistrate can grant bail(e.g. IPC Sec. 326, 409,467), only when the punishment is in alternative for Death then only the considerations are different.

Merely because investigation agency would like to interrogate the accused bail cannot be refused. It cannot be said that granting of bail would hamper the investigation of the case 1996 Cri.L.J. 863

In the case of Harsh Sawhney –Vs- Union Territory AIR 1978 SC 1016 (3 – Judge Bench) Hon'ble Supreme Court held that for search and recovery accused need not be in custody. It is further held that the investigation can be completed by directing accused to appear for interrogation whenever reasonably required. Hon'ble High Court in the case of Jeet Ram ...Versus... State of Himachal Pradesh 2003-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-59 , 2003-Cri.L.J.-0-736, held that ;

(A) Bail – Murder Case – I.P.C. 302 – Mere gravity of offence and severity of punishment is no ground for rejection of bail - The nature of evidence, part played by the accused and the likely hood of the accused absconding has to be taken in to account – the allegations against accused are that they hold the deceased and other accused pelted stones – It does not mean that accused have common intention of murder - Accused entitled to get bail.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of 2010(1) SCC(CRI.)884 Ravindra Saxena .Vs.. State held that The defence put forward by accused cannot be ignored. This is the position settled in catena of decisions capulizwd as undef ;

1) 2010 (1) SCC (Cri) 884
The defence put forward by accused cannot be ignored.

1) 2008 (4) B.Cr. C. 716 (SC)
Shamiullah – Vs-Supt. Narcotic

Art. 21-Bail – When two views are possible in respect of commission of crime, justifying or not justifying the grant of bail then the view which leans in farour of accused must be faroured.

2) 2002 ALL MR (Cri) 573
Bail – Two Set of evidences inconsistent with each other – one incriminating the accused while other indicating his absence at relevant time on the spot –Accused deserves to be granted bail.

3) 2009 ALL MR (Cri)433
Bail - Conflicting version of the accused and prosecution – case made out for bail

In 2010 Cri.L.J. 1435 (SC) it is ruled that Court has inherent power to grant interim bail to a person pending final disposal of the bail application. It should be decided on same day if petitioner surrender before Court. (Cr.P.C. Sec. 437)

The case Laws are not for the purpose of reference of the Lower Courts but they are the established principles of law binding on lower judiciary and even on the police officers.

Even Obiter Dicta of the Supreme Court are binding on all courts in absence of direct pronouncement of the judgement by Supreme Court on that particular subject (Jinraj Paper Udyog –Vs- Dinesh Associates 2008 ALL MR (Cri) 89)

Therefore the observation of Hon'ble Supreme court in Siddharam Mhetre's case 2011 SCC (Cri) 514 are binding on all. If any lower court fails to follow the same then such Magistrates are liable to be punished under contempt of Courts's act.

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Farooq –Vs- State (2012 ALL MR (Cri) 271). Held that,

> "Arrest of accused – Non compliance of direction by High Court and Apex Court – Non granting bail to accused – The Session Judge was shown with the order passed by the Supreme Court and Bombay High Court but the Sessions Judge did not follow the guidelines without justifiable reasons or recording any reason in writing - Held, if any Sessions Judge is found not to follow the directions besides taking administrative action against such learned Sessions Judge, he shall be liable for contempt of this Court.
>
> 1) 2012 ALL MR (Cri) 271 (Bom.) (D.B).
> Farooq –Vs- State.

In Rabindra Nath Singh –Vs- Pappu Yadav case (2010 (3) SCC (Cri) 165 Hon'ble Supreme Court held that the High Court committed contempt of Court in not following the guidelines of Supreme Court in the concerned bail matter.

[Same is the view taken by Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of State of Maharashtra through S. S. Nirkhee, District & Sessions Judge, Wardha –Vs- R.A. Khan, chief Judicials Magistrate, Gadchiroli , contemnor. 1993 Cri. L.J. 816 (Bom) (DB)]

In the case of SPENCER & COMPANY LTD –Vs- VISHWADARSHAN DISTRIBUTORS PVT. LTD (1995) 1 SCC 259 it is held that the Supreme Court's order even if is only in the form of a request instead of explicit command or direction it is a judicial order and is binding and enforceable throughout the territory of India – In case of flouting of the order by High Court, it is open to Supereme Court to initiate Contempt proceedings against the erring Judges of High Court.

If the subordinate courts, Tribunals and aurhtorities within the territory of particular High Court refuse to carry out the directions given to them by the High Court the result will be chaos in the administration of justice and the very democracy founded on rule of law crumbles. [1996 Cri. L.J. 564]

Even the judgement of other High Courts of India are also binding on all Sub-ordinate Courts in Maharashtra in absence of direct pronouncement of judgement by Bombay High Court on that subject.

In recent judgement in the case of Maharashtra Govt. through G.B. Gore Vs. Rajaram Digamber Padamwar & Anr. 2011 (4) AIR (Bom) R. 238 Hon'ble Bombay High Court directed action against sessions Judge for not obeying judgement of Kerala High Court.

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of M/s. Shri Srinivasa Cut Pieces Cloth Shop, Rajahmundri, (A.P.) & Anr.Vs. State of Maharashtra & Anr.2004 ALL MR (Cri) 1802 ruled that the court of Co-ordinate jurisdiction should have consistant openion on same set of facts and point of law. If this procedure is not followed then instead of achieving harmony it may lead to judicial anarchy as different person approaching different Judge may get different orders in like matters.

Therefore even a order passed Sessions Judge in granting bail can be used as precedent before another Sessions Judge.

REJECTION OF PCR : - The case laws of anticipatory bail are applicable to reject PCR. [See Siddharam Mehetre –Vs- State of Maharashtra 2011 (1) SCC (Cri) 514, AIR 1978 SC 1016, 2001 ALL MR (CRI.) 1892, 2008 ALL MR (CRI.) 2432, 2004 (1) CRIMES 1 (BOM), 2012 ALL MR (CRI.) 68 ETC.]

The case laws of Anticipatory bail application are applicable for rejecting the prayer of Police for PCR i. e. custodial interrogation.

In the case of Harsh Sawhney –Vs- Union Territory AIR 1978 SC 1016 (3 – Judge Bench) Hon'ble Supreme Court held that for search and recovery accused need not be in custody. It is further held that the investigation can be completed by directing accused to appear for interrogation whenever reasonably required.

Application for Police custody should be by officer not below the rank of Police Sub inspector (2010 Supreme Court Devender kumar .Vs. State of Haryana)

FULL BENCH of Hon'ble MADRAS HIGH COURT in the case of Selvanathan alias Raghavan .. VERSUS..State by Inspector of Police, 1988 MAD LW(CRL.)503 Every person subjected to arrest is entitled to a copy of FIR free of cost at the time of arrest. In case the Magistrate is not satisfied that the requirements have not been complied with, he can limit the remand in the first instance. A request for remand to police custody shall be accompanied by an affidavit by setting out briefly the prior history of the investigation and the likelihood of further clues which the police expect to derive by having the accused in custody, sworn by the investigating or other police officer, not below the rank of a Sub Inspector of Police .

> The Magistrates shall not grant remands to the police custody unless they are satisfied that there is good ground for doing so and shall not accept a general statement made by the investigating or other Police Officer to the effect that the accused may be liable to give further information, that a request for remand to police custody shall be accompanied by an affidavit by setting out briefly the prior history of the investigation and the likelihood of further clues which the police expect to derive by having the accused in custody, sworn by the investigating or other police officer, not below the rank of a Sub Inspector of Police and that the Magistrate after perusing the affidavit and satisfying himself about the request of the police officer, shall entrust the accused to police custody and at the end of the police custody, the Magistrate shall question the accused whether he had in any way been interfered with during the period of custody (2010 Supreme Court Devender kumar .Vs. State of Haryana) Section 167(1) Cr.P.C. which provide that an application for police remand can be made only by an officer not below the rank of Sub- Inspector - The reason given by the High and directing the arrest of the Appellants on the ground that disclosures have been made by the Appellants and that their police custody was necessary for recovery of the same, is, in our view, not sufficient for the purpose of cancellation of bail- Order passed by the learned Magistrate restored and order passed by the High Court set aside.

Criminal Manual Chapter I (4) &(5) Remand staes as under : -

1) It is observed that Magistrates allow remand of the accused to custody under Section 167 of the Code of Criminal procedure. 1973. Or allow remand under Section 309 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 1973. Without satisfying themselves that there are reasonable grounds for such remand. The law requires that Magistrates should not allow remand in such cases without being satisfied that there are really good grounds for it Magistrates should not, therefore, allow remand applications as a matter of course, but only after being satisfied that further time is really necessary for the purpose of investigation. In this connection, the attention of all the Courts is invited to the rulings reported in A.I.R 1975 SC 1465 Natabar Parida V. State of Orissa, and 78 B.L.R. 411 State of Maharashtra v. Tukaram Shiva Patil.

2) In this connection attention of the Magistrates is drawn to the provisions of Section 167 (1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 1973 which makes it obligatory on the police to send copies of entries in the diary relating to the case when forwarding the accused for the purposes of remand. Magistrates should invariably insist upon copies of such entries and material should be carefully examined by the Magistrates in order to satisfy themselves that there are good grounds for remand.

3) While it is not intended to fetter the discretion of the Magistrates in matters of remand, the following general principles are stated for their guidance:-

   i) A ramand to police custody of an accused person should not ordinarily be granted unless there is reason to believe that material and valuable information would thereby be obtained, which cannot be obtained except by his remand to police custody.

   ii) Where a remand is required merely for the purpose of verifying a statement made by the accused, the Magistrate should ordinarily remand the accused person to Magisterial custody.

   iii) If the Magistrate thinks that it is not necessary for purposes of investigation to remand the accused to police custody, he should place the accused person in Magisterial custody : and in case he has no jurisdiction to try the offence charged, he should issue orders for forwarding the accused person to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

   iv) If the Magistrate thinks that the police not only require more time for their investigation but that for some good reason they require the accused person to be present with them in that investigation the Magistrate may remand him to police custody, but while doing so, he must record the reasons for his order.

Remand execution:- State must show that at the stage of remand the Magistrate directed detention in jail custody after applying his mind to all relevant matters. Madhu Limaye v. State of Bihar. AIR 1969 SC 1014: 1969 Cri. L.J. 1440 : (1969) 1 SCC 292: (19669) 1 SCWR 470.

BAIL DURING REMAND/PCR:-

As per law laid down by Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Krushna Guruswami Naidu v. The State of Maharashtra 2011 CRI. L. J. 2065 Bail Application is maintainable even if filed during period of police remand granted by Magistrate - Sessions Court cannot reject application for bail on that ground - Bail application should be entertained and considered on merits even if there is order of police remand.

Discretion :- The next question commonly faced by the advocates and citizens is regarding unjustified use of discretion by Magistrate/Judge while refusing or granting the bail.

The Law in this regard is clear that the Judge is not having any uncountrolled discretion.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Sundarjas Kanyalal Bhathija and others –Vs- The Collector, Thane, Maharashtra AIR 1990 SUPREME COURT 261 held that,

> Constitution of India, Art.141- PRECEDENTS - Judges are bound by precedents and procedure - They could use their discretion only when there is no declared principle to be found, no rule and no authority - where a single judge or a Division Bench does not agree with the decision of a Bench of co-ordinate jurisdiction, the matter shall be referred to a larger Bench. It is a subversion of judicial process not to follow this procedure - it is the duty of judges of superior courts and tribunals to make the law more predictable. The question of law directly arising in the case should not be dealt with apologetic approaches. The law must be made more effective as a guide to behaviour. It must be determined with reasons which carry convictions within the Courts, profession and public. Otherwise, the lawyers would be in a predicament and would not know how to advise their clients. Sub-ordinate courts would find themselves in an embarrassing position to choose between the conflicting opinions. The general public would be in dilemma to obey or not to obey such law and it ultimately falls into disrepute- One must remember that pursuit of the law, however glamorous it is, has its own limitation on the Bench. (Paras 17, 20)

The Judge/Magistrate who exercise discretion are expected to bear in mind that : as per Judgement of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Sanjay Chandra –Vs- C.B.I. 2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26 held that,

1) DISCRETION : Cri. P.C. Sec. 437 and 439 – Bail – The jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well-settled principles having regard to the circumstances of each case and not in arbitrary manner – (para 37)

> Any order devoid of reasons would suffer from non-application of mind. In the case of Gudikatil Narasimhulu V. Public Prosecutor, (1978) 1 SCC 240, V.R. Krishna Iyer, J., sitting as Chamber Judge, Enunciated the principles of bail thus:

"3. What, then, is "judicial discretion" in this bail context ? In the elegant words of Benjamin Cardozo : "The Judge, even when he is free, is still not wholly free. He is not to innovate at Pleasure. He is not a knight-errant roaming at will in pursuit of his own ideal of beauty or of goodness. He is to draw his inspiration from consecrated principles. He is not to yield to spasmodic sentiment, to vague and unregulated benevolence. He is to exercise a discretion informed by tradition, methodized by analogy, disciplined by system, and subordinated to "the primordial necessity of order in the social life". Wide enough in all conscience is the field of discretion that remain.

Sanjay Chandra –Vs- C.B.I. 2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26

2) "Discretion when applied to a court of justice, means sound discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule, not by humour, it must not be arbitrary, vague and fanciful, but legal and regular"

[Tingley –Vs- Dalby, 14 NW 146]

3) "An appeal to a Judge]s discretion is an appeal to his judicial conscience. The discretion must be exercised, not in opposition to, but in accordance with established principles of law."

Gudianti Narsimha –Vs- Public Prosecutor, High Court 1978 Cri. L.J. 502.

APPLICABILITY OF CASE LAW :- Magistrate bound to explain case law relied by parties in his order or judgement :-

When there are some extraneous factor affecting the judiciary either it may be 'Media' or anything then even if the accused who entitles to get bail, is denied his right by some of the courts even they did not quote the case Laws given by counsel for the applicants. It is advisable that the case laws should be filed on record by way of 'purshish' or 'written Notes of Arguments'. This minimizes the practice of misuse of judicial process and violation of fundamental rights of the accused.

Criminal Manual Chapter VI (52) Citation of cases reads as under;

All refrence in judgments to rulings of Superior Courts cite both the names of the parties as well as the number of the volume and the page of the report. e.g. Narayanan v. State (76 Bom. L.R. 690)

Whenever any authority is relied by the counsel then it is bounded duty of the judge to meticulously examine the issues and rulings in support thereof. Simply listing the rulings in the judgement without going in to the ratio decidendi of the same is illegal [Adarsh Graming Sahakari Patsanstha –Vs- Dattu R. Paithankar 2010 (1) Crimes 714 (Bom)]

Also in the case of the Bank of Rajasthan Ltd. –Vs- Shyam Sunder Tapariya 2006 ALL MR (Cri) 2269 it has been laid down that the judge Should recorded short reasons demonstrating how the case law is applicable to the case. The conduct of judge about passing of cryptic orders even without mentioning full title of the judgement and citation thereof is illegal. Courts are expected to exhibit from their conduct and their orders concern for justice and not casualness.

In the case of Dattani & Co.. Versus.. Income Tax Officer TAX APPEAL NO. 847/2013 (21/10/2013) it has been laid that > Whenever any decision has been relied upon and/or cited by the assessee and/or any party, the authority/tribunal is bound to consider and/or deal with the same and opine whether in the facts and circumstances of the particular case, the same will be applicable or not. In the instant case, the tribunal has failed to consider and/or deal with the aforesaid decision cited and relied upon by the assessee- Under the circumstances, all these appeals are required to be remanded to the tribunal to consider in accordance with law and on merits.

In Dwarikesh Sugar Industries –Vs- Prem Heavy Industries AIR 1997 SC 2477 Hon'ble Supreme Court laid down that > Judicial Adventurism – High Court ignoring various laws settled by Supreme Court – – When a position in law is well settled as a result of pronouncement of Supreme Court then it would be judicial impropriety for the sub ordinate Courts including the High Courts to ignore the settled decisions and then to pass a judicial order which is clearly contrary to the settled legal position – The observation of High Court that reference to judicial decisions will not be of much importance was clearly a method adopted by it to avoid to follow the law laid down by the Supreme Court – Such judicial adventurism cannot be permitted - The tendency of the subordinate courts in not applying the settled principles and passing whimsical order granting wrongful and unwarranted relief to one of the parties is strongly deprecated – It is the time that such tendency should be stopped (Para 32)

(So if any judge/Magistrate did not follow the guidelins and ratio laid down by Superior courts then you may make complaint and even may ask for action under Contempt of Courts act against the concerned Judge.)

Honb'le High Court in the case of 1967 CR.L.J. 1297 held that,

" Indeed there is no explanation as to why the learned Magistrate did not take appropriate steps to see the matter – His helpless ness or his indifference in this matter whichever be the position reflects a most unsatisfactory state of affairs – The Ld Magistrate seems to have clearly adopted an attitude of un-judicial indifference towards the judicial proceeding in his court.

The fact that the accused belongs to a respectable family and that there is no danger of his absconding were not considered by the learned sessions judge to be the only consideration for granting bail.

1967 CR.L.J. 1297

RESPONSIBILITY OF GOVERNMENT PLEADER

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Capt. Amrinder Singh Vs. Prakash Singh Badal 2009 (3) Crimis 174 (SC) specifically laid down that the public prosecutor should not act merely on the dictates of the state but he should act fairly and place truth before the court as he is also an officer of the Court.

Full Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Shiv Kumar --Versus- Hukam Chand And Another (1999) 7 Supreme Court Cases 467 observed as under Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 301, 302 and 225 & 24 —Duty of the Public Prosecutor to act fairly and not merely to obtain conviction by any means fair or foul — If the accused is entitled to any legitimate benefit the Public Prosecutor should make it available to him or inform the court even if the defence counsel overlooked it.

Also relied on: (2013) 2 Supreme Court Cases (Cri) 978 where it has been laid down that ;

> Duty of the Public Prosecutor to act fairly- He is not a mouthpiece of investigating agency and should scrupulously avoid suppression of material available establishing innocence of accused – He should refuse to use evidence obtained by wroungful means.

Full Bench of Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of STATE OF MAHARASHTRA Vs JAGAN GAGANSINGH NEPALI 2011 ALL MR (Cri) 2961 (Full Bench) held that, > Misuse of Power by police officials as well as Presiding Officers and Public Prosecutors of the Designated courts – held – As has been held by constitution Bench of Apex Court in Prakash Bhutto's Case [(2005) 2 SCC 409] it is many time noted that the prosecution unjustifiably invokes the provisions of the Special Act's like TADA Act with an oblique motive of depriving the accused persons from getting bail – The public prosecutors and the Presiding Officers of the Court are cautioned to act objectively – Public prosecutors are prosecutors on behalf of public and not the police – The Presiding Officers of the Designated Court have been assigned the role of the sentinel on the quivive – They expected to discharge their judicial functions keeping in view the fundamental rights particularly of the personal right and liberty of the citizen – These are essential for achieving legislative intent – The above observation of Apex court is sufficient to caution police officials as wells as Presiding Officers from misusing the Act.

In E.S. Raddi Vs. The Chief Secretary 1987 (3) SCC 258 Hon'ble Supreme Court observed the duties of the senior Counsel some of the portion of para is as follows :

> As an officer of the Court concerned in the administration of justice, he has an overriding duty to the Court, to the standards of his profession, and to the public, which may and often does lead to a conflict with his client's wishes or with what the client thinks are his personal interests. Counsel must not mislead the Court, he must not lend himself to casting aspersions on the other party or witnesses for which there is no sufficient basis in the information in his possession, he must not withhold authorities or documents which may tell against his clients but which the law or the standards of his profession require him to produce. By so acting he may well incur the displeasure or worse of his lost his client would or might seek legal redress if that were open to him.

The law of bail is much clear in the case of Siddharam Mehatre's case (2011) (Supra).Moreover as per the ratio laid down by 3-Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Chandraswami Vs. C.B.I. 1997 Cri. L.J.3124 ,it has been made clear that whenever the accused appears or brought before the court and offence committed by him is not punishable for death or life then the accused normally entitled to be released on bail.

That being the position of the law then it was expected from the advocate like Govt. Pleader that he should at his own bring this legal position to the notice of the Court and fairly contend that the accused entitled to be released on bail however appropriate conditions may be imposed. As being counsel of prosecutor what he can do that he should have made strong efforts for early disposal of the case and nothing more.

The role of the prosecutor in any criminal trial (whether at the instance of the State or of a private party) is to safeguard the interests of both the Complainant and the accused. The right to be heard includes the right to be represented by an able spokesman of one's confidence. This right belongs to the Complainant and to the accused, both. The Complainant also needs assistance. The prosecutor is bound by law and professional ethics and by his role as an officer of court to employ only fair measures.

Hon'ble High Court in the case of Seethalakshmi -Vs- State 1991 Cri.L.J. 1037 held that,

"161 This Court has on several occasions pointed out that affidavits should not be treated in a light-hearted fashion and prepared in a hap-hazard manner. Every litigant should understand that an affidavit is a sworn statement and it takes the place of deposition. Responsibility of Government officials is much more in this regard. Their affidavits are not intended just to point out the flaws in the case of the opponent. Their affidavits should always place all the facts before the Court whether such facts would support the contention of the Government in the case or not."

****

-: CHAPTER = 2 :-

CASE LAWS ON ANTICIPATORY BAIL AND REGULAR BAIL

****

Cross Citation : 2013 ALL MR(CRI) 2112 = LAWS(BOM)-2013-1-190

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Coram: - A.M.THIPSAY J.

Decided on January 18, 2013

Criminal Bail Application No. 7 of 2013

Shashikant Goma Patil .....Vs..... State Of Maharashtra

==========

Criminal Procedure Code S. 439- Bail - Can be granted even if prima facie case exists against accused - Held, there exists a prima facie case of cruelty against the applicants- It appears that the deceased Minal committed suicide -There is no suspicion that the death of the said Minal is homicidal - However since the applicants are in custody since 12 December 2012 i.e. for around one month their further detention does not seem to be essential from the point of view of investigation - Keeping this in mind, the applicants are ordered to be released on bail in the sum of Rs.30,000/- each with one surety in like amount, on the conditions.

==========

Advocates: - Nitin Sejpal , Pooja Bhojane , S.V.Sonawane , Prashant M. Patil

JUDGEMENT

1. HEARD Mr.Nitin Sejpal, learned counsel for the applicants. Heard Ms.S.V.Sonawane, learned APP for the State. Heard Mr.Prashant Patil, learned counsel who sought intervention on behalf of the First Informant to oppose the grant of bail.

2. I have gone through the First Information Report and glanced through the statements recorded during investigation. There exists a prima facie case of cruelty against the applicants. It appears that the deceased Minal committed suicide. There is no suspicion that the death of the said Minal is homicidal.

3. The applicants are in custody since 12 December 2012. Their further detention does not seem to be essential from the point of view of investigation.

O R D E R

The applicants are ordered to be released on bail in the sum of Rs.30,000/-each with one surety in like amount, on the condition to attend the concerned police station, and make themselves available for investigation/interrogation, as and when required by the Investigating Officer.

Application allowed.

****

Cross citation : 2011 (1) SCC (Cri.) 514; 2011 (I) SCC 694

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : Dr. Dalveer Bhandari And K.S.P. Radhakrishnan, JJ.

Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre -Versus- State of Maharashtra And Others

Criminal Appeal No. 2271 of 2010, decided on December 2, 2010.

==========

A. Accused is presumed to be innocent unless proved guilty by the court - The rate of conviction is less than 10% then Police should be slow in arresting the accused. - The National Police commission's Report suggest that nearly 60% of the arrest are unjustified - The power of arrest is one of the chief sources of corruption of police - Therefore it is suggested that the accused be directed to join the investigation and only when the accused does not co-operate with the investigating agency then only the accused be arrested - When court is of the opinion that the accused had joined the investigation and not likely to abscond then custodial interrogation (PCR) should be avoided - The accused should be granted anticipatory bail.

B. Anticipatory Bail - Code of Criminal Procedure S. 438 - General guidelines including Murder case - I.P.C. S. 302 - Frivolity in prosecution should always be considered - If there is some doubt then accused is entitled to order of bail - It has to be examined that whether the complainant has filed a false or frivolous complaint on earlier occasion - Whether there is family dispute between them - If connivance between the complainant and investigating officer is established then action be taken against investigating officer

C. The gravity of charge and the exact role of the accused must be properly comprehended. - The I.O. Must record the valid reasons which led to the arrest - These remark and observations of the arresting officer has to be properly evaluated by the court while dealing with the bail applications - Power of police regarding arrest is another thing but its justification is altogether a different thing.

D. Proper course of action to be adopted by court - After evaluating records of the case if anticipatory bail is to be granted - at first interim bail should be granted and notice should be issued to Public Prosecutor - After hearing both the parties court my grant Anticipatory bail or reject it.

E. Anticipatory Bail - Duration of - Anticipatory bail granted should ordinarily be continued till end of trial of the case-

F. Cr. P.C. & 438 & 437 - The plentitude of S. 438 must be given its full play - There is no requirement that accused must make out a 'Special case' for exercise of power to grant anticipatory bail-

G. The arrest should be the last option and it should be restricted to those exceptional cases where arresting the accused is imperative in the facts and circumstances of that case.

H. Anticipatory Bail – Judges with good track record only to be entrusted with such work – Both individual and society have vital interest in such orders.

I. Guidelines to the Police/ Investigation Officer – Personal libety is a very precious fundamental right which can not be disturbed by the police in routine manner. The investigation can be done by following the guidelines below

In case, the State consider the following suggestions in proper perspective then perhaps it may not be necessary to curtail the personal liberty of the accused in a routine manner. These suggestions are only illustrative and not exhaustive.

1) Direct the accused to join investigation and only when the accused does not cooperate with the investigating agency, then only the accused be arrested.

2) Seize either the passport or such other related documents, such as, the title deeds of properties or the Fixed Deposit Receipts/Share Certificates of the accused.

3) Direct the accused to execute bonds; 4) The accused may be directed to furnish sureties of number of persons which according to the prosecution are necessary in view of the facts of the particular case.

5) The accused be directed to furnish undertaking that he would not visit the place where the witnesses reside so that the possibility of tampering of evidence or otherwise influencing the course of justice can be avoided.

6) Bank accounts be frozen for small duration during investigation.

==========

d. Chronological list of cases cited

1. (2009) 15 SCC 458 : (2010) 2 SCC (L&S) 147, Subhash Chandra v. Delhi Subordinate Services Selection Board
2. (2008) 10 SCC 1 : (2009) 1 SCC (L&S) 943, Official Liquidator v. Dayanand
3. (2008) 1 SCC 632 : (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 277, Naresh Kumar Yadav v. Ravindra Kumar
4. (2007) 4 CTC 1 (Mad), Palanikumar v. State
5. (2006) 4 SCC 1 : 2006 SCC (L&S) 753, State ofKarnataka v. Umadevi (3)
6. (2005) 4 SCC 303 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 933, Adri Dharan Das v. State of W.B.
7. (2005) 3 SCC 1 : 2005 SCC (L&S) 327, S. Pushpa v. Sivachanmugavelu
8. (2005) 2 SCC 673 : 2005 SCC (L&S) 246 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 546, Central Board Of Dawoodi Bohra Community v. State of Maharashtra
9. (2005) 1 SCC 608 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 435, Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar
10. (2005) 1 SCC 394 : (2008) 2 SCC (L&S) 329, E. V. Chinnaiah v. State ofA.P.
11. (2003) 5 SCC 448, State of Bihar v. Kalika Kuer
12. (2002) 1 AC 800 : (2001) 3 WLR 1598 : (2002) 1 All ER 1 (HL), R. (Pretty) v. Director of Public Prosecutions
13. (2001)4 SCC 448, Bharat Petroleum Corpn. Ltd. v. Mumbai Shramik Sangha
14. (2000) 5 SCC 712, State of A.P.v. Challa Ramkrishna Reddy 15. (2000) 4 SCC 262: 2000 SCC (L&S) 486, Govt. of A. P. v. B. Satyanarayana Rao
16. (1998) 9 SCC 348 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1031, K.L. Verma v. State
17. (1997) 1 SCC 9 : 1997 SCC (L&S) 65, R. Thiruvirkolam v. Presiding Officer
18. (1996) 1 SCC 667 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 198, Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of
19. (1996) 1 SCC 468, Vijayalaxmi Cashew Co. v. CTO
20. (1994) 6 SCC 260 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1643, Khedat Mazdoor Chetna Sangath v. State of M. P.
21. (1994) 4SCC260: 1994 SCC (Cri) 1172, Joginder Kumar w. State of U.P.
22. (1994) 3 SCC 569 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 899, Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab
23. (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740, P. Rathinam v. Union of India

24 (1991) 4 SCC 312, Thota Sesharathamma v. Thota Manikyamma

25. (1990) 3 SCC 13 0 :(1990) 14 ATC 671, Marri Chandra Shekhar Rao v. Seth G.S. Medical College
26. (1989) 4 SCC 418 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 732, N. Meera Rani v. Govt. of T.N.
27. (1989) 2 SCC 754, Union of India v. Raghubir Singh
28. 1987 AC 514 : (1987) 2 WLR 606 : (1987) 1 All ER 940 (HL), R. V. Secy, of State for the Home Deptt., expBugdaycay
29. (1986) 3 SCC 156 : 1986 SCC (L&S) 429 : (1986) 1 ATC 103, Central Inland Water Transport Corpn. Ltd. v. Brojo Nath Ganguly
30. (1985) 2 SCC 597 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 297, Pokar Ram v. State ofRajasthan
31. (1981) 1 SCC 608 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 212, Francis Coralie Mullin v. UTofDelhi

32. (1980) 3 SCC 526: 1980 SCC (Cri) 815, Prem Shankar Shuklav. Delhi Admn.
33. (1980) 2 SCC 593 : 1980 SCC (L&S) 197, Gujarat Steel Tubes Ltd. v. Mazdoor Sabha
34. (1980) 2 SCC 565 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 465, Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab
35. (1978) 1 SCC 248, Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India
36. (1976) 4 SCC 52 : 1976 SCC (L&S) 542, State of U.P. v. Ram Chandra Trivedi
37. (1976) 3 SCC 693 : 1976 SCC (L&S) 484, B.C. Roy v. M.P. Industrial Court
38. (1976) 3 SCC 677 : 1976 SCC (L&S) 492, Union of India v. K.S. Subramanian
39. (1972) 4 SCC 86, Karmiv.Amru
40. 1972 SCR 889 (Can SC), Currv.R.
41. (1972) 45 Inter LR 446, M. v. United Nations & Belgium
42. (1969) 2 SCC 586, Badri Prasad v. Kanso Devi
43 AIR 1964 SC 334 : (1964) 1 Cri L.J. 257 : (1964) 4 SCR 921, Rameshwar Shaw v. District Magistrate, Burdwan
44. AIR 1963 SC 1756 : (1964) 2 SCR 104, P.H. Kalyani v. Air France
45. AIR 1963 SC 1295 : (1963) 2 Cri L.J. 329, Kharak Singh v. State of U.P.
46. AIR 1950 SC 27 : (1950) 51 Cri L.J. 1383, A.K. Gopalan v. State of Madras
47. 1947 KB 842 : (1947) 2 All ER 193 (DC), Huddersfield Police Authority v. Watson
48. 1944 KB 718: (1944) 2 All ER 293 (CA): 1946 AC 163 : (1946) 1 All ER 98 (HL), Young v. Bristol Aeroplane Co. Ltd.
49. 1912 AC 623, Hyman v. Rose

JUDGEMENT

DR. Dalveer Bhandari, J.

1. Leave granted.

2. This appeal involves issues of great public importance pertaining to the importance of individual's personal liberty and the society's interest.

3. The society has a vital interest in grant or refusal of bail because every criminal offence is the offence against the State. The order granting or refusing bail must reflect perfect balance between the conflicting interests, namely, sanctity of individual liberty and the interest of the society. The law of bails dovetails 2 two conflicting interests namely, on the one hand, the requirements of shielding the society from the hazards of those committing crimes and potentiality of repeating the same crime while on bail and on the other hand absolute adherence of the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence regarding presumption of innocence of an accused until he is found guilty and the sanctity of individual liberty.

4. Brief facts which are necessary to dispose of this appeal are recapitulated as under. The appellant, who belongs to the Indian National Congress party (for short `Congress party') is the alleged accused in this case. The case of the prosecution, as disclosed in the First Information Report (for short `FIR'), is that Sidramappa Patil was contesting election of the State assembly on behalf of the Bhartiya Janata Party (for short `BJP'). In the FIR, it is incorporated that Baburao Patil, Prakash Patil, Mahadev Patil, Mallikarjun Patil, Apparao Patil, Yeshwant Patil were supporters of the Congress and so also the supporters of the appellant Siddharam Mhetre and opposed to the BJP candidate. 3

5. On 26.9.2009, around 6.00 p.m. in the evening, Sidramappa Patil of BJP came to the village to meet his party workers. At that juncture, Shrimant Ishwarappa Kore, Bhimashankar Ishwarappa Kore, Kallapa Gaddi, Sangappa Gaddi, Gafur Patil, Layappa Gaddi, Mahadev Kore, Suresh Gaddi, Suresh Zhalaki, Ankalgi, Sarpanch of village Shivmurti Vijapure met Sidramappa Patil and thereafter went to worship and pray at Layavva Devi's temple. After worshipping the Goddess when they came out to the assembly hall of the temple, these aforementioned political opponents namely, Baburao Patil, Prakash Patil, Gurunath Patil, Shrishail Patil, Mahadev Patil, Mallikarjun Patil, Annarao @ Pintu Patil, Hanumant Patil, Tammarao Bassappa Patil, Apparao Patil, Mallaya Swami, Sidhappa Patil, Shankar Mhetre, Usman Sheikh, Jagdev Patil, Omsiddha Pujari, Panchappa Patil, Mahesh Hattargi, Siddhappa Birajdar, Santosh Arwat, Sangayya Swami, Anandappa Birajdar, Sharanappa Birajdar, Shailesh Chougule, Ravi Patil, Amrutling Koshti, Ramesh Patil and Chandrakant Hattargi suddenly came rushing in their direction and loudly shouted, "why have you come to our village? Have you come here to oppose our Mhetre 4 Saheb? They asked them to go away and shouted Mhetre Saheb Ki Jai."

6. Baburao Patil and Prakash Patil from the aforementioned group fired from their pistols in order to kill Sidramappa Patil and the other workers of the BJP. Bhima Shankar Kore was hit by the bullet on his head and died on the spot. Sangappa Gaddi, Shivmurti Vjapure, Jagdev Patil, Layappa Patil, Tammaro Patil were also assaulted. It is further mentioned in the FIR that about eight days ago, the appellant Siddharam Mhetre and his brother Shankar Mhetre had gone to the village and talked to the abovementioned party workers and told them that, "if anybody says anything to you, then you tell me. I will send my men within five minutes. You beat anybody. Do whatever."

7. According to the prosecution, the appellant along with his brother instigated their party workers which led to killing of Bhima Shanker Kora. It may be relevant to mention that the alleged incident took place after eight days of the alleged incident of instigation.

8. The law relating to bail is contained in sections 436 to 450 of chapter XXXIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. 5

Section 436 deals with situation, in what kind of cases bail should be granted. Section 436 deals with the situation when bail may be granted in case of a bailable offence. Section 439 deals with the special powers of the High Court or the Court of Sessions regarding grant of bail. Under sections 437 and 439 bail is granted when the accused or the detenu is in jail or under detention.

9. The provision of anticipatory bail was introduced for the first time in the Code of Criminal Procedure in 1973.

10. Section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 reads as under:

"438. Direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest.- (1) Where any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section that in the event of such arrest he shall be released on bail; and that Court may, after taking into consideration, inter alia, the following factors, namely:-

(i) the nature and gravity of the accusation;
(ii) the antecedents of the applicant including the fact as to whether he has previously undergone imprisonment on conviction by a Court in respect of any cognizable offence;
(iii) the possibility of the applicant to flee from justice; and
(iv) where the accusation has been made with the object of injuring or humiliating the applicant by having him so arrested, either reject the application forthwith or issue an interim order for the grant of anticipatory bail: Provided that, where the High Court or, as the case may be, the Court of Session, has not passed any interim order under this sub-section or has rejected the application for grant of anticipatory bail, it shall be open to an officer in-charge of a police station to arrest, without warrant, the applicant on the basis of the accusation apprehended in such application.

(1-A) Where the Court grants an interim order under sub-section (1), it shall forthwith cause a notice being not less than seven days notice, together with a copy of such order to be served on the Public Prosecutor and the Superintendent of Police, with a view to give the Public Prosecutor a reasonable opportunity of being heard when the application shall be finally heard by the Court.

(1-B) The presence of the applicant seeking anticipatory bail shall be obligatory at the time of final hearing of the application and passing of final order by the Court, if on an application made to it by the Public Prosecutor, the Court considers such presence necessary in the interest of justice.

(2) When the High Court or the Court of Session makes a direction under sub- section (1), it may include such conditions in such directions in the light of the facts of the particular case, as it may thinks fit, including -

(i) a condition that the person shall make himself available for interrogation by a police officer as and when required;

(ii) a condition that the person shall not, directly or indirectly,- make any inducement, threat or promise to anyperson acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer;

(iii) a condition that the person shall not leave India without the previous permission of the Court;

(iv) such other condition as may be imposed under sub-section (3) of section 437, as if the bail were granted under that section.

(3) If such person is thereafter arrested without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station on such accusation, and is prepared either at the time of arrest or at any time while in the custody of such officer to give bail, he shall be released on bail, and if a Magistrate taking cognizance of such offence decides that a warrant should issue in the first instance against that person, he shall issue a bailable warrant in conformity with the direction of the Court under sub-section (1)."

Why was the provision of anticipatory bail introduced? – Historical perspective

11. The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 did not contain any specific provision of anticipatory bail. Under the old Code, there was a sharp difference of opinion amongst the various High Courts on the question as to whether the courts had an inherent power to pass an order of bail in anticipation of arrest, the preponderance of view being that it did not have such power.

12. The Law Commission of India, in its 41st Report dated September 24, 1969 pointed out the necessity of introducing a provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure enabling the High Court and the Court of Sessions to grant "anticipatory bail". It observed in para 39.9 of its report (Volume I) and the same is set out as under:

"The suggestion for directing the release of a person on bail prior to his arrest (commonly known as "anticipatory bail") was carefully considered by us. Though there is a conflict of judicial opinion about the power of a court to grant anticipatory bail, the majority view is that there is no such power under the existing provisions of the Code. The necessity for granting anticipatory bail arises mainly because sometimes influential persons try to implicate their rivals in false cases for the purpose of disgracing them or for other purposes by getting them detained in jail for some days. In recent times, with the accentuation of political rivalry, this tendency is showing signs of steady increase. Apart from false cases, where there are reasonable grounds for holding that a person accused of an offence is not likely to abscond, or otherwise misuse his liberty while on bail, there seems no justification to require him first to submit to custody, remain in prison for some days and then apply for bail."

The Law commission recommended acceptance of the suggestion.

13. The Law Commission in para 31 of its 48th Report (July, 1972) made the following comments on the aforesaid clause:

"The Bill introduces a provision for the grant of anticipatory bail. This is substantially in accordance with the recommendation made by the previous Commission. We agree that this would be a useful addition, though we must add that it is in very exceptional cases that such a power should be exercised.

We are further of the view that in order to ensure that the provision is not put to abuse at the instance of unscrupulous petitioners, the final order should be made only after notice to the Public Prosecutor. The initial order should only be an interim one. Further, the relevant section should make it clear that the direction can be issued only for reasons to be recorded, and if the court is satisfied that such a direction is necessary in the interests of justice. It will also be convenient to provide that notice of the interim order as well as of the final orders will be given to the Superintendent of Police forthwith."

14. Police custody is an inevitable concomitant of arrest for non-bailable offences. The concept of anticipatory bail is that a person who apprehends his arrest in a non-bailable case can apply for grant of bail to the Court of Sessions or to the High Court before the arrest.

Scope and ambit of Section 438 Cr.P.C.

15. It is apparent from the Statement of Objects and Reasons for introducing section 438 in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 that it was felt imperative to evolve a device by which an alleged accused is not compelled to face ignominy and disgrace 10 at the instance of influential people who try to implicate their rivals in false cases.

16. The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 did not contain any specific provision corresponding to the present section 438 Cr.P.C. The only two clear provisions of law by which bail could be granted were sections 437 and 439 of the Code. Section 438 was incorporated in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 for the first time.

17. It is clear from the Statement of Objects and Reasons that the purpose of incorporating Section 438 in the Cr.P.C. was to recognize the importance of personal liberty and freedom in a free and democratic country. When we carefully analyze this section, the wisdom of the legislature becomes quite evident and clear that the legislature was keen to ensure respect for the personal liberty and also pressed in service the age-old principle that an individual is presumed to be innocent till he is found guilty by the court.

18. The High Court in the impugned judgment has declined to grant anticipatory bail to the appellant and aggrieved by the said 11 order, the appellant has approached this Court by filing this appeal.

19. Mr. Shanti Bhushan, learned senior counsel appearing for the appellant submitted that the High Court has gravely erred in declining the anticipatory bail to the appellant. He submitted that section 438 Cr.P.C. was incorporated because sometime influential people try to implicate their rivals in false cases for the purpose of disgracing them or for other purposes by getting them detained in jail for some days. He pointed out that in recent times, with the accentuation of political rivalry, this tendency is showing signs of steady increase.

20. Mr. Bhushan submitted that the appellant has been implicated in a false case and apart from that he has already joined the investigation and he is not likely to abscond, or otherwise misuse the liberty while on bail, therefore, there was no justification to decline anticipatory bail to the appellant.

21. Mr. Bhushan also submitted that the FIR in this case refers to an incident which had taken place on the instigation of the appellant about eight days ago. According to him, proper analysis of the averments in the FIR leads to irresistible 12 conclusion that the entire prosecution story seems to be a cock and bull story and no reliance can be placed on such a concocted version.

22. Mr. Bhushan contended that the personal liberty is the most important fundamental right guaranteed by the Constitution. He also submitted that it is the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that every individual is presumed to be innocent till he or she is found guilty. He further submitted that on proper analysis of section 438 Cr.P.C. the legislative wisdom becomes quite evident that the legislature wanted to preserve and protect personal liberty and give impetus to the age-old principle that every person is presumed to be innocent till he is found guilty by the court.

23. Mr. Bhushan also submitted that an order of anticipatory bail does not in any way, directly or indirectly, take away from the police their power and right to fully investigate into charges made against the appellant. He further submitted that when the case is under investigation, the usual anxiety of the investigating agency is to ensure that the alleged accused should fully cooperate with them and should be available as and when they require him. In the instant case, when the appellant has already 13 joined the investigation and is fully cooperating with the investigating agency then it is difficult to comprehend why the respondent is insistent for custodial interrogation of the appellant? According to the appellant, in the instant case, the investigating agency should not have a slightest doubt that the appellant would not be available to the investigating agency for further investigation particularly when he has already joined investigation and is fully cooperating with the investigating agency.

24. Mr. Bhushan also submitted that according to the General Clauses Act, 1897 the court which grants the bail also has the power to cancel it. The grant of bail is an interim order. The court can always review its decision according to the subsequent facts, circumstances and new material. Mr. Bhushan also submitted that the exercise of grant, refusal and cancellation of bail can be undertaken by the court either at the instance of the accused or a public prosecutor or a complainant on finding fresh material and new circumstances at any point of time. Even the appellant's reluctance in not fully cooperating with the investigation could be a ground for cancellation of bail. 14

25. Mr. Bhushan submitted that a plain reading of the section 438 Cr.P.C. clearly reveals that the legislature has not placed any fetters on the court. In other words, the legislature has not circumscribed court's discretion in any manner while granting anticipatory bail, therefore, the court should not limit the order only for a specified period till the charge-sheet is filed and thereafter compel the accused to surrender and ask for regular bail under section 439 Cr.P.C., meaning thereby the legislature has not envisaged that the life of the anticipatory bail would only last till the charge-sheet is filed. Mr. Bhushan submitted that when no embargo has been placed by the legislature then this court in some of its orders was not justified in placing this embargo.

26. Mr. Bhushan submitted that the discretion which has been granted by the legislature cannot and should not be curtailed by interpreting the provisions contrary to the legislative intention. The courts' discretion in grant or refusal of the anticipatory bail cannot be diluted by interpreting the provisions against the legislative intention. He submitted that the life is never static and every situation has to be assessed and evaluated in the context of emerging concerns as and when it arises. It is 15 difficult to visualize or anticipate all kinds of problems and situations which may arise in future. Law has been settled by an authoritative pronouncement of the Supreme Court

27. The Constitution Bench of this Court in Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia and Others v. State of Punjab (1980) 2 SCC 565 had an occasion to comprehensively deal with the scope and ambit of the concept of anticipatory bail. Section 438 Cr.P.C. is an extraordinary provision where the accused who apprehends his/her arrest on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence can be granted bail in anticipation of arrest. The Constitution Bench's relevant observations are set out as under: "……..A wise exercise of judicial power inevitably takes care of the evil consequences which are likely to flow out of its intemperate use. Every kind of judicial discretion, whatever may be the nature of the matter in regard to which it is required to be exercised, has to be used with due care and caution. In fact, an awareness of the context in which the discretion is required to be exercised and of the reasonably foreseeable consequences of its use, is the hall mark of a prudent exercise of judicial discretion. One ought not to make a bugbear of the power to grant anticipatory bail".

28. Mr. Bhushan referred to a Constitution Bench judgment in Sibbia's case (supra) to strengthen his argument that no such embargo has been placed by the said judgment of the Constitution Bench. He placed heavy reliance on para 15 of Sibbia's case (supra), which reads as under: "15. Judges have to decide cases as they come before them, mindful of the need to keep passions and prejudices out of their decisions. And it will be strange if, by employing judicial artifices and techniques, we cut down the discretion so wisely conferred upon the courts, by devising a formula which will confine the power to grant anticipatory bail within a strait-jacket. While laying down cast-iron rules in a matter like granting anticipatory bail, as the High Court has done, it is apt to be overlooked that even judges can have but an imperfect awareness of the needs of new situations. Life is never static and every situation has to be assessed in the context of emerging concerns as and when it arises. Therefore, even if we were to frame a `Code for the grant of anticipatory bail', which really is the business of the legislature, it can at best furnish broad guide-lines and cannot compel blind adherence. In which case to grant bail and in which to refuse it is, in the very nature of things, a matter of discretion. But apart from the fact that the question is inherently of a kind which calls for the use of discretion from case to case, the legislature has, in terms express, relegated the decision of that question to the discretion of the court, by providing that it may grant bail "if it thinks fit". The concern of the courts generally is to preserve their discretion without meaning to abuse it. It will be strange if we exhibit concern to stultify the discretion conferred upon the courts by law."

29. Mr. Bhushan submitted that the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) also mentioned that "we see no valid reason for rewriting Section 438 with a view, not to expanding 17 the scope and ambit of the discretion conferred on the High Court and the Court of Session but, for the purpose of limiting it. Accordingly, we are unable to endorse the view of the High Court that anticipatory bail cannot be granted in respect of offences like criminal breach of trust for the mere reason that the punishment provided therefor is imprisonment for life. Circumstances may broadly justify the grant of bail in such cases too, though of course, the court is free to refuse anticipatory bail in any case if there is material before it justifying such refusal".

30. Mr. Bhushan submitted that the court's orders in some cases that anticipatory bail is granted till the charge-sheet is filed and thereafter the accused has to surrender and seek bail application under section 439 Cr.P.C. is neither envisaged by the provisions of the Act nor is in consonance with the law declared by a Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) nor it is in conformity with the fundamental principles of criminal jurisprudence that accused is considered to be innocent till he is found guilty nor in consonance with the provisions of the Constitution where individual's liberty in a democratic society is considered sacrosanct.

31. Mr. Mahesh Jethmalani, learned senior counsel appearing for respondent no. 2, submitted that looking to the facts and circumstances of this case, the High Court was justified in declining the anticipatory bail to the appellant. He submitted that the anticipatory bail ought to be granted in rarest of rare cases where the nature of offence is not very serious. He placed reliance on the case of Pokar Ram v. State of Rajasthan and Others (1985) 2 SCC 597 and submitted that in murder cases custodial interrogation is of paramount importance particularly when no eye witness account is available.

32. Mr. Jethmalani fairly submitted that the practice of passing orders of anticipatory bail operative for a few days and directing the accused to surrender before the Magistrate and apply for regular bail are contrary to the law laid down in Sibbia's case (supra). The decisions of this Court in Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra (1996) 1 SCC 667, K. L. Verma v. State and Another (1998) 9 SCC 348, Adri Dharan Das v. State of West Bengal (2005) 4 SCC 303 and Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar and Another (2005) 1 SCC 608 are in conflict with the above decision of the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra). He submitted that all these orders which 19 are contrary to the clear legislative intention of law laid down in Sibbia's case (supra) are per incuriam. He also submitted that in case the conflict between the two views is irreconcilable, the court is bound to follow the judgment of the Constitution Bench over the subsequent decisions of Benches of lesser strength.

33. He placed reliance on N. Meera Rani v. Government of Tamil Nadu and Another (1989) 4 SCC 418 wherein it was perceived that there was a clear conflict between the judgment of the Constitution Bench and subsequent decisions of Benches of lesser strength. The Court ruled that the dictum in the judgment of the Constitution Bench has to be preferred over the subsequent decisions of the Bench of lesser strength. The Court observed thus:

"…….All subsequent decisions which are cited have to be read in the light of the Constitution Bench decision since they are decisions by Benches comprising of lesser number of judges. It is obvious that none of these subsequent decisions could have intended taking a view contrary to that of the Constitution bench in Rameshwar Shaw's case (1964) 4 SCR 921"

34. He placed reliance on another judgment of this Court in Vijayalaxmi Cashew Company and Others v. Dy. 20 Commercial Tax Officer and Another (1996) 1 SCC 468. This Court held as under:

"……..It is not possible to uphold the contention that perception of the Supreme Court, as will appear from the later judgments, has changed in this regard. A judgment of a Five Judge Bench, which has not been doubted by any later judgment of the Supreme Court cannot be treated as overruled by implication."

35. He also placed reliance on Union of India and Others v. K. S. Subramanian (1976) 3 SCC 677 and State of U.P. v. Ram Chandra Trivedi (1976) 4 SCC 52 and submitted that in case of conflict, the High Court has to prefer the decision of a larger Bench to that of a smaller Bench.

36. Mr. Jethmalani submitted that not only the decision in Sibbia's case (supra) must be followed on account of the larger strength of the Bench that delivered it but the subsequent decisions must be held to be per incuriam and hence not binding since they have not taken into account the ratio of the judgment of the Constitution Bench.

37. He further submitted that as per the doctrine of `per incuriam', any judgment which has been passed in ignorance of or without considering a statutory provision or a binding precedent is not good law and the same ought to be ignored. A 21 perusal of the judgments in Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, K. L. Verma v. State and Another, Adri Dharan Das v. State of West Bengal and Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar and Another (supra) indicates that none of these judgments have considered para 42 of Sibbia's case (supra) in proper perspective. According to Mr. Jethmalani, all subsequent decisions which have been cited above have to be read in the light of the Constitution Bench's decision in Sibbia's case (supra) since they are decisions of Benches comprised of lesser number of judges. According to him, none of these subsequent decisions could be intended taking a view contrary to that of the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra).

38. Thus, the law laid down in para 42 by the Constitution Bench that the normal rule is not to limit operation of the order of anticipatory bail, was not taken into account by the courts passing the subsequent judgments. The observations made by the courts in the subsequent judgments have been made in ignorance of and without considering the law laid down in para 42 which was binding on them. In these circumstances, the observations made in the subsequent judgments to the effect that anticipatory bail should be for a limited period of time, must 22 be construed to be per incuriam and the decision of the Constitution Bench preferred.

39. He further submitted that the said issue came up for consideration before the Madras High Court reported in Palanikumar and Another v. State 2007 (4) CTC 1 wherein after discussing all the judgments of this court on the issue, the court held that the subsequent judgments were in conflict with the decision of the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) and in accordance with the law of precedents, the judgment of the Constitution Bench is biding on all courts and the ratio of that judgment has to be applicable for all judgments decided by the Benches of same or smaller combinations. In the said judgment of Sibbia's case (supra) it was directed that the anticipatory bail should not be limited in period of time.

40. We have heard the learned counsel for the parties at great length and perused the written submissions filed by the learned counsel for the parties Relevance and importance of personal liberty

41. All human beings are born with some unalienable rights like life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. The importance of 23 these natural rights can be found in the fact that these are fundamental for their proper existence and no other right can be enjoyed without the presence of right to life and liberty.

42. Life bereft of liberty would be without honour and dignity and it would lose all significance and meaning and the life itself would not be worth living. That is why "liberty" is called the very quintessence of a civilized existence.

43. Origin of "liberty"' can be traced in the ancient Greek civilization. The Greeks distinguished between the liberty of the group and the liberty of the individual. In 431 B.C., an Athenian statesman described that the concept of liberty was the outcome of two notions, firstly, protection of group from attack and secondly, the ambition of the group to realize itself as fully as possible through the self-realization of the individual by way of human reason. Greeks assigned the duty of protecting their liberties to the State. According to Aristotle, as the state was a means to fulfil certain fundamental needs of human nature and was a means for development of individuals' personality in association of fellow citizens so it was natural and necessary to man. Plato found his "republic" as the best source for the achievement of the self-realization of the people.

44. Chambers' Twentieth Century Dictionary defines "liberty" as "Freedom to do as one pleases, the unrestrained employment of natural rights, power of free chance, privileges, exemption, relaxation of restraint, the bounds within which certain privileges are enjoyed, freedom of speech and action beyond ordinary civility".

45. It is very difficult to define the "liberty". It has many facets and meanings. The philosophers and moralists have praised freedom and liberty but this term is difficult to define because it does not resist any interpretation. The term "liberty" may be defined as the affirmation by an individual or group of his or its own essence. It needs the presence of three factors, firstly, harmonious balance of personality, secondly, the absence of restraint upon the exercise of that affirmation and thirdly, organization of opportunities for the exercise of a continuous initiative.

46. "Liberty" may be defined as a power of acting according to the determinations of the will. According to Harold Laski, liberty was essentially an absence of restraints and John Stuard Mill 25 viewed that "all restraint", qua restraint is an evil". In the words of Jonathon Edwards, the meaning of "liberty" and freedom is: "Power, opportunity or advantage that any one has to do as he pleases, or, in other words, his being free from hindrance or impediment in the way of doing, or conducting in any respect, as he wills."

47. It can be found that "liberty" generally means the prevention of restraints and providing such opportunities, the denial of which would result in frustration and ultimately disorder. Restraints on man's liberty are laid down by power used through absolute discretion, which when used in this manner brings an end to "liberty" and freedom is lost. At the same time "liberty" without restraints would mean liberty won by one and lost by another. So "liberty" means doing of anything one desires but subject to the desire of others.

48. As John E.E.D. in his monograph Action on "Essays on Freedom and Power" wrote that Liberty is one of the most essential requirements of the modern man. It is said to be the delicate fruit of a mature civilization.

49. A distinguished former Attorney General for India, M.C. Setalvad in his treatise "War and Civil Liberties" observed that 26 the French Convention stipulates common happiness as the end of the society, whereas Bentham postulates the greatest happiness of the greatest number as the end of law. Article 19 of the Indian Constitution averts to freedom and it enumerates certain rights regarding individual freedom. These rights are vital and most important freedoms which lie at the very root of liberty.

50. He further observed that the concept of civil liberty is essentially rooted in the philosophy of individualism. According to this doctrine, the highest development of the individual and the enrichment of his personality are the true function and end of the state. It is only when the individual has reached the highest state of perfection and evolved what is best in him that society and the state can reach their goal of perfection. In brief, according to this doctrine, the state exists mainly, if not solely, for the purpose of affording the individual freedom and assistance for the attainment of his growth and perfection. The state exists for the benefit of the individual.

51. Mr. Setalvad in the same treatise further observed that it is also true that the individual cannot attain the highest in him 27 unless he is in possession of certain essential liberties which leave him free as it were to breathe and expand. According to Justice Holmes, these liberties are the indispensable conditions of a free society. The justification of the existence of such a state can only be the advancement of the interests of the individuals who compose it and who are its members. Therefore, in a properly constituted democratic state, there cannot be a conflict between the interests of the citizens and those of the state. The harmony, if not the identity, of the interests of the state and the individual, is the fundamental basis of the modern Democratic National State. And, yet the existence of the state and all government and even all law must mean in a measure the curtailment of the liberty of the individual. But such a surrender and curtailment of his liberty is essential in the interests of the citizens of the State. The individuals composing the state must, in their own interests and in order that they may be assured the existence of conditions in which they can, with a reasonable amount of freedom, carry on their other activities, endow those in authority over them to make laws and regulations and adopt measures which impose certain restrictions on the activities of the individuals.

52. Harold J. Laski in his monumental work in "Liberty in the Modern State" observed that liberty always demands a limitation on political authority. Power as such when uncontrolled is always the natural enemy of freedom.

53. Roscoe Pound, an eminent and one of the greatest American Law Professors aptly observed in his book "The Development of Constitutional Guarantee of Liberty" that whatever, `liberty' may mean today, the liberty is guaranteed by our bills of rights, "is a reservation to the individual of certain fundamental reasonable expectations involved in life in civilized society and a freedom from arbitrary and unreasonable exercise of the power and authority of those who are designated or chosen in a politically organized society to adjust that society to individuals."

54. Blackstone in "Commentaries on the Laws of England", Vol.I, p.134 aptly observed that "Personal liberty consists in the power of locomotion, of changing situation or moving one's person to whatsoever place one's own inclination may direct, without imprisonment or restraint unless by due process of law".

55. According to Dicey, a distinguished English author of the Constitutional Law in his treatise on Constitutional Law observed that, "Personal liberty, as understood in England, means in substance a person's right not to be subjected to imprisonment, arrest, or other physical coercion in any manner that does not admit of legal justification." [Dicey on Constitutional Law, 9th Edn., pp.207-08]. According to him, it is the negative right of not being subjected to any form of physical restraint or coercion that constitutes the essence of personal liberty and not mere freedom to move to any part of the Indian territory. In ordinary language personal liberty means liberty relating to or concerning the person or body of the individual, and personal liberty in this sense is the antithesis of physical restraint or coercion.

56. Eminent English Judge Lord Alfred Denning observed: "By personal freedom I mean freedom of every law abiding citizen to think what he will, to say what he will, and to go where he will on his lawful occasion without hindrance from any person…. It must be matched, of course, with social security by which I mean the peace and good order of the community in which we live."

57. Eminent former Judge of this Court, Justice H.R. Khanna in a speech as published in 2 IJIL, Vol.18 (1978), p.133 observed that "liberty postulates the creation of a climate wherein there is no suppression of the human spirits, wherein, there is no denial of the opportunity for the full growth of human personality, wherein head is held high and there is no servility of the human mind or enslavement of the human body". Right to life and personal liberty under the Constitution

58. The deem it appropriate to deal with the concept of personal liberty under the Indian and other Constitutions.

59. The Fundamental Rights represent the basic values enriched by the people of this country. The aim behind having elementary right of the individual such as the Right to Life and Liberty is not fulfilled as desired by the framers of the Constitution. It is to preserve and protect certain basic human rights against interference by the state. The inclusion of a Chapter in Constitution is in accordance with the trends of modern democratic thought. The object is to ensure the inviolability of certain essential rights against political vicissitudes.

60. The framers of the Indian Constitution followed the American model in adopting and incorporating the Fundamental Rights for the people of India. American Constitution provides that no person shall be deprived of his life, liberty, or property without due process of law. The due process clause not only protects the property but also life and liberty, similarly Article 21 of the Indian Constitution asserts the importance of Article 21. The said Article reads as under:- "no person shall be deprived for his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law" the right secured by Article 21 is available to every citizen or non-citizen, according to this article, two rights are secured.

1. Right to life

2. Right to personal liberty.

61. Life and personal liberty are the most prized possessions of an individual. The inner urge for freedom is a natural phenomenon of every human being. Respect for life, liberty and property is not merely a norm or a policy of the State but an essential requirement of any civilized society.

62. This court defined the term "personal liberty" immediately after the Constitution came in force in India in the case of A. K. 32

Gopalan v. The State of Madras, AIR 1950 SC 27. The expression personal liberty' has wider as well narrow meaning. In the wider sense it includes not only immunity from arrest and detention but also freedom of speech, association etc. In the narrow sense, it means immunity from arrest and detention. The juristic conception of `personal liberty', when used the latter sense, is that it consists freedom of movement and locomotion.

63. Mukherjea, J. in the said judgment observed that `Personal Liberty' means liberty relating to or concerning the person or body of the individual and it is, in this sense, antithesis of physical restraint or coercion. `Personal Liberty' means a personal right not to be subjected to imprisonment, arrest or other physical coercion in any manner that does not admit of legal justification. This negative right constitutes the essence of personal liberty. Patanjali Shastri, J. however, said that whatever may be the generally accepted connotation of the expression `personal liberty', it was used in Article 21 in a sense which excludes the freedom dealt with in Article 19. Thus, the Court gave a narrow interpretation to `personal liberty'. This court excluded certain varieties of rights, as separately mentioned in 33

Article 19, from the purview of `personal liberty' guaranteed by Art. 21.

64. In Kharak Singh v. State of U.P. and Others AIR 1963 SC 1295, Subba Rao, J. defined `personal liberty, as a right of an individual to be free from restrictions or encroachment on his person whether these are directly imposed or indirectly brought about by calculated measure. The court held that `personal liberty' in Article 21 includes all varieties of freedoms except those included in Article 19.

65. In Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India and Another (1978) 1 SCC 248, this court expanded the scope of the expression `personal liberty' as used in Article 21 of the Constitution of India. The court rejected the argument that the expression `personal liberty' must be so interpreted as to avoid overlapping between Article 21 and Article 19(1). It was observed: "The expression `personal liberty' in Article 21 is of the widest amplitude and it covers a variety of rights which go to constitute the personal liberty of a man and some of them have been raised to the status of distinct fundamental rights and given additional protection under Article 19." So, the phrase `personal liberty' is 34 very wide and includes all possible rights which go to constitute personal liberty, including those which are mentioned in Article 19.

66. Right to life is one of the basic human right and not even the State has the authority to violate that right. [State of A.P. v. Challa Ramakrishna Reddy and Others (2000) 5 SCC 712].

67. Article 21 is a declaration of deep faith and belief in human rights. In this pattern of guarantee woven in Chapter III of this Constitution, personal liberty of man is at root of Article 21 and each expression used in this Article enhances human dignity and values. It lays foundation for a society where rule of law has primary and not arbitrary or capricious exercise of power. [Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab and Others (1994) 3 SCC 569].

68. While examining the ambit, scope and content of the expression "personal liberty" in the said case, it was held that the term is used in this Article as a compendious term to include within itself all varieties of rights which goes to make up the "personal liberties" or man other than those dealt within several clauses of Article 19(1). While Article 19(1) deals with particular 35 species or attributes of that freedom, "personal liberty" in Article 21 takes on and comprises the residue.

69. The early approach to Article 21 which guarantees right to life and personal liberty was circumscribed by literal interpretation in A.K. Gopalan (supra). But in course of time, the scope of this application of the Article against arbitrary encroachment by the executives has been expanded by liberal interpretation of the components of the Article in tune with the relevant international understanding. Thus protection against arbitrary privation of "life" no longer means mere protection of death, or physical injury, but also an invasion of the right to "live" with human dignity and would include all these aspects of life which would go to make a man's life meaningful and worth living, such as his tradition, culture and heritage. [Francis Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi and Others (1981) 1 SCC 608]

70. Article 21 has received very liberal interpretation by this court. It was held: "The right to live with human dignity and same does not connote continued drudging. It takes within its fold some process of civilization which makes life worth living 36 and expanded concept of life would mean the tradition, culture, and heritage of the person concerned." [P. Rathinam/Nagbhusan Patnaik v. Union of India and Another (1994) 3 SCC 394.]

71. The object of Article 21 is to prevent encroachment upon personal liberty in any manner. Article 21 is repository of all human rights essentially for a person or a citizen. A fruitful and meaningful life presupposes full of dignity, honour, health and welfare. In the modern "Welfare Philosophy", it is for the State to ensure these essentials of life to all its citizens, and if possible to non-citizens. While invoking the provisions of Article 21, and by referring to the oft-quoted statement of Joseph Addision, "Better to die ten thousand deaths than wound my honour", the Apex court in Khedat Mazdoor Chetana Sangath v. State of M.P. and Others (1994) 6 SCC 260 posed to itself a question "If dignity or honour vanishes what remains of life"? This is the significance of the Right to Life and Personal Liberty guaranteed under the Constitution of India in its third part.

72. This court in Central Inland Water Transport Corporation Ltd. and Another v. Brojo Nath Ganguly and 37 Another (1986) 3 SCC 156 observed that the law must respond and be responsive to the felt and discernible compulsions of circumstances that would be equitable, fair and justice, and unless there is anything to the contrary in the statute, Court must take cognizance of that fact and act accordingly.

73. This court remarked that an undertrial prisoner should not be put in fetters while he is being taken from prison to Court or back to prison from Court. Steps other than putting him in fetters will have to be taken to prevent his escape.

74. In Prem Shankar Shukla v. Delhi Administration (1980) 3 SCC 526, this court has made following observations: "……. The Punjab Police Manual, in so far as it puts the ordinary Indian beneath the better class breed (para 26.21A and 26.22 of Chapter XXVI) is untenable and arbitrary. Indian humans shall not be dichotomised and the common run discriminated against regarding handcuffs. The provisions in para 26.22 that every under-trial who is accused of a non-bailable offence punishable with more than 3 years prison term shall be routinely handcuffed is violative of Articles 14, 19 and 21. The nature of the accusation is not the criterion. The clear and present danger of escape breaking out of the police control is the determinant. And for this there must be clear material, not glib assumption, record of reasons and judicial oversight and summary hearing and direction by the court where the victim is produced. … Handcuffs are not summary punishment vicariously imposed at police level, at 38 once obnoxious and irreversible. Armed escorts, worth the salt, can overpower any unarmed under- trial and extra guards can make up exceptional needs. In very special situations, the application of irons is not ruled out. The same reasoning applies to (e) and (f). Why torture the prisoner because others will demonstrate or attempt his rescue? The plain law of under-trial custody is thus contrary to the unedifying escort practice. (Para 31)

Even in cases where, in extreme circumstances, handcuffs have to be put on the prisoner, the escorting authority must record contemporaneously the reason for doing so. Otherwise, under Article 21 the procedure will be unfair and bad in law. The minions of the police establishment must make good their security recipes by getting judicial approval. And, once the court directs that handcuffs shall be off, no escorting authority can overrule judicial direction. This is implicit in Article 21 which insists upon fairness, reasonableness and justice in the very procedure which authorities stringent deprivation of life and liberty. (Para 30)

It is implicit in Articles 14 and 19 that when there is no compulsive need to fetter a person's limbs, it is sadistic, capricious, despotic and demoralizing to humble a man by manacling him. Such arbitrary conduct surely slaps Article 14 on the face. The minimal freedom of movement which even a detainee is entitled to under Article 19 cannot be cut down cruelly by application of handcuffs or other hoops. It will be unreasonable so to do unless the State is able to make out that no other practical way of forbidding escape is available, the prisoner being so dangerous and desperate and the circumstances so hostile to safekeeping. (Para 23) Whether handcuffs or other restraint should be imposed on a prisoner is a matter for the decision of the authority responsible for his custody. But there is room for imposing supervisory regime over the 39 exercise of that power. One sector of supervisory jurisdiction could appropriately lie with the court trying the accused, and it would be desirable for the custodial authority to inform that court of the circumstances in which, and the justification for, imposing a restraint on the body of the accused. It should be for the court concerned to work out the modalities of the procedure requisite for the purpose of enforcing such control."

75. After dealing with the concept of life and liberty under the Indian Constitution, we would like to have the brief survey of other countries to ascertain how life and liberty has been protected in other countries.

UNITED KINGDOM

76. Life and personal liberty has been given prime importance in the United Kingdom. It was in 1215 that the people of England revolted against King John and enforced their rights, first time the King had acknowledged that there were certain rights of the subject could be called Magna Carta 1215. In 1628 the petition of rights was presented to King Charles-I which was the 1st step in the transfer of Sovereignty from the King to Parliament. It was passed as the Bill of Rights 1689.

77. In the Magna Carta, it is stated "no free man shall be taken, or imprisoned or disseised or outlawed or banished or any ways 40 destroyed, nor will the King pass upon him or commit him to prison, unless by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land".]

78. Right to life is the most fundamental of all human rights and any decision affecting human right or which may put an individual's life at risk must call for the most anxious scrutiny. See: Bugdaycay v. Secretary of State for the Home Department (1987) 1 All ER 940. The sanctity of human life is probably the most fundamental of the human social values. It is recognized in all civilized societies and their legal system and by the internationally recognized statements of human rights. See: R on the application of Pretty v. Director of Public Prosecutions (2002) 1 All ER 1.

U.S.A.

79. The importance of personal liberty is reflected in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of U.S.A. (1791) which declares as under :-

"No person shall be…..deprived of his life, liberty or property, without due process of law." (The `due process' clause was adopted in s.1(a) of the Canadian Bill of Rights Act, 1960. In the Canada Act, 1982, this expression has been substituted by `the principles of fundamental justice' [S.7]. 41

80. The Fourteenth Amendment imposes similar limitation on the State authorities. These two provisions are conveniently referred to as the `due process clauses'. Under the above clauses the American Judiciary claims to declare a law as bad, if it is not in accordance with `due process', even though the legislation may be within the competence of the Legislature concerned. Due process is conveniently understood means procedural regularity and fairness. (Constitutional Interpretation by Craig R. Ducat, 8 th Edn. 2002 p.475.).

WEST GERMANY

81. Article 2(2) of the West German Constitution (1948) declares:

"Everyone shall have the right to life and physical inviolability. The freedom of the individual shall be inviolable. These rights may be interfered with only on the basis of the legal order."

Though the freedom of life and liberty guaranteed by the above Article may be restricted, such restriction will be valid only if it is in conformity with the `legal order' (or `pursuant to a law, according to official translation). Being a basic right, the freedom guaranteed by Article 2(2) is binding on the legislative, administrative and judicial organs of the State [Article 1(3)]. This 42 gives the individual the rights to challenge the validity of a law or an executive act violative the freedom of the person by a constitutional complaint to the Federal Constitutional Court, under Article 93. Procedural guarantee is given by Articles 103(1) and 104. Article 104(1)-2(2) provides: "(1) The freedom of the individual may be restricted only on the basis of a formal law and only with due regard to the forms prescribed therein……. (2) Only the Judge shall decide on the admissibility and continued deprivation of liberty."

82. These provisions correspond to Article 21 of our Constitution and the court is empowered to set a man to liberty if it appears that he has been imprisoned without the authority of a formal law or in contravention of the procedure prescribed there.

JAPAN

83. Article XXXI of the Japanese Constitution of 1946 says : "No person shall be deprived of life or liberty nor shall any other criminal penalty be imposed, except according to procedure established by law." This article is similar to Article 21 of our Constitution save that it includes other criminal penalties, such as fine or forfeiture within its ambit.43

CANADA

84. S. 1(1) of the Canadian Bill of Rights Act, 1960, adopted the `Due Process' Clause from the American Constitution. But the difference in the Canadian set-up was due to the fact that this Act was not a constitutional instrument to impose a direct limitation on the Legislature but only a statute for interpretation of Canadian status, which, again, could be excluded from the purview of the Act of 1960, in particular cases, by an express declaration made by the Canadian Parliament itself (s.2). The result was obvious : The Canadian Supreme Court in R. v. Curr (1972) S.C.R. 889 held that the Canadian Court would not import `substantive reasonableness' into s.1(a), because of the unsalutary experience of substantive due process in the U.S.A.; and that as to `procedural reasonableness', s.1(a) of the Bill of Rights Act only referred to `the legal processes recognized by Parliament and the Courts in Canada'. The result was that in Canada, the `due process clause' lost its utility as an instrument of judicial review of legislation and it came to mean practically the same thing as whatever the Legislature prescribes, – much the same as `procedure established by law' in Article 21 of the Constitution of India, as interpreted in A.K. Gopalan (supra). 44

BANGADESH

85. Article 32 of the Constitution of Bangladesh, 1972 [3 SCW 385] reads as under:

"No person shall be deprived of life or personal liberty save in accordance with law."

This provision is similar to Article 21 of the Indian Constitution. Consequently, unless controlled by some other provision, it should be interpreted as in India.

PAKISTAN

86. Article 9 Right to life and Liberty. – "Security of Person : No person shall be deprived of life and liberty save in accordance with law."

NEPAL

87. In the 1962 – Constitution of Nepal, there is Article 11(1) which deals with right to life and liberty which is identical with Article 21 of the Indian Constitution.

INTERNATIONAL CHARTERS

88. Universal Declaration, 1948. – Article 3 of the Universal Declaration says:

"Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person."

Article 9 provides:

"No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention or exile."

Cl.10 says:

"Everyone is entitled in full equality to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, in the determination of his rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him." [As to its legal effect, see M. v. Organisation Belge, (1972) 45 Inter, LR 446 (447, 451, et. Sq.)]

89. Covenant on Civil and Political Rights – Article 9(1) of the U.N. 1966, 1966 says:

"Everyone has the right to liberty and security of person. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest or detention. No one shall be deprived of his liberty except on such grounds and in accordance with such procedure as are established by law."

90. European Convention on Human Rights, 1950. – This Convention contains a most elaborate and detailed codification of the rights and safeguards for the protection of life and personal liberty against arbitrary invasion.

91. In every civilized democratic country, liberty is considered to be the most precious human right of every person. The Law Commission of India in its 177th Report under the heading `Introduction to the doctrine of "arrest" has described as follows: 46

"Liberty is the most precious of all the human rights". It has been the founding faith of the human race for more than 200 years. Both the American Declaration of Independence, 1776 and the French Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen, 1789, spoke of liberty being one of the natural and inalienable rights of man. The universal declaration of human rights adopted by the general assembly on United Nations on December 10, 1948 contains several articles designed to protect and promote the liberty of individual. So does the international covenant on civil and political rights, 1996. Above all, Article 21 of the Constitution of India proclaims that no one shall be deprived of his right to personal liberty except in accordance with the procedure prescribed by law. Even Article 20(1) & (2) and Article 22 are born out of a concern for human liberty. As it is often said, "one realizes the value of liberty only when he is deprived of it." Liberty, along with equality is the most fundamental of human rights and the fundamental freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution. Of equal importance is the maintenance of peace, law and order in the society. Unless, there is peace, no real progress is possible. Societal peace lends stability and security to the polity. It provides the necessary conditions for growth, whether it is in the economic sphere or in the scientific and technological spheres."

92. Just as the Liberty is precious to an individual, so is the society's interest in maintenance of peace, law and order. Both are equally important.

93. It is a matter of common knowledge that a large number of undertrials are languishing in jail for a long time even for allegedly committing very minor offences. This is because section 438 Cr.P.C. has not been allowed its full play. The 47

Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) clearly mentioned that section 438 Cr.P.C. is extraordinary because it was incorporated in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 and before that other provisions for grant of bail were sections 437 and 439 Cr.P.C. It is not extraordinary in the sense that it should be invoked only in exceptional or rare cases. Some courts of smaller strength have erroneously observed that section 438 Cr.P.C. should be invoked only in exceptional or rare cases. Those orders are contrary to the law laid down by the judgment of the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra). According to the report of the National Police Commission, the power of arrest is grossly abused and clearly violates the personal liberty of the people, as enshrined under Article 21 of the Constitution, then the courts need to take serious notice of it. When conviction rate is admittedly less than 10%, then the police should be slow in arresting the accused. The courts considering the bail application should try to maintain fine balance between the societal interest vis-`-vis personal liberty while adhering to the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that the accused that the accused is presumed to be innocent till he is found guilty by the competent court.48

94. The complaint filed against the accused needs to be thoroughly examined including the aspect whether the complainant has filed false or frivolous complaint on earlier occasion. The court should also examine the fact whether there is any family dispute between the accused and the complainant and the complainant must be clearly told that if the complaint is found to be false or frivolous, then strict action will be taken against him in accordance with law. If the connivance between the complainant and the investigating officer is established then action be taken against the investigating officer in accordance with law.

95. The gravity of charge and exact role of the accused must be properly comprehended. Before arrest, the arresting officer must record the valid reasons which have led to the arrest of the accused in the case diary. In exceptional cases the reasons could be recorded immediately after the arrest, so that while dealing with the bail application, the remarks and observations of the arresting officer can also be properly evaluated by the court.

96. It is imperative for the courts to carefully and with meticulous precision evaluate the facts of the case. The discretion must be exercised on the basis of the available material and the facts of the particular case. In cases where the court is of the considered view that the accused has joined investigation and he is fully cooperating with the investigating agency and is not likely to abscond, in that event, custodial interrogation should be avoided.

97. A great ignominy, humiliation and disgrace is attached to the arrest. Arrest leads to many serious consequences not only for the accused but for the entire family and at times for the entire community. Most people do not make any distinction between arrest at a pre-conviction stage or post-conviction stage. Whether the powers under section 438 Cr.P.C. are subject to limitation of section 437 Cr.P.C.?

98. The question which arises for consideration is whether the powers under section 438 Cr.P.C. are unguided or uncanalised or are subject to all the limitations of section 437 Cr.P.C.? The Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) has clearly observed that there is no justification for reading into section 438 Cr.P.C. and the limitations mentioned in section 437 Cr.P.C. The Court further observed that the plentitude of the section must be given its full play. The Constitution Bench has also observed that the High Court is not right in observing that the accused must make out a "special case" for the exercise of the power to grant anticipatory bail. This virtually, reduces the salutary power conferred by section 438 Cr.P.C. to a dead letter. The Court observed that "We do not see why the provisions of Section 438 Cr.P.C. should be suspected as containing something volatile or incendiary, which needs to be handled with the greatest care and caution imaginable."

99. As aptly observed in Sibbia's case (supra) that a wise exercise of judicial power inevitably takes care of the evil consequences which are likely to flow out of its intemperate use. Every kind of judicial discretion, whatever may be the nature of the matter in regard to which it is required to be exercised, has to be used with due care and caution. In fact, an awareness of the context in which the discretion is required to be exercised and of the reasonably foreseeable consequences of its use, is the hallmark of a prudent exercise of judicial discretion. One ought not to make a bugbear of the power to grant anticipatory bail. 51

100. The Constitution Bench in the same judgment also observed that a person seeking anticipatory bail is still a free man entitled to the presumption of innocence. He is willing to submit to restraints and conditions on his freedom, by the acceptance of conditions which the court may deem fit to impose, in consideration of the assurance that if arrested, he shall enlarged on bail.

101. The proper course of action ought to be that after evaluating the averments and accusation available on the record if the court is inclined to grant anticipatory bail then an interim bail be granted and notice be issued to the public prosecutor. After hearing the public prosecutor the court may either reject the bail application or confirm the initial order of granting bail. The court would certainly be entitled to impose conditions for the grant of bail. The public prosecutor or complainant would be at liberty to move the same court for cancellation or modifying the conditions of bail any time if liberty granted by the court is misused. The bail granted by the court should ordinarily be continued till the trial of the case.

102. The order granting anticipatory bail for a limited duration and thereafter directing the accused to surrender and apply before a regular bail is contrary to the legislative intention and the judgment of the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra).

103. It is a settled legal position that the court which grants the bail also has the power to cancel it. The discretion of grant or cancellation of bail can be exercised either at the instance of the accused, the public prosecutor or the complainant on finding new material or circumstances at any point of time.

104. The intention of the legislature is quite clear that the power of grant or refusal of bail is entirely discretionary. The Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) has clearly stated that grant and refusal is discretionary and it should depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. The Constitution Bench in the said case has aptly observed that we must respect the wisdom of the Legislature entrusting this power to the superior courts namely, the High Court and the Court of Session. The Constitution Bench observed as under:

"We would, therefore, prefer to leave the High Court and the Court of Session to exercise their jurisdiction under Section 438 by a wise and careful use of their discretion which, by their long training and experience, they are ideally suited to do. The ends of justice will be better served by trusting these courts to act objectively and in consonance with principles governing the grant of bail which are recognized over the years, than by divesting them of their discretion which the legislature has conferred upon them, by laying down inflexible rules of general application. It is customary, almost chronic, to take a statute as one finds it on the grounds that, after all "the legislature in, its wisdom" has thought it fit to use a particular expression. A convention may usefully grow whereby the High Court and the Court of Session may be trusted to exercise their discretionary powers in their wisdom, especially when the discretion is entrusted to their care by the legislature in its wisdom. If they err, they are liable to be corrected."

GRANT OF BAIL FOR LIMITED PERIOD IS CONTRARY TO THE LEGISLATIVE INTENTION AND LAW DECLARED BY THE CONSTITUTION BENCH:

105. The court which grants the bail has the right to cancel the bail according to the provisions of the General Clauses Act but ordinarily after hearing the public prosecutor when the bail order is confirmed then the benefit of the grant of the bail should continue till the end of the trial of that case.

106. The judgment in Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh (supra) is contrary to legislative intent and the spirit of the very provisions of the anticipatory bail itself and has resulted in an artificial and unreasonable restriction on the scope of enactment contrary to the legislative intention.

107. The restriction on the provision of anticipatory bail under section 438 Cr.P.C. limits the personal liberty of the accused granted under Article 21 of the constitution. The added observation is nowhere found in the enactment and bringing in restrictions which are not found in the enactment is again an unreasonable restriction. It would not stand the test of fairness and reasonableness which is implicit in Article 21 of the Constitution after the decision in Maneka Gandhi's case (supra) in which the court observed that in order to meet the challenge of Article 21 of the Constitution the procedure established by law for depriving a person of his liberty must be fair, just and reasonable.

108. Section 438 Cr.P.C. does not mention anything about the duration to which a direction for release on bail in the event of arrest can be granted. The order granting anticipatory bail is a direction specifically to release the accused on bail in the event of his arrest. Once such a direction of anticipatory bail is executed by the accused and he is released on bail, the concerned court would be fully justified in imposing conditions including direction of joining investigation.

109. The court does not use the expression `anticipatory bail' but it provides for issuance of direction for the release on bail by the High Court or the Court of Sessions in the event of arrest. According to the aforesaid judgment of Salauddin's case, the accused has to surrender before the trial court and only thereafter he/she can make prayer for grant of bail by the trial court. The trial court would release the accused only after he has surrendered.

110. In pursuance to the order of the Court of Sessions or the High Court, once the accused is released on bail by the trial court, then it would be unreasonable to compel the accused to surrender before the trial court and again apply for regular bail.

111. The court must bear in mind that at times the applicant would approach the court for grant of anticipatory bail on mere apprehension of being arrested on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. In fact, the investigating or concerned agency may not otherwise arrest that applicant who has applied for anticipatory bail but just because he makes an application before the court and gets the relief from the court for a limited period and thereafter he has to surrender before the trial court and only thereafter his bail application can be considered and life of anticipatory bail comes to an end. This may lead to disastrous and unfortunate consequences. The applicant who may not have otherwise lost his liberty loses it because he chose to file application of anticipatory bail on mere apprehension of being arrested on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. No arrest should be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of power to arrest is one thing and the justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. This finding of the said judgment (supra) is contrary to the legislative intention and law which has been declared by a Constitution Bench of this court in Sibbia's case (supra).

112. The validity of the restrictions imposed by the Apex Court, namely, that the accused released on anticipatory bail must submit himself to custody and only thereafter can apply for regular bail. This is contrary to the basic intention and spirit of section 438 Cr.P.C. It is also contrary to Article 21 of the Constitution. The test of fairness and reasonableness is implicit under Article 21 of the Constitution of India. Directing the accused to surrender to custody after the limited period amounts to deprivation of his personal liberty.

113. It is a settled legal position crystallized by the Constitution Bench of this court in Sibbia's case (supra) that the courts should not impose restrictions on the ambit and scope of section 438 Cr.P.C. which are not envisaged by the Legislature. The court cannot rewrite the provision of the statute in the garb of interpreting it.

114. It is unreasonable to lay down strict, inflexible and rigid rules for exercise of such discretion by limiting the period of which an order under this section could be granted. We deem it appropriate to reproduce some observations of the judgment of the Constitution Bench of this court in the Sibbia's case (supra).

"The validity of that section must accordingly be examined by the test of fairness and reasonableness which is implicit in Article 21. If the legislature itself were to impose an unreasonable restriction on the grant of anticipatory bail, such a restriction could have been struck down as being violative of Article 21. Therefore, while determining the scope of Section 438, the court should not impose any unfair or unreasonable limitation on the individual's right to obtain an order of anticipatory bail. Imposition of an unfair or unreasonable limitation, according to the learned Counsel, would be violative of Article 21, irrespective of whether it is imposed by legislation or by judicial decision.

Clause (1) of Section 438 is couched in terms, broad and unqualified. By any known canon of construction, words of width and amplitude ought not generally to be cut down so as to read into the language of the statute restraints and conditions which the legislature itself did not think it proper or necessary to impose. This is especially true when the statutory provision which falls for consideration is designed to secure a valuable right like the right to personal freedom and involves the application of a presumption as salutary and deep grained in our criminal jurisprudence as the presumption of innocence."

"I desire in the first instance to point out that the discretion given by the section is very wide. . . Now it seems to me that when the Act is so expressed to provide a wide discretion, … it is not advisable to lay down any rigid rules for guiding that discretion. I do not doubt that the rules enunciated by the Master of the Rolls in the present case are useful maxims in general, and that in general they reflect the point of view from which judges would regard an application for relief. But I think it ought to be distinctly understood that there may be cases in which any or all of them may be disregarded. If it were otherwise, the free discretion given by the statute would be fettered by limitations which have nowhere been enacted. It is one thing to decide what is the true meaning of the language contained in an Act of Parliament. It is quite a different thing to place conditions upon a free discretion entrusted by statute to the court where the conditions are not based upon statutory enactment at all. It is not safe, I think, to say that the court must and will always insist upon certain things when the Act does not require them, and the facts of some unforeseen case may make the court wish it had kept a free hand."

"The concern of the courts generally is to preserve their discretion without meaning to abuse it. It will be strange if we exhibit concern to stultify the discretion conferred upon the courts by law."

115. The Apex Court in Salauddin's case (supra) held that anticipatory bail should be granted only for a limited period and on the expiry of that duration it should be left to the regular court to deal with the matter is not the correct view. The reasons quoted in the said judgment is that anticipatory bail is granted at a stage when an investigation is incomplete and the court is not informed about the nature of evidence against the alleged offender.

116. The said reason would not be right as the restriction is not seen in the enactment and bail orders by the High Court and Sessions Court are granted under sections 437 and 439 also at such stages and they are granted till the trial.

117. The view expressed by this Court in all the above referred judgments have to be reviewed and once the anticipatory bail is granted then the protection should ordinarily be available till the end of the trial unless the interim protection by way of the grant of anticipatory bail is curtailed when the anticipatory bail granted by the court is cancelled by the court on finding fresh material or circumstances or on the ground of abuse of the indulgence by the accused.

SCOPE AND AMBIT OF ANTICIPATORY BAIL:

118. A good deal of misunderstanding with regard to the ambit and scope of section 438 Cr.P.C. could have been avoided in case the Constitution Bench decision of this court in Sibbia's case (supra) was correctly understood, appreciated and applied.

119. This Court in the Sibbia's case (supra) laid down the following principles with regard to anticipatory bail:

a) Section 438(1) is to be interpreted in light of Article 21 of the Constitution of India.

b) Filing of FIR is not a condition precedent to exercise of power under section 438.

c) Order under section 438 would not affect the right of police to conduct investigation.

d) Conditions mentioned in section 437 cannot be read into section 438.

e) Although the power to release on anticipatory bail can be described as of an "extraordinary" character this would "not justify the conclusion that the power must be exercised in exceptional cases only." Powers are discretionary to be exercised in light of the circumstances of each case.

f) Initial order can be passed without notice to the Public Prosecutor. Thereafter, notice must be issued forthwith and question ought to be re- examined after hearing. Such ad interim order must conform to requirements of the section and suitable conditions should be imposed on the applicant.

120. The Law Commission in July 2002 has severely criticized the police of our country for the arbitrary use of power of arrest which, the Commission said, is the result of the vast discretionary powers conferred upon them by this Code. The Commission expressed concern that there is no internal mechanism within the police department to prevent misuse of law in this manner and the stark reality that complaint lodged in this regard does not bring any result. The Commission intends to suggest amendments in the Criminal Procedure Code and has invited suggestions from various quarters. Reference is made in this Article to the 41st Report of the Law Commission wherein the Commission saw `no justification' to require a person to submit to custody, remain in prison for some days and then apply for bail even when there are reasonable grounds for holding that the person accused of an offence is not likely to abscond or otherwise misuse his liberty. Discretionary power to order anticipatory bail is required to be exercised keeping in mind these sentiments and spirit of the judgments of this court in Sibbia's case (supra) and Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P. and Others (1994) 4 SCC 260.

Relevant consideration for exercise of the power

121. No inflexible guidelines or straitjacket formula can be provided for grant or refusal of anticipatory bail. We are clearly of the view that no attempt should be made to provide rigid and inflexible guidelines in this respect because all circumstances and situations of future cannot be clearly visualized for the grant or refusal of anticipatory bail. In consonance with the legislative intention the grant or refusal of anticipatory bail should necessarily depend on facts and circumstances of each case. As aptly observed in the Constitution Bench decision in Sibbia's case (supra) that the High Court or the Court of Sessions to exercise their jurisdiction under section 438 Cr.P.C. by a wise and careful use of their discretion which by their long training and experience they are ideally suited to do. In any event, this is the legislative mandate which we are bound to respect and honor.

122. The following factors and parameters can be taken into consideration while dealing with the anticipatory bail:

i. The nature and gravity of the accusation and the exact role of the accused must be properly comprehended before arrest is made;

ii. The antecedents of the applicant including the fact as to whether the accused has previously undergone imprisonment on conviction by a Court in respect of any cognizable offence;

iii. The possibility of the applicant to flee from justice; iv. The possibility of the accused's likelihood to repeat similar or the other offences.

v. Where the accusations have been made only with the object of injuring or humiliating the applicant by arresting him or her.

vi. Impact of grant of anticipatory bail particularly in cases of large magnitude affecting a very large number of people.

vii. The courts must evaluate the entire available material against the accused very carefully. The court must also clearly comprehend the exact role of the accused in the case. The cases in which accused is implicated with the help of sections 34 and 149 of the Indian Penal Code, the court should consider with even greater care and caution because over implication in the cases is a matter of common knowledge and concern;

viii. While considering the prayer for grant of anticipatory bail, a balance has to be struck between two factors namely, no prejudice should be caused to the free, fair and full investigation and there should be prevention of harassment, humiliation and unjustified detention of the accused;

ix. The court to consider reasonable apprehension of tampering of the witness or apprehension of threat to the complainant;

x. Frivolity in prosecution should always be considered and it is only the element of genuineness that shall have to be considered in the matter of grant of bail and in the event of there being some doubt as to the genuineness of the prosecution, in the normal course of events, the accused is entitled to an order of bail.

123. The arrest should be the last option and it should be restricted to those exceptional cases where arresting the accused is imperative in the facts and circumstances of that case.

124. The court must carefully examine the entire available record and particularly the allegations which have been directly attributed to the accused and these allegations are corroborated by other material and circumstances on record.

125. These are some of the factors which should be taken into consideration while deciding the anticipatory bail applications. These factors are by no means exhaustive but they are only illustrative in nature because it is difficult to clearly visualize all situations and circumstances in which a person may pray for anticipatory bail. If a wise discretion is exercised by the concerned judge, after consideration of entire material on record then most of the grievances in favour of grant of or refusal of bail will be taken care of. The legislature in its wisdom has entrusted the power to exercise this jurisdiction only to the judges of the superior courts. In consonance with the legislative intention we should accept the fact that the discretion would be properly exercised. In any event, the option of approaching the superior court against the court of Sessions or the High Court is always available.

126. Irrational and Indiscriminate arrest are gross violation of human rights. In Joginder Kumar's case (supra), a three Judge Bench of this Court has referred to the 3rd report of the National Police Commission, in which it is mentioned that the quality of arrests by the Police in India mentioned power of arrest as one of the chief sources of corruption in the police. The report suggested that, by and large, nearly 60% of the arrests were either unnecessary or unjustified and that such unjustified police action accounted for 43.2% of the expenditure of the jails. 66

127. Personal liberty is a very precious fundamental right and it should be curtailed only when it becomes imperative according to the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case.

128. In case, the State consider the following suggestions in proper perspective then perhaps it may not be necessary to curtail the personal liberty of the accused in a routine manner. These suggestions are only illustrative and not exhaustive.

1) Direct the accused to join investigation and only when the accused does not cooperate with the investigating agency, then only the accused be arrested.

2) Seize either the passport or such other related documents, such as, the title deeds of properties or the Fixed Deposit Receipts/Share Certificates of the accused.

3) Direct the accused to execute bonds; 4) The accused may be directed to furnish sureties of number of persons which according to the prosecution are necessary in view of the facts of the particular case.

5) The accused be directed to furnish undertaking that he would not visit the place where the witnesses reside so that the possibility of tampering of evidence or otherwise influencing the course of justice can be avoided.

6) Bank accounts be frozen for small duration during investigation. 67

129) In case the arrest is imperative, according to the facts of the case, in that event, the arresting officer must clearly record the reasons for the arrest of the accused before the arrest in the case diary, but in exceptional cases where it becomes imperative to arrest the accused immediately, the reasons be recorded in the case diary immediately after the arrest is made without loss of any time so that the court has an opportunity to properly consider the case for grant or refusal of bail in the light of reasons recorded by the arresting officer.

130. Exercise of jurisdiction under section 438 of Cr.P.C. is extremely important judicial function of a judge and must be entrusted to judicial officers with some experience and good track record. Both individual and society have vital interest in orders passed by the courts in anticipatory bail applications.

131. It is imperative for the High Courts through its judicial academies to periodically organize workshops, symposiums, seminars and lectures by the experts to sensitize judicial officers, police officers and investigating officers so that they can properly comprehend the importance of personal liberty vis-`-vis social interests. They must learn to maintain fine balance between the personal liberty and the social interests.

132. The performance of the judicial officers must be periodically evaluated on the basis of the cases decided by them. In case, they have not been able to maintain balance between personal liberty and societal interests, the lacunae must be pointed out to them and they may be asked to take corrective measures in future. Ultimately, the entire discretion of grant or refusal of bail has to be left to the judicial officers and all concerned must ensure that grant or refusal of bail is considered basically on the facts and circumstances of each case.

133. In our considered view, the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) has comprehensively dealt with almost all aspects of the concept of anticipatory bail under section 438 Cr.P.C. A number of judgments have been referred to by the learned counsel for the parties consisting of Benches of smaller strength where the courts have observed that the anticipatory bail should be of limited duration only and ordinarily on expiry of that duration or standard duration, the court granting the anticipatory bail should leave it to the regular court to deal with the matter. This view is clearly contrary to the view taken by the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra). In the preceding paragraphs, it is clearly spelt out that no limitation has been envisaged by the Legislature under section 438 Cr.P.C. The Constitution Bench has aptly observed that "we see no valid reason for rewriting section 438 with a view, not to expanding the scope and ambit of the discretion conferred on the High Court or the Court of Session but, for the purpose of limiting it".

134. In view of the clear declaration of law laid down by the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra), it would not be proper to limit the life of anticipatory bail. When the court observed that the anticipatory bail is for limited duration and thereafter the accused should apply to the regular court for bail, that means the life of section 438 Cr.P.C. would come to an end after that limited duration. This limitation has not been envisaged by the legislature. The Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) clearly observed that it is not necessary to re-write section 438 Cr.P.C. Therefore, in view of the clear declaration of the law by the Constitution Bench, the life of the order under section 438 Cr.P.C. granting bail cannot be curtailed.

135. The ratio of the judgment of the Constitution Bench in Sibbia's case (supra) perhaps was not brought to the notice of their Lordships who had decided the cases of Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, K. L. Verma v. State and Another, Adri Dharan Das v. State of West Bengal and Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar and Another (supra).

136. In Naresh Kumar Yadav v. Ravindra Kumar (2008) 1 SCC 632, a two-Judge Bench of this Court observed "the power exercisable under section 438 Cr.P.C. is somewhat extraordinary in character and it should be exercised only in exceptional cases. This approach is contrary to the legislative intention and the Constitution Bench's decision in Sibbia's case (supra).

137. We deem it appropriate to reiterate and assert that discretion vested in the court in all matters should be exercised with care and circumspection depending upon the facts and circumstances justifying its exercise. Similarly, the discretion vested with the court under section 438 Cr.P.C. should also be exercised with caution and prudence. It is unnecessary to travel beyond it and subject to the wide power and discretion conferred by the legislature to a rigorous code of self-imposed limitations.

138. The judgments and orders mentioned in paras 135 and 136 are clearly contrary to the law declared by the Constitution Bench of this Court in Sibbia's case (supra). These judgments and orders are also contrary to the legislative intention. The Court would not be justified in re-writing section 438 Cr.P.C.

139. Now we deem it imperative to examine the issue of per incuriam raised by the learned counsel for the parties. In Young v. Bristol Aeroplane Company Limited (1994) All ER 293 the House of Lords observed that `Incuria' literally means `carelessness'. In practice per incuriam appears to mean per ignoratium. English courts have developed this principle in relaxation of the rule of stare decisis. The `quotable in law' is avoided and ignored if it is rendered, `in ignoratium of a statute or other binding authority. The same has been accepted, approved and adopted by this court while interpreting Article 141 of the Constitution which embodies the doctrine of precedents as a matter of law.

"……. In Halsbury's Laws of England (4th Edn.) Vol. 26: Judgment and Orders: Judicial Decisions as Authorities (pp. 297-98, para 578) per incuriam has been elucidated as under:

"A decision is given per incuriam when the court has acted in ignorance of a previous decision of its own or of a court of coordinate jurisdiction which covered the case before it, in which case it must decide which case to follow (Young v. Bristol Aero plane Co. Ltd., 1944 KB 718 at 729 : (1944) 2 All ER 293 at 300. In Huddersfield Police Authority v. Watson, 1947 KB 842 : (1947) 2 All ER 193.); or when it has acted in ignorance of a House of Lords decision, in which case it must follow that decision; or when the terms of a statute or rule having statutory force."

140. Lord Godard, C.J. in Huddersfield Police Authority v. Watson (1947) 2 All ER 193 observed that where a case or statute had not been brought to the court's attention and the court gave the decision in ignorance or forgetfulness of the existence of the case or statute, it would be a decision rendered in per incuriam.

141. This court in Government of A.P. and Another v. B. Satyanarayana Rao (dead) by LRs. and Others (2000) 4 SCC 262 observed as under:

"The rule of per incuriam can be applied where a court omits to consider a binding precedent of the same court or the superior court rendered on the same issue or where a court omits to consider any statute while deciding that issue."

142. In a Constitution Bench judgment of this Court in Union of India v. Raghubir Singh (1989) 2 SCC 754, Chief Justice Pathak observed as under:

"The doctrine of binding precedent has the merit of promoting a certainty and consistency in judicial decisions, and enables an organic development of the law, besides providing assurance to the individual as to the consequence of transactions forming part of his daily affairs. And, therefore, the need for a clear and consistent enunciation of legal principle in the decisions of a court."

143. In Thota Sesharathamma and another v. Thota Manikyamma (Dead) by LRs. and others (1991) 4 SCC 312 a two Judge Bench of this Court held that the three Judge Bench decision in the case of Mst. Karmi v. Amru (1972) 4 SCC 86 was per incuriam and observed as under: "…It is a short judgment without adverting to any provisions of Section 14 (1) or 14(2) of the Act. The judgment neither makes any mention of any argument raised in this regard nor there is any mention of the earlier decision in Badri Pershad v. Smt. Kanso Devi. The decision in Mst. Karmi cannot be considered as an authority on the ambit and scope of Section 14(1) and (2) of the Act." 74

144. In R. Thiruvirkolam v. Presiding Officer and Another (1997) 1 SCC 9 a two Judge Bench of this Court observed that the question is whether it was bound to accept the decision rendered in Gujarat Steel Tubes Ltd. v. Mazdoor Sabha (1980) 2 SCC 593, which was not in conformity with the decision of a Constitution Bench in P.H. Kalyani v. Air France (1964) 2 SCR 104. J.S. Verma, J. speaking for the court observed as under:

"With great respect, we must say that the above-quoted observations in Gujarat Steel at P. 215 are not in line with the decision in Kalyani which was binding or with D.C. Roy to which the learned Judge, Krishna Iyer, J. was a party. It also does not match with the underlying juristic principle discussed in Wade. For the reasons, we are bound to follow the Constitution Bench decision in Kalyani, which is the binding authority on the point."

145. In Bharat Petroleum Corporation Ltd. v. Mumbai Shramik Sangra and others (2001) 4 SCC 448 a Constitution Bench of this Court ruled that a decision of a Constitution Bench of this Court binds a Bench of two learned Judges of this Court and that judicial discipline obliges them to follow it, regardless of their doubts about its correctness. 75

146. A Constitution Bench of this Court in Central Board of Dawoodi Bohra Community v. State of Maharashtra (2005) 2 SCC 673 has observed that the law laid down by this Court in a decision delivered by a Bench of larger strength is binding on any subsequent Bench of lesser or coequal strength.

147. A three-Judge Bench of this court in Official Liquidator v. Dayanand and Others (2008) 10 SCC 1 again reiterated the clear position of law that by virtue of Article 141 of the Constitution, the judgment of the Constitution Bench in State of Karnataka and Others v. Umadevi (3) and Others (2006) 4 SCC 1 is binding on all courts including this court till the same is overruled by a larger Bench. The ratio of the Constitution Bench has to be followed by Benches of lesser strength. In para 90, the court observed as under:- "We are distressed to note that despite several pronouncements on the subject, there is substantial increase in the number of cases involving violation of the basics of judicial discipline. The learned Single Judges and Benches of the High Courts refuse to follow and accept the verdict and law laid down by coordinate and even larger Benches by citing minor difference in the facts as the ground for doing so. Therefore, it has become necessary to reiterate that disrespect to the constitutional ethos and breach of discipline have grave impact on the credibility of judicial institution and encourages chance litigation. It must be remembered that predictability and certainty is an important hallmark of judicial jurisprudence developed in this country in the last six decades and increase in the frequency of conflicting judgments of the superior judiciary will do incalculable harm to the system inasmuch as the courts at the grass roots will not be able to decide as to which of the judgments lay down the correct law and which one should be followed."

148. In Subhash Chandra and Another v. Delhi Subordinate Services Selection Board and Others (2009) 15 SCC 458, this court again reiterated the settled legal position that Benches of lesser strength are bound by the judgments of the Constitution Bench and any Bench of smaller strength taking contrary view is per incuriam. The court in para 110 observed as under:-

"Should we consider S. Pushpa v. Sivachanmugavelu (2005) 3 SCC 1 to be an obiter following the said decision is the question which arises herein. We think we should. The decisions referred to hereinbefore clearly suggest that we are bound by a Constitution Bench decision. We have referred to two Constitution Bench decisions, namely, Marri Chandra Shekhar Rao v. Seth G.S. Medical College (1990) 3 SCC 139 and E.V. Chinnaiah v. State of A.P. (2005) 1 SCC 394. Marri Chandra Shekhar Rao (supra) had been followed by this Court in a large number of decisions including the three-Judge Bench decisions. S. Pushpa (supra) therefore, could not have ignored either Marri Chandra Shekhar Rao (supra) or other decisions following the same only on the basis of an administrative circular issued or otherwise and more so when the constitutional scheme as contained in clause (1) of Articles 341 and 342 of the Constitution of India putting the State and Union Territory in the same bracket. Following Official Liquidator v. Dayanand and Others (2008) 10 SCC 1 therefore, we are of the opinion that the dicta in S. Push pa (supra) is an obiter and does not lay down any binding ratio."

149. The analysis of English and Indian Law clearly leads to the irresistible conclusion that not only the judgment of a larger strength is binding on a judgment of smaller strength but the judgment of a co-equal strength is also binding on a Bench of judges of co-equal strength. In the instant case, judgments mentioned in paragraphs 135 and 136 are by two or three judges of this court. These judgments have clearly ignored a Constitution Bench judgment of this court in Sibbia's case (supra) which has comprehensively dealt with all the facets of anticipatory bail enumerated under section 438 of Cr.P.C.. Consequently, judgments mentioned in paragraphs 135 and 136 of this judgment are per incuriam.

150. In case there is no judgment of a Constitution Bench or larger Bench of binding nature and if the court doubts the correctness of the judgments by two or three judges, then the proper course would be to request Hon'ble the Chief Justice to refer the matter to a larger Bench of appropriate strength.

151. In the instant case there is a direct judgment of the Constitution Bench of this court in Sibbia's case (supra) dealing with exactly the same issue regarding ambit, scope and object of the concept of anticipatory bail enumerated under section 438 Cr.P.C. The controversy is no longer res integra. We are clearly bound to follow the said judgment of the Constitution Bench. The judicial discipline obliges us to follow the said judgment in letter and spirit.

152. In our considered view the impugned judgment and order of the High Court declining anticipatory bail to the appellant cannot be sustained and is consequently set aside.

153. We direct the appellant to join the investigation and fully cooperate with the investigating agency. In the event of arrest the appellant shall be released on bail on his furnishing a personal bond in the sum of Rs.50,000/- with two sureties in the like amount to the satisfaction of the arresting officer.

154. Consequently, this appeal is allowed and disposed of in terms of the aforementioned observations.

****

DATE : 11th JULY, 2013

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

CORAM: ABHAY M. THIPSAY, J.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO.514 OF 2013

WITH CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO.515 OF 2013

Lalit Laxmandas Soni And Anr ....Vs....The State Of Union Territory & Anr.

==========

Index Note – Bail - Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists- Sections 406, 420,34 of IPC- The learned Magistrate directed the applicants to be released on bail - The Sessions Judge cancelled the bail granted by the Magistrate- High Court confirmed order of Magistrate granting Bail- Held, Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists- It is not possible to accept the reasoning of the learned Sessions Judge - The principles governing grant of bail are well settled. - The law does not favour pretrial detention for an unduly long period. It is also well settled that the power to refuse bail is not to be exercised, as if punishment before the trial, is being imposed - All said and done, the elementary principle that 'pretrial detention can never be punitive in nature', has not undergone any change over the years- Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists (except in cases of statutory prohibition, as imposed by some special statutes) - The learned Sessions Judge overlooked the basic concept of bail and rather unnecessarily criticized the order passed by the learned Magistrate - The orders passed by the learned Sessions Judge, cancelling the bail granted to the applicants, are set aside - The applicants shall remain on bail. (Para 8,9,13,14)

==========

Mr.B.D.Chauhan Advocate for the Applicants.
Mr.D.A.Nalawade Advocate for Union Territory / Respondent No.1.
Mrs.G.P.Mulekar APP for the State / Respondent No.2.

ORAL ORDER :

1 These two applications can be conveniently disposed of by this common order as the applicants in both the applications are the same and the questions needing determination are also same.

2 The applicants are the accused in two cases registered by Nani Daman Police Station. The cases are in respect of the offences punishable under Sections 406 and 420 of the Indian Penal Code (IPC) read with Section 34 thereof. In one case, i.e. C.R.No.30 of 2013, the applicants were apprehended on 24.1.2013. While they were in custody in that case, they were apprehended in C.R.No.101 of 2012 on 12.2.2013. The police completed the investigation of both these cases and filed chargesheets in both the matters. The learned Magistrate by two separate orders, one passed on 3.4.2013 and the other on 15.4.2013, directed the applicants to be released on bail in the sum of Rs.25,000/each. Aggrieved by the orders releasing the applicants on bail, the Union Territory of Daman moved the Sessions court for cancellation of bail granted to the applicants. The Sessions Judge after hearing the parties, by two separate orders, passed on 9.5.2013, canceled the bail granted by the Magistrate to the applicants. The applicants, being aggrieved by this cancellation, have approached this court, by way of the present application.

3 I have heard B.D.Chauhan, the learned counsel for the Applicants, and Mr.D.A.Nalawade, the learned Public Prosecutor for Union Territory. With the assistance of the learned Public Prosecutor, I have ascertained the nature of allegations against the applicants. Undoubtedly, the applicants are alleged to have committed the offences of cheating and defrauding a number of persons. The amount allegedly earned by the applicants by committing the offences in question is estimated to be around Rs.40 Lac. It also appears that this amount could not be recovered from, or at the instance of the applicants, in the course of investigation.

4 I have carefully gone through the orders passed by the learned Magistrate, as also the orders passed by the learned Sessions Judge.

5 The Magistrate, in his orders, observed that chargesheet had been filed and investigation was over. He also observed that the case would not be decided immediately, and that, it would take sometime for the disposal of the case. He also observed that the offences allegedly committed by the applicants were neither punishable with death nor imprisonment for life. Upon these considerations, he passed the bail orders.

6 The learned Sessions Judge observed that the applicants were involved in a financial fraud of huge amounts, and that, one of the applicants was arrested earlier in a crime registered in the year 2007. The view of the learned Sessions Judge was that the Magistrate had not passed any reasoned order and that the order passed by the Magistrate was "cryptic and vague." The Sessions Judge also observed that the order had been passed arbitrarily without considering the fact that right of public at large and society was involved in the matter, and that, the Magistrate had not considered the nature, seriousness of the offense, and the impact on the society. By terming the order of the Magistrate as perverse, he canceled the bail.

7 A substantial part of the order passed by the learned Sessions Judge consists of recording the contentions advanced by the learned Public Prosecutor and the learned counsel for the accused persons. He has also referred to, and reproduced, the observations made by the Supreme Court of India and various High courts in several reported cases on which reliance was placed by the Public Prosecutor. His reasoning, however, is found only in paragraph 12 of the impugned order, in which the learned Sessions Judge discussed the nature of allegations against the applicants, that there were two previous cases registered against the accused no.1, and that, the present offences were committed when the accused no.1 was on bail in a previous case. The learned Sessions Judge observed

> ".....the JMFC has not passed reasoned order. His order is cryptic and vague. He has released the respondents-accused on bail only on the ground that charge-sheet has been filed against them. He has not taken into consideration the material in the form of > documents and the evidence of the witnesses brought on record before him. Therefore, the order passed by JMFC, Daman is not justifiable. JMFC, Daman has passed order arbitrarily without considering the fact that right of the public at large and society is involved in the matter. He has not considered the nature, seriousness of the offence and the impact on the society while deciding the application for bail. Therefore, in my opinion, the order under revision is perverse and cannot be sustained in law."

8 It is not possible to accept the reasoning of the learned Sessions Judge. In the first place, it is difficult to hold that the learned Magistrate had not given any reasons for granting bail to the applicants. All the factors mentioned by the learned Magistrate, namely, that the completion of investigation, the inability to proceed with the trial forthwith, and the fact that the offences were not punishable with death or imprisonment for life, were relevant considerations, while deciding whether or not, to grant bail to the applicants.

9 The principles governing grant of bail are well settled. Grant of bail is discretionary. The law does not favour pretrial detention for an unduly long period. It is also well settled that the power to refuse bail is not to be exercised, as if punishment before the trial, is being imposed. It is only in cases of offences which are punishable with death or imprisonment for life, that the courts are ordinarily reluctant to release an accused on bail, but even that is not because the desire to inflict punishment upon the supposed offender before trial; but only because of the inherent possibility of the accused persons absconding in view of the severity of the punishment, that would be imposed upon an accused on conviction.

10 Moreover, it is also well settled that considerations for grant of bail and considerations for cancellation of bail are quite distinct and different. Rejection of bail in a nonbailable case at the initial stage and the cancellation of bail already granted, have to be considered and dealt with on different basis. Very cogent and overwhelming circumstances are necessary for an order directing the cancellation of the bail, already granted. [See Dolatram v. State of Haryana, (1995) 1 SCC 349].

11 Though it cannot be said that bail once granted can be cancelled only on account of some supervening circumstances, for cancelling the bail once granted on other grounds, the order granting bail must appear to have been passed on totally irrelevant considerations or exhibit nonapplication of mind, or would be categorized as 'perverse.' The criticism of the order passed by the Magistrate as 'perverse', as done by the Sessions Judge, does not seem to be justified, as the grounds on which the Magistrate granted bail cannot be termed as irrelevant.

12 In Bhagirath Singh Judeja vs. State of Gujarat, AIR 1984 Supreme Court of India 372, Their Lordships of the Supreme Court have held that the only two material considerations for cancellation of bail are (i) Apprehension of the accused absconding, and (ii) of his tampering with prosecution witnesses.

13 The learned Sessions Judge did not discuss, in his order, as to whether there was any likelihood of the applicants absconding or not facing the trial, or tampering with the witnesses. Thus, he cancelled the bail without being satisfied on these aspects.It does not appear that the applicants would not be available to face the trial.

14 All said and done, the elementary principle that 'pretrial detention can never be punitive in nature', has not undergone any change over the years. Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists (except in cases of statutory prohibition, as imposed by some special statutes). The learned Sessions Judge overlooked the basic concept of bail and rather unnecessarily criticized the order passed by the learned Magistrate. The orders passed by him give an impression that he refused bail because he was of the view that the accused appeared to have committed the alleged offences.

15 In my opinion, the cancellation of bail granted to the applicants, as done by the learned Sessions Judge, was not justified. The orders passed by the Sessions Judge, therefore, need to be interfered with, and the liberty of the applicants needs to be restored to them.

16 It, however, appears that the amount of bail fixed by the Magistrate is on a little lower side. It is customary, in case of an offense involving financial frauds, to fix the amount of bail somewhat higher.It would also be necessary to impose appropriate conditions upon the applicants, to reduce the possibility, if any, of their absconding, or not being available for trial.

17 The orders dated 9.5.2013, passed by the learned Sessions Judge, canceling the bail granted to the applicants, are set aside. The applicants shall remain on bail.However, the bail amount is enhanced to Rs.50,000/each, in each of the cases.

18 The learned counsel for the applicants submits that the applicants have already furnished a surety in the sum of Rs.25,000/ each, in both the cases. In that case, they would be required only to furnish an additional security in the sum of Rs.25,000/each, in each of the cases. This security may be offered by them by depositing cash of Rs.25,000/each,in each case, within a period of ten (10) days from today.

19 The applicants shall report to the learned Magistrate on the First and Third Monday of every calendar month, till the disposal of the case against them.

20 Should the court remain closed on any given Monday on account of a holiday, the applicants shall report to the learned Magistrate on the next working day.21 The applications are allowed in the aforesaid terms and stand disposed of accordingly.

****

Cross citation : 2013 ALL MR (Cri) 2273

THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

ABHAY M.THIPSAY, J.

Shamil Saquib Nachan ..V s . The State of Maharashtra
Criminal Bail Application No.512 of 2013.
6th May, 2013.

==========

A) Bail - Interpretation – A case required to be put forth for bail, is less stronger than that would be required for a discharge - accused is not required to show sufficient grounds that case against him is not made out but to so only reasonable grounds- If accused is able to show the reasonable ground not sufficient grounds that case against him is not made out then bail can be granted - Judging existence of prima facie case at stage of bail would be different from prima facie case at stage of framing a charge- an accused would never be required to put forth a stronger case for bail, than that would be required for a discharge - It is not that the court is required to come to a positive finding that the applicant for bail is not guilty of an crime before grant of bail.

> A careful analysis of the relevant provisions and the observations made by the Supreme Court of India in the aforesaid case of Ranjitsing Sharma (supra), lead to the following conclusion about the correct legal position in that regard. For enabling the court to exercise its discretion in favour of a person accused of having committed an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act, what is required is existence of reasonable grounds for believing that the applicant before the court is not guilty of an organized crime. The satisfaction that the "accused is not guilty" is not contemplated by the relevant provisions and what is required is the satisfaction that there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be not guilty. Again, the phrase "reasonable grounds" should not be confused with the phrase "sufficient grounds" It imports a lesser degree of satisfaction than "sufficient grounds." It cannot be lost sight of that the Special court would be entitled to discharge an accused if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. Moreover, judging the existence of a prima facie case at the stage of bail, would not be the same as judging the existence of a prima facie case for proceeding against an accused by framing a Charge. (para 26)
>
> It is too obvious that an accused would never be required to put forth a stronger case for bail, than that would be required for a discharge. (para 28)

(B) Maharashtra Control of Organized Crimes Act (1999), S.21(4) - Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (1967), S.43D - Criminal P.C.

(1973), S.437 - Bail - Complaint of organized crime and terrorist act — Use of" phrase "reasonable ground" not to be confused with "sufficient grounds"-while evaluating of materials by court a little deeper probe into the matter would be required when the offence relates to special Act curtailing discretion of court in matters of grant of bail- Applicant alleged to be one of the conspirators to kill first informant - Materials against him consist of statement of four witnesses and Call Data Records(CDRs) - Inconsistent and not supporting prosecution case - In fact raising doubts as these materials were gathered only after arrest of applicant — Then on what basis applicant was arrested, not made clear - Whether allegations against accused would constitute terrorist act, doubtful – Motives and objectives behind crime as alleged by prosecution, also conflicting and inconsistent – Reasonable grounds exist to believe that applicant not guilty – Bail application allowed

The observations made by Their Lordships of the Supreme Court of India in the case of Ranjitsing Brahmajeetsing Sharma v/s. State of Maharashtra and another, (2005) 5 Supreme Court Cases 294, indicate that in view of the drastic provisions curtailing the discretion of the court in the matter of bail, a little deeper probe into the matter - than is ordinarily done at the stage of bail may be necessary in such cases to avoid injustice.

It was initially suggested that the offence in question was committed for pecuniary gain. Later on, it was suggested that it had been committed with the object of promoting insurgency. The case, as put forth, is that the accused no.1 Saquib Nachan was angry because of the acts of Manoj Raicha and wanted to kill him to take revenge of the acts of Manoj Raicha in getting the cattle brought for qurbani taken charge of, and send to goushala. It is also suggested that actually the firing was done with the intention of causing rift between Hindus and Muslims and with the intention that there should be communal riots. There is substance in the contention of the learned counsel for the applicant that the motives and objectives alleged by the prosecution behind the act of firing at Manoj Raicha, which is the basis of the case, are conflicting and inconsistent.

No importance to that was attached on the ground that the mobile telephone instrument need not necessarily be with the holder or the subscriber, all the time. Though this is theoretically possible, there is no evidence that the mobile telephone instruments were parted with by the other accused. The prosecution cannot throw the weight of the tower location for supporting the theory of the applicant's presence at the spot. no importance to that was attached on the ground that the mobile telephone instrument need not necessarily be with the holder or the subscriber, all the time. Though this is theoretically possible, there is no evidence that the mobile telephone instruments were parted with by the other accused. The prosecution cannot throw the weight of the tower location for supporting the theory of the applicant's presence at the spot.

==========

Ms.Rebecca Gonsalves Advocate for the Applicant.

Mr.A.S.Gadkari APP for the State.

ORAL ORDER :

1 . The applicant is one of the six accused in M.C.O.C. Special bail Case No.10 of 2012, pending before the Special court under the Maharashtra Control of Organized Crime Act (hereinafter referred to as M.C.O.C. Act), Thane. The said case is in respect of offences punishable under Sections 120B, 153A, 307 of the Indian Penal Code B(IPC), offences punishable under the Arms Act, apart from the offences punishable under Sections 3(1)(ii), 3(2) and 3(4) of the M.C.O.C. Act. Additionally, the applicant and the other accused are alleged to have committed offences punishable under Sections 16 and 18 of the avk 1/27 ::: Downloaded on - 09/05/2013 23:38:13 ::: BA-512-2013Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967, as amended till 2008 (hereinafter referred to as U.A.P. Act). By the present application, the applicant seeks bail.

2 . I have heard Ms.Rebecca Gonsalves, the learned counsel for the applicant, and Mr.A.S.Gadkari, the learned APP for the State. With the assistance of the learned counsel, I have gone through the bail application, the annexures thereto, and all the relevant parts of the charge-sheet. I have also been taken through the affidavit filed by the Investigating Officer for opposing the grant of bail.

3. The prosecution case has been described in Column No.16 of Form 5E of the printed prescribed proforma of the charge-sheet. In brief, it can be described as follows :

The first informant Manoj Raicha, Advocate, is an active member of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad, and Gowvansh Saurakshan Samiti. He had, in the past, got the cattle brought in Bhiwandi for Qurbani on the occasions of Muslim religious festivals, taken charge of and sent to Gowshala. The accused no.1 Saquib Nachan, therefore, formed a belief that Mohan Raicha was doing injustice on Muslims and entertained grudge against him. He had given threats to Manoj Raicha in the year 2011 in the court campus itself. Because of this grudge, the accused no.1 Saquib Nachan conspired with other accused, namely, accused no.2 Guddu alias Mohammad Hafiz Khan, accused no.3 Shamil Saquib Nachan i.e. the applicant, accused no.4 Akif Atik Nachan, accused no.5 Tanveer Abdul Majid Zamindar and accused no.6 Abu Bakar Rashid Shaikh. In pursuance of the conspiracy, the accused no.6 Abu Bakar, fired at Manoj Raicha on 3.8.2012, causing injury to his shoulder, by a bullet.

4. How the incident which gave rise to this case, took place and how the investigation commenced, can be ascertained from the First Information Report (FIR). The facts, as narrated by Manoj Raicha, in FIR, are to the effect that on 3.8.2012, while he was travelling by his car, with his armed police bodyguard Achrekar - Police Constable No.3901 - three shots were fired at him from a fire arm. One bullet grazed his right upper arm. His bodyguard got down from the car, but could not see any one. Thereafter, Manoj and his bodyguard Achrekar, came to the police station and lodged a report on the basis of which, a case was registered in respect of offences punishable under Sections 307, & 120B of the IPC and offences punishable under the Arms Act, at avk 3/27 Nizampur Police Station, Bhiwandi. The investigation was then transferred to Crime Branch Bhiwandi, under the orders of Commissioner of Police, Bhiwandi, Thane, and thereafter, the provisions of Section 153A of IPC were added to the original FIR. In the course of investigation, it was revealed to the Investigating Officer that the attack on Manoj Raicha was a "part of larger conspiracy" and that the same was carried out at the instance of the accused no.1 Saquib Nachan. It was also revealed to be an act of an organized crimes syndicate. In the course of further investigation, it was also revealed that it was a "terrorist act" as contemplated under Section 15 of the U.A.P. Act, 1967.

5. Ms.Rebecca Gonsalves, the learned counsel for the applicant contended that the investigation is not at all sincere. She contented that no case of an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act and / or the U.A.P. Act is made out. She submitted that, in any event, there is absolutely no material in the entire charge-sheet to make out a prima facie case of any offence against the applicant. It is submitted that the applicant has been falsely implicated in the present case. It is submitted that the applicant is a student of Engineering with no antecedents and has been implicated basically because he happens to be the son of Saquib Nachan (accused no.1), who was accused in a number of cases and has been convicted in one case previously. Mr.Gadkari, on the other hand, submitted that the provisions of the M.C.O.C Act and also of the U.A.P. Act have rightly been invoked, and applied to the present case. As regards the role of the applicant, he submitted, that the applicant is a conspirator and had conspired with the other accused to commit the offences in question. According to him, there is sufficient and satisfactory material to show the involvement of the applicant in the alleged offences.

6. Before proceeding further, it may be observed that there is much that can be said about the manner in which the facts of the case are mentioned in the charge-sheet. The emphasis is not on the incident of firing but the emphasis is on the activities of Manoj Raicha, as a member of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad and Gowvansh Saurakshan Samiti. The emphasis is on the criminal background of the accused no.1 Saquib Nachin, on his gang, on his alleged anti-national activities, on his having committed a number of serious offences such as bomb blasts etc. in the past, on it having been established that he has connections with Kashmiri and Khalistani terrorists, etc. That, the accused no.1 had committed offences with the object of creating a rift between Hindus and Muslims and 'to cause communal riots, so that the sovereignty of the nation would be affected', that the intention of accused no.1 Saquib Nachan was 'to create anarchy and disorder in the country' and he desired that there should be outrage amongst the Muslims as well as the Hindus, etc. That, accused no.1 Saquib Nachin has written a book in which the government and the judiciary are criticized, suggesting that injustice is being done to Muslims. Thus the firing at Manoj Raicha, on the showing of the prosecution, is only an entirely small and an incidental - so to say - action of the accused no.1 Saquib Nachin, whose aims, ambitions and objects are quite different, and as mentioned above.

7. A number of contentions which are relevant for judging the prima facie truth of the prosecution case with respect to several material aspects thereof as projected by the investigating agency, have been raised by the learned counsel for the applicant. Indeed, much can be said about the prosecution case and the applicability of the offences punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act and the U.A.P. Act, to the facts of the present case. However, since I am dealing with a bail application and since the role attributed to the present applicant in the alleged offences is, admittedly, limited, I refrain from discussing the broader aspects and broader issues except where such discussion would be necessary in the context of the present bail application.

8. Apart from the contentions raised about the unreliability of the material against the applicant, the learned counsel for the applicant advanced a number of arguments suggesting that a doubt exists even as to whether the first informant was indeed fired at. She referred to the nature of injury sustained by Manoj Raicha; the location thereof, and the absence of any hole at that place on the shirt of Manoj Raicha. She also pointed out that though the FIR specifically states that the person or persons who fired at Manoj were not seen by him, or even by his bodyguard Achrekar, in the supplementary statement, Manoj Raicha claimed that his bodyguard had seen one person while running away. I have considered the matter. There is undoubtedly some substance in the contentions raised by the learned counsel. Interestingly, Manoj and his bodyguard had been together after the firing and had gone to the Police station together before lodging the FIR. The bodyguard was present when the FIR was being registered and inspite of this, a categorical statement that the bodyguard had not seen anyone, was made in the FIR. Prima facie, it is difficult to to accept that though the bodyguard had seen one person - supposed to be the assailant - running away after the incident of firing, the first informant, who was throughout with him, and had discussion with him after the incident, had gone with him to the Police station, would be sure that the bodyguard had not seen anyone and would categorically state so in the First Information Report, when the bodyguard had actually seen a person.

10. Coming to the role attributed to the applicant, admittedly, he is not the person who allegedly fired at Manoj Raicha. He is alleged to be one of the conspirators in respect of the conspiracy to attack and kill the first informant. The conspiracy was, allegedly, hatched in a meeting which took place between the applicant and the other accused at Oye Punjabi Dhaba on the second or third day of the commencement of the holy month of Ramzan.

11. The learned APP did not dispute that the only material against the applicant consists of statements made by four persons and the Call Data Records (CDRs) in respect of his mobile telephone. statements of the said four persons recorded during investigation have been truncated suitably to prevent disclosure of identity of the said persons. This has been done on the ground that the case is in respect of offences under the M.C.O.C. Act, and that, there would be a danger to the life of the witnesses if their identity is revealed. These persons are, therefore, referred to as "A" "B" "C" and "D". h

12. According to the witness "A", whose statement has been recorded on 4.9.2012, he had met the accused no.5 Tanveer Abdul Zamindar sometime after two days from the commencement of the holy month of Ramzan, and it was suggested to him by the accused no.5 Tanveer that they both would go out in the night for dinner. Accordingly, at about 9.30 p.m., they met at a particular place where the accused no.5 Tanveer took "A" to Oye Punjab Dhaba, situate at Nasik Road, and they reached there at about 10.15 p.m. That, the accused no.4 Akif Nachan, the applicant, accused no.6 Abu Bakar, and accused no.2 Guddu, were already sitting there. During the talks, the applicant reportedly said as follows :

> "vCck cgqr xqLls eas gaSA vHkh jetku ds ckn esa cdjh bZn vkusokyh gaSA gjlky ds rjg vks dehuk eukst jk;pk gekjs tkuoj idMdj eqlyekuksa dks rdyhQ nsxkA" mldks dqN • h djds ;s lky mldks mMkuk gh gksxkA

Translated in English, it would read thus :

"Abba (meaning the accused no.1 Saquib Nachan) is very much disturbed. Now, after Ramzan, Bakr-Id will come. Like every year that kamina Manoj Raicha would get our animals caught and cause trouble to the Muslims." Some how he has to be killed this year.

(The last sentence is not in the inverted commas, though it is also projected as the utterance of the applicant. The learned APP could not explain why it is so.)

According to "A", Abu Bakar, thereafter, said that he would shoot Manoj Raicha. Thereupon, accused no.5 Tanveer Zamindar agreed to pay money to purchase a pistol. Thus, it was in the presence of witness "A" that a conspiracy to kill Manoj Raicha was hatched.

13. The statement of witness "A" was got recorded by a Magistrate under the provisions of Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Code). In this statement, witness "A" did not advance this version. He did not speak about any meeting in Oye Punjab Dhaba and on the contrary, did not even make a mention of the applicant. When this was pointed out by the learned counsel for the applicant, the learned APP pointed out that one more statement of the said witness, also under Section 164 of the Code, was recorded, wherein the witness has stated about accused no.5 Tanveer Zamindar having taken him to Oye Punjab Dhaba, and about this witness having met accused no.2 Guddu, the applicant, accused no.4 Akif, and accused no.6 Abu Bakar there. As per this statement, there was discussion among the accused persons that Manoj Raicha was acting against the Muslims, and that something was to be done in that regard; and then one of the accused persons said that Manoj Raicha would be required to be killed. Thus, though in this statement, this witness has gone near his version, reflected in his statement recorded under Section 161 of the Code, there is still, a marked difference in both the versions.

14. As regards witness "B", he is a person who happened to be present in the Oye Punjabi Dhaba on the third day of the holy month of Ramzan. That, he saw the applicant, accused no.4 Akif Nachan, accused no.5 Tanveer and two to four more persons in the Dhaba. The applicant and the others sat on a table behind the table on which witness "B" was sitting. They had, however, not seen the witness "B." At that time, witness "B" heard Akif Nachan talking about Manoj Raicha and saying that :

> lkfdc • kÃus cksyk gS dh "vks gjkeh eukst jk;pk gekjs rtdqcZkuh ds tkuoj vMkdj eqlyekuksadks rdyhQ nsrk gSA lkfdc• kÃus vks yyhr tSu, 'ksjsdj odhy dks tSls mMk;k, ou [kre dh;k oSls eukst jk;pk dks • h [kre djus ds yh;s cksys gSA

Translated in English, it would read thus :

Saquib Bhai has said that "harami Manoj Raicha was creating trouble for the Muslims by getting the cattle brought for qurbani. Saquib bhai has told to finish Manoj Raicha in the same manner in which he had finished Lalit Jain and Advocate Sherekar."

On this, the applicant, according to this witness said as follows : vCck cgqr xqLls esa gS A oks eukst jk;pk dks fdlh Hkh omgkye esa [kre dj.ks ds fy;s dqN Hkh djks A vkxs dk es laHkky yqaxkA

Translated in English, it would read thus : "Abba is very much upset. Do anything to kill Manoj Raicha, under any circumstances. Whatever would happen, I will take care of."

According to witness "B", accused no.5 Tanveer and the others agreed with the applicant and accused no.4 Akif Nachan, and started talking about a plan to kill Manjo Raicha. Since this witness found this objectionable, he (and the person with whom he had gone) left the Dhaba after taking parcel. Even the statement of this witness was recorded under Section 164 of the Code, and though the version therein is not identical, in that statement also, he implicated the applicant.

15. The statement of witness "C" shows that on 3.8.2012, after the incident of firing, accused no.6 Abu Bakar, and accused no.2 Guddu, came near a hotel and at that time, Abu Bakar told (to whom is not mentioned in the statement, but it may be presumed that it was to this witness) that 'he had fired towards Manoj Raicha, but had missed, and when he told this fact to the accused no.4 Akif Nachan and the applicant Shamil Saquib Nachan, they were very angry with them (accused no.6 Abu Bakar and accused no.2 Guddu) and left by saying that what answer they would give to Saquib bhai - (accused no.1).' 16 Similar is the statement of witness "D".

16. Thus, the material against the applicant consists of two circumstances. The first is that that the witnesses have seen and heard him and other accused, conspiring to kill Manoj Raicha; and the second is that, after the incident, the actual shooter Abu Bakar, allegedly said that when he informed the applicant and the co-accused - accused no.4 Akif Nachan that the target was missed, the applicant and Akif Nachan were very angry and questioned as to what reply they would give to accused no.1 Saquib bhai.

17. Undoubtedly, the material found in the charge-sheet is to be taken at face value at this stage. However, taking the material at face value does not mean that it has to be accepted as gospel truth. It also does not mean that no evaluation of the material at all is to be done at this stage. Though the evaluation of the material, as if it is evidence adduced during the trial (on the basis of which the judgment of acquittal or conviction is to be given) cannot be done at this stage, a limited evaluation thereof for ascertaining the existence of a prima facie case would be unavoidable. This would be all the more necessary, when the case relates to offences punishable under any Special Act, which contains provisions curtailing the discretion of the courts of law in the matter of grant of bail. The observations made by Their Lordships of the Supreme Court of India in the case of Ranjitsing Brahmajeetsing Sharma v/s. State of Maharashtra and another, (2005) 5 Supreme Court Cases 294, indicate that in view of the drastic provisions curtailing the discretion of the court in the matter of bail, a little deeper probe into the matter - than is ordinarily done at the stage of bail may be necessary in such cases to avoid injustice. This is particularly so, because, the scheme of the relevant provisions in the M.C.O.C. Act clearly requires participation of superior police officers at various levels.

18. If the prosecution case, as a whole, is considered, doubts can legitimately be entertained about the truth of the details regarding actual occurrence. This, coupled with the manner in which the case is projected, makes it prudent to see whether this material is corroborated by any other material in the charge-sheet, before coming to a conclusion about the existence of a prima facie case against the applicant. It is because, all these statements, which are the only statements showing the involvement of the applicant in the alleged offences, have been recorded after the arrest of the applicant on 29.8.2012. A question legitimately arises about the basis on which the applicant came to be arrested before this information (which is admitted to be the only material available against the applicant). rt

According to the version of the applicant, as reflected in the bail application, he came to be arrested on 29.8.2012, when he had gone to the court to meet his father Saquib Nachan (accused no.1), who was being produced before the court of Magistrate on that day, for obtaining his remand. Under the circumstances, the possibility of these statements having been tailored after the arrest of the applicant cannot be altogether be ruled out, and therefore, it would be necessary to see whether this material is corroborated by some other material.

19. The learned APP submitted that the theory of a meeting at the Oye Punjabi Dhaba is corroborated by the CDRs in respect of the mobile telephone instruments belonging to the applicant and the other accused. According to him, the tower locations reflected in the CDRs show that the applicant was, at the material time, present at the spot i.e. at Oye Punjabi Dhaba, and was also present near the spot of incident, on the date of commission of the offence. In this context, the learned counsel for the applicant pointed out that the CDRs of the other accused, who were supposedly present at that time, however, did not support the theory of they being present at Oye Punjabi Dhaba. The learned APP could not controvert this and could not show from the CDRs of the other accused persons that they were present at Oye Punjabi Dhaba. Infact, the learned APP conceded that the tower location in respect of the mobile telephone instruments of the other accused does not show the presence of any of them at Oye Punjabi Dhaba, but contended that the mobile telephone instruments 'could have been given by the accused to someone else' and 'it might not have been with the accused persons at that time.' It is clear that, that the tower location reflected in the relevant CDRs does not support the theory of the other accused being present at the Oye Punjabi Dhaba was noticed by the trial court also, but no importance to that was attached on the ground that the mobile telephone instrument need not necessarily be with the holder or the subscriber, all the time. Though this is theoretically possible, there is no evidence that the mobile telephone instruments were parted with by the other accused. The prosecution cannot throw the weight of the tower location for supporting the theory of the applicant's presence at Oye Punjabi Dhaba, but at the same time, refuse to attach any weight to the same circumstance, when it is sought to be used by the accused for supporting the theory of they being elsewhere. Infact, that the CDRs of the other accused, who were allegedly present in Oye Punjabi Dhaba , show their presence elsewhere, is a factor which leads to serious doubt to say least - about the theory of conspiracy. I refrain myself from going further and discussing whether this would prove fatal to the theory of conspiracy, but I have no hesitation to record an observation - a rather guarded one - that the prosecution theory is certainly open to doubt.

20. There are a number of other aspects which need to be kept in mind. The FIR shows that the bullets had been fired from the right side of the car by which Manoj Raicha was travelling, and that, one bullet had entered through right side window and had passed through the car, after grazing his right upper arm. Undoubtedly, an injury was sustained by him, but it is not of such a nature, as can be opined medically to have been caused only by a fire arm. The shirt of Manoj Raicha was intact and no hole thereto was noticed. When this was pointed out to the court, the learned APP submitted that the sleeves Bhad been folded by Manoj Raicha, but certainly the matter would require further examination.

21. A perusal of the order passed by the trial court shows that it was argued before it that the statement attributed to witness "B" reproduced above, to the effect that "Abba bahut gusse mein hai. Abhi Ramzan ke baad mein Bakr-Id aanewali hai" is wrong and that not "Bakr-Id", but "Ramzan-Id" comes after the holy month of Ramzan. It was argued before the trial court that no Muslim would make such an erroneous statement, and therefore, it was doubtful whether such statement was indeed made. On this, the trial court reasoned that after Ramzan, after about two months thereafter, Bakr-Id also comes, and therefore, the statement that Bakr-Id will be coming after Ramzan would not be wrong. It is difficult to agree with this sort of reasoning. The time cycle goes on and on, and therefore, it is possible even to say that Ramzan-Id would come after Bakr-Id. However, this is not how persons express themselves ordinarily. I find substance in the contention raised in that regard. In my opinion, the prima facie unlikelihood of a Muslim saying that after Ramzan, Bakr-Id would come, ignoring the Ramzan-Id that would come before that, needs to be given due thought, and needs to be taken into consideration, as one of the factors relevant in judging the prima facie truth of the prosecution case.

22. The difficulty in granting bail arises primarily because of the application of the provisions of the M.C.O.C. Act and of the U.A.P. Act, to the facts of the present case, as both these statutes contain provisions curtailing the discretion of the court in the matter of grant of bail to a great extent. Coming to the provisions of the M.C.O.C. Act, Section 21(4) thereof, lays down that a person accused of having committed an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act, is, (where the Public Prosecutor opposes the application) is not to be released on bail, unless the court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offence, and that, he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail. Similarly, subsection (5) of Section 43-D of the U.A.P. Act also lays down that a person accused of having committed certain offences under the said Act, shall not be released on bail if there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accusation against such person is prima facie true. How such phrases, curtailing the discretion of the court in the matter of releasing a person on bail should be construed, needs to be ascertained from other relevant provisions in such statutes.

23. So far as the provisions of Section 21(4) of the M.C.O.C. Act are concerned, the authoritative pronouncement of the Supreme Court of India in the aforesaid case of Ranjitsing Sharma (supra), lays down how the restrictive phrase appearing therein is to be construed.

24. In the said case, Their Lordships of the Supreme Court of India, held that the restrictions imposed by Section 21(4) of the M.C.O.C. Act on the power of the courts cannot be pushed too far. It is not as if a person can be released on bail only if there would be no grounds for proceeding against him at all on the charge of an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act. The said provisions are required to be interpreted in a reasonable manner. They cannot be interpreted in such a manner so as to make the grant of bail impossible. It is not that the court is required to come to a positive finding that the applicant for bail is not guilty of an organized crime before grant of bail.

25. A careful analysis of the relevant provisions and the observations made by the Supreme Court of India in the aforesaid case of Ranjitsing Sharma (supra), lead to the following conclusion about the correct legal position in that regard. For enabling the court to exercise its discretion in favour of a person accused of having committed an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act, what is required is existence of reasonable grounds for believing that the applicant before the court is not guilty of an organized crime. The satisfaction that the "accused is not guilty" is not contemplated by the relevant provisions and what is required is the satisfaction that there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be not guilty. Again, the phrase "reasonable grounds" should not be confused with the phrase "sufficient grounds" It imports a lesser degree of satisfaction than "sufficient grounds." It cannot be lost sight of that the Special court would be entitled to discharge an accused if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. If the court forms an opinion, that there is ground for presuming that accused has committed an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act, a charge shall be framed against the accused. This is clear from the provisions of Section 9(4) of the M.C.O.C. Act, read with Sections 227 and 228 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It cannot - even remotely - be suggested that the special provisions regarding grant of bail in the M.C.O.C. Act are to be interpreted in such a manner, so as to mean that it is only when there would be no sufficient grounds for proceeding against an accused, that he shall be released on bail. If such a view is taken, no person who has been granted bail, can ever be proceeded against, in respect of an offence punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act. Rather, there would be no question of granting bail, and an accused would be discharged at that stage itself. Since this is not intended or contemplated while enacting the relevant provisions regarding bail, the special provisions are to be interpreted by keeping in mind that the phrase "reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offence" cannot be so construed as to make it irreconcilable with the existence of ground for presuming that he has committed such offence.

26. The restrictive provision under Section 43-D of the U.A.P. Act with respect to the grant of bail is not similar to the one contained in the M.C.O.C. Act, and has been worded differently. It contemplates that a person accused of having committed an offence punishable under Chapter IV and Chapter VI of the U.A.P. Act shall not be released on bail if there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accusation against such person is prima facie true. Perhaps, this phrase puts a greater restriction on the powers of the court than is put by the aforesaid provision of the M.C.O.C. Act. However, inspite of the difference in the phraseology, there would be no basic difference in the practical application of these provisions. All that these provisions lay down is that a person arrested on the accusation of having committed the offence contemplated by the said provisions should not be released on bail, if there would be a prima facie case of such offence against him. If a rational and reasonable doubt is felt in that regard, then the court would not be precluded from granting bail even in such cases. Moreover, judging the existence of a prima facie case at the stage of bail, would not be the same as judging the existence of a prima facie case for proceeding against an accused by framing a Charge.

27. It is too obvious that an accused would never be required to put forth a stronger case for bail, than that would be required for a discharge. The tests that are applied at the time of bail cannot be as rigorous as are applied while considering the discharge of an accused from a particular case. The position as to when an accused can be discharged has not been changed by the legislature in cases of the offences punishable under the M.C.O.C. Act and the U.A.P. Act, inspite of introducing provisions curtailing the discretion of the court in the matter of grant of bail - although only in the event of the application being opposed by the Public Prosecutor.

28. In this case, the applicability of the provisions of M.C.O.C. Act and of theU.A.P. Act, is highly doubtful. I have examined the "prior approval" and the sanction granted under Section 23 of the M.C.O.C. Act, and much can be said on the applicability of the M.C.O.C. Act to the facts of the present case. The applicant has been charged also of having committed an offence punishable under Section 16 of the U.A.P. Act, namely, for "terrorist act". Going by the definition of a "terrorist act" under Section 16 of the Act, whether the allegations levelled against the applicant can be brought within the purview of the relevant provision, is - to say the least - is extremely doubtful. It was initially suggested that the offence in question was committed for pecuniary gain. Later on, it was suggested that it had been committed with the object of promoting insurgency. The case, as put forth, is that the accused no.1 Saquib Nachan was angry because of the acts of Manoj Raicha and wanted to kill him to take revenge of the acts of Manoj Raicha in getting the cattle brought for qurbani taken charge of, and send to goushala. It is also suggested that actually the firing was done with the intention of causing rift between Hindus and Muslims and with the intention that there should be communal riots. There is substance in the contention of the learned counsel for the applicant that the motives and objectives alleged by the prosecution behind the act of firing at Manoj Raicha, which is the basis of the case, are conflicting and inconsistent. Infact, considering the nature of an organized crime and the mens rea requisite for the same, it is difficult to hold that the same act or acts would also fall within the definition of a "terrorist act", the mens rea requisite for which, would be quite different from that in case of an organized crime. However, the matter may be left at that for the present, as, in any case, on facts, and on a fair reading of the material against the applicant; and considering the same in the light of the entire prosecution case, there are certainly reasonable grounds for believing that the applicant is not guilty of any of the alleged offences.

29. The applicant is a student. He is 21 years old. There are no antecedents.

30. In my opinion, the applicant should be released on bail, subject to certain conditions.

31. The application is allowed.

32. The applicant is ordered to be released on bail in the sum of Rs.15,000/-, with one surety in the like amount, on the condition to report to the office of the Investigating agency on every alternate Saturday, till the disposal of the case against him. C

The applicant may deposit cash of Rs.15,000/- in lieu of surety.

(ABHAY M. THIPSAY, J.)

LATER ON AT 3.00 P.M. :

After the order was pronounced in the morning session, Mr.Gadkari, the learned APP who was not present then, mentioned the matter and prayed for stay on the operation of the order. The counsel for the applicant is not present. Under the circumstances, the prayer to stay the operation of the order is rejected.

****

Cross Citation : 2012 ALL MR (Cri.) 68

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Coram : R.C. CHAVAN, J.

Manmohar Laxman Gavandha .....Vs.... State of Maharashtara
Criminal Application No. 930 of 2011.
23rd November, 2011

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S. 438 – Anticipatory bail – Grant of – Offence of abetment to commit suicide and hurt - Applicant alleged to have beaten up victim for not sharing expenses of treatment– Dead body of victim found after eight days – There was a chit in pocket of victim alleging that applicant among others was respondents for victims suicide – Held, applicant is not required to be in custody for purpose of investigation into alleged offence – Anticipatory bail granted to applicant subject to conditions. (Para 2,3)

==========

CASE CITED:

PARA

Siddharam Satilingappa Mhetra Vs. State of Maharashtara Ans Ors, 2010 ALL SCR 2725 : Special Leave Petition (Cri.) No. 7615 of 2009 Dt. 2/12/2010 3

Mr. NITIN SEJPAL, Advocate , for the Applicant Smt. V.R. Bhosale . APP, for the Respondent, State.

JUDGMENT

. Heard the learned counsel for the respective parties.

2. This is an application for anticipatory bail by a person, who apprehends arrest in connection with FIR No.I-35 of 2011 for the offences punishable under Sections 306, 323, 506 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code registered with Jawahar Police Station. The victim was married to applicant's niece, Yogita and they were residing separately about one year prior to the incident. Yogita was not well. The applicant is alleged to have asked the victim to share expenses of treatment of Yogita and on this count is alleged to have beaten up the victim on 18th October, 2011. The victim was missing from 19th october, 2011 and his dead body was found on 26th October, 2011. There was a chit in the pocket of the victim which alleged that the applicant among others was responsible for the victim's suicide. The learned APP states that the chit has been sent to the hand writing expert. Even if the allegations are taken at face value, it is not clear as to how the applicant is required to be in custody for the purpose of investigation into alleged abetment to commit suicide by the applicant. Therefore, application is allowed.

In the event of arrest, applicant be released on bail on his furnishing P.R.Bond of Rs.20,000/- with one or more solvent sureties in the aggregate sum of Rs.20,000/- on the following conditions.

(i) The applicant shall report at the Jawahar police station on 25th November, 2011 at 11.00 a.m. and thereafter, as and when required by the investigating officer.

(ii) The applicant shall make himself available for interrogation by a police officer as and when required.

(iii) The applicant shall not, directly or indirectly make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer.

(iv) The applicant shall not leave India without the previous permission of the Court.

3. Criminal Application is disposed of. The order will remain in force till the trial is over with the only stipulation that if charge sheeted the applicant may furnish fresh bonds before the trial Court in view of the Judgment of the Supreme Court dated 2nd December, 2010 delivered in Special Leave Petition (Cri.) No.7615 of 2009 (Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre vs State of Maharashtra And Ors.).

****

Cross citation: 2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judges: G. S. Singhvi and H.L. Dattu, JJ.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO.2178 OF 2011 (Arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 5650 of 2011)

Sanjay Chandra ...Vs.... C.B.I.

==========

A) Cri. P.c. 439, 437, Bail – Bail is the Rule and Jail an exception – Accused entitled for presumption of innocence till he is convicted – constitutionally protected liberty of accused must be respected unless detention becomes necessary – If any accused is detained before conviction then it will put unnecessary burden on state to keep a person who is not proved guilty – Normally bail should be granted to accused – Apprehension of tampering of evidence without sound proof could not be accepted and this ground could not be considered in each case to deny the bail.

B) Discretion while granting bail – The Jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well settled principles and not in arbitrary manner- The law in regard to grant or refusal of bail is very well settled. The Court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. At the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken.

C) DISCRETION : Any order devoid of reasons would suffer from non-application of mind. In the case of Gudikatil Narasimhulu V. Public Prosecutor, (1978) 1 SCC 240, V.R. Krishna Iyer, J., sitting as Chamber Judge, Enunciated the principles of bail thus:

> "3. What, then, is "judicial discretion" in this bail context ? In the elegant words of Benjamin Cardozo : "The Judge, even when he is free, is still not wholly free. He is not to innovate at Pleasure. He is not a knight-errant roaming at will in pursuit of his own ideal of beauty or of goodness. He is to draw his inspiration from consecrated principles. He is not to yield to spasmodic sentiment, to vague and unregulated benevolence. He is to exercise a discretion informed by tradition, methodized by analogy, disciplined by system, and subordinated to "the primordial necessity of order in the social life". Wide enough in all conscience is the field of discretion that remain.

D) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 – Ss. 437 and 439 – Prejudices which may be avoided in deciding bail matters – Public Scams, scandal and heinous offences – Public sentiments and disapproval of alleged misconduct – Bail, held, ought not be denied to teach lesson to a person whose offence is yet to be proved – Conditional bail, is a solution in such types of cases.

E) The approach adopted by the trial court and affirmed by the High Court, is a denial of the whole basis of the Indian system of law and normal rule of bail system. It transcends respect for the requirement that a man shall be considered innocent until he is found guilty. If such power is recognized, then it may lead to chaotic situation and would jeopardize the personal liberty of an individual. Bail is the rule and committal to jail an exception. Refuse of bail is a restriction on the personal liberty of the individual guaranteed under Article 21 of the constitution. When there is a delay in trail, bail should be granted to the accused.

F) Cr. P.C. Sec. 437, 439 – Change in circumstances – Pre-Charge and post – charge stages – SLP before supreme court dismissed before farming of charges – Bail application filed after framing charges – Held, is change in circumstances – Earlier order is no bar in granting bail to the appellant.

(para 19)

==========

J U D G M E N T

H.L. DATTU, J.

1) Leave granted in all the Special Leave Petitions.

2) These appeals are directed against the common Judgment and Order of the learned Single Judge of the High Court of Delhi, dated 23rd May 2011 in Bail Application No. 508/2011, Bail Application No. 509/2011 & Crl. M.A. 653/2011, Bail Application No. 510/2011, Bail Application No. 511/2011 and Bail Application No. 512/2011, by which the learned Single Judge refused to grant bail to the accused-appellants. These cases were argued together and submitted for decision as one case.

3) The offence alleged against each of the accused, as noticed by the Ld. Special Judge, CBI, New Delhi, who rejected bail applications of the appellants, vide his order dated 20.4.2011, is extracted for easy reference

Sanjay Chandra (A7) in Crl. Appeal No. 2178 of 2011 [arising out of SLP (Crl.)No.5650 of 2011]:

"6. The allegations against accused Sanjay Chandra are that he entered into criminal conspiracy with accused A. Raja, R.K. Chandolia and other accused persons during September 2009 to get UAS licence for providing telecom services to otherwise an ineligible company to get UAS licences. He, as Managing Director of M/s Unitech Wireless (Tamil Nadu) Limited, was looking after the business of telecom through 8 group companies of Unitech Limited. The first-come-first served procedure of allocation of UAS Licences and spectrum was manipulated by the accused persons in order to benefit M/s Unitech Group Companies. The cutoff date of 25.09.2007 was decided by accused public servants of Dot primarily to allow consideration of Unitech group applications for UAS licenses. The Unitech Group Companies were in business of realty and even the objects of companies were not changed to 'telecom' and registered as required before applying. The companies were ineligible to get the licences till the grant of UAS licences. The Unitech Group was almost last within the applicants considered for allocation of UAS licences and as per existing policy of first-come-first-served, no licence could be issued in as many as 10 to 13 circles where sufficient spectrum was not available. The Unitech companies got benefit of spectrum in as many as 10 circles over the other eligible applicants. Accused Sanjay Chandra, in conspiracy with accused public servants, was aware of the whole design of the allocation of LOIs and on behalf of the Unitech group companies was ready with the drafts of Rs. 1658 crores as early as 10th October, 2007."

Vinod Goenka (A5) in Crl. Appeal No. 2179 of 2011 [arising out of SLP(Crl)No.5902 of 2011] :

"5.The allegations against accused Vinod Goenka are that he was one of the directors of M/s Swan Telecom (P) Limited in addition to accused Shahid Usman Balwa w.e.f. 01.10.2007 and acquired majority stake on 18.10.2007 in M/s Swan Telecom (P) Limited (STPL) through DB Infrastructure (P) Limited. Accused Vinod Goenka carried forward the fraudulent applications of STPL dated 02.03.2007 submitted by previous management despite knowing the fact that STPL was ineligible company to get UAS licences by virtue of clause 8 of UASL guidelines 2005. Accused Vinod Goenka was an associate of accused Shahid Usman Balwa to create false documents including Board Minutes of M/s Giraffe Consultancy (P) Limited fraudulently showing transfer of its shares by the companies of Reliance ADA Group during February 2007 itself. Accused/applicant in conspiracy with accused Shahid Usman Balwa concealed or furnished false information to Dot regarding shareholding pattern of STPL as on the date of application thereby making STPL an eligible company to get licence on the date of application, that is, 02.03.2007. Accused/applicant was an overall beneficiary with accused Shahid Usman Balwa for getting licence and spectrum in 13 telecom circles. 12. Investigation has also disclosed pursuant to TRAI recommendations dated 28.08.2007 when M/s Reliance Communications Ltd. got the GSM spectrum under the Dual Technology policy, accused Gautam Doshi, Hari Nairand Surendra Pipara transferred the control of M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd., and said structure of holding companies, to accused Shahid Balwa and Vinod Goenka. In this manner they transferred a company which was otherwise ineligible for grant of UAS license on the date of application, to the said two accused persons belonging to Dynamix Balwa (DB) group and thereby facilitated them to cheat the DoT by getting issued UAS Licences despite the ineligibility on the date of application and till 18.10.2007.

13. Investigation has disclosed that accused Shahid Balwa and Vinod Goenka joined M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. and M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. as directors on 01.10.2007 and DB group acquired the majority stake in TTPL/ M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. (STPL) on 18.10.2007. On 18.10.2007 a fresh equity of 49.90 lakh shares was allotted to M/s DB Infrastructure Pvt. Ltd. Therefore on 01.10.2007, and thereafter, accused Shahid Balwa and Vinod Goenka were incharge of, and were responsible to, the company M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. for the conduct of business. As such on this date, majority shares of the company were held by D.B. Group."

Gautam Doshi (A9), Surendra Pipara (A10) and Hari Nair (A 11) in Crl. Appeal Nos.2180,2182 & 2181 of 2011 [arising out of SLP (Crl) Nos. 6190,6315 & 6288 of 2011] :

"7. It is further alleged that in January-February, 2007 accused Gautam Doshi, Surendra Pipara and Hari Nath in furtherance of their common intention to cheat the Department of Tele-communications, structured/created net worth of M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd., out of funds arranged from M/s Reliance Telecom Ltd. or its associates, for applying to Dot for UAS Licenses in 13 circles, where M/s Reliance Telecom Ltd. had no GSM spectrum, in a manner that its associations with M/s Reliance Telecom Ltd. may not be detected, so that DOT could not reject its application on the basis of clause 8 of the UASL Guidelines dated 14.12.2005.

8. In pursuance of the said common intention of accused persons, they structured the stake-holding of M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. in a manner that only 9.9% equity was held by M/s Reliance Telecom Ltd. (RTL) and rest 90.1% was shown as held by M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. (later known as M/s Tiger Trustees Pvt. Ltd. – TTPL), although the entire company was held by the Reliance ADA Group of companies through the funds raised from M/s Reliance Telecom Ltd. etc.

9. It was further alleged that M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. (STPL) was, at the time of application dated 02.03.2007, an associate of M/s Reliance ADA Group / M/s Reliance Communications Limited / M/s Reliance Telecom Limited, having existing UAS Licenses in all telecom circles. Investigations have also disclosed that M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd., which held majority stake (more than 90%) in M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. (STPL), was also an associate company of Reliance ADA Group. Both the companies has not business history and were activated solely for the purpose of applying for UAS Licenses in 13 telecom circles, where M/s Reliance Telecom Ltd. did not have GSM spectrum and M/s Reliance Communications Ltd. had already applied for dual technology spectrum for these circles. Investigation has disclosed that the day to day affairs of M/s Swan Telecom Pvt.

Ltd. and M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. were managed by the said three accused persons either themselves or through other officers/consultants related to the Reliance ADA group. Commercial decisions of M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. and M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. were also taken by these accused persons of Reliance ADA group. Material inter-company transactions (bank transactions) of M/s Reliance Communications/ M/s Reliance Telecommunications Ltd. and M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. (STPL) and M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. were carried out by same group of persons as per the instructions of said accused Gautam Doshi and Hari Nair.

10. Investigations about the holding structure of M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. has revealed that the aforesaid accused persons also structured two other companies i.e. M/s Zebra Consultancy Private Limited & M/s Parrot Consultants Private Limited. Till April, 2007, by when M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd. applied for telecom licenses, 50% shares of M/s Zebra Consultancy Private Limited & M/s Parrot Consultants Private Limited, were purchased by M/s Tiger Traders Pvt. Ltd. Similarly, 50% of equity shares of M/s Parrot Consultants Private Limited & M/s Tiger Traders Private Limited were purchased by M/s Zebra Consultancy Private Limited. Also, 50% of equity shares of M/s Zebra Consultancy Private Limited and M/s Tiger Traders Private Limited were purchased by M/s Parrot Consultants Private Limited. These 3 companies were, therefore, cross holding each other in an interlocking structure w.e.f. March 2006 till 4th April, 2007. 11. It is further alleged that accused Gautam Doshi, Surendra Pipara and Hari Nair instead of withdrawing the fraudulent applications preferred in the name of M/s Swan Telecom (P) Limited, which was not eligible at all, allowed the transfer of control of that company to the Dynamix Balwa Group and thus, enabled perpetuating and (sic.) illegality. It is alleged that TRAI in its recommendations dated 28.08.2007 recommended the use of dual technology by UAS Licencees. Due to this reason M/s Reliance Communications Limited, holding company of M/s Reliance Telecom Limited, became eligible to get GSM spectrum in telecom circles for which STPL had applied. Consequently, having management control of STPL was of no use for the applicant/accused persons and M/s Reliance Telecom Limited. Moreover, the transfer of management of STPL to DB Group and sale of equity held by it to M/s Delphi Investments (P) Limited, Mauritius, M/s Reliance Telecom Limited has earned a profit of around Rs. 10 crores which otherwise was not possible if they had withdrawn the applications. M/s Reliance Communications Limited also entered into agreement with M/s Swan Telecom (P) Limited for sharing its telecom infrastructure. It is further alleged that the three accused persons facilitated the new management of M/s Swan Telecom (P) Limited to get UAS licences on the basis of applications filed by the former management. It is further alleged that M/s Swan Telecom (P) Limited on the date of application, that is, 02.03.2007 was an associate company of Reliance ADA group, that is, M/s Reliance Communications Limited/ M/s Reliance Telecom Limited and therefore, ineligible for UAS licences.

12. Investigation has also disclosed pursuant to TRAI recommendations dated 28.08.2007 when M/s Reliance Communications Ltd. got the GSM spectrum under the Dual Technology policy, accused Gautam Doshi, Hari Nair and Surendra Pipara transferred the control of M/s Swan Telecom Pvt. Ltd., and said structure of holding companies, to accused Shahid

Balwa and Vinod Goenka. In this manner they transferred a company which was otherwise ineligible for grant of UAS license on the date of application, to the said two accused persons belonging to Dynamix Balwa (DB) group and thereby facilitated them to cheat the DoT by getting issued UAS Licences despite the ineligibility on the date of application and till 18.10.2007."

4) The Special Judge, CBI, New Delhi, rejected Bail Applications filed by the appellants by his order dated 20.04.2011. The appellants moved the High Court by filing applications under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (in short, "Cr. P.C."). The same came to be rejected by the learned Single Judge by his order dated 23.05.2011. Aggrieved by the same, the appellants are before us in these appeals.

5) Shri. Ram Jethmalani, Shri. Mukul Rohatgi, Shri Soli J. Sorabjee and Shri. Ashok H. Desai, learned senior counsel appeared for the appellants and Shri. Harin P. Raval, learned Additional Solicitor General, appears for the respondent-CBI.

6) Shri. Ram Jethmalani, learned senior counsel appearing for the appellant Sanjay Chandra, would urge that the impugned Judgment has not appreciated the basic rule laid down by this Court that grant of bail is the rule and its denial is the exception. Shri. Jethmalani submitted that if there is any apprehension of the accused of absconding from trial or tampering with the witnesses, then it is justified for the Court to deny bail. The learned senior counsel would submit that the accused has cooperated with the investigation throughout and that his behavior has been exemplary. He would further submit that the appellant was not arrested during the investigation, as there was no threat from him of tampering with the witnesses. He would submit that the personal liberty is at a very high pedestal in our Constitutional system, and the same cannot be meddled with in a causal manner. He would assail the impugned Judgment stating that the Ld. Judge did not apply his mind, and give adequate reasons before rejecting bail, as is required by the legal norms set down by this Court. Shri. Jethmalani further contends that it was only after the appellants appeared in the Court in pursuance of summons issued, they were made to apply for bail, and, thereafter, denied bail and sent to custody. The learned senior counsel states that the trial Judge does not have the power to send a person, who he has summoned in pursuance of Section 87 Cr.P.C to judicial custody. The only power that the trial Judge had, he would contend, was to ask for a bond as provided for in Section 88 Cr.P.C. to ensure his appearance. Shri. Jethmalani submits that when a person appeared in pursuance of a bond, he was a free man, and such a free man cannot be committed to prison by making him to apply for bail and thereafter, denying him the same. Shri. Jethmalani further submits that if it was the intention of the Legislature to make a person, who appears in pursuance of summons to apply for bail, it would have been so legislated in Section 88 Cr. P. C. The learned senior counsel assailed the Judgment of the Delhi High Court in the 'Court on its own motion v. CBI', 2004 (I) JCC 308, by which the High Court gave directions to Criminal Courts to call upon the accused who is summoned to appear to apply for bail, and then decide on the merits of the bail application. He would state that the High Court has ignored even the CBI Manual before issuing these directions, which provided for bail to be granted to the accused, except in the event of there being commission of heinous crime. The learned senior counsel would also argue that it was an error to have a "rolled up charge", as recognized by the Griffiths' case (R vs. Griffiths and Ors., (1966) 1 Q.B. 589). Shri.Jethmalani submitted that there is not even a prima facie case against the accused and would make references to the charge sheet and the statement of several witnesses. He would emphatically submit that none of the ingredients of the offences charged with were stated in the charge sheet. He would further contend that even if, there is a prima facie case, the rule is still bail, and not jail, as per the dicta of this Court in several cases.

7) Shri. Mukul Rohatgi, learned senior counsel appearing for the appellant Vinod Goenka, while adopting the arguments of Shri. Jethmalani, would further supplement by arguing that the Ld. Trial Judge erred in making the persons, who appeared in pursuance of the summons, apply for bail and then denying the same, and ordering for remand in judicial custody. Shri. Rohatgi would further contend that the gravity of the offence charged with, is to be determined by the maximum sentence prescribed by the Statute and not by any other standard or measure. In other words, the learned senior counsel would submit that the alleged amount involved in the so-called Scam is not the determining factor of the gravity of the offence, but the maximum punishment prescribed for the offence. He would state that the only bar for bail pending trial in Section 437 is for those persons who are charged with offences punishable with life or death, and there is no such bar for those persons who were charged with offences with maximum punishment of seven years. Shri. Rohatgi also cited some case laws.

8) Shri. Ashok H. Desai, learned senior counsel appearing for the appellants Hari Nair and Surendra Pipara, adopted the principal arguments of Shri.Jethmalani. In addition, Shri. Desai would submit that a citizen of this country, who is charged with a criminal offence, has the right to be enlarged on bail. Unless there is a clear necessity for deprivation of his liberty, a person should not be remanded to judicial custody. Shri. Desai would submit that the Court should bear in mind that such custody is not punitive in nature, but preventive, and must be opted only when the charges are serious. Shri. Desai would further submit that the power of the High Court and this Court is not limited by the operation of Section 437. He would further contend that Surendra Pipara deserves to be released on bail in view of his serious health conditions.

9) Shri. Soli J. Sorabjee, learned senior counsel appearing for Gautam Doshi, adopted the principal arguments of Shri. Jethmalani. Shri. Sorabjee would assail the finding of the Learned Judge of the High Court in the impugned Judgment that the mere fact that the accused were not arrested during the investigation was proof of their influence in the society, and hence, there was a reasonable apprehension that they would tamper with the evidence if enlarged on bail. Shri. Sorabjee would submit that if this reasoning is to be accepted, then bail is to be denied in each and every criminal case that comes before the Court. The learned senior counsel also highlighted that the accused had no criminal antecedents.

10) Shri. Haren P. Raval, the learned Additional Solicitor General, in his reply, would submit that the offences that are being charged, are of the nature that the economic fabric of the country is brought at stake. Further, the learned ASG would state that the quantum of punishment could not be the only determinative factor for the magnitude of an offence. He would state that one of the relevant considerations for the grant of bail is the interest of the society at large as opposed to the personal liberty of the accused, and that the Court must not lose sight of the former. He would submit that in the changing circumstances and scenario, it was in the interest of the society for the Court to decline bail to the appellants. Shri. Raval would further urge that consistency is the norm of this Court and that there was no reason or change in circumstance as to why this Court should take a different view from the order of 20th June 2011 in Sharad Kumar Etc. v. Central Bureau of Investigation [in SLP (Crl) No. 4584- 4585 of 2011] rejecting bail to some of the co accused in the same case. Shri. Raval would further state that the investigation in these cases is monitored by this Court and the trial is proceeding on a day-to-day basis and that there is absolutely no delay on behalf of the prosecuting agency in completing the trial. Further, he would submit that the appellants, having cooperated with the investigation, is no ground for grant of bail, as they were expected to cooperate with the investigation as provided by the law. He would further submit that the test to enlarge an accused on bail is whether there is a reasonable apprehension of tampering with the evidence, and that there is an apprehension of threat to some of the witnesses. The learned ASG would further submit that there is more reason now for the accused not to be enlarged on bail, as they now have the knowledge of the identity of the witnesses, who are the employees of the accused, and there is an apprehension that the witnesses may be tampered with. The learned ASG would state that Section 437 of the Cr.P.C. uses the word "appears", and, therefore, that the argument of the learned senior counsel for the appellants that the power of the trial Judge with regard to a person summoned under Section 87 is controlled by Section 88 is incorrect. Shri. Raval also made references to the United Nations Convention on Corruption and the Report on the Reforms in the Criminal Justice System by Justice Mali math, which, we do not think, is necessary to go into. The learned ASG also relied on a few decisions of this Court, and the same will be dealt with in the course of the judgment. On a query from the Bench, the learned ASG would submit that in his opinion, bail should be denied in all cases of corruption which pose a threat to the economic fabric of the country, and that the balance should tilt in favour of the public interest.

11) In his reply, Shri. Jethmalani would submit that as the presumption of innocence is the privilege of every accused, there is also a presumption that the appellants would not tamper with the witnesses if they are enlarged on bail, especially in the facts of the case, where the appellants have cooperated with the investigation. In recapitulating his submissions, the learned senior counsel contended that there are two principles for the grant of bail – firstly, if there is no prima facie case, and secondly, even if there is a prima facie case, if there is no reasonable apprehension of tampering with the witnesses or evidence or absconding from the trial, the accused are entitled to grant of bail pending trial. He would submit that since both the conditions are satisfied in this case, the appellants should be granted bail.

12) Let us first deal with a minor issue canvassed by Mr. Raval, learned ASG. It is submitted that this Court has refused to entertain the Special Leave Petition filed by one of the co-accused [Sharad Kumar Vs. CBI (supra)] and, therefore, there is no reason or change in the circumstance to take a different view in the case of the appellants who are also charge- sheeted for the same offence. We are not impressed by this argument. In the aforesaid petition, the petitioner was before this Court before framing of charges by the Trial Court. Now the charges are framed and the trial has commenced. We cannot compare the earlier and the present proceedings and conclude that there are no changed circumstances and reject these petitions.

13) The appellants are facing trial in respect of the offences under Sections 420-B, 468, 471 and 109 of Indian Penal Code and Section 13(2) read with 13(i)(d) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. Bail has been refused first by the Special Judge, CBI, New Delhi and subsequently, by the High Court. Both the courts have listed the factors, on which they think, are relevant for refusing the Bail applications filed by the applicants as seriousness of the charge; the nature of the evidence in support of the charge; the likely sentence to be imposed upon conviction; the possibility of interference with witnesses; the objection of the prosecuting authorities; possibility of absconding from justice.

14) In bail applications, generally, it has been laid down from the earliest times that the object of bail is to secure the appearance of the accused person at his trial by reasonable amount of bail. The object of bail is neither punitive nor preventative. Deprivation of liberty must be considered a punishment, unless it can be required to ensure that an accused person will stand his trial when called upon. The courts owe more than verbal respect to the principle that punishment begins after conviction, and that every man is deemed to be innocent until duly tried and duly found guilty. From the earliest times, it was appreciated that detention in custody pending completion of trial could be a cause of great hardship. From time to time, necessity demands that some un-convicted persons should be held in custody pending trial to secure their attendance at the trial but in such cases, 'necessity' is the operative test.

In this country, it would be quite contrary to the concept of personal liberty enshrined in the Constitution that any person should be punished in respect of any matter, upon which, he has not been convicted or that in any circumstances, he should be deprived of his liberty upon only the belief that he will tamper with the witnesses if left at liberty, save in the most extraordinary circumstances. Apart from the question of prevention being the object of a refusal of bail, one must not lose sight of the fact that any imprisonment before conviction has a substantial punitive content and it would be improper for any Court to refuse bail as a mark of disapproval of former conduct whether the accused has been convicted for it or not or to refuse bail to an un-convicted person for the purpose of giving him a taste of imprisonment as a lesson.

15) In the instant case, as we have already noticed that the "pointing finger of accusation" against the appellants is 'the seriousness of the charge'. The offences alleged are economic offences which has resulted in loss to the State exchequer. Though, they contend that there is possibility of the appellants tampering witnesses, they have not placed any material in support of the allegation. In our view, seriousness of the charge is, no doubt, one of the relevant considerations while considering bail applications but that is not the only test or the factor : The other factor that also requires to be taken note of is the punishment that could be imposed after trial and conviction, both under the Indian Penal Code and Prevention of Corruption Act. Otherwise, if the former is the only test, we would not be balancing the Constitutional Rights but rather "recalibration of the scales of justice." The provisions of Cr.P.C. confer discretionary jurisdiction on Criminal Courts to grant bail to accused pending trial or in appeal against convictions, since the jurisdiction is discretionary, it has to be exercised with great care and caution by balancing valuable right of liberty of an individual and the interest of the society in general. In our view, the reasoning adopted by the learned District Judge, which is affirmed by the High Court, in our opinion, a denial of the whole basis of our system of law and normal rule of bail system. It transcends respect for the requirement that a man shall be considered innocent until he is found guilty. If such power is recognized, then it may lead to chaotic situation and would jeopardize the personal liberty of an individual. This Court, in Kalyan Chandra Sarkar Vs. Rajesh Ranjan- (2005) 2 SCC 42, observed that

"under the criminal laws of this country, a person accused of offences which are non-bailable, is liable to be detained in custody during the pendency of trial unless he is enlarged on bail in accordance with law. Such detention cannot be questioned as being violative of Article 21 of the Constitution, since the same is authorized by law. But even persons accused of nonbailable offences are entitled to bail if the Court concerned comes to the conclusion that the prosecution has failed to establish a prima facie case against him and/or if the Court is satisfied by reasons to be recorded that in spite of the existence of prima facie case, there is need to release such accused on bail, where fact situations require it to do so."

16) This Court, time and again, has stated that bail is the rule and committal to jail an exception. It is also observed that refusal of bail is a restriction on the personal liberty of the individual guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution. In the case of State of Rajasthan v. Balchand, (1977) 4 SCC 308, this Court opined:

"2. The basic rule may perhaps be tersely put as bail, not jail, except where there are circumstances suggestive of fleeing from justice or thwarting the course of justice or creating other troubles in the shape of repeating offences or intimidating witnesses and the like, by the petitioner who seeks enlargement on bail from the Court. We do not intend to be exhaustive but only illustrative.

3. It is true that the gravity of the offence involved is likely to induce the petitioner to avoid the course of justice and must weigh with us when considering the question of jail. So also the heinousness of the crime. Even so, the record of the petitioner in this case is that, while he has been on bail throughout in the trial court and he was released after the judgment of the High Court, there is nothing to suggest that he has abused the trust placed in him by the court; his social circumstances also are not so unfavourable in the sense of his being a desperate character or unsocial element who is likely to betray the confidence that the court may place in him to turn up to take justice at the hands of the court. He is stated to be a young man of 27 years with a family to maintain. The circumstances and the social milieu do not militate against the petitioner being granted bail at this stage. At the same time any possibility of the absconsion or evasion or other abuse can be taken care of by a direction that the petitioner will report himself before the police station at Baren once every fortnight."

(17) In the case of Gudikanti Narasimhulu v. Public Prosecutor, (1978) 1 SCC 240, V.R. Krishna Iyer, J., sitting as Chamber Judge, enunciated the principles of bail thus:

"3. What, then, is "judicial discretion" in this bail context? In the elegant words of Benjamin Cardozo: "The Judge, even when he is free, is still not wholly free. He is not to innovate at pleasure. He is not a knight-errant roaming at will in pursuit of his own ideal of beauty or of goodness. He is to draw his inspiration from consecrated principles. He is not to yield to spasmodic sentiment, to vague and unregulated benevolence. He is to exercise a discretion informed by tradition, methodized by analogy, disciplined by system, and subordinated to "the primordial necessity of order in the social life". Wide enough in all conscience is the field of discretion that remains." Even so it is useful to notice the tart terms of Lord Camden that "the discretion of a Judge is the law of tyrants: it is always unknown, it is different in different men; it is casual, and depends upon constitution, temper and passion. In the best, it is oftentimes caprice; in the worst, it is every vice, folly and passion to which human nature is liable...." Perhaps, this is an overly simplistic statement and we must remember the constitutional focus in Articles 21 and 19 before following diffuse observations and practices in the English system. Even in England there is a growing awareness that the working of the bail system requires a second look from the point of view of correct legal criteria and sound principles, as has been pointed out by Dr Bottomley.

6. Let us have a glance at the pros and cons and the true principle around which other relevant factors must revolve. When the case is finally disposed of and a person is sentenced to incarceration, things stand on a different footing. We are concerned with the penultimate stage and the principal rule to guide release on bail should be to secure the presence of the applicant who seeks to be liberated, to take judgment and serve sentence in the event of the Court punishing him with imprisonment. In this perspective, relevance of considerations is regulated by their nexus with the likely absence of the applicant for fear of a severe sentence, if such be plausible in the case. As Erle. J. indicated, when the crime charged (of which a conviction has been sustained) is of the highest magnitude and the punishment of it assigned by law is of extreme severity, the Court may reasonably presume, some evidence warranting, that no amount of bail would secure the presence of the convict at the stage of judgment, should he be enlarged. Lord Campbell, C.J. concurred in this approach in that case and Coleridge J. set down the order of priorities as follows: "I do not think that an accused party is detained in custody because of his guilt, but because there are sufficient probable grounds for the charge against him as to make it proper that he should be tried, and because the detention is necessary to ensure his appearance at trial .... It is a very important element in considering whether the party, if admitted to bail, would appear to take his trial; and I think that in coming to a determination on that point three elements will generally be found the most important: the charge, the nature of the evidence by which it is supported, and the punishment to which the party would be liable if convicted. In the present case, the charge is that of wilful murder; the evidence contains an admission by the prisoners of the truth of the charge, and the punishment of the offence is, by law, death."

7. It is thus obvious that the nature of the charge is the vital factor and the nature of the evidence also is pertinent. The punishment to which the party may be liable, if convicted or conviction is confirmed, also bears upon the issue.

8. Another relevant factor is as to whether the course of justice would be thwarted by him who seeks the benignant jurisdiction of the Court to be freed for the time being.

9. Thus the legal principles and practice validate the Court considering the likelihood of the applicant interfering with witnesses for the prosecution or otherwise polluting the process of justice. It is not only traditional but rational, in this context, to enquire into the antecedents of a man who is applying for bail to find whether he has a bad record – particularly a record which suggests that he is likely to commit serious offences while on bail. In regard to habituals, it is part of criminological history that a thoughtless bail order has enabled the bailee to exploit the opportunity to inflict further crimes on the members of society. Bail discretion, on the basis of evidence about the criminal record of a defendant is therefore not an exercise in irrelevance.

13. Viewed from this perspective, we gain a better insight into the rules of the game. When a person, charged with a grave offence, has been acquitted at a stage, has the intermediate acquittal pertinence to a bail plea when the appeal before this Court pends? Yes, it has. The panic which might prompt the accused to jump the gauntlet of justice is less, having enjoyed the confidence of the Court's verdict once. Concurrent holdings of guilt have the opposite effect. Again, the ground for denial of provisional release becomes weaker when the fact stares us in the face that a fair finding — if that be so — of innocence has been recorded by one Court. It may not be conclusive, for the judgment of acquittal may be ex facie wrong, the likelihood of desperate reprisal, if enlarged, may be a deterrent and his own safety may be more in prison than in the vengeful village where feuds have provoked the violent offence. It depends. Antecedents of the man and sociogeographical circumstances have a bearing only from this angle. Police exaggerations of prospective misconduct of the accused, if enlarged, must be soberly sized up lest danger of excesses and injustice creep subtly into the discretionary curial technique. Bad record and police prediction of criminal prospects to invalidate the bail plea are admissible in principle but shall not stampede the Court into a complacent refusal."

(18) In Gurcharan Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), (1978) 1 SCC 118, this Court took the view: "22. In other non-bailable cases the Court will exercise its judicial discretion in favour of granting bail subject to subsection

(3) of Section 437 Cr PC if it deems necessary to act under it. Unless exceptional circumstances are brought to the notice of the Court which may defeat proper investigation and a fair trial, the Court will not decline to grant bail to a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life. It is also clear that when an accused is brought before the Court of a Magistrate with the allegation against him of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life, he has ordinarily no option in the matter but to refuse bail subject, however, to the first proviso to Section 437(1) CrPC and in a case where the Magistrate entertains a reasonable belief on the materials that the accused has not been guilty of such an offence. This will, however, be an extraordinary occasion since there will be some materials at the stage of initial arrest, for the accusation or for strong suspicion of commission by the person of such an offence.

24. Section 439(1) CrPC of the new Code, on the other hand, confers special powers on the High Court or the Court of Session in respect of bail. Unlike under Section 437(1) there is no ban imposed under Section 439(1), Cr PC against granting of bail by the High Court or the Court of Session to persons accused of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life. It is, however, legitimate to suppose that the High Court or the Court of Session will be approached by an accused only after he has failed before the Magistrate and after the investigation has progressed throwing light on the evidence and circumstances implicating the accused. Even so, the High Court or the Court of Session will have to exercise its judicial discretion in considering the question of granting of bail under Section 439(1) CrPC of the new Code. The overriding considerations in granting bail to which we adverted to earlier and which are common both in the case of Section 437(1) and Section 439(1) CrPC of the new Code are the nature and gravity of the circumstances in which the offence is committed; the position and the status of the accused with reference to the victim and the witnesses; the likelihood, of the accused fleeing from justice; of repeating the offence; of jeopardising his own life being faced with a grim prospect of possible conviction in the case; of tampering with witnesses; the history of the case as well as of its investigation and other relevant grounds which, in view of so many valuable factors, cannot be exhaustively set out."

19) In Babu Singh v. State of U.P., (1978) 1 SCC 579, this Court opined: "8. The Code is cryptic on this topic and the Court prefers to be tacit, be the order custodial or not. And yet, the issue is one of liberty, justice, public safety and burden on the public treasury, all of which insist that a developed jurisprudence of bail is integral to a socially sensitized judicial process. As Chamber Judge in this summit Court I had to deal with this uncanalised case-flow, ad hoc response to the docket being the flickering candle light. So it is desirable that the subject is disposed of on basic principle, not improvised brevity draped as discretion. Personal liberty, deprived when bail is refused, is too precious a value of our constitutional system recognised under Article 21 that the curial power to negate it is a great trust exercisable, not casually but judicially, with lively concern for the cost to the individual and the community. To glamorise impressionistic orders as discretionary may, on occasions, make a litigative gamble decisive of a fundamental right. After all, personal liberty of an accused or convict is fundamental, suffering lawful eclipse only in terms of "procedure established by law".

The last four words of Article 21 are the life of that human right.

16. Thus the legal principle and practice validate the Court considering the likelihood of the applicant interfering with witnesses for the prosecution or otherwise polluting the process of justice. It is not only traditional but rational, in this context, to enquire into the antecedents of a man who is applying for bail to find whether he has a bad record—particularly a record which suggests that he is likely to commit serious offences while on bail. In regard to habituals, it is part of criminological history that a thoughtless bail order has enabled the bailee to exploit the opportunity to inflict further crimes on the members of society. Bail discretion, on the basis of evidence about the criminal record of a defendant, is therefore not an exercise in irrelevance.

17. The significance and sweep of Article 21 make the deprivation of liberty a matter of grave concern and permissible only when the law authorizing it is reasonable, even-handed and geared to the goals of community good and State necessity spelt out in Article 19. Indeed, the considerations I have set out as criteria are germane to the constitutional proposition I have deduced. Reasonableness postulates intelligent care and predicates that deprivation of freedom by refusal of bail is not for punitive purpose but for the bi-focal interests of justice—to the individual involved and society affected.

18. We must weigh the contrary factors to answer the test of reasonableness, subject to the need for securing the presence of the bail applicant. It makes sense to assume that a man on bail has a better chance to prepare or present his case than one remanded in custody. And if public justice is to be promoted, mechanical detention should be demoted. In the United States, which has a constitutional perspective close to ours, the function of bail is limited, "community roots" of the applicant are stressed and, after the Vera Foundation's Manhattan Bail Project, monetary surety ship is losing ground. The considerable public expense in keeping in custody where no danger of disappearance or disturbance can arise, is not a negligible consideration. Equally important is the deplorable condition, verging on the inhuman, of our sub-jails, that the unrewarding cruelty and expensive custody of avoidable incarceration makes refusal of bail unreasonable and a policy favouring release justly sensible.

20. Viewed from this perspective, we gain a better insight into the rules of the game. When a person, charged with a grave offence, has been acquitted at a stage, has the intermediate acquittal pertinence to a bail plea when the appeal before this Court pends? Yes, it has. The panic which might prompt the accused to jump the gauntlet of justice is less, having enjoyed the confidence of the Court's verdict once. Concurrent holdings of guilt have the opposite effect. Again, the ground for denial of provisional release becomes weaker when the fact stares us in the face that a fair finding — if that be so — of innocence has been recorded by one Court. It may be conclusive, for the judgment of acquittal may be ex facie wrong, the likelihood of desperate reprisal, it enlarged, may be a deterrent and his own safety may be more in prison than in the vengeful village where feuds have provoked the violent offence. It depends. Antecedents of the man and socio-geographical circumstances have a bearing only from this angle. Police exaggerations of prospective misconduct of the accused, if enlarged, must be soberly sized up lest danger of excesses and injustice creep subtly into the discretionary curial technique. Bad record and police prediction of criminal prospects to invalidate the bail plea are admissible in principle but shall not stampede the Court into a complacent refusal."

20) In Moti Ram v. State of M.P., (1978) 4 SCC 47, this Court, while discussing pre-trial detention, held:

"14. The consequences of pre-trial detention are grave. Defendants presumed innocent arc subjected to the psychological and physical deprivations of jail life, usually under more onerous conditions than are imposed on convicted defendants. The jailed defendant loses his job if he has one and is prevented from contributing to the preparation of his defence. Equally important, the burden of his detention frequently falls heavily on the innocent members of his family."

21) The concept and philosophy of bail was discussed by this Court in Vaman Narain Ghiya v. State of Rajasthan, (2009) 2 SCC 281, thus:

"6. "Bail" remains an undefined term in CrPC. Nowhere else has the term been statutorily defined. Conceptually, it continues to be understood as a right for assertion of freedom against the State imposing restraints. Since the UN Declaration of Human Rights of 1948, to which India is a signatory, the concept of bail has found a place within the scope of human rights. The dictionary meaning of the expression "bail" denotes a security for appearance of a prisoner for his release. Etymologically, the word is derived from an old French verb "bailer" which means to "give" or "to deliver", although another view is that its derivation is from the Latin term "baiulare", meaning "to bear a burden". Bail is a conditional liberty. Stroud's Judicial Dictionary (4th Edn., 1971) spells out certain other details. It states: "… when a man is taken or arrested for felony, suspicion of felony, indicted of felony, or any such case, so that he is restrained of his liberty. And, being by law bailable, offereth surety to those which have authority to bail him, which sureties are bound for him to the King's use in a certain sums of money, or body for body, that he shall appear before the justices of goal delivery at the next sessions, etc. Then upon the bonds of these sureties, as is aforesaid, he is bailed—that is to say, set at liberty until the day appointed for his appearance." Bail may thus be regarded as a mechanism whereby the State devolutes upon the community the function of securing the presence of the prisoners, and at the same time involves participation of the community in administration of justice.

7. Personal liberty is fundamental and can be circumscribed only by some process sanctioned by law. Liberty of a citizen is undoubtedly important but this is to balance with the security of the community. A balance is required to be maintained between the personal liberty of the accused and the investigational right of the police. It must result in minimum interference with the personal liberty of the accused and the right of the police to investigate the case. It has to dovetail two conflicting demands, namely, on the one hand the requirements of the society for being shielded from the hazards of being exposed to the misadventures of a person alleged to have committed a crime; and on the other, the fundamental canon of criminal jurisprudence viz. the presumption of innocence of an accused till he is found guilty. Liberty exists in proportion to wholesome restraint, the more restraint on others to keep off from us, the more liberty we have. (See A.K. Gopalan v. State of Madras)

8. The law of bail, like any other branch of law, has its own philosophy, and occupies an important place in the administration of justice and the concept of bail emerges from the conflict between the police power to restrict liberty of a man who is alleged to have committed a crime, and presumption of innocence in favour of the alleged criminal. An accused is not detained in custody with the object of punishing him on the assumption of his guilt."

22) More recently, in the case of Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre v. State of Maharashtra, (2011) 1 SCC 694, this Court observed that "(j)ust as liberty is precious to an individual, so is the society's interest in maintenance of peace, law and order. Both are equally important." This Court further observed :

"116. Personal liberty is a very precious fundamental right and it should be curtailed only when it becomes imperative according to the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case." This Court has taken the view that when there is a delay in the trial, bail should be granted to the accused [See Babba v. State of Maharashtra, (2005) 11 SCC 569, Vivek Kumar v. State of U.P., (2000) 9 SCC 443, Mahesh Kumar Bhawsinghka v. State of Delhi, (2000) 9 SCC 383].

23) The principles, which the Court must consider while granting or declining bail, have been culled out by this Court in the case of Prahlad Singh Bhati v. NCT, Delhi, (2001) 4 SCC 280, thus:

"The jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well-settled principles having regard to the circumstances of each case and not in an arbitrary manner. While granting the bail, the court has to keep in mind the nature of accusations, the nature of the evidence in support thereof, the severity of the punishment which conviction will entail, the character, behaviour, means and standing of the accused, circumstances which are peculiar to the accused, reasonable possibility of securing the presence of the accused at the trial, reasonable apprehension of the witnesses being tampered with, the larger interests of the public or State and similar other considerations. It has also to be kept in mind that for the purposes of granting the bail the legislature has used the words "reasonable grounds for believing" instead of "the evidence" which means the court dealing with the grant of bail can only satisfy it (sic itself) as to whether there is a genuine case against the accused and that the prosecution will be able to produce prima facie evidence in support of the charge. It is not expected, at this stage, to have the evidence establishing the guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt."

24) In State of U.P. v. Amarmani Tripathi, (2005) 8 SCC 21, this Court held as under:

"18. It is well settled that the matters to be considered in an application for bail are whether there is any prima facie or reasonable ground to believe that the accused had committed the offence; (ii) nature and gravity of the charge; (iii) severity of the punishment in the event of conviction; (iv) danger of the accused absconding or fleeing, if released on bail; (v) character, behaviour, means, position and standing of the accused;

(vi) likelihood of the offence being repeated; (vii) reasonable apprehension of the witnesses being tampered with; and (viii) danger, of course, of justice being thwarted by grant of bail [see Prahlad Singh Bhati v. NCT, Delhi and Gurcharan Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.)]. While a vague allegation that the accused may tamper with the evidence or witnesses may not be a ground to refuse bail, if the accused is of such character that his mere presence at large would intimidate the witnesses or if there is material to show that he will use his liberty to subvert justice or tamper with the evidence, then bail will be refused. We may also refer to the following principles relating to grant or refusal of bail stated in Kalyan Chandra Sarkar v. Rajesh Ranjan: (SCC pp. 535-36, para 11)

"11. The law in regard to grant or refusal of bail is very well settled. The court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. Though at the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken, there is a need to indicate in such orders reasons for prima facie concluding why bail was being granted particularly where the accused is charged of having committed a serious offence. Any order devoid of such reasons would suffer from non-application of mind. It is also necessary for the court granting bail to consider among other circumstances, the following factors also before granting bail; they are:

(a) The nature of accusation and the severity of punishment in case of conviction and the nature of supporting evidence.

(b) Reasonable apprehension of tampering with the witness or apprehension of threat to the complainant.

(c) Prima facie satisfaction of the court in support of the charge. (See Ram Govind Upadhyay v. Sudarshan Singh and Puran v. Rambilas.)"

22. While a detailed examination of the evidence is to be avoided while considering the question of bail, to ensure that there is no prejudging and no prejudice, a brief examination to be satisfied about the existence or otherwise of a prima facie case is necessary."

25) Coming back to the facts of the present case, both the Courts have refused the request for grant of bail on two grounds :- The primary ground is that offence alleged against the accused persons is very serious involving deep rooted planning in which, huge financial loss is caused to the State exchequer ; the secondary ground is that the possibility of the accused persons tempering with the witnesses. In the present case, the charge is that of cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property, forgery for the purpose of cheating using as genuine a forged document. The punishment of the offence is punishment for a term which may extend to seven years. It is, no doubt, true that the nature of the charge may be relevant, but at the same time, the punishment to which the party may be liable, if convicted, also bears upon the issue. Therefore, in determining whether to grant bail, both the seriousness of the charge and the severity of the punishment should be taken into consideration. The grant or refusal to grant bail lies within the discretion of the Court. The grant or denial is regulated, to a large extent, by the facts and circumstances of each particular case. But at the same time, right to bail is not to be denied merely because of the sentiments of the community against the accused. The primary purposes of bail in a criminal case are to relieve the accused of imprisonment, to relieve the State of the burden of keeping him, pending the trial, and at the same time, to keep the accused constructively in the custody of the Court, whether before or after conviction, to assure that he will submit to the jurisdiction of the Court and be in attendance thereon whenever his presence is required. This Court in Gurcharan Singh and Ors. Vs. State AIR 1978 SC 179 observed that two paramount considerations, while considering petition for grant of bail in non-bailable offence, apart from the seriousness of the offence, are the likelihood of the accused fleeing from justice and his tampering with the prosecution witnesses. Both of them relate to ensure of the fair trial of the case. Though, this aspect is dealt by the High Court in its impugned order, in our view, the same is not convincing.

26) When the undertrial prisoners are detained in jail custody to an indefinite period, Article 21 of the Constitution is violated. Every person, detained or arrested, is entitled to speedy trial, the question is : whether the same is possible in the present case. There are seventeen accused persons. Statement of the witnesses runs to several hundred pages and the documents on which reliance is placed by the prosecution, is voluminous. The trial may take considerable time and it looks to us that the appellants, who are in jail, have to remain in jail longer than the period of detention, had they been convicted. It is not in the interest of justice that accused should be in jail for an indefinite period. No doubt, the offence alleged against the appellants is a serious one in terms of alleged huge loss to the State exchequer, that, by itself, should not deter us from enlarging the appellants on bail when there is no serious contention of the respondent that the accused, if released on bail, would interfere with the trial or tamper with evidence. We do not see any good reason to detain the accused in custody, that too, after the completion of the investigation and filing of the charge-sheet. This Court, in the case of State of Kerala Vs. Raneef (2011) 1 SCC 784, has stated :-

"15. In deciding bail applications an important factor which should certainly be taken into consideration by the court is the delay in concluding the trial. Often this takes several years, and if the accused is denied bail but is ultimately acquitted, who will restore so many years of his life spent in custody? Is Article 21 of the Constitution, which is the most basic of all the fundamental rights in our Constitution, not violated in such a case? Of course this is not the only factor, but it is certainly one of the important factors in deciding whether to grant bail. In the present case the respondent has already spent 66 days in custody (as stated in Para 2 of his counter-affidavit), and we see no reason why he should be denied bail. A doctor incarcerated for a long period may end up like Dr. Manette in Charles Dicken's novel A Tale of Two Cities, who forgot his profession and even his name in the Bastille."

27) In 'Bihar Fodder Scam', this Court, taking into consideration the seriousness of the charges alleged and the maximum sentence of imprisonment that could be imposed including the fact that the appellants were in jail for a period more than six months as on the date of passing of the order, was of the view that the further detention of the appellants as pre-trial prisoners would not serve any purpose.

28) We are conscious of the fact that the accused are charged with economic offences of huge magnitude. We are also conscious of the fact that the offences alleged, if proved, may jeopardize the economy of the country. At the same time, we cannot lose sight of the fact that the investigating agency has already completed investigation and the charge sheet is already filed before the Special Judge, CBI, New Delhi. Therefore, their presence in the custody may not be necessary for further investigation. We are of the view that the appellants are entitled to the grant of bail pending trial on stringent conditions in order to ally the apprehension expressed by CBI.

29) In the view we have taken, it may not be necessary to refer and discuss other issues canvassed by the learned counsel for the parties and the case laws relied on in support of their respective contentions. We clarify that we have not expressed any opinion regarding the other legal issues canvassed by learned counsel for the parties.

30) In the result, we order that the appellants be released on bail on their executing a bond with two solvent sureties, each in a sum of `5 lakhs to the satisfaction of the Special Judge, CBI, New Delhi on the following conditions :-

a. The appellants shall not directly or indirectly make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts or the case so as to dissuade him to disclose such facts to the Court or to any other authority.

b. They shall remain present before the Court on the dates fixed for hearing of the case. If they want to remain absent, then they shall take prior permission of the court and in case of unavoidable circumstances for remaining absent, they shall immediately give intimation to the appropriate court and also to the Superintendent, CBI and request that they may be permitted to be present through the counsel.

c. They will not dispute their identity as the accused in the case.

d. They shall surrender their passport, if any (if not already surrendered), and in case, they are not a holder of the same, they shall swear to an affidavit. If they have already surrendered before the Ld. Special Judge, CBI, that fact should also be supported by an affidavit.

e. We reserve liberty to the CBI to make an appropriate application for modification/recalling the order passed by us, if for any reason, the appellants violate any of the conditions imposed by this Court.

31) The appeals are disposed of accordingly.

****

2010-MH L.J.(CRI)-1-283 , 2010-Crimes(Sc)-1-30, 2010 (I) SCC (Cri) 884

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : Tarun Chatterjee and Surinder Singh Nijjar, JJ.

Ravindra Saxena ….V/S…. State Of Rajasthan
Dec 15,2009

A) Bail – Cr. P.C. SS. 438 - The defence put forward by accused cannot be ignored – The plea of accused that the dispute between him and complainant is purely of a Civil nature – Anticipatory bail is therefore granted to the petitioner.

B) Anticipatory Bail – Cr. P.C. SS. 438 -– 173 – Grant of anticipatory bail after charge – sheet is filed – Anticipatory bail can be granted at any time so long the applicant has not been arrested - The merits of these issues shall have to be assessed at the time of the trial of the accused persons and denial of anticipatory bail only on the ground that the challan has been presented would not satisfy the requirements of Sections 437 and 438 cr. P. C.

THE salutary provision contained in section 438 Cr. P. C. was introduced to enable the Court to prevent the deprivation of personal liberty. It cannot be permitted to be jettisoned on technicalities such as "the challan having been presented anticipatory bail cannot be granted". We may notice here some more observations made by this Court in the case of Gurbaksh Singh (supra) :

> "we find a great deal of substance in Mr tarkunde's submission that since denial of bail amounts to deprivation of personal liberty, the court should lean against the imposition of unnecessary restrictions on the scope of Section 438, especially when no such restrictions have been imposed by the legislature in the terms of that section. Section 438 is a procedural provision which is concerned with the personal liberty of the individual, who is entitled to the benefit of the presumption of innocence since he is not, on the date of his application for anticipatory bail, convicted of the offence in respect of which he seeks bail. An over-generous infusion of constraints and conditions which are not to be found in Section 438 can make its provisions constitutionally vulnerable since the right to personal freedom cannot be made to depend on compliance with unreasonable restrictions. The beneficent provision contained in Section 438 must be saved, not jettisoned. No doubt can linger after the decision in Maneka Gandhi, that in order to meet the challenge of Article 21 of the Constitution, the procedure established by law for depriving a person of his liberty must be fair, just and reasonable. Section 438, in the form in which it is conceived by the legislature, is open to no exception on the ground that it prescribes a procedure which is unjust or unfair. We ought, at all costs, to avoid throwing it open to a Constitutional challenge by reading words in it which are not to be found therein. "

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) LEAVE granted.

(2.) THE application filed by the appellant seeking anticipatory bail has been rejected for the third time by the High Court of Rajasthan, Jaipur Bench. On the basis of the complaint made by one Karan/karani Singh an FIR has been registered against the appellant i. e. FIR No. 107/2007 dated 3. 5. 2007 Jaipur City, Police Station Vidhyadhar Nagar under Section 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC. It is alleged that the complainant agreed to purchase the flats being Flat Nos. 101 and 101a from the appellant and his father the necessary consideration was received by the accused Nos. 1 and 2. The same flats were subsequently sold to somebody else. It is, therefore, alleged that the appellant has committed offences under Section 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC. Amar Nath Saxena (father of the appellant); the Appellant i. e. , Ravindra saxena; Shrimati Sharada Devi and Pradeep maheshwari and accused numbers 1 to 4 in the FIR. According to the appellant the investigation in the FIR was taken over by Samunder Singh, ASI, who happened to be a close relative of the complainant. Therefore, the criminal process is being abused at the instance of the investigating officer.

(3.) AT the time of the hearing of the matter the learned counsel for the appellant pointed out that the father of the complainant is a retired police officer. The complainant is a property dealer. The parties are well known to each other. They have commercial transactions with each other. In fact, the criminal complaint has been filed in order to pressurize the appellant for not to pursue the civil litigation pending between the parties. The complainant has already filed a suit for specific performance on 07. 5. 2007 on the same cause of action. Since, the appellant was being pressurized to compromise in the civil litigation he filed an application for anticipatory bail. He also filed the complaint in the Bar council of Rajasthan against some Advocates who had been compelling the appellant. Even then Session Judge rejected his application for anticipatory bail on 13. 07. 2007.

(4.) THEREAFTER, on the basis of a complaint made by Amarnath Saxena, FIR being no. 207/2007 dated 2. 08. 2007 has been registered against the Kami Singh and others at police Station Sadar, Jaipur, under Section 448, 456, 457, 420, 467, 468, 471, 380, 120-B IPC.

(5.) BEING unsuccessful before the Sessions Judge, the appellant moved an application for anticipatory bail before the High court in the earlier case, which was dismissed by the High Court, as well on 13. 08. 2007. The appellant also sought quashing of the FIR in a petition filed under Section 482 Cr. P. C. before the High Court of Rajasthan. This was also rejected by the High Court. The appellant again moved application for anticipatory bail which was rejected by the High Court on 24. 03. 2008. Therefore, the appellant approached this Court by way of petition for special leave to appeal, which was disposed of on 12. 2. 2009 with the following order:

"this special leave petition is filed against an order of the High Court dismissing the second bail application of the petitioner under Section 438. Cr. P. C. On the prayer of Mr. S. K. Jain, learned counsel appearing for the petitioner, the special leave petition is dismissed as withdrawn with liberty to the petitioner to apply for third bail application before the high Court. If such an application for bail is moved the concerned Court shall decide it on the same day. "

(6.) IN view of the above, the appellant moved the third application for anticipatory bail. This has again been dismissed by the high Court with the following observations: *'in the facts and circumstances, therefore, the case of the petitioner cannot said to have improved with the filing of the challan against him when prima facie case has been found against the accused petitioner. "

(7.) WE are of the considered opinion that the approach adopted by the High Court is wholly erroneous. The application for anticipatory bail has been rejected without considering the case of the appellant solely on the ground that the challan has now been presented.

(8.) WE may notice here that the provision with regard to the grant of anticipatory bail was introduced on the recommendations of the Law Commission of India in his 41st report dated 24. 09. 1969. The recommendations were considered by this Court in a constitution Bench decision in the case of Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia and others vs. State of Punjab, 1 (1980) 2 SCC 565. Upon consideration of the entire issue this Court laid down certain salutary principles to be followed in exercise of the power under Section 438 cr. P. C. by the Sessions Court and the High court. It is clearly held that the anticipatory bail can be granted at any time so long as the applicant has not been arrested. When the application is made to the High Court or court of Sessions it must apply its own mind on the question and decide when the case is made out for granting such relief. In our opinion, the High Court ought not to have left the matter to the Magistrate only on the ground that the challan has now been presented. There is also no reason to deny anticipatory bail merely because the allegation in this case pertains to cheating or forgery of a valuable security. The merits of these issues shall have to be assessed at the time of the trial of the accused persons and denial of anticipatory bail only on the ground that the challan has been presented would not satisfy the requirements of Sections 437 and 438 cr. P. C.

(9.) IN our opinion, the High Court committed a serious error of law in not applying its mind to the facts and circumstances of this case. The High Court is required to exercise its discretion upon examination of the facts and circumstances and to grant anticipatory bail "if it thinks fit". The aforesaid expression has been explained by this Court in Gurbaksh Singh's case (supra) as follows:

"the expression "if it thinks fit", which occurs in Section 438 (1) in relation to the power of the High Court or the court of Session, is conspicuously absent in Section 437 (1). We see no valid reason for rewriting Section 438 with a view, not to expanding the scope and ambit of the discretion conferred on the high Court and the Court of Session but, for the purpose of limiting it. Accordingly, we are unable to endorse the view of the High Court that anticipatory bail cannot be granted in respect of offences like criminal breach of trust for the mere reason that the punishment provided therefor is imprisonment for life. Circumstances may broadly justify the grant of bail in such cases too, though of course, the court is free to refuse anticipatory bail in any case if there is material before it justifying such refusal. "

(10.) THE salutary provision contained in section 438 Cr. P. C. was introduced to enable the Court to prevent the deprivation of personal liberty. It cannot be permitted to be jettisoned on technicalities such as "the challan having been presented anticipatory bail cannot be granted". We may notice here some more observations made by this Court in the case of Gurbaksh Singh (supra) :

"we find a great deal of substance in Mr tarkunde's submission that since denial of bail amounts to deprivation of personal liberty, the court should lean against the imposition of unnecessary restrictions on the scope of Section 438, especially when no such restrictions have been imposed by the legislature in the terms of that section. Section 438 is a procedural provision which is concerned with the personal liberty of the individual, who is entitled to the benefit of the presumption of innocence since he is not, on the date of his application for anticipatory bail, convicted of the offence in respect of which he seeks bail. An over- generous infusion of constraints and conditions which are not to be found in Section 438 can make its provisions constitutionally vulnerable since the right to personal freedom cannot be made to depend on compliance with unreasonable restrictions. The beneficent provision contained in Section 438 must be saved, not jettisoned. No doubt can linger after the decision in Maneka Gandhi, that in order to meet the challenge of Article 21 of the Constitution, the procedure established by law for depriving a person of his liberty must be fair, just and reasonable. Section 438, in the form in which it is conceived by the legislature, is open to no exception on the ground that it prescribes a procedure which is unjust or unfair. We ought, at all costs, to avoid throwing it open to a Constitutional challenge by reading words in it which are not to be found therein. "

(11.) IN our opinion, the High Court erred in not considering the application for anticipatory bail in accordance with law. The defence put forward by the appellant cannot be obliterated at this stage itself. We are also of the opinion, that the submission of the learned counsel for the appellant that the dispute herein is purely of a civil nature cannot be brushed aside at this stage. We, therefore, grant anticipatory bail to the appellant in the case pending on the basis of FIR No. 107/2007 registered at Police Station Vidhyadhar Nagar, Jaipur City under Section 420, 467, 468, 120-B IPC now pending only under Section 420 and 120-B IPC. It is directed that in the event of arrest the appellant shall be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Investigating officer. It is also directed that the appellant shall join investigation as and when required.

(12.) THE impugned order is set aside and the appeal is allowed.

****

Cross citation : [2003] Crimes(SC) 302= [2003]2 SCC 649

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

(From Bombay High Court)

N. Santosh Hegde & B.P. Singh, JJ.

M.C. Abraham & Anr. - Vs- State of Maharashtra & Ors.

Criminal Appeal Nos. 1346-47 of 2002 (Arising out of SLP (Crl.) Nos. 231 -232 of 2002)

With

Criminal Appeal Nos. 1348-49 of 2002 (Arising out of SLP (Crl.) Nos. 301-302 of 2002)

With

Criminal Appeal Nos. 1350-51 of 2002 (Arising out of SLP (Crl.) Nos. 310-311 of 2002)

With

Criminal Appeal No. 1352 of 2002 (Arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 868 of 2002)

Decided on 20-12-2002

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE : S. 438, 173(8), S.190, S.41 - Indian Penal Code, 1860- Section 406 and 409/34 – Rejection of anticipatory bail does not mean that accused should be arrested –Anticipatory Bail applications under Section 438 Cr.P.C. rejected –High Court directing State to arrest the directors of MAPL

Held : High Court in exercise of its writ jurisdiction, cannot direct the investigating officer or the State to arrest the accused in a case which is still at the stage of investigation- The mere fact that the bail applications of some of the appellants had been rejected is no ground for directing their immediate arrest - orders passed by High Court is over-stepping the para-meters of judicial interference in such matters. In the first place, arrest of an accused is a part of the investigation and is within the discretion of the investigating officer. Section 41 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides for arrest by a police officer without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant

There was no justification for the High Court to direct the State to arrest the appellants against whom the first information report was lodged, as it amounted to unjustified interference in the investigation of the case. The mere fact that the bail applications of some of the appellants had been rejected is no ground for directing their immediate arrest. In the very nature of things, a person may move the Court on mere apprehension that he may be arrested. The Court may or may not grant anticipatory bail depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case and the material placed before the Court. There may, however, be cases where the application for grant of anticipatory bail may be rejected and ultimately, after investigation, the said person may not be put up for trial as no material is disclosed against him in the course of investigation. The High Court proceeded on the assumption that since petitions for anticipatory bail had been rejected, there was no option open for the State but to arrest those persons. This assumption, to our mind, is erroneous. A person whose petition for grant of anticipatory bail has been rejected may or may not be arrested by the investigating officer depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case, nature of the offence, the background of the accused, the facts disclosed in the course of investigation and other relevant considerations.

Held consequently : We have, therefore, no doubt that the order dated 10th January, 2002, in so far as it directs the arrest of the appellants, must be set aside. So far as the order dated 11th January, 2002 is concerned, it gives an impression that the High Court has held that it was not open to the investigating officer, in view of the order passed by the High Court dated 7th September, 2001 rejecting the anticipatory bail petitions of some of the appellants, to treat the case as C summary as it has been found that no funds had been misappropriated. By the impugned order dated 16th January, 2002 the High Court has in fact shown its anxiety to see that the "State expeditiously conclude the investigation in the case and file charge-sheet". (Para 15)

==========

Counsel for the Parties :

For the Appellants : R.F. Nariman, Sr. Advocate, M.N. Upadhyay, Ms.Meenakshi Orgra and Jay Savla, Advocates. For the Respondents : R.B. Masodkar, S.S. Shinde, V.N. Raghupathy,

JUDGMENT

B.P. Singh, J.-Special leave granted in all matters.

2. These appeals arise out of three orders passed by the High Court of Bombay, Nagpur Bench, Nagpur in Writ Petition (Crl.) No. 380/2001, a writ petition filed in public interest, dated 10th, 11th, and 16th January, 2002. The aforesaid writ petition has been filed by the Maharashtra Antibiotics & Pharmaceuticals Employees Association and others in which a grievance has been made that though the Provident Fund Commissioner has lodged a complaint against several Directors of the Maharashtra Antibiotics & Pharmaceuticals Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as MAPL), the investigation has made no progress on account of the fact that the Directors are government servants and enjoy considerable influence. In the aforesaid writ petition the impugned orders have been passed on different dates which are the subject matter of challenge before this Court. Criminal Appeals arising out of S.L.P. (Crl.) Nos. 301-302 of 2002; Criminal Appeals arising out of S.L.P. (Crl.) Nos.310-311 of 2002 and Criminal Appeals arising S.L.P. (Crl.) Nos.231-232 of 2002 are directed against the orders of the Court dated 10th January, 2002 and 1 lth January, 2002. Shri. A. K. Dhote, appellant in Criminal Appeals arising out of S.L.P. (Crl.) Nos.301-302 of 2002 is the Managing Director of MAPL. The appellants in Criminal Appeals arising out of S.L.P. (Crl.) Nos.310-311 of 2002, Shri J.F. Salve and Sh. Vijay Khardekar are the Directors on the Board of MAPL nominated by the State Industrial and Investment Corporation of Maharashtra Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as the SICOM). Similarly the appellants in Criminal Appeals arising out of S.L.P. (Crl.) Nos.231-232 of 2002, Sh. M.C Ambraham and Sh. J.K. Dattagupta are part time Directors of MAPL having been appointed as part time Directors on the Board of Management by the President of India.

3. Criminal Appeal arising out of SLP (Crl.) No.868 of 2002 is directed against the order of the High Court dated 16th January, 2002 and the appellants therein are Shri J.F. Salve and Sh. Vijay Khardekar, who are nominees of SICOM on the Board of MAPL.

4. MAPL is a joint venture of the Government of India and the State of Maharashtra and it is not in dispute that it has been declared to be a sick industry by the Board for Industrial and Financial Reconstruction(hereinafter referred to as the BIFR) on 14th January, 1997. It appears that a complaint has been lodged by the Provident Fund Commissioner against the Directors of MAPL alleging offences under sections 406 and 409/34IPC.

5. It appears that some of the accused persons had moved the High Court for grant of anticipatory bail under section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure being Criminal Application Nos. 940, 975 and 976 of 2001. Those petitions were rejected by the High Court by its order dated 7th September, 2001. The orders rejecting those petitions have not been appealed against.

6. On 10th January, 2002 the High Court passed the first impugned order observing that it was shocking that the writ petitioners had to approach the High Court seeking directions against the State to act on the complaint lodged by the Provident Commissioner against the Directors of MAPL. Despite the fact that their applications for grant of anticipatory bail had been rejected by the High Court, by a reasoned order, they had not been arrested. The High Court, therefore, felt that in the circumstances, the only course open to the respondent-State was to cause Their arrest and prosecute them. The High Court thereafter passed the following order :-

"We therefore, direct the respondent-State to cause arrest of those Accused and produce them before the Court on or before 14.1.2002. On their failure to do so we will be constrained to summon the Commissioner of Police, Nagpur, Pune and Mumbai to appear before this Court in person and explain that as to why they are not able to cause arrest of these persons.

Merely because accused are government servants/officials they do not enjoy any immunity from arrest if they have committed an offence. It is expected of the State to be diligent in prosecuting such offenders without discrimination.

The order be communicated to the Principal Secretary, Home Department, Government of Maharashtra and also to the Commissioner of Police of three cities who will be solely responsible for failure to comply with the orders of this Court. Learned A.P.P. is directed to communicate the orders by Fax, Wireless message in addition to other mode of service and even inform them on telephone S.O. 16.1.2002. Authenticated copy be furnished to A.P.P.".

This is the first order challenged by the appellants before us.

7. It appears that on the next date i.e. 11th January, 2002 an application filed on behalf of respondents 1 & 2 in the writ petition for modification of the order dated 10th January, 2002 came up for hearing before the Court in which certain additional facts were sought to be brought to the notice of the Court, namely - that the complainant himself had written to the investigating officer by his letter dated 1st August, 2001 that Shri M.C. Abraham, Chairman of MAPL and part time Director Shri J.K. Dattagupta were appointed by the Government of India and as such they were not concerned with day to day working of the establishment and before the complaint should be restricted to other accused persons including these two. The High Court was surprised as to how such a letter would be issued to the investigating officer, because the question as to whether they were concerned with day to day affairs of the company was a matter which had to be considered by the Court taking cognizance of the offence. Some other submissions were also urged on the basis of Section 41-A of the State Financial Corporation Act but the same were also rejected. Lastly, it was urged before the High Court that the investigating officer had taken an opinion from the Assistant Director and Public Prosecutor, Nagpur who was of the view that the matter deserved to be treated as C summary as no funds have been found to be misappropriated. The High Court observed that this could not be the reason for not proceeding further in the matter particularly in view of the observations made by the Court in the order dated 7th September, 2001 rejecting the applications for grant of anticipatory bail. The application for modification was accordingly dismissed.

8. The third order was passed on 16th January, 2002. It appears that the order directing arrest of the appellants herein was appealed against before this Court and this Court by order dated 14th January, 2002 passed an interim order staying the directions of the High Court to arrest the appellants. The High Court noticed the order passed by this Court. It directed the respondent/State to take necessary steps in the matter subject to interim order passed by the Supreme Court. In this connection it was observed :-

"Our anxiety is to see that the State expeditiously conclude the investigation in the case and file Charge-sheet. We may again remind the State of the order passed by this Court while rejecting the pre-arrest bail application on 7,9.2001 and should not show any laxity in the investigation".

9. Counsel for the appellants submitted before us that the orders dated 10th January, 2002 and 11th January, 2002 result in unjustified interference with the investigation of the case, and having regard to the well defined para-meters of judicial interference in such matters, the directions made by the High Court deserve to be quashed. He submitted that the High Court in exercise of its writ jurisdiction, cannot direct the investigating officer or the State to arrest the accused in a case which is still at the stage of investigation, nor can it direct the investigating agency to submit a report before the Magistrate as directed by the High Court. We find considerable force in the submission urged on behalf of the appellants. The observations of the Supreme Court in State of Bihar and another Vs. J.A.C. Saldanha and others: (1980)1 SCC 554 in this regard deserve notice. In that case, on the basis of the first information report, the case was investigated and a final report was submitted exonerating the accused. The matter had engaged the attention of the Government and even while the matter was under consideration of the Government, the final report was submitted. The investigating officer who had taken over from the earlier investigating officer moved the Court with a prayer that the final report already filed, may not be acted upon and that the report of the police, after completion of further investigation, which had been directed by the government in the case, be awaited. The Chief Judicial magistrate passed an order whereby he decided to await the report of further investigation. This order was challenged before the High Court and a Full Bench of the High Court allowed the writ petition and gave various directions to the learned Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate how to dispose of the case. It further held that the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate was in error in postponing the consideration of the final report already submitted.

10. The contention before this Court was that the High Court was in error in exercising jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution at the stage when the Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate who had jurisdiction to entertain and try the case, had not passed upon the issues before him, by taking upon itself the appreciation of evidence involving facts about which there was an acrimonious dispute between the parties and giving a clean bill to the suspects against whom the first information report was filed. In this connection this court relied upon the observations of the Privy Council in King Emperor Vs. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad: 1944 LR 71 IA 203, which reads thus:-

"In India, as has been shown, there is a statutory right on the part of the police to investigate the circumstances of an alleged cognizable crime without requiring any authority from the judicial authorities and it would, as their Lordships think, be an unfortunate result if it should be held possible to interfere with those statutory rights by an exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the Court. The functions of the judiciary and the police are complementary, not overlapping, and the combination of individual liberty with a due observance of law and order is only to be obtained by leaving each to exercise its own function, always, of course, subject to the right of the Court to intervene in an appropriate case when moved under Section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code to give directions in the nature of habeas corpus. In such a case as the present, however, the Court s functions begin when a charge is preferred before it, and not until then".

11. Reference was also made to the observations of this Court in S.M. Sharma Vs. Bipen Kumar Tiwari: (1970)3,SCR 946 wherein this Court observed:

"It appears to us that, though the Code of Criminal Procedure gives to the police unfettered power to investigate all cases where they suspect that a cognizable offence has been committed, in appropriate cases an aggrieved person can always seek a remedy by invoking the power of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution under which, if the High Court could be convinced that the power of investigation has been exercised by a police officer mala fide, the High Court can always issue a writ of mandamus restraining the police officer from misusing his legal power".

12. This Court held in the case of J.A.C. Saldanha (supra) that there is a clear-cut and well demarcated sphere of activity in the field of crime detection and crime punishment. Investigation of an offence is the field exclusively reserved by the executive through the police department, the superintendence over which vests in the State Government. It is the bounden duty of the executive to investigate, if an offence is alleged, and bring the offender to book. Once it investigates and finds an offence having been committed, it is its duty to collect evidence for the purpose of proving the offence. Once that is completed and the investigating officer submits report to the Court requesting the Court to take cognizance of the offence under section 190 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, its duty comes to an end. On a cognizance of the offence being taken by the Court, the police function of investigation comes to an end subject to the provision contained in Section 173(8), then commences the adjudicatory function of the judiciary to determine whether an offence has been committed and if so, whether by the person or persons charged with the crime. In the circumstances, the judgment and order of the High Court was set aside by this Court.

13. Tested in the light of the principles aforesaid, the impugned orders dated 10th January, 2002 and 1 1th January, 2002 must be held to be orders passed by over-stepping the para-meters of judicial interference in such matters. In the first place, arrest of an accused is a part of the investigation and is within the discretion of the investigating officer. Section 41 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides for arrest by a police officer without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant. The section gives discretion to the police officer who may, without an order from a Magistrate and even without a warrant, arrest any person in the situations enumerated in that section. It is open to him, in the course of investigation, to arrest any person who has been concerned with any cognizable offence or against whom reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned. Obviously, he is not expected to act in a mechanical manner and in all cases to arrest the accused as soon as the report is lodged. In appropriate cases, after some investigation, the investigating officer may make up his mind as to whether it is necessary to arrest the accused person. At that stage the Court has no role to play. Since the power is discretionary, a police officer is not always bound to arrest an accused even if the allegation against him is of having committed a cognizable offence. Since an arrest is in the nature of an encroachment on the liberty of the subject and does affect the reputation and status of the citizen, the power has to be cautiously exercised. It depends inter alia upon the nature of the offence alleged and the type of persons who are accused of having committed the cognizable offence. Obviously, the power has to be exercised with caution and circumspection.

14. In the instant case the appellants had not been arrested. It appears that the result of the investigation showed that no amount had been defalcated. We are here not concerned with the correctness of the conclusion that the investigating officer may have reached. What is, however, significant is that the investigating officer did not consider it necessary, having regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case, to arrest the accused. In such a case there was no justification for the High Court to direct the State to arrest the appellants against whom the first information report was lodged, as it amounted to unjustified interference in the investigation of the case. The mere fact that the bail applications of some of the appellants had been rejected is no ground for directing their immediate arrest. In the very nature of things, a person may move the Court on mere apprehension that he may be arrested. The Court may or may not grant anticipatory bail depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case and the material placed before the Court. There may, however, be cases where the application for grant of anticipatory bail may be rejected and ultimately, after investigation, the said person may not be put up for trial as no material is disclosed against him in the course of investigation. The High Court proceeded on the assumption that since petitions for anticipatory bail had been rejected, there was no option open for the State but to arrest those persons. This assumption, to our mind, is erroneous. A person whose petition for grant of anticipatory bail has been rejected may or may not be arrested by the investigating officer depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case, nature of the offence, the background of the accused, the facts disclosed in the course of investigation and other relevant considerations.

15. We have, therefore, no doubt that the order dated 10th January, 2002, in so far as it directs the arrest of the appellants, must be set aside. So far as the order dated 11th January, 2002 is concerned, it gives an impression that the High Court has held that it was not open to the

Investigating officer, in view of the order passed by the High Court dated 7th September, 2001 rejecting the anticipatory bail petitions of some of the appellants, to treat the case as C summary as it has been found that no funds had been misappropriated. By the impugned order dated 16th January, 2002 the High Court has in fact shown its anxiety to see that the "State expeditiously conclude the investigation in the case and file charge-sheet". We are afraid; such a direction cannot be sustained in view of the settled principle of law on the subject. It is not necessary for us to multiply authorities but we may only refer to Abhinandan Jha and others Vs. Dinesh Mishra: AIR 1968 SC 117, where this Court observed thus:-

"Then the question is, what is the position, when the Magistrate is dealing with a report submitted by the police, under Section 173, that no case is made out for sending up an accused for trial, which report, as we have already indicated, is called, in the area in question, as a final report ? Even in those cases, if the Magistrate agrees with the said report, he may accept the final report and close the proceedings. But there may be instances when the Magistrate may take the view, on a consideration of the final report, that the opinion formed by the police is not based on a full and complete investigation, in which case, in our opinion, the Magistrate will have ample jurisdiction to give directions to the police, under S. 156 (3), to make a further investigation. That is, if the Magistrate feels, after considering the final report, that the investigation is unsatisfactory, or incomplete, or that there is scope for further investigation, it will be open to the Magistrate to decline to accept the final report and direct the police to make further investigation under Section 156(3). The police, after such further investigation, may submit a charge-sheet, or, again submit a final report, depending upon the further investigation made by them. If ultimately, the Magistrate forms the opinion that the facts, set out in the final report, constitute an offence, he can take cognizance of the offence, under section 190(l)(b), notwithstanding the contrary opinion of the police, expressed in the final report .... The functions of the Magistracy and the police, are entirely different, and though, in the circumstances mentioned earlier, the Magistrate may or may not accept the report, and take suitable action, according to law, he cannot certainly infringe (sic impinge?) upon the jurisdiction of the police, by compelling them to change their opinion, so as to accord with his view. . ,

Therefore, to conclude, there is no power, expressly or impliedly conferred, under the Code, on a Magistrate to call upon the police to submit a charge-sheet, when they have sent a report under section 169 of the Code, that there is no case made out for sending up an accused for trial".

16. The principle, therefore, is well settled that it is for the investigating agency to submit a report to the Magistrate after full and complete investigation. The investigating agency may submit a report finding the allegations substantiated. It is also open to the investigating agency to submit a report finding no material to support the allegations made in the first information report. It is open to the Magistrate concerned to accept the report or to order further enquiry. But what is clear is that the Magistrate cannot direct the investigating agency to submit a report that is in accord with his views. Even in a case where a report is submitted by the investigating agency finding that no case is made out for prosecution, it is open to the Magistrate to dis-agree with the report and to take cognizance, but what he cannot do is to direct the investigating agency to submit a report to the effect that the allegations have been supported by the material collected during the course of investigation.

17. In the instant case the investigation is in progress. It is not necessary for us to comment on the tentative view of the investigating agency. It is the statutory duty of the investigating agency to fully investigate the matter and then submit a report to the concerned Magistrate. The Magistrate will thereafter proceed to pass appropriate order in accordance with law. It was not appropriate for the High Court in these circumstances to issue a direction that the case should not only be investigated, but a charge sheet must be submitted. In our view the High Court exceeded its jurisdiction in making this direction which deserves to be set aside. While it is open to the High Court, in appropriate cases, to give directions for prompt investigation etc., the High Court cannot direct the investigating agency to submit a report that is in accord with its views as that would amount to unwarranted interference with the investigation of the case by inhibiting the exercise of statutory power by the investigating agency.

18. In these circumstances, therefore, we set aside the direction contained in the order of the High Court dated 10th January, 2002 directing the arrest of the appellants. We also set aside the direction made by the High Court directing the investigating agency to submit a charge-sheet. However, the investigating agency must promptly take all necessary steps, conclude the investigation and submit its report to the concerned Magistrate. It is open to the investigating agency to submit such report as it considers appropriate, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case and result of the investigation. After such a final report is submitted by the investigating agency, the concerned Magistrate will proceed to deal with the matter further in accordance with law without being influenced by any observation made by the High Court in the impugned orders.

19. The appeals are allowed in the above terms.

(N.K.R.) Appeals allowed accordingly.

==========

Cross citation : 2009 ALL MR (Cri) 2923

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY
Coram : V. M. KANADE, J.

Yogesh Ramchandra Baldawa ....Vs.... State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application No.91 of 2009

9th January, 2009.

==========

Penal Code (1860), S.366-A - Criminal P.C. (1973), S.438 - Anticipatory bail - Grant of- Applicant eloped with girl of 17 years 8 months on date of complaint - Girl gone with applicant willingly - Applicant 18 years of age as of today -Application for grant of anticipatory bail allowed. (Para 4)

==========

JUDGMENT :- Heard Counsel for the applicant and APP for the State.

2. The application was filed by one Mrs. Sushama Waichal in which she had alleged that the applicant had eloped with her daughter and the complaint under Section 366(A) was registered vide C.R. No.78/2008 at the Jaysingpur Police Station.

3. Counsel for the applicant submits that the prosecutrix was 17 years 8 months 11 days old on the date on which the complaint was filed and that she had an affair with the applicant and both of them wanted to get married which was opposed by the parents of the girl. The prosecutrix>also has given a letter to that effect to the police station. Counsel for the applicant submits that she had also filed an application for quashing the# complaint vide Criminal Application No.4300 oi 2008 in this Court which is pending.
He submitted that the prosecutrix is present in the court. The learned Counsel submitted that since the applicant and the prosecutrix belonged to two different communities, there was opposition on the part of the parents of the prosecutrix.

4. Taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of the case, in my view, prima facie case is made out by the applicant for grant of anticipatory bail. The prosecutrix admittedly was above 16 years of age and she had gone with the applicant willingly. The applicant is above 18 years of age as of today . she has no objection if the anticipatory bail is granted. The Investigating Officer has informed the learned APP that in fact, now the father and mother of the prosecutrix have no objection if the girl is married to the applicant. Hence , the applications is allowed.

5. In the event of the arrest of the applicant, the applicant be released on personal bond of Rs.5,000/- with one or two sureties in the like amount.

6. The application is disposed of.

Ordered accordingly .

****

1989 CRI. L. J. 252
BOMBAY HIGH COURT
(PANAJI BENCH (GOA))

Coram : 1 Dr. G. F. COUTO, J. (Single Bench)
Criminal Misc. Appln. No. 122 of 1987, D/- 14 -9 -1987.
Devidas Raghu Naik, Applicant v. The State, Opposite Party.

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.439 - BAIL - Bail - Grant of - Factors to be considered - Are substantially same whether application is under S.438 or S.439- the principle that governs S.439 as regards the maintainability of the application is also attracted to an application under S.438- The only distinction is that in a case under S.438 the person who approaches the court apprehends arrest, whereas under S.439 such person approaches the court after his arrest

(B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Anticipatory bail - Arrest of accused for purpose of investigation not needed - Anticipatory bail granted.

In the present case, the applicant was charged of illegal felling of the trees in Government land. Some logs were recovered from his saw mill He apprehended that he may be arrested for a non-bailable offence. Documents showed that the applicant had transported the logs after obtaining necessary passes from the authorities. In the circumstances, there was no need to arrest the applicant for the purpose of investigation. Thus from the facts of the case, the application under S.438 for granting of anticipatory bail was maintainable. (Paras 10, 11)

(C) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - HIGH COURT - COURT OF SESSIONS - - Jurisdiction of High Court and Sessions Court is concurrent - Refusal by Session Court to grant bail is no bar to High Court in dealing bail application - High Court in exercise of its original jurisdiction can grant bail.

The power given by S.439, Cr.P.C., to High Court or to the Sessions Court is an independent power and thus when High Court acts in the exercise of such power, it does not exercise any revisional jurisdiction, but its original special jurisdiction to grant bail. This being so, it becomes obvious that although under S.439 Cr.P.C., concurrent jurisdiction is given to High Court and Sessions Court, the fact that the Sessions Court has refused a bail under S.439 does not operate as a bar for High Court in entertaining a similar application under S.439, on the same fact and for the same offence. However, if a party first moves the High Court and High Court has dismissed the application, then the decorum and the hierarchy of the Courts require that if the Sessions Court is moved with a similar application on the facts, the said application be dismissed 1978 Cri LJ 129 (SC) and 1986 Cri LT 1742 (Ker), Rel. on. 1979 Cri LJ 288 (Cal), Dissented from. (Para 7)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras
1986 Cri LJ 1742 (Ker) (Rel. on) 3, 6
1979 Cri LJ 288 (Cal) (Diss. from) 4, 5
1978 Cri LJ 129 : AIR 1978 SC 179 (Rel. on) 3, 7
M.B. D'Costa, for Applicant; G.U. Bhobe, Public Prosecutor, for the State.
Judgement
ORDER :- This application under S.438 Cr.P.C. is filed by one Devidas Raghu Naik on the grounds that it appears that an incident of illegal felling of trees had taken place and therefore, criminal proceedings had been instituted. Some people who are on inimical terms with the applicant had falsely and maliciously implicated him in the said incident and, therefore, he apprehends that he may be arrested for a non-bailable offence regarding the said ducting of the trees. He further states that he has moved an application for anticipatory bail before the Sessions Court, Margao, but the same was dismissed by Order dated 10th September, 1987.
2. In view of the above statement that a similar application for the same facts had been moved before the Sessions Court Margao, and dismissed, the question arose whether the present application under S.438, Cr.P.C. was maintainable.
3. Mr. Bruto D'Costa, the learned counsel appearing for the applicant, placing reliance on the decision of the Kerala High Court in Gopinath v. State of Kerala, 1986 Cri LJ 1742 and of the Supreme Court in 'Gurcharan Singh v. State', AIR 1978 SC 179 : (1978 Cri LJ 129), submitted that the powers for granting anticipatory bail are concurrent and both the High Court and the Sessions Judge lave jurisdiction to deal with and dispose such application irrespective of the circumstances of one of them having been moved in the first instance. However, the learned counsel submitted that an account of the decorum of the Courts, if the High Court as first approached and refused to grant anticipatory bail, the Sessions Judge should always dismiss she application and he proper remedy in such circumstances is to approach the High Court itself for variation of its earlier order.

4. In his turn, Mr. Bhobe, the learned Public Prosecutor placing reliance on the decision of the Calcutta High Court in 'Amiya Kumar Sen v. State of West Bengal', 1979 Cri LJ 288 urged that the present application is not maintainable.

5. In Amiya Kumar Sen's case, a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court addressed itself to the very same question that falls for my determination. After analysing grammatically the provision of S.438 and in particular, the word "or" appearing therein, observed that the said word has four meanings and it means : (i) a strong alternative; (ii) that ii has little or no alternative force; (iii) that it introduces an alternative name of synonym and (iv) that it is used for "otherwise". The learned Judges the held the vice that the word "or" occurring in S.438, Cr. P.C. has the meaning of "alternative" unlike what happens with similar words that appear in Ss.439 and 397. Cr. P.C. On the basis of this reasoning, the Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court held the view that a fresh application under S.438, Cr.P.C. is not maintainable when one similar application had been already disposed of and dismissed either by the Sessions or the High Court.

@page-CriLJ254

6. A different view was, however, taken by a single Judge of the Kerala High Court in Gopinath's case (1986 Cri LJ 1742) (above). The learned Judge held that the word "or" occurring in Sections 397, 438 and 439 has always an alternative meaning add that there is no reason whatsoever to hold that the said word means "and" in S.397 and 439, as held by the Calcutta High Court in the abovementioned authority. Dealing with the said case, the learned Judge of the Kerala High Court observed as under :-

"With due respect to the learned Judge who decided that case I beg to disagree. I do not think that the Section was intended to give a restricted forum in the sense that when one forum is chosen the jurisdiction of the other is excluded. There cannot be any dispute that an accused is Having the freedom to approach the Court of Session or the High Court under S.438. But the question is only whether an accused who approached the Court of Session and got defeated is precluded from moving the High Court for the same relief. I am of the view that he is not precluded. The fact that the concerned person is given the freedom of applying to the High Court or the Court of Session need not necessarily mean that when the option has become final and the approach to the High Court is thereafter barred. By the use of the word 'or' in Sub-Sec. (1) the legislature has invested the Court of Session and the High Court with concurrent jurisdiction. If the accused makes an application to the Sessions Judge and the same is rejected, nothing in the Code prevents him from making a subsequent application to the High Court. That jurisdiction of the High Court is original and not revisional."

The learned Judge further observed that identical words are used in other provisions of the Cr. P.C. namely in Ss.397(1), 398 and 439 and that there is no basis for treating the conjunction 'or' in those provisions in contradistinction with the same conjunction used in S.438 and therefore if those conjunctions are used in the non-alternative sense as equivalent to 'and' there is no reason why a different interpretation is necessary in the case of S.438

7. The above view of the learned single Judge of the Kerala High Court appears to the to be correct. In fact, it is now well settled that there is no bar whatsoever for a party to approach either the High Court or the Session Court with an application for an ordinary bail made under S.439, Cr. P.C. The power given by S.439 to the High Court or to the Sessions Court is an independent power and thus, when the High Court acts in the exercise of such power it does not exercise any revisional jurisdiction, but its original special jurisdiction to grant bail. This being so, it becomes obvious that although under S.439, Cr. P.C. concurrent jurisdiction is given to the High Court and Sessions Court, the fact that the Sessions Court has refused a bail under S.439 does not operate as a bar for the High Court entertaining a similar application under S.439 on the same facts and for the same offence. However, if the choice was made by the party to move first the High court and the High Court has dismissed the application, then the decorum and the hierarchy of the Courts require that if the Sessions Court is moved with a similar application on the facts, the said application be dismissed. This can be inferred also from the decision of the Supreme Court in Gurcharan Singh's case (1978 Cri LJ 129) (above) :

8. There is no substantial difference between S.438 and S.439 as regards the appreciation of the case as to whether or not a bail is to be granted. The only distinction is that in a case under S.438 the person who approaches the Court apprehends that he may be arrested without any justification or basis, whereas under S.439 such person approaches the Court after his arrest. This being so, the principles that govern S.439 as regards the maintainability of the application are also attracted to an application under S.438, Cr. P.C.

9. Coming now to the of the case, the learned Public Prosecutor placed for my perusal the investigation papers. From the said investigation it appears that there exists a prima facie case implicating the applicant in the theft or the felling of the trees in Government land. In fact, references to him are made by several witnesses and it appears that some logs had been recovered from the saw-mill. However, Mr. Bruto D'Costa produced some documents showing that the applicant had transported the said logs to his saw-mill after obtaining the necessary passes from the authorities. It is his case that he is not in any manner involved in the illegal cutting of the trees and in any event, his arrest by the Police is not necessary for the purposes of the investigation.

@page-CriLJ255

10. Admittedly, the logs had been already seized by the police and in the circumstances, it appears to me that Mr. B. D'Costa is right then he submits that in the circumstances there is no need whatsoever to arrest the applicant for the purposes of investigation. The same can be done without his arrest provided the applicant appears before the Police as and when necessary.

11. The result, therefore, is that this application is allowed and consequently, the Police Officer investigating the offence of the cutting of the trees in question is directed to release the applicant on bail, in case of his arrest in connection with this case. The applicant to sign a bail bond of Rs. 5,000/- with one surety for the like amount. He should make himself available to the Police as and when necessary for a period of 10 days from today, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. everyday. He should not leave the area of Goa without prior permission of this Court.

Application allowed.

Cross Citation :- 2014 ALL MR (Cri)543

BOMBAY HIGH COURT
(BENCH AT AURANGABAD)
ABHAY M. THIPSAY, J.

Dinesh Hilal Mahajan .Vs. The State of Maharashtra,

CRIMINAL WRIT PETITION NO. 811 OF 2013
18th October , 2013.

Advocate for Petitioners : Mr.Ghanekar Nilesh S.
APP for Respondent : Mr.V.P. Kadam,
Mr.C.R. Deshpande, Adv. (For assistance of APP).

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S. 438- Anticipatory bail- Breach of condition – Accused failed to remain present before police station on one date- Held, on a single failure to attend police station, bail would not be automatically cancelled – If there is a failure to comply with a condition , the court is required to seek explanation from the accused persons and then decide whether the failure was willful and deliberate- And whether for that lapse , the extreme step of cancellation of bail should be taken or not .

==========

****

Cross Citation :- 2014 ALL MR (Cri)581

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

ABHAY M. THIPSAY, J.

Dattatraya Prabhakar Avantkar
Vs.
The State Of Maharashtra

Criminal Bail Application No.1197 Of 2013
7th AUGUST, 2013.

Mr.Kakasaheb J. Tandale Advocate for the Applicant.
Mrs.S.D.Shinde APP for the State.
Investigating Officer Mr.S.S.Gaja, A.P.I., Baramati Taluka Police Station, present in the court.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.437- Bail- Application for Allegation that applicant deceived in respect of Rs.6 lac due to which three persons in a family committed suicide - Prima facie, commission of suicide for money belonging to others, does not appeal to reason- That apart, applicant is in custody since 45 days –Investigation agency not able to trace amount except Rs.1 Lac from applicant – Bail granted subject to certain conditions.(para 6,7,8)

P.C. :

1.Heard Mr.Kakasaheb Tandale,the learned counsel for the applicant, and Mrs.S.D. Shinde,the learned APP for the State.

2.The learned APP has shown to me the papers of investigation that has been carried out so far.

3.On 21.6.2013, one Hanumant K. Mhasvadkar, his wife and his daughter, commit tedsuicide by consuming poison. His son Rahul Mhasvadkar lodged a report with Baramati Taluka Police Station, alleging that the suicide had been committed because the deceased Hanumant had been deceiv ed by the present applicant and two others.The first informant supported his alleg ation on the strength of a suicide note left by the deceased. As per this suicide not e, the deceased had paid an amount of Rs.65Lac to the applicant and two others for securing jobs for various persons. However, as these persons could not get the job, the deceased was under mental stress, and therefore, put an end to his life.

4. Obviously, the amount of Rs.65 Lac allegedly paid to the applicant and two others – one Raju Kulkarni and one Bharti Bodke, did not belong to the deceased. It is not in dispute that these amounts were collected by the deceased from a number of p ersons bypromising them that he would secure jobs for them. The learned APP co ncedes that the investigation that has been carried out, shows that the persons w ho had paid the monies had been dealing with the applicant and two others. It, however, appears, that those persons were after the deceased for repayment of the amount.

5.Under the circumstances, the possibility of the deceased having committed suici de because of the demands of the persons, from whom he had collected the monies, to repay the monies to them, cannot be ruled out. Prima facie, that the deceased committed suicide because the monies of others were lost, does not appeal to reason.

6.In any case, the applicant is in custody since 45 days. So far, theinvestigation agency has not been ableto trace where the amount has gone. I am informed that only an amount of about Rs.1 Lac has b een recovered from the applicant. On the contrary, it appears that the deceased h imself had purchased some property. Investigation in that regard is in progress. T his is a fit case where the applicant should be released on bail.

7 .The application is allowed.

8.The applicant is ordered to be released on bail in the sum of Rs.30,000/-, with o ne surety in the like amount, on the condition to report to the concerned Police sta tion and make himself available for investigation / interrogation, as and when requ ired by the Investigating Officer.

(ABHAY M. THIPSAY, J.)

****

Cross Citation: 2014 ALL MR(Cri)654
IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE OF BOMBAY
(BENCH AT AURANGABAD)

ABHAY M. THIPSAY, J.
Ashok Yadavrao Chavhan
-VS-
The State of Maharashtra

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 1494 OF 2013
23rd December,2013

Advocate for Applicant : Mr. J.J. Patil
APP for Respondent No.1: Mr. G.R. Ingole
==========

A) Criminal Manul (Bomaby High Court), chap.I Para 3-III – Treatment of arrested person by police – Magistrate is not barred from taking cognizance of offence when victim narrates the incident. (para 9,10)

B) Penal Code (1860),Ss.323,324-Criminl P.C.(1973), S.2(d)-Assault by police on arrested person-Filing of Complain by Magistrate in his official capacity–Held , anybody can set criminal law in motion save and except where there is a statutory bar- Ss.323 and 324 IPC do not lay down an such bar- No requirement that complaint be filed by specified person –Hence, complaint in instant case cannot be quashed though it is true that magistrate was supposed to take cognizance and not to lodge complaint.

C) Criminal P.C. (1973), Ss.2(d) ,190-Complaint –Complaint as to police ill –treatment filed by one Magistrate before another Magistrate – It cannot be said that same was not a complaint within meaning of S.2(d)- Only a Police report" is excluded from category of complaint – Even assuming that it was not a complaint, it can certainly be treated as 'information received from any person as contemplated underS.190- Therefore, Magistrate to whom such complaint or information is given , can proceed further on that basis.
==========

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

SADHANA S.JADHAV,J.

CRIMINAL BAIL APPLICATION NO. 992 OF 2013

Sooraj Aditya Pancholi
Vs
The State of Maharashtra
1st July, 2013

Mr. A.P.Mundargi, Senior Advocate, a/w Ms. Shweta Sangtani, & Mr. Shrikant Shivade,Advocates, for the applicant.
Mr. Yashpal Thakur i/b. Mr. Salim Shaikh, Advocate for the complainant.
Ms. P.P.Shinde, APP, for the State.

==========

A) Bail – cash surety instead of solvent surety – Oral prayer accepted- Counsel for applicant submits that it is difficult to obtain a solvency certificate therefore prayers for permission to furnish cash surety –Held , oral prayer is accepted – Applicant to submit solvency certificate within three weeks. (para 16)

B) Cr.P.C. Sec.439- Bail- Suicide of Actress Jiah Khan-Applicant Sooraj Pancholi-IPC 306 Charge sheet not filed –Investigation in progress- Prosecution alleges the conduct of applicant to delete messages from his cell phones – The cell phones have been sent to forensic laboratory – Held ,It cannot be said that the applicant had attempted to cause disappearance of evidence –The papers of the investigation reveal that the I.O has recorded the statement of most of the relevant witness known to the applicant and the deceased and therefore the applicant deserves bail –Bail granted.

==========P.C.

Heard the learned Senior Counsel for the applicant, the learned APP and also the learned Counsel for the original complainant. Perused the papers of investigation.

2. It is the case of prosecution that on 3rd June, 2013, Nafisa Jiah Khan had committed suicide in her house by hanging. She was a young and bright artist. A/D/Mp/61/2013 was registered. Investigation was set in motion.

3. On 10th June, 2013, the mother of Nafisa @ Jiah Khan lodged a report at the Juhu Police Station, alleging therein that on 8th June, 2013, a condolence meeting was to be held for offering condolence to Nafisa @ Jiah Khan. The mother of the victim was aware that her daughter used to write poems and, therefore, she wanted to read out poems to persons who had gathered at the condolence meeting. While searching for the poems, the daughter of the complainant came across the letters which were not addressed to anybody, in particular. Neither they were extracts of her daily diary. It is alleged that the complainant was shocked and had read the contents of the said pages. After going through the contents of the letter, the complainant realized that the deceased was harassed by the present applicant. The complainant has alleged that she was aware that her daughter was in a live-in-relationship with the present applicant. She had no objection to the same. According to her, in February 2013, when Jiah had visited her at London, Jiah had disclosed to her mother that the applicant does not respect her and humiliates her in public life. She has further alleged that when Jiah was in London, she used to receive phone calls from the applicant. They used to send messages each other. On returning from London, Jiah had disclosed to her mother that with the efforts of the applicant, she had regained her confidence. her passions. She was stable and all was well between the applicant and Jiah. She had also disclosed that they used to receive the meals from the house of Sooraj. It was only when they were in a bad mood or when a discordant note had struck between them that the applicant used to abuse Jiah. On 3rd April, 2013, the complainant returned to India. The applicant used to visit their house.

The applicant used to take the complainant and her daughter for dinners regularly. He had confessed before the complainant that he was deeply in love with Jiah. He had also confessed that he would not be able to live without her and that he cannot imagine a life without her. The complainant had gone for dinner along with the applicant and the deceased on more than 2 – 3 occasions. She has narrated that on 18th May, 2013, Jiah had left the house along with her bag and baggage and thereafter the applicant had called upon the complainant and with her permission, he had visited her house. It is alleged that the applicant informed the complainantthat Jiah had missed the flight and, therefore, she had reached his house i.e. the house of his parents. It is further alleged that he had informed the complainant about the relations between them. He had also disclosed to the complainant that since he has to pursue his career seriously, he would not be able to give ample time to Jiah and, therefore, she is in a depressed state of mind. The complainant informed her that she was not depressed and she appears to be in normal. However the complainant convinced the applicant that in such profession ups and downs are quite obvious and, therefore, they should engage themselves in some activities so that they do not remain depressed. The complainant had disclosed to th applicant that Jiah was hoping to meet Salman Khan. The complainant had also expressed her suspicion that the focus of the applicant has shifted from her daughter and that he has focused on his career more than her daughter. However, she had further cautioned him that her daughter was deeply involved with the applicant and, therefore, he should boost her career also. He had further disclosed that he would be more than happy if she can meet people and pursue her career. It was on that occasion that the applicant had informed the complainant and asked her whether she knew that on one occasion, Jiah had attempted to commit suicide by cutting her veins. The complainant had told him that it would be a criminal case. However, he informed her that he had called a private doctor and they had treated her. The applicant had also informed the complainant that Jiah is more involved in him than her own career. The complainant had told him that he would be partly responsible for the same. She had warned him that if he wants to pursue his career, then in that eventuality he should not have approached her or loved her. The applicant had expressed his dilemma over the said issue. On 28th May, 2013 also the complainant had told the applicant that he should not play games with her. He replied that he was confused. The complainant was insisting upon her daughter to pursue her career and focus on her career instead of the applicant. On that day, Jiah had shown her mother the message which was given by the applicant which reads thus :-

"I want to start life with you, ham pahele jaise jindagi gujarenge, I love you, I will marry you, will have our home". The complainant had allegedly cautioned her daughter against the same.
According to the complainant, on 3rd June, 2013, Jiah returned to the house of the complainant and informed her that there is a good news and that is she would be selected by the producer-director who had taken audition of her dances at Hyderabad. Thereafter, mother and daughter went for shopping. Jiah then visited her brother, whereas the complainant went to the house of her friend viz. Anju. She returned from her friend's house at about 10.45 p.m. At about 11.15 p.m., the complainant returned home. She was shocked when she saw that her daughter had hanged herself to the ceiling fan of the house.

4. A.D. No.61/2013 was registered. In the A.D. Enquiry, it was learnt that Jiah went into depression as she had been rejected by the directors at Hyderabad. It is pertinent to note that upon learning of the death of Jiah, the applicant and his parents had visited the house of the complainant. The victim's mobile was seized in the A.D. Enquiry. Certain messages were noted down by the Investigating Officer. In the A.D. Enquiry, there was no evidence to hold the applicant responsible for the death of Jiah.

5. It is only on 7th June, 2013, for the first time that after reading the contents of the letter, it was revealed that the applicant had been responsible for the suicidal death of Jiah and, therefore, an offence punishable under Section 306 of the Indian Penal Code was registered against the applicant. He was arrested on 10th Jue, 2013. The Remand Yadi dated 11th June, 2013 would reveal that Jiah was telephonically informed that there was no chance of her being selected in the audition for which she had performed at Hyderabad. Therefore, she had committed suicide. However, in the course of investigation, the Investigating Officer had raided the house of the applicant i.e. the premises where they lived together before she committed suicide in her mother's house. The application for bail filed by the present applicant was rejected by the Sessions Court and hence the application falls for consideration before this Court.

6. In the course of hearing of this application, the learned Senior Counsel for the applicant has submitted that no offence punishable under Section 306 of IPC can be attributed to the present applicant as he had not instigated her to commit suicide nor he had aided her to commit suicide. The learned Counsel for the applicant further submitted that to attract an offence punishable under Section 306 of IPC, the accused should have committed an act which would connote complicity of the accused in the commission of suicide of the victim. It is further submitted that although there was a live-in-relationship between the applicant and the deceased, no presumptionunder Section 113A of the Evidence Act can be drawn as the deceased was not a legally-wedded wife of the applicant. The learned Counsel further submits that what has to be appreciated at this stage is whether there is a nexus between the cause and the object. He has further submitted that probability of existence of a nexus between a cause and object suffers a setback, no presumption can be drawn that the applicant is responsible for the suicidal death of the victim. The learned Senior Counsel has further submitted that they were into the live-in-relationship by volition. It cannot be said that irrespective of the acts of applicant, the deceased had no other alternative but to commit suicide. It is apparent from the facts of the case that the mother of the deceased had arrived in India two months before Jiah committed suicide. After her arrival also, Jiah had shown message to her mother which clearly indicated that the applicant and Jiah were deeply in love with each other. The letters which were seized from the house of the applicant would show that the deceased was deeply in love with the applicant. The deceased was about three years elder in age to the applicant. She had clearly stated in those letters which were addressed to the applicant that she was deeply romantic. She had given credit to the applicant for making her stable in life. She had further assured him that she would help him whatever way he wants and make him and his father proud. She felt obliged as he had helped her. It is not known as to why the deceased had expressed her apology to the applicant. She has further stated "I am deeply romantic and a genuine yet complex person". "Take care of me, Love me, I am just a lost girl, but I feel safe with you." In the letters which were found by the sister of the deceased and which were not addressed to anybody. It has been allegedly stated that the applicant had shattered her dreams, that she had lost herself in his love and yet he happened to torture her everyday. It is also stated that she had aborted a baby. One thing is clear that this script had never reached the applicant and they were in their original form in the house of the victim and therefore, it cannot be said that the emotions which were reflected in the letter had ever reached to the applicant.

7. The learned Counsel who appears for the complainant has stated that Jiah was harassed by the applicant to such an extent that she had o alternative bu to commit suicide.

8. The Counsel for the complainant has placed reliance upon the Judgment and order of the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Chitresh Kumar Chopra vs. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) AIR 2010 SC 1446. In particular, he has drawn the attention of this Court to para 16 of the Judgment :-

"16. In the background of this legal position, we may advert to the case at hand. The question as to what is the cause of a suicide has no easy answers because suicidal ideation and behaviours in human beings are complex and multifaceted. Different individuals in the same situation react and behave differently because of the personal meaning they add to each event, thus accounting for individual vulnerability to suicide. Each individual's suicidability pattern depends on his inner subjective experience of mental pain, fear and loss of self-respect. Each of these factors are crucial and exacerbating contributor to an individual's vulnerability to end his own life, which may either be an attempt for self-protection or an escapism from intolerable self."

One cannot be oblivious of th fact that the said judgment and order was delivered in a case where the accused were seeking discharge from the case. In the present case, this Court is hearing an application under Section 439 of Cr.PC. The Hon'ble Apex Court has specifically observed in para 16 that "each individual 's suicidability pattern depends on his inner subjective experience of mental pain, fear and loss of self-respect. Each of these factors are crucial and exacerbating contributor to an individual's vulnerability to end his own life, which may either be an attempt for self-protection or an escapism from intolerable self."In the present case, it cannot be ignored that Jiah had suicidal tendency. On an earlier occasion, she had attempted to commit suicide and at that time it was the applicant who had called upon a doctor. He had treated her and had tried to get her out of the said depression. The complainant was not even aware of such an incident until the applicant disclosed to her. According to the Counsel for the complainant, sister of the deceased was aware that Jiah had undergone medical termination of pregnancy. There is nothing to indicate that they had at any point of time questioned the applicant about it and the said actswere out of volition and therefore it cannot be said that the applicant had forced her to undergo medical termination of pregnancy or otherwise. The learned Counsel for the complainant has relied upon the Judgment of the Apex Court in the case of Ram Pratap

Yadav vs. Mitra Sen yadav and Anr. (2003) 1 SCC 15, where the Hon'ble Apex Court has observed in para 7 that although an application under Section 439 before a High Court is not an appeal from the order of Sessions Court even then it is incumbent upon the Courts to consider the reasons for rejection of the bail application by the Sessions Court. In this respect, he has drawn attention of this Court to the observation of the Sessions Court in para 9 of the order. The Sessions Court has referred the incident of the applicant sending messages to the deceased a few minutes before she committed suicide. This Court has gone through the text of the SMS which was received by the deceased at 11.21 p.m. on 3.6.2013. The alleged message would reveal that there was some misunderstanding between the applicant and the deceased on the ground that the applicant had been to meet another female friend and the deceased had suspected him. It is clear that she was extremely obsessive and possessive about the applicant. Thereafter, the female friend had also sent a message to the deceased that there has been some mis-communication and that there was nothing serious, and had further told the deceased that she should not misunderstand her and that she would visit her on the next day. She had also tendered an apology for creating a misunderstanding. The text of the said message would show that there was an exchange of abuses in a fit of rage fury since there was misunderstanding between the applicant and the deceased. The complainant has alleged that in fact on 3.6.2013 the applicant had sent a bouquet to the deceased with a card indicating that their relationship had come to an end and therefore she committed suicide as she was left with no alternative remedy.

9. Upon perusal of the papers and investigation, it appears that the Investigating Officer has recorded the statement of the servant of the applicant and the deceased. He has categorically stated that on 3.6.2013, the applicant had paid him Rs.1,000/- and asked him to purchase a bouquet. He had purchased a bouquet. The applicant had annexed the bouquet with the card saying "Best of Luck" and the bouquet was to be given to the deceased by the domestic help. It appears that the complainant has misunderstood it to be an indication of breaking of relations. The learned Counsel for the applicant submits that in fact since Jiah was pursuing her career, she had given audition at Hyderabad and therefore the applicant had extended best wishes to her and the same was construed by the complainant as a demonstration of betrayal. It is a matter ofrecord that on 3.6.2013, the applicant had not met the deceased. The learned APP submits that on 3.6.2013, Jiah desperately wanted to meet the applicant, however, he was trying to avoid her. When she called up, he had asked for some period, later informed her that he was with his father and therefore could not talk to her.

10. The applicant has been in custody since 10th June, 2013 till today. The learned APP submits that the investigation is in progress and therefore, the applicant does not deserve bail at this stage. She has further submitted that he had deleted messages received by him and the said cell phones have been sent to Cyber Cell, Kalina Laboratory for retrieving the data which was allegedly deleted by the applicant. It cannot be said at this stage that the applicant had attempted to cause disappearance of evidence or else he could have made every attempt to destroy the letters received by him. The cell phones have been sent to the Government Laboratory and there is no scope for the applicant to tamper with the evidence or to delete the same at this stage.

11. The learned Counsel for the applicant submit that the process of retrieving takes a few minutes ant therefore it cannot be a ground for further incarceration of the applicant. No doubt, it is an unfortunate incident that a young girl has committed suicide. It appears that she was the victim for her sentiments. She could not overcome her emotions. The applicant cannot be held solely responsible for the same. The deceased could have always walked out of the relationship. She could not overcome her sentiments and her love for the applicant, for which he cannot be held responsible. He was also pursuing his career in acting and admittedly could not devote sufficient time for the deceased. There were misunderstandings between the applicant and the deceased just before she committed suicide. On the earlier occasion, when she tried to commit suicide, the applicant had saved her. He had helped her to come out of the depression. It cannot be said that on 3.6.2013, he had acted in any manner which could reflect a mens rea that he wanted her to commit suicide and therefore in the absence of any mens rea , instigation or aid it cannot be said that the applicant had driven her to commit suicide on that day.

12. The learned APP and the Counsel for the complainant fairly submits that now the report of the Forensic Laboratory in respect of the call details and the report of the handwriting expert tis awaited.

13. The learned Senior Counsel for the applicant submits that for that purpose, incarceration of th applicant would be unwarranted and unjustified and therefore, he seeks bail. The papers of the investigation reveal that the Investigating Officer has recorded the statements of most of the relevant witnesses known to the applicant and the deceased and, therefore, this Court is of the opinion that he deserves bail.

14. The observations made hereinabove are prima facie in nature and are restricted to the application under Section 439(1) of Cr.P.C. and shall not be considered in any other proceeding or at the time of trial.

15. In these circumstances, the applicant has made out a prima facie case for grant of bail on imposing certain conditions :-

O R D E R

(i) The application is allowed.
(ii) The applicant be enlarged on bail on furnishing P.R. Bond in the sum of Rs.50,000/- and one or two solvent sureties in the like amount.
(iii) Upon being released, the applicant shall surrender his Passport to the Investigating Officer. The applicant shall not leave Mumbai without prior permission of the Investigating Officer.
(iv) The applicant shall not tamper with the evidence and shall not contact any of the common friends of the deceased and the applicant.
(v) The applicant shall report to the Juhu Police Station every alternate day between 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. for one month from the date of release.
(vi) Any breach of conditions by the applicant shall entitle the prosecution to seek the relief under Section 439(2) of Cr.P.C.
(vii) The applicant shall give his address and cell phone numbers to the Investigating Officer.

16. At this stage, the learned Counsel for the applicant submits that it is difficult to obtain a solvency certificate immediately and that would render the order of release would be futile and result into further incarceration inspite of the order of grant of bail and, therefore, he prays that the applicant shall be permitted to furnish cash surety of Rs.50,000/- and that he would submit the solvency within three weeks from the date of release. The oral prayer is granted.Application stands disposed of.

(SMT.SADHANA S.JADHAV, J.)

****

Cross Citation : 2007 ALL MR (Cri) 1693

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

B. H. MARLAPALLE, J.

Sunil Laxman Patil….Vs….State of Maharashtra
Criminal Application No.232 of 2007
31st January, 2007.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.438 - Anticipatory bail - Grant of - Rape case - Delay in lodging complaint - Sections 328, 376 and 383 of IPC - It is alleged by the complainant /prosecutrix that she was, under false representation, made to travel by the accused with him - she was taken to a hotel and offered some drink and on consumption of said drink she started feeling giddiness, next day, she noticed that she was subjected to sexual intercourse- complaint was lodged against accused of inducing her to have sexual intercourse with him and she further threatened on that count to pay a sum of Rs.5 Lacs - Complaint filed almost about 9 months after the alleged incident - Prosecutrix aged 27 years, possessing degree - It is a fit case to grant anticipatory bail. [Para (2)]

==========Ms.

Mallika In Gale, for Applicant. . Mr. Y. S. Shinde, APP, for State.

JUDGMENT: - Heard Mr. Ingale the learned counsel for the applicant who claims to be a student of second year LL.B. at Manichdnci Pahade Law College, Aurangabad ._ He is of the age of 26 years and prays for the protection of anticipatory bail in respect of C.R. No.5 of 2007 registered With the Deccan Police Station at Pune. Said C.R. has been registered for the offences punishable under Sections 328, 376 and 383 of IPC on 4-1- 2007. It is alleged by the complaint - prosecutrix that on 8-3-2006 she was, under false representation, made to travel by the accused with him on the Journey from Mumbai-Aurangabad via Pune and at Pune they broke the Journey, she was taken to a hotel and offered some drink at about 10.30 p.m. and on on 9-3-2006 when she woke up and recovered, she noticed that the accused and herself were in bed and she was subjected to sexual intercourse. When she questioned the accused he again had forced her in Sexual intercourse. Having realised that she was misrepresented, she came out of the hotel and came back to her home at Mumbai.

2 The complaint has been lodged for the first time, as per her, on 4-1-2007. However, the applicant states that on 26-8-2006 he was © With All Maharashtra Law Reporter,MLunbai 400052 24/10/2013 threatened by the complainant that a complaint was lodged against him already of inducing her to have sexual intercourse with him by making a false promise of marriage and she further threatened the accused on that count to pay a sum of Rs.5 lacs. He states that two police constables approached him on 28-8-2006 and he had moved an anticipatory bail application before the Sessions Court at Pune on 4-9-2006. The said application came to be withdrawn on the basis of the investigation report filed by the police and more particularly stating that the C.R was not Registered.

3 I have perused the investigation papers, including the F.I.R. The prosecutrix is of the age of 27 years, possesses a degree in law. The complaint of an incident that took place in the night of. 8-3-2006 and in the morning of 9-3- 2006 has been filed on 4-1-2007 i.e. almost about 9 months later. Consequent to the order passed by this court on 23-1-2007 it is stated by the learned counsel for the applicant that applicant has been reporting to the Deccan Police Station, except on 26-1-2007'. I am satisfied that this is a fit case to grant anticipatory bail.

4 Hence the application is allowed and it is directed that in case the applicant is taken in custody in comiection with C.R. No.5 of 2007 registered with Deccan Police Station, Pune, he shall be released on bail forthwith on furnishing a PR bond in the sum of Rs.3,000/- with one solvent surety in the like amount and on the further condition that he shall report to the Deccan Police Station on every Sunday between 3 p.m. to 5p.m. for a period of four weeks from today.

Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2010 ALL MR (Cri) 92

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

A. P.DESHPANDE,J.

Shiney Suraj Ahuja ….Vs…. State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application No.4170 of 2009

1st October, 2009.

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 - Penal Code (1860), Ss.376, 342, 506(2) - Bail - Grant of - While considering the bail application, the Court is not supposed to deal with the submissions in minute details and pronounce correctness or otherwise of the same - Applicant in custody since last 3-1/2 months - No need for any custodial interrogation at this stage- Bail granted with conditions

B) while dealing with the bail application the well recognized two guiding factors assume greater significance and the same are (1) possibility of the Applicant fleeing from justice in the event he is enlarged on bail and (2) possibility of the Applicant tampering with the evidence. Having regard to the family background of the Applicant coupled with the fact that the Applicant is permanent resident of Mumbai engaged in acting in the films and being possessed of immovable property at Mumbai, it can be safely assumed that the possibility of Applicant fleeing from justice does not exist. It is also so found by the Sessions Judge. So far as the possibility of tampering of evidence is concerned, the same cannot be ruled out for the reason that the Applicant is more resourceful and better placed as compared to the prosecutrix who is a maid servant. Hence, appropriate conditions will have to be imposed so that the apprehension of the prosecution is properly addressed. On prima facie consideration of the evidence and material on record a case for grant of bail , made out and hence, is entitled to be released on bail. (Paras [_9 to_J_2])

==========

Mr. SHIRISH GUPTE, Sr. Counsel i /b Mr. M. S. MOHITE & Mr. SHRIKANT SHIVADE & Mrs. NEHA BHIDE, Advocates for the Applicant.

Ms. S. D. SHINDE, APP for the Respondent/State.

A. P. DESHPANDE, J.:- This is an application moved for grant of bail under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure by the Applicant who is a film actor, against whom crime has been registered bearing Crime No.188/2009 for commission of the offences under Sections 376 506(2) of the Indian Penal Code on lodging of an FIR by one Madhun Josm with the Oshiwara Police Station on 14.06.2009. The Applicant came to be arrested on the same day and is in custody since then till date.

2. It is the case of the prosecution that the prosecutrix Madhuri Joshi who is aged about 20 years was working as maid servant at the residential premises of the Applicant since 07.05.2009 and her working hours were from 9:00 am to 6:00 pm. Besides the prosecutrix, two other employees were also working at the residence of the Applicant. One of them was Sangita who was a fulltime servant and used to reside in the same flat of the Applicant whereas other was a cook who used to visit twice a day for preparing the food. One of the witnesses by name Smt. Rekha Mane is acquaintance of the prosecutrix and as the prosecutrix was unemployed at the relevant point of time, Rekha Mane intimated that there is vacancy at the residential premises of the Applicant and hence, the prosecutrix could seek the appointment as a maidservant. The Applicant's family comprises of self. wife and a girl child aged about 1 and 1/2 year. About 8 days prior to the occurrence of incident, wife and daughter of the Applicant had gone io D-lh' and were not in the flat on the date when the incident took place. According to the First Information Report, a day prior to the incident i.e. on 13.06.2009 the Applicant was in the flat. The cook after preparing the food had left. By about 12 O'clock Sangita had gone to see her sister and thus, the Applicant and the prosecutrix alone were in the flat. By about 3:30 pm the Applicant had asked the prosecutrix to switch on the cork of the water tab which was located on the loft. Usually this work was being performed by Sangita but as she was not at home, the prosecutrix was asked by the Applicant to do the same. Hence, the prosecutrix climbed up for reaching the loft taking support. of the basin and wooden-rest with a view to switch on the tab at which point of time the present Applicant had held the legs of prosecutrix near ihe ankle. The prosecutrix told the Applicant not to touch her and she came do^n o^{r} her own. It is also stated that the prosecutrix informed the Applicant that she does not like being touched. The Applicant told her that "I am holding you so that you should not fall". But as the prosecutrix protested, the Applicant had left her. After the duty hours were over on that day the prosecutrix left the place along with Rekha Mane as usual.

On the next day i.e. on 14.06.2009 the prosecutrix had reached the residence of Applicant in the company of Rekha Mane. The Applicant was at the residence on that day. At about 3:00 p.m. Sangita, the other servant, after seeking permission from the Applicant had gone to Church and the prosecutrix was washing the utensils in kitchen. At that time, the Applicant was rearranging the cassettes and CDs in his bedroom. The Applicant called the prosecutrix , hence, the prosecutrix washed her hands and went to the bed room. After she entered the bedroom the Applicant locked the door. It is stated in the First Information Report that the sliding windows of the bedroom were already locked. The prosecutrix asked the Applicant as to why is he closing the door and in response to the same, the Applicant asked the prosecutrix to sit on the bed. The Applicant held her hand and made her sit on the bed. The Applicant made the prosecutrix lay on the bed and he mounted on her. The prosecutrix raised an alarm and shouted, at that time, the Applicant had held both the hands of prosecutrix above her head and pressed her legs by his legs. The prosecutrix claims to have continued shouting and hence, the Applicant picked up a pillow from the bed and gagged her mouth. The prosecutrix continued her efforts to raise alarm even in that situation, hence, the Applicant allegedly threaten the prosecutrix with death and removed the pillow from her mouth. The Applicant then removed his cloths and the cloths from the person of prosecutrix and forcibly committed sexual intercourse. After the Applicant committed rape, the prosecutrix put on the cloths. The Applicant confined the prosecutrix in the bedroom upto 5:00 pm by administering the threats. Thereafter, the prosecutrix went to the kitchen and was seated there for sometime as she was stunned. While the prosecutrix was sitting in the kitchen, the door bell rang and the prosecutrix opened the door. Rekha Mane was there in the lobby and according to the First Information Report, the prosecutrix narrated the incident to the said witness Rekha Mane. Rekha Mane tried to console the prosecutrix and took the prosecutrix to the residence of one Adarsha Gupta and his wife. The prosecutrix narrated the incident in brief to them. Along with Mr. & Mrs. Gupta, the prosecutrix in the company of Rekha Mane reached the Police Station and lodged the First Information Report.

3. In the backdrop of the facts and circumstances narrated in the First Information Report, the learned senior counsel Shri. Gupte appearing for the Applicant has submitted that in the first place, sexual intercourse itself is not established. To bring home the point, my attention is invited to the statement of prosecutrix recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. In the said statement according to the learned counsel for the Applicant, there is no mention of any sexual intercourse or rape and what is mentioned in the said statement is that the Applicant has committed " Atyachar " on the prosecutrix. In the submission of the learned counsel for the Applicant, the word " Atyachar " would mean atrocity and not rape or intercourse. Barring use of the said word " Atyachar " the alleged act of rape or forcible sexual intercourse has not been stated. It is then submitted that the medical examination of the prosecutrix would reveal that there were no injuries found on the person or private parts of the prosecutrix. However, on local examination of the private parts, hymen was found torn at 3 positions i.e. 3 O'clock, 6 O'clock and 9 O'clock. The tears at 3 O'clock and 9 O'clock positions were healed and this suggests that the prosecutrix was used to sexual intercourse.

4. My attention is also invited to the chemical analyzer's reportreceived from the Forensic Science Laboratory, Mumbai. The said report dated 26.06.2009 deals with 13 articles submitted to the laboratory. Articles at Items Nos.l to 6 are the cloths worn by the prosecutrix at the time of alleged commission of the crime whereas articles at Items Nos.7 and 8 were seized from the bedroom viz. the place of crime being the bed-sheet and pillow-cover whereas the articles at Items Nos.9 to 11 are the cloths worn by the Applicant at the time of incident and Articles Nos.l 2 and 13 are the quilt (Rajai) and curtain. No semen or blood was detected either on the cloths of the prosecutrix or the Applicant. The old blood stains were found at Exhibits-2 and 4 which appeared to be washed.

5. Heavily relying on the said chemical analyzer's report, the learned counsel for the Applicant has contended that in absence of detection of the blood or semen on the cloths of the Applicant or the prosecutrix, so also on the bed-sheet it is difficult to believe that any sexual intercourse was committed. No semen or blood stains are found on the person or private parts of the prosecutrix. The learned counsel for the Applicant has also taken an objection to the manner in which the investigation is conducted. It is submitted that there are four flats on each floor of the building. The prosecutrix claims to have shouted when the Applicant tried to commit rape and thus, it was obligatory on the part of the Investigating Officer to record the statements of the occupants of the adjoining flats. It is not in dispute that part of wall of the bedroom of the Applicant is common wall for two flats, one of the Applicant and other of his neighbour. It is then submitted that had the Investigating Officer recorded the statements of the neighbourers the case of prosecutrix that she shouted and raised an alarm would have been falsified. The submission is that the investigation is far from just and fair.

6. Relying on the circumstances referred to herein above, the earned counsel for the Applicant has submitted that in the first place no case of sexual intercourse was made out. Alternatively, it is submitted diat the consent cannot be ruled out. It is then emphatically submitted that the investigation is over and the charge-sheet has been filed. The continued detention of the Applicant in custody is not required. In his submission, if the Applicant is not released on bail his further detention in custody would partake the nature of punishment before conviction. It is then stated that the Applicant is ready and willing to abide by whatever conditions are imposed. It is pointed out that the Sessions Judge has already recorded the finding in favour of the Applicant that there are no chances of the Applicant fleeing from justice, however, the bail was refused to the Applicant by the Sessions Judge as he found the apprehension of the prosecution about possibility of tampering of evidence to be well founded. In that context, it is submitted that the Applicant is ready and willing to reside at Delhi where his parents reside and thus, the possibility of tampering with the evidence can be taken care of.

7. Per contra, the learned APP has pointed out that the version of prosecutrix stands corroborated by the evidence of Rekha Mane to whom the prosecutrix had made immediate disclosure of the incident. It is also pointed out that vaginal smear on slides wrapped in paper was sent to the Forensic Science Laboratory and the report of the chemical analyzer clearly shows that the DNA extracted from (1) vaginal smear slides of victim Madhuri and (2) control blood sample of the Applicant was successfully typed at 16 male specific YSTR loci using PCR amplification technique. In the DNA typing, all 16 genetic systems analyzed with the PCR using male specific YSTR system the male haplotypes obtained in vaginal smear slides of victim Madhuri exactly matched with male haplotypes in control blood sample of the Applicant. Taking the support of the said DNA report, it is contended that the sexual intercourse is established and this piece of evidence strongly corroborates the version of the prosecutrix. It is also pointed out that in the medical examination of the Applicant, 03 abrasions were noticed, one on the left wrist, second at the base of right little finger and third at the base of right ring finger. The said injuries/abrasions are stated to be within 24 hours. It is submitted that the injuries would go to support the prosecution case of resistance by the prosecutrix which rules out consent.

8. According to the learned counsel for the Applicant, the said injuries/abrasions could be caused while undertaking the day to day work.

9. While considering the bail application, the Court is not supposed to deal with the submissions in minute details and pronounce of the correctness or otherwise of the same, however, the Court is expected to broadly consider the evidence, material and circumstances on record and then form an opinion as to whether the Applicant is entitled to be released on bail or otherwise. In the facts of the present case the well recognized two guiding factors assume greater significance and the same are (1) possibility of the Applicant fleeing from justice in the event he is enlarged on bail and (2) possibility of the Applicant tampering with the evidence.

10. Having regard to the family background of the Applicant coupled with the fact that the Applicant is permanent resident of Mumbai engaged in acting in the films and being possessed of immovable property at Mumbai, it can be safely assumed that the possibility of Applicant fleeing from justice does not exist. It is also so found by the Sessions Judge.

11. So far as the possibility of tampering of evidence is concerned, the same cannot be ruled out for the reason that the Applicant ismore resourceful and better placed as compared to the prosecutrix who is a maid servant. Hence, appropriate conditions will have to be imposed so that the apprehension of the prosecution is properly addressed.

12. With the risk of repetition it has to be stated that the investigation is over and the charge-sheet has been filed and the Applicant is in custody since last 03 and 1/2 months. There is no need for any custodial interrogation at this stage. On prima facie consideration of the evidence and material on record, I am of the view that the Applicant has made out ? case for grant of bail and hence, is entitled to be released on bail. I haste; that this observation is made only for the purpose of decision oi' the bail application. The concern of the prosecution about possibility of tampering of the evidence can be taken care of by putting the Applicant to terms.

13. Hence, I pass the following order:

(a) The Applicant shall be released on bail on executing a personal bond in a sum of Rs.50,000 /- with one or two sureties in the like amount subject to the condition that the Applicant shall not stay in Mumbai and shall stay at Delhi till conclusion of the trial. The Applicant shall inform and intimate his residential address of Delhi to the Superintendent of Jail so also to the Investigating Officer before his release from jail.

(b) The Applicant shall not leave India without prior permission of the Court. If the Applicant is possessing a passport, he shall deposit the same with the Investigating Officer immediately on his release from jail.

(c) The Applicant shall attend the nearest Police Station at Delhi once a week till conclusion of the trial with intimation to the Investigating Officer.

(d) The Applicant is permitted to enter city of Mumbai for attending the dates before the Sessions Court in the present case.

(e) The Applicant shall not directly or indirectly make any muucemeiiu threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case and shall not tamper with the evidence.

(f) Liberty is granted to the Applicant to apply for modification of terms after expiry of a period of six months.

(g) The Application is allowed and disposed of accordingly.

At this stage learned counsel for the applicant seeks permission to deposit bail amount in cash for a period of three weeks during which period the applicant would in a position to furnish surety. Permission prayed for is granted. Applicant is allowed to deposit bail amount in cash for a period of three weeks.

Application allowed.

****

Cross citation: 1962 (1) Cri. L. J. 673

TRIPURA HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 T. N. R. TIRUMALPAD, J.C. (Single Bench)

Criminal Ref. No. 17 of 1960, D/- 22 -3 -1961., reference made by S.J., Tripura, in Criminal Motion No. 69 of 1960.

Easih Mia and another….Vs…. Tripura Administration

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.167, S.496, S.497 - BAIL - INVESTIGATION - ARREST - Arrest illegal - Effect - It will be wrong for a Magistrate either to order detention of the accused u/S.167 or to call upon him to produce sureties if the arrest is illegal. (Para 15)

(B) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.498, S.514 - ARREST - BAIL - SURETY - Illegal arrest - Bail by Sessions Judge - Enforcement of bail bond against sureties. The bond taken on a bail granted by the Sessions Judge to a person who has been illegally committed to prison will itself be invalid and such an invalid bail bond cannot be enforced against the sureties. (Para 18)

(C) Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.496 - BAIL - APPEARANCE - Bail bond - Construction - Person required to appear before court to answer charge - Person cannot be asked to appear before charge is framed. (Para 21)

Where a person and his sureties only undertook to appear before the court on each and every date to be fixed in future to answer the charge brought against him, the Court cannot call upon such person to appear before it before any charge was brought against him and he also is not bound to appear if the court fixes a date merely for appearance, but not to answer any charge brought against him. And there is no duty cast on the sureties to produce him in court, if the Court chooses to direct his production for no purpose whatsoever

==========

M.R. Choudhary, for Petitioners; R.K. Bhattacherjee, Govt. Advocate with M.C. Chakraborty, for Respondent.

JUDGEMENT

ORDER : In this reference the learned Sessions Judge has recommended that the orders of the District Magistrate dated 10-5-60 and 30-5-60, forfeiting the bail bond given by the two sureties for the appearance in Court of one Suruj Mia Bhuiya and calling upon the sureties to pay the penalty and ordering distress warrant for the realisation of the penalty, should be set aside.

2. To understand the points involved in this reference the following facts have to be stated :

Suruj Mia Bhuiya was arrested by the Sonamura Police , on 12-5-58 under Sec. 54 Cri. P. C. and under Sec. 4 of the Indian Passport Act and produced before the S. D. M. Sonamura on 13-5-58 with a report by a police officer that he was arrested under the said sections suspecting that he was a Pakistani national and that he had come to India with a view to commit some cognizable offence. The S. D. M. remanded him to custody, but subsequently on 26-5-58 granted him bail on condition that he lived within Sonamura town and reported to the O/C, Sonamura police station daily.

3. We find from the note paper of the S. D. M. dated 29-5-58 that Suruj Mia was immediately wanted at Agartala by the District Magistrate. I have searched the entire record and also given time to the Government Advocate to produce the order of the District Magistrate by which he directed the S. D. M. to produce the arrested person before him. At first, it was stated that it may have been by a Police Wireless message. Then I wanted the message to be produced. I was informed after a month's adjournment that there was no such order or message on record.

4. Suruj Mia on learning that he was wanted by the District Magistrate to appear before him duly presented himself before that officer on 2-6-58. The District Magistrate then directed him to be taken into custody. He moved for bail before the District Magistrate, but bail was refused on 18-6-58. I get even these details from the later order of the Sessions Judge in the bail application. The records relating to the order of arrest and refusal of bail by the District Magistrate are not forthcoming.

5. Thereupon Suruj Mia applied to the Sessions Judge Sri S. C. Talukdar and the Sessions Judge granted him bail on 4-7-58. A bail bond for Rs. 2000/- with two sureties of like amount was to be given to the satisfaction of the District Magistrate. Further conditions of the bail were that Suruj Mia should not stir out of the Municipal area of Agartala and must daily report to the O/C, Kotwali police station, but that he will report to the S. D. M. Sonamura whenever called for in connection with any case that may be started against him.

6. The District Magistrate then took bail and the petitioners were the two sureties. The bail bond did not mention the conditions laid down in the Sessions Judge's order but simply said that Suruj Mia will appear before the District Magistrate on each and every date to be fixed in future to answer to the charge brought against him and that he will continue to so attend Court until otherwise directed by the Court. Later the learned Sessions Judge on application by Suruj Mia but without notice to the sureties altered the condition and permitted Suruj Mia to stay with his parents at Sonamura, by his order dated 8-9-1958.

7. In the meantime, the District Magistrate appears to have got the records in the case from the S. D. M. Sonamura. I find from the records that they were sent through a police officer to the District Magistrate. But there is no written order by the District Magistrate calling for the records. On 1-6-59 the District Magistrate passed an order in the said record after hearing the lawyer for Suruj Mia that the case was pending for more than a year and no specific charge was brought against the accused till then and there was no reason to drag on the case and so he transferred the case to Sri N. Singh, Magistrate first class, Sonamura for speedy disposal.

8. On receipt of the records Sri N. Singh directed the sureties on 8-8-59 to produce Suruj Mia in Court. We are unable to know for what purpose he was directed to be produced, as he had no charge at all to meet and no charge-sheet had been filed by the police against him as required under Sec. 173 Cri. P. C. Any way the Magistrate passed the order. But the sureties were not able to produce him. So the Magistrate Sri N. Singh forfeited the bail bond and directed them on 5-10-59 to pay the penalty or to show cause under S. 514 Cri. P. C. The petitioners thereupon appealed to the District Magistrate under Sec. 515 Cri. P. C In that appeal, the District Magisrate set aside the order of the Magistrate as according to him the bond was for appearance before his Court and he alone could forfeit the bail bond.

@page-CriLJ675

9. After allowing the appeal on 15-2-60, he withdrew the case from the Magistrate Sri N. Singh to his own file and then issued notice on 17-2-60 to the sureties to produce Suruj Mia before him on 7-3-60. We are unable to know for what purpose the District Magistrate wanted Suruj Mia to be produced as even then no charge-sheet had been filed against him by the police. This was stated by the District Magistrate himself in his order dated 7-3-60 and he also brought it to the notice of the Superintendent of Police. But still no charge-sheet was filed till September 1960. Still he again called upon the sureties on 11-9-60 On their failure to produce the accused, to show cause why the bail bond should not be forfeited. The sureties pointed out to the District Magistrate that the bail bond was not worded in accordance with the order of the Sessions Judge and that it was, therefore, invalid and the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to forfeit the bail bond. But that argument was not accepted by him and he directed them to pay the penalty on 10-5-60. Subsequently on 30-5-60 he directed the issue of distress warrant against the sureties.

10. It is under these circumstances that the sureties applied under Sec. 435 to Sri S. N. Banerjee, successor of Sri, S. C. Talukdar Sessions Judge and he made the reference under Sec. 438 Cri. P. C to this Court.

11. This case discloses a series of acts by the police and by Criminal Courts, which were totally unwarranted under the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code.

The police in the first place had no authority to arrest Suruj Mia under section 54 Cr. P. C., or under section 4 of the Indian Passport Act. The report of the police officer dated 13-5-58 to the S. D. M. Sonamura showed that the arrest under section 54 Cr. P. C., and under section 4 of the Indian Passport Act was made because it was suspected that Suruj Mia was a Pakistani national and had come to India with a view to commit some cognizable offence.

12. A person cannot be arrested under section 54 Cr. P. C., either because he is suspected to be a Pakistani or because it is suspected that he came to India with a view to commit some cognizable offence. Under section 54 (1) first, a police officer can arrest a person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned. It is clear from this that a cognizable offence must have been committed and the person sought to be arrested must have been concerned with the said offence or at least reasonable suspicion existed of his having been so concerned. It is not enough to arrest under S. 54 that there was likelihood of a cognizable offence being committed in the future. There was no statement in the first report dated 13-5-58 by the police officer that any cognizable offence has been committed, So the arrest under S. 54 Cr. P. C., was illegal.

13. The police have, of course, powers of arrest to prevent the commission of a cognizable offence. But it is not under S. 54 Cr. P. C. In the case of vagabonds and habitual robbers, an officer-in-charge of a police station can arrest a person found taking precaution to conceal his presence within the limits of such police station, under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizablel offence. This is under S. 55. Again under S. 151, Cr. P. C., a police officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented. The first report, dated 13-5-58, by the police officer does not show that the conditions for the exercise of the power of arrest either under S. 55 or under S. 151 Cr. P. C., existed. In any case the arrest in our present case was not made under either of those sections. The arrest under S. 54 Cr. P. C., was, clearly, illegal.

14. Nor could a police officer arrest a person under S. 4 of the Indian Passport Act on suspicion that he is a Pakistani. An arrest under S. 4 can be made only for contravention or reasonable suspicion of contravention of any rule or order made under S. 3, of the said Act. Being a Pakistani, even if true, cannot be a contravention of the rules made under S. 3. What is prohibited under the rules framed under S. 3 is any person whether he is a Pakistani or any other national or even an Indian national entering India from outside without a valid Passport. Section 4 of the Indian Passport Act will not give the authority to a police officer to call upon any man inside India on suspicion that he is foreigner to produce his Passport or to arrest him in case he fails to produce it. A foreigner found inside India can be proceeded against under the Foreigners Act, but cannot be arrested under the Indian Passport Act, I have pointed this out in various decisions of mine.

15. Thus the arrest of Suruj Mia either under S. 54 Cr. P. C. or S. 4 of the Indian Passport Act was certainly illegal. When a person is thus brought before a Magistrate under arrest, it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the arrest was legally made and if he finds that the arrest was illegal, it is his duty to direct the release of the person immediately. The Criminal Procedure Code has provided the production before a Magistrate under S. 167 as a check to prevent the abuse of the wide powers given to the police for arrest without warrant. It will be wrong for a Magistrate either to order detention of the accused under S. 167 Cr. P. C. or to call upon him to produce sureties under S. 496 or 497 Cr. P. C., if the arrest is illegal. At least, he has to be released on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance under S. 496 or 497 Cr. P. C. Thus, the S. D. M. Sonamura was wrong in calling upon Suruj Mia to give sureties to support his bail. Since the very arrest of Suruj Mia was thus illegal, all the subsequent proceedings including the order for bail by the S. D. M. Sonamura, the subsequent commitment to custody by the District Magistrate, the grant of bail by the Sessions Judge, the forfeiture of the bail bond and the issue of distress warrant by the District Magistrate were all illegal. On that ground alone, this reference has to be accepted.

@page-CriLJ676

16. When once the S. D. M. Sonamura had released Suruj Mia on bail, the District Magistrate had no authority to direct that Suruj Mia should be produced before him. Nor had he any authority to take him into custody in the face of the bail given by the S. D. M. No provision in the Cr. P. C., has been pointed out which would give jurisdiction to the District Magistrate to do so. Section 497(5) Cr. P. C. authorises only a High Court or a Court of Sessions to cause the arrest of a person who has been released on bail and to commit him to custody. The District Magistrate had no such power. In this case, there was no application before the District Magistrate by the police to cancel the bail given by the S. D. M. Sonamura or to take Suruj Mia into custody again.

17. It is not known on what information the District Magistrate directed the production of Suruj Mia before him or caused him to be committed to custody when Suruj Mia appeared before him on 2-6-58. If he did so on getting any information given by the police under S. 62 Cr. P. C., there must be something on record to show it. But the learned Government Advocate was not able to produce any written order from the District Magistrate.

It is surprising that no written order at all was passed by him either calling upon the S. D. M. Sonamura to produce Suruj Mia before him or committing Suruj Mia to custody. He was dealing with the liberty of a citizen guaranteed under the Constitution and that too, not as an officer of the executive administration, but as a Judge of the Criminal Court. How can he act in such a cavalier fashion and issue oral orders in such matters?

18. Thus, when once Suruj Mia was released on bail under the orders of S. D. M. Sonamura, the commitment to custody of Suruj Mia by the District Magistrate was clearly illegal. This illegality again makes the subsequent bail proceedings illegal. Any bail bond taken as a result of such illegal procedure cannot therefore be enforced either against Suruj Mia or against any sureties. There was some duty cast on the Sessions Judge Mr. S. C. Talukdar when the matter came up before him on the motion of Suruj Mia for bail to see if his arrest and detention under the orders of the District Magistrate were in accordance with law. I have pointed out now that they were not in accordance with law.

It was the duty of the Sessions Judge when the matter came up before him in bail proceedings to have examined the records and taken action under S. 435 and reported the matter to this Court under S. 438 for action under S. 439 Cr. P. C. In merely releasing Suruj Mia on bail the learned Sessions Judge in a way accepted that the detention under the orders of the District Magistrate was legal. Still the bail bond taken on such bail granted by the Sessions Judge to a person who has been illegally committed to prison will itself be invalid and such an invaid bail bond cannot be enforced against the sureties. On that ground also this reference has to be accepted.

19. The bail bond was taken by the District Magistrate as directed by the Sessions Judge. Hence it has to be in conformity with the order granting bail. The Sessions Judge did not order that the bail bond was to be for appearance before the District Magistrate. In fact, there was no case pending before the District Magistrate against Suruj Mia. By illegally committing Suruj Mia to prison, the District Magistrate cannot say that there was any case before him against Suruj Mia. He did not pass any order transferring the proceeding pending before the S. D. M. Sonamura to his own file. The District Magistrate can, no doubt, transfer a case from the file of the S. D. M. Sonamura to his own file under S. 528 Cr. P. C. But under that section he can transfer only a case. There was no case at all against Suruj Mia. A case can be said to have arisen only when a Magistrate has taken cognizance of an offence under S. 190. That can be done in the present case only after the police have submitted a report under S. 173 Cr. P. C. That stage had not been reached.

All that the S. D. M. Sonamura did in this matter was to grant bail to Suruj Mia when he was produced before him under S. 167 Cr. P. C. Such a matter cannot be transferred by the District Magistrate under S. 528, Cr. P. C. Further, I have pointed out that no written orders were passed by the District Magistrate transferring the matter to his file. The procedure adopted appears to have been to intimate to the S. D. M. Sonamura orally through the police to direct the production of Suruj Mia before the District Magistrate and to send the record through the police officer. Such procedure is unheard of in a Court of law. He seems to have acted not as a judicial officer bound by law and legal procedure, but as an executive officer issuing oral instructions to a subordinate executive officer.

20. Thus there was no proceeding before the District Magistrate in respect of which he could have directed Suruj Mia to appear before him or taken him into custody. Hence he could not take a bail bond from Suruj Mia to appear before him. The learned Sessions Judge himself treated it as a matter pending before the S. D. M. Sonamura and directed in his order, dated 4-7-58, that Suruj Mia was to appear before the S. D. M. Sonamura whenever called in connection with any case that may be started against him. As no case had been started against Suruj Mia his appearance either before the District Magistrate or before the S. D. M. Sonamura did not arise at all.

21. When we turn to the bail bond in question, we find that what Suruj Mia and his sureties undertook therein was to appear before the Court on each and every date to be fixed in future, to answer the charge brought against him. It is clear from this that before any charge was brought against him the Court cannot call upon Suruj Mia to appear before it and Suruj Mia also is not bound to appear if the Court fixes a date merely for appearance, but not to anwer any charge brought against him. I have already pointed out that no charge till this date has been brought against Suruj Mia. On this ground also, even granting that the bail bond for appearance before the District Magistrate was valid, the time to direct the appearance of Suruj Mia had not arrived under the bail bond and there was no duty cast on the sureties to produce him in Court, if the Court chose to direct his production for no purpose whatsoever.

@page-CriLJ677

We can envisage the situation when no charge is brought against Suruj Mia for years and the Court goes on fixing dates after dates for his appearance and directs the sureties to produce him. Such an order by the Court will be totally meaningless and will be nothing but harassment. I cannot understand why either the S. D. M. or the District Magistrate should have directed the production of Suruj Mia in Court when there was no charge against him. There must be some purpose in an order of Court.

22. No doubt, the learned Sessions Judge in granting bail, had directed Suruj Mia not to leave the limits of Agartala town. But that was not included in the surety bond. If that had been violated, I cart understand a Court directing the production of Suruj Mia in Court. But the particular bail bond in question did not include that condition and on that bail bond which was only for his appearance on the day fixed to meet a charge brought against him, the Court cannot direct his production on the ground that he had left the limits of Agartala town.

23. On 1-6-59 the District Magistrate transferred the case to the file of Sri N. Singh, first class Magistrate, Sonamura. When the original transfer to his own file was illegal, this further transfer to the file of Sri N. Singh was equally illegal. The District Magistrate had stated in his order dated 1-6-59 that no specific charge was brought against Suruj Mia till then, though more than a year had passed. One fails to understand why he should have transferred the case to Sri N. Singh in such a situation. He could have himself directed the release of Suruj Mia. After all, when he found that Suruj Mia had no case at all to meet there was no point in continuing the bail or in transferring the case to Sri N. Singh. Nor was there any meaning in Sri N. Singh's calling on the sureties to produce the accused. He could have released Suruj Mia. Of course, the forfeiture of the bail bond by Sri N. Singh was beyond his jurisdiction.

24. The further transfer of the case to his file on 17-2-60 was another meaningless thing which the District Magistrate did. It was after this that he forfeited the bail bond himself on the ground that he was the proper authority to forfeit the surety bond. I have pointed out in this order that he had no such authority not only to forfeit the surety bond but even to commit Suruj Mia to custody or to take bail from him. I have also pointed out that the learned Sessions Judge was himself wrong in having directed bail instead of reporting to this Court to take action under S. 439.

25. Thus the whole proceeding in this case from beginning to end has been illegally done by the police, by the S. D. M., and the District Magistrate. This case discloses that it is high time that the judiciary is separated from the executive and that criminal judicial posts should be manned by persons having knowledge and experience of law and legal procedure and having legal training. Executive officers put in charge of judicial work are apt not to do their duties in a judicial manner in accordance with statutory provisions. When even the District Magistrate to whom all the other Magistrates are subordinate can act in this executive fashion in respect of matters which are strictly judicial we can imagine the position of Magistrates subordinate to him. A copy of this order will go to the Tripura Administration. It will be well if the Tripura Administration will appoint as District Magistrate under S. 10, Criminal Procedure Code, a judicial officer having legal training and knowledge and experience of law and legal procedure, so that he may carry out the judicial functions of the District Magistrate under the Cr. P. C. This has been done in the Union Territory of Manipur.

26. The reference is accepted and the orders of the District Magistrate dated 10-5-60 and 30-5-60 are set aside.

Reference accepted.

****

Cross Citation: 2002-BCR-(1)-689

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : A.M.KHANWILKAR,J

KHEMLO SAKHARAM SAWANT ...Vs...STATE

Criminal Misc. Application 54 of 2001 Of, May 08,2001

==========

A) Cr. P.C. S. 437 – Bail – Bail is rule jail is exception – In case of offences not punishable in alternative with death, grant of bail is rule, and jail an exception- Observation made by sessions Judge that offence in question was serious one and therefore, applicant ought not to be released on bail – Held, while rejecting bail application the sessions Judge was more influenced by morality than the Principles of law – Accused directed to be released on bail – Court should not get swayed by perception of morality but should confine its decision to the requirement of law – In case of offences not punishable with death or imprison ment for life grant of bail is rule and jail is an exception.

B) Arrest of accused by police – Allegations of abaterment of offence having punishment up to 5 years – No arrest can be made in a routine manner – A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence .

C) Unless principle offender is proceeded and arrested – The action against abater is illegal.

D) Bail –Adjournment – Held When accused is in jail , it would be wholly inaproperiate to again and again adjourn matter to another date .

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) HEARD both sides.

(2.) THIS application takes exception to the order passed by the Sessions Judge, North Goa, Panaji dated May 5, 2001, rejecting the application for bail preferred by the applicant herein.

(3.) BRIEFLY stated, a complaint was received in the Crime Branch, Panaji from Shri Vinay Tendulkar alleging that on 27-4-2001 while he was in the midst of a meeting with the people from his constituency, the applicant/accused approached him for a private talk along with one Deepak Parab and told him that they were sent by Tai, i. e. Smt. Nirmala Sawant, President of Congress (T) of Goa State and seven MLAs of BJP who had shown inclination to join Congress (I) and further that they decided to offered him ministerial berth and Rs. 15 lakhs in cash to split from BJP and support Congress (I) to form Government. On the basis of this complaint, which was registered as Crime No. 3/2001, the concerned Station Officer, forwarded the said report to the Magistrate at around 18. 30 hours and thereafter proceeded to investigate into the matter. It is stated that statements of two witnesses, have been recorded by the concerned Investigating Officer, namely, of Prasad Tendulkar (brother of the complainant) and Rajiv Naik (Personal Assistant of the complainant). It is stated that the Investigating Officer thereafter at around 11. 30 p. m. along with a posse of Police, visited the residential house of the applicant at Amona in Bicholim taluka and he was called upon to accompany the Police for investigation in connection with the said complaint. The record indicates that the applicant followed the police without any resistance, but it is stated that thereafter a group of 40 persons gheraoed the police and prevented them from taking away the applicant. There are certain allegations made in the affidavit about the conduct of the applicant at the relevant point of time. However, that is not the subject matter of the proceedings, for the offence alleged against the applicant, in the present case, is simpliciter under section 12 of the Prevention of Corruption Act. Undisputedly, the applicant was produced before the J. M. F. C. for the purpose of remand to police custody on 29th April, 2001 after he was arrested on 28th April, 2001 around 11. 30 p. m. It is not in dispute that the arrest was not pursuant to the warrant issued by the Court, but during the course of investigation by the concerned Investigation Officer. When the applicant was produced before the Magistrate for Police remand on the ground that his custody was necessary for another 7 days for further investigation, the Magistrate was pleased to reject the said request and ordered judicial custody. The order directing the applicant to be kept in judicial custody has become final. The order does record that statements of witnesses have been recorded and that nothing requires to be recovered. Thereafter, on the next date, the applicant moved the Judicial Magistrate, F. C. , i. e. on 30th April, 2001 for grant of bail. The said application was however rejected on the same day by a reasoned order. The Judicial Magistrate dismissed the application, mainly on the ground that the co-accused was absconding.

(4.) AGAINST this order, the applicant preferred an application before the Sessions Judge, which has been rejected by the impugned order.

(5.) THE learned Addl. Public Prosecutor heavily placed reliance on the reasons recorded by the Sessions Judge and more particularly on the following:-- I would now deal with the contention that the offence with which the accused has been booked is not serious as contended by learned Advocate Lawande. I do not find much force in this contention and the submission is without sound basis. Corruption, bribery, horse trading have become the order of the day corroding the fabric of society in all walks of life and eroding peoples faith in a democratic governance; secured under the Constitution of India to its people justice, liberty and equality. Time and again it is seen that persons in the corridors of power abuse rather than use their power for common good. To say that offence is not serious like murder is adding insult to injury on a society torn between preserving values, and ethics and being drawn and swallowed in vortex of corruption in all walks of life. Like an offence of murder which is a crime against society, similarly corruption is an equally, if not more a serious offence than murder where there is invariably a motive. . . . . The applicant in the instant case as is revealed had obstructed his arrest and even otherwise it is a matter at large that the family of the applicant accused and other persons have already moved for Anticipatory bail apprehending their arrest in that connection. That aspect of the matter cannot weigh while disposing this application but it is referred to in passing to show the conduct of the applicant and what would be his subsequent demeanour, if set at a large, if at all. "

(6.) HEARD both sides at length and perused the record. At the outset, I have no hesitation in observing that the Sessions Court while rejecting the bail application, was more influenced by morality than law. This is evident from the observations made by the Sessions Court that the offence in question was serious enough and therefore the applicant ought not to be released on bail. The Sessions Court, has clearly overlooked that it is the privilege of the Parliament to decide which offence should be treated as serious or otherwise. The legislative intent of treating the offence serious is eloquent from the sentence provided for the said offence. In the present case, the punishment for offence under section 12 is minimum six months and may extend upto a period of five years. This offence, therefore, cannot be equated with a serious offence like murder, as has been observed the Sessions Court. The Court should not be swayed away by the perception of morality, but should confine its decision to the requirements of law. The present application was one for bail and the matter was not before the Sessions Court for trial and imposing of sentence on returning the finding of guilt. In case of bail, the law is well settled. The Apex Court, has time and again observed that bail is a rule and jail is an exception, particularly when the offence in question is not an offence which involves life or death sentence. The parameters for bail in such matters, are well settled.

(7.) MR. Kantak, appearing for the applicant, rightly relied on the decision reported in (Joginder Kumar v. State of U. P. and others), A. I. R. 1994 S. C. 1349, particularly in para 24 to contend that in the present case, the investigating agency had clearly exceeded its authority and acted contrary to the law enunciated by the Apex Court. Reliance has been placed on the following observations of the Apex Court :-

"the above guidelines are merely the incidents of personal liberty guaranteed under the Constitution of India. No arrest can be made because it is lawful for the Police Officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The Police Officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self-esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a Police Officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the persons complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified. Except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a Police Officer issues notice to persons to attend the Station House and not to leave station without permission would do. "

(Emphasis supplied).

(8.) IN the present case Mr. Kantak has rightly criticised the action of arrest on the ground that no offence of abetment could be proceeded against the applicant unless the principal offender was booked. The learned Addl. P. P. submits that necessary action will be taken against the principal offender after investigation is complete. The only justification for such a stand seems to be because of the fact that the principal offender is a sitting M. L. A. If this be so, there was hardly any reason for the Investigating Officer to hasten the arrest of the applicant, who is undoubtedly charged only for the offence of abetment. Now that the Investigating Officer has already recorded statements of relevant witnesses and no other recovery is to be made as rightly observed by the J. M. F. C. , while ordering judicial custody; and in any case the applicant is in judicial custody since 29-4-2001, therefore, no fruitful purpose would be served by keeping him in jail. The applicant has reasonably good defence and as urged by Mr. Kantak, the present action against the applicant seems to be wholly unwarranted and inappropriate.

(9.) THE learned Addl. Public Prosecutor, on the other hand relied on the observations made by the Apex Court in the matter of (Shahzad Hasan Khan v. Ishtiaq Hasan Khan and another), reported in A. I. R. 1987 S. C. 1613. In para 7 of the said decision, the Apex Court observed thus :---

"The learned Judge also failed to consider the question that there were serious allegations of tampering of evidence on behalf of the accused persons. Vishram and Jagdish, two eye-witnesses had filed written applications before the trial Court making serious allegations against Masod and Masroof brothers of respondent No. 1. They alleged that they had been kidnapped and their signatures and thumb impressions had been obtained on some blank papers and they were being threatened with dire consequences and they requested the Court for being granted police protection. One of the salutary principle in granting bail is that the Court should be satisfied that the accused being enlarged on bail will not be in a position to tamper with the evidence. When allegations of tampering of evidence are made, it is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself whether those allegations have basis (they can seldom be proved by concrete evidence) and if the allegations are not found to be concocted it would not be a proper exercise of jurisdiction in enlarging the accused on bail. In the instant case there were serious allegations but the learned Judge did not either consider or test the same. "

(10.) IN the present case, although the Investigating Agency has alleged that if the applicant is released on bail, he is likely to tamper with the evidence. This apprehension is totally misplaced, for the simple reason that having regard to the nature of the allegations in the complaint, the crucial evidence is that of the complainant himself. Therefore, in case the applicant, if released on bail, and attempts to bring any pressure on the complainant, that would be a good case for cancellation of bail, but it will result in miscarriage of justice to keep the applicant in custody on the basis of mere apprehension. It is not necessary for this Court to go into the correctness of the statements recorded by the Investigating Officer for the same will have to be done at the appropriate stage during the trial. For the time being, what is to be seen, is the nature of the offence; and the possibility of the applicant, if released on bail, making any attempt to tamper with the prosecution evidence or witnesses. As observed earlier, the complaint is simpliciter for an offence under section 12 of the Prevention of Corruption Act, and in that connection, necessary evidence has already been recorded by the Investigating Agency. Merely because co-accused is absconding, is not a sufficient ground to refuse bail in such matters especially when the principal offender has not been booked and the applicant is merely charged of abetment. In the circumstances, I have no hesitation in observing that the Sessions Court was clearly in error in refusing bail mainly being influenced by considerations other than law.

(11.) THE learned Addl. Public Prosecutor points out that on account of the conduct of the applicant, this is not a fit case, where he should be released on bail. In this connection, statement of P. I. Mamlatdar has been relied on to point out that the applicant threatened the said officer to sign a note mentioning that Mr. Mamlatdar had taken Rs. 10 lakhs from Mr. Manohar Parrikar for kidnapping and killing the applicant. It is not in dispute that the said allegation is subject matter of a complaint in a case which is registered as Crime No. 47/2001 before the Bicholim Police Station. The law will take its course in the said proceedings, for the allegations mentioned therein would be considered in those proceedings. I therefore refrain from making any observation regarding the correctness or otherwise thereof.

(12.) THE other circumstance relied upon by the learned Addl. Public Prosecutor is that when the applicant was being arrested by the Investigating Officer, a group of 40 persons who were none else but close relations of the applicant gheraoed the police and prevented them from taking the applicant. The learned Addl. Public Prosecutor fairly concedes that there is nothing on record to indicate that the said persons had gheraoed the Investigating Officer at the instance of or at the instigation of the applicant herein. It appears that the said persons on their own, on the spur of the moment, agitated before the police and in the manner they thought appropriate. This circumstance, therefore, cannot be held against the applicant to refuse bail.

(13.) MR. Kantak, has made a grievance before this Court that although the bail application was preferred before the Sessions Court on 30th April, 2001 and was directed to be listed for hearing on 2nd May, 2001 and which was accordingly heard and arguments concluded, the Sessions Court instead of pronouncing the order on the same day, kept the matter for orders on 4th May, 2001. But eventually pronounced the order only on 5th May, 2001. In substance, the grievance is that if the Court had concluded the arguments, there was no valid reason for the Sessions Court to reserve the judgment in this matter and in any case having notified the date for orders as 4th May, 2001 , it was totally inappropriate to adjourn the matter to 5th May, 2001 to pronounce the order impugned in the present application running into only 11 pages. The approach of the Sessions Court obviously is inappropriate, particularly when the matter concerns liberty of any person much less a citizen. As observed earlier, the alleged offence in the present case is only under section 12 of the Prevention of Corruption Act and therefore it was wholly inappropriate for the Sessions Court to reserve the orders on bail application and thereafter again adjourn the matter to another date as has been done in the present case.

(14.) IN the circumstances, I have no hesitation in enlarging the applicant on bail, provided he is subjected to strict conditions. The learned Addl. Public Prosecutor has submitted that the applicant be directed to attend the Crime Branch, Panaji Police Station on daily basis till the investigation is completed between 5. 00 to 8. 00 p. m. and besides that the applicant should not enter the territory of Sanvordem Constituency during the investigation period.

(15.) IN my view, the applicant can be released on bail forthwith on the following conditions :--- (a) That the applicant shall furnish one security for an amount of Rs. 10,000/ -. The security be furnished to the satisfaction of the J. M. F. C. , Panaji; (b) The applicant shall also furnish a personal Bond for the like amount before the J. M. F. C. , Panaji; (c) The applicant shall not enter Sanvordem Constituency, during the progress of the investigation of the present case without prior permission of the J. M. F. C. , Panaji ; (d) Until the filing of the Police Report under section 173, the Applicant shall not leave the jurisdiction of this Court without prior intimation to the Investigating Officer as well as without prior permission of the J. M. F. C. , Panaji ; (e) The applicant shall report to the Investigating Officer at Crime Branch, Panaji daily between 5. 00 to 8. 00 p. m. , initially for a period of seven days from today, and if necessary, as and when called upon by the Investigating Officer in connection with the investigation of the present case and the applicant shall extend full co-operation during the course of investigation ; (f) The applicant shall not, directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Investigating Officer or the Court; and (g) The applicant shall not commit an offence similar to the offence alleged to have been committed by him in the present case.
(16.) THE applicant is therefore directed to be released on bail forthwith in connection with Crime No. 3/2001 registered with the Crime Branch, Police Station, Panaji on the aforesaid conditions.

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation: 2003 CRI. L. J. 3928

KERALA HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R. BASANT, J.

Usman ... Vs... The Sub-Inspector of Police and another,
C.R.M.C. Nos. 3265 and 3391 of 2003, D/- 3 -5 -2003.

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.438 - BAIL - orders - Practice and procedure - Copies of orders in every bail application (whether regular or anticipatory) - Should be furnished to accused/counsel free of cost immediately after pronouncement of orders on same day as mandated in the S. 363(1), Cr.P.C.

(B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.438 - BAIL - Disposal of application - Courts including Sessions Court should ensure that bail applications are disposed of within the outer limit of three working days. (Para 40(iii))

(C) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.439 - BAIL - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - High Court can exercise jurisdiction even if the Sessions Court were not called upon earlier to exercise such jurisdiction.

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras

Puran v. Rambilas, 2001 Cri L.J. 2566 : AIR 2001 SC 2023 : 2001 AIR SCW 1935 : (2001) 6 SCC 338 16
Babu Premarajan v. Suptd. of Police, AIR 2000 Ker 417 : 2000 AIHC 4849 : (2000) 3 Ker LT 177 31
Y. Chandrasekhara Rao v. Y. V. Kamala Kumari, 1993 Cri L.J. 3508 (Andh Pra) 36
Gopinath v. State of Kerala, 1986 Cri L.J. 1742 : 1986 Ker LT 107 16
Iyya v. State of Karnataka, 1985 Cri L.J. 214 (Kant) : (1983) 2 Kant L.J. 8 35
Jagannath v. State of Maharashtra, 1981 Cri L.J. 1808 (Bombay) 35
Mohanlal v. Prem Chand, AIR 1980 Him pra 36 (FB) 36
K. Sivan Pillai v. Raja Mohan, 1978 Cri L.J. 743 : AIR 1978 Ker 131 : 1978 Ker LT 223 (FB) 33
Rajpal Singh v. State of Haryana, 1978 Cri L.J. 609 (Punj and Har) 35
Onkar Nath v. State, 1976 Cri L.J. 1142 (FB) (All) 36
Hajialisher v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Cri L.J. 1658 (Raj) 35
M. Zacharia v. State of Kerala, 1974 Cri L.J. 1198 : 1974 Ker LT 42 34, 35

S. Narayan v. Kannamma Bhargavi, 1969 Cri L.J. 611 : AIR 1969 Ker 126 : 1968 Ker LT 495 (FB)
32
T. G. Rajendran for Petitioner; Smt. Noorji Noushad, Public Prosecutor, for Respondents.

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :- Does an accused apprehending arrest or arrested already have an unfettered option to approach this Court under Section 438 or 439, Cr. P.C. ? Cannot this Court in the interests of justice, expediency and convenience insist, (re)introduce and enforce compliance with the salutory and accepted rule of procedure that where two fora have concurrent powers the forum lower in the hierarchy must be approached before the doors of the superior one are knocked ? These interesting questions arise for determination in these Crl. MCs.

2. The facts scenario is simple. Crl. M.C. 3265 of 2003 is an application for anticipatory bail under Section 438, Cr. P.C.. The accused apprehends arrest in a crime registered under Sections 498-A and 306, I.P.C. Crl. M.C. 3391 of 2003 is a petition for regular bail under Section 439, Cr. P.C. where the accused has already been arrested on 4-4-2003 on the allegation that he has committed offences punishable under Section 55(a) of the Kerala Abkari Act.

3. As this Court sitting as the vacation Court entertained doubts about the desirability of approving the course adopted in many cases that came up for consideration of the accused approaching this Court directly with applications under Sections 438 and 439 without and before approaching the Court of Sessions which has concurrent jurisdiction under these statutory provisions, the learned Public Prosecutor and the learned Counsel were requested to advance arguments on this interesting legal question. Most of the counsel chose to adopt the very convenient course of getting their applications dismissed as withdrawn with liberty to move the Sessions Court. Considering the importance and the significance of the question raised, counsel who have appeared before me on 29-4-2003, 30-4-2003 and 2-5-2003 have all been permitted to advance detailed arguments if any on this question to assist the Court.

4. I shall first of all extract the relevant portions of the statutory provisions. "438. Direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest.- (1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section, and that Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest he shall be released on bail.

(2) .....

439. Special powers of High Court or Court of Session regarding bail.- (1) A High Court or Court of Session may direct-

(a) that any person the accused of an offence and in custody be released on bail, and if the offence is of the nature specified in sub-section (3) of S. 437, may impose any condition which it considers necessary for the purposes mentioned in that sub-section;

(b) that any condition imposed by a Magistrate when releasing any person on bail be set aside or modified :

....."

(Emphasis supplied)

5. The learned Public Prosecutor contends that though there can be no dispute about the jurisdictional competence of this Court in appropriate and exceptional cases to entertain an application for anticipatory bail/bail under Sections 438/439, Crl. P.C. at the first instance itself that cannot be the rule. The learned Public Prosecutor relies on the well established and salutory rule of procedure that where two fora are vested with concurrent authority, the superior one can be approached by a party only after the inferior one is approached, except in exceptional cases. The learned Public Prosecutor submits that this rule must be adhered to in the interests of convenience, expedition, inexpensive justice, avoidance of conflict of decisions and of saving the time of the superior Court for more sublime pursuits. The learned Public Prosecutor submits that it definitely reduces expenses, at least in a substantial number of cases. At least the presumption is that if the case is a fit one where discretion can be invoked in favour of the petitioner, the Court of Session would and should as well, invoke the discretion. In that case the litigant would be saved of the unnecessary trouble of approaching the Superior Court. There is only one seat for the High Court of Kerala and that is situated almost at the middle of the State. It would be very inconvenient, more expensive and cumbersome for the parties to approach the High Court. Relatively therefore, it will certainly advance the interests of parties and save unnecessary expenses if the local District Courts in each district can entertain applications under Sections 438/439. So far as the State is also concerned, there can be saving of a lot of expenditure as officers have to come from outlying districts to the seat of the High Court to instruct the Prosecutor. In the interests of proper disposal of cases also it is very essential that the Prosecutor gets proper assistance so that he can be of useful assistance to the Court. It would serve the cause of efficient and prompt investigation as the investigating officers will not have to proceed to the seat of the High Court and the case diary will not have to be carried there to instruct the Prosecutor. It helps also in adoption of uniform standards in respect of applications/bail applications in each district. It also saves the time of this Court as it will not be flooded with applications for bail/anticipatory bail when relief can be obtained from the Court of Session itself. If only fit cases, where the discretion has not been exercised correctly by the Court of Session, come before the High Court for its consideration, the time of the High Court can be saved. In that process quicker disposal of applications for bail can also be ensured. The High Court also would get the advantage of application of mind by the Court of Session to the same facts earlier. In these circumstances the learned Public Prosecutor submits that it will be more advantageous if this Court follows a self-imposed rule of restriction that ordinarily applications under Sections 438/439 will be entertained by this Court only if and after the Court of Session has considered the application earlier.

6. My attention has been brought to many precedents showing that other High Courts have imposed such restrictions on themselves - reserving always the jurisdictional competence and the discretion to entertain an application for bail/anticipatory bail directly at the first instance if the peculiar facts of a given case warrant such a course.

7. As against this the learned Counsel for the petitioners contend that it is not permissible to impose any such fetter on the right of a litigant to approach the superior Court. The language of Section 438, Cr. P.C. shows that the option to file an application before the Court of Sessions or the High Court is left to the discretion of the applicant and not the Court. So far as Section 439 is concerned, though it does not refer to applications by the parties (and the powers can be exercised even in the absence of an application) both Courts have concurrent jurisdiction and by a process of interpretation or by imposing restrictions on itself the court cannot introduce any such fetters on the option conceded under Sections 438 and 439.

8. It is then contended that Sections 438 and 439 are concurrent powers. The High Court does not exercise appellate, revisional or supervisory jurisdiction under Sections 438 and 439. The jurisdiction in both these cases, of the High Court, is special and original and in these circumstances no such fetter can be placed on the option of the party. Under Sections 438/439 the petitioners are entitled to have first consideration by the High Court uninfluenced by any earlier consideration by the Sessions Court. If such a Rule were followed the High Court will never have the option/ability to consider facts without being influenced by an earlier consideration by a subordinate Court, it is urged.

9. It is then submitted that the rule that the lower forum having concurrent jurisdiction must be moved first is certainly not one of universal acceptance. Considering the language of Sections 438 and 439 such rule cannot be followed, it is urged.

10. It is contended that it may perhaps be permissible for Courts which have been following such a self-imposed rule to continue with the practice. But this Court having not imposed any such restriction on itself earlier, should not and need not introduce any such rule of practice for the future.

11. Some of the counsel contend that the question to be decided is one of signal significance. This is definitely not only an important or very important question but it is a crucial question of general public importance. Hence this Court sitting as a vacation Court may not decide the issue and may make a reference to the Division Bench under the relevant provisions of the Kerala High Court Act, it is submitted.

12. The counsel further urged that if such a practice were introduced, the accused will have to suffer the evil consequences of the laws delays. It would hurt their interest. Some of the Sessions Courts take a minimum of 10 to 15 days before an application under Sections 438/439 is finally disposed of. There is inevitable delay in furnishing copies thereafter also. In these circumstances the introduction of such a self-imposed rule would jeopardise the interests of the accused persons in custody/facing the prospect of arrest.

13. Finally it is contended that wherever the Legislature had wanted such restrictions to be imposed on the exercise of concurrent jurisdiction, that has been made clear in the respective statutory provisions. Reliance is placed on Section 399(3), Cr. P.C. where it is said that if one Court having concurrent jurisdiction has exercised its jurisdiction, the other will not be entitled to invoke such powers. Reliance was also placed on the proviso to Section 407(2), Cr. P.C. to contend that wherever the legislature wanted the superior Court not to exercise such concurrent jurisdiction before the subordinate Court exercises such powers, it is made clear in the provision itself. In these circumstances by a process of interpretation such restrictive rule may not be introduced placing fetters on the powers of the Court, it is urged.

14. It is submitted that under the Criminal Procedure Code or the Kerala High court Act or under the relevant Rules framed there is no provision by which it can be insisted that the Sessions Court must be moved before the High Court is moved for grant of bail/anticipatory bail. In these circumstances there can be no question of introduction of a self-imposed rule restricting the powers of the High Court, it is argued.

15. My attention has been drawn to various precedents on the point also. I shall advert to them later.

16. At the very outset I must note that the powers vested in the High Court and the Court of Session under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C. are concurrent. The powers are equal and identical. There is of course the difference that the command of the High Court would run over a larger geographical area. So far as the nature of the relief is concerned both Courts have exactly identical equal and concurrent powers. This is a very serious distinction when we consider the other analogous provisions as also precedents. Any relief which the High Court can grant under Sections 438/439 can also be granted by the Court of Session. This is explicit from the language of the statutory provisions. It is evident from precedents also.

16-A. I do also agree that the powers of the High Court are not appellate, revisional or supervisory under Sections 438 and 439. It is a special original jurisdiction which the High Court exercises under Sections 438 and 439. It is by now trite and the decisions reported in Gopinath v. State of Kerala, 1986 Ker LT 107 : (1986 Cri L.J. 1742) and Puran v. Rambilas, (2001) 6 SCC 338 : 2001 Cri L.J. 2566 : (AIR 2001 SC 2023) make it very clear that notwithstanding the fact that the powers are concurrent the High Court can exercise such powers even after the Sessions Court exercises such powers earlier.

17. There can also be no doubt about the jurisdictional competence of the High Court to entertain an application under Sections 438/439 at the first instance. The question is only whether a self-imposed rule of restriction can be introduced in the procedure. In an appropriate case, notwithstanding any such self-imposed restriction the High Court will be at liberty to entertain the application at the first instance.

18. Under Sections 438 and 439 a very wide discretion is conferred on the superior Courts. The legislature has chosen to confer such discretion without any limitations. As to how the discretion must be exercised and what restrictions must be imposed is certainly left to the courts concerned. It is trite that in appropriate cases the High Court would be justified in not entertaining an application under Sections 438/439 itself and can direct the Court of Sessions to consider such application or refer the parties to the Sessions Court. All that I intend to note is that such a self-imposed restriction on sound judicial discretion is certainly not outside the amplitude of the discretion conferred under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C.

19. I find merit in the submission of the learned Public Prosecutor that in actual practice the imposition of such a restriction while exercising the discretion would advance the interests of justice convincingly. Experience shows that considerable amount of time in this Court is wasted for the Public Prosecutor to get instructions and to enable him to peruse the case diary. The officers of the State have to undertake unnecessary and avoidable trips to the seat of the High Court to bring the case diary and to instruct the Public Prosecutor. Often this Court finds that proper assistance is not available from the Public Prosecutor on account of want of instructions and their inability to have access to and peruse the case diary. The travelling up and down of the case diary does interfere with proper and prompt investigation also. Unnecessary delay, inconvenience and expenses are caused to the parties also when relief which could have been obtained from the Court of Session is unnecessarily sought from this Court.

20. The argument that the party has an unfettered option to choose the forum does not appeal to me. The legislature when it conferred concurrent jurisdiction must be presumed to have been aware of the salutory Rule of procedure that ordinarily the superior Court's time and resources will be and can be called in aid only after the Court of lower jurisdiction is moved. From the language of Sections 438 and 439 according to me it would be imprudent to jump to the conclusion that an unfettered option was conferred on the applicant in an application under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C.

21. I do not find much merit in the contention that if the Sessions Court once applies its mind, the High Court will not be able to apply its mind independently. That proposition does not appeal to me as correct or reasonable. In the hiearchy of Courts it must be presumed that the superior Courts do have the judicial competence and ability to exercise their discretion appropriately whether the subordinate Court has earlier considered the question or not. It will be apposite to note that powers under Sections 438 and 439 are vested only in superior Courts like the Court of Session and the High Court which are presumed to be manned by experienced and competent personnel. The fact that a subordinate Court has already applied its mind does not appeal to me as a sufficient reason to assume that the superior Court will not be able to apply its mind independently and properly. That it has the result of application of mind by another authority having concurrent jurisdiction is to be reckoned only as an advantage and not certainly as a fetter or disadvantage.

22. Reference to Sections 399(3) and 407(2) does not also lead me to any contra conclusion. Section 399(3) is a peculiar provision which after conferring concurrent powers takes away the powers of the authority if the other authority having concurrent powers has already exercised its powers. That restriction cannot and does not apply to applications u/Ss. 458/459, Cr. P.C.. That cannot lead to the conclusion that in all cases where there is conferment of concurrent powers on two fora no self-imposed restrictions can apply. Similarly the powers under Sections 406 and 407 cannot certainly be reckoned as concurrent. Separate conferment is made of the power of transfer on the Court of Session and the High Court under these provisions. The proviso to S. 407(2) cannot in these circumstances help the Court to conclude that no self-imposed restriction can be made in the matter by the Court in the absence of an identical salutory stipulation in Ss. 438 and 439, Cr. P.C.

23. The argument that such a self-imposed restriction cannot be placed and that would run against the intent of the legislature cannot also obviously succeed as the salutory rule has been tested by the times and has been accepted and followed by Courts in the absence of exceptional reasons. The legislature when it conferred concurrent powers on the Court of Session and the High Court must be presumed to have known and assumed that the provision will be understood and interpreted consistent with the well accepted rules of interpretation and that the salutory rule of procedure referred above shall also be followed while construing the statutory provision.

24. Coming to the delay I am appalled to hear the submission that some Sessions Court take as many as 10 to 15 days on an average to dispose of applications under Sections 438/439, Cr. P.C.. The system must hang its head down in shame if that submission were factually correct. Liberty of an individual is given paramount importance under the system of laws in which we function. If Courts of Session do not imbibe the sublime respect for liberty which the system mandates, it would be a very unfortunate state of affairs. If such a practice exists it must certainly be discontinued forthwith. Every application for bail, whichever be the Court, must ideally be disposed of on the same date as its filing. But sometimes to comply with the requirement of giving notice and getting instructions, it may be necessary to deviate from that ideal rule. But even then there can be no justification for a bail application remaining without disposal beyond a period of three working days. That must be the outer limit whatever be the hierarchy of the Court.

25. Similarly it is submitted that it takes a long period of time to get copy applications complied with. I am shocked to hear submissions on this sad state of affairs also. Order in every bail application must be given to the party/counsel by the Court on the date on which such orders are pronounced. It must be the duty of the system to ensure this. It would be unreasonable to deny the party the advantage of a copy on the date of the order. Lip service to the cause of liberty will not suffice. A person is entitled to know immediately why his application for bail is dismissed. He is entitled thereafter to seek his relief before Superior Courts. Fetters cannot be placed on such rights by the unreasonable delay in furnishing copies. The law has already accepted this obligation to furnish copies on the date of pronouncement of the order. Order XX, Rule 6-B, C.P.C. and Section 363(1), Cr. P.C. recognise and accept this requirement. If that be so I can find no reason why the principle should not be followed in the matter of furnishing copies of orders in bail/anticipatory bail applications also.

26. It is submitted that separate applications are insisted for copies. This is totally unnecessary. It is common knowledge that any person who makes an application before Court would be interested in getting copy of the order passed on such application. The Court-fee collected must definitely and certainly include or deemed to include the requisite expenses for furnishing copy also. If necessary court-fees may have to be increased. But certainly it is puerile to insist on a separate application for a copy of the order from a party. At any rate here it must certainly be insisted that copies of orders in bail and anticipatory bail applications must be furnished free of cost to the party - simultaneously with the pronouncement of the orders.

27. It is submitted that at the Sessions Court the Prosecutors do not have as much and efficient assistance as is available to the Law Officers of the High Court. In the Magistrate's Court also, such assistance is not available. In these circumstances it is submitted that unnecessary and avoidable delay would unfortunately occur if the claimants have to approach the Sessions Court for the relief under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C.. This again should not occur and should not in any way contribute to the delay in disposal of applications under Sections 438 and 439. It is the responsibility of the system to make sure that such delay is avoided.

28. Appropriate safeguards can be insisted to avoid such delay in the disposal of bail/anticipatory bail applications and the furnishing of copies and in these circumstances the delay aspect cannot stand against the acceptance of such a salutory self-imposed procedural rule of restriction.

29. It is submitted that there is no practice available in the High Court of Kerala. All the relevant precedents were considering only the advisability of continuing with an existing practice. A new practice may not be introduced by this Court by accepting such a rule, it is urged. It is true that such a rigid rule has not been insisted by this Court. But that again cannot persuade me to hold that it is not necessary to adhere to such a salutory procedural rule of self-imposed restriction if the same is found to be proper, legal and advantageous.

30. That no rules under the Cr. P.C., the High Court Act and Rules impose such a restriction is not at all relevant. If such a rule of restriction can be imposed it is in exercise of the wide discretion available to the Court under Sections 438 and 439. When the High Court has powers to entertain applications under Sections 438 and 439 and exercise their discretion, the power or the jurisdiction to impose such a salutory rule is inherent in such powers itself. It is not necessary to trace such power outside such discretion or under the relevant rules.

31. I do not find merit in the submission that the question must be referred to a Division Bench for its decision. The decision reported in Babu Premarajan v. Supdt. Of police, (2000) 3 Ker LT 177 : (AIR 2000 Ker 417) does not at all mandate that a single Judge who has powers under the relevant provisions of the Kerala High Court Act must refer the matter to a Division Bench for decision even if the question raised be one which is important, very important or one of public importance. I do not find any reason therefore to adjourn the matter for hearing by a Division Bench. Certainly if necessary the matter will have to be considered by a Division Bench/Larger Bench later.

32. I now come back to the precedents cited at the bar. Two rulings of the Full Bench of this Court have first been cited. The earlier one reported in S. Narayan v. Kannamma Bhargavi, 1968 Ker LT 495 (FB) : 1969 Cri L.J. 611 : (AIR 1969 Ker 126) does not at all support the contention that such self-imposed restriction cannot be made. In fact the said decision stems from the fact that the revisional powers available under the former Criminal Procedure Code to the Court of Session and the High Court in the matter of revision are not really concurrent - joint and equal in authority. The operative portion of the said decision clearly shows that in respect of matters where concurrent jurisdiction is available such a rule can be imposed. I extract below the relevant operative portion.

..... "We are of the view that it would be improper to compel a party having a strong case in his favour under S. 439 of the Code, to approach first the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate. He should not be compelled to do so except in cases where the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate is capable of passing effective orders, as in a case of discharge or dismissal of complaint. In all other revisional matters the aggrieved party may approach this Court direct, if so inclined....."

(Emphasis supplied)

33. The next Full Bench ruling reported in K. Sivan Pillai v. Rajamohan, 1978 Ker LT 223 : 1978 Cri L.J. 743 : (AIR 1978 Ker 131) (FB) was rendered taking into account Section 399(3), Cr. P.C. which mandates that though both Courts are vested with concurrent jurisdiction one cannot exercise such jurisdiction if the other has already exercised such jurisdiction. The Court had in the said decision certainly accepted the rule of salutory practice requiring the party to resort to the lower forum before moving the higher one, so long as the two fora are available for resort. In the instant case, it is by now trite, that the petitioner/accused will be at liberty to move the High Court even after he has unsuccessfully sought relief from the Court of Session. The reason which prompted the Full Bench to hold that such a rule of restriction need not be imposed in the matter of revisions after the 1973 amendment, is therefore not available in this case.

34. In the decision reported in M. Zacharia v. Sate of Kerala, 1974 Ker LT 42 : (1974 Cri L.J. 1198), a Division Bench of this Court has certainly accepted the principle that in respect of bail applications 'frog leaping' cannot be permitted and the party is obliged to move the Magistrate/Sessions Court before coming to the High Court. Of course the fact scenario was slightly different as the petitioner in that case had chosen to surrender before the High Court even before appearing before the Magistrate/Court of Session. But that distinction in facts is not very crucial while considering the dictum laid down. It is very clearly held in the said decision that a petitioner/claimant cannot be allowed "to frog leap the Magistrate and Sessions Judge and make a direct approach to the High Court for bail". The decision in 1974 Ker LT 42 still holds the field and this Court is bound by the same.

35. Reference has been made to decisions rendered by other Courts. Though the counsel were specifically requested to research, no other binding precedent of the Supreme Court or this Court (other than 1974 Ker LT 42) having a direct bearing on the question has been traced. There is conflict of views among other High Courts. The Rajasthan High Court in Hajialisher v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Cri L.J. 1658, the Punjab and Haryana High Court in Rajpal Singh v. State of Haryana, 1978 Cri L.J. 609, the Bombay High Court in Jagannath v. State of Maharashtra, 1981 Cri L.J. 1808, Karnataka High Court in 1985 Cri L.J. 214 : Iyya v. State of Karnataka, (1983) 2 Kant L.J. 8 have held that such a rule of self-imposed restriction is perfectly justified while exercising the discretion under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C.

36. The contra view has been taken by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Onkar Nath v. State, 1976 Cri L.J. 1142. I have gone through the said decision in detail. All that the Full Bench of the High Court of Allahabad disapproved was a rigid imposition of the rule. A reading of the entire decision clearly shows that their Lordships did approve of the salutory rule of procedure obliging the Sessions Court having concurrent jurisdiction considering the exercise of discretion first before the High Court is called upon to exercise such jurisdiction. My attention has also been drawn to a detailed judgment rendered by a Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court reported in Y. Chandrasekhara Rao v. Y. V. Kamala Kumari, 1993 Cri L.J. 3508 as also the decision of the Himachal Pradesh High Court (Full Bench) reported in Mohanlal v. Prem Chand, AIR 1980 Him Pra 36. These also according to me do not at all lay down that such a self-imposed restriction should not be placed in the matter of exercise of discretion u/Ss. 438 and 439, Cr. P.C. The Andhra Pradesh High Court was considering the practice of the registry refusing to send up petitions to the Bench. That of course is improper. No one can perhaps dispute the fact that the High Court retains its jurisdiction to entertain an application under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C. That discretion cannot certainly be surrendered to the Registry. It has to be exercised by the Court. 1993 Cri L.J. 3508 (Andh Pra) and AIR 1980 Him Pra 36 can only be understood to mean that the Judges are obliged to consider request for grant of anticipatory bail even when the High Court is moved without and before moving the Court of Session. That is far from saying that ordinarily and unless exceptional reasons exist the High Court would exercise such discretion if and only after the Sessions Court having concurrent jurisdiction is moved earlier. At any rate I prefer to accept the former view.

37. After an anxious consideration of all the relevant precedents and statutory provisions I am of opinion that the following conclusions emerge :-

i. There is absolutely no want of jurisdictional competence for the High Court to consider and exercise powers in an application for bail/anticipatory bail under Section 438/439, Cr. P.C. at the first instance. It can exercise such jurisdiction even if the Sessions Court were not called upon earlier to exercise such jurisdiction.

ii. Following the salutory procedural self-imposed rule of restriction, a High Court shall not ordinarily (and except under exceptional circumstances) exercise its powers under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C. without and before the Sessions Court having concurrent jurisdiction is moved for identical relief.

iii. Needless to say the High Court must be very careful and circumspect in identifying such exceptional cases. Myriad are the facts scenarios and the real life situations possible. The High Court should not refuse to invoke its powers/discretion under Sections 438 and 439 merely because the Court of Session has not been moved if circumstances warrant the exercise of such powers in the interests of justice and in the interests of the sacrosanct right to liberty of the individual. Without intending to be exhaustive I may mention that the need to settle a question of law of general public importance, the need to protect the interests of an accused apprehending arrest in more than one Sessions Division within a State, the incompetence of the Sessions Court to afford adequate and effective relief in a given case for whatever reason, shall certainly bring the case within the class of exceptional cases where this salutory rule will not apply. Other exceptional circumstances if any which may be there, do not occur to me now.

38. Having thus attempted to ascertain the law I shall consider the facts of these cases specifically. I do not find any special or sufficient reasons in the facts and circumstances revealed in Crl. M.C. 3265 and 3391 of 2003 which can bring the cases within the category of exceptional cases where the salutory Rule should not apply in the interest of justice. When requested pointedly to bring to my notice exceptional reasons if any the counsel do not strain to contend that such exceptional reasons exist. It is in these circumstances not necessary to advert to the facts in greater detail in this common order.

39. I place on record my appreciation for the assistance rendered to this Court by various counsel including the counsel appearing for the petitioners in these petitions and the learned Public Prosecutor to resolve the controversy.

40. In the result these petitions are dismissed and the following directions are issued:-

i. Applications under Sections 438 and 439, Cr. P.C. shall hereafter be numbered by the Registry of this Court only when it is accompanied by the copy of the order of the Sessions Court (or memo/petition as indicated in clause (ii) below).

ii. If, it is not accompanied by copy of the order, such applications must be accompanied by a petition/memo explaining why copy is not produced or why the Sessions Court had not been moved earlier. The application shall be numbered by the Registry only after the Court in its discretion by order passed in such memo/petition directs such reception/numbering.

iii. Every application for bail/anticipatory bail must be disposed of by the respective subordinate Courts in the State on the date of receipt of the application itself ideally if moved with sufficient prior notice to the Prosecutor. At any rate all Courts including the Sessions Courts shall scrupulously ensure that bail applications are disposed of within the outer limit of three working days of their filing without fail.

iv. The Director General of Police shall ensure that a competent Police Officer is posted in every District to assist the District Public Prosecutor to liaison between the police and the Prosecutor and to ensure that relevant records and instructions are given to the Prosecutor promptly. Similarly every police station shall also depute a competent official to assist the Public Prosecutor in charge at the Court having local jurisdiction.

v. Copies of orders in every bail application (whether regular or anticipatory) shall be furnished to the accused/counsel free of cost and acknowledgment obtained from the respective counsel/accused (one copy in each application irrespective of the number of petitioners) immediately after pronouncement of orders on the same day as mandated in the case of judgments in Section 363(1), Cr. P.C.. It shall be the duty of the Presiding Officer of the Court to ensure this.

41. The Registry shall ensure that the directions above are complied with and communicated to all the criminal Courts and the officers concerned.

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation: 1978 Cr. L. J. 744 = AIR 1978 SC 1016

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V. R. KRISHNA IYER, JASWANT SINGH AND R. S. PATHAK, JJ.

(FULL BENCH)

HARSH SAWHNEY …Vs.. Union Territory Chandigarh

Criminal 110 Of 1978, Feb 20,1978

==========

Bail – No need of custody for Search and recovery - the State opposed the application for bail stating that the appellant's presence is necessary for making a search and recovery of certain documents – Held- accused need not be in custody for the purpose of search – contention of state rejected– Bail granted- it is made clear that the appellant shall appear for interrogation by the police whenever reasonably required, subject to her right under Article 20 (3) of the Constitution.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) We have heard counsel on both sides. We are satisfied that this is a case where on the facts now placed before us, bail should be granted. The principles bearing on grant or refusal of bail have already been explained by this Court in Gurcharan Singh v. State (Delhi Adlhi.) (AIR 1978 SC 179) : (1978 Cri L.J. 129). On the basis of that decision this is clearly a case where the appellant is entitled to bail. Two grounds have been mentioned on behalf of the State, namely, the appellant's presence is necessary for making a search and recovery of certain documents. We do not think that the appellant has to be taken into custody for making a search of premises in her presence. This can be done without her being taken into custody. The other ground that is put forward is the appellant's presence as required by the police for interrogation in connection with investigation. We make it clear that the appellant shall appear for interrogation by the police whenever reasonably required, subject to her right under Article 20 (3) of the Constitution.

(2.) We allow the appeal and direct the appellant to be enlarged on bail on condition that she, with two sureties, will enter into a bond in a sum of Rupees 5,000/- and she will subject herself to condition for appearing before the Police for interrogation if called upon to do so subject to the condition under Article 20 (3). The bond of the appellant and of the sureties will be to the satisfaction of the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Delhi. This bail order will govern the case registered or Crime F.I.R. No. 285 of 1977 in Police Station (West), district Chandigarh and any offence arising out of it.

(3.) We further direct that the appellant shall not leave India without prior permission of this Court. …….Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation: 2001 ALL MR (Cri) 1892

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S. S. PARKAR, J.

Mohammed Yakubdin Khan ..Vs. .. State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application No.209 of 2001 18th April, 2001. Shri. RAJENDRA ZARAPKAR, Adv. for the applicant ,Ms. USHA KEJRIWAL, APP for the State.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.438 - Anticipatory bail – Parity - Applicant apprehending his arrest in case where custodial interrogation is not necessary - Main accused arrested and released on bail - Applicant entitled to get anticipatory bail – Anticipatory bail granted.

==========

JUDGMENT:-

1. Heard both sides and perused the affidavit dated 8/3/2001 filed on behalf of the prosecuting agency.

2. This application is for anticipatory bail. There are four accused persons, out of whom two main accused were arrested and released on bail, one accused is at large and this applicant is accused NO.4 who is sought to be arrested.

3. Ms. Kejriwal, the learned APP states that accused Nos.l and 2 were arrested on 3rd January, 2001 at the Airport when they were to board the plane for New York. It transpired that accused No. 2 by name MS .Pino Kantilal Patel was trying to go to New York along with accused No.l Shamim Choudhari on the passport of the wife of Shamim Choudhari, accused no. 1. The tickets also were in the name of accused no, 1 and his wife. According to Ms. Kejriwal, the learned APP, the present applicant had bought two air tickets on 13th December, 2000 for New York in the name of accused no.l and his wife knowing that accused no. 1* s wife was not going to travel to New York but instead accused no.2 was to go to New York on the passport of wife of accused no.l representing that she was his wife.

4. In my view, this applicant was concerned only for the purchase of the two air tickets as told to him by accused no.l and accordingly he bought two tickets in the name of accused no.l and his wife. He was not concerned whether the accused no. 1 was going abroad with his wife or he was taking someone else on the passport of his wife. The misrepresentation was made by accused nos. 1 and 2 who were arrested and released on bail. Pursuant to the direction of this court given on 25th January 2001 the applicant had reported to the IO for the purpose of interrogation. This, is not a case where the custodial interrogation is necessary. Even if this applicant were to confess travel to New York on the passport of the wife of the accused no.l, which is not admissible in evidence, would not help the prosecution in any way. The main culprits are accused nos. 1 and 2 who were arrested and also released on cash bail of Rs.7000/- each. On behalf of the applicant it is further contended that the applicant has applied to withdraw himself as a surety previously stood for accused no.l in earlier criminal case and therefore the accused no.l was trying to involve the applicant falsely in this case.

5. In the circumstances, this application is allowed and in the event of his arrest the applicant is directed to be released in bail in the sum of Rs.15,000/- with one surety on condition that until filing of the chargesheet applicant shall report to the concerned police station if and when required. The applicant is given option to furnish cash bail ofRs.20,000/-.

Application Allowed

==========

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : Altamas Kabir and Cyriac Joseph, JJ.

Sumeet Saluja … -Vs- State of U.P. thr. CBI

Criminal Appeal No. 953 of 2011, [Arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 1863 of 2011]

Decided on April 18, 2011

==========

Bail – Parity – Co-accused similarly placed granted bail – Appellant should be released on Bail – I.P.C. Section 120-B, 417, 420, 468, 471.

==========

JUDGEMENT

1. Leave granted.

2. This appeal is directed against the judgment and order dated 13th January, 2011, passed by the Allahabad High Court, rejecting the petitioner s prayer for grant of bail in Crl. Misc. Bail Application No. 34595 of 2010.

3. There are three accused in this case. Charge-sheet has been filed against all of them on 8th December, 2010, under Sections 120B, 417, 420, 468, 471 IPC and 132 and 135 of the Customs Act, P.S.C.B.I. Ghaziabad. While apart from the appellant, one of the other two accused, Mr. Surinder Singh has been granted bail after his arrest, the third accused, Cyan Chand filed a writ petition, being No. 37 of 2011, in this Court, in which directions have been given that he should not be arrested in connection with the case in question.

4. The present appellant is in custody since llth October, 2010, and it appears that he is similarly placed as the other two accused. Accordingly, the appeal is allowed.

5. Let the appellant be released on bail to the satisfaction of the trial court, upon such conditions, as may be considered necessary to ensure his presence at the time of trial. Such conditions may also include, reporting to the SHO of the local police station once every month until further orders and deposit of his passport to the court.

6. Since this matter involves a question of some importance as far as commercial crimes are concerned, let the trial be completed as quickly as possible, without unnecessary adjournments and delay

****

Cross Citation: 2001(3) Crimes 188 (SC)

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.T. Thomas & R.P. Sethi, JJ.

Bashishth Singh & Anr. .....Vs..... State of Bihair

Criminal appeal No. 230 of 2001

(Arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 235 of 2001 Decided on 26-2-2001)

==========

Criminal Procedure Code, 1973- Section 439 - Appellants Involved in case for which there was counter case—Appellants could be released on ball on bond of Rs. 25000/- with surety. (Para 1)

==========

Result : Appeal disposed of.

ORDER

1. Leave granted.

2. Appellants are involved in a case for which there is a cross-case (or counter-case as it can be called). The case against, the appellants is based on the FIR lodged by the complainant Ram Narain Singh. The counter-case was built up on the strength of the FIR lodged by the 2nd appellant. Both the cases were investigated but only in one case final report has been laid. Whatever be the position, we feel that this is a case where appellants can be let on bail during the trial period. We, therefore, order the appellants to be released on the bail on each of them executing a bond in a sum of Rs. 25,000/- with solvent sureties to the satisfaction of the Sessions Judge. Kaimur.

The appeal is disposed of accordingly. Appeal disposed of.
****

Cross Citation: 2010 CRI. L. J. 1435

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : MARKANDEY KATJU AND DEEPAK VERMA, JJ.

Sukhwant Singh and Ors .. V/s .. State of Punjab.

S.L.P. (Cri.) No. 3529 of 2009, D/- 18 -5 -2009.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437 - Interim bail during pendency of regular bail application - Court has inherent power to grant interim bail to a person pending final disposal of the bail application – It should be decided on same day when petitioner files before the court -When a person applies for regular bail then the court concerned ordinarily lists that application after a few days so that it can look into the case diary which has to be obtained from the police authorities and in the meantime the applicant has to go to jail. Even if the applicant is released on bail thereafter, his reputation may be tarnished irreparably in society. The reputation of a person is his valuable asset, and is a facet of his right under Article 21 of the Constitution. (Para 4)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras

2009 (4) Scale 77 (Ref.) 3

2008 AIR SCW 7788 : AIR 2009 SC 628 (Ref.) 3

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :-

1. Heard learned counsel for the petitioners.

2. This petition has been filed challenging the judgment and order dated 24.03.2009 of a learned Single Judge of the High Court of Punjab and Haryana at Chandigarh whereby the Application under Section 438 of the Cr. P.C., for grant of anticipatory bail has been dismissed.

3. We are not inclined to interfere with the impugned judgment and order. However, following the decision of this Court in the case of Kamlendra Pratap Singh v. State of U.P. and Ors. 2009 (4) SCALE 77, we reiterate that a Court hearing a regular bail application has got inherent power to grant interim bail pending final disposal of the bail application. In our opinion, this is the proper view in view of Article 21 of the Constitution of India which protects the life and liberty of every person. When a person applies for regular bail then the court concerned ordinarily lists that application after a few days so that it can look into the case diary which has to be obtained from the police authorities and in the meantime the applicant has to go to jail. Even if the applicant is released on bail thereafter, his reputation may be tarnished irreparably in society. The reputation of a person is his valuable asset, and is a facet of his right under Article 21 of the Constitution vide Deepak Bajaj v. State of Maharashtra and Anr. JT 2008 (11) SC 609 : (2008 AIR SCW 7788).

4. Hence, we are of the opinion that in the power to grant bail there is inherent power in the court concerned to grant interim bail to a person pending final disposal of the bail application. Of course, it is in the discretion of the court concerned to grant interim bail or not but the power is certainly there.

5. In the present case, if the petitioners surrender before the Court concerned and makes a prayer for grant of interim bail pending final disposal of the bail application, the same shall be considered and decided on the same day.

6. With the above said observations, the petition stands disposed of.

==========

Cross Citation: 2010 ALL MR (Cri) 2030, 2009-Crimes (SC)-2-4 , 2009-SCC-4-437

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : Markandey Katju and VS. Sirpurkar, JJ.

Lal Kamlendra Pratap Singh ..Versus.. State of U.P.

March 23, 2009

==========

Cr. P.C. 437 – Interim bail should be granted pending disposal of final bail application since arrest and detention of a person cause irrepairable loss to a person's reputation.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Heard learned counsel for the parties.

(2.) Leave granted.

(3.) The appeal by Special leave has been filed against the impugned Judgment dated 3.9.2007 of the Allahabad High Court in Criminal Miscellaneous Writ Petition No. 13227/2007. The aforesaid writ Petition was filed for quashing the F.I.R. in case Crime

No.1133/2007 under Sections 467, 468, 471, 420, 409 and 218 IPC, Police Station Mahoba, District Mahoba, U.P.

(4.) By the impugned Judgment, the High Court refused to quash the F.I.R. but directed that if the appellant surrenders within 10 days, his bail application will be considered and disposed of expeditiously.

(5.) Aggrieved by that order this appeal has been filed.

(6.) By an interim order dated 30.11.2007 this Court directed that the petitioner shall not be arrested in the meanwhile.

(7.) We are today informed by Shri S.R.Singh, learned senior counsel appearing for the State of U.P. that charge sheet has been filed and congnizance has been taken and the case is now pending before the trial Court. In these circumstances, he submitted that we should not exercise our discretion under Article 136 of the Constitution of India for quashing the F.I.R.

(8.) Learned counsel for the appellant apprehends that the appellant will be arrested as there is no provision for anticipatory bail in the State of U.P. He placed reliance on a decision of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Amaravati Vs. State of U.P. 2005 Crl.L.J 755 in which a Seven Judge Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court held that the Court, if it deems fit in the facts and circumstances of the case, may grant interim bail pending final disposal of the bail application. The Full Bench also observed that arrest is not a must whenever an F.I.R. of a cognizable offence is lodged. The Full Bench placed reliance on the decision of this Court in Joginder Kumar Vs. State of U.P. 1994 Cr.L.J..1981.

(9.) We fully agree with the view of the High in Amaravati's case (supra), and we direct that the said decision be followed by all Courts in U.P. in letter and spirit, particularly since the provision for anticipatory bail does not exist in U.P. In appropriate cases interim bail should be granted pending disposal of the final bail application, since arrest and detention of a person can cause irreparable loss to a person's reputation, as held by this Court in Joginder Kumar's case (supra). Also, arrest is not a must in all cases of cognizable offences, and in deciding whether to arrest or not the police officer must be guided and act according to the principles laid down in Joginder Kumar's case (supra).

(10.) Since, charge sheet has been filed and cognizance has been taken, and on the facts of this case, in our opinion, this is not a fit case for quashing the first information report. The Appeal is dismissed, However, the appellant is granted time to appear before the trial Court on or before 15th April, 2009 and to file an application for bail. If such an application is filed, the trial Court shall consider the same on its own merits in accordance with law, and if it so deems fit, grant interim bail to the appellant pending the final disposal of his bail application.

(11.) Let a copy of this judgment be sent to the Registrar General of the Allahabad High Court who will circulate it to all Hon'ble Judges of the High Court and send copies to all District Judges in the State. Order accordingly.

==========

Cross Citation: 2008-All MR(Cri)-0-2432,

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S.A.BOBDE, R.C.HAVAN, JJ.

Antonio Sebastiao Mervyn ..Vs.. State of Goa

Criminal Writ Petition 19 of 2001 Of Jul 30,2008

==========

I.P.C. section 186, 353, 356, 379 – Constitution of India, - Arts 226, 21 – Cri. P.C., (1973), S. 46 – Arrest – Power of Police to arrest the accused – Held, the investigation has to be made without touching the offender – The question of touching the offender would arise only while submitting a charge-sheet – Compensation of Rs. 25,000/- granted to accused – State directed to take action against police officer responsible for violation of fundamental rights of accused.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) BY this petition, the petitioner seeks an enquiry into incidents from 28-4-1994 to 1-5-1994, a direction to initiate disciplinary proceedings against the guilty officers and claims compensation for the wrong done to him.

(2.) THE factual context, in which the petitioner was required to approach this Court, about which there can be no dispute, is as under: the petitioner, an employee of Public works Department, is owner of a property, in part whereof, respondent No. 9, a driver with the police department, resides. Respondent no. 9 filed a suit for a mandatory injunction, directing Public Works Department to release a water connection, without joining the petitioner as a party. Civil Court granted a temporary mandatory injunction on 31-3-1994 directing that water connection be provided within 30 days. On 28-4-1994, when Public works Department's employee went to provide connection through the petitioner's property, the petitioner obstructed and snatched pickaxe from a Public Works Department's employee. On complaint of the employee, respondent No. 4, p. S. I. Shirwaikar registered an offence. The petitioner too went to police station to lodge a report. He was arrested.

(3.) IT is not disputed by respondent no. 4 that he did handcuff the petitioner while taking the petitioner in a jeep, for effecting recovery of pickaxe, but claimed that he removed the handcuffs while alighting from the jeep. The petitioner however, alleges that he was handcuffed throughout and paraded as such in his neighbourhood. After the petitioner was bailed out, on 1-5-94 when the petitioner went to lodge another complaint of trespass, respondent No. 4 put the petitioner under arrest purportedly under section 151 of Criminal procedure Code. The petitioner complained of chest pain, and was taken in handcuffs to hospital, though according to police, he was not so handcuffed.

(4.) THE petitioner initially approached this Court by filing Writ Petition no. 18 of 1995 for similar reliefs. By judgment dated 14-1-1998, the petitioner was directed to approach the authority under the Protection of human Rights Act, 1993 for redressal of his grievances. The order mentions that in case compensation is not determined by the said authority, liberty was reserved to the petitioner to approach appropriate forum. The petitioner approached the Human Rights Court at South goa, which expressed inability to proceed with the complaint for want of necessary infrastructure and Public Prosecutor etc. It may be mentioned that the Public Prosecutor came to be appointed only after the special court under protection of Human Rights Act expressed its inability to proceed further in the matter. The petitioner then applied to said Court for making a reference under section 395 of Criminal procedure Code to this Court. The learned session Judge by his order dated 7-9-2000 declined to make a reference and this is how, the petitioner is again before us.

(5.) WE have heard both the learned senior Counsel for the petitioner and respondent number 4. We have also heard learned government Counsel for the respondent Nos. 1 and 2. Learned Counsel for the respondent No. 4, first, contended that the petition is barred by the principles of res judicata. since come of the issues raised by the petitioner in the present petition, had already been decided by this Court and other issues had not be raised by him in the earlier petition. We do not see as to how the petition is barred by the principle of res judicata or even constructive res judicata. since the grievance of the petitioner, namely, that his human rights were breached by being arrested and handcuffed without any justification, is yet to be redressed. We may point out that in the judgment dated 14-1-98, by which the earlier petition was disposed of, liberty was specifically reserved for the petitioner to approach appropriate forum if his claim for compensation was not decided. Since virtually none of his claims were decided, we find that the petitioner had justification to approach this Court by the present petition.

(6.) BY order dated 25-9-2002, in this petition, this Court directed Human Rights court, South Goa District, Margao to record evidence and give findings on the seven issues formulated by this Court, which read as under:

> (i) Whether the petitioner proves that on 28-4-94, after arresting the petitioner at 1. 30 p. m. and putting him behind bars; (a) The petitioner was not supplied with food or water; (b) The petitioner was not permitted to contact his family members or advocates; (c) The petitioner was not permitted to make use of phone to contact his family members; (d) Respondent No. 4 insisted that petitioner wears uniform provided to the prisoners. (ii) Whether the petitioner proves that on 28-4-1994 at about 3. 00 p. m. petitioner was handcuffed, taken in a jeep to his residence and paraded on the road adjoining his house in handcuffs in full view of the public with purported motive of recovery of certain objects and thereafter brought to the police station and kept behind bars upto 7. 30 p. m. without removing the handcuffs ? (iii) Whether the petitioner proves that on 1-5-1994 after arresting the petitioner at about 10. 30 p. m. he was handcuffed whilst lodged behind bars ? (i v) Whether the petitioner proves that on 1-5-1994 no vehicle was provided to the petitioner to take him to the Hospicio Hospital and on the contrary he was paraded on the streets of Margao in handcuffs from police station to margao post office ? (v) Whether the petitioner proves that he was taken to Hospicio Hospital of Margao in handcuffs and the handcuffs were retained when he was shifted to Goa Medical College where he was admitted to prisoners ward and tied up with fetters and handcuffs to the bed till 8. 30 a. m. on 2-5-1994? (vi) Whether the arrests of the petitioner on 28-4-1994 and 1-5-1994 were legal and justified ? (vii) Whether handcuffing of the petitioner on 28-4-1994 and 1-5-1994 were justified ?

(7.) ACCORDINGLY, the learned Judge, human Rights Court and District Judge, South goa recorded evidence and rendered his findings on the seven issues referred to him by his order dated 2-5-2003. He answered issue nos. l to 5 in affirmative and issue Nos. 6 and 7 in negative, that is, in effect, he held in favour of the petitioner in all issues.

(8.) THE learned Senior Counsel for the respondent No. 4 contended that the learned district and Sessions Judge held against the respondents principally because of failure of the respondents to produce case diaries, which the learned Judge could have himself called in view of the provisions of Section 172 of Criminal procedure Code. First, we would reject the submission that the learned District and sessions Judge had based his findings principally on non-production of the case diaries. It was one of the grounds which he had considered. Further, there is no question of the case diaries being summoned by the District and session Judge, since at the time, when the session Judge was considering the issues referred to him, the criminal case which had been filed against the petitioner on the basis of offence registered, had already been disposed of by the Judicial Magistrate First Class by his judgment dated 14-7-97, whereby learned magistrate had acquitted the petitioner. Case diaries have significance till the case is under investigation or when trial is going on. Further, what was required to be produced before the learned Judge, in order to justify various actions of the respondents, was not the case diaries, but the station diaries, where all the activities in the police station are recorded. The station diary, lock-up register and arrest register, which had been referred to by the learned Judge in paragraph No. 53 of his order, could have been produced by the respondents before the learned judge and for such production, an order from the Court was not necessary. The learned Judge, therefore, rightly concluded that non-production of these documents in possession and power of the respondents, would lead to adverse inference.

(9.) WE would now proceed to analyse the contentions raised by the parties in relation to the incident itself. It has been observed by the learned Judge in paragraph No. 78 of the order that the petitioner was justified in obstructing Jose Fernandes and Jose Cardozo from digging his property and taking pickaxe from the hand of the Jose Cardozo, in exercise of the right of defence of property. The learned counsel for the respondents assailed this conclusion and submitted that Jose Fernandes and Jose Cardozo, the employees of Public works Department, were merely complying with mandatory directions issued by the learned civil Judge, Senior Division, Margao given in civil Miscellaneous application No. 442 of 1993 in Regular Civil Suit No. 253 of 1993, whereby the learned Judge had directed the defendants, the Public Works Department to give water connection to the plaintiff within 30 days from the order, which was delivered on 31st March, 1994.

(10.) THOUGH strictly, it is not necessary to go into the merits of the order by the learned civil Judge, it may be useful to observe that the dispute was not between the Public Works department and the plaintiff therein, but between the plaintiff therein, Akhtar Khan, and the petitioner herein, who is landlord of the property. Therefore, ordinarily, since the obstruction was not of the Public Works department, but of the landlord, the landlord should have been made a party to the suit, in which orders for altering the landlord's property were sought. Apart from this, when the petitioner obstructed in execution of an order passed by the Civil Court, it would have been appropriate for the party aggrieved to approach the Civil Court for removal of such obstruction in execution of its order, and then after hearing the parties, the Court could have directed grant of police help for removal of obstruction. Here, without complaining to the Civil Court of obstruction by the petitioner and without inviting an adjudication on that aspect, the plaintiff therein approached the police, and police promptly jumped into action. The observations in paragraph No. 78 of the report of the learned Judge that the petitioner was justified in obstructing Jose Fernandes and Jose cardozo, may not have been strictly necessary, all the same, they do not vitiate the conclusions drawn by the learned Judge.

(11.) THIS takes us to the question whether the respondent No. 4 were justified in arresting the petitioner first, on 28-4-1994 on the complaint of the respondent No. 9, Akhtar khan, and again on 1-5-1994 under section 151 of Criminal Procedure Code. The learned senior Counsel for the petitioner submitted that the offences complained of, were trivial in nature and, therefore, there was absolutely no warrant for the arrest of the petitioner. Relying on the judgment of Supreme Court in the case of Jogindar Kumar Vs. State of U. P. , reported in (1994)4 Supreme Court Cases 260, he submitted that arrest itself was thoroughly unwarranted. In the case, the Apex Court was considering the question. of arrest of an advocate, and in paragraph No. 20 of the judgment observed as under : "in India, Third Report of the National police Commission at p. 32 also suggested : "an arrest during the investigation of a cognizable case may be considered justified in one or other of the following circumstances : (i) The case involves a grave offence like murder, dacoity, robbery, rape etc. and it is necessary to arrest the accused and bring his movements under restraint to infuse confidence among the terro-stricken victims. (ii)The accused is likely to abscond and evade the process of law. (iii) The accused is given to violent behaviour and is likely to commit further offences unless his movements are brought under restraint. (iv) The accused is a habitual offender and unless kept in custody he is likely to commit similar offences again. It would be desirable to insist through department instructions that a police officer making an arrest should also record in the case diary the reasons for making the arrest, thereby clarifying his conformity to the specified guidelines. . . . "

The above guidelines are merely the incidents of personal liberty guaranteed under the Constitution of India. No arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self-esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendation of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified. Except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave the Station without permission would do.

(12.) THE learned Senior Counsel for the respondent No. 4 submitted that offences for which the petitioner was arrested were punishable under Sections 186, 353, 356, 379 of the Indian Penal Code. Drawing our attention to the notification dated 27-6-73 issued by the government of Goa in exercise of powers under section 10 of Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, the learned counsel submitted that offence punishable under section 186 had been made cognizable and those under sections 188 and 506 were made non-bailable. However, we are concerned with the offence punishable under section 186, which continues to be bailable. Offences punishable under sections 353 and 356, too continue to be bailable, leaving only offence punishable under section 379 to be non-bailable. The learned Senior Counsel submitted that since the petitioner had committed a non-bailable offence, it was imperative for the respondent No. 4 to arrest the petitioner and, therefore, the arrest was fully justified. We have carefully, considered this submission and deem it necessary to reject it reiterating the observations of the Supreme Court in Jogindar kumar's case cited above. The police machinery must realise that it is obliged to conduct investigation, as far as possible, without touching the offender. The question of touching the offender would arise only while submitting a report under section 173 of Indian Penal Code, when the police are obliged to forward the accused along with charge-sheet. Therefore, in our view, merely because the allegation of the petitioner having committed theft of pickaxe was made, it was not necessary to arrest him, particularly when the petitioner had himself reported in the police station. It would be necessary for the State Government to bring this to the notice of all police officers so that the arrests at the drop of hat are avoided.

(13.) EVEN if for the sake of argument, it is presumed for a while that the respondent no. 4 had justification to effect arrest on 28-4-1994, there was absolutely no justification for arrest on 1-5-1994, as also to invoke the provisions of section 151 of Criminal Procedure code. Incidents after the arrest of the petitioner on 1-5-94 by invoking the provisions of section 151 of the Criminal Procedure Code, were more serious. The petitioner claims that he was handcuffed again and even when he was hospitalised, he was kept in the hospital in handcuffs. This fact has been deposed to by a doctor, who was examined before the learned judge. The contention of the learned Senior counsel for the respondents that Dr. Edwin gomes, witness No. 6, had no business to be in the hospital, since he was not on duty there, does not change the fact that the Dr. Gomes did see the petitioner in handcuffs in the hospital. There is absolutely no reason why the evidence of Dr. Gomes should be disbelieved. The learned judge, therefore, rightly held that the petitioner was unwarrantedly handcuffed.

(14.) AS for the incident dated 28-4-94, it may be useful to point out that the respondents have themselves admitted having handcuffed the petitioner, albeit for a short time. The claim of the respondents that the petitioner was handcuffed only when he was taken in the jeep, has to be rejected because it is thoroughly unnatural, apart from the fact that evidence is also to the contrary. Therefore, on facts, we do not find any reason to take a view different, from that of taken by the learned Judge and hold that the petitioner was handcuffed on 28-4-94 as well as on 1-5-94.

(15.) SECTION 46 of the Criminal procedure Code, which provides as to how the arrest is to be made, prescribes that the police officer shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action. This implies that the arrest is to be effected by use of minimum force. In this case, the petitioner has himself come to the police station. It is not shown that the petitioner had any past criminal history to cause apprehension in the mind of the police officers that the petitioner would flee. The petitioner is shown to be an employee of the Government. In these circumstances, his handcuffing is totally unjustified. The petitioner was seemingly arrested and handcuffed in order to teach him a lesson for obstructing grant of water connection to respondent No. 9, who is a police driver, which in our view, amounts to abuse of powers and authority by concerned respondents.

(16.) IN view of this, accepting the report of the learned Judge, we hold that the petitioner has made out a case for grant of compensation for his unwarranted arrest as well as unnecessary handcuffing. In Arvinder Singh bagga Vs. State of U. P. and others, reported in AIR 1995 SUPREME COURT 117, on similar facts, a learned District Judge had been asked to conduct an enquiry and upon considering result of the enquiry, the Apex court had directed the State to pay compensation of Rs. 10,000/- to the victim. Following this precedent, and considering the fact that the petitioner was unwarrantedly arrested and handcuffed fourteen years ago, we direct the respondent No. 1 State of Goa to pay to the petitioner the compensation in a sum of rs. 25,000/- within a month of this order. It shall be open to the State to initiate appropriate disciplinary or other proceedings against the delinquent officers and recover the compensation so paid from such officers, in order to ensure that the State exchequer is not burdened on account of lapses on the part of its officers.

(17.) BEFORE parting with the judgment, we may observe that by and large the people of state of Goa are law abiding citizens, having respect for authority. It would be necessary for the State to ensure that this respect for authority is not eroded by any high handed actions on the part of its officers.

(18.) RULE in made absolute in the above terms.

Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation:2004(I) Crimes1 (Bom) (DB) = 2003-BCR(Cri)1655,

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : B.B.Vagyani, A.S.Bagga,JJ

Dinkarrao Rajarampant Pole ..V/s ..State of Maharashtra

Criminal Writ Petition 431 of 2001 Of, Mar 13,2003

==========

A] Wrongful arrest & detention in police custody – IPC Ss. 420 & 471 Cr.P.C. S.41-Police Officer is not expected to act in a mechanical manner and in all cases to arrest accused as soon as report of cognizable offence is lodged – Existence of power to arrest is another thing & justification for exercise of it is another thing there must be some reasonable justification in opinion of officer effecting arrest that it was necessary and justified – Except in heinous offences arrest should be avoided – If Police Officer issue notice to a person to attend the Police Station and not leave the station without permission would do – offence u.s. 420, 471, 468 of IPC are not herious offences – Arrest illegal.

B] Compensation- Petitioner was arrested by respondent Police Officer in case registered U/s 420, 468, 471. If IPC – Offences are not heinous offences - Arrest found malafide and mischievous & not protected by element of good faith – Infringement of fundamental right of a citizen cannot stop by giving a mere declaration – Compensatory relief is to be provided under – Cost of Rs. 25,000/- imposed on Police Officer who arrested the petitioner.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) HEARD petitioner in person, Mr. K. G. Patil, learned a. P. P. , for respondent Nos. 1 to 3 and Mr. S. G. Shinde, learned Advocate for respondent No. 4.

(2.) BEING aggrieved by the wrongful arrest and detention in the police custody by the respondent No. 3, the petitioner, a practising lawyer, has invoked extraordinary jurisdiction of this Court under Article 226 read with Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution of India for grant of compensation and direction for submission of 'b' Final Report with prosecution against respondent No. 4 for having committed an offence punishable under section 211 of the Indian Penal code. In brief the facts giving rise to this Criminal Writ Petition are as under:

(3.) ONE Rajarampant had three sons from his first wife Yamunabai namely, vitthalrao, Shankarrao and Shrikrishnarao; and two daughters namely Babutai alias Saraswati and Shantabai. Madhukarrao is the son of Vitthalrao. Respondent No. 4 Sulabha Shendarkar is the married daughter of Shrikrishnarao, vitthalrao, Shankarrao and Shrikrishnarao are no more alive. Shrikrishnarao died in February 2000 Rajarampant is not alive and his first wife Yamunabai died prior to 1923. After death of Yamunabai, Rajarampant married second time to one Yamunabai. Petitioner, Bhaskar and Sushilabai are issues of yamunabai II.

(4.) HOUSE bearing No. 3-14-15 (C. T. S. No. 810/1) of Aurangabad was owned and possessed by Rajaram. It was his self acquired property, Rajaram executed a Will in favour of Yamunabai-II on 17-5-1963 and by the said Will, rajaram bequeathed whole of the house to her. Yamunabai, the real mother of the petitioner, executed registered Will on 12-5-1975 and bequeathed house property to the petitioner, Bhaskarrao and Madhukarrao. Garage was given to Sushilabai, the sister of the petitioner. During her lifetime, Yamunabai II sold the garage to one Satish Mehta. Yamunabai died on 18-9-1992. After her death, the names of the petitioner and other beneficiaries have been mutated in the relevant records. Bhaskarrao sold his portion of the house to Vandana gadiya and Sarla Gadiya by registered sale deed. The petitioner and madhukarrao, the son of Vitthalrao, sold their respective portions of the house property to one Sajed by a registered sale deed dated 22-1-2001.

(5.) THE petitioner started his legal career as a lawyer at Aurangabad in the year 1951. He practised law till 23-12-1960. On 24-12-1960, the petitioner was appointed as Police Prosecutor. After retirement, the petitioner resumed his legal profession since 1989. Madhukar is a retired teacher.

(6.) IT is alleged by the petitioner that respondent No. 4 Sulabha, the daughter of Shrikrishnarao, who happens to be the step brother of the petitioner, filed false and frivolous First Information Report at City Chowk Police Station, aurangabad on 28-4-2001. According to petitioner, respondent No. 4 had absolutely no interest of whatsoever nature in the house property. However, respondent No. 4, in order to grab a share in the property, filed a false report in order to bring a pressure on the petitioner and Madhukar. Respondent No. 4 filed a report contending therein that petitioner and Madhukarrao sold the house property by committing forgery in the original registered Will of yamunabai II. Respondent No. 4 has also filed a civil suit in the Civil Court and thereby challenged the execution of Will by Yamunabai.

(7.) RESPONDENT No. 3 registered Crime No. 90/2001 under sections 420, 468 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code on the basis of First Information Report dated 28-4-2001, lodged by respondent No. 4. The crime was registered on the same day. Respondent No. 3, without application of mind, arrested the petitioner at 9. 35 p. m. on 28-4-2001 and kept him in the lock up throughout the night. The petitioner, a practising lawyer of 76 years of age, sustained a rude shock on account of his illegal arrest and detention. The respondent No. 3 produced the petitioner before the Judicial Magistrate at 3. 00 p. m. on 29-4-2001. The petitioner submitted application for grant of bail and same was allowed by the Judicial Magistrate. The petitioner was ultimately released on bail at 3. 45 p. m. on 29-4-2001.

(8.) THE Investigating Officer came to the conclusion on the basis of material collected so far that the petitioner, Madhukarrao and Sajed did not commit any offence. The Investigating Officer has come to the conclusion that the complaint lodged by respondent No. 4 was false. Therefore, the Investigating officer submitted a report under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code and moved the learned Magistrate for discharge of the petitioner, Madhukarrao and Sajed. Respondent No. 3 did not even ask for police custody. On the production of the petitioner before the Magistrate, M. C. remand was asked for. However, the Magistrate released the petitioner on bail. The Investigating officer has also submitted a report for grant of 'b' summary.

(9.) ACCORDING to the petitioner, the respondent No. 3, without verification of the correctness of the recitals of the complaint dated 28-4-2001, made a haste for his arrest without there being any justification for arrest and illegally detained him in the jail. The petitioner has made a serious grievance that he being the owner of the house property, should not have been arrested on the false and frivolous complaint lodged by respondent No. 4. According to him, there was no need of his arrest and detention in police custody. The petitioner has also made a serious grievance that the respondent No. 3 could have summoned the petitioner for production of document under section 91 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The subsequent report of the Investigating officer submitted under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code and fur-ther report to the Magistrate for grant of 'b' summary, according to the petitioner, would clearly go to show that action of respondent No. 3 was illegal. Therefore, petitioner has claimed compensation from the State on the basis of doctrine of vicarious liability.

(10.) IN response to the notice, the respondent No. 3 has filed affidavit-in-reply. The respondent No. 3 has justified in his affidavit-in-reply the action of arrest of the petitioner. According to him, the arrest of the petitioner was very, much necessary in order to recover the forged document. The original Will executed by Yamunabai II was seized from the petitioner along with death certificate of Yamunabai. The specimen signature of the petitioner was also obtained for purpose of forwarding it to the handwriting expert in order to ascertain whether forgery was committed. The respondent No. 3 has specifically stated in para 6 of his affidavit that he acted in good faith while arresting the petitioner. According to him, he carried investigation impartially and in accordance with law. It is said that the petitioner is not entitled to get compensation for the acts which are committed in good faith. He has repeatedly played the same tune as to the registration of crime on the ground that complaint lodged by respondent No. 4 disclosed commission of cognizable offence.

(11) The respondent No. 4 has also filed affidavit-in-reply. Respondent No. 4 states in her affidavit-in-reply that sale deed executed by petitioner and madhukar is forged and bogus document and this document is prepared in order to deprive her legal right in the immovable property. According to her, a fraud was committed on the Government authorities by showing the name of madhukar as son of Rajaram and got prepared the P. R. Card of the house properly showing the name of Madhukar s/o Rajaram Pole. According to the respondent No. 4, this act was deliberate. A statement is also made in the affidavit-in-reply that petitioner has also committed forgery in respect of registered Will executed by Yamunabai. She states further that her report was not false, frivolous and vexations. Respondent No. 4 finally submits that petitioner is not entitled to get compensation and the petition is, therefore, liable to be dismissed.

(12.) THE petitioner has argued that without application of mind and without any justification the respondent No. 3 arrested him and illegally detained him in police custody. He points out from remand report (Exhibit D) dated 29-4-2001 that the Investigating Officer did not even ask for police custody remand. On the contrary, M. C. remand was asked for. The petitioner also brought to our notice the report {exhibit C) submitted by the Investigating Officer on 16-6-2001 filed under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code for discharge of the petitioner. He also diverted our attention to the report submitted for 'b' summary by the Investigating Officer (Exhibit F). According to the petitioner, these documents would clearly support his case of unjustified arrest and illegal detention. He further submits that the State is responsible for giving compensation to him for the illegal acts committed by the respondent no. 3 on the basis of doctrine of vicarious liability. In support of his submissions, he mainly relied upon the case of (Jpginder Kumar v. State of U. P. and others)1, 1994 Cri. L. J. 1981 and (D. K. Basu v. State of West Bengal), 1997 (2)Bom. C. R. (S. C.)666 : 1997 Cri. L. J. 743.

(13.) THE learned A. P. P. , Shri. K. G. , Patil submits that the first information report lodged by respondent No. 4 disclosed the commission of cognizable offence and, therefore, the respondent No. 3 was justified in arresting the petitioner. He submits that no illegality was committed by respondent No. 3 in arresting the petitioner. The petitioner was arrested at 9. 35 p. m. on 28-4-2001 and immediately on the next day he was produced before the Judicial magistrate, First Class at 3. 00 p. m. and was released on bail. Therefore, the petitioner is not entitled to compensation on the basis of doctrine of vicarious liability. He also submits that respondent No. 3 acted in good faith while arresting the petitioner/he raised defence under section 159 of the Bombay police Act, 1951.

(14.) THE learned Advocate Shri. S. G. Shinde, for respondent No. 4 submitted that no illegality has been committed by respondent No. 4. The complaint lodged by respondent No. 4 very much disclosed commission of cognizable offence and, therefore, there was nothing wrong in the arrest of the petitioner, (15.) WE gave anxious consideration to the rival submissions made at the bar. It is material to note that the petitioner is a old man of 76 years. The petitioner is in active practice of law. He-practices law in the High Court. Prima fade the house property was originally owned and possessed by Rajarampant, the father of the petitioner. The petitioner acquired title to the portion of the house property on the basis of registered Will executed by his real mother. It is seen from the copy of the Will (Exhibit G) that Yamunabai executed Will on 12-5-1975. This document of Will (Exhibit G) would clearly support the say of the petitioner with regard to his title to the portion of the house property.

(16.) IT is clearly mentioned in the report submitted under section 169 of the criminal Procedure Code that the registered Will dated 12-5-1975 is a genuine document. It also reveals that the officer from the Department of City survey committed an inadvertent mistake in showing the name of Madhukar as son of Rajaram Pole instead of Vitthalrao Pole. It is also stated in the report submitted under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code that on the basis of the inadvertent mistake committed by the concerned officer from City survey Office. Madhukar has not at all taken any undue advantage and has not cheated the Government or any other person. It is also clearly mentioned in the report under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code that the entry in the P. R. Card in respect of incorrect name of Madhukar is not at all delierate. It is reiterated in the report under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code that it was slip of hand. It is also pointed out that Madhukar submitted application for -mutation after death of Yamunabai and he had shown his name as Madhukar s/o Vitthalrao Pole.

(17.) IN fact petitioner has not committed any kind of forgery so far as registered Will dated 12-5-1975. He has also not committed any forgery in respect of P. R. card. It is clearly seen on the basis of material placed on record that the respondent No. 4 tried to take advantage of slip of hand and lodged a report at the City Chowk Police Station without there being any foundation. The respondent No. 3 could have verified from the record from City Survey office as to who is the owner of the house property in dispute. It is also material to note that Shrikrishnarao, the step brother of the petitioner, who died in February 2000, did not at all challenge the Will executed by Rajarampant in favour of Yamunabai and the registered Will dated 12-5-1975 executed by his step mother Yamunabai during his lifetime. The respondent No. 4 was aware that her father did not challenge the Will executed by Yamunabai II.

(18.) ON examination of the documents placed on record, and after having digested the material facts of the case, we are not at all inclined to accept the explanation of the respondent No. 3 in the matter of arrest and detention of the petitioner in jail. The petitioner is practising Advocate. He is a senior citizen. There was no possibility of petitioner being absconded. The justification for arrest and detention for seizure of so called forged documents is nothing but a lame excuse put forth by the respondent No. 3 in order to justify his high handed action. The respondent No. 3 could have summoned the petitioner under section 91 of the Criminal Procedure Code for purpose of production of so called forged document. He did not at all apply his mind as to whether really arrest and detention of the petitioner was necessary. From the very report lodged by respondent No. 4 one could easily know in whose name the house property stands.

(19.) IN the case in hand, the respondent No. 3, without any justification, arrested the petitioner at odd hours of night in order to prevent him from securing a bail and detained him in custody throughout the night. When easy and legitimate course was open for the respondent No. 3, he preferred unjustified arrest and illegal detention of the petitioner simply on the ground that the first information report lodged by respondent No. 4 disclosed the commission of cognizable offence. The respondent No. 3 cannot take shelter under the umbrella of good faith in order to justify his high handed and illegal action of arrest and detention of the petitioner. Good faith is defined by section 52 of the Indian Penal Code. Good faith requires care, caution and prudence, the action of resporident No. 3 does not reflect either care or prudence. Therefore, section 159 of the Bombay Police Act, 1951 cannot be pressed into service.

(20.) IN the case of Joginder Kumar, the Supreme Court has observed in para 24 of the judgment that no arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police Officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing and the justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The Police Officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputaionand self esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. The supreme Court went on to observe that it would be prudent for a Police Officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. A person is not liable to be arrested merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified and except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a Police Officer issues notices to person to attend the Station House and not leave station without permission would do.

(21.) WE would also like to make reference to the case of (M. C. Abraham and another v. State of Maharashtra and others)3, 2003 Bom. C. R. (Cri.) (S. C.)650 : 2002 (9) SCALE 769. The Supreme Court dealt with the question of powers of investigating Officer with regard to arrest. Section 41 of the Criminal Procedure Code gives power to a Police Officer to arrest an offender without an order from a Magistrate or without a warrant. Section 41 of the Criminal procedure Code gives discretion to the Police Officer in the matter of arrest. However, the Supreme Court has observed that Police Officer is not expected to act in a mechanical manner and in all cases to arrest the accused as soon as the report is lodged. It is further observed that in appropriate cases, after some investigation, the Investigating Officer may make up his mind as to whether it is necessary to arrest the accused person.

Since the power to arrest is a discretionary, a Police Officer is not always bound to arrest an accused even if the allegation against him is of having committed a cognizable offence. The Supreme Court went on to observe that since an arrest is in the nature of an encroachment on the liberty of the subject and does affect the reputation and status of the citizen, the power has to be cautiously exercised. It depends upon the nature of the offence alleged and the type of persons who are accused of having committed the cognizable offence. The power, therefore, has to be exercised with caution and circumspection.

(22.) IF the observations made by the Apex Court are taken into consideration, we are of the clear opinion that the respondent No. . 3, without there being any justification for immediate arrest, clearly indulged in an illegal act of arrest and detention of the petitioner, which has caused incalculable harm to his reputation and self esteem. The respondent No. 3 has failed to justify the arrest of the petitioner. No doubt the respondent No. 3 has power to do so. The guidelines of the Supreme Court given in Joginder Kumar's case unfortunately fell on the deaf ears of respondent No. 3. The respondent No. 3 has arrested the petitioner in a routine manner on mere allegations of commission of a cognizable offence. The respondent No. 3, in this particular case, has lost sight of the very concept of personal liberty and the constitutional protection of the rights of the citizen. The arrest and detention of the petitioner was contrary to the guidelines given by the Supreme Court.

(23.) THERE is nothing on record to show that the respondent No. 3 has verified as to genuineness and bona fides of the complaint and a reasonable belief as to the petitioner's complicity in the crime and need of immediate arrest. He has not bothered slightly in depriving the personal liberty of the petitioner. The respondent No. 3 has not at all pointed out a reasonable justification in effecting the arrest of the petitioner at the odd hours of night. There was no need to effect arrest in the night time. The respondent No. 3 had oblique motive in doing so. Because of arrest at the odd hours of night, the petitioner could not obtain bail. It is also to be noted that first information report does not disclose heinous offence.

(24.) IN the case of D. K. Basu (referred supra), the Supreme Court has ob-served that' infringement of fundamental right of a citizen cannot stop by giving a mere declaration. It must proceed further and give compensatory relief, not by way of damages as in civil action but by way of compensation under the public law jurisdiction for wrong done, due to breach of public duty by the State of not protecting the fundamental right to life of the citizen. To repair the wrong done and give judicial redress for legal injury is a compul-sion of judicial consciences. The Supreme Court has also observed that it is now well accepted proposition that monetary or pecuniary compensation is an appropriate and indeed an effective and sometimes perhaps the only suit-able remedy for redressal of the established infringement of the fundamental right to life of a citizen by the public servants and the State is vicariously liable for their acts. The claim of the citizen is based on the principle of strict liability to which the defence of sovereign immunity is not available and the citizen must receive the amount of compensation from the State, which shall have the right to be indemnified by the wrong doer.

(25.) WHILE dilating upon the question of assessment of compensation, the supreme Court has given a caution. It is said that the emphasis has to be on the compensatory and not on punitive element. The objective is to apply balm to the wounds and not to punish the transgressor or the offender, as award-ing appropriate punishment for the offence (irrespective of compensation) must be left to the Criminal Courts in which the offender is prosecuted, which the state, in law, is duty bound to do. The Supreme Court has further said that the quantum of compensation will, of course, depend upon the peculiar facts of each case and no straitjacket formula can be evolved in that behalf.

(26.) A reference with profit can be made to the case of (Rudul Sah v. State of bihar}\ A. I. R. 1983 S. C. 1086. The Supreme Court has observed that the administrative sclerosis leading to flagrant infringement of fundamental rights cannot be corrected by any other method open to the judiciary to adopt. The right of compensation is some palliative for the unlawful acts of instrumentalities which act in the name of public interest and which present for their protection the powers of the State as a shield. Respect for the rights of individuals is the true bastion of democracy. Therefore, the State must repair the damage done by its officers to the petitioner's right. The case demonstrates consequences of illegal detention for over 14 years after acquittal. The Supreme Court ordered the State of Bihar to pay to the petitioner in that case Rs. 30. 000/- as an interim measure in addition to the sum of Rs. 5000/- already paid.

(27.) IN the case of (Bhim Singh, M. L. A. v. State of Jammu and Kashmir)5, a. I. R. 1986 S. C. 494, the Supreme Court awarded compensation of Rs. 50. 000/- to the petitioner whose arrest was mischievous and malicious. The Supreme court observed that the constitutional and legal rights, if invaded, the mischief or malice and invasion may not be washed away by his being set free. In appropriate cases, the Court has jurisdiction to compensate the victim by awarding suitable monetary compensation.

(28.) HAVING examined the case of the petitioner, in the light of the pronouncements of the Supreme Court referred above, we are of the clear opinion that the arrest and detention of the petitioner was unjustified. The arrest and detention of the petitioner was mischievous and malicious. The fundamental right of the petitioner has been abrogated by illegal arrest and detention. Therefore, the petitioner is entitled to monetary compensation. In the matter of liability of the State for the torts committed by its employees, it is now the settled law that the State is liable for the tortious acts committed by its employees in the course of their employment. Viewing the case from that angle, there is no difficulty in holding that the State is liable for the tortious act committed by its servant within the scope of his employment. A senior citizen of 76 years of age, a practicising lawyer has been arrested and detained without there being any justification. The law should be used as a positive and effective instrument to meet the demand of the individual to have a better life, a fuller life, meaningful life and a complete life. Right to life includes dignified life. To promote that demand is the purpose of law. The petitioner has made out very strong case for grant of compensation. Taking into consideration the incalculable harm caused to the reputation of the petitioner, we are inclined to grant monetary compensation to the petitioner.

(29.) A direction with regard to submission of 'b' summary with prosecution cannot be granted because, the matter for grant of 'b' summary is pending before the Judicial Magistrate. The Judicial Magistrate, First Class is the competent authority in this behalf. We do not want to usurp his powers. Therefore, we are not inclined to issue any direction in this behalf.

(30.) THIS takes us to consider the case of respondent No. 4. The petitioner has also claimed compensation from respondent No. 4 for having filed a false criminal complaint against him. In order to substantiate his argument, he heavily relied upon the report submitted by the Investigating Officer under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the opinion expressed by the investigating Officer therein. The Investigating Officer has stated in the report under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code that the complaint filed by respondent No. 4 is false. The prayer of the petitioner for compensation is liable to be rejected. The writ cannot be issued against respondent No. 4. There is one more difficulty in accepting the opinion expressed by the Investigating Officer in the report submitted under section 169 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Judicial Magistrate, First Class, before whom the proceeding of 'b' summary is pending, can very well grant 'b' summary with prosecution or refuse to grant 'b' summary with prosecution. The petitioner, therefore, can very well initiate a proper proceeding against respondent No. 4 for purpose of recovery of compensation after conclusion of the proceeding for grant of 'b' summary.

(31.) IN the result, the criminal writ petition is partly allowed. We direct the respondent No. I/state to pay compensation of Rs. 25. 000/- (Rupees twenty five thousand) to the petitioner within a period of four weeks. We clarify that respondent No. 1 can, after due enquiry, initiate an appropriate action against respondent No. 3 for recovery of monetary loss caused to the State and do recovery from him amount of compensation paid to the petitioner. Rule made absolute accordingly. Criminal writ petition partly allowed.
****

Cross Citation: 2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 398 (P. & H.)

PUNJAB & HARYANA HIGH COURT

Coram : Alok Singh, J.

Suresh Sehgal ….Vs.. State of Punjab.

CRM-M No. 8223 of 2011 - Decided On 05/04/2011

==========

Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974) - S. 438 Anticipatory bail - Serious allegations by petitioner against ACP for threatening him to falsely implicate him in case of cheating - Story set up by police and complainant does not inspiring confidence – Held, Bail granted to Petitioner and investigation transeferred to crime Branch.

==========

JUDGEMENT

ALOK SINGH, J.:- This is an application seeking anticipatory bail in FIR No.52 dated 24.2.2010, under Sections 406,420,120 of Indian Penal Code, registered at Police Station Division No.4, District Jalandhar.

2. As per the prosecution story, the demised property i.e. House No.517 R, Model Town Jalandhar belongs to Amrik Singh and Avtar Singh, who are residing abroad. Neena alongwith property dealer Charanjit Singh assured the complainant Didar Singh that she is the owner and has authority to sell the demised property in question and believing Neena and property dealer Charanjit Singh, he (complainant) has agreed to purchase the property for 1,95,70,000/- ; a written agreement was executed by Neena as seller in favour of complainanta€™s wife Darshan Kaur and his son Kaljinder Pal Singh; the wife and son of the complainant had paid a€40,00,000 «-*/- to the alleged vendor Neena and it was agreed that sale deed would be executed on or before 25.4.2008. Again a€50,00,000 «-S/- were paid to the seller Neena under the receipt executed on the back of the agreement and time to execute the sale deed was further extended till 30.5.2008; thereafter Neena refused to execute the sale deed and on inquiry complainant found that Neena has cheated him, his wife and son by showing herself as owner of the property while it was found by the complainant that Neena was neither the owner nor had any authority to sell the demised property.

3. Learned counsel for the petitioner has vehemently argued that after one year of the registration of the FIR, the petitioner was called by the Additional Commissioner of Police, Satinder Pal Singh, in his office and demanded a€30 5 lacs from the petitioner; when the petitioner asked him the reason, he told that he is investigating the alleged complaint of Neena Singla against the petitioner in relation to Kothi No.517-R, Model Town, Jalandhar; when the petitioner told him that he is unable to arrange the illegal demand made by him then the said ACP Satinder Pal Singh threatened the petitioner that he will falsely implicate the petitioner in the false FIR under Section 420 IPC etc and put him behind the bars; on hearing this, immediately the petitioner made a complaint dated 10.01.2011 to Hon'blethe Chief Justice of Punjab and Haryana High Court, Chandigarh with a copy to the Chief Minister of Punjab, Chandigarh, the Director General of Police, Punjab, Chandigarh and the Chairman, Human Rights Commission, Punjab, Chandigarh, under the Speed Post; Hon'ble the Acting Chief Justice did not take the cognizance of the complaint made by the petitioner on the ground that no action is possible on the administrative side; however, the Punjab State Human Rights Commission took cognizance of the complaint, which was registered as Complaint No.561/8/2011; since serious allegations have been levelled against a senior Commission took cognizance of the matter and called for the report in the matter from Home Department through Commissioner of Police, Jalandhar; after the Punjab State Human Rights Commission issued notice in the complaint made by the petitioner against ACP Satinder Pal Singh, he immediately instructed the concerned SHO and the Incharge, Anti Fraud Cell to arrest the petitioner; the Incharge, Anti Fraud Cell thereafter picked up Shiv Bahadur, servant of Shivender Sehgal @ Shiv Sehgal and got recorded his statement under threat and later took him to the Magistrate and got recorded his statement under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure after tutoring him. The statement of Shiv Bahadur was got recorded by the Police before the JMIC on 14.02.2011.

4. Learned counsel for the petitioner further contends that one Avtar Singh son of Hari Singh and Amrik Singh son of Mukhtiar Singh resident of Talwandi Road, Zira, District Ferozepur, executed a General Power of Attorney in favour of one Shiv Bahadur son of Janki Dass, resident of Plot No.80, Partap Bagh, Jalandhar, servant of Shiv Sehgal son of Virender Sehgal with regard to House No.517-R, Model Town Jalandhar, area 37 marlas 41 square feet. In the General Power of Attorney executed by Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh in favour of the said Shiv Bahadur, Shiv Bahadur has been given all powers with regard to sell, mortgage, Hibba, exchange in any manner; Shiv Bahadur son of Janki Dass further executed a Special Power of Attorney dated 20.11.2007 in favour of one Naresh Singh son of Dubans Singh and Ajit Singh son of Kanshi Ram, resident of Makhdhumpura, Jalandhar, again both of them other servants of Shiv Sehgal son of Virender Sehgal; not only this, the attesting witness of the Sub Power of Attorney executed in favour of the Naresh Singh and Ajit Singh is Kuldip, who is Driver of Shiv Sehgal. A bare perusal of Sub Power of Attorney executed in favour of Naresh Singh and Ajit Singh would further make it clear that no complete address of Naresh Singh and Ajit Singh has been given in the said attorney.

5. Learned counsel for the petitioner has further stated that although Shiv Bahadur has delegated his power in favour of Naresh Singh and Ajit Singh by executing Sub Power of Attorney but still he on the basis of the General Power of Attorney executed by Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh entered into an agreement to sell the property situated at House No.517-R, Model Town, Jalandhar with Neena Singla wife of Pawan Singla on 1st March, 2008 for a€*-S 1,53,00,0007- and received a sum of a€20,00,000 *4/- as earnest money after the execution of agreement to sell in favour of Neena Singla; this fact is proved from the legal notice served by Shiv Bahadur through his counsel to Neena Singla; since there was some dispute between Shiv Bahadur and Neena Singla with regard to execution of the sale deed or the payment made in pursuance to agreement to sell, Neena Singla submitted a complaint to the Senior Superintendent of Police, Jalandhar on 24.12.2009 against Shiv Bahadur. In the said complaint Neena Singla also levelled some wild allegations against the petitioner stating that the payment of lacs was made in the house of the petitioner to his servant Shiv Bahadur despite the fact that Shiv Bahadur is not at all servant of the petitioner but is servant of Shiv Sehgal son of Virender Sehgal; when the complaint was received in the office of Senior Superintendent of Police, Jalandhar, one Mr. Iqbal Signh Kahlon, Inspector came to the house of the petitioner along with the complaint and supplied him a copy of the complaint made by Neena Singla to the S.S.P., Jalandhar; the petitioner immediately submitted an application dated 8.2.2010 to the Inspector, Anti Fraud Cell explaining his position, alleging that he is neither a party to the agreement nor Shiv Bahadur son of Janki Dass is his servant and he is unnecessarily dragged in the complaint, which is to harm his reputation as the petitioner is Ex-Mayor of Municipal Corporation, Jalandhar.

6. Learned counsel for the petitioner has further stated that when Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh came to know about the misuse of power of attorney by Shiv Bahadur, Avatar Singh and Amrik Singh, the owner of House No.517-R, Model Town, Jalandhar, cancelled the General Power of Attorney executed in favour of Shiv Bahadur stating that they have lost faith in him as they have reasons to believe that said Shiv Bahadur son of Janki Dass would misuse the General Power of Attorney executed by them; after cancelling the General Power of Attorney in favour of Shiv Bahadur on 30.12.2009, Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh executed a General Power of Attorney in favour of Sumit Sehgal son of the petitioner-Suresh Sehgal, resident of EK 123, Shivrajgarh Jalandhar; it requires to mention here that in the said Power of Attorney executed by Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh, no power of alienation or transfer the property in any manner has been given to Sumit Sehgal son of the petitioner but the power to know about the alleged agreement to sell dated 27.11.2009 in favour of Ajay Puri executed by Shiv Bahadur, Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh informed Sumit Sehgal son of the petitioner, who was appointed as General Power of Attorney by Avtar Singh and Amrik Singh to look after the property and to defend litigation; Sumit Sehgal the son of the petitioner through his advocate, replied the legal notice served by Ajay Puri and it was alleged that Shiv Bahadur was not having any authority to execute the agreement to sell and the same was fabricated documents.

7. It is further contended by the learned counsel for the petitioner that a bare perusal of the present FIR No.52, reveals that only allegation alleged in the said FIR are against Neena Singla who on the basis of agreement to sell in her favour has further agreed to sell the property in favour of Didar Singh son of Shankar Singh and therefore, Neena Singla and one property dealer Charanjit Singh has cheated Didar Singh son of Shankar Singh; police has falsely implicated the petitioner on the direction of ACP Satinder Pal Singh, as he was annoyed with the petitioner because the petitioner refused to pay a sum of a€30 «-£ lacs as demanded by the ACP Satinder Pal Singh.

8. Mr. T.S. Salana, Deputy Advocate General, Punjab, on the instruction of Inspector Gurbinder Iqbal Singh, states that in fact Neena has lodged a report with the police stating that petitioner-Suresh Sehgal has executed an agreement to sell in her favour showing himself owner of the demised property and has received £€20,00,000 <-$/- as a token money. On the complaint of Neena, police has found that Suresh Sehgal present petitioner has obtained thumb impressions of Shiv Bahadur servant on the blank papers and has prepared forged documents in favour of Neena.

9. Mr. Sandeep Arora, learned counsel for the complainant has stated that an agreement to sell was executed in favour of Neena by the petitioner and Neena in turn has executed agreement to sell in favour of complainants wife and son. Therefore, Neena accused has been cheated by the present petitioner/accused.

10. Story set up by police as well as Neena that petitioner has executed the agreement to sell in favour of Neena on the face of it seems to be incorrect and concocted on the following grounds :-

(A) Shiv Bahadur got issued one legal notice to Neena Singla through Advocate Gopal Thakur, Chamber No. 181 District Courts Compound, Jalandhar on 25.1.2009 (Annexure P-9 to the petition) stating Neena Singla has failed to honour agreement to sell between them, therefore, earnest money of a€20 <-* lakhs paid by Neena Singla to Shiv Bahadur stands forfeited and agreement stands cancelled.

(B) Complaint made by Neena Singla to S.S.P. Jalandhar dated 24.12.2009 reads that she had entered into agreement to sell with Shiv Bahadur and a€20 <-S Lakhs as earnest money was paid in the house of Suresh Sehgal.

(C) Shiv Bahadur has executed one special power of attorney on 20.11.2007 in favour of Naresh Singh and Ajit Singh while Kuldip signed the power of attorney as witness. According to petitioner Shiv Bahadur, Naresh Singh, Ajit Singh and Kuldip Singh are servants of Shiv Sehgal.

(D) Shiv Bahadur again executed agreement to sell on 27.11.2009 in favour of Ajay Puri. Ajay Puri has issued notice to Shiv Bahadur, Ajit Singh and Amrik Singh, owners of the property which was duly replied.

(E) If Shiv Bahadur is executing sub power of attorney, another agreement to sell and got issued legal notice through Advocate and has never been servant of present petitioner, prima facie, it seems that agreement, if any, in favour of Neena Singla was executed by Shiv Bahadur and not by present petitioner.

11. Since serious allegations are made by the petitioner against ACP Satinder Pal Singh and story set up by the police and complainant at this stage does not inspire confidence, therefore, it would be just and proper and in the interest of justice that investigation must be carried out by a team of the Crime Branch of the Punjab Police consisting of three members of the Crime Branch headed by the officer not below the rank of Superintendent of Police. D.G.P., Punjab is expected to look into this.

12. However, at this stage custodial interrogation of the petitioner seems to be totally unjustified keeping in mind the ratio of the judgment in a€oeSiddharam Satlingappa Mhetre versus State of Maharastra and others, 2011 (1) RCR (Criminal) 126, wherein the Hon'ble Apex Court has observed that irrational and indiscriminate arrest must be avoided.

13. This Court hopes and trust that the story set up by all the parties as recorded hereinbefore shall be investigated by the Crime Branch, Punjab Police. This Court further trust and hopes that before coming to any conclusion Crime Branch shall also make necessary inquiries from the owners of properties who are residing abroad.

14. Considering totality of the facts and circumstances of the case, I direct that in the event of arrest of the petitioner, he shall be released on bail on furnishing his personal bond and one surety of a€20,000 to the satisfaction of the present Investigating Officer. It is clarified that observation/discussion hereinabove are solely for the purpose of deciding present petition.

****

Cross Citation: 2005 (2) Crimes 299 (HC)

Chhattisgarh High Court

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V.K.Shrivastava, J
Mohd.Amin Memon..Vs..State of Chhattisgarh
Misc.Cr.Case 2150 Of 2004, Nov 03,2004

==========

Cr - P.C. S. 438 – IPC SS 452, 323, 294 and 506 – Applicant earlier lodged a complaint against police officials and to take revenge police wanted to arrest applicant – Fit case for protection of anticipatory bail under S. 438 of Cr. P.C. – Anticipatory bail granted.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Heard.

(2.) The accused/applicant No. 1 - Mohd. Amin Memon has preferred this bail application under Section 438 of the Cr. P.C., apprehending arrest in Crime No. 198/2004 registered at Police Station: Darn, Dist, Korba, for commission of the offence punishable under Sections 452, 323, 294 and 506 read with Section 34 of the I.P.C. for releasing him on anticipatory bail.

(3.) It is alleged that on 18/8/2004 Mohd. Amin Memon and Abdul Ajij Memon entered the house of complainant Hanif Khan, abused and assaulted him. Applicants contention is that he has lodged a complaint against Police officials and the same has been registered by the Court, therefore, the Police officials have got this fake case prepared and to take revenge they want to arrest the applicant.

(4.) Taking into account all the facts and material available on record, I am of the opinion that this is a fit case where protection under Section 438 of the Cr. P.C should be extended to the applicant. Accordingly, the petition is allowed and it is directed that in the event of arrest, if the applicant No. 1 - Mond. Amin Memon, abiding with the conditions as laid down in Section 438 of the Cr. P.C., furnishes a personal bond of Rs.20,000.00 (Rs. Twenty thousand) with two solvent sureties of the like sum to the satisfaction of the authority arresting, he be released on anticipatory bail for a period of two months from today. In the meanwhile, applicant shall be entitled to file application for grant of regular bail in concerned Court and the concerned Court shall decide the same on its own merit without being influenced with the observations made herein. Certified Copy as per rules Application allowed.

==========

[Note:- Also see 2010 ALL MR (Cri.) 2775 – Sec. 467, 326 etc of I.P.C. through punishable with life but not with death therefore bail can be granted by Magistrate.]

Cross Citation: 1997 CRI. L. J. 3124, AIR 1997 SC 2575,

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

(FULL BENCH)

Hon'ble Judge(s) : A. M. AHMADI C.J.I., J. S. VERMA AND B. N. KIRPAL, JJ.

Chandraswami …Versus..Central Bureau of Investigation

Criminal Appeal No. 2068 of 1996 (arising out of S.L.P. (Cri) No. 3337 of 1996), D/- 7 -11 - 1996.

==========

Criminal P.C. S. 437 – Bail – Grant of - If the case is not covered by cls (i) and (ii) of S. 437(1) of Cr. P.C. i.e. the offences are not punishable in alternative with death and the accused is not previously convicted for seven years imprisonment or two times for 3 years or more - Held- the accused is entitled to get bail – Therefore ordinarily a person suspected to having committed an offence u.s. 420, 120(B) of I.P.C. would be entitled to bail.

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras (1996) 6 SCC 354 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1338 6

Judgement

JUDGMENT :- Leave granted.

2. A complaint dated 25-8-1987 was received from one Shri Lakhu Bhai Pathak of U.K. whereupon a case under Section 120-B read with Section 420, I.P.C. was registered against the appellants.

3. In brief, the allegations of the aforesaid complainant were that during the year 1983, the appellants came in contact with the complainant Lakhu Bhai pathak and led him to believe that they wielded sufficient influence in India to secure for him lucrative contracts in India. It was further alleged that in the month of December, 1983, the appellants induced him to pay an amount of US$ one lakh for procuring a contract for him. This amount was alleged to have been paid to appellant No. 1, Chandra-swami, by two cheques, one for US$ 27,000, dated 29-12-1983 and another for US$ 73,000, dated 30-12-1983. Both the cheques were stated to have been handed over to appellant No. 1 on January 4, 1984 in New York.

4. Both the appellants denied the aforesaid allegations as being false and baseless. However on the aforesaid complaint having been lodged, the appellants were arrested on 13-2-1988 but were ordered to be released on bail, vide order dated 17-2-1988 of the learned Addl. Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, New Delhi. While passing the order, some conditions were imposed including one that the appellants would not leave the country without prior permission of the Court and they would join the investigation as and when required.

5. On an application being filed, the High Court of Delhi, vide order dated 4-8-1988, allowed the appellants to go abroad on certain conditions. Thereafter, the appellants went abroad on a number of occasions after securing permission from the Delhi High Court. The last such permission was granted under order dated 4-9-1995.

6. Pursuant to the order passed by this Court on 28-11-1995 in a Public Interest Litigation, being Writ Petition No. 640 of 1995 (Anukul Chandra Pradhan v. U.O.I.), which was confirmed by order dated 2-4-1996, (reported in 1996(6) SCC 354), the appellants have been restrained from going abroad. In reply to the aforesaid writ petition, the respondent stated that the investigation in the first information report lodged by Lakhu Bhai Pathak was still pending. Thereafter, on 12-4-1996, the respondent filed a charge-sheet in the Court of the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate (C.M.M.), Delhi, against the two appellants. The C.M.M., Delhi, vide order dated 2-5-1996, took cognizance of the offence and issued non-bailable warrants against both the appellants. Consequent thereto, the appellants were arrested in Madras on 2-5-1996 and have been in custody since then. The appellants, on 3-5-1996, filed an application for cancellation of the non-bailable warrants and also moved another application for grant of bail. Both these applications were dismissed by the C.M.M. on 4-5-1996. He also passed an order cancelling the bail granted earlier to the appellants on 17-2-1988.

7. The orders dated 2-5-1996 and 4-5-1996 were challenged by appellant No. 1 under Section 482, Cr. P.C. before the High Court, but without success. By order dated 8-5-1996, the prayer for bail was rejected by the High Court of Delhi. The three main grounds for rejecting bail were; (i) new material had come to light; (ii) the C.B.I.

apprehended that the appellants may tamper with the evidence; and (iii) the Supreme Court had restrained the appellants from going abroad in view of the apprehension expressed by the C.B.I.

8. Charges were then framed by the C.M.M., Delhi, against the appellants on 21-5-1996. Thereupon, another application for bail, being Criminal Misc. (main) No. 1267/1996, was filed in the High Court of Delhi but the same was dismissed on 24-5-1996. The trial of the appellants then commenced on 3-6-1996.

9. Applications for bail were again filed by appellant No. 1 before the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate and Special Judge, Delhi but were dismissed on 6-6-1996 and 7-6-1996 respectively.

10. On 5th, 7th and 8th July, 1996, the complainant Lakhu Bhai Pathak was examined and partly cross-examined. On the basis of his statement, the C.M.M. Delhi, vide his order dated 9-7-1996, added the former Prime Minister of India Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao as an accused to the criminal conspiracy and he was summoned for the offence under Section 120(B) read with Section 420, I.P.C. The summons were returnable on 24-7-1996. The dates which were earlier fixed for recording of evidence in the trial were cancelled.

11. On 21-9-1996, charges were ordered to be framed against the newly added accused but no further evidence has since been recorded. Remaining cross-examination alone remains in the testimony of Lakhu Bhai Pathak.

12. In the meantime, after summons were issued by the C.M.M., Delhi, to Narasimha Rao, the appellants moved yet another application for bail before the C.M.M. Delhi. The said application too was dismissed on 10-7-1996. Another application for bail was filed by the appellants before the C.M.M. Delhi, but the same was dismissed on 3-8-1996. Thereupon a petition under Section 482, Cr. P.C., being Criminal Misc. (main) No. 2068/1996, was filed in the High Court of Delhi challenging the said order dated 3-8-1996. The main contention which was raised in the High Court was that the prosecution evidence had started on 23-6-1996 and as the trial of the appellants had not concluded within a period of 60 days from the first date for taking the evidence, they were entitled to be released on bail under Section 437(6) of Cr. P.C.

13. The High Court by the impugned judgment dated 17-9-1996, reiterated its earlier order dated 8-5-1996, whereby it had held that bail could not be granted to the appellants as there was an apprehension that they may, if released on bail, tamper with the evidence or influence the witnesses. The High Court rejected the contention of the counsel for the appellants that the provisions of Section 437(6), Cr. P.C. gave a mandate to the Court that in case of non-compliance of the provisions of the said Section, it had no option but to release the appellants on bail observing that there was strong apprehension that the appellants may tamper with the evidence and influence the witnesses, if they were admitted to bail.

14. It was contended by the learned counsel on behalf of the appellants, challenging the aforesaid decision dated 17-9-1996 of the Delhi High Court, that the provisions of Section 437(6), Cr. P.C. were clearly applicable in the present case and that the appellants should be released on bail. It was further contended that, taking all the facts and circumstances of the case into consideration, this was a fit case where the bail should not have been refused.

15. Mr. K.N. Bhatt, learned Additional Solicitor General submitted that there was an apprehension that if the appellants were released on bail, they might try to influence the witnesses or tamper with the evidence.

16. We propose to examine the plea for grant of bail by looking at the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case at this stage, without going into the question of interpretation or applicability of Section 437(6), Cr. P.C. So also, we do not propose to examine if the cancellation of the bail granted to the appellants earlier in point of time was justified.

17. The complaint relates to an offence alleged to have been committed by the appellants nearly 16 years ago. Not much progress has taken place in the conduct of the proceedings but the examination-in-chief and a part of the cross-examination of the complainant, the main witness, has been completed. The appellants have been in custody since 2-5-1996. The only reason put forth by the trial Court, as well as the High Court, for not releasing the appellants on bail is that there is an apprehension that they are likely to influence the witnesses or tamper with the evidence. The main witness in the present case is the complainant himself, who has been zealously pursuing this case since 1987. It is his perseverance throughout these long years that has made it possible for the case to reach the stage at which it presently stands. His commitment to see the prosecution reach its logical end is strong and he is not likely to be influenced by the accused. In spite of our query at the hearing, the learned Additional Solicitor General was unable to point out any evidence which could now be tampered or influenced by the accused. We are, therefore, not satisfied that if the appellants are released on bail, they would be in a position to influence the witnesses, the main witness being the complainant himself, or tamper with the evidence.

18. Section 437(1) provides that when any person accused of, or suspected of, the Commission of any nonbailable offence is brought before a Court, he may be released on bail unless his case falls in Clauses (i) or (ii) thereof. The present case is not covered by the said two clauses. Therefore, ordinarily, a person who is suspected of having committed an offence under Section 120-B read with Section 420, I.P.C. would be entitled to bail; of course the paramount consideration would always be to ensure that the enlargement of such persons on bail will not jeopardise the prosecution case. Any such likelihood is not shown by the learned Additional Solicitor General. Moreover, the learned counsel for the C.B.I. had admitted before the High Court that there was nothing to indicate any attempt of tampering by the accused in India or abroad during the long period available to them earlier. There is no reasonable basis for such an apprehension now at this stage and in the existing circumstances.

19. It was pointed out from the High Court's order dated 8-5-1996, that the statements of W.E.Millar and Kishore Kamdar revealed that the appellants had indulged in similar activity of cheating a number of persons and therefore the apprehension was not misplaced. We fail to see how that is a factor supporting the apprehension of tampering in this case.

20. Looking at the nature of the offence which is alleged to have been committed, and the facts and circumstances now in existence, we are of the view that the appellants should be released on bail in this case, subject to the imposition of the necessary conditions. We make it clear that this order is subject to the requirement of the appellants remaining in custody by virtue of any order made in connection with any other crime by the competent Court or authority. This is so, because of several other cases pending in Courts against the appellants, and some other crimes alleged to have been committed by them.

21. Accordingly, without expressing any opinion on the merits of the case, we direct that both the appellants be released on bail, unless required to be detained by any order made in any other case/crime, on their furnishing bail bonds for a sum of Rs. one lakh each with one surety in like amount each. But this order is subject to the appellants strictly adhering to the following conditions:

(1) The appellants will not leave the country;

(2) The appellants shall not make any attempt to contact any of the prosecution witnesses, directly or through any other person, or in any other way try to tamper with the evidence or influence any witness in this case or any other case against them or any other crime under investigation by any government agency.

(3) If the appellants desire to go out of Delhi, they shall give prior information to C.B.I. about their programme, including the places and addresses where they can be contacted during that period;

(4) The appellants shall cooperate in the early completion of the trial and shall attend the hearing unless exempted;

(5) The appellants shall intimate the place of their residence and shall not change the same without prior intimation to the respondent of their intention to shift elsewhere;

(6) The appellants will appear before the concerned officer of the C.B.I. or any other Government agency whenever required in connection with any crime or matter under investigation.

22. The judgment of the High Court is set aside and this appeal is disposed of in the aforesaid terms.

Order accordingly.

Cross Citation: 2005-MhLR-4-111 , 2005-Cri.L.J.-0-2984

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

(Division Bench)

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R.M.S.Khandeparkar, P.V.Kakade,JJ

Sanjay Narhar Malshe …Vs..State of Maharashtra

Criminal Writ Petition 672 of 2005 Of Mar 29,2005

==========

Bail – Power of Magistrate to grant bail in session triable cases – offence under S.C. & S. T. Act – Held, Magistrate has power to grant bail to accused even if the offence is triable by Court of session.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) HEARD. Rule. By consent the rule is made returnable forthwith.

(2.) A question of law, important and interesting which is sought to be raised in this petition relates to the powers of the Judicial Magistrate in respect of the grant or refusal of the bail to accused persons in cases which are exclusively triable either by the Sessions Courts or Special Courts established under a special statute.

(3.) INITIALLY the writ petition was filed challenging the F. I. R. being C. R. No. 3014 of 2005 register at the Jail Road Police Station, Solapur. However, considering the fact that charge-sheet in the matter has already been filed by the Investigating Agency, reserving his right to dispute about the insufficiency of the materials to frame the charge against him, the petitioner has restricted the challenge to the extent of the point which is sought to be raised as noted above.

(4.) FEW facts relevant for the decision are that the services of one Rajendra patil, who was the employee of the petitioner's company came to be terminated on 20-11-2002. The petitioner on or about 26-8-2004 lodged a complaint with the commissioner of Police, Solapur against Shri Jawahar Chavan, rajendra Patil and some others that he was being pressurised for re-employment of said Rajendra Patil and further that he was also being threatened in that regard. The police authorities arrested some people including Jawahar chavan, Rajendra Patil pursuant to the said complaint. The complaint also came to be filed on 4-2-2005 against Zopadpatti Sanghatana, Solapur, by the company of the petitioner. Meanwhile, a complaint came to be filed on 26-8-2004 against the petitioner accusing the petitioner having used abusive language against one Smt. Nanda Bansode as well as the complainant chandrakant Raut on 25-8-2004. Thereupon the petitioner moved for an anticipatory bail, and by an order dated 18-2-2005, the same was rejected by the learned Sessions Judge, Solapur. The petitioner thereupon filed an anticipatory bail application being Criminal Application No. 1417 of 2005 in this Court and the same was disposed of by an order dated 4-3-2005 while reserving the right of the petitioner to challenge the F. I. R. Consequently the present petition has been filed. In the course of the hearing of the petition it was revealed that the charge-sheet has already been filed. Thereupon by reserving the right to raise necessary objection before the concerned court about insufficiency of the materials to frame the charge, the learned advocate for the petitioner has restricted the challenge in the petition to the extent of the petitioner's right to secure the bail even in the course of committal proceedings.

(5.) IT is the submission of the learned Advocate for the petitioner that though the provisions of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities)Act, 1989, hereinafter called as "the said Act" under which the charge-sheet has been filed, specifically provide under section 18 thereof that the provision of section 438 of the Code is not applicable to the cases arising under the said Act, yet there is no bar under section 209 of the Criminal procedure Code or under any other provision of law including under the said act for grant of bail to the person accused of offences punishable under section 3 of the said Act while the matter is being committed to the Special Court. Referring to the decision of the Apex Court in (Gangula Ashok and another v. State ofa. P.), reported in 2000 (5) Bom. C. R. (S. C.)265 : 2000 (2) S. C. C. 504 wherein it has been ruled that a Special Court under the said Act is not empowered to take cognizance directly of the offence committed under the said Act but it has to be only after committal of the case by the Magistrate in exercise of powers under section 209 of the Code, it is submitted by the learned advocate that it is necessary for the Magistrate to commit the proceedings to special Court in order to enable to Special Court to take cognizance of the said proceedings arising from the charge-sheet filed by the police in relation to the offence in question. It is further submitted that in the interregnum period there is absolutely no justification for detention of the petitioner, nor it has been the case of the Investigating Agency that such detention is necessary. Besides, there is no statutory provision debarring the Magistrate to refuse bail in the course of the committal proceedings. However, considering the normal practice followed by the Magistrate in committal proceedings, it is necessary for this Court to give direction to the Court of Magistrate to exercise their powers in relation to the grant of bail even in such cases including the one of the petitioner. Reliance is also placed in that regard in the decision of kerala High Court in (Shanu v. State of Kerala), reported in 2001 (1) Crimes 292 as well as Allahabad High Court in the case of (Ram Bharoshi and others v. State of U. P. and others), reported in 2004 (3) Crimes 651. Drawing attention to section 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code the learned Advocate for the petitioner has further submitted that there is no bar for release of the accused person on bail by the Magistrate unless the person is accused of commission of the offence punishable with death or life imprisonment. The learned Advocate for the petitioner has also submitted that whenever the legislature has though it fit to impose such bar on exercise of the powers of the Magistrate to grant the bail, invariably a specific provision is made in that regard in the statute. For example, attention is drawn to section 36-A of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substance Act 1985, hereinafter called as "the N. D. P. S Act".

(6.) THE learned A. P. P. while fairly conceding that the provision of section 437 of the Code does not bar the Magistrate to grant such bail, submitted that the question of grant or refusal of bail would depend upon the facts of each case and the Magistrate has to exercise his discretion in that regard judiciously depending upon the facts of each case, and therefore, submitted that, there cannot be any blanket direction as such for grant of such bail in each and every case.

(7.) UNDOUBTEDLY section 18 of the said Act provides that nothing in section 438 of the Code shall apply in relation to any case involving the arrest of any persons on an accusation of having committed an offence under the said Act. Undoubtedly, therefore, the question of grant of anticipatory bail in case of person accused of commission of offence under the said Act does not arise at all. However, as rightly submitted by the learned Advocate for the petitioner that the said Act nowhere debars the Magistrate from exercising the powers under section 437 of the Code whenever facts of the case demand such an exercise of powers of the Magistrate under the provision of the Code.

(8.) SECTION 437 of the Code deals with the subject of availability of bail in cases of non bailable offences. It specifically provides that when any person accused of, or suspected of, the commission of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a Police Station or appears or is brought before a Court other that the High Court or court of Sessions, then such person may be released on bail, unless there appears reasonable ground for believing that such person is guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life and or/such person had been previously convicted of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for seven years or more, or he had been previously convicted on two or more occasions for a non-bailable and cognizable offence. At the same time the first proviso to the said section provides that if the accused person happens to be of the age of less than 16 years or a women or is sick or infirm, then such a person can be released on bail. Even in some cases where person is accused of the commission of the offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life can also be released on bail if the Court is satisfied that it is just and proper to grant bail for any special reason. The third proviso to sub-section (1) of section 437 provides that the mere fact that an accused person may be required for being identified by the witnesses during the investigation shall not be sufficient ground for refusal of bail if he is otherwise entitled to be released on bail and gives an undertaking that he shall comply with such conditions as may be imposed by the Court. Obviously, apart from the cases wherein the person is accused of commission of the offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life, the Court of Magistrate has wide power in the matter of grant of refusal of the bail to the accused person, of course, such power is to be exercised judiciously and the same should be apparent from the order passed by the Magistrate. Nevertheless the fact remains that there is no total prohibition against grant of bail merely because a person is accused of commission of offence of serious nature. Besides, if we peruse section 209 of the Code which deals with the committal proceedings, it is apparent that even in the course of the committal proceedings there is no bar imposed upon the power of Magistrate in the matter of grant or refusal of bail. Clause (b) of section 209 clearly provides that while dealing with the accused persons appearing and brought before the Magistrate having committed the matter as the same is triable exclusively by the Court of Sessions, while the Magistrate is enjoined to commit the proceedings to the court of Sessions or the Special Court constituted under any special statute, the accused may be remanded to the custody until such committal proceedings are complete, subject to the provisions of the code relating to the bail. In other words while the Magistrate is empowered to remand the accused to the custody until the conclusion of the committal proceedings, that is to say, till the proceedings are placed before the Court of Sessions or the Special Court, as the case may be, the powers of the Magistrate either to grant the bail if asked for or to refuse the same are not restricted in any manner. On the contrary provision of section 209 make it very clear that the Magistrate while dealing with the committal proceedings is fully empowered either to grant or refuse the bail depending upon the facts of the case, albeit he has to exercise the discretion judiciously in that regard as rightly submitted by the learned A. P. P.

(9.) THE learned Advocate for the petitioner is also justified in contending that whenever the legislature has thought it fit to provide any embargo over the power of the Magistrate in the matter of grant of bail to the accused person, the legislature has made necessary provision in that regard and one such example is section 36-A in the N. D. P. S. Act. Section 36-A (l) (b) of N. D. P. S act clearly provides that notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of criminal Procedure where a person accused of or suspected of the commission of offence under the N. D. P. S. Act is forwarded to a Magistrate under subsection (2) or sub-section (2-A)of section 167 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, such Magistrate may authorise the remand of such person to such custody as he thinks fit for a period not exceeding fifteen days in the whole where such Magistrate is Judicial Magistrate and seven days in the whole where such Magistrate is an Executive Magistrate provided that in cases which are triable by the Special Magistrate where such Magistrate considers when such person is forwarded to him as aforesaid, or upon or at any time before the expiry of the period of detention authorised by him, that the remand of such person to the custody is unnecessary, he shall order such person to be forwarded to the Special Court having jurisdiction. This apparently discloses that the Magistrate in case of the persons accused of commission of the offence under N. D. P. S Act and in cases which are triable by the sessions Court even if he considers the remand of such person to the custody to be unnecessary, he cannot grant the bail, but he will have to direct the person to be forwarded to the Sessions Court having jurisdiction. That is not the case in relation to a person accused of commission of offence under the said Act. There is no provision in the said Act in pan materia to section 36-A of the N. D. P. S Act. The said Act also does not provide any embargo over the powers of the Magistrate to grant bail. Considering the same merely because the offence under the said Act is exclusively triable by the Special Court in terms of the provision of section 14 of the said Act, it cannot be said that the magistrate will have no power to grant the bail. In our considered opinion, therefore, taking into consideration all the provisions of the said Act as well as the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it is apparent that the Magistrate has power to grant the bail even at the time of committal proceedings, if the facts of the case do not justify remanding of such person to the custody. The exclusive jurisdiction of the Special Court to try the offence that by itself could not be criteria to decide about the absence of the powers to the Magistrate to grant bail in case of offence under the said Act. Unless the special statue which gives exclusive jurisdiction to the Special Court for the trial of the offences thereunder makes a specific provisions like in the nature of section 36-A of the N. D. P. S. Act or on similar lines, specifically excluding the powers of the Magistrate to grant the bail to the person accused of commission of such offence, there cannot be any restriction on the powers of the magistrate to grant the bail, merely because the person is accused of the offence punishable under the said Act, unless, of course, the offence is punishable with death or life imprisonment.

(10.) WE are fortified in the above view by the decision of the Kerala High court and the Allahabad High Court which are relied upon by the learned advocate for the petitioner. In fact the decision of the Kerala High Court is directly in relation to the offence under the said Act. In the case of Shanu (supra) the learned Single Judge of the Kerala High Court after taking note of the provision of the said Act as well as section 437 of Code held that "it is clear that the J. F. C. M. 's Court has got jurisdiction to grant bail to the persons accused of the offence punishable under any of the sub-clauses (i)to (xv) of sub-section (1) of section 3 of the Act. " While delivering the said decision the learned Single Judge after taking note of section 437 of Criminal procedure Code has observed that "the Magistrate is competent to release an accused, either appeared or brought before him, if the offence alleged is not punishable with death or imprisonment for life. " Similarly in ram Baharshi's case (supra) the learned Single Judge of Allahabad High court held that "it is abundantly clear that there is no prohibition on a magistrate to grant bail in Sessions triable case, unless it is punishable with death or imprisonment for life, and it is absolutely necessary that the magistrate give up the erroneous practice of refusing to consider or grant bails in such cases where there is no prohibition under the Code of Criminal Procedure. " while delivering the said judgment it was observed thus -

"13. There are a number of offences in the Penal Code which are not punishable with death or imprisonment for life, but they are triable by the court of Sessions, where the Magistrates invariably refuse bail, because they entertain a wrong notion that they are disentitled to grant bails in such cases, even if the case is one where bail ought to have been granted on merits, this approach is also in the teeth of Division bench decision of this Court, Vijay Kumar and others v. State of U. P. and others. 14. The result of this unhealthy practice is that a person against whom an F. I. R. is lodged relating to any Sessions triable offence, which on a plain reading appears to be a case of false or malicious prosection, uncorroborated by any independent material, the accused is left at the mercy of the police, in whose favour the Magistrate has virtually abdicated his jurisdiction. An accused may have to remain in jail for some time before his bail application is heard and granted by the Sessions court, after the Magistrate's routine, rejection of his prayer for bail even in those minor Sessions triable offences where there may be no need for taking an accused in custody for the purpose of investigation, or where palpably he appears to have been implicated falsely, and there are no other attendant circumstances disentitling the accused from an order of bail. A sting in jail can be a source of great humiliation for a maliciously prosecuted accused who enjoys some social status. We are in respectful agreement with the view expressed by the learned Single judges of the Kerala High Court as well as Allahabad High Court in the above referred judgments.

(11.) LIBERTY to the petitioner to raise the point regarding insufficiency of the materials to frame the charge before the concerned Court, as it is too premature for this Court to express any opinion in that regard, and the issue in that regard can be very well raised before the concerned Court after committal of the proceedings. We make it clear that we have not expressed any opinion on this point.

(12.) FOR the reasons stated above, therefore, the petition partly succeeds. Meanwhile the Magistrate while committing the proceedings consequent to the filing of the charge-sheet is expected to exercise his discretion judiciously in relation to power to grant or refuse the bail to the petitioner in case an application for bail is filed by the petitioner and to pass an appropriate order in that regard in accordance with the provisions of law bearing in mind the observations made herein above on the point of jurisdiction of the Magistrate to entertain and decide such bail application.

(13.) IN view of the filing of the charge-sheet the petitioner has to appear before the concerned Magistrate within ten days whereupon the Magistrate will have to pass an appropriate order as stated above. Meanwhile the interim relief granted to the petitioner to continue till the appropriate order is passed by the Magistrate.

(14.) RULE is made absolute in above terms with no order as to costs. Petition partly succeeds.

Cross Citation: 2010-AD(CR)-4-466 , 2010-ALLMR(CRI)-0-2775

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : J.H.BHATIA, J.

Ambarish Rangshahi Patnigere..Vs.. State of Maharashtra, Through Sr. P.I., CBD Belapur Police Station, Navi Mumbai
CRIMINAL WRIT PETITION NO. 2785 OF 2009 with CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 425 OF 2010

CRIMINAL WRIT PETITION NO. 2785 OF 2009 Of, Jul 22,2010

==========

A) Cr. P.C. S. 437(1) – Penal code S.S. 467, 409 – The offences are punishable with life or for 10 years imprisonment – Magistrate has powers to grant bail to the accused – Restriction under S. 437 (1) is in respect of offences which are punishable with alternative sentence of death or life imprisonment. In case under Sec. 326 of I.P.C. also the Magistrate has power to grant bail.
B) P.C.R. – Request for Police custody – Order of rejecting Police custody – Once application for P.C.R. is rejected – Police cannot repeat and make a application again for Police custody.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Rule. Rule made returnable forthwith. Heard Counsel for the parties.

(2.) To state in brief, Writ Petition No.2785 of 2009 is filed by the five accused persons in Crime No.I-73/2009, registered with CBD Belapur police Station, Navi Mumbai on 17.5.2009. The petitioners are the senior officers of Municipal Corporation of Navi Mumbai.

Petitioner No.1 was the Deputy Municipal Commissioner, petitioner No.2 was the Assistant Municipal Commissioner, petitioner No.3 was the Office Superintendent/Ward Officer and then Assistant Municipal Commissioner, petitioner No.4 was working as Senior Accountant and the petitioner No.5 was the Deputy Accountant and then Assistant Account Officer. On 16.5.2009, Suresh Ramu Patil, Assistant Commissioner of Navi Mumbai Municipal Corporation filed a report with the Senior Inspector of Police, CBD Belapur Police Statioon, Belapur, Navi Mumbai. That report revealed that for the purpose of removal of encroachment and for transportation of he goods removed after encroachment, the Municipal Corporation required supply of labourers, instruments, machinery and vehicles. For this purpose, Municipal Corporation had called tenders. H.B. Bhise and Co.. of which H.B.Bhise was the proprietor, had submitted tender which was accepted. On 12.5.2009, a meeting of all the concerned officials and the Assistant Commissioners was called by the Deputy Commissioner for the purpose of removal of encroachment and unauthorised construction, to stop new encroachment and for carrying out immediate works during the rainy season. During the meeting, some officers made a grievance that men and machinery and vehicles were not made available by the contractor H.B.Bhise and, therefore, the work of removal of encroachment, unauthorised construction, etc. could not be carried out effectively. It was also pointed out by some of the officers that the contractor was required to submit one copy of the challan showing the work done by him and the bill for that work to the concerned ward officer and one copy in the office for passing the bills, so that the concerned officers of the different areas could verify the correctness of the bill. In view of the complaint that the contractor was not following the procedure and used to was submit the bills and challans directly in the office to get them passed, the Deputy Commissioner became suspicious and, therefore, he called the record for the period from 1.4.2007 to 31.3.2008. Several officers pointed out that either the bills and the challans did not bear their signatures or when they were signed by the officers, there were over-writings and forgery in respect of number of labourers, vehicles and machinery supplied. It appears that in some cases, the signatures of the concerned officers of the different areas were not obtained and in some cases after obtaining their signatures, changes wee made in the contents of bills and challans by over-writing for the benefit of the contractor. The said contractor was working for the Navi Mumbai Municipal Corporation since 27.2.2003. On audit of the record for the financial year 2007-08, it was revealed that the bills, worth Rs.53,68575/- submitted by the contractor H.B.Bhise, were passed and payment was made. However, as per the entries taken in the note books pertaining the work of removal of encroachment the actual work done was worth Rs.17,51,916/-. It did not include the amount of work done for Airoli area. That amount appears to be Rs.6,82,610/-. Excluding that amount and the actual work done as per the record, excess payment of Rs. 26,31,796/- was made to the contractor H.B.Bhise for one financial year. In the report lodged by the police, it was stated that this was the excess payment for one year and as the said contractor was working since February 2003, there was possibility of much more excess payment and defalcations. On the basis of that report, the offence was registered as Crime No.I-173/2009 for the offences punishable under Section 420, 465, 467, 468, 471 IPC against H.B.Bhise, the proprietor of H.B.Bhise and Co.

(3.) During investigation, it was revealed that excess payment to the tune of Rs.1,38,03,008/- was made and several persons including staff members of the Municipal Corporation were involved in commission of the said offence and helped the said contractor H.B.Bhise. As per the remand report dated 9.9.2009 submitted by CBD Belapur Police Station before the J.M.F.C. Vashi, Navi Mumbai, besides H.B.Bhise, 7 other persons were already arrested and remanded to Judicial Custody. On 8.9.2009, at 16.30 hrs., 5 more persons, who are the petitioners before the Court, came to be arrested for the said offence. In the remand report, it was submitted that these accused persons were also involved in commission of offence, as some of them were in charge of the concerned areas, the Assistant Municipal Commissioner and some were accountants and the offences are committed by H.B.Bhise in collusion with and active assistance of these petitioners. However, as per the remand report immediately after the arrest each of these five persons, complained of different medical problems and were required to be taken to the Municipal Corporation Hospital at Vashi where they were immediately admitted in the Intensive Care Unit. In the remand report, it was stated that in view of their admission in ICU in the Hospital, they could not be produced before the Court. Therefore, in absence of those accused persons, the learned Magistrate was requested to grant their judicial custody, but at the same time, the Investigating Officer clearly stated that this application for remand was without prejudice to his right to make an application for police custody remand as and when these accused persons would be found medically fit. In view of this, on 9.9.2009, the learned Magistrate granted Judicial Custody remand of these petitioners till 11.9.2009.

(4.) When these petitioners were indoor patients in ICU in the Hospital, on 10.9.2009 an application for bail was moved on their behalf by their Advocate. It appears that the application was moved at 2.30 p.m. and the learned Magistrate directed the learned APP to file reply immediately. On that bail application, at 4 p.m., the learned Magistrate endorsed that despite giving directions to the concerned Court duty constable, he was absent till 4 p.m. and that when the matter was called, nobody was present nor affidavit was filed. After that endorsement, the mater was placed on the next day i.e. 11.9.2009. On 11.9.2009 at 11.25 a.m. the Magistrate endorsed on the bail application - "I.O. absent Case diary not produced till 11.25 a.m. At 11.35 a.m., the learned Magistrate endorsed and directed I.O. to remain present with case diary immediately. It appears from the record that the learned APP had submitted his strong objection to the bail application contending that because of the medical reasons, immediately after arrest, the accused persons were required to be admitted in the Hospital. Magisterial custody remand was sought having reserved a right to seek police custody. The period of 15 days after arrest was not over during which police custody could be sought by police under Sec. 167. Defalcation of huge public money was committed and the accused persons, as public servants, had committed serious offences which included offence under Sec. 467 IPC which is punishable for imprisonment for life and therefore the Magistrate could not grant bail.

(5.) The learned Magistrate passed the order on the application granting bail. That order reveals that he had started dictation of the order at 11.40 a.m. and completed at 4.30 p.m. He also noted that at 4.30 p.m., the Investigating Officer filed an application for grant of police custody remand on several grounds. However, by that time, the dictation of the order on bail application was completed and though the learned APP and I.O. were present during dictation, I.O. had not moved application for police custody remand nor he had stated that he was moving an application for police custody remand. On the remand report dated 11.9.2009,submitted at about 4.30 p.m., the learned Magistrate passed the brief order rejecting the application. The main ground for rejection of the request for police custody was that charge-sheet was already filed and in view of the authority of the Bombay High Cout in Mohammed Ahmed Yasin Mansuri vs. State of Maharashtra 1994 (1) Mh.L.J.688, once charge-sheet is filed and cognizance of the offence is taken, only custody which could be granted is Magisterial custody even in respect of the accused who is arrested during investigation after taking cognizance of the case. The said order does not reveal any other reason for refusal of the police custody. The said order rejecting the application for police custody remand was challenged in Revision Application No.178/2009. That Revision Application was partly allowed by the learned Additional Sessions Judge, Thane by the impugned judgment and order dated 9.10.2005. The learned Additional Sessions Judge observed that while the order granting bail is an interlocutory order and cannot be challenged by filing Revision Application, the order refusing to grant police custody is not an interlocutory order and it can be challenged. The learned Additional Sessions Judge set aside the order passed by the Magistrate refusing to grant police custody and directed the learned magistrate to fix the matter on12.10.2009 for passing proper order in connection with police custody of the accused for the purpose of further investigation. The said order in the Revision Application setting aside the order of the Magistrate refusing Police Custody has been challenged by the accused/petitioners in the present Petition. The said order is also challenged by the Intervenor in the Criminal Application No.425/2010. The intervener, was a Corporator and Leader of the Opposition during the relevant period. He also claims to be whistle-blower. He has challenged the order passed by the Additional Sessions Judge refusing to set aside the order granting bail to the accused persons.

(6.) Before going to the facts and the arguments advanced by the learned Counsel for the parties raising several grounds for and against the grant of bail and refusal of police custody, it may be noted that the learned Magistrate had rejected the request for police custody on the sole ground that in view of the Judgment and authority of this High Court in Mohammed Yasin Mansuri (supra), the police custody remand could not be granted even in respect of the accused who would be arrested for the first time after the charge-sheet was filed and cognizance of the case was taken. The said Judgment of the Division Bench of this Court was over-ruled by the Supreme court in State through CBI vs. Dawood Ibrahim Kasker and Ors. (2000) 10 SCC 438. The Supreme Cort after having considered the similar arguments as advanced on behalf of of the present petitioners and the provisions of sections 167, 173(8) and 309 Cr.P.C. observed thus in paras 10 and 11 :-

"10. In keeping with the provisions of Section 173 (8) and the above-quoted observations, it has now to be seen whether Section 309(2) of the Code stands in the way of a Court, which has taken cognizance of an offence, to authorized the detention of a person, who is subsequently brought before it by the police under arrest during further investigation, in police custody in exercise of its power under Section 167 of the Code. Section 309 relates to the power of the Court to postpone the commencement of or adjournment of any inquiry or trial and sub-section (2) thereof reads as follows : "309. (2) If the Court, after taking cognizance of an offence, or commencement of trial, finds it necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn, any inquiry or trial, it may, from time to time, for reasons to be recorded, postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody: Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this section for a term exceeding fifteen days at a time."

"11. There cannot be any manner of doubt that the remand and the custody referred to in the first proviso to the above sub-section are different from detention in custody under Section 167. While remand under the former relates to a stage after cognizance and can only be to judicial custody, detention under the latter relates to the stage of investigation and can initially be either in police custody or judicial custody. Since, however, even after cognizance is taken of an offence the police has a power to investigate into it further, which can be exercised only in accordance with Chapter XII, we see no reason whatsoever why the provisions of section 167 thereof would not apply to a person who comes to be later arrested by the police in course of such investigation. If Section 309(2) is to be interpreted - as has been interpreted by the Bombay High Court in Mansuri - to mean that after the Court takes cognizance of an offence it cannot exercise its power of detention in police custody under Section 167 of the Code, the Investigating Agency would be deprived of an opportunity to interrogate a person arrested during further investigation, even if it can on production of sufficient materials, convince the Court that his detention in its (police) custody was essential for that purpose. we are, therefore, of the opinion that the words "accused if in custody" appearing in Section 309(2) refer and relate to an accused who was before the Court when cognizance was taken or when enquiry or trial was being held in respect of him and not to an accused who is subsequently arrested in course of further investigation. So far as the accused in the first category is concerned he can be remanded to judicial custody only in view of Section 309(2), but he who comes under the second category will be governed by Section 167 so long as further investigation continues. That necessarily means that in respect of the latter the Court which had taken cognizance of the offence may exercise its power to detain him in police custody, subject to the fulfillment of the requirements and the limitation of Section 167."

(7.) From the above observations of the Supreme Court, it is clear that Their Lordships specifically considered the interpretation put by this Court in Mohd. Yasin Mansuri and overruled the same. From the above observations, it is clear that words "accused if in custody" appearing in Section 309(2) refer and relate to an accused who was before the Court when cognizance was taken or when enquiry or trial was being held in respect of him and not to an accused who is subsequently arrested in course of further investigation. Their Lordships made it clear that the accused who would be arrested during further investigation after filing of the charge sheet and taking cognizance of the case would be governed by Section 167 Cr.P.C. so long as further investigation continues subject to limits and requirements of sec. 167. In view of this legal position, the order passed by the Magistrate refusing police custody on the sole ground was clearly wrong and could not be sustained. The manner in which the learned Magistrate dealt with the bail application by making different endorsements thereon minute to minute as noted earlier, it appears that the Magistrate was in great haste and hurry to grant the bail to the accused persons and he did not give sufficient and reasonable time to the prosecution to oppose that application and to bring the correct legal position before the Court. The learned Magistrate had almost completed dictation of the order on bail application by 4.30 p.m. and at about 4.35 p.m., he rejected the application moved by the Investigating Officer for police custody by passing a short order referring to the authority in Mohd. Yasin Mansuri. Had the learned Magistrate given sufficient and reasonable time to the prosecution, the learned Assistant Public Prosecutor could point out to the Magistrate that the said authority of the Bombay High Court was overruled long back in the year 2000 by the Supreme Court. However, because of the haste shown by the learned Magistrate, he rejected the application for police custody remand on the basis of the overruled authority of this Court.

(8.) The learned Counsel for the petitioners vehemently contended that the order granting or refusing bail or police custody remand is an interlocutory order and therefore such an order is not subject to revisional jurisdiction under Section 397 Cr.P.C. Section 397(2) provides that powers of revision conferred by sub-section (1) shall not be exercised in relation to any interlocutory order passed in any appeal, inquiry, trial or other proceeding. The question before this Court is whether the order granting bail is or is not interlocutory order and whether the superior Courts can interfere if the bail order is passed without jurisdiction or if it is passed without application of mind by the concerned Magistrate and without considering the gravity of the matter. Similarly a question also arises whether the refusal to grant police custody remand is interlocutory order and is not subject to revisional jurisdiction of the superior Courts. The learned Counsel for the petitioners vehemently contended that in a catena of judgments, the Supreme Court held that the order granting bail is an interlocutory order and is not subject to revisional jurisdiction. What is interlocutory order within the meaning of Section 397 Cr. P.C. was the subject matter for consideration before the Supreme Court in number of cases beginning with Madhu Limaye vs. State of Maharahtra AIR 1978 SC 47, V.C. Shukla, V.C. Shukla vs. State (1980) SCC 695, Usmanbhai Dawoodbhai Memon v. State of Gujarat, 1988 (2) SCC 271, In Usmanbhai, the Supreme Court considered the earlier Judgments and observed thus in para 24 :-

"24.... The expression 'interlocutory order' has been used in Section 19(12) in contradistinction to what is known as final order and denotes an order of purely interim or temporary nature. The essential test to distinguish one from the other has been discussed and formulated in several decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, Federal Court and this Court. One of the tests generally accepted by the English Courts and the federal Court is to see if the order is decided in one way, it may terminate the proceedings but if decided in another way, then the proceedings would continue. In V.C. Shukla v. State, Fazal Ali, J. in delivering the majority judgment reviewed the entire case law on the subject and deduced therefrom the following two principles, namely, (i) that a final order has to be interpreted in contradistinction to an interlocutory order; and (ii) that the test for determining the finality of an order is whether the judgment or order finally disposed of the rights of the parties. It was observed that these principles apply to civil as well as to criminal cases. In criminal proceedings, the word 'judgment' is intended to indicate the final order in a trial terminating in the conviction or acquittal of the accused. Applying these tests, it was held that an order framing a charge against an accused was not a final order but an interlocutory order within the meaning of section 11(1) of the Special Courts Act, 1979 and therefore not appealable. It cannot be doubted that the grant or refusal of a bail application is essentially an interlocutory order. There is no finality to such an order for an application for bail can always be renewed from time to time...."

(9.) Thus, in Usmanbhai, it was held that the grant or refusal of bail application is essentially an interlocutory order as there is no finality to such an order for an application for bail can always be renewed from time to time. The Supreme Court dealt with only the question whether the grant of bail was or was not interlocutory order. In State represented by Inspector of Police vs. N.M.T. Joy Immaculate 2004 (5) SCC 729, Police custody for one day was granted by the Magistrate and it was held to be interlocutory order and it was held that revision against such an order is not maintainable. However, the question whether refusal of the police custody is final or interlocutory order was not subject matter for consideration. That point came before this Court in R. Shakuntala vs. Roshanlal Agarwal and othrs 1985 Cri. L.J. 68 wherein the learned Single Judge of this Court considered the observations in Amar Nath v. State of Haryana AIR 1977 SC 2185, Madhu Limaye and other Judgments. The learned Judge observed thus in para 9 :-

"9.... In this connection the Supreme Court had occasion to deal with Amar Nath's case AIR 1977 SC 2185 : (1977 Cri L.J. 1891). The Supreme Court observed in that connection as follows :-

"It is neither advisable, nor possible to make a catalogue of orders to determine which kinds of orders would be merely, purely or simply interlocutory and which kinds of orders would be final, and then to prepare an exhaustive list of those types of orders which will fall in between the two It will be seen that having regard to this view taken by the Supreme Court, in fact in Madhu Limaye's case AIR 1978 SC 47: (1978 Cri L.J. 165), the larger Bench of the Supreme Court has expressed an opinion that the broad statement of law contained in Amar Nath's case needed certain modification. However, the Supreme Court reaffirmed the decision in Amar Nath's case and held that the order releasing some of the accused on perusal of the police report and subsequently summoning them was not an interlocutory order but was a final order. To my mind, reading the two cases together Amar Nath's case and Madhu Limaye's case, no doubt is left about the legal position, namely, that an order rejecting the Department's application for remand of the accused to judicial custody is a final order and not an interlocutory order."

The learned Judge of this Court in R. Shakuntala, finally came to conclusion that an order rejecting application for remand of the accused to judicial custody is a final order and not an interlocutory order. This will be applicable with equal force to the refusal of request for police custody also. As such, the order passed by the Magistrate rejecting request for police custody cannot be treated as interlocutory order because the police cannot repeat and make applications again and again for police custody after the application for police custody had been rejected once and particularly in view of the limitation under Sec. 167 Cr.P.C. that the police custody may be granted only during first 15 days after the arrest or detention and not thereafter. If such application for police custody is rejected, that order becomes final and the Investigating Officer is permanently deprived of seeking police custody of that accused for the purpose o further investigation, discovery, etc. even though the offence may be very serious.

(10.) Mr.Bhat, learned Counsel for the intervener contended that if the Magistrate has granted bail in the serious offences without looking to the gravity of the offences and without giving proper opportunity to the prosecution to present its viewpoint and if it results in the miscarriage of justice, the superior courts can always interfere and can cancel the bail by virtue of powers under Section 439(2) Cr.P.C. The learned counsel for the intervener placed reliance on several authorities in this respect.

(11.) In Puran vs. Rambilas and Anr. 2001 (6) SCC 338, the Supreme Court observed thus in para 10 :-

"10. Mr. Lalit next submitted that once bail has been granted it should not be cancelled unless there is evidence that the conditions of bail are being infringed. In support of this submission he relies upon the authority in the case of Dolat Ram v. State of Haryana. In this case it has been held that rejection of bail in a non-bailable case at the initial stage and the cancellation of bail already granted have to be considered and dealt with on different basis. It has been held that very cogent and overwhelming circumstances are necessary for an order directing the cancellation of the bail already granted. It has been held that generally speaking the grounds for cancellation of bail broadly are interference or attempt to interfere with the due course of administration of justice or evasion or attempt to evade the due course of justice or abuse of the concession granted to the accused in any manner. It is, however, to be noted that this Court has clarified that these instances are merely illustrative and not exhaustive. One such ground for cancellation of bail would be where ignoring material and evidence on record a perverse order granting bail is passed in a heinous crime of this nature and that too without giving any reasons. Such an order would be against principles of law. Interest of justice would also require that such a perverse order be set aside and bail be cancelled. It must be remembered that such offences are on the rise and have a very serious impact on the society. Therefore, an arbitrary and wrong exercise of discretion by the trial court has to be corrected."

(12.) In Pandit Dnyanu Khot vs. The State of Maharashtra, JT 2002 (6) SC 115, the Supreme Court again reiterated the observations made in Puran vs. Rambilas and observed thus in paras 8 and 9 :-

"8. In our view, it appears that the High Court has committed basic error in not referring to the provisions of section 439(2) Cr.P.C. which specifically empower the High Court or the court of sessions to cancel such bail. Section 439(2) reads as under : "439. Special powers of High Court or court of session regarding bail: (2) A High Court or court of session may direct that any person who had been released on bail under this chapter be arrested and commit him to custody."

"9. Proviso to section 167 itself clarifies that every person released on bail under section 167(2) shall be deemed to be so released under chapter XXXIII. Therefore, if a person is illegally or erroneously released on bail under section 167(2), his bail can be cancelled by passing appropriate order under section 439(2) Cr.P.C. This Court in Puran v. Rambilas and Another [JT 2001 (5) SC 226], has also clarified that the concept of setting aside unjustified, illegal or perverse order is totally different from the concept of cancelling the bail on the ground that the accused has misconducted himself or because of some new facts requiring such cancellation."

(13.) The same principle was reiterated by the Supreme Court in Subodh Kumar Yadav v. State of Bihar and Anr. AIR 2010 SC 802. Their Lordships observed thus in para 9 :-

"9. Learned counsel for the appellant contended that cancellation of bail can be only with reference to conduct subsequent to release on bail and the supervening circumstances. According to him an application for cancellation will not be maintainable with reference to what transpired prior to the grant of bail. He relied upon the following observations in State of U.P.vs. Amarmani Tripathi [(2005) 8 SCC 21]: (2005 AIR SCW 4763, Para 18), in support of the said contention :- "The decisions in Dolat Ram v. State of Haryana [1995 (1) SCC 349]: (2004 AIR SCW 4970) and Samarendranath Bhattacharjee v. State of West Bengal [2004 (11) SCC 165] relate to applications or cancellation of bail and not appeals against orders granting bail. In an application for cancellation, conduct subsequent to release on bail and the supervening circumstances alone are relevant. But in an appeal against grant of bail, all aspects that were relevant under Section 439 read with section 437, continue to be relevant. We, however, agree that while considering and deciding the appeals against grant of bail, where the accused has been at large for a considerable time, the post-bail conduct and supervening circumstances will also have to be taken note of. But they are not the only factors to be considered as in the case of applications for cancellation of bail." A careful reading of the said observations shows that while considering the factors relevant for consideration of bail already granted vis-a-vis the factors relevant for rejection of bail, this Court pointed out that for cancellation of bail, conduct subsequent to release on bail and supervening circumstances will be relevant. The said observations were not intended to restrict the power of a superior court to cancel bail in appropriate cases on other grounds. In fact it is now well settled that if a superior court finds that the court granting bail had acted on irrelevant material or if there was non-application of mind or failure to take note of any statutory bar to grant bail, or if there was manifest impropriety as for example failure to hear the public prosecutor/complainant where required, an order for cancellation fo bail can in fact be made. (See Gajanand Agarwal vs. State of Orissa [2006 (9) SCALE 378] : (2006 AIR SCW 4753) and Rizwan Akbar Hussain Syyed v. Mehmood Hussain [2007 (10) SCC 368): (2007 AIR SCW 3654)."

(14.) In view of the above authorities of the Supreme Court, it is now settled position of law that even though the grant of bail may be interlocutory order not subject to revisional jurisdiction under sec.397, still the superior Courts by virtue of the powers under Sec. 439(2) Cr. P.C. can cancel the bail in appropriate cases, if the superior Courts find that the bail was granted acting upon irrelevant material or there was non-application of mind or failure to take note of statutory bar or grant bail, or if there was manifest impropriety as for example failure to hear the public prosecutor or complainant.

(15.) In Subodhkumar Yadav (supra), facts and the circumstances under which the bail was granted by the Magistrate were almost similar to the present case. After having considered the facts of that case, the Supreme Court observed thus in para 11 :-

"11.....The undue haste exhibited by the learned Magistrate as well as his decision to hear the bail application on the same day without hearing the learned counsel for the complainant, compelled the learned Sessions Judge to draw adverse inferences against the learned Magistrate. On the facts and in the circumstances of the case, this Court is of the opinion that the learned Sessions Judge was justified in drawing adverse inferences against the learned Magistrate and holding that the order granting bail was passed by the learned Judicial Magistrate for considerations other than judicial...."

In the present case also, the learned Magistrate showed a great haste in hearing bail application and passing the order without giving reasonable time and opportunity to the investigating officer and the Public Prosecutor to move application for police custody remand and also to oppose the bail application . As indicated above, if the reasonable opportunity would have been given, the learned Magistrate would have been saved of passing the order rejecting application for police custody on the basis of overruled authority of this Court. The haste shows that the Magistrate was bent upon hearing bail application immediately and i passing order for bail. This amounted to impropriety.

(16.) The facts of this case are already noted above and it shows that a serious offences of forgery, misappropriation, etc. were committed and huge amount of more than Rs.1,38,00,000/- was paid in excess to the contractor H.B.Bhise. It could not have been possible if the concerned officers would have been careful in verifying the record and taking due caution which was expected from them in such matters. The investigation papers revealed that the contractor had given registration number of vehicls, allegedly used for the purpose of transportation of the goods and material after demolition of the unauthorised structures and removal of the encroachment and those registration numbers were of two wheelers like scooters and bikes. Thus a huge fraud was played against the Corporation. Not only this, it was revealed that the proper procedure was not followed in presentation of bills because one copy of the bills was not given to the concerned ward officer and the bills were directly submitted before the senior officers who passed the bills without any scrutiny and verification by the concerned ward officers. Some of the bills revealed that even though they were signed by the ward officers, later on, by overwriting the contents of the same were changed in respect of number of workers, machinery and vehicles used and thus forgery was played and on the basis of forged documents, huge excess payments were made to the contractor. This was a loss to the public money because afterall the Municipal Corporation was to make payment from the taxes collected from the general public. In view of the manner in which these offences were committed, the investigating officer wanted police custody of these petitioners for proper investigation which could go to the root of the case. That opportunity was refused by the learned Magistrate and he hastily granted bail to them.

(17.) It may be noted here that the learned Counsel for intervener contended that the Magistrate did not have jurisdiction to grant bail because the offences under Sections 467 and 409 IPC, carry punishment which may be life imprisonment. According to the learned Counsel, if the offence is punishable with sentence of death or life imprisonment, the Magistrate cannot grant bail under Section 437(1) Cr. P.C. unless there are special grounds mentioned therein. He relied upon certain authorities in this respect including Prahlad Sigh Bhati vs. NCT, Delhi and Anr. JT 2001 (4) SCC 116. In that case, offence was under Section 302 which is punishable with death sentence or life imprisonment and is exclusively triable by Court of Sessions. The offence under Section 409 is punishable with imprisonment for life or imprisonment for 10 years and fine. Similarly, the office under Section 467 is also punishable with imprisonment for life or imprisonment for 10 years and fine. Even though the maximum sentence which may be awarded is life imprisonment, as per Part I of Schedule annexed to Cr.P.C., both these offences are triable by a Magistrate of First Class. It appears that there are several offences including under sec.326 in the Indian Penal Code wherein sentence, which may be awarded, is imprisonment for life or imprisonment for lesser terms and such offences are triable by Magistrate of the First Class. If the Magistrate is empowered t try the case and pass judgment and order of conviction or acquittal, it is difficult to understand why he cannot pass order granting bail, which is interlocutory in nature, in such cases. In fact, the restriction under Sec. 437(1) Cr. P.C. is in respect of those offences which are punishable with alternative sentence of death or life imprisonment. If the offence is punishable with life imprisonment or any other lesser sentence and is triable by Magistrate, it cannot be said that Magistrate does not have jurisdiction to consider the bail application. In taking this view, I am supported by the old Judgment of Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court in Tularam and Ors. vs. Emperor 27 Cri.L.J. 1926 page 1063 and also by the Judgment of the Kerala High Court in Satyan Vs. State 1981 Cr.L.J. 1313. In Satyan, the Kerala High Court considered several earlier Judgments and observed thus in paras 7 and 8 :-

"7. According to the learned Magistrate Section 437(1) does not empower him to release a person on bail if there are reasonable grounds for believing that he has committed an offence punishable with death or an offence punishable with imprisonment for life. In other words the learned Magistrate has interpreted the expression "offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life" in Section 437(1) to include all offences where the punishment extends to imprisonment for life. This reasoning, no doubt, is seen adopted in an old Rangoon Case H.M. Boudville v. Emperor, AIR 1925 Rang 129 : (1925) 26 Cri L.J. 427 while interpreting the phrase "an offence punishable with death or transportation for life" in Section 497 Cr. P.C. 1898. But that case was dissented from in Mahammed Eusoof

v. Emperor, AIR 1926 Rang 51: (1926) 27 Cri L.J. 401). The Rangoon High Court held that the prohibition against granting bail is confined to cases where the sentence is either death or alternative transportation for life. In other words, what the Court held was that the phrase "death or transportation for life" in Section 497 of the old Code did not extend to offences punishable with transportation for life only, it will be interesting to note the following passage from the above judgement : "It is difficult to see what principle, other than pure empiricism should distinguish offences punishable with transportation for life from offences punishable with long terms of imprisonment; why, for instance, the detenu accused of lurking house trespass with a view to commit theft, for which the punishment is fourteen years imprisonment, should be specially favoured as against the individual who has dishonestly received stolen property, knowing that it was obtained by dacoity, for which the punishment happens to be transportation for life ? It cannot seriously be argued that the comparatively slight difference in decree of possible punishment will render it morally less likely that the person arrested will put in an appearance in the one case rather than the other. On the other hand the degree of difference is so great as between transportation for life and death as to be immeasurable. A prudent Legislature will, therefore, withdraw from the discretion of the Magistracy cases in which, if guilt is probable, even a man of the greatest fortitude may be willing to pay a material price, however, exorbitant, for life."

The above decision has been followed by the Nagpur High Court in the case reported in Tularam v. Emperor, AIR 1927 Nag 53 : (1926) 27 Cr. L.J. 1063).

"8. The reasoning applies with equal force in interpreting the phrase "offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life" So long as an offence under section 326 is triable by a Magistrate of the First Class there is no reason why it should be viewed differently in the matter of granting bail from an offence under Section 420 I.P.C. for which the punishment extends imprisonment for 7 years or any other non-bailable offence for which the punishment is a term of imprisonment."

It would be illogical and incomprehensible to say that the magistrate who can hold the trial and pass judgment of acquittal or conviction for the offences punishable with sentence of life imprisonment or lesser term of imprisonment, for example in offences under S. 326, 409, 467, etc., cannot consider the application for bail in such offences. In fact, it appears that the restriction under Sec. 437(1) (a) is applicable only to those cases which are punishable with death sentence or life imprisonment as alternative sentence. It may be noted that in Prahlad Sigh Bhati (supra), in para 6, the Supreme Court held that even though there is no legal bar for a Magistrate to consider an application for grant of bail to a person who is arrested for an offence exclusively triable by a Court of session, yet it would be proper and appropriate that in such a case the Magistrate directs the accused person to approach the Court of Session for the purposes of getting the relief of bail. This may be applicable to many cases, wherein the sentence, which may be awarded, is not even life imprisonment, but the offence is exclusively triable by court of Sessions for example offences punishable under Sections 306, 308, 314,315, 316,399, 400 and 450. Taking into consideration the legal position, I do not find any substance in the contention of Mr.Bhatt, learned Counsel for the intervener that merely because the offence is under Sec. 409 and 467 IPC, Magistrate did not have jurisdiction to hear and grant the bail.

(18.) Even though I find that the learned Magistrate had jurisdiction to consider the bail application and to grant bail,still taking into consideration seriousness and gravity of the matter, it was highly improper on the part of the learned Magistrate to show such haste in considering the application immediately and making endorsements on the bail application minute to minute and refusing reasonable opportunity to the investigating agency to oppose that application, I find that the order passed by the Magistrate granting bail was without application of mind to the facts of the case. By granting bail and refusing police custody of the accused, who were not in police custody even for a day, the learned Magistrate practically prohibited the investigating agency from making proper investigation to the case which, in fact, required in-depth investigation and which could not be possible without the police custody. Therefore, while the order refusing the police custody could be challenged under revision jurisdiction under sec. 397, the order granting bail could be cancelled by the superior courts, including the Sessions Court, by virtue of the powers under sec. 439(2) Cr.P.C.

(19.) The learned Counsel for the petitioners contended that during pendency of the present petition, the petitioners had offered to present themselves before the police for giving their specimen handwritings and signatures and that as per order of this Court they had also made available to police and their specimen handwritings and signatures were obtained by the police and therefore in view of this changed circumstances, now the police custody should not be granted nor bail order passed by the Magistrate should be cancelled. I am not impressed with this contention. The investigation in such a serious offence including huge amount of the Municipal Corporation, which is public money, could not be completed merely by obtaining specimen signatures or handwritings of the accused/petitioners. The investigation would require in-depth interrogation, which could reveal several facts which may not be within the knowledge of the investigating agency without such interrogation, (20.) For the aforesaid reasons - (a) the Writ Petition filed by the petitioners is hereby dismissed. Rule discharged. (b) Criminal Application No.425/2010 filed by the intervener is allowed and the bail granted by the Magistrate is also hereby set aside. (c) The petitioners/accused shall remain present before the Judicial Magistrate, First Class, Vashi, Navi Mumbai, on 2.8.2010 and on that day, request for police custody made by the investigating officer shall be considered. The magistrate shall pass appropriate order after hearing both parties. (d) It is made clear that in case police custody is granted, after expiry of the police custody remand, the accused/petitioners shall be at liberty to move fresh application for bail and that will be disposed of in accordance with law after hearing both parties. Rule made absolute in the Criminal Application No.425/2010.

****

Cross citation : 2011 CRI. L. J. 2065

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 V. M. KANADE, J. (Single Bench)

Criminal Application No. 1397 of 2009, D/- 25 -3 -2009.
Krushna Guruswami Naidu v. The State of Maharashtra.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - BAIL - COURT OF SESSIONS - CUSTODIAL REMAND - Bail - Application for - Is maintainable even if filed during period of police remand granted by Magistrate - Sessions Court cannot reject application for bail on that ground - Bail application should be entertained and considered on merits even if there is order of police remand.

The Apex Court in the case of Niranjan Singh and another v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote and others reported in (1980) 2 Supreme Court Cases 559 : (AIR 1980 SC 785) has observed as under :

"7. When is a person in custody, within the meaning of Section 439 Cr.PC? When he is in duress either because he is held by the investigating agency or other police or allied authority or is under the control of the court having been remanded by judicial order, or having offered himself to the court's jurisdiction and submitted to its orders by physical presence. No lexical dexterity nor prece-dential profusion is needed to come to the realistic conclusion that he who is under the control of the court or is in the physical hold of an officer with coercive power is in custody for the purpose of Section 439. This word is of elastic semantics but its core meaning is that the law has taken control of the person. The equivocatory quibblins and hide-and-seek niceties sometimes heard in court that the police have taken a man into informal custody but not arrested him, have detained him for interrogation but not taken him into formal custody and other like terminological dubieties are unfair evasions of the straightforwardness of the law. We need not dilate on this shady facet here because we are satisfied that the accused did physically submit before the Sessions Judge and the jurisdiction to grant bail thus arose.

The Constitutional Bench of the Apex Court in the case of Shri Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia and others v. State of Punjab reported in (1980) 2 Supreme Court Cases 565 : (AIR 1980 SC 1632) In paragraph 22, it is observed that;

"These sections with the power to grant or refuse bail to a person who is in the custody of the police and that is the ordinary situation in which bail is generally applied for."

It is expected from the Sessions Court that if such an application is filed under section 439, even if there is an order of remand, it should be entertained and considered on merits and in accordance with law.

AIR 1980 SC 785; AIR 1980 SC 1632, Rel. on. (Para 12)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras
AIR 1980 SC 1632 (Rel. on) 12
AIR 1980 SC 785 (Rel. on) 12

S. R. Chitnis, Sr. Counsel i/b. Smt. V. R. Raje, for Applicant; Shri S. R. Shinde, APP, for State.

Judgement

ORDER :- This is an application for bail.

2. The Applicant is a practicing advocate, practicing in the Court at Chittoor, Andhra Pradesh. The Applicant was arrested in connection with an offence, which is registered with Loni-Kalbhor Police Station dated 13th March, 2009 for the offence punishable under sections 363 and 364A r/w. 34 of the Indian Penal Code. In the said complaint, the Complainant alleged that his son was abducted by some unknown persons and he was taken to Bangalore.

3. The prosecution case is that the present Applicant had taken the abducted son of the Complainant to the Court premises in Bangalore for the purpose of holding settlement talks and at that time, he was arrested on the spot by the police.

4. The learned Senior Counsel for the Applicant submits that the prosecution case so far as the present Applicant is concerned, is incorrect and he was arrested from the street and no arrest panchnama has been prepared and he was, thereafter produced before the Court and, thereafter remanded to the police custody. He submitted that no panchnama was made and, therefore, the allegation of the prosecution that the Applicant was involved in the abduction is incorrect.

5. An affidavit has been filed by the daughter of the Applicant in which she stated that the Applicant's family members were not informed of the arrest of their father on 16.3.2009.

6. The learned APP for the State was asked to get the panchnama. He clearly made a statement that no panchnama has been made when the Applicant was arrested.
7. The Applicant is in police custody since last 10 days. It is submitted that on the basis of the statement of one of the co-accused, the present allegation has been made against the Applicant and there is no material on record to show that the Applicant is involved in the offences of abduction.
8. Perusal of the remand application filed by the Bangalore Police indicates that the Applicant has been arrested at the Post Office Road at 6.30 p.m. on 16.3.2009 whereas the remand application has been filed in the Pune Court shows that the Applicant was arrested in the Court premises while settlement was in progress. Admittedly, no arrest panchnama has been made at the time of arrest of the Applicant. The arrest form shows that the signatures of two witnesses were obtained. There is still discrepancy in the statement made in the remand application in the Bangalore Court and also the remand application filed in the Pune Court about the place of arrest. So far as the signatures of two witnesses are concerned on the arrest form, it is strange that the said witnesses are from the Pune and the arrest was made at Bangalore. It is strange that the signatures on the arrest form were obtained at Pune from Pune witnesses. The Applicant is practicing advocate in Chitoor, Andhra Pradesh since last 30 years and he was public prosecutor in the said Court. In my view, continued detention of the Applicant, therefore, under these circumstances, is not necessary since there is no material been found against him. The only material is the statement of the co-accused, who stated that the Applicant was holding settlement talks between the parties in the Bangalore Court. The Applicant deserves to be released on bail.
9. The Applicant be released on bail in a sum of Rs.20,000/- with one or two sureties in the like amount. The Applicant, initially furnish cash bail and within two weeks, shall furnish the sureties as directed by this Court. The Applicant shall co-operate with the police. The Applicant shall report to the concerned police station, as and when called.
10. The learned Magistrate, Pune shall act on the authenticated copy of the order and fax of the Applicant's advocate and that the same may be acted upon.
11. The learned Counsel for the Applicant has also canvassed one other submission that the Applicant has filed this application directly in this Court because his experience of the past is that when the application is filed under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code in the Sessions Court after an accused is remanded to police custody, such application is not entertained by the Sessions Court on misconception that such an application for bail is not maintainable. The learned Senior Counsel for the Applicant further submitted that, therefore, the Applicant has no other option but to file this application for bail under section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code in this Court directly. It is submitted that though the Applicant was practicing advocate and public prosecutor in the Chitoor Court, Andhra Pradesh for last 30 years, he was illegally detained in this matter. He submitted that, therefore, it has been clarified that such applications which are filed after police remand is granted by the Magistrate are maintainable in the Sessions Court under section 439.
12. In my view, this question is no longer res-integra and the Apex Court in several cases has held that the power of the Sessions Court and the High Court will not be restricted or limited in any manner as is evident from provisions of section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code and, therefore, even if police remand has been granted by the Magistrate Court, during this period also an application under section 439 is maintainable in the Sessions Court. The Apex Court in the case of Niranjan Singh and another v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote and others reported in (1980) 2 Supreme Court Cases 559 : (AIR 1980 SC 785) has observed as under :

"7. When is a person in custody, within the meaning of Section 439 Cr.PC? When he is in duress either because he is held by the investigating agency or other police or allied authority or is under the control of the court having been remanded by judicial order, or having offered himself to the court's jurisdiction and submitted to its orders by physical presence. No lexical dexterity nor prece-dential profusion is needed to come to the realistic conclusion that he who is under the control of the court or is in the physical hold of an officer with coercive power is in custody for the purpose of Section 439. This word is of elastic semantics but its core meaning is that the law has taken control of the person. The equivocatory quibblins and hide-and-seek niceties sometimes heard in court that the police have taken a man into informal custody but not arrested him, have detained him for interrogation but not taken him into formal custody and other like terminological dubieties are unfair evasions of the straightforwardness of the law. We need not dilate on this shady facet here because we are satisfied that the accused did physically submit before the Sessions Judge and the jurisdiction to grant bail thus arose.

8. Custody, in the context of Section 439, (we are not, be it noted, dealing with anticipatory bail under section 438) is physical control or at least physical presence of the accused in court coupled with submission to the jurisdiction and orders of the court."

It is, therefore, evident that the Sessions Court cannot reject such applications which are filed on the ground that they are not maintainable. It is quite another thing for the Court to consider the said application and to see that such an application should be entertained or not. Whether bail is granted or not at this stage. But the Sessions Court certainly cannot say that the said application is not maintainable. The Constitutional Bench of the Apex Court in the case of Shri Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia and others v. State of Punjab reported in (1980) 2 Supreme Court Cases 565 : (AIR 1980 SC 1632) has made certain observation in respect of power of Court under section 439. Though the Constitutional Bench of the Supreme Court was considering the power of the Court under section 438 to grant anticipatory bail, the said observation has been made only after taking into consideration the observation that those powers are also relevant. In paragraph 22, it is observed that;

"These sections with the power to grant or refuse bail to a person who is in the custody of the police and that is the ordinary situation in which bail is generally applied for."

It is expected from the Sessions Court that if such an application is filed under section 439, even if there is an order of remand, it should be entertained and considered on merits and in accordance with law.

Application is, accordingly, disposed of.

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation: 2010 (3) SCC (Cri) 469, 2010-TLPRE-0-452 , 2010-JT-6-656

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : ALTAMAS KABIR AND CYRIAC JOSEPH, JJ.

Pravinbhai Kashirambhai Patel ….. Vs….. State of Gujarat

SPECIAL LEAVE PETITION (CRL.) NO.1923 OF 2010 Of Jul 08,2010

==========

Cr. P.C. – S. 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Case of Complainant doughtful -Different versions given in different complaints – I.P.C. - Section 395, 397, 467, 468 and 471 – Grant of anticipatory bail to accused justified.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) In connection with an incident which is said to have occurred on 11th September, 2008 at about 11.00 a.m. and continued even thereafter, a complaint was made at about 5.30 p.m. to the Police Inspector, Anand Police Station, by one Patel Bipin Dahyabhai and three others. In the said complaint it was alleged that on the said date at 11.00 a.m. the Respondent No.2 and his associates together with a mob of about 20 persons carrying sticks, scythes and arms, illegally entered into Nidhwad Survey No.66, which the complainant contended belonging to him and his family members, and threatened to dispossess them by force from the said land and even held out threats to kill the complainant and his family members if they resisted.

(2.) From the contents of the complaint itself it is clear that immediately after the said incident the petitioner tried to lodge a complaint with the Police Inspector of Anand Police Station, but such complaint was not registered and within half an hour thereafter the mob came back and assaulted the complainant and his associates with sticks and scythes and caused serious injuries to the petitioner herein and some of his other associates who had to be taken to the Anand Suvidha Hospital for treatment. In the written complaint it was mentioned that besides causing serious injuries to the complainant and his group, the Respondent No.2 and his associates caused damage to the vehicles belonging to the petitioner. Since the complaint was not registered, the petitioner and his associates were said to have gone to the Office of the D.S.P., where they were informed that the said Officer was not available and, ultimately, the written complaint was made, in which another incident allegedly involving the snatching and theft of cash and ornaments from one Manishbhai Patel and certain other car accessories, was also included.

(3.) After the said written complaint had been made, a First Information Report was also recorded at the instance of the petitioner herein by the P.S.O., Sanand District, Ahmedabad (Rural), on 11th September, 2008, at 10.15 p.m. at V.S. Hospital, where the complainant had been referred for treatment. In the First Information Report it was stated by the petitioner that when the mob of 30 to 40 persons rushed towards the informant and his brother and nephew, the Respondent No.2 and his son, Lalitbhai Babubhai Patel, were standing on the road beside their car and with the help of signs they are alleged to have directed the attackers to assault the petitioner and his family members. According to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3, there is yet another version of the incident contained in a letter addressed by the petitioner and others to the Director General of Police, Gujarat, wherein it was shown that the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 were present at Village Nighrad at the time of the alleged offence and after having directed as to how the entire operation was to be carried out, they left the place. The Respondent Nos.2 and 3 thereafter applied for anticipatory bail and the same was allowed by the Additional Sessions Judge, Fast Track Court No.1, Ahmedabad (Rural), Mirzapur, by his order dated 11th November, 2009. While granting the prayer of the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 for grant of anticipatory bail, the learned trial court imposed various conditions to ensure that the investigation was not compromised in any way or that the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 cooperated with the investigation.

(4.) The said order allowing the prayer of the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 for grant of anticipatory bail was thereafter challenged by the petitioner herein before the High Court. The High Court, upon considering the material available and after considering the various decisions of this Court laying down the parameters for grant of anticipatory bail, dismissed the petitioner's application under sections 439(2) and 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code for setting aside the order dated 11th November, 2009, passed by the learned Additional Sessions Judge and to cancel the anticipatory bail granted to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 herein.

(5.) This Special Leave Petition has been filed by the complainant being dissatisfied with the aforesaid order of the High Court upholding the order of the trial court granting anticipatory bail to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 in connection with the F.I.R. dated 11th September, 2008.

(6.) Extensive submissions were made by Mr. Yatin N. Ojha, learned Senior Advocate, appearing for the petitioner, in support of his contentions that not only had the trial court erred in granting anticipatory bail to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3, but that the High Court had also erred in confirming the order of the learned Additional Sessions Judge. Mr. Ojha submitted that in the facts and circumstances of the case, the anticipatory bail granted to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3, in connection with the complaint filed by the petitioner, was liable to be set aside. Mr. Ojha urged that when such serious charges in respect of offences alleged to have been committed under Sections 395, 397, 467, 468 and 471 I.P.C. had been made against the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 and their associates, the learned Additional Sessions Judge, having regard to the gravity of the offence, ought not to have allowed the prayer of the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 for grant of anticipatory bail.

(7.) In support of his aforesaid submissions, Mr. Ojha firstly referred to the decision of this Court in Puran vs. Rambilas and Anr. [(2001) 6 SCC 338], in which the grounds for cancellation of bail under Section 439(2) Cr.P.C. fell for consideration and it was held that an order granting bail, by ignoring material and evidence on record and without giving reasons, would be perverse and contrary to principles of law and such an order would itself provide a ground for moving an application for cancellation of bail. It was further observed that such ground for cancellation of bail would be different from the ground that the accused had misconducted himself or that some new facts called for cancellation of bail.

(8.) Mr. Ojha then referred to the decision of this Court in Superintendent of Police, CBI and Ors. vs. Tapan Kumar Singh [(2003) 6 SCC 175] in support of his submissions that there was no compulsion that all facts and details relating to the offence are to be included in the F.I.R. This Court observed that the information given must disclose the commission of a cognizable offence and must provide a basis for the Police Officer to suspect the commission of such an offence. Mr. Ojha submitted that in the instant case certain information was provided in the F.I.R. which was subsequently supplemented by addition of other charges upon further investigation into the complaint.

(9.) Mr. Ojha submitted that the said view was subsequently reiterated by this Court in various cases and as recently as in the case of Animireddy Venkata Ramana and Ors. vs.

Public Prosecutor, High Court of Andhra Pradesh [(2008) 5 SCC 368], wherein it was reiterated that since in the F.I.R. the accused persons have been named and overt acts on their part have also been mentioned, it was not necessary that each and every detail of the incident was to be stated. It was further observed that a First Information Report is not meant to be encyclopaedic.

(10.) Mr. Ojha submitted that the grant of anticipatory bail to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 was in violation of the principles laid down by this Court in State rep. by the C.B.I. vs. Anil Sharma [(1997) 7 SCC 187], in which the factors to be considered in exercise of the discretionary power were considered. The said case involved a member of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Himachal Pradesh, who was also a Minister of the Himachal Pradesh State Government for three years and was the son of a former Union Minister. It was held that in appropriate cases anticipatory bail should not be granted to persons holding high positions and/or wielding considerable influence and that the investigating agencies would be better placed to elicit more useful information and material during custodial interrogation and that the High Court had erred in ignoring the apprehension expressed by C.B.I. that considering the high office held by the applicant and wide influence that he could wield, the C.B.I. would be subjected to a great handicap in the interrogation process in case of grant of pre-arrest bail. Reference was also made to the decision of this Court in Anil Kumar Tulsiyani vs. State of U.P. and Anr. [(2006) 9 SCC 425], wherein it was indicated that among the relevant considerations for grant of bail in respect of non-bailable offences, was the gravity and the nature of the offence. Mr. Ojha urged that the decision in the said case was clearly attracted to the facts of the instant case, having regard to the gravity of the offences complained of against the Respondent Nos.2 and 3.

(11.) Mr. Ojha submitted that whether the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 have abused the privilege of anticipatory bail or not was not the only consideration for exercise of power under Section 439(2) Cr.P.C., what was equally important was the correctness of the manner in which the respondents had been admitted to bail by the trial court. Mr. Ojha urged that having regard to the gravity of the offences alleged, both the Additional Sessions Judge as well as the High Court had erred in granting anticipatory bail to the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 and the said orders were liable to be set aside.

(12.) Appearing for the State of Gujarat, Ms. Hemantika Wahi supported the case of the petitioner and contended that notwithstanding the fact that the investigation had been completed, custodial interrogation of Respondent Nos.2 and 3 was still required in order to elicit further evidence in connection with the case.

(13.) On behalf of the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 it was submitted that it is only after considering the various materials available on record in respect of the purported incident the prayer of the said respondents for grant of anticipatory bail was allowed. Mr. Jaideep Gupta, learned Senior Advocate appearing with Mr. Mukul Rohtagi, learned Senior Advocate, who had commenced the submissions on behalf of the said respondents , urged that except for the statement made on behalf of the State of Gujarat that custodial interrogation of the Respondent Nos.2 and 3 was necessary in connection with the investigation into the complaint made by the petitioner, no other case has been made out for cancellation of such bail.

(14.) The decisions cited by Mr. Ojha in support of his contentions, lay down the principles, which are normally required to be followed while granting regular bail or anticipatory bail, but the same have to be applied according to the facts and circumstances of each case. Except for indicating the broad outlines for grant of bail and/or anticipatory bail, no strait-jacket formula can be prescribed for universal application, as each case for grant of bail has to be considered on its own merits and in the facts and nuances of each case. In fact, the principles laid down by this Court in State of U.P. vs. Amarmani Tripathi [(2005) 8 SCC 21], broadly covers the matters to be considered in an application for grant of bail, but even then the same may not fully cover the fact situation of each case. 14. In the instant case, on account of the different versions noticed in the three different complaints made in respect of the incident of 11th September, 2008, and having regard to the fact that allegations with regard to offences under Sections 395, 397, 467, 468 and 471 I.P.C. were sought to be added at a later stage of investigation, no case has been made out for allowing the petitioner's application under Section 439(2) read with Section 482 Cr.P.C.

(15.) Accordingly, while dismissing the Special Leave Petition, filed by Pravinbhai Kashirambhai Patel, we also make it clear that any observation made in this order shall be deemed to have been made only for the purposes of disposing of the Special Leave Petition and not for any other purpose.

(16.) The Special Leave Petition is dismissed accordingly.

****

Note :- See also – 2007 ALL MR (Cri.) 674 (Bom) – Bail granted in Rape case sec. 376 I.P.C.- as accused relied on love letters.

Cross Citation: 2005 Cri. L. J. 1416, 2005-Crimes(SC)-1-283 , 2005-AIR(SC)-0-790

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : N.SANTOSH HEGDE, S.B.SINHA, JJ.

M.P.Lohia ...Vs.. State of West Bengal

Criminal Appeal 219 Of 2005 Feb 02,2005

==========

A] Cr. P.C. – Section 438 – Anticipatory Bail – I.P.C. – 304 – B, 406, 498 – A, 34 – Accused and Complainant relying on documentary evidence – Bail should be granted - Wife Committing Suicide – Allegation of demand of dowry made by her parents – Accused taking defence that she was suffering mental illness- Both sides relying on documentary evidence – Held - accused relying on documentary evidence genuineness of that document can be decided by the trial court- however in such case the accused are entitled to be released on anticipatory bail.

B] Media Trial – Supreme Court condemned the act of publishing and holding of media trials of the matters which is subjudice before Court.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Heard learned counsel for the parties.

(2.) Leave granted.

(3.) The appellants in these appeals have been charged for offences punishable under Sections 304B, 306 and 498A read with Section 34 of the IPC. Their applications for the grant of anticipatory bail have been re- jected by the courts below. Daughter of the complainant Chandni (since deceased) was married to the appellant in the third appeal before us. Their marriage took place on 18th February, 2002. The appellants live in Ludhiana whereas the complainant and his family are residents of Calcutta. Chandni committed suicide on 28th of October, 2003 at her parents house in Calcutta. It is the case of the appellants herein that the deceased was a schizophrenic psychotic patient with cyclic depression and was under medical treatment. Though she was living in the matrimonial home often went to Calcutta to reside with her parents and she was also being treated by doctors there for the above mentioned ailments.

(4.) While the complaint against the appellants is that they were not satisfied with the dowry given at the time of wedding and were harassing the deceased continuously, consequent to which she developed depression and even though the parents of the deceased tried to assure the appellants that they would try to meet their demand of the dowry, the deceased was being treated cruelly at her matrimonial home and her husband had no love and affection to her because of which she developed depression.

(5.) It has also come on record that the deceased had tried to commit suicide at the residence of her parents sometime in July, 2002 i.e. about a year earlier than the actual date of her death.

(6.) On behalf of the prosecution as well as on behalf of the defence, large number of documents have been produced to show that the appellants were demanding dowry because of which the deceased was depressed and ultimately committed suicide. Per contra the documents from the side of the defence show that the relationship between the husband, wife and the in-laws were cordial and it was only illness of the deceased that was the cause of her premature death.

(7.) One thing is obvious that there has been an attempt on the part of both the sides to create documents either to establish the criminal case against the appellants or on the part of the appellants to create evidence to defend themselves from such criminal charges. Correctness or genuineness of this document can only be gone into in a full- fledged trial and it will not be safe to place reliance on any one of these documents at this stage.

Therefore, we would venture not to comment on the genuineness of these documents at this stage. Suffice it to say that this is a matter to be considered at the trial.

(8.) In this background the only question for our consideration at this stage is whether the appellants be granted anticipatory bail or not.

(9.) As stated above, any expression of opinion on the merits of the case except to the extent of finding out prima facie whether the appellants are entitled for anticipatory bail or not, would likely to effect the trial. Therefore, taking into consideration the entire material available on record without expressing any opinion on the same, we think it appropriate that the appellants should be released on bail in the event of their arrest on their furnishing a bail bond of Rs. 1,00,0007- (Rupees one lac) each and one surety for the like sum by each appellants to the satisfaction of the court or the arresting authority as the case may be. We direct that the appellants shall abide by the condiiions statutorily imposed under Section 438(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and further direct that in the event of the investigating agency requiring the presence of the appellants for the purpose of investigation they be given one week's notice and they shall appear before such investigating agency and their presence at such investigation shall not exceed two days at a time but such interrogation shall not be a custodial interrogation. They shall be entitled to have their counsel present at the time of such interrogation.

(10.) Having gone through the records, we find one disturbing factor which we feel is necessary to comment upon in the interest of justice. The death of Chandni took place on 28th February, 2002 and the complaint in this regard was registered and the investigation was in progress. The application for grant of anticipatory bail was disposed of by the High Court of Calcutta on 13.2.2004 and special leave petition was pending before this Court. Even then an article has appeared in a magazine called 'Saga' titled "Doomed by Dowry" written by one Kakoli Poddar based on her interview of the family of the deceased. Giving version of the tragedy and extensively quoting the father of the deceased as to his version of the case. The facts narrated therein are all materials that may be used in the forthcoming trial in this case and we have no hesitation that this type of articles appearing in the media would certainly interfere with the administration of justice. We deprecate this practice and caution the publisher, editor and the journalist who were responsible for the said article against indulging in such trial by media when the issue is subjudiced. However, to prevent any further issue being raised in this regard, we treat this matter as closed and hope that the other concerned in journalism would take note of this displeasure expressed by us for interfering with the administration of justice.

(11.) For the reasons stated above, these appeals succeed and the same are allowed.

****

Cross Citation: 2009-ALL MR(CRI)-0-3289, Mar 03,2009

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : A. B. CHAUDHARI, J.

SURESH KRISHANRAO POL .....Vs.... STATE OF MAHARASHTRA

==========

Cr. P.C. – Section 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Murder Case – I.P.C. 302, 34 – Role played by accused is factor to be considered - There is no allegations against petitioner that he hit the deceased with dangerous weapons – Anticipatory bail granted.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) HEARD learned counsel for rival parties.

(2.) THIS is an application for grant of anticipatory bail for the offence punishable under Section 302 read with Section 34 of indian Penal Code registered by Dattapur police Station, District Amravati, vide Crime no. 65 of 2008.

(3.) I have perused the case dairy. The First Information Report shows that only namdeo Nandardhane and Purushottam were named. It appears that thereafter some more statements were recorded. Insofar as the present applicant is concerned, there is no allegation that the present application hit the deceased by any dangerous weapon. Allegation is against Purushottam and Namdeo nandardhane about the actual assault. In view of this, the applicant deserves to be released on anticipatory bail.

(4.) THIS Court had, upon perusal of the document (Ex. 14) in Mis. Cri. Appln. No. 700/08 placed by P. S. O. Dattapur, addressed to District Government Pleader, amravati, called the explanation of the concerned P. S. O. vide order 3-2-2009, as to under what provisions and on what basis he gave no objection for releasing the applicant on bail in the case of murder. The learned a. P. P. invited my attention to para 6 of his reply which affirms that such no objection was given by the concerned P. S. O. on the ground that nothing was recovered from Namdeo. In the F. I. R. itself the name of Namdeo is mentioned as assailant of the accused by stick and his name has also been taken by other witnesses. Merely because no recovery was made from Namdeo Nandardhane, the police officer has no authority to give no objection for releasing on bail in the case of murder. Hence, I make the following order.

(5.) THE applicant be released on anticipatory bail in Crime No. 65/08 for the offence punishable under Section 302 read with Section 34 of Indian Penal Code registered at Police Station Dattapur, district amravati, on furnishing PR Band in the sum of Rs. 20,000/- with one solvent surety in like amount. The applicant to attend police station dattapur every day for 15 days between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. He is directed to co-operate with the investigating machinery. Liberty to prosecution to move this Court for cancellation of bail, if exigency arises. District Superintendent of Police amravati (Rural) i directed to examine the role of investigating officer who has given no objection for releasing Namdeo on bail in writing to the District Government Pleader, amravati, in the case of murder and, if necessary, to proceed against him departmentally. Hamadast granted.

(6.) IN view of the above order, criminal Application No. 505/09 stands disposed of as infructuous.

Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2013 ALL MR (Cri) 1317

THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

R. C. CHAVAN, J.

Pradeep Shivaji Shinare ..Vs. The State of Maharashtra

Application No.l844of20l2
withApplicationNo.621 of2012.
11thDecember,2012.

S.R. CHITNIS, Senior Counsel i/b Nittn Shejpal for the applicant , Ms.P.P. Shinde , APP, for the State.

==========

Cri.P.C.(1973),S.439-Bail-Offenceofmurder--Investigation was complete and charge-sheet had already been filed - Trial was not likely to take off – Applicant entitle to bail - Application allowed with conditions. (Para 2)

==========

JUDGE MENT :- This is an application for bail by one Pradeep Shivaji Shinare who has been named in the FIR as one of the five persons who participated in the assault on victim Ravindra , who died as a result of the injuries sustained by him. The FIR by the victim's brother Arvind shows that he and some other family members were eye-witnesses in the incident . The dispute was initially with Bharat . On 11-5-2012, at about 6:00 p.m., the applicant and four others were hiding behind a bush. Bharat was armed with a sword. He hit Ravindra on the face with the sword. Ravindra fell down. Jaywant assaulted Ravindra on right leg by a sickle. Tanaji and Santosh hit Ravindra by iron rods on chest and head. Bharat again gave a blow by the sword on the backside of Ravindra's head. The applicant hit on the head, neck and chest with wooden handle of a spade. The victim was pronounced dead on being taken to hospital. The notes of post-mortem examination show 16 injuries. Out of them, 15 injuries are either contused lacerated wounds, bruises, swelling or graze injuries, none of which has resulted in any fracture. The 16th injury is a contused lacerated wound in the occipital region of the size 8 cm x 1 cm bone deep resulting in compound fracture of the occipital bone. There was no internal injury on the thoracic region. The cause of death was head injury, polytrauma, haemorrhage and shock.

2 The learned counsel for theapplicant submits that though the applicant has been named in the FIR, the role attributed to the applicant is of assaulting the victim by the wooden handle of a spade on the victim's head, leg and chest. The learned counsel points out that apart from Bharat, who allegedly hit the victim by sword on the head, Tanaji and Santosh Shinare are also alleged to have hit the victim on the head with iron rods. Yet, there was only one head injury observed in the notes of postmortem examination. He, therefore, submits that there may be a possibility of an exaggeration by the first informant's side in order to involve all members of the Shinars family. The learned counsel for the first informant and the learned APP submit that since the applicant was a part of an unlawful assembly which had indulged in causing multiple injuries to the victim, leading to the victim's death, it would not be permissible, at this stage, to find out exactly what role was played by the applicant in order to consider whether he could be admitted to bail or not. The learned counsel for the first informant and the learned APP submit that all the participants in the assault would have to be treated similarly, since they had formed an unlawful assembly. This aspect would undoubtedly be considered by the trial Judge at the trial. Considering the nature of the injuries observed by the autopsy surgeon on the victim and the assault as described in the FIR, as also considering the fact that investigation is complete and charge-sheet has already been filed and the trial is not likely to take off, the applicant be released on bail in Sessions Case No.98 of 2012 arising out of C.R. No.I-21 of 2012 of Neral Police Station, District Raigad on his furnishing P.R. Bond in the sum of ?25,000/-with one or more solvent sureties in the sum aggregating to ?25,000/-on the condition that the applicant shall stay out of Raigad District till the trial is over and shall enter Raigad

District only for attending the trial. He shall scrupulously keep himself away from all the prosecution witnesses. The application accordingly stands disposed of.

3. In view of the above, the intervention application also stands disposed of.

Ordered accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2002-ALLMR(CRI)-0-573

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : J.A.PATIL, J.

Decided on 22nd December, 2000

Rohidas Gangaram Jadhav ….Vs….. State Of Maharashtra

==========

Cr. P.C. – 437 – I.P.C. 302 Murder Trial – Two set of evidences inconsistent with each other – one incriminating the accused, while the other indicating his absence at relevant time on the spot – Accused deserves to be granted bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

Heard Shri. Amin Solkar, Advocate for the Applicant-accused and Shri. Konde-Deshmukh, APP for the Respondent State. 2. The Applicant was arrested on 24th April, 2000 on the charge that he and one Nisha, with whom he had illicit connections, set the deceased Nalini on fire, after pouring kerosene on her. The deceased sustained 99 percent burn injuries and she succumbed to the said injuries on the same day. However, before, that, she made two statements-one before the police and the other before a Municipal Councillor. Both the statements are in writing and they bear the thumb impressions of the deceased. In both the statements the deceased stated that the Applicant, on account of illicit relations with the co-accused Nisha had asked her to leave the house. According to her, then there was a quarrel between the two and in that quarrel, Nisha poured kerosene on her person, whereas the Applicant set her on fire. The dying declarations bear endorsements of the Medical Officer, Kalyan, to the effect that the patient was conscious to give statement. Although, both the statements must have been recorded one after the other, the Medical Officer's endorsement bear the same timing, i. e. , 1. 00 p. m. The dying declaration recorded by the Municipal Councilor Rekha Gajabe contain typed questions, against which hand-written answers, purported to have been given by the deceased are written. The police have recorded the statement of Damyanti the minor daughter, aged five years, the deceased and the Applicant. The same was recorded, five days, after the incident. Damyanti has stated that it was the Applicant, who poured kerosene on her mother and set her on fire. She does not refer to the presence of Nisha. Relying upon these statements, Shri. Konde-Deshmukh, APP submitted before me that there is a prima facie case of murder against the Applicant and, therefore, he does not deserve to be released on bail. Shri. Solkar drew my attention to the statements of neighbouring witnesses, namely, Salochana Konkar, Chandrakant Konkar, Jaywant

Sambare, and Vijayabai Kardak, which show that at the relevant time, they heard a noise of shouting and, therefore, they rushed to the house of the Applicant. But at that time, the door was found closed from inside and finally it was required to be broken open. Chandrakant Konkar has stated that at the relevant time he and the Applicant had gone to the market for buying vegetables and at that time, Jaywant Sambare came there and informed the Applicant that the deceased had sustained burn injuries. It is only thereafter that the Applicant came to the house and it was found that the deceased was lying on the floor with burns on her person. 3. It thus prima facie appears that there is inconsistency in the two sets of evidence - one incriminating the Applicant, while the other indicating his absence at the relevant time on the spot. In view of this position, I think that the Applicant deserves to be granted bail. 4. In the result, the Application is allowed. The Applicant-Accused be released on P. R. bond of Rs. 10,000/- with one/two solvent sureties to make up the said amount. Bail in trial Court. 5. Authenticated copy allowed. Certified copy expedited.

..Application allowed....

****

Cross Citation : [2008(4) B Cr C 716 (SC)]

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S.B. SINHA AND CYRIAC JOSEPH, JJ.

SAMIULLAHA ..... Vs ..... SUPERINTENDENT, NARCOTIC CENTRAL BUREAU

Criminal Appeal No. 1748 of 2008, decided on 7th November, 2008.

==========

Criminal Procedure Code, 1973, Section 439 (2)-Constitution of India, Article 21—When two views are possible in respect of commission of crime, , justifying or not justifying the grant of bail, then the view which leans in favour of accused must be favoured.

==========

Case law : Referred, discussed and overruled
Ouseph alias Thankachan v. State of Kerala,(2004) 4 SCC 446
E. Micheal Raj v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotic Control Bureau,2008) 5 SCC 161
NoorAga v. State of Punjab & Anr.,2008 (9) SCALE 681
State of Mauritius v. Khoyrattya2006 UKPC 13 : [2006] 2 WLR 1330
Delhi Administration) v. Sanjay Gandhi, 1978 (2) SCC 411.

Advocates appeared:- For the Appellant: Sushil Kumar Jain, Puneet Jain, Ms. Archana Tiwari, Ashwin V. Kothamath and Ms. Pratibha Jain, Advocates.

For the Respondent : B.B. Singh, Kumar Rajesh Singh, Ms. N. Gupta * and B.V. Balaram Das, Advocates.

JUDGMENT

S.B. Sinha, J. :- 1. Leave granted.

2. Whether an order of bail granted in favour of the appellant herein could have been directed to be cancelled on the basis of a report of analysis of the articles recovered from him containing 'heroin' is the core question involved herein.

3. Before, however, we advert to the said question, we may notice the factual matrix involved in the matter.

On or about 14.08.2004, the luggage of two persons, viz., Abdul Munaf and Zahid Hussain, who were traveling in a bus were searched and allegedly contraband weighing 2 kgs. was recovered. A purported statement was made by the said accused persons that the said contraband (heroin) was meant to be delivered to the appellant. Nothing was recovered from him. Apart from the said statements of the said accused persons, no other material is available on , ecord to sustain a charge against him. On the basis of the said statement the "appellant was arrested on 15.08.2004. Allegedly, a statement was made by him in terms of Section 67 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 (for short "the Act"). Appellant contends that he was tortured and the statement was obtained forcibly from him on some blank documents. He later on retracted there from. Indisputably, the seized articles were sent for chemical examination to the Government Opium and Alkaloid Works, Neemuch. A report was sent to the investigating officer on 23.09.2004 stating that the sample did not contain any contraband substance. Appellant thereafter filed an application for discharge. The prosecution moved the court for sending the substance allegedly recovered from the co-accused persons for its examination by the Central Revenue Control Laboratory, New Delhi. It was rejected by the court opining that there was no provision in the Act for sending the sample to another laboratory. The court, however, did not pass an order of discharge in favour of the appellant but released him on bail, stating:

> Accordingly as mentioned above, there is no ground that by accepting the application of the complainant and order be passed for sending the second sample for examination to another laboratory. If the investigating officer so desires, then in accordance with the ruling expounded as above, he is free to send the second sample to any of the laboratories for its examination at his own level. On the basis of the abovementioned observations, the application of the complainant is rejected."

4. The prosecution, however, sent another sample to the Central Revenue Conrol Laboratory, New Delhi. A report dated 5.01.2005 was sent opining that the sample inder reference was tested positive for Diacetyl-morphine (Heroin), which according to the said report was found to be 2.6% of the sample tested.

5. Thereafter, an application for cancellation of bail was filed on 4.02.2005. By an order dated 15.03.2005, the bail granted to the appellant was cancelled relying on or on the basis of the second report obtained by the respondent from the Central Revenue Control Laboratory, New Delhi stating:

> "While receiving guidance from the abovementioned citations, I arrive at the conclusion that under the present facts, the second sample which was sent for examination and according to its receipt the seized substance was heroine, and on the basis of which charges have been levelled against the accused persons, and the prosecution has right to send second sample for chemical examination, and as such there are charges of serious nature against the accused persons in which there provisions (sic) to award punishment of imprisonment of the term of at least ten years and fine of rupees one lakh, as well as under Section 37 of the Act, in case of recovery of psychotropic substances in the quantity of commerce & trade, bail cannot be granted until the court does not arrive at the conclusion to the effect fhat the accused is not guilty of such an offence, and in case of granting him bail such an offence will not be committed by him during the course of his remaining free on bail."

6. A revision application filed there against by the appellant before the b - jh Court, which was marked as S.B. Criminal Revision Petition No. 277 3?2005, was dismissed by reason of the impugned judgment.

7. Appellant is, thus, before us.

8. Mr. Sushil Kumar Jain, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the ippellant, would contend that in the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case there was no justification at all for cancellation of bail which had already >een granted to the appellant.

The learned counsel would contend that a bail granted must be cancelled >nly if the requirements contained in Sub-section (2) of Section 439 of the -ode of Criminal Procedure are fulfilled.

In any event, as the Central Revenue Control Laboratory, New Delhi is tot a designated chemical examiner as defined in the Narcotic Drugs and 'sychotropic Substances Rules, 1985 (for short "the Rules"), reliance hereupon could not have been placed particularly when the laboratory which omes within the definition of the term "Chemical Examiner" had opined otherwise.

The learned counsel would contend that unlike the provisions of Section (3) of the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, no provision exists in the Act for sending one sample to one laboratory and the second to another laboratory.

The learned counsel would further contend that the miniscule percentage of heroin which has been found, i.e., 2.6%, would not come within the purview of commercial quantity.

9. Mr. B.B. Singh, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent, on the other hand, submitted that as Section 37 of the Act contains a special provision providing that (i) no court shall grant bail without hearing the public prosecutor; (ii) the court is of the opinion that there is reasonable ground to believe that the accused is not likely to commit the said offence, no order of bail could have been passed in derogation of the provisions thereof. It was furthermore submitted that having regard to the fact that the appellant himself had confessed his guilt by making a statement in terms of Section 67 of the Act, a judgment of conviction could be based thereupon. Even a retracted confession, according to the counsel, can form basis for recording a judgment of conviction.

10. The Act although is a self-contained code, application of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, however, either expressly or by necessary implication, have nol; been excluded. There exists a distinction between an appeal from an order granting bail and an order directing cancellation of bail. While entertaining an application for cancellation of bail, it must be found that the accused had misused the liberty granted to him as a result whereof :

(a) he has attempted to tamper with evidence;

(b) he has attempted to influence the witnesses;

(c) there is a possibility of the accused to abscond and> therefore, there is a possibility that the accused may not be available for trial,

11. It is true that the general principles of grant of bail are not applicable in a case involving the Act. The power of the court in that behalf is limited. Section 37 of the Act reads as under:

"37. Offences to be cognizable and non-bailable

(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.(2 of 1974)-

(a) every offence punishable under this Act shall be cognizable;

(b) no person accused of an offence punishable for offences under section 19 or section 24 or section 27A and also for offences involving commercial quantity shall be released on bail or on his own bond unless—

(i) the Public Prosecutor has been given an opportunity to oppose the application for such release, and

(ii) where the Public Prosecutor opposes the application, the court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offence arid that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail.

(2) The limitations on granting of bail specified in clause (b) of subsection (1) are in addition to the limitations under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974) or any other law for the time being in force, on granting of bail.

12. However, a distinction even is made as regards grant of bail in relation to a commercial quantity and a small quantity. Commercial quantity has been defined in Section 2(viia) of the Act to mean "any quantity greater than the quantity specified by the Central Government by notification in the Official Gazette[7]'.

13. We will advert to the question of the definition of "Chemical Examiner" a little later. The question, however, as to whether the contraband found came within the purview of the commercial quantity within the meaning of Section 2(viia) or not is one of the factors which should be taken into consideration by the courts in the matter of grant or refusal to grant bail. Even, according to the Central Revenue Control Laboratory, New Delhi, only 2.6% of the sample sent was found to be containing heroin. Small quantity in terms of the notification issued under Sections 2(viia) and 2(xxiiia) is as under:

S.No	Name of Narcotic Drug or Psychotropic Substance (International Non-proprietary Name (INN))	Chemical Name	Small Quantity	Commercial Quantity
77.	Morphine	Morphine	5 gms.	250 gms.

The quantity, thus, alleged to have been recovered from the co-accused persons could be said to be intermediate quantity and, thus, the rigours of the provisions of Section 37 of the Act relating to grant of bail may not be justified.

In Ouseph alias Thankachan v. State of Kerala[1], this Court held:

"8. The question to be considered by us is whether the psychotropic substance was in a small quantity and if so, whether it was intended for personal consumption. The words 'small quantity' have been specified by the Central Government by the notification dated 23-7-1996. Learned Counsel for the State has brought to our notice that as per the said notification small quantity has been specified as 1 gram. If so, the quantity recovered from the appellant is far below the limit of small quantity specified in the notification issued by the Central Government. It is admitted that each ampoule contained only 2 nil and each ml contains only 3 mg. This means the total quantity found in the possession of the appellant was only 66 mg. This is less than l/10th of the limit of small quantity specified under the notification.

11. On account of the aforesaid fact situation, we are inclined to believe that the small quantity of buprenorphine (Tidigesic) was in the possession of the appellant for his personal consumption and, therefore, the offence committed by him would fall under Section 27 of the NDPS Act." See also E.Micheal Raj v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotic Control Bureau[2].

14. The Central Government in exercise of its power conferred upon i under Section 9 read with Section 76 of the Act made the Rules. "Chemical Examiner" has been defined in Rule 2(c) of the Rules to mean "the Chemical Examiner or Deputy Chief Chemist or Shift Chemist or Assistant Chemical Examiner, Government Opium & Alkaloid Works, Neemuch or, as the case may be, Ghazipur".

15. It is not necessary for us to consider the matter in depth as to whether the aforementioned definition is exhaustive but then we are concerned with a question involving cancellation of an order of bail. The authorised laborator) at Neemuch categorically found that the seized substance did not contair any contraband. For the purpose of grant of bail, the court cannot be said tc have committed any illegality in relying thereupon. There exists a difference of Opinion insofar as the Central Revenue Control Laboratory, New Delhi, has since opined that the sample contained 2.6% here on. The effect of said contradictory report must be gone into only at trial. A person's liberty is protected in terms of Article 21 of the Constitution of India. When two views are possible, the view which leans in favour of an accused must be favoured.

16. It is not the stage where the court is required to take into consideration the submission of Mr. B.B. Singh that a judgment Oi conviction is possible to be recorded on the basis of a confessional statement made by an accused. It may be so but the question is that when the prosecution itself had failed to show that the seized, substance contained any narcotic substance or psychotropic substance, the question of reliance on the confession of the accused does not arise; at least at this stage.

In Noor Aga v. State of Punjab & Anr.,[3], this Court held: .

"92. We may, at the outset notice that a fundamental error has been committed by the High Court in placing explicit reliance upon Section 108 of the Customs Act.

93. It refers to leading of evidence, production of document or any other thing in an enquiry in connection of smuggling of goods. Every proceeding in terms of Sub-section (4) of Section 108 would be a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Sections 193 and 228 of the Indian Penal Code. The enquiry contemplated under Section 108 is for the purpose of 1962 Act and not for the purpose of convicting an accused under any other statute including the provisions of the Act.

98. It was pointed out that the power of a Police Officer as crime detection and custom officer as author, ties not Police Officers but then the court took notice of the general image of police in absence of legislative power to enforce other law enforcing agencies for the said purpose in the following terms:

23. It is also to be noticed that the Sea Customs Act itself refer to police officer in contradistinction to the Customs Office: Section 180 empowers a police officer to seize articles liable t confiscation under the Act, on suspicion that they had been] stolen. Section 184 provides that the officer adjudging confiscation shall take and hold possession of the thing confiscated apd every officer of police, on request of such office] shall assist him in taking and holding such possession. This leaves no room for doubt that a Customs Officer is not an office: of the Police. 24. Section 171-A of the Act empowers the Custom; Officer to summon any person to give evidence or to produce i document or any other thing in any enquiry which he be making in connection with the smuggling of any goods.

100. When, however, the custom officers exercise their power undei the Act, it is not exercising its power as an officer to check smuggling of goods; it acts for the purpose of detection of crime and bringing an accused to book."

But, as indicated hereinbefore, the said question need not be gone into at this stage.

17. We may, however, incidentally refer to a recent decision of the Privy Council in State of Mauritius v. Khoyratty[4] wherein a similar provision curtailing the power of court to grant bail was held by the Supreme Court of Mauritius to be ultra vires of the doctrine of separate of power. A constitutional amendment by simple majority was carried out. Even that constitutional amendment was held to be unconstitutional. The Privy Council in the aforementioned case upheld the said decision stating:

"In A v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2005] 2 AC 68 Lord Bingham gave the leading judgement. He stated at para 42: "...crt is also of course true . . . that Parliament, the executive and the courts have different functions. But the function of independent judges charged to interpret and apply the law is universally recognised as a cardinal feature of the modern democratic state, a cornerstone of the rule of law itself. The Attorney General is fully entitled to insist on the proper limits of judicial authority, but he is wrong to stigmatize judicial decision-making as in some way undemocratic."

While not conclusive of the issue presently before the Board, these decisions give important colour to the words of section 1 of the Constitution, viz that Mauritius shall be a democratic state.

14. There is another aspect to take into account. The Supreme Court observed that decisions on bail are intrinsically within the domain of the judiciary. At the very least that means that historically decisions on bail were regarded as judicial. The importance of the historical perspective was emphasized in the Australian jurisprudence cited in Anderson. This factor too gives colour to the words of section 1."

18. Furthermore, for the purpose of cancellation of bail, the statutory requirements must be satisfied. Appellant has failed to do so. We may notice that in State Delhi Administration) v. Sanjay Gandhi,[5] this Court held:

13. Rejection of bail when bail is applied for is thing; cancellation of bail already granted is quite another. It is easier to reject a be application in a non-bailable case than to cancel a bail granted i such a case. Cancellation of bail necessarily involves the review of decision already made and can by and large be permitted only if, b reason of supervening circumstances, it would be no longe conducive to a fair trial to allow the accused to retain his freedom during the trial. The fact that prosecution witnesses have turned hostile cannot by itself justify the inference that the accused has woi them over. A brother, a sister or a parent who has seen the commission of crime, may resile in the Court from a statemen recorded during the course of investigation. That happen! instinctively, out of natural love and affection, not out of persuasior by the accused. The witness has a stake in the innocence of the accused and tries therefore to save him from the guilt. Likewise, are employee may, out of a sense of gratitude, oblige the employer by uttering an untruth without pressure pr persuasion. In other words, the objective fact that witnesses have turned hostile must be shown to bear a causal connection with the subjective involvement therein of the respondent. Without such proof, a bail once granted cannot be cancelled on the off chance or on the supposition that witnesses have been won over by the accused. Inconsirtent testimony can no more be ascribed by itself to the influence of the accused than consistent testimony, by itself, can be ascribed to the pressure of the prosecution. Therefore, Mr. Mulla is right that one has to countenance a reasonable possibility that the employees of Maruti like the approver Yadav might have, of their own volition, attempted to protect the respondent from involvement in criminal charges. Their willingness now to oblige the respondent would depend upon how much the respondent has obliged them in the past. It is therefore necessary for the prosecution to show some act or conduct on, the part of the respondent from which a reasonable inference may arise that the witnesses have gone back on their statements as a result of an intervention by or on behalf of the respondent."

19. For the reasons aforementioned, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained which is set aside accordingly. The order dated 15.03.2005 cancelling the bail is set aside and the revision application filed in the High Court' stands allowed. The appeal is allowed.

Appeal allowed

****

Cross Citation :2003-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-59 , 2003-Cri.L.J.-0-736

HIGH COURT OF HIMACHAL PRADESH

Hon'ble Judge(s) : M.R.VERMA,J

Jeet Ram ... Versus... State of Himachal Pradesh

Crl.M.P.(M) 1183 Of 2002, Sep 24,2002

==========

(B) Bail – Murder Case – I.P.C. 302 – Mere gravity of offence and severity of punishment is no ground for rejection of bail - The nature of evidence, part played by the accused and the likely hood of the accused absconding has to be taken in to account – the allegations against accused are that they hold the deceased and other accused pelted stones – It does not mean that accused have common intention of murder - Accused entitled to get bail.

In Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 (3) Rec Cri R 137 : (1994 Cri L.J. 2201) (SC) where one of the accused inflicted the injury on the head of the injured with sharp edged weapon and the second accused gave Lathi' blow on his shoulder causing simple injury allegedly with the common intention of accused in an attempt to commit the murder of the injured, the Hon'ble Supreme Court held that the injury on the head of the injured was serious one and proved to be grievous, therefore, the offence under Section 307, I.P.C. is made out against Kuldip Singh who caused such injury but in so far as the other co-accused is concerned, he inflicted only one blow on the shoulder with the Lathi' causing swelling, therefore, it could not be said that he shared the common intention along with the Kuldip Singh in attempt to commit the murder of the injured.

(C) There is no allegation that if released on bail the accused are likely to abscond with a view to evade the trial – Accused entitled to get bail.

(D) Plea that accused if released may be assaulted by complainant party not tenable-BailGranted.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Since all these petitions arise out of the same F.I.R. No. 97 of 2002 dated 19-7-2002 under Sections 302, 147, 148, 149, 201, I.P.C. registered at Police Station, Tieog, therefore, these are being disposed of by this common order.

(2.) The case of the prosecution against the accused petitioners (hereafter referred to as the accused persons') is that on 19-7-2002 at about 6.30 p.m. at Bag, Ramesh Heta (since deceased and hereafter referred to as the deceased') was caught hold by the accused persons and their co-accused Savitri and Bimla pelted stones at him. In the meanwhile, Bhupender, another co-accused named in the F.I.R., inflicted a Draft' blow to the deceased on the back portion of his neck while proclaiming that he would be done to death there and then. After inflicting the injury with the aforesaid blow to the deceased, said Bhupender while carrying the Draft' bolted away and the accused persons and co-accused Savitri and Bimla also ran towards their house. As a consequence of the Draft' blow the deceased fell down. The occurrence was witnessed by Mohan Lal and in the meanwhile Sher Singh also came on the spot. When the injured was being removed to the Civil Hospital, Theog, he succumbed to the injuries on the way. Mohan Lal lodged the F.I.R. at Police Station, Theog. During the course of investigation, the weapon of offence and blood-stained clothes of Bhupender, co-accused, had been recovered and taken in possession by the police. Injuries were noticed on the person of Bhupender, co-accused, when he was got medically examined on 23-7-2002. On post-mortem examination of the dead body of Ramesh, a single injury was found on the left side of his neck and the cause of his death, as per the medical opinion, is ante mortem injury over the neck causing severing of a major vein and puncturing of left lung causing hemorrhagic shock and death. It has further been found during the investigation that the relations between the families of accused Kewal Ram and that of the father of the deceased are inimical because of some land dispute and accused Kewal Ram and Jeet Ram are facing social boycott. At the material time said Bhupender was blocking a path used by villagers which runs through the land belonging to accused Kewal Ram. Moti Ram father of the deceased, objected. However, said Bhupender asserted that he would not allow anybody to enter in his land. In the meanwhile, the deceased also came there and started removing the stones fixed by Bhupender for blocking the path. It enraged Bhupender who rushed towards his house and returned to the spot accompanied by the accused persons and the said co-accused and thereafter the occurrence took place, as already stated hereinabove.

(3.) The accused persons are presently lodged in judicial lock up. Their co-accused, namely, Savitri and Bimla, had already been released on bail. The accused persons have claimed bail on the grounds that it was with oblique motive that all the members of the family of accused Kewal Ram had been implicated in the case without any basis and particularly no common object or common intention to murder Ramesh on the part of the accused persons can be inferred from the contents of the F.I.R. and the allegations against them that they caught hold of deceased are totally false.

(4.) I have heard the learned Counsel for the accused persons and the learned Law Officer for the respondent/State and have also gone through the records.

(5.) It was contended by the learned Counsel for the accused that the prosecution version that the deceased was caught hold by three bail petitioners and two of their co-accused pelted stones at him is unbelievable and as per the material on record particularly the First Information Report it cannot be said that the accused had either the common intention or common object to kill the deceased. None of them is alleged to have inflicted any injury on the person of the deceased and even according to the prosecution they were not armed with any weapon which clearly negatives the prosecution allegation that the accused, along with their co-accused, acted in furtherance of common object of killing Ramesh. It was further contended by the learned Sessions Judge, while dealing with the bail applications of the accused persons, has also observed that there is reasonable force in the contention raised for the accused that the question regarding application of Section 149 of the Indian Penal Code is debatable. It was further contended that the learned Sessions Judge denied the bail to the accused persons mainly for the reason that the possibility of retributory action by or at the instance of the complainant party could not be ruled out at this stage if the accused persons are enlarged on bail. However, such an apprehension is no reason for curtailing the liberty of the accused who in the facts and circumstances of the case are entitled to be released on bail.

(6.) On the other hand, the learned law Officer has contended that there is evidence on record to prima facie show that the accused persons and their co-accused had the common object to kill the deceased and it was in furtherance of such common object that Bhupender caused fatal injury to the deceased, therefore, the accused are involved in the commission of grave offences for which severe punishment is provided in law, therefore, they should not be released on bail. It was further contended that the atmosphere in the village and in adjoining areas is surcharged and, if released on bail, the lives of the accused may be in danger at the hands of the people of the area and their release may create law and order situation. Therefore, they are not entitled to be released on bail.

(7.) As is the case of the prosecution, the only role attributed to the accused persons is that they caught hold of the deceased and their co-accused Savitri and Bimla pelted stones at him and thereafter Bhupender gave him the fatal blow with a Draft'. Prima facie it is difficult to believe that when a person is caught hold of by three persons two other persons are pelting stones at him, then such person and those persons who have caught hold of him will not sustain any injury. Therefore, the version regarding pelting of stones and holding of the deceased is prima facie clouded by suspicion as none of the accused persons who are alleged to have caught hold of the deceased while co-accused Savitri and Bimla were pelting stones at the deceased did not receive any injury whatsoever and no injury caused by the pelting of stones was found on the person of the deceased. Mere catching hold of the deceased by the accused persons may not necessarily lead to the conclusion that they have the common object of killing the deceased as the applicability of Section 149, IPC, in the facts of the case, is a debatable question.

(8.) In Thakar Singh v. State of Punjab, 1969 Cur L.J. 810 (relied upon by the learned Counsel for the accused persons to substantiate his contention) wherein the case of the prosecution was that accused Niranjan Singh caught hold of the deceased and fell him down and accused Thakar Singh throttled his neck, the Punjab and Haryana High Court held as under :

..... It is not a case in which it can be legitimately contended on behalf of the prosecution that there was any pre-planned common intention on the part of both Niranjan Singh and his father Thakar Singh in throttling the deceased. There could be no such intention on the part of Niranjan Singh even in executing his act of catching hold of the boy by the arms and throwing him down on the ground. The act of throttling by Thakar Singh followed per se and was independent of the act of throwing the boy down by Niranjan Singh. Thus, there is no community of intention in the act performed by Niranjan Singh and that executed by Thakar Singh. The two are distinct ones and one has nothing to do with the other. No intention on the part of Niranjan Singh from his act could be inferred in common with the intention of throttling by Thakar Singh, which followed later on. It is not a case in which it could be held that throwing down was committed by Niranjan Singh in furtherance of the common intention of throttling by Thakar Singh. Thus, the applicability of Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code is uncalled for. Niranjan Singh appellant could not be held vicariously liable by virtue of that Section. This is additional ground of his being entitled to acquittal."

(9.) In Jaspal Singh v. State of Haryana, 1986 (2) Recent CR 582 (2) wherein one of the accused caught hold of the deceased while armed with a stick but did not cause any injury to the deceased whereas his co-accused caused injuries to the deceased which resulted in his death, the Punjab and Haryana High Court granted bail to the accused who had only caught hold of the deceased while on the following premise :

Though the motive was with the petitioner and he caught hold of the deceased while armed with a stick, he did not cause any injury to the deceased. Rather his co-accused did cause injuries to the deceased which resulted in his death. In this situation, applicability of Section 34 Indian Penal Code is a moot point. It would thus be apt that the petitioner gets the concession of bail."

(10.) In Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 (3) Rec Cri R 137 : (1994 Cri L.J. 2201) (SC) where one of the accused inflicted the injury on the head of the injured with sharp edged weapon and the second accused gave Lathi' blow on his shoulder causing simple injury allegedly with the common intention of accused in an attempt to commit the murder of the injured, the Hon'ble Supreme Court held that the injury on the head of the injured was serious one and proved to be grievous, therefore, the offence under Section 307, I.P.C. is made out against Kuldip Singh who caused such injury but in so far as the other co-accused is concerned, he inflicted only one blow on the shoulder with the Lathi' causing swelling, therefore, it could not be said that he shared the common intention along with the Kuldip Singh in attempt to commit the murder of the injured.

(11.) Keeping in view the above position in law and the role attributed to the accused persons and the facts and circumstances of the case, bail cannot be denied to the accused persons on the sole ground that they are involved in the commission of an offence under Section 302, I.P.C. by virtue of being members of the alleged unlawful assembly.

(12.) There is no doubt that offence punishable under Section 302, I.P.C. is a grave offence for which the extreme penalty of death has been provided in law. However, the mere gravity of the offence and the severity of punishment is no ground for rejection of bail, while deciding the question of grant or refusal of the bail, other factors such as the nature of evidence, the part played by the accused in the commission of the offence and the likelihood of the accused absconding or tampering with prosecution evidence has also to be taken into account.

(13.) There is no allegation that if released on bail, the accused are likely to abscond with a view to evade the trial. Further there is no material on record to show that in the event of bail, the accused are likely to tamper with the prosecution evidence which consist of such persons who are admittedly at logger's head with the accused persons.

(14.) The contention that if released on bail the accused persons may be assaulted or any other criminal offence may be committed against their person by the complainant party is no reason for curtailing the liberty of the accused persons. It is the duty of the State to protect the life and property of its citizens. No law authorizeo the detention in custody of a person whose life is in danger. The contention, therefore, is simply unsustainable.

(15.) In view of the above discussion, there is no legal impediment or lawful reason to deny bail to the accused persons.

(16.) As a result, these petitions are allowed and the accused persons are ordered to be released on bail on their furnishing a personal bond each in the sum of Rs. 25,000.00 with one surety each in the like amount to the satisfaction of the learned Sub-Divisional Judicial Magistrate, Theog. The bail, however, is subject to the conditions that the accused persons shall not in any manner tamper with the prosecution evidence, shall not indulge in the commission of such acts as are alleged to have been committed by them and shall not deliberately and intentionally act in a manner which may tend to delay the investigation and trial of the case. Copy dasti, as prayed for..

****

[See also 2001 ALL MR (Cri.) 1696 For Transit Bail]

Cross Citation :1999 CRI. L. J. 1084

ORISSA HIGH COURT

Coram : P. K. MISRA, J

Debasis Mohapatra ….Vs…. State of Orissa

Criminal Misc. Case No. 2505 of 1998, D/- 25 -6 -1998.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.436 – Transit BAIL - Rejection by Magistrate by simply stating that alleged offence had been committed beyond his jurisdiction – Illegal - The Magistrate has ample jurisdiction to consider the question of bail

- Such bail, if granted, must be for a temporary period to enable the accused person to appear before the proper Court within a fixed period and it would not be open to Magistrate to reject bail application straightaway.

==========

Judgement

ORDER :-

1. After this bail application was heard and orders were reserved, the counsel for the petitioner mentioned the matter and the matter was listed under the heading "To be Mentioned". The counsel for the petitioner submitted that the bail application had become infructuous as the petitioner had been taken into custody by police from Gujarat and produced before the concerned Magistrate at Rajkot city. The aforesaid submission of the counsel for the petitioner is correct and the bail application is liable to be disposed of as infructuous. However, in view of the question of law involved in the matter, it is appropriate to decide the question of law raised in the petition.

2. It is alleged that the petitioner had committed an offence under S. 408, Indian Penal Code. The case was registered as Malaviya P. S. case No. 149/98 in the State of Gujarat. It is alleged that the said offence had been committed by the petitioner while he was serving in a private Company in Rajkot city. It is further alleged that police officials of Malaviya P. S. arrested the petitioner with the assistance of local police at Patkura and the petitioner was produced in the Court of the S. D. J. M., Kendrapara. The bail application of the petitioner was rejected by the S. D. J. M., Kendrapara. Thereafter, the petitioner filed bail application before the Additional Sessions Judge, Kendrapara, which was rejected on the ground that the alleged offence had been committed in Gujarat and, therefore, the Additional Sessions Judge at Kendrapara had no jurisdiction to release the petitioner on bail. Subsequently, a fresh application for bail was filed by the petitioner before the very same Additional Sessions Judge, Kendrapara, who again rejected the bail application stating that the earlier bail application had been rejected. Thereafter the petitioner filed the present bail application in this Court.

3. After the matter was heard and orders were reserved, the counsel for the petitioner was required to produce a copy of the earlier order passed by the Additional Sessions Judge. On perusal of the earlier order, it is found that the bail application was rejected only on the ground that the alleged offence had been committed in Gujarat and as such the Additional Sessions Judge, Kendrapara, had no jurisdiction. This observation of the Additional Sessions Judge, Kendrapara, cannot be considered to be correct. Even though the alleged offence was committed outside the State, the petitioner was arrested in Orissa and was produced before the Magistrate at Kendrapara. It seems that the petitioner was not arrested pursuant to any warrant issued by any Court beyond the jurisdiction of Orissa. In such a case, the warrant itself would have shown the nature of allegations as well as the substance of the materials, so that the application for bail, if any, by the arrested person can be dealt with by the Magistrate before whom the accused is produced. In such cases if the concerned Magistrate is prima facie satisfied that bail should be granted, the normal procedure is to grant bail for an interim period calling upon the accused to appear before the proper Court as indicated in the warrant itself. If accused would have been arrested pursuant to such warrant and Magistrate could have dealt with the matter in such manner, there cannot be any logic in stating that where an accused person is arrested by the police, even without warrant, the Magistrate or the higher Court will have no jurisdiction to deal with the accused person merely because the offence was alleged to have been committed beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. In such cases also the Magistrate has ample jurisdiction to consider the question of bail. Of course, such bail, if granted, must be for a temporary period to enable the accused person to appear before the proper Court within a fixed period and it would not be open to the Magistrate to reject the bail application by simply stating that the alleged offence had been committed beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. In the present case, the Additional Sessions Judge should have considered the matter from that angle. However, as already indicated, the application itself has become infructuous, as the petitioner during the pendency of the bail application in this Court had been taken into custody and produced before the proper Court in Gujarat.

4. Subject to aforesaid observation, the Criminal Misc. Case is disposed of as infructuous.

Order accordingly.

****

2006 CRI. L. J. 4332

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 K. N. BASHA, J. (Single Bench)

Cri. O. P. No. 6542 of 2006, D/- 15 -3 -2006.

Regupathi v. Govindan and Anr.

==========

A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.71, S.482 - INHERENT POWERS - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Dishonour Of Cheque - Anticipatory bail - Grant of - Issuance of non-bailable warrant directly by Magistrate without first issuing bailable warrant is illegal - Court in exercise of power under S. 482 granted anticipatory bail.

B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.71- Bail by police when warrant is issued by Court - The police officer, to whom the warrant had been forwarded for execution is given a discretion, from the person sought to be arrested, to take security under Section 71, Cr. P. C.

(Paras 8, 9)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras

2004 Mad LJ (Cri) 421 6

(1994) 2 Mad LW (Cri) 764 6

A. Balaguru, for Petitioner; V. Madhavan, Govt. Advocate (Crl. Side), for Respondents.

Judgement

ORDER :- The petitioner has come forward with this petition, praying to grant anticipatory bail for him on the ground that he is facing trial in C. C. No. 324 of 2004 on the file of the Court of Judicial Magistrate, Kallakuruchi, for the offence under S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act wherein a Non-Bailable Warrant is issued against him.

2. Heard both sides.

3. Mr. A. Balaguru, the learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the petitioner was not able to appear before the trial Court on 15-7-2005, though he was regularly appearing for all the dates of hearing, as a result of which, the learned Magistrate has issued a Non-Bailable Warrant against the petitioner.

4. The offence under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is a bailable one, since the same is punishable with imprisonment for a maximum period of two years. But, unfortunately, the learned Magistrate has issued non-bailable warrant without a preceding bailable warrant where the offence is bailable, is not in accordance with the scheme of the Criminal Procedure Code and hence illegal. Therefore, while exercising the power conferred under Sec. 87, Cr. P. C. and issuing a warrant, in a case of bailable offence, the Magistrate shall always issue at the first instance a bailable warrant (including the endorsement provided under S. 71, Cr. P. C.). If the person does not appear before the Court even after execution of bailable warrant, and only then the Magistrate may issue a non-bailable warrant.

5. Section 71 of the Code of Criminal Procedure reads as follows :

"Power to direct security to be taken :

(1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct by endorsement on the warrant that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security and shall release such person from custody.

(2) The endorsement shall state-

(a) the number of sureties;

(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued, are to be respectively bound;

(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court.

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the officer to whom the warrant is directed shall forward the bond to the Court."

6. The decision of a learned single Judge of this Court is brought to my notice reported in 1994-2-LW (Cri) 764 in J. K. S. Manickam v. The Inspector of Police, Kumarapalayam, Salem District and another. The learned single Judge of this Court held that Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is bailable offence and the anticipatory bail petition is not maintainable. But the learned Judge has observed that the power under S. 71 of the Cr. P. C. may be exercised by the Magistrate as well as by the police officers concerned and thereby indicating that the execution of the non-bailable warrant by arresting the concerned persons is not necessary. The learned Judge made the following observation in the above cited decision :

" ..... it is rather crystal clear that the police officer, to whom the warrant had been forwarded for execution is given a discretion, from the person sought to be arrested, to take security under Section 71, Cr. P. C."

Another decision of this Court reported in 2004 MLJ (Cri) 421 in R. Sarathkumar v. The Inspector of Police, C-9 Police Station, Neelankarai, Chennai is also brought to my notice. The learned Judge in that decision has also considered the earlier decision of this Court, extracted supra, and held that though the offence under S. 138 is a bailable one, the Court is empowered to grant anticipatory bail to a person, against whom NBW was issued by the Magistrate. This Court has held, in that decision, as follows :

"Therefore this Court, exercising the power under S. 482 read with 438, Cr. P. C. has the power to grant anticipatory bail, since non-bailable warrant has been issued by the Magistrate for a bailable offence."
7. The learned Judge has also held in the decision, as cited supra, that,
"Non-bailable warrant issued without a preceding bailable warrant where the offence is bailable is not in accordance with the scheme of the Criminal Procedure Code and hence illegal. Therefore, while exercising the power conferred under S. 87, Cr. P.C. and issuing a warrant, in a case of bailable offence, the Magistrate shall always issue at the first instance a bailable warrant (including the endorsement provided under S. 71, Cr. P.C.). If the person does not appear before the Court even after execution of bailable warrant, then, and only then the Magistrate may issue a non-bailable warrant. Therefore, in all cases under S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, though it is possible or there is no legal infirmity for the Magistrate to issue a non-bailable warrant for the reasons to be recorded in writing, yet, considering the bailable nature of the offence under S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act the Magistrate shall always issue "bailable warrant" at the first instance. For the above reasons there appears no reason or no circumstances warranting the issue of non-bailable warrant in this case."
8. The above said proposition laid down by this Court is squarely applicable to the instance case, wherein the learned Magistrate, instead of following the procedure contemplated under S. 71 of the Cr. P.C., has, straightway issued NBW against the petitioner, who is facing trial only under S. 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, as a result of which, this Court is having power to grant anticipatory bail to the petitioner, by invoking S. 482 of the Cr. P.C. also.
9. Considering the facts and circumstances of the case, I am inclined to release the petitioner on anticipatory bail in the event of his arrest on his executing a bond for a sum of Rs. 10,000/- (Rupees Ten Thousand only) together with two sureties each for a like sum to the satisfaction of the Judicial Magistrate, Kallakurichi.
The petitioner shall surrender before the Court referred to above, for executing the bond and furnishing sureties within two weeks from the date of receipt of a copy of this order, failing which, this order shall stand cancelled.
Order accordingly.
****

LAWS(KAR)-2000-4-39=ILR(Kar)-2000-0-4000

HIGH COURT OF KARNATAKA

Coram :- S.R.Venkatesha Murthy J.

Decided on April 04, 2000
CRIMINAL PETITION 999 of 2000

M.B.Ponnappa VS. State Of Karnataka

==========

Cri. P.C. Section 436 or 437- Bail to accused against WHOM warrant of arrest is issued by the Court - WHEN an accused, against whom a warrant of arrest has been issued, appears before the court where the offences are neither punishable with death nor imprisonment for life nor otherwise of a grave nature, the magistrate should examine granting interim bail till such time as objections, if any, are filed by the prosecution and thereafter decide on the merits of the bail application

WHEN an accused, against whom a warrant of arrest has been issued, appears before the court which has issued the warrant of arrest, he could be dealt with under Section 436 or 437 of the code as the case may be. An inflexible notion seems to have developed that such an accused person has to be remanded to judicial custody till such time as the objection of the prosecutor is heard on the bail application, resulting in hardship to accused, who are as a matter routine, would be otherwise entitled to bail. Denial of bail is not to be used as punishment to an accused who would otherwise be eligible for bail where the offences are neither punishable with death nor imprisonment for life nor otherwise of a grave nature, the magistrate should examine granting interim bail till such time as objections, if any, are filed by the prosecution and thereafter decide on the merits of the bail application

==========

JUDGEMENT

1. GOVERNMENT pleader is directed to take notice.
2. HEARD the counsel for the petitioner and the government pleader for the state.

The petitioner who is an accused in cc No. 130 of 1995 on the file of J. M. F. C. , Madikeri for offences under sections 189, 332 and 506 (1) of the IPC was released on bail on 20-2-1995 at the investigation stage with conditions. Later conditions of bail were relaxed and the petitioner was directed to appear before court on being summoned. On a final report being filed, summons were issued to the accused. The accused petitioner claims that on account of mental illness, he could not appear before court, being treated in different hospitals at mysore, Bangalore, udupi and the nimhans, Bangalore and in kerala. Meanwhile, the sureties being unable to trace and produce the accused, paid the penalty imposed on them by the court. The case was transferred to the long pending case register, with no immediate prospect of apprehension of the petitioner. A non-bailable warrant for arrest of the petitioner, as per rules, is pending with the police. The petitioner's apprehension is that when he appears before the court to face trial of the offence alleged, he would be taken to judicial custody resulting in aggravation of his illness. The petitioner's prayer is that the order dated 20-1-2000 for his arrest on transfer of the case to long pending case register be set aside and to enquire into his mental condition.

Normally an accused person who is shown to be an evader from Justice would not be entitled to indulgence of bail, unless he is able to demonstrate that he is really not an absconder and there are circum stances in mitigation of his absence from court. This is, essentially a question of fact to be found by the magistrate on a bail application being moved by the accused declared to be an absconder. In the instant case, petitioner has pleaded that he could not respond to the summons to the court on- account of his mental illness described as 'maniac depression this circumstance could be pleaded before trial court to persuade it to treat the petitioner with the indulgence of not being remanded to judicial custody pending consideration of an application for bail.

3. WHEN an accused, against whom a warrant of arrest has been issued, appears before the court which has issued the warrant of arrest, he could be dealt with under Section 436 or 437 of the code as the case may be. An inflexible notion seems to have developed that such an accused person has to be remanded to judicial custody till such time as the objection of the prosecutor is heard on the bail application, resulting in hardship to accused, who are as a matter routine, would be otherwise entitled to bail. Denial of bail is not to be used as punishment to an accused who would otherwise be eligible for bail. In these days jails filled with undertrials beyond all decent levels of confinement, the power of remand should be judiciously exercised by the magistrate, so that an accused who is willing to offer bail to the satisfaction of the court, is not pushed into the jail needlessly. It would be indeed necessary, where the offences are neither punishable with death nor imprisonment for life nor otherwise of a grave nature, the magistrate should examine granting interim bail till such time as objections, if any, are filed by the prosecution and thereafter decide on the merits of the bail application. This approach would not only be humane but also would help in avoiding infliction of needless misery on accused who would ultimately be entitled to bail. These considerations should inform the court in their approach to bail matters, so that an eminently avoidable remand to judicial custody pending consideration of a bail application, is prevented. Offences of such nature as are alleged to be committed in this case are not unusual and when the accused submits to the court's jurisdiction and seeks bail, it is a matter for court to impose such conditions as are sufficient to ensure presence at the trial.

In the instant case, the petitioner's alleged illness would have to be taken into consideration by the magistrate, while passing orders on the application for bail and the magistrate may consider granting interim bail till the disposal of his application for bail, on the basis of the observations made herein. In terms stated above, the petition is allowed.

****

Cross Citation :1998 DCR 249, ILR 1997 KAR 2560

KARNATAKA HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V M Kumar,J

K. Pandarinathan ….VS…. V. Raju And Another on 8/7/1997

==========

Summons Case – N. I. Act – Sec. 138 – When accused appears pursuant to the Summons issued by court there is no need for him to move bail application and furnish personal bond – Impugned order asking accused to furnish security for his enlargement is illegal – Order quashed.

==========

JUDGEMENT

ORDER

1. The petitioner challenges Annexure D endorsement issued by the 2nd respondent. A complaint was made by the 1st respondent with respect to an offence committed by the petitioner, punishable under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. Annexure C is the summons issued to the petitioner to appear before the 2nd respondent on 2-5-1997. The petitioner alleges that he appeared on 2-5-1997, but the Presiding Officer was on leave. Thereafter, the matter stood adjourned to 30-5-1997. On that day, the accused was present along with his counsel. It is seen that on that day the impugned order was passed by the 2nd respondent in the following manner :

"Accused present. No bail petition filed, hence the accused is remanded to J.C. Call on 13-6-97.

Sd/-

II A.C.M.M.

Bail petition filed, the accused is released on executing P.B., and S.B., of Rs. 10,000/-. Surety not furnished, hence the accused is remanded to J.C. till 13-6-97.

Sd/-

11 A.C.M.M."

2. It is this endorsement that is challenged by the petitioner in these proceedings.

3. It is urged by the petitioner that the copy of the complaint was not furnished to him along with the summons. Normally, as provided under Sub-section (3) of Section 204 of the Cr.P.C., in a proceeding instituted upon a complaint made in writing, every summons or warrant issued under Sub-section (1) shall be accompanied by a copy of such complaint. It means, there is a means for the accused to know what is the complaint arraigned against him what are the charges he is to face and whether it is a bailable or non-bailable offence alleged etc., etc. This is also necessary because he should decide as to whether the summons is issued in a warrant case or summons case and to know the necessity to avail bail. As can be seen from the Code, S. 2(w), Cr.P.C., defines "summons case" and S. 2(x) defines "warrant case". In a warrant case, the punishment involved is imprisonment for a term exceeding two years. The allegation made in the complaint as could be seen from the Lawyer Notice Annexures A and B is that the offence involves of an offence wherein the punishment of less than two years and therefore it is a summons case. Normally a warrant could not have been issued to the petitioner at the first instance in a given case. If that be the position, to secure the presence of the accused, there was no need to issue Annexure D order calling upon the petitioner to get himself enlarged on bail. That is totally unwarranted. In a summons case, if the accused appears in pursuance to the summons issued by the Court, and is present in the Court, there is no need for him to move a bail application or furnish personal Bond for his subsequent appearance. Such procedure is not contemplated under law.

4. Mr. N. K. Ramesh, learned Government Pleader appearing on behalf of respondent No. 2, submitted that Section 88 of the Cr.P.C. empowers the Magistrate to call upon the accused to furnish bond, security or bail for his release. Section 88 reads as follows :

"Sec. 88. Power to take bond for appearance : When any person for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant, is present in such Court, such Officer may require such person to execute a bond, with or without sureties for his appearance in such Court, or any other Court to which the case may be transferred for trial."

1. A careful reading of Section 88 would disclose that it does not apply to the situation as in hand. The section indicates that if a person is present in a Court in connection with a case or otherwise and the Officer presiding the Court is entitled to issue summons or warrant to secure his presence, then he may direct that person to execute a bond for his presence in his Court on a later date or to secure his presence in some other Court notwithstanding the fact that his presence in the Court at the relevant time is not in connection with that case for which he is being bound over. That is to say, if a person required to be arrested or detailed in connection with some other case either before him or elsewhere is present in his Court, then the Presiding Officer in whose Court he is present, has power to issue warrant calling him to execute bond for his appearance in future. It is not that situation that is present here and Sec. 88 can, therefore, have no application. In this case the presence of the accused is secured in pursuance to the summons issued by the Court in the very case he is asked to appear. As long as the warrant has not been issued to the accused and when the accused was present along with his counsel in response to the summons, there was no need for the 2nd respondent to have passed Annexure D endorsement calling upon the accused to furnish security for his enlargement. Annexure D endorsement issued by the 2nd respondent is illegal and liable to be quashed. I, therefore, quash Annexure D endorsement and dispose of the writ petition. Whatever amount that is deposited by the petitioner in terms of the impugned order will be ordered to be returned to him.

****

Index Note :- Change in circumstances for Second or successive bail application :-

Second or successive application is maintainable if there is change in fact situation or in law or where earlier finding has become obsolete.

2005 Cr.L.J 944(SC) FB.

****

Cross Citation :2000 (I) RCR (Cri) 399,1999-TLMPH-0-106 , 1999-MPL.J.-2-663

HIGH COURT OF MADHYA PRADESH
Hon'ble Judge(s) : R.S. Garg, J.

Mohan Raikwar .....V/s…. State of M.P.

M. Cri. Case 2286 of 1999 Of Apr 19,1999

==========

A] Cases triable by the Magistrate- Factor to be taken in to consideration while dealing with the bail application - Cases in which 7 years or more punishment is provided are triable by Magistrate First Class who has the jurisdiction to award the maximum sentence of 3 years- This factor has to be taken in to consideration while dealing with the bail application - The Magistrate or the Sessions Judge, while considering the application for grant of bail are also required to see whether the offence is triable by First Class Magistrate or by the Court of Session- They should not forget that many of the cases in which 7 years or more punishment is provided are triable by Magistrate First Class who has the jurisdiction to award the maximum sentence of 3 years. At this stage the court considering the bail application must not forget that if the accused is ultimately convicted he cannot be awarded a sentence of more than 3 years.

B] Cr. P.C. SS. 437, 439 – Change in circumstance- Delay is change in circumstances - Second bail application not to be dismissed on the ground that previous application was rejected on merits – Each days delay and detention of accused should be taken as relevant consideration while considering the second application –The court considering the application must again look into the facts, the nature of the allegation, character of the evidence collected and should also see whether the allegations made are making out a prima facie case against the accused or the allegations even on their face entitle the accused to bail. There may be cases where on the first occasion considering the totality of the circumstances the Judge may reject the bail but after filing of the Challan or after discharge of the complainant from the hospital or after recovery of certain articles or after collection of certain other evidence the accused may be in a position to persuade the Judge to admit him to bail. It is not possible for this Court to give a myriad example but the court while applying its wisdom to the facts of the case must not forget that it has a discretion to grant bail and unless very strong evidence is produced before the Court, the personal liberty of the accused should not be interfered by unnecessarily keeping him in jail. ' A Judge while deciding the application should not derive a sadistic pleasure in keeping the person in jail and he should not reject the application just for nothing. In a case like present the rejection of the application, on the ground that the earlier application was rejected after considering the merits, was not only contrary to the provisions of law but shows non-application of mind.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) ARGUMENTS heard.

(2.) CASE Diary of Crime No. 117/99 registered at Police Station, Seoni, for the offences punishable under Sections 323, 294, 506 -II of the Indian Penal Code, read with Section 3/4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, perused.

(3.) THE prayer shows that barring Section 506-11 of the Indian Penal Code, all other offences are bailable. It is unfortunate that for an offence punishable under Sections 323, 294, 506-II of the Indian Penal Code, and Section 3/4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act, the accused has to remain in jail, in absence of an order of bail, from 13-3-1999. The petitioner had moved this application for grant of bail as his application for release has been rejected by the learned Trial Judge and, thereafter, the application was rejected by the learned First Additional Sessions Judge on 17-3-1999. The repeat prayer has been rejected by the learned Additional Sessions Judge on 13-4-1999 simply on the ground that the earlier application was rejected on merits and there were no changed circumstances. The attention of the learned Judicial Magistrate and the Additional Sessions Judge are drawn to Section 503 of the Indian Penal Code, which defines Criminal Intimidation as under :

"whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm to that person or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do, as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat, commits criminal intimidation. The explanation provides that a threat to injure the reputation of any deceased person in whom the person threatened is interested, is within this section. "

(4.) FROM a perusal of the definition it would appear that the threat must be with intent to cause alarm to that person or to cause that person to do any act or omit to do any act. Section 506 is in two parts. It reads as under :" whoever commits the offence of criminal intimidation shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both. "

(5.) THIS part of Section 506 is commonly known as 506-A. The second part of Section 506 which is commonly described as 506-B provides that :

"if the threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, or to cause the destruction of any property by fire, or to cause an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 7 years, or to impute unchastity to a woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both. "

(6.) THE ingredients required to be stated in the first information report and to be proved during the course of the trial are that the accused threatened some persons with injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person, reputation or property to another in whom that person is interested or threat was to cause death or grievous hurt etc. The intimidation must be extended with intention to cause alarm to that person. The first information report in the present case says that the complainant had contracted marriage of his daughter with Mohan Raikwar. The marriage was to be performed on 12-3-1999 but abruptly the said Mohan Raikwar made a demand of gold chain which the complainant was unable to meet. The complaint further reads that the 'barat' which was taking food and had not finished when the said Mohan Raikwar caused some injury to Satish, brother of the bride and at that point of time the said Mohan Raikwar refused to take the bride with him. On being asked not to do so the accused started abusing and caused an intimidation to kill. There was a written report lodged on 12-3-1999 itself at about 9 P. M. From the case diary it appears that the police came to the spot and compelled the accused to take the bride with him. On 12-3-1999 and 14-3-1999 the prosecution agency recorded the statement of some witnesses. On the report the accused was arrested on 13-3-1999. What is to be seen from the first information report is whether the complainant was in fact alarmed or the threat was an empty threat or was one to persuade the father-in-law of the accused to give something in dowry. From the first information report it no- where appears that the accused was armed with any weapon lethal or ordinary or he had done some act which stunned the complainant or other persons or caused an alarm in the mind of the complainant that if he was not to meet the demand of dowry he was to suffer grievous injury or the accused was likely to kill him. In absence of this material allegation for the purpose of this bail petition it can straightaway be said that the offence under Section 506-II of the Indian Penal Code, is not made out. The police in our country may register any offence against any person less realising that whether the offence is 'prima facie' made or not, because they have been trained to do so, but it is expected of a Magistrate and specially of an Additional Sessions Judge who has at least 10 or more years experience as a Judge that in what case bail should and should not be granted. It is high time to remind the Judges of the Lower Judiciary that they are required to exercise the powers which they possess and not to refuse to exercise the powers, vested in them, just for one reason or the other.

(7.) THE learned Judge hearing the second petition does not lose his jurisdiction to grant bail. The changed circumstances do not mean some extra ordinary changes. Each day's confinement, each day's delay and each day's detention of the petitioner should be taken as a relevant consideration while considering the second application. I fail to understand that why without applying the mind to the facts of the case the Magistrate and the Additional Sessions Judge rejected the bail application. When a bail application is under consideration the Judge deciding the application is not only required to read the allegations made against the accused, but is also required to see whether prima facie the offence with which the accused is charged are made out or not. At one side a Judge rejects the application without reading the facts observing that it was likely to prejudice the case of the accused or the prosecution and while considering the second application he rejects the same observing that the first application was rejected on merits.

(8.) THE Magistrate or the Sessions Judge, while considering the application for grant of bail are also required to see whether the offence is triable by Magistrate First Class or by the Court of Session. They should not forget that many of the cases in which 7 years or more punishment is provided are triable by Magistrate First Class who has the jurisdiction to award the maximum sentence of 3 years. At this stage the court considering the bail application must not forget that if the accused is ultimately convicted he cannot be awarded a sentence of more than 3 years. The court considering the application must again look into the facts, the nature of the allegation, character of the evidence collected and should also see whether the allegations made are making out a prima facie case against the accused or the allegations even on their face entitle the accused to bail. There may be cases where on the first occasion considering the totality of the circumstances the Judge may reject the bail but after filing of the Challan or after discharge of the complainant from the hospital or after recovery of certain articles or after collection of certain other evidence the accused may be in a position to persuade the Judge to admit him to bail. It is not possible for this Court to give a myriad example but the court while applying its wisdom to the facts of the case must not forget that it has a discretion to grant bail and unless very strong evidence is produced before the Court, the personal liberty of the accused should not be interfered by unnecessarily keeping him in jail. ' A Judge while deciding the application should not derive a sadistic pleasure in keeping the person in jail and he should not reject the application just for nothing. In a case like present the rejection of the application, on the ground that the earlier application was rejected after considering the merits, was not only contrary to the provisions of law but shows non-application of mind.

(9.) THE application deserves to and is accordingly allowed. Petitioner Mohan Raikwar be released immediately on his furnishing personal bond in the sum of Rs. 5,000/- (Rs. Five Thousand, only) with one surety in the like amount, to the satisfaction of C. J. M. Seoni for his appearance before the trial Court as and when ordered.

(10.) LET a copy of this order be sent to the learned Magistrate before whom the matter is pending for trial and to the Additional Sessions Judge who had rejected the repeat application filed by the accused for understanding the letter of law in its true perspective. C. C. as per rules.
****

Cross Citation :2005-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-12 , 2004-Cri.L.J.4576

HIGH COURT OF MADHYA PRADESH

Hon'ble Judge(s) : A.K.GOHIL,J

Yuvraj Gaud ….V/s….State of Madhya Pradesh

Misc.Cri 1387 Of 2004, May 14,2004

==========

Cr. P.C. Sec. 438 – I.P.C. 420, 467, 468, 471, 120 (B) –Bail should not be withheld as a punishement – The requirement of bail is to secure the attendance of the prisoner at trial - Anticipatory Bail –Accused entitled to be granted with anticipatory bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Applicant is seeking anticipatory bail under S. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, in a private complaint case No. 40/2003, pending in the Court of Judicial Magistrate First Class, Vijaypur, district Sheopure, for the offences under Ss. 420, 467, 468, 471 and 120-B of Indian Penal Code. Earlier M.Cr.C. No. 2795/03 was disposed of with a direction to the applicant to appear before the trial Court and to furnish bail, as he was summoned through bailable warrant.

(2.) The submission of the learned counsel for the applicant is that the offence un- under S. 467, I.P.C. though is triable by Magistrate First Class but is a non-cognizable and non-bailable offence and punishment of imprisonment of life or imprisonment of ten years and fine has been prescribed, therefore, the Magistrate First Class is not having jurisdiction to grant the bail in cases where sentence of imprisonment for life has been prescribed for a particular offence and if the applicant will appear even after issue of bailable warrant, he shall be arrested and shall be committed to prison. Additional Sessions Judge, Sabalgarh has already rejected his anticipatory bail application.

(3.) It is further contended that the applicant is a Patwari and respondent No. 2- complainant has filed a private complaint against this applicant along with two others on the ground that the land bearing Survey No. 104, admeasuring 5 bighas and 14 biswas, situated at Patwari Halka No. 20, village Barakalan, Tehsil Vijaypur, District Sheopure has been recorded as a Government land reserved for Government pond. Every year Government is auctioning this land and from 1997 complainant is taking the land in auction and cultivating but in the meantime the applicant and Naib Tehsildar in connivance have granted Patta over this land to Adjuddibai w/o Ramratan. The Naib Tehsildar was not having any right to allot the Patta of the said land, as he was functioning as In-charge Tehsildar on that day. He has allotted this land with the connivance of the applicant who is Patwari and the applicant has not supplied copy of the Patta or the allotment letter or the entries made in the revenue record to respondent No. 2, therefore, they have committed offence of cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property causing wrongful loss to the State and it is a case of forgery of valuable security for the purpose of cheating.

(4.) Learned Judicial Magistrate has registered a private complaint and firstly directed issuance of bailable warrant and thereafter directed to issue warrant of arrest against the applicant. It was further submitted that this Court has already granted anticipatory bail to Yashendra Singh Chouhan, who is the Naib Tehsildar and Smt. Ajuddi Bai, who is the allottee of the land. It is further contended that prima facie no offence under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 with 120-B, I.P.C. for cheating or dishonestly inducing the delivery of property or causing wrongful loss to the complainant or regarding forgery of valuable security or will or forgery for the purpose of cheating or criminal conspiracy is made out against the applicant. He has not granted any Patta. If he has made some entries in the revenue record, they have been made on the basis of the order passed by Naib Tehsildar. It is the Government land and complainant is not having any interest and is also not having any locus standi to file the criminal complaint, as no offence is committed against the complainant.

(5.) Miss Sudha Shrivastava, learned panel lawyer, appearing for the respondent State opposed this application on the ground that this is second application for anticipatory bail, therefore, it is not maintainable and liable to be dismissed.

(6.) Copy of the criminal complaint has been produced on record. In the complaint, allegation of criminal conspiracy in granting Patta has been levied against the applicant and it has been stated that the Naib Tehsildar with the connivance of the applicant has granted Patta in favour of Ajuddibai and applicant made entries in the revenue record and has not supplied copy of the said record to the complainant.

(7.) The legislative mandate of S. 438, Cr. P.C. for grant of anticipatory bail for a person, who is apprehending his arrest, has already been mentioned in the section itself. In proper cases on judicial scrutiny and after exercising judicial discretion the Court may grant anticipatory bail and impose appropriate conditions as laid down under S. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(8.) Though at the stage of pre-arrest and pre-trial bail the matter may be of judicial discretion but in view of the decision in the case of Gudikanti Narasimhulu v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P. (AIR 1978 SC 429), the Court is required to consider the nature of charge, nature of prima facie evidence and material collected during investigation or enquiry and punishment to which the party may be liable if convicted. Nature of charge is vital factor and evidence is pertinent. The Court may also consider whether the course of justice would be thwafted by him who seeks the benignant jurisdiction of the Court to be freed for the time being. The legal principle and practice validate the Court considering the likelihood of the applicant interfering with witnesses for the complainant or otherwise polluting the process of justice. Though it is not only traditional but rational, in this context, to enquire into the antecedents of a man who is applying for bail to find whether he has a bad and criminal record, particularly a record which suggests that he is likely to commit serious offences while on bail. In regard to habituals, criminological history may also be considered and the criminal record of applicant is, therefore, not an exercise in irrelevance. The deprivation of freedom by refusal of bail is not for punitive purpose but for the bi-focal interests of justice, to the individual involved and society affected. The Judge is also required to consider that mechanical detention should be demoted and public justice is to be promoted. The period already spent in prison is to be kept in mind and the bail is not to be withheld as a punishment, but the requirements as to bail are to secure the attendance of the prisoner at trial.

(9.) As regards the objection raised by learned Panel Lawyer for the State that second application for grant of anticipatory bail is not maintainable under the law, in fact this contention has already been negatived by the Supreme Court in the case of Baboo Singh (1978 Cri L.J. 651) : (AIR 1978 SC 527) and Division Bench of this High Court in the case of Imratlal Vishwakarma v. State of M.P., reported in 1996 JL.J. 642. This Court after considering the various decisions has held that the second application for anticipatory bail under S. 438, Cr. P.C. is maintainable. The second application filed under S. 438, Cr. P.C. has to be decided on its merits even if earlier application was als dismissed on merits. No such fetters can be put or applied on the second petition that it can only be considered when it was withdrawn, or was rejected having been not pressed. It shall, however, be open for the Court to reject it even summarily on the ground that the said second petition is nothing but a repetition of the earlier petition and no new ground has been disclosed in the second petition. It was considered that in Babusingh's case (supra), the Supreme Court was considering a second application after one such application was earlier rejected. It was then ruled that an order refusing an application for bail does not necessarily preclude another, on a later occasion, giving more materials, and further development. It was also held that the Court is not barred from its second consideration at a later stage and that an interim direction is not a conclusive adjudication and that an updated reconsideration is not overturning an earlier negation. Second application was entertained. It was considered that in view of the aforesaid dictum the second application for grant of anticipatory bail under S. 438 was maintainable and it was held that the earlier rejection is not conclusive. The Court may consider the second bail application on account of subsequent events and developments.

(10.) In the case of Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, reported in AIR 1980 SC 1632. Constitution Bench of the Apex Court has considered the distinction between the ordinary order of bail and order of anticipatory bail. The Apex Court has held that a blanket order of anticipatory bail should not generally be passed. A belief can be said to be founded on reasonable ground only if there is something tangible to go by on the basis of which it can be said that the applicant's apprehension that he may be arrested is genuine. It is necessary that specific events and facts must be disclosed by the applicant in order to enable to Court to Judge the reasonableness of his belief, the existence of which is the sine qua non of the exercise of power conferred by the section. The Court which grants anticipatory bail must take care to specify the offence or offences in respect of which alone the order will be effective and the power should not be exercised in a vacuum. The order should be limited to a short period until after filing of the F.I.R. In respect of the matter covered by the order and necessary conditions should be satisfied. The applicant must show that he has reason to believe that he may be arrested for a non-bailable offence. Supreme Court has clearly observed that anticipatory bail is a device to scure the individual's liberty; it is neither a passport to the commission of crimes nor a shield against any and all kinds of accusations, likely or unlikely. The Court must apply its own mind to the question and decide whether a case has been made out for granting such relief or not.

(11.) From the aforesaid discussion and in view of the aforesaid decisions of the Apex Court as well as of the Division Bench of this High Court, it is clear that second application under S. 438, Cr. P.C. is not barred and is tenable but the same has to be considered on the parameters laid down by the Apex Court as well as by the Division Bench of this Court.

(12.) Thus, considering the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case that the applicant was summoned initially through bailable warrant in a private complaint case and subsequently by a warrant of arrest and that the applicant is a Government servant and looking to the allegations in the private complaint and considering the aforesaid discussions without commenting on the merits of the case of this stage of pre-arrest bail, this application for grant of anticipatory bail under S. 438, Cr. P.C. is allowed on the following conditions : "

(i) that, the applicant shall appear before the Magistrate First Class, before whom the private complaint is pending, within a period of fifteen days and shall furnish bail for the amount as may be fixed by the Magistrate;

(ii) that, the applicant shall regularly appear before the Magistrate and co-operate in the quick disposal of the private complaint;

(iii) that, the applicant shall not, directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer on enquiry.

Petition allowed

****

Cross Citation : 2008-CRIMES-4-327 , 2008-ILR(Ker)-3-604

HIGH COURT OF KERALA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R.Basant, J

Sreekumar ….V/s….State of Kerala

Crl.M.C. 3056 of 2008 Of, Aug 13,2008

==========

Bail – Remand of accused to custody when he appears before court – Held - when a Court issues summons and not a warrant in a non – baillable case – then the accused should be released on bail when he appears before the Court - he should not be committed to custody.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) IS a court which has chosen to exercise its discretion under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. to issue a summons and not a warrant to an accused facing allegations of commission of a non-bailable warrant offence justified or correct in remanding such an accused to custody when he appears in court despite the fact that he is willing to offer bail? This question is thrown up for consideration in this Crl. M. C.

(2.) THE petitioner, along with the co-accused, faces allegations in a crime registered alleging offences punishable, inter alia, under Sec. 326 read with Sec. 149 ipc and Sec. 27 of the Arms Act. According to the petitioner, he is a cancer patient undergoing treatment from 2003. The police were not too convinced about the involvement of the petitioner or the need to arrest the petitioner. Considering the circumstances of the petitioner, the police, it is submitted, have filed a final report without formally arresting the petitioner and releasing him on bail. Final report has been filed. Cognisance has been taken. The learned Judicial Magistrate of the First class-I, Punalur, has issued a summons to the petitioner under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. The petitioner is to appear before the learned Magistrate on 26-8-2008. He has now come to this Court with this petition seeking directions under Sec. 482 Cr. P. C.

(3.) WHAT is the nature of directions that the petitioner wants? The learned counsel for the petitioner submits that there is a practice in that court that notwithstanding the fact that only a summons has been issued under Sec. 204 cr. P. C. accused persons appearing in response to such summons will be remanded to custody for the short reason that the police have shown them as absconding. Apprehending the same treatment at the hands of the learned Magistrate, the petitioner has now come before this Court.

(4.) I find it difficult to accept that such practice can be in vogue in any court. I extract Sec. 204 (1) Cr. P. C. below:

"204. Issue of process.- (1) If in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognisance of an offence there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be- (a) a summons-case, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused, or (b) a warrant-case, he may issue a warrant, or. if he thinks fit, a summons, for causing the accused to be brought or to appear at a certain time before such magistrate or (if he has no jurisdiction himself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction. " (emphasis supplied)

When a court issues summons and not a warrant under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. in a non-bailable warrant offence, I must assume that the learned Magistrate must have advisedly exercised the discretion under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. to issue a summons and not a warrant. If a warrant were issued against him, the petitioner would certainly have been entitled, in the light of the dictum in Bharat Chaudhary and another v. State of Bihar (A. I. R. 2003 S. C. 4662), to move the Superior Courts for anticipatory bail. Having chosen to exercise the discretion under sec. 204 Cr. P. C. in favour of the petitioner and having issued only a summons to the accused, it appears to me to be heartless, insensitive and harsh for any court to remand an accused person who has come to court on the invitation extended to him by the court by issuing a summons. That procedure is shockingly unreasonable and should not be pursued by any court. Having exercised the discretion under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. to issue only a summons and having led the accused by such conduct to believe that he can safely appear before court on invitation, it would be impermissible for any court thereafter to turn turtle and remand the accused to custody. Issue of summons by exercise of the discretion under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. does firmly and eloquently convey that the accused person on appearance shall not be detained unnecessarily if he is willing and prepared to offer bail. The courts will have to be careful at the stage of exercising the discretion under Sec. 204 Cr. P. C. and cannot take parties by surprise when they appear before court in response to an innocuous summons issued by the court. This must be so whether the offence is triable by a Magistrate or not and whether the offence is bailable or not.

(5.) I have no reason to assume that such a practice is in vogue. No user friendly and humane court can afford to ignore the tragic plight of an accused person who receives a summons from the court, goes in search of the court and gets remanded to custody when he appears in court even though he is willing to offer bail. Such a person must certainly be granted bail when he appears and offers bail.

(6.) I do not, in these circumstances, want to issue any further directions under Sec. 482 Cr. P. C. as I do not assume or apprehend that the learned Magistrate would remand the petitioner to custody if he appears in response to the summons issued by the court and offers bail.

(7.) THIS Crl. M. C. is dismissed with the above observations.

****

Cross Citation :2005-SCC-7-226 , 2006-AIR(SCW)-0-4723

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : B.P.SINGH, S.H.KAPADIA,JJ

KAMAL.JIT SINGH ….V/s…..STATE OF PUNJAB

Criminal Appeal 807 Of 2005, Jul 11,2005

==========

Bail – Parity – Co-accused with similar allegations have been granted anticipatory bail – Held- the appellant entititled to be granted anticipatory bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Leave granted.

(2.) Heard the counsel for the parties. In the facts and circumstances of the case we are of the view that it is an appropriate case in which the application of the appellant for grant of anticipatory bail ought to have been allowed, particularly when on similar allegations the remaining two accused have been granted the benefit of anticipatory bail. In these circumstances the appeal is allowed and the appellant is directed to be released on bail in the event of arrest or surrender on his furnishing bail bonds to the satisfaction of the arresting officer or the Court, as the case may be, subject to the conditions laid down in Section 438 Cr. PC.

****

Cross Citation :2010-ALL MR(CRI) -0-2524

HIGH COURT BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V. M. KANADE, J.

Ashik Rameshchandra Shah ….V/s…. State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application No.5307 of 2009 Of Dec 04,2009

==========

Cr. P.C. & 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Interim Bail – Presence of accused – Held, the order directing accused to remain present can not be passed without granting interim bail to the accused.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Heard the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of the applicants and the learned APP appearing on behalf of the State.

(2.) On 24/11/2009, Sessions Court directed the applicants to remain present before the Court on 27/11/2009. However, oral prayer made by the applicants for protection from arrest till 27/11/2009 was rejected. On 25/11/2009, application for anticipatory bail was rejected in view of application for withdrawal of the anticipatory bail application filed by the applicants vide Exhibit-8. Applicants, therefore, apprehending arrest by the police were constrained to file this application in this Court.

(3.) An interesting question, therefore, which has been raised before this Court is whether power of the Sessions Court in Maharashtra to direct the applicant - accused to remain present can be exercised without taking into consideration the application for interim protection and the manner, method and circumstances in which the said power has to be exercised. Before taking into consideration the facts of the present case, therefore, it would be relevant to take into consideration the Maharashtra Amendment. In 1993, the State Government was pleased to amend section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which is a Central Act and the provisions viz. sub-sections (3) and (4) were inserted. The amended section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code reads as under :-

"438. Direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest.- (1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail, and that Court may after taking into consideration, inter alia, the following factors :-

(i) the nature and gravity or seriousness of the accusation as apprehended by the applicant;

(ii) the antecedents of the applicant including the fact as to whether he has, on conviction by a Court, previously undergone imprisonment for a term in respect of any cognizable offence;

(iii) the likely object of the accusation to humiliate or malign the reputation of the applicant by having him so arrested; and

(iv) the possibility of the applicant, if granted anticipatory bail, fleeing from justice, either reject the application forthwith or issue an interim order for the grant of anticipatory bail; Provided that, where the High Court, or as the case may be, the Court of Session has not passed any interim order under this sub-section or has rejected the application for grant of anticipatory bail, it shall be open to an officer in charge of a police station to arrest, without warrant the applicant on the basis of the accusation apprehended in such application.

(2) Where the High Court, or as the case may be, the Court of Session, considers it expedient to issue an interim order to grant anticipatory bail under sub-section (1) the Court shall indicate therein the date on which the application for grant of anticipatory bail shall be finally heard for passing an order thereon, as the Court may deem fit; and if the Court passes any order granting anticipatory bail, such order shall include, inter alia, the following conditions, namely:- (i) that the applicant shall make himself available for interrogation by a police officer as and when required; (ii) that the applicant shall not, directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the accusation against him so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer; (iii) that the applicant shall not leave India without the previous permission of the Court; and (iv) such other conditions as may be imposed under sub-section (3) of section 437 as if the bail was granted under that section.

(3) Where the Court grants an interim order under sub-section (1), it shall forthwith cause a notice, being not less than seven days' notice, together with a copy of such order to be served on the Public Prosecutor and the Commissioner of Police, or as the case may be, the concerned Superintendent of Police, with a view to give the Public Prosecutor a reasonable opportunity of being heard when the application shall be finally heard by the Court.

(4) The presence of the applicant seeking anticipatory bail shall be obligatory at the time of final hearing of the application and passing of final order by the Court, if on an application made to it by the Public Prosecutor, the Court considers such presence necessary in the interest of justice.

(5) On the date indicated in the interim order under sub-section (2), the Court shall hear the Public Prosecutor and the applicant and after due consideration of their contentions, it may either confirm modify or cancel the interim order made under sub-section (1)."

The distinguishing feature, therefore, so far as State of Maharashtra is concerned is that if an application is made by the Public Prosecutor to the Court seeking an order for securing presence of the applicant then the Court can pass an order after taking into consideration the fact that such presence is necessary in the interest of justice. The question which falls for consideration is : whether, provisions of sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 438 have to be read together ? In other words, whether it is open for the Court to direct the accused to remain present if such a request is made by the Public Prosecutor and refuse interim order to the accused.

(4.) Shri. Adhik Shirodkar, the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of applicants submitted that it is a well settled position in law that power which has to be exercised by the Sessions Courts and by the High Courts is concurrent power and that by virtue of practice which has been prevalent and by virtue of various judgments of various High Courts and Supreme Court, it has now been laid down that the applicant accused has to first approach the Sessions Court and, thereafter, he can approach the High Court and if such an application is made in the High Court, the said application has to be treated as fresh application. He submitted that in exceptional circumstances, the applicant may choose to apply directly to High Court under certain exceptional circumstances, otherwise the normal rule is to first approach the Sessions Court. In support of the said submission, he invited my attention to the judgments of various Courts which I shall refer to at the latter stage. He submitted that, therefore, as a result of the law laid down by the various courts including this court, applicant has no other option buy to approach the Sessions Court. He submitted that, however while exercising power under subsection (4) of section 438 (inserted by Maharashtra Amendment Act 24 of 1993 w.e.f. 28-7-1993) giving direction to the accused to remain present in Court, the Court has to consider the question of granting interim relief so as to protect him when he appears before the court, otherwise in view of various judgments of this Court and the Apex Court, it is open for the Investigating Officer to arrest the accused without warrant in cases where offence is a cogn

(5.) The learned APP appearing on behalf of the State, on the other hand, submitted that the Sessions Court had a discretion to consider the application made by the Public Prosecutor for the purpose of securing presence of the applicant. She submitted that the said provision has been incorporated in order to ensure that the accused is available for interrogation and that he does not abscond and, therefore, by virtue of such order, his presence is secured so that after securing his presence, the court can take into consideration whether the applicant is entitled to get an order of anticipatory bail or not. She submitted that if such an order is not passed the process of investigation would be hampered and valuable time would be lost during which time the applicant may get a chance to tamper with the evidence or to remain away throughout the process of investigation. She submitted that the power to consider the application for interim protection and the power to consider the application of the prosecution securing presence of the accused are two different aspects and, therefore, they are not dependent on each other.

(6.) After having heard the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of applicants and the learned APP appearing on behalf of the State and after taking into consideration various judgments on which reliance is placed by the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of applicants and from the conspectus of cases which have been cited before this Court, I am of the view that section 438 lays down the manner and method and circumstances under which order of pre-arrest can be passed or not passed. In that sense it is a self-contained Code and a scheme in itself and these provisions, therefore, have to be read as a whole and it cannot be said that provisions of sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 438 are mutually exclusive and operate in different ways. The Apex Court in Gurubaksh Singh Sibbia (supra) has observed in paragraphs 7, 26, 19, 16, 17, 42 and 43 as under :-

"(7) The facility which Section 438 affords is generally referred to as 'anticipatory bail', an expression which was used by the Law Commission in its 41st Report. Neither the section nor its marginal note so describes it but, the expression 'anticipatory bail' is convenient mode of conveying that it is possible to apply for bail in anticipation of arrest. Any order of bail can, of course, be effective only from the time of arrest because, to grant bail, as stated in Wharton's Law Lexicon is to 'set at liberty a person arrested or imprisoned, on security being taken for his appearance'. Thus, bail is basically release from restraint, more particularly, release from the custody of the police. The act of arrest directly affects freedom of movement of the person arrested by the police, and speaking generally, an order of bail gives back to the accused that freedom on condition that he will appear to take his trial. Personal recognisance, suretyship bonds and such other modalities are the means by which an assurance is secured from the accused that though he has been released on bail, he will present himself at the trial of offence or offences of which he is charged and for which he was arrested. The distinction between an ordinary order of bail and an order of anticipatory bail is that whereas the former is granted after arrest and therefore means release from the custody of the police, the latter is granted in anticipation of arrest and is therefore effective at the very moment of arrest. Police custody is a inevitable concomitant of arrest for non-bailable offences. An order of anticipatory bail constitutes, so to say, an insurance against police custody following upon arrest for offence or offences in respect of which the order is issued. In other words, unlike a post-arrest order of bail, it is pre-arrest legal process which directs that if the person in whose favour it is issued is thereafter arrested on the accusation in respect of which the direction is is.sued, he shall be released on bail. Section 46(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure which deals with how arrests are to be made, provides that in making the arrest, the police officer or other person making the arrest "shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word of action". A direction under Section 438 is intended to confer conditional immunity from his 'touch' or confinement."

"(26) We find a great deal of substance in Mr. Tarkunde's submission that since denial of bail amounts to deprivation of personal liberty, the court should lean against the imposition of unnecessary restrictions on he scope of Section 438, especially when no such restrictions have been imposed by the legislature in the terms of that section. Section 438 is a procedural provision which is concerned with the personal liberty of the individual, who is entitled to the benefit of the presumption of innocence since he is not,

"19. A great deal has been said by the High Court on the fifth proposition framed by it, according to which, inter alia, the power under Section 438 should not be exercised if the investigating agency can make a reasonable claim that it can secure incriminating material from information likely to be received from the offender under section 27 of the Evidence Act. According to the High Court, it is the right and the duty of the police to investigate into offences brought to their notice and, therefore, courts should be careful not to exercise their powers in a manner which is calculated to cause interference therewith. It is true that the functions of the judiciary and the police are in a sense complementary and not overlapping. As observed by the Privy Council in King-Emperor Vs. Khwaja Nazir Ahmed [1943-44)71 IA 203 : AIR 1945 PC 18 : 46 Cri.L.J. 413]. Just as it is essential that every one accused of a crime should have free access to a court of justice so that he may be duly acquitted if found not guilty of the offence with which he is charged, so it is of the utmost importance that the judiciary should not interfere with the police in matters which are within their province and into which the law imposes on them the duty of inquiry .....The functions of the judiciary and the police are complementary, not overlapping, and the combination of the individual liberty with a due observance of law and order is only to be obtained by leaving each to exercise its own function,... But these remarks, may it be remembered, were made by the Privy Council while rejecting the view of the Lahore High Court that it had inherent jurisdiction under the old Section 561-A, Criminal Procedure Code, to quash all proceedings taken by the police in pursuance of two first information reports made to them. An order quashing such proceedings puts an end to the proceedings with the inevitable result that all investigation into the accusation comes to a halt. Therefore, it was held that the court cannot, in the exercise of its inherent powers, virtually direct that the police shall not investigate into the charges contained in the FIR.

We are concerned here with a situation of an altogether different kind. An order of anticipatory bail does not in any way, directly or indirectly, take away from the police their right to investigate into charges made or to be made against the person released on bail. In fact, two of the usual conditions incorporated in a direction issued under Section 438(1) are those recommended in sub-section (2)(i) and (ii) which require the applicant to cooperate with the police and to assure that he shall not tamper with the witnesses during and after the investigation. While granting relief under Section 438(1), appropriate conditions can be imposed under Section 438(2) so as to ensure an uninterrupted investigation. One of such conditions can even be that in the event of the police making out a case of a likely discovery under section 27 of the Evidence Act, the person released on bail shall be liable to be taken in police custody for facilitating the discovery. Besides, if and when the occasion arises, it may be possible for the prosecution to claim the benefit of Section 27 of the Evidence Act in regard to a discovery of facts made in the principle stated by this Court in State of U.P. Vs. Deoman Upadhyaya [(1961)1 SCR, 14, 26 : AIR 1960 1125 : 1960 Cri.L.J. 1504] to the effect that when a person not in custody approaches a police officer investigating an offence and offers to give information leading to the discovery of a fact, having a bearing on the charge which may be made against him, he may appropriately be deemed so have surrendered himself to the police. The broad foundation of this rule is stated to be that Section 46 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not contemplate any formality before a person can be said to be taken in custody : submission to the custody by word or action by a person is sufficient. For similar reasons, we are unable to agree that anticipatory bail should be refused if a legitimate case for the remand of the offender to the police custody under section 167(2) of the Code is made out by the investigating agency."

"16. A close look at some of the rules in the eight-point code formulated by the High Court will show how difficult it is to apply them in practice. The seventh proposition says : The larger interest of the public and State demand that in serious cases like economic offences involving blatant corruption at the higher rungs of the executive and political power, the discretion under Section 438 of the Code should not be exercised."

"17. How can the court, even if it had a third eye, assess the blatantness of corruption at the stage of anticipatory bail ? And will it be correct to say that blatantness of the accusations will suffice for rejecting the bail, if the applicant's conduct is painted in colours too lurid to be true ? The eighth proposition rule framed by the application at the threshold or grant interim protection and thereafter consider whether in the interest of justice it is necessary to secure presence of the accused on the application being made by the prosecution.

(8.) So far as words 'interest of justice' used in sub-section (4) of section 438 are concerned, the said term obviously means the interest not only of the prosecution but also of the accused of seeking fair and proper administration of criminal justice and giving a fair opportunity to the applicant - accused of securing substantive right which accrues in his favour by virtue of section 438. Provisions of sections 438(1), (3) and (4), therefore have to be read together and they cannot be read in isolation.

(9.) It would be profitable to reproduce the observations made by the three learned Single Judges of this Court with regard to power of the court to be exercised under section 438. In State of Maharashtra Vs. Kachrusingh Santaramsingh Rajput and Anr. [1994(3)

Bom.C.R. 348] learned Single Judge had an occasion to consider this aspect and the learned Single Judge has observed in paras 7, 8, 9 and 10 as under :-

"7.It was thought for some time that if a person who approached the Court for anticipatory bail loses his cause, he could not be arrested or he should not be arrested or he should be arrested immediately. Proviso to sub-section (1) now removes the doubt on that point by providing that where the High Court or the Court of Sessions, as the case may be has not passed any interim order under that sub-section, or, has rejected outright the application for grant of anticipatory bail, it would be open to the officer-in-charge of a Police Station to arrest, without warrant, the applicant on the basis of the accusation apprehended in such application i.e. the application preferred by the person seeking anticipatory bail. It is, thus, clear that the person approaching the Court for anticipatory bail under section 438(1) is not given any absolute protection as such, by the section till he has secured some protection from the Court, either in the form of anticipatory bail or, in the form of an interim order of protection or, interim order for bail."

"8. As sub-section (1) of section 438 itself contemplated an order for interim anticipatory bail, a provision had to be made immediately about the grant of such interim relief. The sub-section (2) of section 438, therefore, considers that eventuality and provides that where the High Court or the Sessions Court, as the case may be, considers it expedient to issue an interim order to grant anticipatory bail, the Court shall comply with the requirements which are indicated in that sub-section, namely :- (I) Indicate in the order, the date on which application for grant of anticipatory bail shall be finally heard for passing an order thereon. (II) At the time of passing orders for interim anticipatory bail, such order shall include, inter alia, the four conditions indicated in the said section, namely :- (i) That the applicant shall make himself available for interrogation by a Police Officer as and when required; (ii) That the applicant shall not directly or indirectly make any inducement, threat or promise to any other person acquainted with the facts of the accusations against him so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to be Court or to any officer. (iii) That the applicant shall not, leave India without the previous permission of the Court; and (iv) Such other conditions as may be imposed under sub-section (3) of section 437 as if the bail was granted under that section. The provisions of this sub-section (2) of section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, therefore, make it clear that the object of grant of anticipatory bail or, a protection, during the pendency of a petition for such anticipatory bail should not, in any event, stall the investigation, stall the interrogation of the accused, or impliedly or otherwise give liberty to the accused to be away from the due process of law. A duty is cast on the Court, now explicitly, that the Court shall ensure, whenever it extends any sort of protection to the accused approaching it for protection, that he shall not dodge the legal process and he shall cooperate with the Investigating Officer in the matter of investigation of the offence."

"9. An eventuality might arise that the Public Prosecutor appearing on behalf of the State before a particular Court, was not able to say anything in the matter of grant of interim bail for want of instructions or adequate instructions. He might ask from the Court some accommodation, some time to enable him to put before the Court the reasons for which the State wanted to resist an application made for anticipatory bail. In such an eventuality, ordinarily, the Court shall not leave the applicant-accused without extending the protection of the Court to him, may it be temporary. Where the Court decides to grant such an interim protection to a particular a the State would not arrest a particular accused for a day or two and that the say would be put in before the Court as early as possible, within a day or two. In such an eventuality, the Court may not pass any order for anticipatory bail or for grant of interim protection. The provisions contained in sub-sections (2) and (3) do not make it obligatory on the Court to pass necessarily an order for interim bail or for an interim protection, even in cases where the State undertakes not to arrest the particular person for a day or two, or till they are able to put up their case before the Court."

"10. It is this point which strikes at the root of the submission, which was advanced on behalf of the respondents before us. If at all in the circumstances as indicated in the preceding paragraph the Court refrains from passing any interim order, would it man that the Court would not require, if so prayed for in appropriate cases, the petitioner to remain present in the Court at the time of final hearing ? The answer has got to be in the negative. Sub-section (4), in that respect, stands on its own. It provides that the presence of an applicant seeking an anticipatory bail, shall be obligatory at the time of final hearing of the application and passing of the final order by the Court, "if on an application made to it by the Public Prosecutor the Court considers such presence necessary in the interest of justice". Thus, the presence of the accused may be directed by the Court on an application of the Public Prosecutor and only if the Court considers such presence necessary in the interest of justice. Again, sub-section (4) did not put limitation on the power of the Court to direct suo-motu in the interest of justice, a particular accused to remain present in the Court at the time of final hearing of the application. It is not necessary to read subsection (4) of section 438 as rigidly as that. It is a power to be exercised by the Court in the interest of justice. The justice does not always lie in protecting the person who is an accused. The justice also lies in ensuring, in appropriate cases where the State exercises its power of investigation strictly according to law, in not creating hindrance in the exercise of the lawful powers of the State. We do not think that sub-section (4) of section 438 prescribes or imposes any limitation on the power of the Court, to direct the accused to remain present in the Court at the time of final hearing, whenever it thinks such presence necessary in the interest of justice."

"14. Mr. Loya was right, to some extent, in contending that the very purpose of introducing section 438 in the Code of Criminal Procedure and of substituting the said section in the new form was to strike a balance between the rights of the State to investigate through police into the offences according to the established procedure of law and the individual liberties of a person against whom accusation of serious crimes were made. Neither the old section 438 nor the section newly substituted in its place, started with a non-obstante clause. Both the sections do not provide that the provisions contained therein are, over and above, the common law as incorporated in Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which defines the powers of the police to investigate into the offences. True it is that, at a criminal trial, there is a presumption of innocence in favour of an accused person, but all the same there is no presumption of law that every activity of an individual is innocent or, that if the accusations are made as per law against the person, the police are to start with a presumption that the accusations are false and no offence has taken place. Again, it is not the intention of the law to protect a person who had indulged in criminal activity or, who is alleged to have committed a crime. The provisions contained in old section 438 or the section now substituted in its place, are not intended to protect any person who is accused of a serious offence. Indeed, the provisions are incorporated in the Statute-Book for protecting a person who has, in fact, not committed any crime or, who has not been indulging in any criminal activity and yet on account of some extraneous reasons, he is being implicated in a false accusation. It may be that, in a given case, the investigation is not honest or is not subjected to process of law for reasons which are not good at law, or in a manner, which is not warranted by law. It is only in these last mentioned contingency that the individual liberty must be fully protected according to law. Mere apprehension of an arrest by a person does not, by itself, afford that person has right to claim a protection under the provisions contained in section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Just as section 157(1) of the Code casts an obligation on the police to (a), proceed to the spot (b) investigate the facts and circumstances of the case and (c) if necessary, to take measures for recovery before an offender can be arrested and subjects the police to comply with the provisions contained in sections 158, 167 and 168 of the Code, section 438 casts a duty on the courts, not to protect a person who is alleged to have committed a crime or who is alleged to be indulging in criminal activity or who is keeping himself away from the legal process if there are good reasons to suppose that he has been doing so, section 438, old or substituted virtually operates as an injunction against the police restraining them to arrest an offender as required by Section 157(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and to release him on bail, if arrested on the terms and conditions imposed on the alleged offender by the Court. While issuing an injunction, the Courts have got to be extraordinarily cautious, particularly in view of the deteriorating law and order situation day by day, in exercising the powers which are conferred upon them under section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The powers under section 438 of the Code are to be exercised "in the interest of justice" and not otherwise. At the cost of repetition, it may be stated that justice does not always lie in protecting a person who has committed a crime or who has been indulging in criminal activity or who has been keeping himself away from legal process. Committing a serious offence or indulging in serious criminal activity dodging the legal process is a wrong against not only an individual but against the society at large and it is high time that the Court should bear that consideration in mind while exercising the power contained in section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The provisions contained in Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and in particular, the powers to arrest a person under section 157(1) of the Code are as much part of normal criminal law as are the provisions contained in section 438 of the Code. Therefore, the provision contained in section 438 of the Code are required to be implemented subject to the powers of the police conferred upon them under Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The balance between liberty of an individual and the rights arising out of the legal and constitutional duties of the police to investigate into the offence is to be struck by the Courts in accordance with the aforesaid considerations and in a manner which is conducive to the cause of justice."

While deciding Criminal Application No.569 of 2001 in Vijaya Ramesh Ramdasi Vs. State of Maharashtra the learned Single Judge (Coram : N. V. Dabholkar, J. [as he then was]) vide order dated 20/3/2001 observed in paras 7 and 8 as under :-

"7. On going through the text, certainly there is no reference to interim anticipatory bail in sub-section (4). However, it is difficult to agree with the proposition of learned APP that sub-section (4) should be read independently and without any reference to sub-sections (3) and (5), between which the said provision is sandwiched. In this context, reference to proviso, incorporated in sub-section (1) is a must. This proviso is conspicuously absent in the substantive section 438(1) of the Code. The proviso reads as follows : "Provided that, where the High Court or. as the case may be. the Court of Session, has not passed any interim order under this subsection or has rejected the application for grant of anticipatory bail, it shall be open to an officer-in-charge of a police station to arrest, without warrant, the applicant on the basis of the accusation apprehended in such application."

Thus, on reading proviso to sub-section (1), it is evident that mere pendency of application for anticipatory bail is not a bar to effect arrest of the applicant on the basis of allegation for which he apprehends arrest. The Investigating Officer will be required to stay away, only if the applicant has succeeded in securing the interim anticipatory bail. As can be seen by comparison of section 438(1) and (2), as it stood before the substitution by State amendment and Section 438(1) and (2) as introduced by the State Amendment, it can be seen that notion of interim anticipatory bail is totally absent in the original section, which seems to have been officially introduced by the express, statutory provisions by the State amendment. Sub-section (2) as incorporated by State amendment expressly introduces the provision of grant of interim anticipatory bail, while maintaining the same conditions, those can be imposed upon the applicant by the Court, which were available for final grant of. anticipatory bail in the Central Legislation. Thus, the contention of Shri. Patil that Section 438 of the Code as introduced by the State amendment should be read as a scheme within itself has substance. The scheme makes a provision for considering certain factors for grant of anticipatory bail by the Court; as embodied in sub-section (1). In case, the Court is not pleased to grant interim anticipatory bail, it is open for the Investigating Officer to effect arrest on the allegations for which the arrest is apprehended. Pendency of application for anticipatory bail is no impediment in effecting such an arrest and even on rejection of application for anticipatory bail, the investigating officer is at liberty to effect immediate arrest of the applicant without requiring a warrant for the purpose." "8. While considering, whether the grant of interim anticipatory bail is sine-qua-non for the Court to order personal presence of the applicant on the date fixed for final hearing, practical effect of the scheme as a whole must be taken into consideration. In case the applicant is not granted interim anticipatory protection and still the Court directs the applicant to remain present in the Court on the date fixed for final hearing, by virtue of proviso to sub-section (1), it is open for the Investigating Officer to effect arrest of the applicant. The direction under sub-section (4), if considered as an independent and irrespective of interim protection, will prove to be a mouse trap and not a protection of personal liberty of the citizen. Being under the Court directions the applicant would be obliged to proceed towards the Court and Investigating Officer can wait at the entrance gate of the Court premises. The proposition of learned APP that subsection (4) is an independent power and can be exercised without granting interim protection is, therefore, unacceptable, being against the spirit of provision of anticipatory bail, which is believed to be for the purpose of protection of personal liberty guaranteed by the Constitution of India. It must, therefore, be said that the Court entertaining the application for anticipatory bail shall be in a position to insist for personal presence of the applicant, although in the interest of justice on the date fixed for final hearing or on any other date fixed for hearing, provided the applicant is granted protection by interim anticipatory bail. In case sub-sections (3), (4) and (5) are not to be read together in this fashion, by virtue of proviso to subsection (1) the Court itself shall be indulging into frustrating the petitions."

applicant is granted protection by interim anticipatory bail. In case sub-sections (3), (4) and (10.) I am, therefore, fortified in my view by virtue of the observations made by the aforesaid three learned Single Judges of this Court on this aspect. Therefore, I am of the view that the learned Sessions Judge clearly erred in directing the applicants to remain present in court without granting any interim protection in this case.

(11.) I am informed that the said provision is being used by the prosecution for the purpose of arresting the accused and the courts, very often, after passing an order under sub-section (4) of section 438 do not grant any interim protection. In my view, it would be appropriate, therefore, to take into consideration the scheme of section 438 that if an application is preferred by the prosecution for the purpose of securing presence of the accused, the courts, if they want to pass favourable order granting the application in such cases it would be appropriate if some reasons are assigned as to why it feels that presence of the accused is necessary and ordinarily should grant interim protection to the accused so that the prosecution on the pretext of securing presence of the accused does not arrest the accused and make his application infructuous.

(12.) So far as the merits of the present case are concerned, in my view, applicants have made out a case for grant of anticipatory bail. One Rameshchandra Shah and Haresh Kapadia who are father and father-in-law of applicant No. 1 respectively had made representations to the complainant that certain land belonging to Rayon Mills was available for sale and that they could assist the complainants to secure that land and, for that purpose, they had asked the complainants to deposit an amount of Rs. 1 crore each in the Bank of Maharashtra and Sangli Bank and thereupon asked them to pay their fees to the tune of Rs.1.25 crores. This agreement took place sometime in 2007 and, after depositing the amount of Rs. 1 crore each in Maharasthra Bank and Sangli Bank, an amount of Rs.1.25 crores was deposited in the account of applicant No.3. According to the complainants, thereafter, no further steps, as required under the said agreement, were taken and, therefore, a notice was sent by the complainants to the applicants herein, asking them to refund the said amount of Rs.1.25 crores and the said notice was to be treated as notice of winding up under the provisions of Companies Act. The reply was given by the applicants herein denying the allegations which were made by the complainants. It was denied that the said amount of Rs.1.25 crores was deposited in their account. It was further denied that there was any meeting held between the applicants and two other gentlemen viz. Rameshchandra Shah and Haresh Kapadia and the Complainants' Directors. A civil suit has been filed by the complainants in this Court for recovery of the said amount. Under the facts and circumstances of this case, therefore, there is some substance in the submissions made by the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of applicants that the entire exercise of filing a complaint after 26 months, essentially, is an arm-twisting technique employed by the complainants to secure an amount of Rs.1.25 crores from the present applicants who had no concern of whatsoever with the said agreement between Rameshchandra Shah and Haresh Kapadia and the complainants. It is an admitted position that Rameshchandra Shah, father of applicant No.1 has expired and though no application was filed by Haresh Kapadia for anticipatory bail, no steps have been taken by the police to arrest him. Applicant No.2 is a wife of applicant No.l and she, according to the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of applicants, is not concerned with day-to-day management of the Company.

(13.) In my view, therefore, taking into consideration the aforesaid facts and circumstances, in any event, custodial interrogation of applicants is not necessary. Prima facie case, therefore, is made out by applicants for grant of anticipatory bail. Application also appears to have been filed against the present applicants to pressurise them to pay the said amount of Rs.1.25 crores which was paid to Haresh Kapadia father-in-law of applicant No.l and Rameshchandra Shah who is a father of applicant No.l and who had expired in the meantime.

(14.) In the result, the following order is passed :- ORDER In the event of the arrest of the applicants in connection with the offence punishable under sections 420 and 120-B of the Indian Penal Code which is registered with Tardeo Police Station vide MECR No.05 of 2009, they shall be released on bail in the sum of Rs. 10,000/- each with one or two sureties each in the like amount. Initially, in the event of arrest, applicant Nos. 1 and 2 shall furnish cash bail of Rs. 10,000/ - each and within two weeks thereafter, they shall furnish sureties of the said amount. Applicant No.l shall report to Tardeo Police Station for a period of one week from 7th December, 2009 and, thereafter, as and when called. It is clarified that the applicant No. 1 shall be called between 11.00 A.M. and 5.00 P.M., after giving him 24 hours notice. Application for anticipatory bail is disposed of. Parties to act on the copy of this order duly authenticated by the registry.

****

Cross Citation :2007-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-24 , 2006-GLR-3-2529

HIGH COURT OF GUJARAT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.S.Jhaveri,J

Hasmukhlal Kalidas Choksi …… V/s….. State of Gujarat
Special Civil Application 3462 Of 2006, Sep 12,2006

==========

Bail – Condition – Imposition of – Held- Condition can only be imposed in non-bailable offences having punishment more than 7 years – But for other non-bailable offences conditions could not be imposed.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) These are applications praying for deletion of conditions stipulated in the respective orders of bail granted to them by this Court in various orders.
(2.) The prosecution case, in short, can be summarised as under:

(3.) The applicants herein have constructed different residential buildings and allotted and sold to different persons. In the earthquake occurred on 26th January 2006 those buildings collapsed on account of which many persons sustained injuries and many of them succumbed to injuries. In view of this complaints were filed against criminal complaints were filed against the applicants. The applicants had filed bail applications and they were released on bail on the terms and conditions stipulated in the said order. The conditions stipulated in the order dated 29th June 2001 passed in Criminal Misc. Application No.3641 of 2001 are as under:

"29. In the facts and circumstances of the case, all these applications are allowed, the petitioners involved in respective offences are ordered to be released on bail on furnishing solvent surety and P.R. in a sum of Rs.50,000/- (Rs. Fifty thousand only) each on following conditions: (a) The petitioners shall not leave Ahmedabad City and Ahmedabad Rural District till completion and conclusion of the entire investigation and till the submission of final charge-sheet against all the accused persons, and till the apprehension and arrest of all the accused persons involved in the respective cases, without the express permission of the learned City Sessions Judge Ahmedabad / concerned court. (b) The petitioners shall not approach, contact, induce or threaten the witnesses connected with the offence in question. (c) The petitioners shall file an affidavit before the learned Sessions Judge concerned, at Ahmedabad showing the place of their residence after their release on bail which would contain details about full address and telephone numbers, if any. (d) The petitioners shall personally remain present on every 1st working day of the month according to British Calendar before the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad / concerned court between 2 pm and 5 pm and mark their presence there. The learned Sessions Judge shall make appropriate arrangements for obtaining their signatures on his appearance. (e) The petitioners shall not leave Gujarat State without prior permission of the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad/ concerned court. (f) The petitioners shall not leave the revenue district of the place of residence stated by them in their affidavit without the permission of the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad / concerned court. (g) Petitioners shall deposit their passport, if any, before the concerned police station before their release on bail. In case a petitioner does not hold any passport, then in that case, he shall file an affidavit before the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad / concerned court disclosing such a fact. (h) The learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad /concerned Judge, shall write Yadi to the Passport Office, Ahmedabad with respect to the aforesaid conditions imposed upon the petitioners restricting their movement and that he has not been permitted to visit abroad, for their information and action. (i) Each petitioner before his release on bail as aforesaid, shall deposit a sum of Rs.50,000/-(Rs. Fifty thousand only) before the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad / concerned court for the due performance of the aforesaid conditions by the petitioner/s concerned. The learned Sessions Judge will be at liberty to place the said amount in FDR in the name of the officer of his Court at the instance of the petitioner. (j) If any one or more condition are reported to have been breached by the petitioner/s the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad/concerned court shall be at liberty to issue non-bailable warrant against the petitioner / s. (k) Bail bonds shall be executed before the learned City Sessions Judge, Ahmedabad I concerned court."

Similar conditions have been imposed in respect of other applicants also. The applicants have therefore prayed for deletion of such conditions on the grounds stated hereinafter.

(4.) Mr. Raju, learned Advocate for the applicants submitted that when the original complaints were filed some of the sections of IPC mentioned therein were non-bailable offences. He further submitted that after the chargesheet has been filed in each case and charges were framed, the offences mentioned therein are bailable offences. He, therefore, submitted that under the circumstances the conditions which are imposed are required to be deleted in view of various decisions of different High Courts and the recommendation, of Law Commission. A. Mr. Raju, after referring to section 437 of CrPC, further submitted that Power to impose conditions is only in case of non-bailable offence and that too where it is punishable more than seven years. Under the provisions of Cr.P.C only in non-bailable offences conditions of bail can be imposed on an accused while being released on bail.

(5.) Mr. A.Y. Kogje, learned APP submitted that section 439(1) of Criminal Procedure Code stipulates that any person accused of an offence and in custody be released on bail, and if the offence is of the nature specified in sub-section (3) of section 437, may impose any condition which it considers necessary for the purposes mentioned in that sub-section. He therefore submitted that the conditions are not required to be deleted.

(6.) It is an undisputed fact that chargesheets have been filed in all these matters. The concerned Court has also framed charges under sections 304A, 336, 338 and 418 of the Indian Penal Code and under the provisions of Gujarat Ownership of Flat Act, 1973. The punishment for offences under the said Act is imprisonment for one year, which is a bailable offence. The rest of the offences are also bailable offence i.e. under sections 304A, 336, 338 and 418 of IPC. Therefore, since now all the offences are bailable, no conditions can be imposed while releasing the accused on bail.

(7.) At this stage it would be profitable to look into the law laid down by different High Courts under the aforesaid subject.

(8.) Mr. S.V. Raju, learned Advocate appearing for the applicants has relied upon various decisions of the High Courts as under:

A. In the case of ANWAR HUSSAIN V/S. STATE OF ORISSA, REPORTED IN 1995 CRI.L.J.. 863, in para 5 it is stated as under:

"5. Chapter XXXIII consists of Section 436 to 450. Sections 436 and 437 provides for the granting of bail to accused persons before trial and conviction. For the purposes bail offences are classified into two category i.e. (i) bailable and (ii) non-bailable. Section 436 provides for granting bail in bailable cases and section 437 in non-bailable cases. A person accused of bailable offence is entitled to be released on bail pending his trial. In case of such offences, a police officer has no discretion to refuse bail if the accused is prepared to furnish surety. The Magistrate gets jurisdiction to grant bail during the course of investigation when the accused is produced before him. In bailable offence there is no question of discretion for granting ball. The only choice for the court is as to taking a simple recognizance of the principal offender or demanding security with surety. Persons contemplated by this section cannot be taken into custody unless they are unable or unwilling to offer bail or to execute personal bond. The Court has no discretion, when granting bail under this section, even to impose any condition except the demanding of security with sureties."

B. In the case of REX V/S.GENDA SINGH, REPORTED IN AIR (37) 1950 ALLAHABAD 525 it is held asunder: "I am, therefore, of opinion that in bailable cases no condition can be imposed. The order granting bail can just fix the amount for which the accused is to furnish the bond, the number of the sureties to be furnished and the amount for which each of the sureties is to furnish the bond. I, therefore, reject this application."

C. In the case of AZEEZ V/S. STATE OF KERALA, REPORTED IN 1984(2) CRIMES 413, the Kerala High Court observed as under: "3. The petitioner, being a person accused of only bailable offence, has a right to be enlarged on bail. There is no discretion with the Court enabling it to grant or refuse bail. The Court is required to grant bail in such a case, though the court is at liberty to modulate the terms as to bail. This certainly does not mean that the court can impose a condition which is not a term as to bail. The condition that a person accused of bailable offence has to surrender his passport in court is not a term as to bail and therefore cannot be imposed by a magistrate under section 436 of the Code. The condition imposed is illegal and has to be set aside."

D. In the case of HANUMANTHE GOWDA and ANR V/S. STATE OF KARNATAKA it is held as under: "The wordings of the three sections make it clear that under Section 436 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, there is no discretion left to the Court to impose a condition while releasing a person on bail when he is accused of a bailable offence. I am in respectful agreement with the judgements cited above of the Madras High Court. I, therefore, hold that the conditions imposed by the learned Magistrate while granting bail to the petitioners are without jurisdiction and they are accordingly set aside except releasing the petitioners on bail on their executing a personal bond for Rs. 10000/ - each with one surety for like sum for their appearance."

E. I n the case of KANUBHAI CHHAGANLAL BRAHMBHATT V/S. STATE OF GUJARAT AND OTHERS, REPORTED IN 13 GLR 748 it is held that the whole question of producing the accused before a Magistrate would only arise if the accused was not prepared to give bail before the police officer after his arrest and even when he is produced before the Magistrate and he is prepared to give bail, the Magistrate has no option but to release him on bail so far as bailable offence is concerned.

F. In the case of DISTRICT MAGISTRATE OF VIZAGAPATANAM, REPORTED IN AIR (36) 1949 MADRAS 77, it is held as under: "4. In bailable offences it is well settled that there is no question of discretion in granting bail as the words of the section are imperative. The only choice for the Court is as between taking a simple recognizance of the principal offender or demanding security with surety. Ordinarily the word "bail" applies to the second kind of security according to the practice and procedure of the Courts. The Criminal Court has no discretion in a bailable offences while granting bail under section 496, Criminal P.C. to impose any condition except the demanding of security with sureties. The reference is accepted and the order of the Magistrate passed on 14th August 1947, granting bail to the accused is modified by deleting from the order the conditions mentioned above.

G. In the case of In RE KOTA APPALAKONDA, REPORTED IN AIR (29) 1942 MADRAS 740 it is held that where a person is charged with bailable offences only, the Magistrate has no discretion in granting bail and hence the imposing of a condition e.g. not to enter on the disputed land, in a bail order leads to the infringement of the provisions of section 496 in case the condition be not fulfilled. Such is not one authorized by law.

(9.) It is also relevant to quote certain paragraph as stated in the Thirty-Sixth Report on Sections 497, 498 and 499 of Cr.PC - grant of bail with conditions (December 1967):

"6. The amendment suggested by the State Government seeks to replace section 497(1) as follows :- "(1) When any person accused of or suspected of the commission of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer incharge of a police station, or appears or is brought before a court, he may be released on bail which may be subject to such conditions as may appear necessary in a particular case if the offence is one punishable with imprisonment, extending to seven years or more or is one falling under Chapters VI, XVI and XVII of the Indian Penal Code including abetment, conspiracy or attempt to commit any such offence, but shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing:- (i) that he is likely to tamper with the evidence or (ii) that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life; Provided that the court may direct that any person under the age of 16 years or any woman or any sick or infirm person accused of such an offence be released on bail.

Explanation: In granting a conditional bail the Court may impost conditions like requiring the person to reside in a particular locality or to report to the police or any other specified authority".

15. In bailable cases, i.e. those governed by section 496, the court cannot, it seems, impose conditions, as the accused has a right to bail (Nor can a police officer impose conditions requiring attendance before the police. This does not, of course, affect the High Court's power to cancel bail in case of abuse. "This jurisdiction springs from the over-riding inherent powers of the High Court and can be invoked in exceptional cases only when the High Court is satisfied that the ends of justice will be defeated unless the accused is committed to custody."

(10.) From the above settled law it is clear that when a person is charged with Bailable offences and when he is released on bail, the court has no discretion in granting bail and no condition can be imposed. On the facts of the case it is clear that after filing of the chargesheet, all the offences are bailable offences. On the facts of the case, it is clear that the alleged offences are bailable and therefore the conditions imposed by this Court earlier require to be deleted in view of change of circumstances.

(11.) Now since the offences are bailable offences, I do not find any substance in the contention raised by Mr. Kogje that these are not malicious proceedings and therefore the petition cannot be entertained. When the chargesheet has been filed, and if the offences are bailable, no conditions can be imposed. Mr. Kogje is unable to dispute this position.

(12.) Power to impose conditions is only in case of non-bailable offence and that too where it is punishable more than seven years. Under the provisions of Cr.P.C only in non-bailable offences conditions of bail can be imposed on an accused while being released on bail. Considering the provisions of section 437 of CrPC the conditions imposed are required to be deleted.

(13.) In view of the above facts and circumstances of the case, these applications are partly allowed and the conditions Nos.29(1), 29(c) 29(6), 29(f), 29(g), 29(i) imposed in the order dated 29.6.2001 are hereby deleted and the aforesaid order dated 29.6.2001 is modified accordingly. The applicants are at liberty to encash the fixed deposit made by them in pursuance of the aforesaid order at any time. Rule is made absolute accordingly.

(14.) In the premises aforesaid these applications are allowed. The conditions Nos. 29[a], 29[c], 29[e], 29[f], 29[g], 29[h] and 29 [i] imposed in the order dated 29.6.2001 passed in Criminal Misc. Application No.3641/2001, 3642/2001 condition Nos.1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 imposed in the order dated 11.7.2001 passed in Criminal Misc. Application No.4678/2001, condition Nos.29[a], 29[c], 29[f], 29[g], 29[h] and 29[i] imposed in the order dated 29.6.2001 passed in criminal Misc. Application No.4117 of 2001 are hereby ordered to be deleted. The amounts deposited by the applicants shall be returned to them. If the amounts are kept in Fixed Deposit the same may be encashed. Rule is made absolute accordingly.

****

Cross Citation : 2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 364 (A.P.)

ANDHRA PRADESH HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R. KANTHA RAO ,J

Guddanti Narasimha Rao ….Vs…. State of Andhra Pradesh And Another.

Criminal Petition No. 9099 of 2010 - Decided On 17/09/2010

==========

Cr. P.C. 209 – Commitment of case under Attrocities Act to sessions Court– Court insisting accused to obtain bail is improprer. It is not a requirement u/s 209 of Cr. P.C. – Magistrate can commit the case by taking personal bond from him to appear before special court ensuring his attendance before said court till conclusion of trial.

==========

JUDGEMENT

ORDER: - This Criminal Petition is filed under Section 482 Cr.P.C. seeking to issue a direction to the Additional Judicial Magistrate of First Class, Chirala, Prakasham District not to insist the petitioner to obtain bail at the time of committing P.R.C.No.26 of 2010 to the Court of Sessions.

2. I have heard the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner and the learned Public Prosecutor representing the State.

3. On a report lodged by the second respondent-complainant the police registered a case under Section 506 IPC and Section 3(1)(x) of the SC and ST (POA) Act, investigated into and filed a final report stating that the case is false. Subsequently, in protest the second respondent filed a petition and the learned Magistrate after recording sworn statement of the second respondent, took cognizance of the case against the petitioner under Section 3(1)(x) of SC and ST (POA) Act, 1989.

4. Since the offence is triable by the Special Court for the trial of offences under prevention of atrocities Act, it has to be committed by the magistrate to the said Court. It is submitted by the learned counsel representing the petitioner that at the time of committing the case, the learned Magistrate is insisting upon the petitioner to obtain order of bail from the Special Court, or any other competent court as the case may be, and therefore, the petitioner filed the present criminal petition to issue the required direction to the learned Magistrate.

5. It can be understood from Section 209 Cr.P.C. that when the Court directly issues summons to the accused to secure his attendance and in obedience thereto, the accused attends before the magistrate, the magistrate while committing case to the Court of Session can bind him over to the Sessions Court on his executing a bond, as provided under Section 441 Cr.P.C. Obtaining bail is not a requirement as per Section 209 Cr.P.C. Further, there is no provision under prevention of atrocities act for granting anticipatory bail.

6. From the language of Section 209 Cr.P.C., it does not appear that at the time of committing the case to the Court of Session, he must be on bail by the Sessions Court.

7. Section 209 Cr.P.C. lays down that when it appears to the Magistrate that the offence is exclusively triable by Court of Session, he shall a) commit, after complying with the provisions of Section 207 or 208, as the case may be, the case to the Court of Session, and subject to the provisions of this code relating to bail, remand the accused to custody until such commitment has been made; b) subject to the provisions of this Code, relating to bail, remand the accused to custody during; and until the conclusion of, the trial;

8. The expression subject to the provisions of this code relating to bail can only be understood to mean subject to the provisions in Chapter 33 of the Code.

9. When the accused appeared before the Court on receiving summons from the Court issued after registering the PRC, and undertakes himself to appear before the Magistrate during the committed proceeding and also to appear before the Court of Session/Special Court and the accused not being arrested and released on bail earlier in connection with said case, need not be driven to obtain bail from the Court of Sessions/Special Court. Section 441(3) Cr.P.C. lays down, if the case so requires the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon the High Court or Court of Session or other court to answer the charge.

10. There is no requirement in law that in each and every case triable by the Court of Session the accused shall be arrested and released on bail. When only summons were issued to the accused to secure his attendance after the charge sheet is filed in a case triable by Court of Session the accused shall not be compelled to approach the Sessions Court/Special Court and to obtain bail. In every case triable by Court of Session unless the accused is arrested and is in judicial custody,, the question of his obtaining bail from the Sessions Court does not enough while committing the case it is enough on the part of the committing Magistrate to bind over the accused with or without sureties undertaking to appear before the Sessions Court till the conclusion of the trial.

11. Therefore, this Court agrees with the submission made by the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner and the learned Magistrate is hereby directed not to insist the petitioner to obtain bail from the Court concerned for the purpose of commitment of P.R.C. to the Special Court or Court of Sessions and the Magistrate can commit the case by obtaining personal bond from him to appear before the Special Court ensuring his attendance before the said Court till the conclusion of the trial.

12. The criminal petition is accordingly allowed. Petition allowed-

****

Cross Citation :1963 (1) Cri. L. J. 451 (1), AIR 1963 MANIPUR 12

MANIPUR HIGH COURT

Coram : T. N. R. TIRUMALPAD, J.

"Gaibidingpao Kabui ….V/s…..Union Territory of Manipur"

Criminal Misc. Appln. No. 55 of 1961, D/- 15 -2 -1962.

==========

Cri. P.c. S. 167 and 109 – Procedure for remand of accused – Duty of Magistrate – It is duty of Magistrate to safeguard liberty of a citizen – Court should not behave as an agent of the Executive to help the police in detaining persons in custody at the wish of the police – When the person detained informs the Magistrate that he was not told of the reasons for his arrest then it should be seen that such a person is informed of the grounds of his arrest – There is no provision u.s. 109 of Cri. P.c. to detain a person in jail.

==========

R.K. Manisena Singh, for Petitioner, N. Ibotombi Singh, Govt. Advocate, for Opposite Parties.

Judgement

ORDER :- This is an application for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus for releasing the petitioner Gaibidingpao Kabui from Jail custody.

2. This petitioner and two others, Kadonglung and Namei were arrested on 12-8-1961 near Tamenglong by the Army and they were produced before Shri K. Lamphel Singh, Magistrate 1st Class at Imphal on 17-8-1961 with a letter from the O/C Imphal Police Station. In the said letter, it was mentioned that they were Naga Hostiles of the area and were arrested by the Army, that the O/C Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations have been asked to submit N. F. I. R. under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. for prosecution and that they may be remanded to Jail for a period of 15 days, during which the N. F. I. R. will be submitted. The Magistrate thereupon remanded them to Jail custody till 30-8-1961.

3. On 24-8-1961, the petitioner Gaibidingpao Kabul sent a petition to the Magistrate from jail stating that he was a cultivator and innocent of any offence and that a Police Report may be immediately called for and he may be released. This petition was sent for a Police report by 30-8-1961. The O/C I. P. S. endorsed a report on the said petition on 30-8-1961 that the village from where the petitioner was arrested was within the jurisdiction of Nungbu Police Station and so the O/C Nungba Police Station may be directed to submit the necessary prosecution report. The petitioner and the two others were produced before the Magistrate with this report and the Magistrate again remanded them to custody till 13-9-1961 and in doing so he passed an order in the following words :

"Ask O/C concerned to submit an offence report".

On 13-9-1961, they were again produced before the Magistrate and he passed an order that no offence report has yet been submitted, nor any report for further remand, that there has been serious objection from the side of the arrested persons and that the O/C Imphal Police Station will be directed to submit a report by the next remand date at any rate and that the arrested persons will be remanded till 27-9-1961 and he directed that a copy of the order should be sent to the Additional Superintendent of Police for necessary action. On 27-9-1961, they were again produced before the Magistrate without any offence report and the Magistrate again remanded them till 11-10-1961 saying that the I/O will be asked to submit the offence report early.

After this further remand, a letter was received by the Court from the S. I. of the Imphal Police Station stating that the O/C Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations have been asked to submit offence report against the arrested persons and that report had also been submitted to the Court praying for directing the Police Stations concerned to submit necessary reports.

On this letter, an endorsement had been made by the O/C, Imphal Police Station stating that it was beyond the competence of the Imphal Police Station to submit a prosecution report in the case as the place of occurrence was beyond Imphal Police Station and that therefore the Police Stations concerned may be directed to submit the necessary prosecution report. Thus, the O/C Imphal Police Station was throwing the burden on the Court for getting the necessary offence report from the Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations concerned. On receipt of this letter, the Magistrate wrote on the order sheet that he has received the report for further remand. Thus, the three arrested persons continued in Jail custody without any offence report from the Police and without the Court knowing why they were being remanded. It is surprising that the Magistrate should have continued to remand the arrested persons to police custody in this fashion.

4. It was at this stage that the petitioner Gaibidingpao Kabui filed the present application for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus before this Court on 22-9-1961 in which he pointed out that his arrest itself was done mala fide without any F. I. R. or any other information and without his being informed of the grounds for his arrest and detention in Jail. It was pointed out that the arrest was illegal and in contravention of the provisions of the Cri. P. C., that his detention was against the provision of section 167, Cri. P. C., that the remand orders were being passed by the Magistrate without any jurisdiction and without recording any reason and that such detention was against the fundamental rights of the petitioner.

5. When this matter came up for hearing of the bail application on 29-9-1961, I directed the petitioner to be released on bail immediately, as there was no reason for his detention. When the writ application for habeas corpus came for hearing, the Government Advocate wanted time to file counter, but he admitted that as the petitioner was being proceeded against only under section 109, Cri. P. C. there was no provision for detention in Jail and so on 15-12-1961, I directed the petitioner to be released. I also directed the two persons Kadonglung and Namei to be released from Jail. But final orders were not passed as I was awaiting the explanation of the Magistrate for having continued to remand the arrested persons to Jail custody continuously even without any request from the Police.

6. A counter statement has been filed for the Government in which it is stated that the petitioner and the other two persons were arrested by the Military in exercise of the power under Sec. 4(c) of the Armed Forces (Assam and Manipur) Special Powers Act, 1958, that they were produced before the Magistrate by the O/C Imphal Police Station with a report that the O/C Tamenglong Police Station in whose jurisdiction the petitioner was arrested would submit prosecution report for proceeding under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C., that in respect of the petitioner, the said prosecution report was duly submitted on 28-8-1961 before the A. D. M., Manipur instead of before this Magistrate, that the said case has been registered under N. F. I. R. 1/61 and it stands transferred to the Court of Shri B. Ahamad, Magistrate First Class for disposal, and that as far as the report regarding the other two persons were concerned, vigorous search is being made to see if any report has since been submitted.

7. I am afraid that the counter statement filed for the respondent does not disclose anything which would in any way support the procedure adopted by this Magistrate against the petitioners and the other two persons. It is stated that the arrest of the three persons was made by the military under section 4(c) of the Armed Forces (Assam and Manipur) Special Powers Act, 1958 (hereinafter to be referred to as the Act). Such arrest can be made under Sec. 4(c) by the Army of a person who has either committed a cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable suspicion existed that he has committed or is about to commit a cognizable offence. As soon as such arrest is made, the Army have to make over the arrested person, under Sec. 5 of the said Act, to the O/C of the nearest Police Station together with a report of the circumstances occasioned in the arrest.

In this case, the army made over the petitioner to the O/C, Imphal Police Station and I am sure that they must have submitted the report of the circumstances occasioned in the arrest as required under Sec. 5. That report has not been produced. Hence we are unable to know the circumstances which led to their arrest. We do not know therefore whether the petitioner and the two others were reported to have committed a cognizable offence or whether a reasonable suspicion existed that they have committed or were about to commit a cognizable offence. The report of the O/C Imphal Police Station to the Court was that the 3 persons were Naga Hostiles and that the O/C Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations have been asked to submit N. F. I. R. under section 109, Cri. P. C. for prosecution. This report did not show what cognizable offence the 3 persons had committed or what reasonable suspicion existed that they have committed or were about to commit a cognizable offence.

8. If we compare section 4(c) of the Act with Sec. 54(1) First and Sec. 151, Cri P. C. it will be seen that the provision for the arrest under Sec. 4(c) of the said Act is similar to the provision under Sec. 54(1) First and Sec. 151, Cri. P. C. Under section 54(1) First Cri. P. C., there must be reasonable complaint or credible information or reasonable suspicion that the person has been concerned in any cognizable offence. Under Sec. 151, Cri. P. C. the arrest is to prevent the commission of a cognizable offence. In both those cases, there has to be investigation and the arrested person has to be produced before a Magistrate under Sec. 167, Cri P. C. if his detention is desired pending the investigation. In such a case, ordinarily action under section 109, Cri. P. C. is not contemplated, if we read Sec. 55, Cri. P. C. and Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. together, it will be seen that vagabonds, habitual robbers etc. could be arrested under section 55, Cri. P. C. and they can be proceeded against under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. The provision for arrest under Sec. 55 by the Police is quite different from the provision for the arrest under Sec. 54(1) First and Sec. 151, Cri. P. C. It is only if the arrest is made under Sec. 55 that the question of proceeding against the arrested person under section 109, Cri. P. C. would arise. But the provision for arrest by the Army under Sec. 4(c) of the Act is not similar to the provision for the arrest under Sec. 55, Cri. P. C.

9. When a person is arrested under Sec. 4(c) of the Act and handed over to the Police or when a person is arrested by the Police under Sec. 54(1) First or under Sec. 151, Cri. P. C, he has to be produced before a Magistrate under Sec. 167, Cri. P. C., with a copy of the entries in the diary relating to the case and the Magistrate must proceed under section 167 and decide whether he should be remanded or not pending Police investigation.

In our present case, no diary relating to the case was submitted at all, except the report which I have already referred to. It was the duty of the Police Officer to have produced in Court the report given under Sec. 5 of the Act by the Military. That was not done, evidently, because no further Police investigation regarding the commission of any cognizable offence was contemplated, but only action under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. Thus this is a case where the Police treated the arrest as one under Sec. 55, Cri. P. C. In such a case when the arrested person is produced before the Magistrate under Secs. 61 and 167, Cri. P. C., no question of his detention in Jail would arise at all. There is no provision under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. to detain a person in Jail pending proceedings under the said section. If a person is produced before a Magistrate for action under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C., what the Magistrate may do is to make an order under Sec. 112, Cri. P. C., setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the manner, character and class of sureties, if any, required. Thus, it is clear that this Magistrate had no authority under Sec. 167, Cri. P. C. to order the detention of the 3 persons produced before him.

10. What the Magistrate did in this case was much worse. In the first Police Report of the Police dated 17-8-1961, the Magistrate was not given any information which would permit him to initiate proceeding under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. All that the O/C Imphal Police Station stated was that the O/C Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations have been asked to submit N. F. I. R. under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C. It was not the fault of the arrested persons that the O/C of Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations could not submit a N. F. I. R. under section 109, Cri. P. C. when they were produced before the Magistrate. The O/C Implal Police Station had no right to request the Magistrate to remand the arrested persons to Jail custody pending the receipt of the N. F. I. R. from the O/C Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations.

I have already pointed out that even if the said N. F. I. R. had been received in time, the Magistrate cannot order the detention of the arrested persons under section 167, Cri. P. C., but that he can proceed only under Sec. 109, Cri. P. C., and direct the arrested persons to give surety pending further enquiry into the matter under Sec. 117, Cri. P. C.

11. The petitioner before me, pointed out to this Magistrate that he has not been informed as to the cause of his arrest and that a report should be called for from the Police and he should be released. It is a pity that this Magistrate and the O/C Imphal Police Station were ignorant of the fundamental right of a citizen as provided in Article 22 of the Constitution. It provides that no person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds for such arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult and to be defended by a legal practitioner of his choice.

12. When, therefore the petitioner informed this Magistrate that he has not been told of the reasons for his arrest, the Magistrate should not have simply ordered his continued detention, but he should have seen to it that the petitioner was informed of the grounds of his arrest. If the Magistrate had himself looked into the matter, he would have seen for himself that no grounds for the arrest had been disclosed to him and that he had no authority to order detention.

It is indeed surprising that this Magistrate went on ordering the continued detention of the petitioner and the other two arrested persons fortnight after fortnight, when no report had been received from the Police stating the grounds for the arrest. It would look as if this Magistrate did not know that citizens had certain fundamental rights guaranteeing them freedom, which, it is the duty of Courts to safeguard. He behaved as if he was merely an agent of the Executive to help the Police in detaining persons in custody, as long as the Police wanted. It is high time that this Magistrate learnt that as a Court he cannot behave in this fashion.

13. The explanation of this Magistrate it that he was only a link Magistrate to the S. D. M., Tamenglong as per order of the District Magistrate and that remand reports had to be obtained from Tamenglong and Nungba Police Stations which was not convenient and so remands had to be considered and granted in anticipation of such reports and so the arrested persons continued to be remanded till 11-10-1961. The explanation only betrays that for this Magistrate, the convenience of the Police is of greater concern than the freedom of the citizen or the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code.

When dealing with section 167, Cri. P. C. the Magistrate cannot look to the convenience of the Police to submit remand reports. The Court is dealing with the liberty of a citizen which is guaranteed under the constitution and it has to act according to the strict letter of the Law. If the Police do not transmit to the Court a copy of the entries in the diary relating to the case, to satisfy the Magistrate that investigation could not be completed within 24 hours and that there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well-founded, the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to direct the detention of the arrested person. It is a travesty of justice to order detention in anticipation of a remand report. It is seen in this case, that on many occasions no Police Officer was present and no remand report received and still the Magistrate went on ordering further remands of the arrested persons.

14. I am not able to understand what the District Magistrate meant by link Magistrates in his Order No. 5(J)-DM/61 dated Imphal, the 29th July, 1961. There is no provision for appointment of link Magistrates under the Criminal Procedure Code. It can at best only mean that one Magistrate has been given concurrent jurisdiction along with another Magistrate who may not be readily available. Even the so-called link Magistrate has to act under Section 167, Cri. P. C. and abide by the strict provisions of the said section.

15. There is no doubt in my mind that the detention of the petitioner and the other two arrested persons in this case was totally against law and they have to be directed to be released from Jail. I have already ordered their release pending final orders in this application and the said release order is hereby made absolute.

****

Cross Citation :2004-ALLMR(CRI)-0-646 , 2004 (1) Crimes 202

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S.B. Deshmukh, J.

Mohammad Asgar ....V/s....State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application 3355 of 2003 Of Dec 12,2003

==========

Criminal P.C. – Section 439 – Murder – No direct evidence of offence – Admission on the part of applicant before police regarding commission of offence could hardly a ground to deny a bail, even in murder case – Accused granted bail – If the accused belong to other state proper condition be imposed to secure his presence at the trial.

==========

(1.) HEARD learned Counsel Mr. Bhangde, as well as Mr. Sonare, learned A. P. P. for the respondent/state.

(2.) THE applicant had filed application below Exh. 3 in Sessions Trial No. 372/2003 pending in the Court of learned 4th Additional Sessions Judge of Nagpur for release on bail. The application filed by the applicant came to be rejected by order dated 20th September, 2003 by the learned 4th Additional Sessions Judge, Nagpur for release on bail. The application filed by applicant came to be rejected by the order dated 29th September, 2003 by the learned 4th Additional Sessions Judge at Nagpur and, therefore, the present application is filed by the original accused in S. T. No. 372/2003.

(3.) THE prosecution case in short is that, the deceased Khurshida Begum, was wife of the present applicant and was being ill-treated by the present applicant on account of demand of Splendor Motor Bike and Colour TV. The prosecution claims that prior to the date of incident for about 7-8 days she was not keeping well. According to the prosecution story the deceased Khurshida Begum is murdered by the present applicant. However, admittedly, there is no direct evidence so as to implicate the present applicant in the alleged murder of Khurshida Begum.

(4.) THE application filed on behalf of the present applicant, came to be rejected by the learned 4th Addl. Sessions Judge by a cryptic order. The learned 4th Addl. Sessions Judge in para No. 3 of the order observed that "no doubt it seems from the Post Mortem Report that the doctor has reserved opinion regarding the cause of death. However, admittedly the applicant himself had lodged report of incident with police, in presence of the two independent persons and admitted the guilt. " It seems that the alleged admission of guilt by the applicant weighed with the learned Addl. Sessions Judge while rejecting the application for bail. I am afraid that the admission on the part of the applicant regarding commission of the offence can be a ground to reject the application, especially in the absence of any other incriminating evidence regarding culpability of the applicant in the alleged offence. However, I have seen the reply and heard the learned A. P. P. Mr. Sonare who states that the applicant hails from Jharkhand State and in case of release he may not be available for trial of the Sessions Court, pending in the Court of learned 4th Addl. Sessions Judge, Nagpur. The learned Counsel for the applicant states that other accused are released and some of them are also co-accused in this case along with the present applicant and are residing with the applicant at Tajbagh, Nagpur. The learned Counsel states that the applicant may be released on imposition of some conditions regarding attending the Police Station. According to the learned Counsel the applicant undertakes to remain present as and when the learned Additional Sessions Judge has directed for the trial.

(5.) IN this view of the matter, and considering the fact that applicant hails from Jharkhand State, subject to conditions the applicant needs to be released on bail.

(6.) THE applicant is, therefore, directed to be released on bail, on executing P. R. Bond of Rs. 10,000/- and one surety in the like amount. The applicant is, however, directed to attend Police Station, Sakkardara, Nagpur, once in a week i. e. , on every Sunday in-between 9. 00 a. m. to 1. 00 p. m. , till conclusion of the trial.

(7.) THE applicant is permitted to furnish bail in the Court of the learned 4th Additional Sessions Judge, Nagpur

(8.) THE criminal application is disposed of accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :1998-Cri.L.J.-0-2656

HIGH COURT OF JAMMU AND KASHMIR

Hon'ble Judge(s) : G.D.SHARMA,J

B.A. 93 Of 1997 Dec 26,1997

M.K.Jalali ….V/s….State of JAMMU and KASHMIR

==========

Bail – charges against accused having assets disproportionate to their known source of Income – Prevention of corruption Act section 5 (2) (e). The accused have statutory right to render explaination before the trial court – The apprehension that the accused will flee away if enlarged on bail cannot viewed with seriousness as they have deep root in the society and social status – The petitioner required to be admitted to bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) ORDER :- The petitioner M.K. Jalali is a Superintending Engineer, in the Irrigation and Flood Control Department. The petitioner Bindraban Sawhney is an Inspector in Motor Vehicles Deptt. Cases under Section 5(2)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 2006 have been registered against them under FIR No. 103/97 and 61/97 respectively. They are stated to have been taken into custody on 22-12-1997.

(2.) Through the medium of these petitions they have sought their release on bail by pleading that they have been co-operating with the investigating agency right from the date of the alleged raids and the investigating agency has not yet concluded that the property recovered from their possession is disproportionate to their known source of income. That they are respectable citizens and there is no likelihood of jumping the bail or misusing the concession of bail in any manner. The petitioner Bindraban Sawhney in addition has alleged that he is a diabetic patent and is entitled to bail because of ill-health. He has placed on record the medical prescriptions showing his sickness.

(3.) These petitions have been opposed by the prosecution by filing the objections wherein it is pleased that the Vigilance Organisation had preliminary clues for their possessing assets dis- proportionate to their known sources of income and on this basis secret enquiries were initiated. The raids were conducted in the premises occupied by them. Documents and articles have been seized and investigating agency requires some time for questioning the petitioners accused and interrogating them in order to know about their disproportionate assets possessed by them either on their own names or in 'benami' nature. These are economic offences against the society in general and the State in particular and deserve no leniency from the Court. The grant of bail will adversely effect the investigation. From the investigation it has to be ascertained whether the offence under Section 409, RPC is made out or not.

(4.) Regarding petitioner Bindraban Sawhney, it is stated that he is being provided medical aid and that the pass-books and cheque books recovered from his possession require verification.

(5.) Heard the arguments.

(6.) The learned counsel appearing for the petitions have contended that it is not the mere acquisition of property that constitutes an offence under Section 5(2)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 2006, but it is the failure to satisfactorily account for such possession that makes the possession objectionable as offending the law. An accused person has a statutory right to account for during the investigation as well as during the trial and can be held guilty in case it is not satisfactorily accounted for. In support of these contentions learned counsel have cited the case of of M. Krishna Reddy v. State Dy. Supdt. of Police, Hyderabad, AIR 1993 SC 313 : (1993 Cri L.J. 308) and State of Maharashtra v. Ishwar Piraji Kalpatri, AIR 1996 SC 722 : (1996 Cri L.J. 1127). It is further pleaded by them that offence is not punishable with death sentence or imprisonment for life but the maximum penalty on conviction provided under law is seven years as well as fine and in this view of the matter, there is no legal embargo for the grant of bail. Rather the petitioners while remaining on bail will be in a better position to account for their alleged dis-proportionate assets before the Investigating agency as according to the showing of the investigating agency itself the investigation is at its initial stage. The petitioners are not habitual offenders but Government servants about whom there can be no possibility of jumping over the bail.

(7.) These arguments have been controverter by the learned Sr. AAG by pleading that the alleged offences against the petitioners are against the society in general because these are economic offences perpetuated against the State exchequer and the assets which have been found to be dis-proportionate could not be satisfactorily explained by them. Referring of the case of M.K. Jalali (B.A. No. 93/97), the learned Sr. AAG has contended that he was asked to co-operate with the investigation on 19th, 20th and 21st of Dec. 1997 but he was not sincerely co-operating and giving evasive replies which compelled the investigating agency to take him into custody on 22nd of Dec. 1997. That on search being conducted in the premises occupied by him an amount of Rs. 19,86,150/- was recovered in cash from his possession. That different pass books enumerated in the seizure-memos (list whereof is given at page 12 with the objections) show that the amounts are debited in the names of various persons and lying in different Banks. These pass books were found from the custody of the accused and still he has to account for. These seizure-memos also contained some FDRs and further investigation is also required to be done as to the amount covered by them. Item No. 29 in the said seizure-memos pertained to the registration of a house situate in Trikuta Nagar and further enquiries are required to be made. Besides that, he has some immovable properties in the cities of Delhi and Srinagar and he has to be further investigated. The accused is a man of status having heavy purse with him who can tamper with the prosecution evidence as the persons whose pass-books have been seized from his possession are under the spell of influence and this Court in the case of Mazhar Ali Shah v. State, 1982 KL.J. 62 : (1982 Cri L.J. 1223), has laid down eight grounds which in his case weigh in favour of the prosecution and in that view of the matter the accused should be denied bail. Again in the case of Kunj Lal v. State, 1984 KL.J. 133 High Court declined the anticipatory bail on the plea that not fit case had been made out by the accused for that purpose. It has been further contended that these offences are against the society and required to be reviewed in the light of the law laid down in the case of N. Sasikala v. Enforcement Officer 1997 Cri L.J. 2127 where basing upon the ratio of case reported as AIR 1987 SC 1321 : (1987 Cri L.J. 1061), the bail was rejected. The ratio was that "the Community or the State is not a persona non-grata whose cause may be treated with disdain. The entire Community is aggrieved if the economic offenders who run the economy of the State are not brought to book."

(8.) Regarding application of Bindraban (B.A. No. 95/97) it has been admitted by the learned Sr. AAG that huge amount has not been recovered from his possession in the form of cash but nine pass-books and different banks deposits have been recovered from his possession. They are being looked into. These accounts are in the names of his kiths and kins and his retention of the account is required to be properly investigated. The withdrawals and deposits in the Banks also require verifications. Some deposits are made in the Post Office which also require verification.

(9.) Considering the respective contentions of the learned counsel for the parties it can be said that further detention of the petitioner-accused in the police custody is not required, who have been already with the investigating agency for the purpose of investigation since as the seized memos were effected on that date. Their further presence in the investigation has been admitted by the prosecution for 19th, 120th and 21st of Dec. 1997. The apprehension of the prosecution is that they will tamper with the prosecution evidence because the witnesses of the pass books are either their relations or under their influence and control. This argument has an element of future contingency which may happen or not. In case an accused person tampers with the prosecution evidence and he trial Court is satisfied on this aspect, the concession of bail can be withdrawn at any time. This argument is not relevant at this stage.

(10.) In the case of Ishwar Piraji Kalpatri (supra) the law laid down by the Apex Court in Veeraswami's case 1991 (3) SC 655 has been reiterated where it has been held that there is no provision in law or otherwise which makes it obligatory of an opportunity of being heard to be given to a person against whom the report is to be lodged. Rather, the law laid down is that the delinquent officer under Section 5(2)(e) of the Act has the right to satisfactorily explain about his assets and resources before the Court when the trial commences and not at an earlier stage. The burden of proof placed on the accused is an evidential burden though not a persuvasive burden. The Courts take into consideration the following questions for granting or refusing the bail which have been reiterated by this court in Mazhar Ali's case (supra) and the grounds are -

(a) the nature of the charge; (b) the nature of the accusation; (c) the nature of evidence in support of the accusation; (d) the severity of the punishment to which the accused may be subjected; (e) the danger of the accused abusing the concession of bail by way of absconding or tampering with the evidence.; (f) health, age and sex of the accused; (g) the social position er status of the accused and complainant party; and last but not the least (h) whether the grant of bail would thwart the course of justice.

(11.) The nature of the charge against the petitioners-accused is of having assets disproportionate to their known incomes and they have a statutory right to render explanation before the trial Court. The offence accused of is punishable with a maximum punishment for seven years with fine and minimum punishment of one year and with fine. The danger that the petitioners-accused will flee away in case enlarged on bail cannot viewed with seriousness as they have deep root in the society and social status.

(12.) Similar is the position to say that an admission to bail they would thwart the course of justice. In view of these facts and the circumstances no discussion is required on the subject as grant of bail is a rule and rejection an exception. Taking stock in all these facts and the circumstances the petitioners require to be admitted to bail.

(13.) Regarding the plea taken with regard to the registration of FIR against the petitioner M.K. Jalali in Kashmir it can be said that this offence can also be tried in Jammu. This controversy if raised will be solved by the trial Court after looking into the provisions of Sections 181, 182, Cr.P.C. and other relevant provisions and it cannot be said that this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the petition.

(14.) In view of what has been stated above, the petitions are, therefore, accepted and the petitioners-accused are admitted to bail on their furnishing bail bonds and personal bonds in the sums of Rs. 50,000/- each of the satisfaction of the Registrar (Judl.) with two sureties. The petitioners-accused shall co-perate with the investigation of the case as and when required, they will not tamper with the prosecution evidence in any manner and not leave the territory of the State of J. and K. without the prior permission of the trial Court. Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2000 Cri. L. J. 4660, 2000-AIR(SCW)-0-3349

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.T.THOMAS,M.B.SHAH,JJ

ABDUL HAMIT ANSARI ....Vs....State of Maharashtra

Criminal Appeal 295 Of 2000,

SPECIAL LEAVE PETITION (CRIMINAL) 3923 Of 1999 Mar 16,2000

==========

Cr. P.C. Sec. 438 - Anticipatory Bail – Murder case – IPC 302, 149 – Accused name not in F.I.R. – The appellant was included amongs others as a result of further investigation – He is not named in F.I.R. – The appeallant be directed to be released on bail if he surrender before Police.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Leave granted.

(2.) We know that this is a case under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code read with Section 149. Though the police was not able to trace out the culprits at the first stage of the investigation, pursuant to the petition filed by the widow of the deceased further investigation was conducted and the names of the present appellants are also now included among the suspected persons. We came across the antecedents of the deceased which appellants described as 'dreaded'. Nontheless, we are not inclined to give a pre-arrest bail order to the appellants. At the same time considering all the pros and cons of this matter we are of the view that some relief must be granted to the appellants in view of the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case. We, therefore, dispose of this appeal with the following directions :

(1) If appellants would surrender before the police within 2 weeks from today, we direct the Investigating Officer to complete the interrogation of the appellant concerned as expeditiously as possible. On completion of interrogation and recovery of material object, if any, such appellant shall be released on bail on his executing a bond in a sum of Rs. 5,000.00 with two solvent sureties each to the satisfaction of the Investigating Officer.

2. Appellants shall abide by the condition, inter alia, that no threat shall be exerted on any of the witnesses nor any evidence be tampered with. We also make it clear that if any of the appellants misuses the bail we permit the Investigating Officer or even the aggrieved person to move the Sessions Court or the High Court under Section 439(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure for cancellation of the bail. With these observations, this appeal is disposed of.Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2010-JT-6-498 , 2010-TLPRE-0-407

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V.S. Sirpurkar AND Cyriac Joseph, JJ.

Vijeta Gajra Vs State of NCT Of Delhi
CRIMINAL APPEAL NOS. 1182-1184 OF 2010
Arising out of SLP (Crl) 6091-6093 of 2009 Jul 08,2010

==========

Bail - Sec. 482 of Cri. P.C. and Art. 226 of the Constitution of India - Penal code (1860), Ss. 498-A, 406 – F.I.R. against petitioner who is not relative of husband – S. 498-A does not get attracted – Allegations against petitioner – about not returning jwellery which belonged to the complainant Held, The allegations are extremely wild and disgusting – In such cases interests of accused required to be protected – The petitioner accused would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by the court to do so and that too in the case of extreme necessity – Similarly no step shall be taken against her – She shall be granted bail by the court trying the case – The Trial Court shall be careful while considering the framing of charge – The appellant shall not be tried for offence u.s. 498 – A of I.P.C.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Leave granted.

(2.) The appellant herein challenges the order passed by the High Court whereby the petition filed by her was dismissed. The said petition was filed under Article 226 of the Constitution of India read with Section 482 of the Criminal Procedure Code for quashing the FIR No. 138/08 dated 07.08.2008 for offences under Section 498A and 406, Indian Penal Code in the Chitranjan Park Police Station.

(3.) This FIR was lodged by one Gunjan Sujanani, wife of one Rohit Sujanani. It is a long document wherein the complainant Gunjan Sujanani stated about her marriage with Rohit on 08.07.2003 and he being a resident of Nigeria. It was claimed that before the marriage, Rohit had introduced Gunjan to one Mr. Sham and Mrs. Lavina Daswani as his foster parents and also said that he had two foster sisters, namely, Vijeta Daswani (Vijeta Gajra-the appellant herein) who is a resident of Indore, Madhya Pradesh and the other being one Ms. Ritika Daswani, who resided with her mother in London. There are allegations made about the demand of dowry against the husband as also Mrs. Lavina Daswani. The demand included diamond neckless for Vijeta Daswani/Gajra. There was reference to subsequent behaviour of troubling the complainant on account of the dowry demands. The First Information Report also made some allegations regarding the relations of her husband Rohit Sujanani with Mrs. Lavina Daswani and Vijeta Daswani/Gajra, the present appellant. It was then contended that in December, 2003, when the complainant had gone to Sierra Leone, Vijeta Dasawani/Gajra took away her diamond encrusted heavy gold pendant and chain and earring set on the pretext that she wanted to wear them once and she would keep them at a safe place in her father's house. The complainant also stated that she did not return these ornaments. Further, it was stated that in May, 2004, Mr. Rohit Sujanani and Mrs. Lavina Daswani insisted that the complainant should keep her jewellery in London and claimed that she was slapped by her husband on her refusal. It was further claimed that in November, 2004, the present appellant, Vijeta Gajra got married during which the complainant had to beg for her ornaments for attending the marriage. There was a reference in the FIR to the misbehaviour on the part of Mrs. Lavina Daswani towards her and again the name of the present appellant figured therein. At this time, the complainant claimed that she was pregnant for the first time and yet she was given physical and mental ill treatment because of which she had a mis-carriage. There is a reference to the sexual behaviour of her husband with reference to a pornographic website. It was claimed that the complainant delivered a baby on 08.03.2007. Then there is reference to the appellant visiting and staying with the complainant's parents for three days and the allegation that her husband was having sexual relations with Vijeta Gajra, the appellant herein and Mrs.Lavina Daswani. There was a reference that during her stay the appellant was wearing the diamond encrusted pendant and gold chain and earring set which she had taken (practically stolen) in Sierra Leone.

(4.) In the last part of this lengthy FIR, there was a reference to the demand of two crores of rupees having been made by Vijeta and her mother over the phone to the complainant as a cost of peace and marital happiness. There was a reference to a telephonic conversation with Mrs. Lavina Daswani in this regard. There was a further reference to an ugly scene on account of arguments. However, there was also a reference to the presence of the brother of the complainant on account of which further ugly scenes were avoided. It was complained that, thereafter, the complainant and her parents tried to contact Rohit Sujanani and the Daswanis who were avoiding them and not returning jewellery which was with Vijeta Gajra, Lavina Daswani and Rohit Sujanani.

(5.) This complaint dated 15.04.2008 seems to have been registered as an FIR. It seems that on the basis of this FIR, the appellant was sent a summons under Section 160, Cr. P.C. and she moved the Court of Additional Sessions Judge, New Delhi under Section 438 Cr.P.C. for grant of anticipatory bail. In that application, she had made a reference to the summons asking her to appear on 05.06.2008. It was claimed in the application that the complainant's husband Rohit Sujanani was an employee of appellant's father who has business in Sierra Leone and that he was employed on contract basis for the period of three years in 1994. It was claimed in that application that the appellant had met the complainant last in 2007. It was also stated that the allegations made in the FIR were concocted, false and baseless and she had no connection whatsoever with the family of the complainant or her parents. She complained that her own marriage was being tried to be destroyed by wild allegations. There was a reference made in this application by the appellant for quashing the summons arising out of the complaint dated 15.04.2008 and also to a Criminal Miscellaneous Petition No. 2153 of 2008. The High Court had passed the order disposing it of since the State's Counsel had agreed to provide copy of the complaint and had further stated that in the event the FIR was registered, the applicant would be informed of this fact and no coercive action would be taken against her till then. In her application there was a statement that she did not even belong to the family of the complainant, her husband or any of their relatives and that all the allegations were palpably false. It was then stated that the writ petition was filed which came to be disposed of by the High Court. It seems that the complainant sought the direction to implead herself in the writ petition-cum-Section 482 Cr.P.C application filed by the appellant.

(6.) Following are the prayers in the said writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India read with Section 482, Cr.P.C.:

(a) Quash the FIR NO. 138/2008 dated 07.08.2008 under Sections 498A/406, IPC at Police Station Chitranjan Park registered against the petitioner; b) Direct the police not to take any coercive action against the petitioner in respect of the above said complaint: c) Pass such other and further orders which may be deemed fit and proper in the facts and circumstances of the case."

It is on this backdrop that we have to see as to whether it would be expedient to continue the criminal prosecution against the appellant.

(7.) Shri U.U. Lalit, Learned Senior Counsel, appearing on behalf of the appellant argued that in U. Suvetha v. State By Inspector of Police and Anr. [(2009) 6 SCC 757], it was specifically held that in order to be covered under Section 498A, IPC one has to be a 'relative' of the husband by blood, marriage or adoption. He pointed out that the present appellant was not in any manner a 'relative' as referred to in Section 498A, IPC and, therefore, there is no question of any allegation against her in respect of the ill-treatment of the complainant. The Court in this case examined the ingredients of Section 498A, IPC and noting the specific language of the Section and the Explanation thereof came to the conclusion that the word 'relative' would not include a paramour or concubine or so. Relying on the dictionary meaning of the word 'relative' and further relying on R. Ramanatha Aiyar's Advance Law Lexicon, Volume 4, 3rd Edition, the Court went on to hold that Section 498A, IPC being a penal provision would deserve strict construction and unless a contextual meaning is required to be given to the statute, the said statute has to be construed strictly. On that behalf the Court relied on the judgment in T. Ashok Pai v. CIT [(2007) 7 SCC 162]. A reference was made to the decision in Shivcharan Lal Verma and Anr. v. State of M.P. [(2007) 15 SCC 369]. After quoting from various decisions of this Court, it was held that reference to the word 'relative' in Section 498A, IPC would be limited only to the blood relations or the relations by marriage.

(8.) Relying heavily on this, Shri Lalit contended that there is no question of any trial of the appellant for the offence under Section 498A, IPC. The argument is undoubtedly correct, though opposed by the Learned Counsel appearing for the State. We are of the opinion that there will be no question of her prosecution under Section 498A, IPC. Learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of the complainant, Shri Soli J. Sorabjee, also did not seriously dispute this proposition. Therefore, we hold that the FIR insofar as it concerned Section 498A, IPC, would be of no consequence and the appellant shall not be tried for the offence under Section 498A, IPC.

(9.) That leaves us with the allegation under Section 406, IPC for the offence of criminal breach of trust as there are allegations in respect of the jewellery. We desist from saying anything at this juncture. We also desist from going into the correctness or otherwise of these allegations as they will have to be proved by evidence. Shri Lalit pointed out that on the face of it the allegations are wild and baseless as the appellant herself comes from a wealthy background and is a married lady having settled down in Indore and is also mother of a child. He pointed that the FIR is calculated to destroy her marital life with the wildest possible allegations and, therefore, we should quash the entire FIR as not being bona fide and actuated by malice.

(10.) There can be no doubt that the allegations made are extremely wild and disgusting. However, how far those allegations can be used to meet the requirements for the offence under Section 406, IPC is a moot question. For obvious reasons, we will not go into that exercise. Whatever the form in which the allegations under Section 406, IPC are made, the fact of the matter is that there is an FIR and the Court concerned has taken cognizance thereof. Under these circumstances, we would only protect the interest of the appellant by directing that she would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by the Court to do so and that too in the case of extreme necessity. Similarly, no coercive step shall be taken against her. She shall be granted bail by the Court trying the case if it decides to try the offence by framing the charge. We expect the Court to be careful while considering the framing of charge.

(11.) We, therefore, hold that the appellant shall not be tried for offence under Section 498A, IPC. However, we desist from quashing the FIR altogether in view of the allegations made under Section 406, IPC with the protection that we have granted to the appellant. With these observations, the appeals are disposed of.

****

Cross Citation :1991 Cr. L.J. 950, 1990-ILR(Del)-2-203 , 1992-CCR-1-708

HIGH COURT OF DELHI

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R.N.PYNE, P.N.NAG,JJ
Satish Kumar Sharma ….V/S…Delhi Administration
Criminal 265 Of 1990 Nov 11,1990

==========

Article 226 of constitution of India – Even if the offence is committed outside the jurisdiction of the High Court – The High Court can grant anticipatory bail even by using provisions of Article 226 of the constitution of India.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) To be heard today with the consent of both the parties.

(2.) The petitioner Captain Satish Kumar Shanna, a resident of Delhi is a member of the Parliament and owes allegiance to Indian National Congress. He actively campaigned in Amethi Parmentary Constituency for Sh. Rajiv Gandhi, for mer Prime Minister of India, during the Parliamentary Elections held in November, 1989 and Sh. Rajiv Gandhi won this, Parliamentary seat by a margin of more than 2,00,000 votes.

(3.) Shri SanJay Singh, who was earlier a sitting Congress (1) M.L.A., defected from the party and joined the Janta Dal. On the ticket of Jaata Dal he fought from Amethi Assembly Constituency but lost to the Congress candidate, viz., Harcharan Singh Yadav by a big margin, with the result, he became very inimical to the petitioner.

(4.) On 23-11-1989 at about 3.00 P.M. some unfortunate violent incident took place between Janfa Dal and the Congress workers and it appears there was a cross firing in which Shri Sanjay Singh received bullet injuries. F.I.Rs. were lodged by both the parties and cross cases were registered with the police station Munshi Ganj U/S 147, 148. 149 and 307 Indian Penal Code being case Crime No. 182 of 1989 and 182-A of 1989.

(5.) F.I.R. Crime No. 182 of 1989 was registered at the instance of Shri Ashish Shukla at about 345 n.m. on 22-11-1989 at P.S. Munshi Ganj in which allegation was that Shri Sanjay Singh fired with his rule as a result of which persons, namely- Manoj Kumar, Satya Narayan Yadav, Sitla Prasad etc. were injured.

(6.) F.I.R. Crime No. 182-A of 1989 was registered at aboat 6.45 A.M. on 23-11-1989 at the instance of Shri Jai Parkash Singh H.C. 24 according to which Shri Sanjay Singh sustained injuries. However, the assailants were unknown. In both the F.I.Rs. the name of the petitioner was not mentioned.

(7.) After investigation, first a charge sheet was filed in Court of CJM Sultanpur on 16-2-1990 in case Crime No. 182-A of 1989 U/S 147, 148, 149, 307, 302, 504 Indian Penal Code which was followed by two supplementary charge sheets dated 6-4-1990 and 7-5-1990. la all these three charge sheets the petitioner was not chargesheeted although it is stated in the return that the name of the petitioner was mentioned therein as an accused person against whom the investigations were pending. In these charge sheets there were 19 accused persons court whom 15 have already been enlarged on bail by the Sessions Judge, Sultanpur.

(8.) According to the petitioner, there is absolutely no case against him. In fact, no complicity in the crime was alleged against him from November, 1989 1st week of February, 1990. After Shri Sanjay Singh who returned from London after his treatment on 1st February. 1990 at his behest, pressure and undue influence the case against the petitioner was cooked up by the police and C.I.D of U.P. It has been alleged that Sanjay Singh is the brother's son-in-law of Shri V. P. Singh, the present Prime Minister of India and is very close of him; and, as such he is exercising tremendous influence on the Government of U.P. including CID and Police of U.P. as a result thereof he has been able to fabricate a false case against the petitioner after his return from England. As already mentioned, Shri Sanjay Singh is doing so out of political vendetta as he considers the petitioner responsible for his defeat in his Assembly constituency in Amethi. In fact he is determined to humiliate the petitioner by getting him arrested and paraded in the streets.

(9.) According to the petitioner, there is no evidence to connect him with the commission of the crime nor was his name mentioned in the FIR. That is why no charge sheet U/S 173 Criminal Procedure Code . could be submitted in the Court by the police till 21-5-1990 although three charge sheets in the. case were already submitted in the Court by fie police. This case was fabricated at the instance of Shri Sanjay Singh and police investigating Team added section 120-B Indian Penal Code . in the charge sheet already filed before the C.J.M., Sultanpur on the basis of evidence already recorded. No challan could be put up against the petitioner without any fresh evidence. Section 173 is a very important step as it requires investigation to be completed without unnecessary delay and in this case the petitioner has been. charge sheeted after six months.

(10.) After 7th May, 1990 when the last charge sheet was filed in Court and the petitioner, at that stage, as well was yet to be chellaned, the respondents, under undue pressure from Shri Sanjay Singh got non-bailable warrant issued on 14-5-1990 from Chief Judicial Magistrate, Sultanpur against the petitioner which was endorsed to the Commissioner of Police, Delhi for execution. After the said warrant of arrest was brought to Delhi and again endorsed in favour of various Delhi Police Functionaries like Additional Commissioner of Police, Deputy Commissioner of Police, Assistant Commissioner of Police and finally to Inspector of Police of P.S. Mehrauli who was authorised to execute the warrant and consequently to effect the arrest of the petitioner in Delhi within the jurisdiction of Delhi High Court. Since the petitioner was about to be arrested and deprived of his liberty he was constrained to file the present dvil writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution for restraining' the respondents from arresting the petitioner in case Crime No. 182-A/89 P.S. Munshi Ganj,Distt. Sultanpur, U.P. In this writ petition the petitioner has also prayed for quashing the proceedings in Case Crime No. 182-A/89 and the Warrant of arrest issued by C.J.M. Sultanpur against him. During the course of arguments, however, Mr. Bhardwaj learned counsel for the petitioner, did not press for quashing of proceedings and the impugned warrant although the arguments were addressed by him that there was no legal justification for the magistrate for issuing of such impugned warrant. However, he confined himself only to the prayer of restraining the respondents from arresting the petitioner and for enlarging him on the anticipatory bail.

(11.) The petitioner has also brought to our notice that he has also challenged the charge sheed and connected proceedings submitted before the Magistrate in the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad-Lucknow Bench-and a notice has been ordered to be; issued by that Court. Further proceedings have also been stayed. Certified copy of the order dated 25-6-1990 has been placed on record.

(12.) Respondents 2 and 3 have denied that the case has been fabricated out of political vendetta and under undue influence of Shri Sanjay Singh. They have also raised preliminary objections about the maintainability of the writ petition. The respondents have raised preliminary obfections that this court has no territorial jurisdiction to entertain the civil writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India; that the petitioner has an alternate remedy under the Criminal Procedure Code : and parallel proceedings have been initiated in the Lucknow Bench of Allahabad High Court. The writ petition therefore is not maintainable.

(13.) At the very outset Mr. Yogeshwar Prasad, learned counsel for respondents 2 and 3 vehemently submitted that this court has no territorial jurisdiction to entertain this petition as. according to him the cognizable oftence is alleged to have been committed in the State of Uttar Pradesh and such an offence can ordinarily be enquired into by the court in whose jurisdiction the offence has been committed. The jurisdiction with regard) to the grant of anticipatory bail, therefore, can only be exercised by the court in the State of Uttar Pradesh having jurisdiction in the matter.

(14.) As similar question arose before this court in Pritam Singh vs. State of Punjab (19-(1981) DLT 300)(1) where a cognizable offence was alleged to have been committed in the State of Punjab whereas the anticipatory bail was applied for before the Delhi High Court as the accused had reasonable apprehension of arrest in Delhi. In that context this Court observed that there is nothing in Section 438 which restricts the jurisdiction of the High Court or the Court of session. One need not mix up the jurisdiction relating to cognizance of an offence with that of granting of bails. Bails are against arrest and detention. Therefore, an appropriate court within whose jurisdiction the arrest takes place or is apprehended or is contemplated will also have jurisdiction to grant bail to the person concerned. If the court of session or the High Court has the jurisdiction to grant interim bail, then the power to grant full anticipatory bail will emanate from the same jurisdiction. Concurrent jurisdiction in courts situated in different States is not outside the scope of the Cr. P. C. It is not possible to divide the jurisdiction under Section 438 Criminal Procedure Code . into an ad interim and complete, but it permissible if it is so expedient or desirable, for any of the courts competent to take cognizance of and to try an offence and the courts competent to grant bails or grant anticipatory bail for a specified period only, and hereby this Court rejected the contention of the State of Punjab with regard to jurisdiction of the High Court of Delhi for the grant of anticipatory bail in respect of cognizable offence alleged to have been committed in the State of Punjab. Consequently, the petition for anticipatory bail was allowed finally and not as an interim measure.

(15.) In B. R. Sinha and others vs. The State (1982 Cri. L.J.61(2) the Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court also expressed the same view and observed that the High Court has jurisdiction to entertain an application for anticipatory bail of a petitioner who resides within the jurisdiction of High Court, though he apprehends arrest in connection with a case which has been started outside the jurisdiction of such Court.

(16.) This question also came up for consideration before the Karnataka High Court in Dr. L. R. Naidu vs. State of Karnataka (1984 01. L.J. 757)(3) wherein the Karnataka High Court expressed similar views that Section 438 provides relief to person apprehending arrest. A beneficial provision like Section 438, is required to be considered in favour of the citizen. There is nothing in the provisions of Section 438, suggesting that it is only the High Court or the Sessions Court, within whose jurisdiction, the case against the person apprehending arrest is registered that can grant bail. Therefore, the person apprehending arrest can seek bail in the High Court or the Sessions Court within whose jurisdiction, he ordinarily resides even though the offence in respect of which arrest is apprehended and case has been started was committed outside the jurisdiction of that Court (in another State).

(17.) A Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in N.K. Nayar and others vs. State of Maharashtra and others (1985 Cri. L.J. 1887)(4) again held that the provisions for the grant of anticipatory bail are contained in Section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code . An application for such type of bail can be made to the High Court or to the Court of Sessions whenever a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. Thus the real cause for making an application under Section 438 is the contemplated arrest of a person. If this arrest is likely to be effected within the jurisdiction of this Court, the concerned person should have the remedy of applying to that Court for anticipatory bail.

(18.) However, in Syed Zafrul Hassan and another vs. State (1986 Cri. L.J. 605x5) the Full Bench of Patna High Court has struck a dissenting note and held that Section 438 of the Code does not permit the grant of anticipatory bail by any High Court or any Court of Session within the country where the accused may choose to apprehend arrest. Such a power vests only in the Court of Session or the High Court having jurisdiction over the locale of the commission of the offence of which the person is accused. Question of residence of accused is irrelevant in such a case. This judgment, in fact, was heavily relied upon by Mr. Yogeshwar Prasad, learned counsel for respondents 2 and 3 and it was contended that this court has no jurisdiction to grant anticipatory bail to the petitioner and the reasoning adopted by him was the same as was adopted in that case for the proposition that the jurisdiction can be cxercised only. by the High Court or Court of Sessions where the offence is alleged to have been committed.

(19.) In the light of what is discussed above, the consensus view of various High Courts that emerges is that the High Court or Court of Sessions within whose territorial jurisdiction the person has a reasonable apprehension that he would be arrested shall have concurrent jurisdiction to grant anticipatory bail. We agree and endorse this consensus view and more particularly the view expressed by our High Court in Pritam Singh's case (supra). With respect, we find ourselves unable to agree with the views expressed by the Patna High Court.

(20.) In order to determine whether or not the High Court or the Court of Sessions within whose territorial jurisdiction a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, it is necessary to reproduce Section 4? 8(1) as under :-

"438(1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section; and that Court may, if it thinks fit. direct that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail."

(21.) A bare perusal of the Section reveals that no restrictions for grant of anticipatory bail have been imposed in Section 438(1) for exercise of jurisdiction by that High Court or Court of Sessions within whose territorial jurisdiction a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. On the other hand. such High Court or Court of Sessions has been conferred jurisdiction to exercise such power. It is no doubt true that the High Court or the Court of Sessions within whose territorial jurisdiction the offence has been committed and within whose jurisdiction the offence ordinarily be enquired into and tried by a Court shall also have the jurisdiction to grant anticipa tory bail. But this does not take away the jurisdiction of the High Court or Court of Sessions to grant anticipatory bail where a person has reason to believe that he would be arrested in connection with non-bailable offence. Section 438(1) is wide enough to confer jurisdiction not only to the High Court or the Court of Sessions within whose territorial jurisdiction the offence has been committed and is to be enquired into and tried but also the High Court or the Court of Sessions where a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested in connection with the commission of non-bailable offence. By taking away the jurisdiction from the High Court or the Court of Sessions for the grant of anticipatory bail within its territorial jurisdiction in respect of a person who may be arrested in connection with non-bailable offence would be reading certain words in the section which are not to be found therein. At the cost of repetition no restriction whatsoever has been placed for exercise of power by the High Court or the Court of Sessions for the grant of anticipatory bail within whose territorial jurisdiction if a person has reason to believe that he may he arrested in connection with non-bailable offence. The purpose for which this beneficial provision of anticipatory bail was introduced in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 has been referred to by the Supreme Court in para 8 of Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia vs. State of Punjab AR 1880 S.C. 1632(6) Para 8 of that judgement is reproduced below :-

"No one can accuse the police of possessing a healing touch nor indeed does anyone have misgivings in regard to constraints consequent upon confinement in police custody. But, society has come to accept and acquiesce in all that follows upon a police arrest with a certain amount of sang-froid, in so far as the ordinary rule of criminal investigation is concerned. It is the normal day-to-day business of the police to investigate into charges brought before them, and, broadly and generally. they have nothing to gain, not favours at any rate. by subjecting ordinary criminals to needless harassment. But the crimes, the criminals and even the complainants can occasionally possess extraordinary features. When the even flow of life becomes turbid, the police can be called upon to inquire into charges arising out of political antagonism. The powerful processes of criminal law can then be perverted for achieving extraneous ends. Attendant upon such investigations, when the police are not free agents within their sphere of duty, is a great amount of inconvenience, harassment and humiliation. That can even take the form of the parading of a respectable person in hand-cutts, apparently on way to a court of justice."

Further, in para 26 of that judgment the Supreme Court has further held that since denial of bail amounts to deprivation of personal liberty, the Court should lean against the imposition of unnecessary restrictions on the scope of Section 438, especially when no such restrictions have been imposed by the legislature in the terms of that section. Section 438 is a procedural provision which is concerned with the personal liberty of the individual, who is entitled to the benefit of the preunuption of innocence since he is not, on the date of his application for anticipatory bail, convicted of the offence in respect of which he seeks bail. An over-generous infusion of constraints and conditions which are not to be found in Section 438 can make its provision constitutionally vulnerable since the right to personal freedom cannot be made to depend on compliance with unreasonable restrictions. The beneficent provision contained in Section 438 must be saved, not jettisoned. These observations have been made in the context that earlier the view taken was that the power of granting anticipatory bail was somewhat extraordinary in character and in exceptional cases it should be granted. Having regard to the object and the purpose for which this beneficent provision was enacted by way of amendment in 1973 in the Code of Criminal Procedure and more particularly no restriction whatsoever has been imposed by the legislature in Section 438 which takes away the jurisdiction of the High Court or Court of Sessions within whose jurisdiction a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested in connection with non-bailable offence and in the light of the observations of the Supreme Court in this context, we have no hesitation to hold that Section 438(1) confers concurrent jurisdiction in the High Court and the Court of Sessions to enlarge a person on anticipatory bail within whose jurisdiction a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed non-bailable offence.

(22.) Viewed from different angle, under Article 226 of the Constitution the High Court has been given still wider powers. Under Article 226(2) it has been provided that the power conferred byclause (1) to issue directions, orders or writs to any Government, authority or person may also be exercised by any High Court exercising jurisdiction in relation to the territories within which the cause of action, wholly or in part, arises for the exercise of such power, notwithstanding that the seat of such Government or authority or the residence of such persons is not within those territories. In the present case, the facts are undisputed that on the basis of a non-bailable warrant for the arrest of the petitioner issued by C.J.M. Sultanpur the petitioner is sought to be arrested in Delhi by execution of the said warrants by the Commissioner of Police, Delhi to whom the warrant was endorsed by the C.J.M. Sultanpur. In other words, the petitioner is sought to be deprived of his personal liberty and threatened to be arrested in Delhi within the jurisdiction of High Court of Delhi and through the police officers of Delhi to whom the warrant has been endorsed, although the offence is alleged to have been committed in the State of Uttar Pradesh. Therefore, it cannot be disputed that since there is a threat of deprivation of liberty of the petitioner in the State of Delhi in connection with an offence alleged to have been committed in the State of Uttar Pradesh, the cause of action in part certainly arises in Delhi. Therefore, this Court has jurisdiction in the matter irrespective of the seat of the Government or the High Court within whose jurisdiction the offence is alleged to have been committed. Therefore, in the light of the discussion above, we have no doubt in mind that since the petitioner has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailabte offence in Delhi, this Court has certainly the jurisdiction to enlarge the petitioner on anticipatory bail under Section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as well as under Article 226 of the Constitution.

(23.) In the case of S.M.D. Kiran Pasha vs. Government of Andhra Pradesh and others, (1990) 1 S.C.C. 328(7), Supreme Court has clearly held that for protection of fundamental right of personal liberty guaranteed under Artcile 21 of the Constitution of India from its threatened and imminent violation writ petition under Article 226 is maintainable.

(24.) The next preliminary objection raised on behalf of respondents 2 and 3 was that the petitioner should have availed of alternate remedies under Criminal Procedure Code . and he should be directed to avail of those remedies and this petition should be thrown out on this ground alone. Thfs submission of Mr. Yogeshwar Prasad is wholly devoid of any force. When there is imimnent/ urgent threat of deprivation of personal liberty of a citizen, he cannot be asked to avail of the alternate remedies in such a situation as in this process he may actually be arrested and therefore, such remedy will, therefore, neither be adequate nor efficacious.

(25.) It was again straneously urged that the petitioner has started parallel proceedings in the Lucknow Bench of the Allahabad High Court wherein he has sought the quashment of the proceedings of the charge sheet and trial under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as according to the petitioner no case has been made out against him under Section 147, 148, 149, 307 Indian Penal Code . As already stated, the prayer made in this writ petition for quashing of the proceedings has neither been pressed nor argued on merits and in fact have been dropped by counsel for the petitioner. Counsel for respondents 2 and 3 has also not addressed this Court on merits. In the face of this there is no question of starting any parallel or of pending proceedings before the Lucknow Bench of Allahabad High Court. In such a situation, there is no question of any parallel proceedings. This contention, therefore, must also fail.

(26.) What should be the consideration for the grant of anticipatory bail which has again been the subject-matter in Gurubaksh Singh Sibbia's case (supra). In that case, in substance, it has been observed that grant of anticipatory bail should be left to the discretion of the High Court or the Court of Sessions as no fixed principles can be laid down for the grant of such bail as two cases are never similar and the Cr. P.C. cannot provide for all the eventualities where the granting of bail lies within the discretion of the court, the granting or denial is regulated, to a large extent, by the facts and circumstances of each particular case. Since the object of the detention or imprisonment of the accused is to secure his appearance and submission to the jurisdiction and the judgment the court, the primary inquiry is whether a recognizance or bond would effect that end. For the purpose of grant of bail the accused petitioner must have reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. The belief must be reasonable and not vague or fanciful or imaginative. Normally, in the matters of bail, the grant of bail is a rule and refusal is an exception. In regard to anticipatory bail the Supreme Court has further observed :

"In regard to anticipatory bail, if the proposed accusation appears to stem not from motives of furthering the ends of justice but from some ulterior motive, the object being to injure and humiliate the applicant by having him arrested, a direction for the release of the applicant on bail in the event of his arrest would generally be made. On the other hand, if it appears likely, considering the antecedents of the applicant, that taking advantage of the order of anticipatory bail, he will flee from justice, such an order would not be made. But the converse of these propositions is not necessarily true. That is to say, it cannot be laid down as ait inexorable rule that anticipatory bail cannot be granted unless the proposed accusation appears to be actuated by mala fides; and equally, that anticipatory bail must be granted if there is no fear that the applicant will abscond. There are several other considerations, too numberous to enumerate, the combined effect of which must weight with the court while granting or rejecting anticipatory bail. The nature and seriousness of the proposed charges, the context of the events likely to lead to the making of the charges, a reasonable possibility of the applicant's presence not being secured at the trial, a reasonable apprehension that witnesses will be tampered with and "the larger interests of the public or the State" are some of the considerations which the court has to keep in mind while deciding an application for anticipatory bail."

(27.) In the present case, it may be noted that the petitioner had reason to believe that he was going to be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence; that the warrant had been issued by C.J.M. Sultanpur and endorsed to the Commissioner of Police. Delhi for execution of the warrant and Police Station Mehrauli was about to execute the warrant and thereby arrest the petitioner; that the investigation in this case was already over even at the time when the warrant was issued on 14-5-1990 and the charge-sheet has already been submitted in the court of C.J.M. Sultanpur on 21-5-1990. Already 3 charge-sheets on 16-2-1990, 6-4-1990 and 7-5-1990 have been presented before C.J.M. Sultanpur and in these charge sheets, the petitioner has not been challaned. These three charge sheets have been filed against 19 accused. All of them have already been enlargd on bail by the Court of Sessions Judge, Sultanpur, and the High Court of 'Judicature at Allahabad, Lucknow Bench. There is no question now of any interference in the investigation of police. The petitioner's name does not find place in the F.I.R. The petitioner is an M.P. and has deep roots in the society and there is no likelihood of being absconding or tampering with the witnesses who are all residents of U.P. In case he is released on bail it can safely be said that he will appear in court as and when required and he will not jump out the bail. He is a respectable man of the Society and is not a pre-convict.

(28.) The offence alleged against the petitioner appears to be of conspiracy under Section 120B read with other offences which is not so heinous a crime. Furthermore, it is settled low that the challan has to be put before magistrate/court of sessions, without unnecessary delay. In the present case the challan has been put up against the petitioner after six months, more particularly after the presentation of three charge sheets in respect of other 19 accused persons, more particularly when the evidence has already been collected and there is no further evidence available with the prosecution for implicating the petitioner in the commission of the crime at such a belated stage.

(29.) So, having regard to the antecedents, character of the petitioner, nature of offence and overall background and all other surrounding circumstances. We are of the firm view that the petitioner deserves to be enlarged on anticipatory bail.

(30.) What conditions should be imposed on the petitioner, including the personal bond and sureties ? In this connection the case of Hussainara Khatoon and others Vs. Home

Secretary. State of Bihar, Patna (AIR 1979 SC 1360) (8) may be referred to. In that case it has been held that even under the law as it stands today the courts must abandon the antiquated concept under which pretrial release is ordered only against bail with sureties. That concept is outdated and experience has shown. that it has done more harm than good. The new insight into the subject of pretrial release which has been developed in socially advanced countries and particularly the United States should now inform the decisions of our Courts in regard to pretrial release. If the Court is satisfied, after taking into account, on the basis of information placed before it, that the accused has his roots in the community and is not likely to abscond it can safely release the accused on his personal bond.

(31.) In the present case the undisputed facts, as already mentioned, are that the petitioner is an M.P. and enjoys respectable status and presumes to be in good financial condition. There is nothing against his reputation, character and monetry condition. The very fact that he is a Member of (Parliament shows that he is a respectable member of the community who would watch for his reliability and that he has deep roots in. the community which would deter him from fleeing from the process of the court. In these circumstances, the ends of justice would be fully met if the petitioner is released on the personal bond of Rs. 10,000 in the event of his arrest.

(32.) The next question that may arise is as to whether the petitioner should be granted anticipatory bail for a limited period till he approaches the magistrate of Uttar Pradesh who has also jurisdiction in the matter. In this connection we may again refer to Gurbaksh Singh's case (supra) wherein the Supreme Court has laid down that the normal rule should be not to limit the operation of the order in relation to a period of time for the grant of anticipatory bail. In the prevent case, the investigation is complete, charge-sheets have been presented before the court and only trial has to be held. The grant of bail is only ensure that the petitioner attends the trial regularly and. therefore, there is no question of interference in the investifiation. Furthermore, this Court has taken the view with which we are respectfully in agreement that the concurrent Jurisdiction has been conferred on courts under Criminal Procedure Code . The appropriate court within whose jurisdiction the petitioner apprehends arrest will also have jurisdiction to the grant of bail to the person concerned. Concurrent jurisdiction is courts situated in different States is not outside the scope of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is not possible to divide the jurisdiction under Section 438 Criminal Procedure Code into an ad interim and complete. Therefore, even this Court has got concurrent jurisdiction to grant bail in respect of the offences which arc to be tried in the Slate of Uttar Pradesh. Normally, we wouH have granted antlcipatory bail for some period and asked the petitioner to apply for permanent bail before competent court of jurisdiction in Uttar Pradesh. But, since in this case the investigation is already over and, in fact, charge-sheets have also been filed before the competent court and there is apprehension in the mind of the petitioner that in the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case that in Uttar Pradesh where the offence would be enquired into and tried, there is likelihood of the petitioner being humiliated in the eyes of people. In such circumtances and situation it would be appropriate and expedient in the interest of justice to grant him anticipatory bail till the conclusion of the trial.

(33.) We, therefore, allow this petition and enlarge the petitioner on anticipatory bail in the criminal case being Crime No. 182A/89 pending in the Court of C.J.M., District Sultanpur, U.P., and further direct that in the event of his arrest, the petitioner shall be released on his furnishing a personal bond fur a sum of Rs. 10,000 to the person/officer effecting his arrest for the petitioner's appearance before the concerned court. After the personal bond is furnished by the petitioner, as directed, the same shall be sent thereafter to the Court of C.J.M., District, Sultanpur U.P.

****

Cross Citation :2006-DLT-134-390, 2006-AD(Del)-7-589

HIGH COURT OF DELHI

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S.N.AGGARWAL, J
K. Jayram ….V/s…State
BAIL APPLN 3008,3009 Of 2006 Aug 30,2006

==========

Anticipatory Bail – I.P.C. 406, 409, 420. 467, 468, 471, 120 B – Petitioner Director of the company – Complainant company signed MOU – Contract with petitioner – Failure to fulfil promise – Security deposit of complainant not returned – Held, Dispute is purely of civil nature – The tendency in the business circles to convert purely civil disputes in to criminal cases highly deprecated by Supureme Court – Co-accused already granted bail – Petitioners also entitled to be released on Anticipatory Bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) (ORAL) Exemption granted subject to just exceptions. Bail Appln.No.3008-09/2006 and Crl.M.A.No.8780/2006 Notice. Mr. Sunil Sharma, APP for the State, accepts notice of this application on behalf of the respondent. Mr. Lalit Kumar, Advocate is also present on behalf of the complainant.

(2.) This bail application is opposed by the learned APP for the State. He has opposed this bail application on the ground that the amount of alleged cheating involved in this case is quite huge and that other CandF Agents appointed by the petitioners have also filed similar complaints against him in the State of Gujrat, Kerala and West Bengal.

(3.) The facts relevant for the decision of this bail application are as follows:- The petitioners are accused of offences under Section 120B/406/409/420/467/468/471 IPC in case registered against them vide FIR No.736/2005 with Police Station Punjabi Bagh. The Petitioner No.1 is the Chairman of a company called India Household and Health Care Ltd. (hereinafter referred as IHHL) which was doing the business of importing the health care and household goods of South Korean company named LG House Hold and Health Care Ltd. (hereinafter referred as M/s LGHHL) into India. The Petitioner No.2 is the wife of the Petitioner No.1 and a Director of the above named company called IHHL which has been accused by the complainant for cheating and defrauding.

(4.) The complainant M/s Akshatha Services Pvt. Ltd. was appointed as Clearing and Forwarding Agent (CandF Agent) by the IHHL when the IHHL was at the advance stage of discussion to acquire exclusive marketing rights for Indian territory for the Fast Moving Consumer Products (FMCG) with the above named South Korean company LGHHL. An agreement dated 01.06.2004 between IHHL and the complainant company is Annexure A-1 at Page 18 of the paper book.

(5.) On 01.11.2003, the LGHHL had entered into a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), annexed as Annexure A-2 at page 58 of the paper book. As per the terms of the MOU, the LGHHL had appointed IHHL as its sole representative, importer and licensee for the import, promotion, sale and marketing of the whole range of Fast Moving Consumer Goods of LGHHL. The said MOU contemplated the achievement of sale of products of LGHHL by IHHL worth 4.5 million USD in two years and had an automatic renewal clause based on the performance. The LGHHL had acted upon the MOU and exported its products to India from their factories in Korea, Vietnam. All the products were emblazoned with LG logo along with the name of IHHL printed as sole licensee.

(6.) In order to promote the business, IHHL had appointed several Clearing and Forwarding Agents. The complainant on whose complaint the present FIR was registered against the petitioners and others is one of such CandF Agents. In continuation of the MOU, the LGHHL had executed a License Agreement with the IHHL on 08.05.2004 crystallizing the rights and liabilities of the parties. A copy of the said License Agreement is at pages 67 to 90 of the paper book.

(7.) It is contended that pursuant to the aforementioned MOU and the License Agreement, the IHHL had invested huge amount to the tune of Rs.500 Crores on promotion, advertisement, creation of the network of distributors and established 23 warehouses across the India, 4 Regional Headquarters, one Corporate Office, appointed 23 major CandF Agents and also created other nation wise infrastructure. It is further contended that under the MOU, the IHHL had given a purchase commitment of 2 million USD for the year 2004-05 and 2.5 million USD for the year 2005-06. However the IHHL had achieved the entire target of 4.5 million USD in just 7-8 months and had purchased products worth 4.5 million USD from LGHHL by August, 2004 The contention of the counsel for the petitioner is that the achievement of the target by the IHHL in such a short time had unearthed the potential of the Indian Market and it has polluted the minds of the officials of LGHHL and on that count LGHHL allegedly started to distant itself from IHHL since September, 2004 onwards. the LGHHL had instructed the IHHL to put on hold the business on the pretext that a serious internal dispute regarding the use of LG logo had arisen in the company and further instructed to put on hold the business until the confusion pertaining to the use of LG logo was resolved within the LG Company. The LGHHL thereafter terminated all business relations with IHHL through a legal notice dated 05.02.2005 sent to IHHL. In the aforesaid notice the stand taken by LGHHL was that the documents viz. the MOU dated 01.11.2003 and the License Agreement dated 08.05.2004 are null and void as the same were executed on behalf of LGHHL by working level officers who were junior in rank to the Management. The counsel for petitioner has contended that the LGHHL official who had signed the contract with IHHL had also signed the contract with many other countries also. He has referred to page 118-A to 118-I of the paper book (Annexure-A-6-A) to show the copy of one such Agreement.

(8.) The learned counsel for the petitioners has argued that the petitioners and the Management of IHHL had done all that was possible to sort out the problem but on account of unilateral termination of the contract of IHHL by LGHHL, the IHHL ran into huge losses on account of unexpected and unforeseen situation created by LGHHL. It is submitted that the IHHL has filed an arbitration agreement before the Supreme Court and the dispute arising out of unilateral termination of its contract by LGHHL is presently pending in the Supreme Court where a prayer has been made for referring the same to the panel of arbitrators. The counsel has further contended that the LGHHL has colluded with the complainant in order to defeat and circumvent the claim of the IHHL for the unfortunate and most arbitrary termination of the contractual relationship with IHHL by the LGHHL. The FIR in question registered against the petitioners is alleged to be the outcome of that collusion between LGHHL and the complainant company. The counsel for the complainant has contended that the complainant company was induced by IHHL to make a security deposit of Rs. 1.5 crores on the pretext that the complainant was going to be appointed as CandF Agent for LG Company. This contention is denied by the learned counsel for the petitioners. At this stage, the learned APP for the State has contended that the goods supplied by M/s IHHL to the complainant company were of sub-standard quality and the complainant had asked IHHL to take it back and to return the security deposit of the complainant. It is submitted that neither the goods were taken back by IHHL nor the security amount of the complainant was refunded to it.

(9.) The learned counsel for the petitioners has also argued that Vijay R. Singh, Managing Director of IHHL was arrested and he was admitted to regular bail by the Court of Shri O.P. Gupta, ASJ, Rohini, Delhi. In the bail order of petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh, it is mentioned that the dispute between the parties seems to be of civil nature. It is also mentioned in the bail order pertaining to Vijay R. Singh that the genuineness of the documents by and between LGHHL and IHHL is not in dispute, rather the I.O. confirms having verified the same. The bail order in relation to petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh is at pages 152-153 of the paper book. The learned counsel for the petitioners has urged that the petitioners are also entitled to be admitted to bail applying the principle of parity as their co-accused Vijay R. Singh has already been admitted to bail by the Sessions Court.

(10) The learned counsel for the petitioners has also argued that Vijay R. Singh, Managing Director of IHHL was arrested and he was admitted to regular bail by the Court of Shri O.P. Gupta, ASJ, Rohini, Delhi. In the bail order of petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh, it is mentioned that the dispute between the parties seems to be of civil nature. It is also mentioned in the bail order pertaining to Vijay R. Singh that the genuineness of the documents by and between LGHHL and IHHL is not in dispute, rather the I.O. confirms having verified the same. The bail order in relation to petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh is at pages 152-153 of the paper book. The learned counsel for the petitioners has urged that the petitioners are also entitled to be admitted to bail applying the principle of parity as their co-accused Vijay R. Singh has already been admitted to bail by the Sessions Court.

(11.) The learned APP for the State has disputed the parity claimed by the petitioners. He has submitted that the petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh was granted bail by the Sessions Court after he remained in custody for 45 days. According to him since the petitioners are asking for anticipatory bail, they cannot claim parity with their co-accused Vijay R. Singh. The learned APP has also contended that the custodial presence of the petitioners is required for making recovery of account books and other related documents of the company M/s IHHL from them. He has also submitted that the petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh has stated in his disclosure statement that the petitioner No.1 alone can tell where security deposit of the complainant worth Rs.1.5 crores has gone and for that purpose also the custodial presence of the petitioner No.1 is required. The learned APP has further submitted that the petitioner No.1 despite orders of the Court in his first anticipatory bail application has not co- operated in the investigation. He has said that except for once the petitioner No.1 did not appear before the I.O. for his interrogation. This submission of the learned APP implies that the petitioner No.1 had attended the inquiry into the case before the I.O. at least on one occasion. The contention of the learned APP that custodial presence of petitioner No.1 is required for making recovery of the account books and other related documents of IHHL does not hold any water. I am of the view that if the I.O. could not recover the account books of IHHL from the Managing Director of the said company though he remained in police custody for five days, how could recovery of account books be made from the petitioner No.1.

(12.) In G. Sagar Suri v. State of UP, 2000 (2) SCC 636, the Supreme Court has observed as under:

"It is to be seen if a matter, which is essentially of civil nature, has been given a cloak of criminal offence, criminal proceedings are not a short cut of other remedies available in law. Before issuing process a criminal court has to exercise a great deal of caution. for the accused it is a serious matter. This Court has laid certain principles on the basis of which High Court is to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Jurisdiction under this Section has to be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice."

(13.) In M/s. Indian Oil Corporation v. M/s. NEPC India Ltd. and Ors. (Criminal Appeal No. 834/2002 decided on 20.7.2006), the Supreme Court has observed that there is a growing tendency in the business circles to convert purely civil disputes into criminal cases on account of a prevalent impression that civil law remedies are time consuming and do not adequately protect the interest of lenders/creditors.

(14.) The ratio of law laid down by the Supreme Court in the aforementioned two judgments squarely applies to the facts of the present case. In this case also, it prima-facie appears that the complainant company has filed the FIR in question against the petitioners to convert a business dispute of purely civil nature into a criminal case. I am further of the view that in case the petitioners have done any criminal wrong for which FIR in question is registered against them, they can be punished as per law after the trial against them is over. Both the petitioners seeking their anticipatory bail in the present case have roots in the society. There is no apprehension of their absconding the trial. In my view, the petitioners cannot be denied bail particularly when their co-accused Vijay R. Singh has already been admitted to bail.

(15.) In view of the above and having regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case, the petitioners are admitted to anticipatory bail on their executing bail bonds in the sum of Rs.5 lacs each with two sureties each in the like amount to the satisfaction of the concerned Arresting Officer and subject to the further condition that they shall not leave the country without prior permission of the Court. The petitioners are directed that they shall join the investigation as and when called by the I.O. Order dasti to both sides.

****

Cross Citation :2001-Cr L. J. -0-3739, 2001-Crimes-3-409

HIGH COURT OF ORISSA

Coram : M.PAPANNA,J Prof.D.N.Rao ....V/s.... State
Cri Misc. Case 3412 Of 2001, Jul 06,2001

==========

Cr. P. C. 438 – Anticipatory Bail – Delay in lodging in F.I.R. Sections 295, 354, 500, 506, 509, 34 of IPC – Documents shows that the victim tried to falsely implicate the accused – FIR lodged after a delay of 1 year – Charges made are not free from doubt Accused entitles to be granted anticipatory bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) This is an application for an anticipatory bail moved by the petitioners before this Court for invoking its jurisdiction under S. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(2.) Facts of the case relevant for the purpose of its adjudication are delineated concisely hereunder.

(3.) At Bhubaneswar there is an Institute known as Xavier Institute of Management (in short, 'the Institute'). It is Center for Development Research and Training (in short, the 'CENDERET'). One Miss. Bharati Ray (in short, 'the victim') happens to be a Senior Programme Manager of the Institute. Petitioner No. 1, D N. Rao (in short, 'Mr. Rao') acts as a coordinator of the Institute. Petitioner No. 2 Mrs. Swapna Harison is his Secretary whereas petitioner No. 3, Dr. Latha Rabinderan is the Professor of the said Institute. The victim alleges a series of incidents of sexual harassment and misbehavior meted out to her by Mr. Rao. He addresses her always openly as well as in official discussions as "you are just like use and throw pen, rotten apple and rotten fish". He, in a discussion, accused her once, saying that when she was proceeding on leave she was spending time with Director and keeping illicit relationship. On many occasions he directed her to stay in the office beyond office hours and also come to office on holidays. On protest, he directed her to go to distant places like Koraput or Malkangiri even if there was no need to go there (sic) particularly when other male colleagues in the office are sitting idle. After publication of news regarding sexual harassment caused by him to other lady employees of the Institute in newspapers like 'Adhikar' and 'Pratishruti', he passed indecent and filthy remarks like you bloody idiot hand in glove with this publication". He has also sent a number of times, some letters containing a lot of sexually coloured languages and then wiped out immediately. He has appealed her a number f times for his lust for sex. And for having failed in his attempts, he officially puts her to a number of difficulties. Whenever, he comes to her single room at Cenderet Building he always sits close to her in spite of her objections. He has touched her body a number of times on pretext of seeing her necklace or how she wears her saree. He talks always regarding sex and sexual objects of lady members, thereby creating a lot of embarrassment for her. On protest he becomes violent and with grudge tries to put her to a lot of difficulties during official transaction. He threatened to evaluate her performance and C.C.R. as poor and transfer her to Koraput or Keonjhar. Sometimes he has threatened her to remove from service with the help of Director of the Institute. Though she reported to the previous Director regarding the aforesaid misdeeds of Mr. Rao but in vain. At last she intimated the said Director about her trauma and harassment through her lawyer but of no use. Though on 26-6-2000 he wrote her a letter stating that he would take care of her case for further action but at the same time he had sent another envelope containing nude picture of a lady super-imposing her official photo with it. In the said envelope the Director has written in his own hand as "Ms. Bharati Ray, CENDERET" at the back of the seminude picture. The Director (GYANERATHINAM) has written in his own hand as "to his daughter from Gautam Budha". The said Director was removed from the post of Director by the Governing Body of the Institute and in his place the present Director has joined. So at last out of fear of suspension and removal from service she brought a writ in O.J.C. No. 6555 of 2000 before this Court to issue direction to the State Government to provide her protection from being sexually harassed by the petitioners and to cause enquiry into her allegations and take appropriate action against the perpetrators. It is alleged by her that during dependency of the writ application petitioner no. 3 at the direction of Mr. Rao pressurised her to withdraw the same. She also threatened her with dire consequences if she does not agree to her suggestions. Similarly, petitioner No. 2 pressurised her to withdraw her case from the High Court. She has also threatened her to beat with chappels unless she agrees o her suggestions. It is also alleged that Mr. Rao is always giving threats to her life and properties for which she is passing her days with apprehension and fear. The victim further alleges that on 25-1-2001 Mr. Rao scolded her through intercom phone saying " you are a prostitute. How long you will survive I will see. Your days are numbered". On her information with the aforesaid allegations Chandrasekharpur P.S. Case No. 64 of 2001 under Ss. 294/354/500/506/509/34, IPC was registered and investigation of the caseis now in progress for which the petitioners are apprehending their arrest by the police. Hence, the application for anticipatory bail is made by them with a prayer to admit them to bail in the event of their arrest by the police.

(4.) In this case the petitioners are represented through their counsel, Shri Ashok Kumar Mohanty. Learned Advocate Shri N.C. Panigrahi is appearing for the victim and the Additional Standing Counsel is representing the State. The petitioners' counsel submits that the allegations made against the petitioners are false and frivolous. According to him, the allegations as reflected in the FIR do not constitute the offences in the Indian penal code. It also contended by him that the victim claims for her promotion and as she was not found suitable for promotion she is making various allegations falsely in the colour of sexual harassment against the petitioners. The learned counsel for the victim, on the other hand, vehemently opposes to grant anticipatory bail to the petitioners on the facts and in the circumstances of the case. He relies on a series of decisions of this court as well as the Hon'ble Apex Court in Support of his contentions. The learned Additional Standing Counsel appearing for the State has rendered assistance to this Court supplying the case diary during the course of hearing on the matter.

(5.) Provision of S. 438, Cr. P.C. which empowers the High Court or the Court of Session to grant anticipatory bail to a person apprehending arrest is quoted below :

"(1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation or having committed a non-bailable offences, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section; and that Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail xxx xxx xxx"

(6.) The above provision of law as contemplated under S. 438, Cr. P.C. is very clear. It says that an applicant seeks for anticipatory bail when he apprehends his arrest on the accusation that he has committed a non-bailable offence. It gives a very wide discretion to the High Court as well as the Court of Session to exercise while dealing with anticipatory bail. The discretion has to be exercised very cautiously and judiciously but with not whims and caprice. Therefore, in exceptional cases only, this extraordinary power conferred by S. 438, Cr. P.C. has to be invoked. Thus, the Court has to bear in mind a basic principle while allowing or rejecting a prayer for anticipatory bail. The principle is, every individual has a right to his personal liberty. When It is curtailed or in jeopardy he has a remedy under S. 438, Cr. P.C. Such an individual is entitled to the benefit of presumption of innocence, since on the date of making application for anticipatory bail he is not convicted for the offence in respect of which he seeks bail. In the background of the facts of the case, keeping in mind, the aforesaid basic principle, hearing at length the submissions of the learned counsel appearing for the parties, I am called upon to adjudicate the application for anticipatory bail.

(7.) I have gone through the FIR lodged by the victim alleging that the petitioners in furtherance of their common intention have subjected her to sexual harassment and misbehaviour for which she brought a writ in OJC No. 6555 of 2000 before this Court, who while deciding the said writ application came to hold that there is no complaints committee legally constituted by the Institute in terms of the guidelines issued by the Apex Court in AIR 1997 SC 3011 : (1997 Lab IC 2890) (Vishaka v. State of Rajasthan) and therefore, the opp. parties were directed to constitute such a committee in terms of the said guidelines. The committee has to look into the allegations of sexual harassment and to find out whether such allegations constitute sexual harassment or not? When the committee examines the victim's allegations she can adduce evidence before the committee to substantiate the same. After the committee submits enquiry report in terms of the guidelines issued by the Apex Court holding that allegation made by the victim are found to be correct, then only action should be taken against the offenders.

(8.) In this case the petitioners are represented through their counsel, Shri Ashok Kumar Mohanty. Learned Advocate Shri N.C. Panigrahi is appearing for the victim and the Additional Standing Counsel is representing the State. The petitioners' counsel submits that the allegations made against the petitioners are false and frivolous. According to him, the allegations as reflected in the FIR do not constitute the offences in the Indian penal code. It also contended by him that the victim claims for her promotion and as she was not found suitable for promotion she is making various allegations falsely in the colour of sexual harassment against the petitioners. The learned counsel for the victim, on the other hand, vehemently opposes to grant anticipatory bail to the petitioners on the facts and in the circumstances of the case. He relies on a series of decisions of this court as well as the Hon'ble Apex Court in Support of his contentions. The learned Additional Standing Counsel appearing for the State has rendered assistance to this Court supplying the case diary during the course of hearing on the matter.

(9.) Provision of S. 438, Cr. P.C. which empowers the High Court or the Court of Session to grant anticipatory bail to a person apprehending arrest is quoted below :

"(1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation or having committed a non-bailable offences, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section; and that Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail xxx xxx xxx"

(10.) The above provision of law as contemplated under S. 438, Cr. P.C. is very clear. It says that an applicant seeks for anticipatory bail when he apprehends his arrest on the accusation that he has committed a non-bailable offence. It gives a very wide discretion to the High Court as well as the Court of Session to exercise while dealing with anticipatory bail. The discretion has to be exercised very cautiously and judiciously but with not whims and caprice. Therefore, in exceptional cases only, this extraordinary power conferred by S. 438, Cr. P.C. has to be invoked. Thus, the Court has to bear in mind a basic principle while allowing or rejecting a prayer for anticipatory bail. The principle is, every individual has a right to his personal liberty. When It is curtailed or in jeopardy he has a remedy under S. 438, Cr. P.C. Such an individual is entitled to the benefit of presumption of innocence, since on the date of making application for anticipatory bail he is not convicted for the offence in respect of which he seeks bail. In the background of the facts of the case, keeping in mind, the aforesaid basic principle, hearing at length the submissions of the learned counsel appearing for the parties, I am called upon to adjudicate the application for anticipatory bail.

(11.) I have gone through the FIR lodged by the victim alleging that the petitioners in furtherance of their common intention have subjected her to sexual harassment and misbehaviour for which she brought a writ in OJC No. 6555 of 2000 before this Court, who while deciding the said writ application came to hold that there is no complaints committee legally constituted by the Institute in terms of the guidelines issued by the Apex Court in AIR 1997 SC 3011 : (1997 Lab IC 2890) (Vishaka v. State of Rajasthan) and therefore, the opp. parties were directed to constitute such a committee in terms of the said guidelines. The committee has to look into the allegations of sexual harassment and to find out whether such allegations constitute sexual harassment or not? When the committee examines the victim's allegations she can adduce evidence before the committee to substantiate the same. After the committee submits enquiry report in terms of the guidelines issued by the Apex Court holding that allegation made by the victim are found to be correct, then only action should be taken against the offenders.

(12.) Shri N. C. Panigrahi, learned counsel appearing for the victim has referred to AIR 1999 SC 625 : (1999 Lab IC 918) (Apparel Export Promotion Council v. A. K. Chopra), wherein the Apex Court has ruled that High Court should not normally interfere with either the factual findings regarding guilt or with penalty or punishment imposed by departmental authorities. In the reported case the delinquent, a superior officer wasfound guilty of molesting and of having tried to physically assault a subordinate female employee. On such findings, the departmental authorities awarded him punishment of dismissal from service. The Delhi High Court interfered with the said order of punishment of dismissal on the ground that since delinquent had not "actually molested" and had "not managed" to make physical contact with her, the punishment of removal from service was not Justified. But the Apex Court reversed the order of the Delhi High Court. The Apex Court has found that conduct of delinquent, a superior officer, was wholly against moral sanctions, decency and was offensive to female subordinate's modesty. It is held, for mere want of actual assault or tough by delinquent, his conduct does not cease to be outrageous and it amounts to sexual harassment. Shri Panigrahi, being fortified with this ruling contends that in the case at hand Mr. Rao has actually molested the victim with whom he made physical contact and misbehaved with her in different manner for which his conduct amounts to sexual harassment which is nothing but outrageous.

(13.) Shri N.C. Panigrahi, while vehemently opposing to grant bail to the petitioners also relied on the decisions in Gurucharan Singh v. State of Punjab and Sanjay Malhotra v. State of Punjab, both reported in 2000 Cr L.J. at pages 4480 and 4481 (Punjab and Haryana High Court) and also Tarachand v. State of Himachal Pradesh reported in 2000 Cri L.J. 3764 (Himachal Pradesh High Court) in support of his contention.

(14.) I have carefully gone through the above rulings where facts of the reported cases are found quite distinguishable from the facts of the present case. In AIR 1999 SC 625 : (1999 Lab IC 918) (supra) the respondent was placed under suspension. He was charge-sheeted. But he denied the allegations made against him. He asserted that the said allegations are imaginary, and motivated. In the Departmental proceeding drawn against him, the Disciplinary Authority appointed an Enquiry Officer to conduct an enquiry into the charges framed against him. During enquiry, oral and documentary evidence was adduced on behalf of both the sides. The Enquiry Officer basing on the documentary and oral evidence and the circumstances of the case held him guilty. Basing on his findings, the Disciplinary Authority imposed a penalty of removing him from service with immediate effect. However, in the present case a Complaints' Committee was constituted on 23-9-1999. The Committee was consisted of seven members out of whom, five were ladies and it was headed by a woman. Admittedly, one of the women members of the Committee enquired into the allegations of the victim and submitted a report stating that the allegations made against Mr. Rao are not genuine. The victim filed a writ petition in OJC No. 6555 of 2000 before this Court which held that though the above Committee was constituted but it neither includes an N,G,O. nor a body familiar with the issue of sexual harassment in terms of the guidelines issued by the Apex Court. Moreover, the Committee as a whole did not enquire into the allegations of the victim and instead a woman member of the Committee who is also an employee in the Institute and subordinate to Mr. Rao enquired into the allegations and submitted the report. This Court did not accept the said report. It issued directions to the Institute for reconstituting the Complaints Committee by including either an NGO or other body familiar with the issue of sexual harassment of the victim to examine the allegations and submit a report. The Institute was also directed to amend the Rules and Regulation relating to conduct and discipline of the employees and to provide for appropriate penalty in such a Rule against the offender in terms of the guidelines issued by the Apex Court within a period of three months from the date of communication of the order. This Court also instructed the Institute to take action against the offender in terms of Clauses IV and V the Guidelines issued by the Apex Court, if the Complaints Committee finds the allegations made by the victim to be correct. Admittedly, the Complaints Committee was reconstituted as per the guidelines issued by the Apex Court but during enquiry into the allegations of the victim, she did not adduce evidence on her behalf and instead she challenged the Complaints Committeeon the ground that Mrs. Swapna Harisan and Mrs. Latha Ravindran should not have been included in the Committee as its members as they are the supporters of Mr.Rao and as such she would be highly prejudiced if the Committee is allowed to enquire into her allegations. That apart, she disputed inclusion of one Dr P. Jasodhara as thirdparty member of the Committee as she is neither an NGO nor a body familiar with the Issue of sexual harassment. But the complaints committee headed by Mrs. Geeta Devi constituted on 20-1-2000 as per the direction of this Court enquired into the allegations of the victim as reflected in the writ application and lawyers notice. The victim's oral evidence could not be recorded as she refused to adduce her oral evidence on the above ground. Statement of Ex-Director of the Institute and statement of Mr. Rao were recorded. The Committee after making analysis of victim's various allegations as reflected in her complaint petition submitted its report on 13-3-2001 stating that her allegations are nothing but irrational allegations having no grain of truth. The Committee has opined that the allegations are totally false and fabricated. They are false, malicious and motivated to defame Mr. Rao. The Committee intimated her about the result of the enquiry with a warning that she should not make false allegations in future or else appropriate action shall be taken against her. Therefore the victim had no alternative except lodging an FIR in question as contended by Mr. Panigrahi.

(15.) In the case of Vishaka v. State of Rajasthan (supra) (AIR 1997 SC 3011), the Apex Court has provided remedial measure to safeguard the interest of female employees at their work place against sexual harassment caused by the superior officers in the office. In the present case the Complaints Committee constituted in terms of the guidelines of the Apex Court has submitted its report after enquiring into the allegations of the victim holding that the allegations made by her are not correct and genuine. But now the bone of contention is if the allegations made by the victim constitute specific offences under the Indian Penal Code.

(16.) Shri N. C. Panigrahi also contends that the conduct of the petitioners amounts to offences punishable under Ss. 294, 354, 500, 506, 509 and 34 of the Indian Penal Code. Though the attention of the previous Director of the Institute was drawn to the illegal and objectionable conduct of the petitioners he did not initiate appropriate action in accordance with law by making a complaint with the appropriate authority for which she was obliged to set the Criminal law into motion by lodging the FIR in question before the Police authority. Referring to 1996 Cri Law Journal 381 : (AIR 1996 SC 309) (Mrs. Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill) he has contended that in the criminal proceeding initiated on her FIR prima facie case is made out under Ss. 294, 354, 500, 506, 509 and 34, IPC against the petitioners. According to him ingredients of all the aforesaid offences are present in the instant case and as such the petitioners are not entitled to anticipatory bail. In his opinion, it is a clear case of outraging the modesty of women. In the reported case of Kanwarpal Singh Gill, the Apex Court held that apart from the offence under S. 354, IPC an offence under S. 509, IPC has been made out on the allegation contained in the FIR as the words used by gesture made by Mr. Gill was intended to insult the modesty of Mrs. Bajaj. Their Lordships have observed that Mr. Gill is a top-most official of the State Police indecently behaved with Mrs. Bajaj, a Senior Lady I.A.S. Officer in the presence of gentry and in spite of her raising objection continued with his such behaviour. According to their lordships, offence relating to modesty of women is not a trivial offence.

(17.) In the reported case of 2000 Cri L.J. 4480 and 2000 Cri L.J. 4481 (supra) Punjab and Haryana High Court refused to exercise jurisdiction of the Court u/S. 438, Cr.P.C. in granting anticipatory bail to the petitioner because in the former case the petitioners tried to cheat the persons who belong to the weaker section of the society and matters are yet to be investigated whereas in the latter case there was serious allegation of bigamy and cruelty made against the petitioner. On the other hand, in the case of Mrs. Rupan Deol Bajaj v. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill reported in 1996 Cri L.J. 381 : (AIR 1996 SC 309) (SC) Mr. Gill not only behaved indecently and repeatedly with Mrs. Bajaj in spite of her protection in presence of other dignitaries but also he slapped her on the posterior in the full presence of ladies and gents. Here, undoubtedly intention or knowledge of the offender is the main ingredient of any offence and the same is to be proved like other ingredients for convincing a person. At the same time. intention being state of mind has to be proved by direct evidence or it may have to be inferred from the attending circumstances of a given case. In the instant case, it is to be seen whether Mr. Rao intended to outrage her modesty orknew it to be likely that he would thereby outrage her modesty. In the present case, the victim was no doubt at liberty to start a criminal proceedings also by the by against wrong doers. Immediately after the occurrence had she actually suffered humiliation because of the alleged sexual harassment and misbehaviour caused to her by Mr. Rao and others. For getting Mr. Rao punished by the disciplinary authority she brought a writ application, but of no use. The complaints Committee looked into her allegations of sexual harassment and reached a conclusion that she is making a false and fabricated allegations against the petitioners. Her allegations as reflected in the FIR are not free from modification, exaggeration and embellishment, for which the petitioners are entitled to the benefit of presumption of innocence and moreover, on the date of making application for anticipatory bail they were not convicted for the offence in respect of which they seek bail. In fact in the writ application in OJC No. 6555/2000 she has referred to letter dated 8-3-1999 on "International Women's Day" addressed by her lady colleagues of the Institute to the Director indicating how they were subjected to sexual harassment by Mr. Rao by not giving them promotion. In their representation to the Director dated 8-3-1999 they have alleged that Mr. Rao made sexual coloured statement against them by commenting always that unmarried women staff are more competent than the married women staff. This does not actually amount to sexual harassment.

(18.) In the writ application it is mentioned that Mr. Rao unnecessarily and without any basis accused the victim in front of others that she is hand in glove with the publication of sexual harassment caused by him towards lady employees of the Institute when it was published in News-papers "Adhikar" and "Pratisruti". But in the FIR in question the victim has added the words such as "you bloody idiot" to "hand in glove with this publication". In the writ application, the allegation that he has appealed her a number of times for satisfying his lust for sex is not there but the same finds place in the FIR. Similarly, in the writ application the allegation that he has touched her body a number of times on the pretext of seeing her necklace or how she wears her saree, is not there but it is there in the FIR. In the writ application it is mentioned that in a meeting on 5-6-2000 Mr. Rao made remarks against the victim that while she was staying on leave, she was frequently coming and passing time with the Director whereas in the FIR she has mentioned the said remarks with addition of the words "keeping illicit relationship". In the writ application, she has mentioned that Mr. Rao refers to the petitioner and her lady colleagues such as "rotten apple", "rotten fish" and "use and throw pen" and the same is also mentioned in the FIR in an exaggerated manner as if specifically directed against her.

(19.) I have kept in view the scope of power of the Court under S. 438, Cr. P.C. coupled with the legislative intention behind such provision while adjudicating this application under S. 438, Cr. P.C. In the Constitution Bench decision of the Apex Court In the case of Gurbaksh Singh Sibia v. State of Punjab, AIR 1980 SC 1632 : 1980 Cri L.J. 1125 and subsequent three Judge Bench decision in the case of Poker Ram v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1985 SC 969 : 1985 Cri L.J. 1175, it is held that the Court should be loathe to exercise discretion and grant anticipatory bail to the petitioner. In the present case, I have found from the attending circumstances that prosecution has been launched by the victim by setting criminal law into motion after about an year of the occurrence with some addition or modification or embellishment in the prosecution case. In this regard, the intention of the legislature is very clear. There is a need for granting anticipatory bail. It arises mainly because the victim has tried to implicate the petitioners in criminal case for the purpose of degrading them or for other purposes by getting them detained in the jail custody. That apart, in the facts and circumstances of the case, I am of the considered view that the petitioners who are entitled to the benefit of presumption of innocence of the accusation made in the FIR by the victim are entitled to anticipatory bail particularly when the nature of charges levelled against the petitioners are not free from doubt and also do not constitute specific offences under the Indian Penal Code.

(20.) With the aforesaid observation, I exercise my judicial discretion judiciously in favour of the petitioners while granting them anticipatory bail. Accordingly, it is directed that in the event of their arrest in Chandra Sekharpur P. S. Case No. 64/2000 they shallbe admitted to bail on their furnishing bail bonds for Rs. 5000/- (Rupees five thousand each with one surety each for the like amount to the satisfaction of the officer effecting the arrest.The Criminal Misc. Case is disposed of.Urgent certified copy of this order be granted on proper application. Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2009-CRI.L.J.-1031

HIGH COURT OF KERALA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : Mrs. K. HEMA, J.

RAJEEVAN ….V/s….STATE OF KERALA
Aug 08,2008

==========

Cr. P.C. 438, 437, 439 – Anticipatory bail – Refusal of anticipatory bail is no ground to refuse regular bail to accused under Sec. 437 or 439. – Considerations for grantirng anticipatory regular bail are different than that of regular bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) THE petitioner is the sole accused in a case involving offences under sections 279 and 337 of IPC, which is pending before the Magistrate Court. He failed to appear in Court, in disobedience of summons issued from the Court, and hence non-bailable warrants were issued against him. Proceedings under Sections 82 and 83 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code ('the code', for short) were also initiated against him, to proclaim him as an absconding accused. He, therefore, apprehends arrest and hence, this application for anticipatory bail.

(2.) ON hearing both sides and on a reading of section 438 of the Code, and on consideration of the object of the said provision, i find that anticipatory bail cannot be granted to petitioner mainly for three reasons: (i) apprehension of arrest of petitioner is not on accusation of having committed any non bailable offence, since the offences involved are only bailable offences; (ii) the arrest sought for is consequent to lawful non-bailable warrant issued by a Court having jurisdiction since the accused failed to appear on receipt of summons issued by the court; and (iii) discretionary relief under section 438 is not intended to be extended in favour of a person who absconded and against whom, coercive steps are initiated by a Court, as per law, to secure his presence.

(3.) SECTION 438 of the Code reads as follows :

"438. Direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest.- (1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having com-mitted a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Sessions for direction under this Section; and that court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail. (2) When the High Court or the Court of session makes a direction under sub-section (1), it may include such conditions in such directions in the light of the facts of the particular case, as it may think fit, in-cluding- (i) a condition that the person shall make himself available for interrogation by a police officer as and when required; (ii) a condition that the person shall not, directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer; (iii) a condition that the person shall not leave India without the previous permission of the Court. (iv) such other condition as may be imposed under sub-section (3) of Section 437, as if the bail were granted under that Section. (3) If such person is thereafter arrested without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station on such accusation, and is prepared either at the time of arrest or at any time while in the custody of such officer to give bail, he shall be released on bail, and if a Magistrate taking cognizance of such offence decides that a warrant should issue in the first instance against that person, he shall issue a bailable warrant in conformity with the direction of the Court under subsection (1)"

(4.) A reading of Section 438 of the Code shows that primarily, two factors must exist to invoke Section 438, to grant anticipatory bail. The Court must be satisfied that (i) there is a reason to believe that the petitioner may be arrested and that (ii) such apprehended arrest is on accusation of his having committed a non-bailable offence. Only if both these factors exist, the Court may grant anticipatory bail. But, in cases where those twin conditions do not exist, the Court shall not grant anticipatory bail under Section 438 of the Code.

(5.) IN this case, petitioner has reason to believe that he may be arrested, because non-bailable warrants are issued against him. Thus, there is satisfaction of one of the essentials under Section 438. But, the offences involved in this case are all bailable offences and hence there cannot be any apprehension of arrest, on accusation of commission of a non-bailable offence. Therefore, in cases in which only bailable offences are involved, even if there is any threat of arrest of the accused, such arrest cannot be "on the accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence" and in such cases, there will not be satisfaction of the second factor. Therefore, anticipatory bail cannot be granted in a case where only bailable offence is involved, even if the accused apprehends arrest.

(6.) A person may have many reasons to apprehend arrest under various circumstances and at different stages of the case. It need not always be "on accusation of his having committed a non-bailable offence". An accused may apprehend arrest, irrespective of whether the offence committed is a bailable or a non-bailable offence and in certain circumstances, the nature of offence allegedly committed by the accused may not have any relevance to the apprehended arrest. For example, the accused may not appear in Court, even after receipt of summons. He may fail to appear in Court, in disobedience of the direction issued by the court to appear on a particular day or at a particular stage of the case. He may also default appearance in Court in breach of the bond executed by him for his appearance and abscond after his release on bail. Such situations may arise either in cases involving a bailable offence or a non-bailable offence.

(7.) BUT, in such cases, the nature of offence committed by the accused may not have relevance to the arrest apprehended. The character of the offence committed by the accused may not have direct nexus to the offence committed by the accused. The offence committed may only be a remote cause or reason for the arrest apprehended. Whether it be a bailable offence or not, the accused's presence will be sought to be procured in due execution of the non-bailable warrant which is lawfully issued by the court, having jurisdiction. Therefore, in such cases, the apprehension of arrest may not be "on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence" (or a bailable offence), but the threat of arrest may be due to reasons other than what is stated in Section 438. Hence, in such cases also, Section 438 may not apply.

(8.) I may also, however, hasten to add that I do not intend to lay down, as an invariable proposition that in all cases where non-bailable warrants are issued by the court, anticipatory bail cannot be granted. Irrespective of issuance of warrant by Court, there are yet certain instances where the threat of arrest may still be there, on accusation of commission of a non-bailable offence. To cite an instance, in a case where charge is laid, showing the accused as an absconding accused, the Court may issue a non-bailable warrant. In such cases, the police might have deliberately shown the accused to be absconding, though he was available for arrest, with a view to harass him, by causing his arrest in execution of the warrant issued by Court. The accused might not even know that he was implicated as an accused in the crime. In such cases, there will be a reason to believe that a person may be arrested and such belief may not merely be due to the non-bailable warrant issued because of disobedience of the Court's order. But, apprehension of arrest may be "on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence" that being the direct cause for issuance of arrest warrant.

(9.) THERE may be other circumstances also. In some cases, the Court may issue a non-bailable warrant in lieu of summons, after filing of charge sheet in a non-bailable offence and there may be a threat of arrest. The apprehension of arrest in such cases will have direct nexus to the nature of offence committed and his arrest may be sought for, "on accusation of having committed a non bailable offence" and not due to any reason other than this. Hence, in cases in which the Court is satisfied that a person has reason to believe that he may be arrested "on accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence", anticipatory bail may be granted. But the threat of arrest must have direct nexus to the non-bailable offence committed by him and it may not be a remote cause for the arrest and the Court must be satisfied that there was no justification in issuing a non-bailable warrant against the accused.

(10.) IN this case, arrest apprehended by petitioner is not on the ground that he committed any bailable or non-bailable offence. Irrespective of nature of the offence which he allegedly committed, his arrest is sought for, to secure his presence in execution of non-bailable warrant lawfully issued by the court having jurisdiction. He failed to appear in court, in disobedience of the summons issued from the Court, and he also absconded and evaded all coercive steps taken by the Court to procure his presence in Court. So, the nature of offence committed by him is not the direct cause for the apprehended arrest but, the arrest is necessitated because of reasons other than on accusation of commission of a particular offence.

(11.) THE petitioner has no case that warrant was issued illegally or without jurisdiction. There is also nothing on record at present to show that the Magistrate Court committed an error or impropriety in issuing warrant against petitioner. Thus, in any view of the matter, no ground exists to invoke section 438 to grant anticipatory bail to petitioner. At any rate, the apprehended arrest is for reason other than "on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence. "

(12.) APART from all these, Section 438 of the Code has a well-intended object. It is introduced into the Code as a benevolent provision, by which, a person is granted bail, even before arrest is effected, in anticipation of his arrest. The Court must bear in mind that this equity, benevolence or luxury is extended to a person who is accused of a non-bailable offence and too, ordinarily, without hearing the alleged victim. So, there must be a definite object for laying down such a benevolent provision in favour of an accused. It is not unusual that a person may be falsely implicated in an offence and it is also likely that he may be harassed or humiliated, without any basis, by an arrest and detention. This may be done on the basis of a false or ill-motivated complaint. It may also be likely that police may subject a person to custodial torture, under the pretext of interrogation. So, the provision under Section 438 is brought into the Code, with the intention to protect a person from being subjected to unnecessary and unwarranted harassment or humiliation after arrest, by custodial torture or unwarranted pre-trial detention.

(13.) THEREFORE, the benefit under Section 438 of the Code may not be invoked, in favour of anybody and everybody, on the mere request made by him or her, and on merely being satisfied that there is apprehension of his arrest on commission of a non-bailable offence. It is not enough that the twin factors in Section 438 are satisfied but, the Court must also confirm that the equity is shown only to the right and deserving person. The Court will grant the relief only to the person who deserves the relief and to ensure that the benefit under section 438 of the Code goes only to a deserving person, the Court has to evaluate the various facts and circumstances of each case and distinguish between the right and the wrong. This will be possible, only if the court exercises its discretion in a judicial manner.

(14.) "in its ordinary meaning, the word "discretion" signifies unrestrained exercise of choice or will; freedom to act according to one's own judgment; unrestrained exercise of will; the liberty or power of acting without control other than one's own judgment. But, when applied to public functionaries, it means a power or right conferred upon them by law, of acting officially in certain circumstances according to the dictates of their own judgment and conscience, uncontrolled by the judgment or conscience of others. Discretion is to discern between right and wrong; and therefore, whoever hath power to act at discretion, is bound by the rule of reason and law". (See Tomlin's Law dictionary) (vide Union of India v. Kuldeep singh, (2004) 2 SCC 590): (2004 Cri L.J. 836).

(15.) THUS, while invoking section 438 of the Code, the Court must pay attention to discern between right and wrong and it is bound by the reason and law also, while exercising its discretion. In this case, petitioner defaulted in appearance in Court during trial and non-bailable warrants were issued repeatedly to secure his presence during trial. Steps under sections 82 and 83 of the Code were also initiated to proclaim him, as an absconding accused. The petitioner absconded and failed to appear in Court, despite repeated issuance of warrants. His act caused considerable delay in disposal of the case, by his default. All these consumed considerable time of the Court and ultimately, this case remained pending even af-ter a long period. It could not be disposed of, because of the default of the accused.

(16.) IN my considered view, it may not be proper to invoke power under Section 438 of the Code, in favour of a person who absconded, without reasonable cause and whereby, the trial Court was forced to initiate coercive steps to procure his presence in Court. Section 438 of the Code is not intended to be used in favour of any 'chronic absconder'. If exercise of judicial discretion is the criteria to invoke Section 438 of the code, I am of view that the provision may not be used in favour of a defaulter, who jumped bail, without any reasonable excuse. In cases where non-bailable warrants are issued against the accused, unless the Court is satisfied that there was some impropriety or illegality in issuing the warrant or that the warrant was issued wrongly, the Court shall not ordinarily intervene in the lawful proceedings before the lower Court. Because, the discretion under Section 438, Cr. P. C. is not intended to be exercised to interfere with the lawful proceedings before another Court.

(17.) THUS, on facts and on law, Section 438 of the Code will not apply to the facts of this case and hence, anticipatory bail cannot be granted to petitioner. Still, I make it clear that it is open to the petitioner to surrender before the Magistrate Court and to file an application for bail, and satisfy learned Magistrate that he was not evading the process of the Court, or that he did not intend to abscond. In such event, learned magistrate shall dispose of the bail application, untrammalled by any of the observations made in this order, on merit. I also make it clear that the observations made in this order are all based only on the oral submissions made, without being any supporting materials.

(18.) I would also add that the considerations for granting bail are different from the consideration for granting anticipatory bail and the refusal of anticipatory bail under section 438 of the Code may not by itself be a ground to refuse bail to an accused, under Section 437 or 439 of the Code. Petition is dismissed.

****

Cross Citation :2009 CRI. L. J. 1067

DELHI HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : ARUNA SURESH, J.

Madhu Garg ….V/s…. State and Ors.

Crl. M.C. No. 3075 of 2007, Dt. 31 -7 -2008.

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - BAIL - Ball - Cancellation of - Conduct of accused subsequent to his release on bail and supervening circumstances alone are relevant. (Para 11)

(B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Cancellation of - Dispute Inter se petitioner and accused persons relates to immovable property which is more of civil in nature - No allegations of any attempt by any of accused persons to avoid their presence before Investigating Officer for Investigation purposes - Anticipatory bail granted to accused persons - Cannot be cancelled. (Paras 12, 13, 14, 16)

==========

JUDGEMENT

ARUNA SURESH, J. :- Since both the petitions are connected matters and have been filed seeking cancellation of anticipatory bail granted to Ghanshyam Das Gupta on 14-5-2007 and Pooja Aggarwal on 12-5-2007 who are co-accused persons in FIR No. 369/2007 Police Station Sultanpuri, registered under Ss. 468/471/420/120-B, Indian Penal Code (hereinafter referred to as IPC).

2. Accused Pooja Aggarwal allegedly purchased a Plot No. 141, Pocket 21, Sector-24, Rohini from Smt. Manorama on 12-4-2001 by way of General Power of Attorney, agreement to sell etc. The petitioner Madhu Garg had allegedly purchased the said plot from Manorama the original allottee of DDA by way of registered documents on 17-10-1997 that is prior to the transaction which allegedly took place between Pooja Aggarwal and Smt. Manorama.

3. Pooja Aggarwal claims that she had raised construction on the said plot in October, 2006 and the house was assessed by the MCD in her name. Pooja Aggarwal also filed a civil suit seeking relief of injunction against the petitioner and she obtained an ex parte stay from this Court on 5-2-2007. Probably, the present FIR was registered at the instance of the petitioner subsequent to the stay order granted in favour of accused-Pooja Aggarwal. The said civil litigation is going on inter se the parties.

4. Allegations as against Ghanshyam Dass Gupta co-accused are that he in conspiracy with the other accused persons had stolen the property papers from the petitioner and thereafter forged a false and second set of title documents in favour of co-accused Pooja Aggarwal with respect to the said property bearing Plot No. 141, Sector 24, Rohini, Delhi. Pooja Aggarwal was granted anticipatory bail in view of the civil case pending inter se the parties and in view of the fact that she had obtained an ex parte injunction against the petitioner in respect of the impugned property which is the subject-matter of registration of an FIR on behest' of the petitioner against Pooja Aggarwal and others.

5. Considering the fact that Pooja Aggarwal had been admitted on anticipatory bail and co-accused-Sunita Goel had been granted interim bail by this Court vide order dated 19-4-2007 uptil 8-5-2007 and extended till 10-7-2007 and co-accused-Ghanshyam Dass Gupta was also granted anticipatory bail on 14-5-2007. The petitioner has sought cancellation of bail of both the accused persons on the grounds that at the time when Ghanshyam Dass Gupta and Pooja Aggarwal were granted bail by the learned ASJ, the police had not brought various facts to the notice of the Court as detailed in the petition.

6. For cancellation of bail, the conduct of the accused subsequent to his release on bail and supervening circumstances alone are relevant.

7. Under S. 437(5) of the Code of Criminal Procedure (hereinafter referred to as Code) any Court which has released a person on bail under sub-section (1), or subsection (2), can if it considers necessary to do, direct that such person be arrested and commit him to custody. Similarly, under S. 439(2) of the Code, a High Court or a Court of Session can direct that any person who has been released on bail under any of the provisions governing bail be arrested and commit him to custody.

8. Generally, the grounds for cancellation of bail to be considered by the Court are interference by the accused or attempt to interfere with the due course of administration of justice i.e. abuse of the liberty granted to him, tampering with the investigation of the case, tampering with the evi: dence, intimidating the witnesses by creating or causing disappearance of evidence etc. This evasion of justice can also be an attempt by the accused to leave the country or going underground or otherwise placing himself beyond the reach of the sureties. He may misuse the liberty granted to him by indulging into similar or other unlawful acts etc.

9. In Raghubir, Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 149 : (1987 Cri L.J. 157), the Supreme Court laid down the principles and grounds to be considered and followed by a Court while considering an application for cancellation of bail. It has been observed. :

"The result of our discussion and the case law is this : An order for release on bail made under the proviso to S. 167(2) is not defeated by lapse of time, the filing of the charge-sheet or by remand to custody under S. 309(2). The order for release on bail may however be cancelled under S. 437(5) or S. 439(2). Generally the grounds for cancellation of bail, broadly, are, interference or attempt to interfere with the due course of administration of justice, or evasion or attempt to evade the course of justice, or abuse of the liberty granted to him. The due administration of justice may be interfered with by intimidating or suborning witnesses, by interfering with investigation, by creating or causing disappearance of evidence etc. the course of justice may be evaded or attempted to be evaded by leaving the country or going underground or otherwise placing himself beyond the reach of the sureties. He may abuse the liberty granted to him by indulging in similar or other unlawful acts. Where bail has been granted under the proviso to S. 167(2) for the default of the prosecution in not completing the investigation in sixty days, after the defect is cured by the filing of a charge-sheet, the prosecution may seek to have the bail cancelled on the ground that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence and that it is necessary to arrest him and commit him to custody. In the last mentioned case, one would expect very wrong grounds indeed."

10. Similar were the observations in Dolat Ram v. State of Haryana (1995) 1 SCC 349 and 1995 SCC (Cri) 237. It was observed :

"4. Rejection of bail in a non-bailable case at the initial stage and the cancellation of bail so granted, have to be considered and dealt with on different basis. Very cogent and overwhelming circumstances are necessary for an order directing the cancellation of the bail, already granted. Generally speaking, the grounds for cancellation of bail, broadly (illustrative and not exhaustive) are interference or attempt to, interfere with the due course of administration of justice or evasion or attempt to evade the due course of justice or abuse of the concession granted to the accused in any manner. The satisfaction of the Court, on the basis of material placed on the record of the possibility of the accused absconding is yet another reasons justifying the cancellation of bail. However, bail once granted should not be supervening circumstances have rendered it no longer conducive to a fair trial to allow the accused to retain his freedom by enjoying the concession of bail during the trial."

11. Hence, it is considerably clear that in an application for cancellation of bail, conduct of the accused subsequent to his release on bail and supervening circumstances alone are relevant.

12. In the present petitioner has not alleged any misuse of bail by any of the accused persons like tampering with evidence or tampering with investigation or influencing her being complainant or other prosecution witnesses so as not to support the investigation of the case. There are no allegations of any attempt by any of these two accused persons to avoid their presence before the Investigating Officer for investigation purposes. The only grievance of the petitioner is that the accused-Ghanshyam Dass Gupta and Pooja Aggarwal should not have been granted anticipatory bail as their custodial interrogation was mandatory in view of the facts and circumstances as narrated in the FIR.

13. The petitioner has referred to State represented by CBI v. Anil Sharma (1997) 7 SCC 187 : (1997 Cri L.J. 4414) in support of her submissions that custodial interrogation is qualitatively more elicitation - oriented than questioning a suspect after his release on anticipatory bail. In the said case, the Court had released the accused on anticipatory bail when the investigation was in progress and the respondent being a member of legislative assembly of the State of Himachal Pradesh and an ex-Minister of the, Himachal Pradesh State Government was an influential person and the apprehension of the CBI was justified that the respondent-accused would influence the witnesses considering the high position which the accused held and the nature of accusation relating to the period during which he held such office and the High Court while granting bail had kept in mind the principles applicable for grant of regular ball after arrest and not for grant of anticipatory bail. It was under these circumstances that the criminal appeal was allowed and the anticipatory bail granted to the accused by the High Court was revoked.

14. The considerations which should weigh with the Court while granting anticipatory bail need not of the same as for application of bail after arrest.

15. The petitioner has also referred Muraleedharan v. State of Kerala (2001) 4 SCC 638 : (2001 Cri L.J. 2187). In the said case, a number of criminal cases were registered as a sequel to the large scale deaths of persons now known as the liquor tragedy in Kollam District, Kerala. The appellant was described by the Investigating Officer as one of the kingpins in a series of grave crimes including the offence under S. 8 of the Kerala Abkari Act. While absconding, he moved the Court seeking anticipatory bail. His application was allowed and he was released on anticipatory bail. The High Court in appeal set aside the said order of the Sessions Judge. It was against the order of the High Court that appellant-Muraleedharan filed a criminal appeal before the Supreme Court. While dismissing this appeal, it was observed by the Apex Court that one of the offences involved is S. 8 of the Kerala Abkari Act which is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years and fine which shall not be less than Rs. 1 lac. Section 41 -A of the Act says that no person accused of offence punishable for a term of imprisonment for three years or more shall be released on ball or on his own bond unless the Public Prosecutor or the Assistant Public Prosecutor has been given an opportunity to oppose the application for such release. The Public Prosecutor or the Assistant Public Prosecutor if opposed an application for bail, the Court has to be satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offences and that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail. Therefore, the Sessions Judge committed a grave error in observing that no material could be collected by the investigating agency to connect the petiitioner with the crime except the confessional statement of the co-accused. It was observed by the Supreme Court that no Court can afford to presume that the investigating agency would fail to trace but more materials to prove the accusation against an accused. It was in view of the erroneous approach of the Sessions Judge while granting anticipatory bail to the appellant, that the Apex Court dismissed the appeal upholding the order of the High Court of Kerala.

16. None of these judgments are of any help to the petitioner as the facts and circumstances of the present case are different. The dispute inter se the petitioner and the accused persons relates to immovable property which is more of civil in nature. Under the circumstances of the case, I do not find any reason to reverse the orders of the learned ASJ dated 12-5-2007 and 14-5-2007 whereby respondents-Pooja Aggarwal and Ghanshyam Dass Gupta were granted anticipatory bail.

17. Hence, the petitions are dismissed.

18. Registry is directed to place copy of this order in connected case No. Crl. M.C. No. 3077/2007.

Petition dismissed.

****

Cross Citation : 2006 Cri. L. J. 4346

CHATTISGARH HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : SUNIL KUMAR SINHA, J.

Bhupendra Das Vaishnava and Anr…..V/s…. State of Chhattisgarh.

M. Cr. C. No. 3304 of 2005, D/- 18 -1 -2006.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL – SC & ST ACT (POA) - Anticipatory bail - Grant of - Offence alleged under Atrocities Act - F.I.R., recommendations of Superintendent of Police not prima facie disclosing commission of offence - Anticipatory bail to be granted.

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras
2004 (1) Cg L.J. 162 8

1996 Cri L.J. 1368 : AIR 1996 SC 1042 15

1996 Cri L.J. 2743 (Ori) 10

1993 (1) MPJR 223 9

Sudhir Verma, for Petitioner; Sudhir Bajpai, Panel Lawyer, for State.

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :- This is an application filed under S. 438 of the Cr. P.C. for grant of anticipatory bail to the applicants, who apprehended their arrest in connection with Crime No. 389/2005 registered at Police Station Kawardha, District Kabirdham (C.G.) for the offence punishable under Ss. 452, 294, 323, 506 of the I.P.C. and S. 3(i)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 (for short Special Act).

2. At the very outset, learned counsel for the State, referring to the memo dated 6-12-2005, written by Superintendent of Police, District Kabirdham to the Deputy Superintendent of Police A.J.K. Kawardha, submitted that on the direction of the Superintendent of Police, which was made on the basis of an application given by the father of the complainant, the offence under the Special Act has been withdrawn by the prosecution and now, the case is registered only under the aforementioned sections of the I.P.C. and there is no case under the Special Act.

3. The case of the prosecution is that the complainant namely, Devesh Devdas, a young boy aged about 15 years is a student of Class X. He had some quarrel with the son of applicant of No. 1 prior to 24-10-2005. The allegations are that on account of this, the applicants entered into the house of the complainant at about 20.30 hours on 24-10-2005 and thereafter, assaulted him.

4. Learned counsel for the applicants submits that in fact, the applicants had gone to make enquiry as to why the complainant has assaulted the son of applicant No. 1. The allegations levelled against them are false and baselss. He further submits that these applicants have not committed any such act as has been alleged against them. He also submits that the action taken by the father of the complainant would show that nothing like the earlier report was done by the applicants and for this reason only; the offence under the Special Act has been withdrawn against them. Therefore, he prays for releasing the applicants on anticipatory bail.

5. On the other hand, learned State counsel opposes the bail application.

6. I have heard learned counsel for the parties at length.

7. No doubt, it is the dominion of the State to register an offence under a particular section applying all its wisdom, but the fact remains that when the matter is placed before the Court of law for ascertaining about the prima facie case for the purpose of bail, the Court is always well within the jurisdiction to look into the material placed before it and to assess as to whether any particular offence is made out or not. Even if, the prosecution has not registered a case under a particular section and the material placed before the Court goes to show that a particular section other than the sections already mentioned by the prosecution is made out, the Court is to act on the substance of the material placed before it with a view to find out a prima facie case on the basis of such materials and not on the basis of the sections levelled by the prosecution. It is more so required when the legislature mandates a command about the jurisdiction of a Court of law and prohibits the entertainment of certain cases by the Court of law under the overriding provisions made in the Act, like S. 18 in the present Act.

8. The law in relation to entertaining the application under S. 438, Cr. P.C. in such offences is well settled. The point raised is no longer res integra. It has been held that if the contents of the F.I.R. or the complaint disclose the commission of offence under the special Act, the Courts would not be justified in entering into a further enquiry by summoning the case diary or any other material as to whether the allegations are true or false or whether there is preponderance of probability for commission of such an offence. At this stage, the Court cannot examine and scrutinise the record of the case in order to ascertain the veracity of the F.I.R./complaint. The provisions of S. 18 of the Act, 1989 put a complete bar against the entertainment of an application for anticipatory bail where prima facie the contents of the FIR disclose the ingredients of the commission of the offence under the Act of 1989 which is apparent from the perusal of the section itself and thus the Court at the most would be required to evaluate the F.I.R. itself with a view to find out if the facts emerging taken at their face value disclose the existence of the ingredients constituting the alleged offence, then the Court would not be justified in entering into an enquiry as to the reliability or a genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the F.I.R. or the complaint. Please see Satya Prakash v. State of C.G., 2004 (1) CgL.J. 162.

9. It has also been held by High Court of Madhya Pradesh in the matter of Dule Singh v. State of M.P. through Police Raigarh, 1993 (1) MPJR 223 that a strict construction should be placed on the word "accusation" within the meaning of S. 18 of the Act. As such the 'intention' or 'intent' which is material ingredient of the offence under S. 3(1)(x) of the Act not being clearly stated by the witnesses and there being no statement that the offence was committed because the complainant belonged to Scheduled Caste, it cannot amount to an 'accusation' of an offence within the meaning of S.18 of the Act so as to bar an application u/S. 438, Cr. P.C.

10. The High Court of Orissa has also held in the matter of Ramesh Prasad Bhanja v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cri L.J. 2743 that if no prima facie case under S. 3 of the Act has been made out, it cannot be said that there is an "accusation of commission of an offence under the Act" and in that case there can be no hesitation to say that the applicability of the provision of S. 438 of the Code is not excluded.

11. If we examine the contents of the FIR and also the recommendations of the Superintendent of Police, on the basis of which, it is stated, that the offence under Special Act has been withdrawn by the prosecution, it would appear that even otherwise also prima facie, there appears to be no material to attract the provisions of S. 3(i)(x) of the Special Act. Prima facie, the contents of the FIR would show that the elements of intentional insult or intimidation with intent to humiliate a member of a Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe in any place within the public view, as provided in part (x) of sub-section (1) of S. 3 of the aforesaid Act is not available in this case. Therefore, this anticipatory bail application would be maintainable.

12. Considering the facts and circumstances of this case, particularly considering the contents of the FIR and also the conduct of the father of the applicant, along with their statements, I am of the opinion that present is a fit case to extend the benefit of S. 438 of the Cr. P.C. to the applicants.

13. In the result, the petition is allowed.

14. It is directed that in the event of arrest, these applicants shall be released on bail on each of them furnishing a personal bond in sum of Rs. 5,000/- (Rupees five thousand) with one surety each in the like amount to the satisfaction of the officer arresting them.

15. Keeping in view the principles laid down in the matter of Salauddin Abdul Samad Sheikh v. State of Maharashtra (1996) 1 SCC 667 : (1996 Cri L.J. 1368), it is hereby directed that this order shall remain in force for a period of six weeks from today, during which the applicants may apply for regular bail before the concerned Court.

Certified copy as per rules.

Petition allowed.

****

[See also : 2010 ALL MR (Cri.) 1223 :- Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act (33 of 1989), S.18, S.3(1)(x) - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - One day delay is ground for anticipatory bail]

Cross Citation :2004 CRI. L. J. 680

CHATTISGARH HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : L. C. BHADOO, J.

Somesh Das, Petitioner …..–Vs-…..State of Chhattisgarh

M. Cr. C. No. 1600 of 2003, D/- 21 -8 -2003.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act (33 of 1989), S.18, S.3(1)(x) - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - - If complaint is found to be false, anticipatory bail cannot be denied - Complaint lodged after delay of 14 days - It raises doubt about genuineness of complaint - Further there was dispute going on between accused official and complainant - In such circumstances, accused entitled to anticipatory bail.

==========

Merely because a case has been registered by the police under the Act of 1989, an application for grant of anticipatory bail should not be thrown out without finding out whether there are accusation of commission of offence under that Act.

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras

Mukesh Kumar Saini v. State (Delhi Administration), 2001 Cri L.J. 4587 (Delhi) 8

Om Parkash Sharma v. Union Territory Chandigarh, (2001) 4 Crimes 208 :

(2001) 3 Rec Cri R 840 (Punj and Hry) 8

Raj Kumar Jain v. State of MP, (2000) 3 MPL.J. 6 8

Phulla Dass v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cri L.J. 157 (Punj and Hry) 8

Bablu v. State of MP, 1996 (2) MPWN 141 8

Ramesh Prasad Bhanja v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cri L.J. 2743 (Orissa) 8

Dule Singh v. State, 1993 (1) MPJR 223 8

Pankaj D. Suthar v. State of Gujarat, (1992) 1 Crimes 1122 : (1992) 1 Guj LR 405 8

S. C. Dutt, Sr. Advocate with Manindra Shrivastava, for Petitioners; Pravin Das, Panel Lawyer, for Respondent.

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :- The accused/applicant has preferred this application under Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. apprehending arrest in Crime No. 88/22003, Police Station Surajpur, District, Sarguja, of the offence punishable under Sections 294 and 506 of the I.P.C. and Section 3(i)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 for releasing him on anticipatory bail before arrest.

2. The prosecution case is that on 27-4-2003 Naib Tehsildar had convened a meeting of villagers in the primary school of the village Gaitera with regard to settlement of disputes of the claimants whose land was acquired for South Eastern Coalfields Ltd., and in that meeting the complainant and other persons were present, Naib Tehsildar H.S. Dhurve, Up Tehsil Lakhanpur was also present. At about 3 p.m. accused Someth Das Bangali arrived at that place in his car. On seeing him, complainant Kalicharan greeted him. Accused Somesh Das Bangali started abusing him with the filthy language and said that you do not deserve to greet me and abused him that "Madarchod Bhosadiwale Gond Adivasi" how you are, creating hurdles in their work, you will be killed. On hearing this, all the persons who were sitting on the spot felt it bad and they did not took it in a good taste. Being aggrieved by the behaviour of the accused Kalicharan lodged a complaint in the Police Station Surajpur. A case was registered under Sections 294 and 506 of the IPC and Section 3(i)(x) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989, the matter is still under investigation.

3. I have heard Shri S.C. Dutt, Senior, Advocate for the accused/applicant and Shri Pravin Das, Panel Lawyer for the State.

4. Mr. Dutt argued that it is not disputed that the agricultural land of the village Gaitera was acquired for the mining purposes for South Eastern Coalfields Ltd., and compensation to the tune of Rs. 3,31,960/- was paid to the complainant. Compensation to Devcharan and other villagers was also paid, as per the agreement grand son of Kalicharan, Bhagat Singh was given employment. Similarly, son of Devcharan, Amrit Singh was also given employment and Kripal Singh son of Arjun Singh was also given employment. But, even then the complainant was not satisfied and he was asking for other employment which was not possible. Therefore, this false complaint has been lodged against the accused/applicant, who is very senior officer of the South Eastern Coalfields Ltd., it cannot be believed that such a senior officer would use such filthy language and abuse the complainant by calling him in the name of caste. He further argued that the report itself was lodged on 11th May, 2003, i.e., after 14 days of the incident which itself shows that the complaint is false and in this complaint itself it has been written that on account of compromise talks which were going on, the same was delayed. He further argued that on 2nd July 2003, the complainant himself made an application before the Station House Officer Surajpur with a copy to Police Station Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, Ambikapur to the effect that he made the complaint on account of anger because the sufficient compensation was not paid to them and now they have compromised the matter and he does not want to pursue the matter. He further argued that moreover by using the word "Madorchod Bhosadiwale Gond Adivasi" prima facie the offence is not made out, therefore, the accused/applicant is entitled for bail under Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. He further argued that as the villagers were not allowing for mining activities to the persons of S.E.C.L., therefore, officers of S.E.C.L. made complaints on 7-11-2002 and 7-5-2003 to the S.H.O. Surajpur.

5. On the other hand, Mr. Das, Panel Lawyer opposed the bail application and submits that as per the provisions of Section 18 of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 (hereinafter referred to as 'Act') anticipatory bail cannot be granted. The accused/applicant is not entitled for the benefit of Section 438 of the Cr.P.C.

6. In order to appreciate the argument of the learned Panel Lawyer if we look into the Section 18 of the Act, Section 18 lays down that :-

"Nothing in Section 438 of the Code shall apply in relation to any case involving the arrest of any person on an accusation of having committed an offence under this Act."

The provisions of Section 18 time and again, came up before the various High Courts for their consideration as to whether in view of the provisions of Section 18 of the Act there is a complete ban and the Court is not entitled to extend the benefit of Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. to a person against whom an accusation of having committed an offence under the Act has been levelled or in the appropriate cases, looking to the facts and circumstances of the case, whether the Court can extend the benefit of Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. to a person against whom an accusation has been levelled.

7. The offences which are enumerated in Section 3 of the Act are offences which, denigrate members of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes in the eyes of society, and prevent them from leading a life of dignity and self-respect. Such offences are committed to humiliate and harass the members of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes with a view to keep them in state of servitude. These offences constitute a separate class and cannot be compared with offences under the Penal Code. Therefore, Section 18 of the Act which excludes the provision of anticipatory bail under Section 438 of Criminal Procedure Code from being applicable to persons committing offences under the Act. After considering the provisions of Section 18 of the Act, the general view which has been taken by the various High Courts is that merely because a case has been registered by the police under this Act, an application for grant of anticipatory bail should not be thrown out without finding out whether there are accusations of commission of offence under this Act. Thus, wherever it is pointed out by the accused/applicant in an offence registered under this Act while moving application for release under Section 438, of Cr.P.C. that the accusation made in the F.I.R. do not constitute any offence under this Act, the complaint is false or stems out of mala fides to blackmail or to wreck some personal vengeance for settling and scoring personal vendetta or by way of some counter-blasts or found to be misuse of judicial process. It is the duty of the Court to examine and judicially scrutinize whether on its facts, the F.I.R. and the case diary do constitute any offence under this Act before refusing bail on that ground and whether there is no material for prima facie suspecting the petitioner of having committed an offence under the Act, the ban imposed by Section 18, does not, come into play and the petitioner under the circumstances deserves the benefit of anticipatory bail.

8. The High Court of Madhya Pradesh in the matter of Dule Singh v. State through Police, Rajgarh reported in 1993 (1) MPJR 223 held that :-

"A strict construction should be placed on the word "accusation" within the meaning of Section 18 of the Act. As such, the 'intention' or 'intent' which is material ingredient of the offence under Section 3(1)(x) of the Act not being clearly stated by the witnesses and there being no statement that the offence was committed because the complainant belogned to Scheduled Caste, it cannot amount to an 'accusation' of an offence within the meaning of Section 18 of the Act so as to bar an application under Section 438, Cr.P.C."

Again the Madhya Pradesh High Court in the matter of Bablu v. State of M. P. reported in 1996 (2) MPWN 141 held that :-

"Delayed FIR lodged after lodging the complaint by accused - commission of offences found doubtful even by police officers - anticipatory bail granted."

Similarly, the same High Court in the matter of Raj Kumar Jain v. State of M.P. reported in 2000 (3) MPL.J. 6 held that :-

"There was exchange of hot words and in that the applicant was said to have uttered word "Chamar" - Contention that merely by using the word "Chamar", Atrocities Act, 1989 was not attracted - Bar of applicability of Section 438 was not attracted - Complainant Principal of Institution and applicant a teacher in the same Institution - Incident arose due to non-disbursement of scholarship to students by complainant."

High Court of Delhi in the matter of Mukesh Kumar Saini v. State (Delhi Administration) reported in 2001 Cri L.J. 4587 has also held that :-

"Humiliating words allegedly uttered by petitioner while dragging complainant inside his house - Neighbours gathered thereafter to rescue him - Humiliating words thus not uttered before public view - Prima facie offence under Section 3(1)(x) not made out, therefore, anticipatory bail can be granted.

When the provisions of Section 18 of the Act and Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. came up for consideration before the Punjab and Haryana High Court in the case of Phulla Dass v. State of Punjab reported in 1998 Cri L.J. 157 the Court held that (Para 10) :-

"If the Court comes to the conclusion that the process of law is being misused, the petition is totally mala fide and vexatious, on the basis of which first information report is recorded, the Court would certainly exercise its inherent powers."

The High Court of Punjab and Haryana in the matter of Om Parkash Sharma v. Union Territory Chandigarh reported in 2001 (4) Crimes 208 held that :-

"Petitioner summoned for offences under Atrocities Act for having humiliated complainant by calling him Chura - Scope of scrutiny of process of law being misused or that complaint was mala fide or vexatious - Anticipatory bail was granted while referring the question to the larger Bench."

The High Court of Orissa in the matter of Ramesh Prasad Bhanja v. State of Orissa reported in 1996 Cri L.J. 2743 held that :-

"If no prima facie under Section 3 of the Act has been made out, it cannot be said that there is an "accusation of commission of oan offence under the Act" and in that case there can be no hesitation to say that the applicability of the provision of Section 438 of the Code is not excluded."

The High Court of Gujarat in the matter of Pankaj D. Suthar v. State of Gujarat reported in (1992) 1 Crimes 1122 held that:-

"..... beneficial legislation cannot be permitted to be abused and converted into an instrument to blackmail to wreck some personal vengeance for settling and scoring personal vendetta or by way of some counter blasts against opponents some public servants, as prima facie appears to have been done in the present case. The basic question in such circumstances, therefore - Whether a torch which is lighted to dispel the darkness can it be permitted to set on fire the innocent surroundings ? Whether a knife, an instrument which is meant for saving human life by using the same in the course of operation by a surgeon, can it be permitted to be used in taking the life of some innocent? When the accusation is found false, vexatious and by way of counter-blast as stemming from the ulterior motive to humiliate, disgrace and demoralize the petitioner, accused who is a public servant and such circumstances the provision of Section 18 of the Act cannot come in the way of Section 438 of the Cr.P.C."

8. The sum and substance of the above decisions is that the benefit of Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. can be extended to a person against whom an accusation is levelled of having committed offences enumerated in Section 3 of the Act in the following, circumstances :-

(i) If on the basis of the complaint and other material evidence collected by the Investigating Agency on the face of the material prima facie no offence is constituted/made out i.e. if the essential ingredients to constitute the offence under Section 3 of the Act are missing than the benefit of anticipatory bail can be extended to such person.

(ii) If on judicial scrutiny by the Court the facts of the case discloses that the complaint is false, vexatious, frivolous and by way of counter-blasts and found to be misuse of judicial process and stems from the ulterior motive to humiliate, disgrace and demoralise the person in order to blackmail to wreck some personal vengeance for settling and scoring personal vendetta.

10. Now, coming to the present case, it is not disputed that the land of the complainant and other villagers of village Gaitera was acquired for the purposes of mining activities to be conducted by the S.E.C.L. and the present applicant Somesh Das is Deputy Chief Mining Engineer/Sub-Area Manager, Rehar and some dispute had arisen regarding the distribution of compensation and other related issues and for that purpose a meeting was convened by the Naib Tehsildar, on the fateful day i.e. on 27-4-2003 therefore, it is apparent that the relations between the S.E.C.L. officials on the one hand and the villagers on the other hand were not good on account of dispute regarding the payment of compensation and for giving employment to the family members of those persons whose land was acquired.

11. It is also admitted position, that as per the complaint of complainant Kalicharan the alleged offence was committed by the applicant on 27-4-2003, whereas the complaint was lodged on 11-5-2003 i.e. about 14 days after the incident and in the complaint itself it has been written that it is delayed because some compromise talks were going on and moreover, as per the complaint, the allegations against the present accused/applicant are that when he reached at the site Kalicharan greeted him. Accused Somesh Das said that you do not deserve 'Namaskar', Madarchod Bhosadiwale Gond Adivasi, how are you creating hurdles in their activities, you will be murdered. This complaint was lodged after consultation and after 14 days of the incident. This fact itself creates doubt about the genuineness of the complaint.

12. It has also come on record that the villagers sat on "Dharna" on 6, 7 and 8th May 2003 and they had not allowed the mining activities of the S.E.C.L. and in that connection on 7th May, 2003 a complaint was lodged by the S.E.C.L. authorities against the villagers and much prior to that on 7-11-2002 also engineer of S.E.C.L. made complaint to the S.H.O. that the villagers are not allowing mining activities and huge loss is being caused to the public money. Thereafter on 11th May, 2003 this complaint was lodged. Moreover, in order to attract penal consequences of Section 3(1)(x) of the Act it is necessary that the person against whom accusations have been levelled must have used those words intentionally to insult or intimidate with an intent to humiliate the member of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes and with the intention to denigrate the members of the castes.

13. Here, from the allegations as alleged by Kalicharan the accused/applicant used the word 'Madarchod Bhosadiwala Gond Adivasi' and for using filthy languages separate offence under Sections 294 and 506 of the I.P.C. has also been registered.

14. Without expressing any further opinion on this subject, as mentioned above in the earlier judgments of High Court of Madhya Pradesh and High Court of Punjab and Haryana merely using the word "Chura" and "Chamar" and calling in the name of the caste creates reasonable doubts as to whether the provision of Section 3(1)(x) of the Act are attracted.

15. Therefore, having regard to the above facts and circumstances of the case and also having regard to the law laid down by the various High Courts with regard to the ban imposed by Section 18 of the Act, I am of the opinion that it is a fit case in which the accused/applicant should be enlarged on anticipatory bail by extending the benefit of Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. Accordingly, the application is allowed. It is, therefore, directed that in the event of arrest of the accused/applicant, if the accused/applicant furnishes a personal bond in sum of Rs. 10,000/- with one surety in the likewise amount to the satisfaction of the Investigating Officer, he be released on anticipatory bail. However, he shall abide the conditions provided under Section 438, of the Cr.P.C. i.e. he shall make himself available for interrogation by a police officer as and when required, he shall not directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer.

1 6. This order will remain effective for a period of two months from today.

17. Meanwhile, the accused/applicant is at liberty to approach the regular court for grant of regular bail.

18. Parties are entitled for certified copy of this order.

****

Cross Citation :1986-Crimes(2) 61 ,

HIGH COURT OF ASSAM

(Guwahati High Court)
(Division Bench)
'Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.N.Saikia, S. Hague,JJ
Arun Sharma .....V/s.....The State of Assam
Criminal Original Application 45 Of 1985, Jun 12,1985

==========

Cr. P.C. Sec. 438 – Anticipatory bail – I. P.C. sec. 366 – Applicant's name does not appear in F.I.R. – Accused already grnted bail – Applicant belongs to respectable family -Deserves to be granted with anticipatory bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) The petitioner of this application for anticipatory bail under Section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, shortly the Code, is a Commerce Graduate from Gauhati University and has been temporarily looking after the day to day management of the Hotel Nandan owned by Mis. Shyam Udyog (P) Limited. On 2.5.1985 at 11.55 p.m. one Dwijen Phookan lodged a First Information Report (Annexure-I to the application) at the Pan Bazar Police Station, Gauhati stating in with reference to the information lodged thereat same morning regarding the missing of his daughter Smt. Smita Phukan, that she had been recovered from the Hotel Nandan, G.S. Road at about 6.30 p.m. from the unlawful custody of one Shri Abhijeet Choudhury, who was a receptionist of the said hotel and Shri Himanshu Sharma, who was known to be a Director of the said hotel. It was further stated that the girl had been kidnapped and enticed away from the lawful custody of her parents by Shri Abhijeet Choudhury in collusion with Shri Himanshu Sharma and other persons who kept her concealed in the said Hotel Nandan. The girl was stated to be a minor of about 14 years and a student of Class VIII. The aforesaid FIR. was forwarded to the Paltan Bazar Police Station whereunder Hotel Nandan fell vide G.D. Entry No. 54 of 2.5.84. The Paltan Bazar Police Station vide G.D. Entry No. 87 of 2.5.85 forwarded the FIR. to the Chandmari Police Station as the complainants house fell within its jurisdiction. The Chandmari Police Station thereupon registered its case No. 84/85 under Section 366A

I.P.C. It is stated in this application that the said Shri Abhijit Choudhury who was the receptionist was forcibly taken away from the premises of the Hotel Nandan at about 5.30 p.m. on 2.5.85 and was produced before the Chief. Judicial Magistrate, Gauhati on 3.5.85 and the Forwarding Report (Annexure II to the application) of the Officer-in-Charge Chandmari Police Station stated that at about 6.30 p.m. the victim girl was recovered from the unlawful custody of the accused person by the complainant.

(2.) The petitioner states that he happened to be present in the hotel on 2.5.85 in connection with the day to day management of the hotel and since the date of occurrence the police has been making discreat enquiries about him and his brother in connection with the said case and therefore he has reasons to believe that he may be arrested in connection with the above case. He further states that he hails from a very reputed family of Gauhati. His grand father is an Advocate and his father is a reputed Chartered Accountant and his family members own both movable and immovable properties at Gauhati and other places. He also states that there is absolutely no chance of his tampering evidence or hampering the investigation and he shall make himself available as and when required by the police and he shall not in any manner make inducement, threat or promise to any person acquaints or connected with the case and he undertakes to abide by any condition, direction or order from the Court.

(3.) Mr. J.P. Bhattacharjee, the learned Advocate General, Nagaland for the petitioner submits: The petitioners apprehension of arrest in connection with the case is reasonable. He hails from a respectable family. His grand father being an Advocate, his father being a reputed Chartered Accountant and his brother the Managing Director of MIs. Shyam Udyog (P) Limited, there is no likelihood of his evading the process of the criminal court or not attending the trial or in any way tampering with the evidence or witnesses of the case. If he is kept in custody for some days before granting bail he will immeasurably suffer in prestige and business goodwill. His name does not appear in the FIR. and Shri Abhijeet Choudhury whose name appears has already been granted bail by the Chief Judicial Magistrate Gauhati on 7.5.85 till 18.5.85. The petitioner has come before this Court with the prayer for anticipatory bail which may be granted. The petitioner has not been arrested so far because of the interim order passed by this Court on 10.5.85.

(4.) Mr. D.N. Choudhury, the learned Additional Advocate General, Assam submits: This is not a case with any exceptional feature so as to justify anticipatory bail. The interim order dated 10.5.85 which stated that the petitioner should not be arrested by the police authority is not in accordance with law and requires immediate modification. Considering the nature of the case and the social alarm caused by it, a girl of 14 years having been allegedly kidnapped and kept concealed in the Hotel Nandan, anticipatory bail may not be granted to the petitioner. This Division Bench should formulate some guidelines so that such blanket orders not to arrest the accused are not passed so as to stisle the investigating agency.

(5.) Mr. Bhattacharjee very fairly states that he appeared for the petitioner on 10.5.85 when the aforesaid interim order was passed and it was his duty to point out to the Court that the order was not in accordance with law but his attention was not attracted to the last part of the order and he has no objection if that part of the order is now modified so as to conform to the provisions of Section 438 of the Code.

(6.) We have perused the provisions of Section 439A of the Code as inserted by the Code of Criminal procedure Assam Amendment Act, 1983. While Sections 364, 365, 367 and 368 I.P.C. are mentioned in that Section, Sections 366 and 366A I.P.C. do not find mention in the Section. Offences under both Sections 366 and 366A are non-bailable. The constraints laid down in Section 439A of the Code are, therefore, not applicable to this case.

(7.) The first question is whether anticipatory bail may be granted in this type of cases. It is not denied that the alleged kidnapping of a minor girl of 14 years, a student of Class VIII and keeping her concealed in a hotel would cause alarm in the society. However, a person is guilty of an offence only after being found to be so by a competent criminal court. Since the processing of a case by the police and the subsequent trial in the Court may take some time it is desirable that, wherever it is expedient to do so, the accused person may be released on bail since his guilt is yet to be established. Section 438 of the Code providing for anticipatory bail is a new provision which enables the superior courts to direct the release of a person on bail prior to his arrest. In its 41st report the Law Commission in recommending this provision a observed: Though there is a conflict of judicial opinion about the power of a Court to grant anticipatory bail, the majority view is that there is no such power under the existing provisions of the Code. The necessity for granting anticipatory bail arises mainly because sometimes influential persons try to implicate their rivals in false cases for the purpose of disgracing them or for other purposes by getting them detained in jail for some days. In recent times, with the accentuation of political rivalry, this tendency is showing signs of steady increase. Apart from false cases, where there are reasonable grounds for holding that a person accused of an offence is not likely to abscond, or otherwise misuse his liberty while on bail, there seems no justification to require him first to submit to custody, remain in prison for some days and then apply for bail). Section 438 deals with direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest. Under sub-section (1) thereof When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for a direction under this section; and that Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail. Sub-section (2) deals with the directions and conditions which may be made. Under subsection (3) If such person is thereafter arrested without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station on such accusation, and is prepared either at the time of arrest or at any time while in the custody of such officer to give bail, he shall, be released on bail; and if a Magistrate taking cognizance of such offence decides that a warrant should issue in the first instance against that person, he shall issue a bailable warrant in conformity with the direction of the Court under sub-section (1)

(8.) The question whether or not to grant anticipatory bail, involves, as was observed in Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia etc. v. The State of Punjab, a question of great public importance bearing, at once on personal liberty and the investigational powers of the police, and the society has a vital stake in both these interests, though their relative importance at any given time depends upon the complexion and restrains of political conditions. The question is how best to balance these interests while acting under Section 43 of the Code? The arrest of a person immediately affects his freedom of movement and an order of bail gives back to the accused that freedom. Besides, the arrest by itself may have some effect on the dignity of a person. Section 46 Cr.P.C. provides how arrest is made. Under sub-section (1) thereof, In making an arrest the police officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action. The touching or confining may thus be avoided by submission to the custody by word or action. It is a natural impulse of man to avoid arbitrary arrest. Guarantee against it has been insisted by mankind. In the Magna Carta, clause III embodied : No freeman shall be taken or imprisoned or diseased or outlawed or exiled or in any way destroyed, nor will we go upon him nor will we send upon him, save by the lawful judgment of his peers or the law of the land. To no one will we sell, deny or delay right or justice.

(9.) The universal declaration of human rights adopted in the General Assembly Resolution 217QU) on December 10, 1948 included the right to freedom from arbitrary arrest and detention and the right to be presumed innocent until Court finds guilty. Article 21 of the Constitution of India provides for protection of life and personal liberty and under it no person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law. However, in the interest of the society and public prosecution law provides for arrest of a person under prescribed circumstances. Section 41 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides when police may arrest a person without warrant. This section confers very wide powers on the police in order that they may act swiftly for the prevention or detention of cognizable offences without the formality and delay of having to go to a Magistrate for order of arrest. Section 42 of the Code provides for arrest of a person on refusal to give name and residence. Section 43 provides for arrest by private person and procedure on such arrest. Section 44 provides for arrest by Magistrate. Section 46 provides for arrest and Section 48 provides for pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions. Section 49 lays down that the person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape. Under Section so a person arrested should be informed of grounds of arrest and of right to bail. Section 57 provides that no police officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrates Court. Article 22 of the Constitution of India also provides for protection against arrest and detention in certain cases. Under sub-article (1) no person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds for such arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult, and to be defended by, a legal practitioner of his choice. Under sub-article (2) every person who is arrested and detained in custody shall be produced before the nearest Magistrate within a period of forty-four hours of such arrest excluding the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the court of the Magistrate and no such person shall be detained in custody beyond the said period without the authority of

Magistrate. The foundation of the right to arrest a person is at being concerned with commission of an offence. As was held in H.N. Rishbud v. State of Delhi,2 discovery and arrest of the suspected offender is one of the stages in investigation of an offence. This was reiterated Hi the State of Madhya Pradesh v. Mubarak Ali,3 and in Jagdish Mitter v. The Union of India4. It is settled law that under the Code investigation consists generally of the following stages: (1) proceeding to the spot; (2) ascertainment of the facts and circumstances of the case; (3) discovery and arrest of the suspected offender; (4) collection of evidence relating to the commission of the offence, which may consist of (a) examination of various persons including the accused, and reduction of their statements into writing, if the officer thinks fit, and (b) search of the places and seizure of things is necessary for the investigation and to be produced in the trial; (5) formation of the opinion as to whether on the materials collected there is a case to place the accused before a Magistrate for trial and if so taking the necessary steps for the same by filing a charge-sheet under Section 173. This discovery and arrest of the suspected offender is a part of the investigation. Besides, even for taking other steps in course of investigation the arrest of the suspected offender may be helpful. Any order not to arrest the suspected offender may, to that extent, affect investigation and the right of the investigating agency. It is at the point of discovery and arrest of the suspected offender that the police discretion is to be exercised. Exercise of police discretion interacts with the members of the public. Facing the problem of law enforcement and social control the police should act in conformity with broader aim of social purpose. It is for the police to decide whether to pursue strictly a law enforcement attitude or at the same time be conscious of social values and thereby obtain social support.

(10.) Investigation is done under the provisions of Chapter XII of the Code of Criminal Procedure. In England the Royal on Criminal Procedure (1981) said: The ultimate purpose of arrest is to bring before a Court for trial a person who commits a criminal offence or is reasonably suspected of so doing. But because arrest deprives the citizen of his liberty, its use is to be restricted generally to offences that carry the penalty of imprisonment that is to say of course arrestable offences and to persons against whom summons procedure will not be effective. The period of detention upon arrest may be used for certain purposes, and the power of arrest is also related to them. It may be used to prevent the suspect from destroying evidence or interfering with witnesses or warning accomplices who have not yet been affected. Where there is good reason to suspect a repetition of the offence, especially but not exclusively offences of violence it may be used to stop such an occurrence. Finally, the criterion of having reasonable grounds for suspicion sufficient to justify a charge; hearsay evidence for example, may be sufficient grounds for reasonable suspicion, but it is not sufficient for a person to be charged, since it will not be admissible in evidence at trial. Accordingly the period of detention may be used to dispel or confirm that reasonable suspicion by questioning the suspect or seeking further material evidence with his assistance. This has not always been the law or practice but now seems to be well established as one of the primary purposes of detention upon arrest. The Royal Commission further observed: Although this is common practice and, if properly conducted, entirely permissible practice, once the person has been arrested, it is not by itself a legitimate cause of arrest or the purpose of the exercise of the power of arrest otherwise available. There must be present in the mind of the person who effects the arrest, if it is to be reasonably effected, a fear that the process of interrogation will be initiated by the presence of one or other of the following circumstances. The destruction of evidence, interference with other potential witnesses, the warning of an accomplice, a repetition of the offence or the escape of the suspect. The other is that if there are other steps which the arresting constable could take for the furtherance of the investigation, then the constable should take those other steps, first, unless it is demonstrated to be necessary or at least desirable that the other steps should not be taken first. It was observed in State of West Bengal and others v. Swapan Kumar Guha,5 that if the Court interferes with the proper investigation in a case where an offence has been disclosed, the offence will go unpunished to the serious detriment of the welfare of the society and the cause of the justice suffers. It is on the basis of this principle that the Court normally does not interfere with the investigation of a case where an offence has been disclosed. But it cannot be said that an investigation must necessarily be permitted to continue and will not be prevented by the Court at the stage of investigation. A condition precedent to the commencement of investigation under Section 157 of the Code is that the FIR. must disclose, prima facie, that a cognizable offence has been committed. An FIR. which does not allege or disclose that the essential requirements of the penal provision are prima facie satisfied, cannot form the foundation or constitute the starting point of a lawful investigation. An investigation can be quashed if no cognizable offence is disclosed by the FIR. It is surely not within the province of the police to investigate into a Report (FIR.) which does not disclose the commission of a cognizable offence and the Code does not impose upon them the duty of inquiry in such cases.

(11.) The distinction between an ordinary order of bail and an order of anticipatory bail, has been pointed out by their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Gurbaksh Singh (supra). Whereas an order of bail is granted after arrest and therefore means release from the custody of the police. An anticipatory bail is granted in anticipation of arrest and is therefore effective at the very moment of arrest. Police custody is an inevitable concomitant of arrest for non-bailable offences. An order of anticipatory bail constitutes, so to say, an insurance against police custody following upon arrest for offence or offences in respect of which the order is issued. It is a pre-arrest legal process which directs that if the person in whose favour it is issued is thereafter arrested on the accusation in respect of which the direction is issued, he shall be released on bail.

(12.) Several questions arise while deciding whether or not to grant anticipatory bail in a particular case. The first question is what are the types of cases in which anticipatory bail should be granted; secondly, what is the stage of the case at which or until which anticipatory bail may be granted; thirdly, what should be duration of the anticipatory bail order; fourthly, what are the directions or conditions to be imposed; fifthly, whether notice should be given to the respondents; and lastly, whether interim order need be passed. The answers to these questions are to be found in Gurbaksh Singh (supra) where Chandrachud, C.]. discussed all these aspects. The Court should bear in mind the law enunciated therein. The Law Commission, in paragraph 31 of its 48th Report agreed that it is in very exceptional cases that such power of anticipatory bail should be exercised and that the provision should not be put to abuse at the instance of unscrupulous petitioners; and that the final order should be made only after notice to the Public Prosecutor. The initial order should only be an interim one. However, their Lordships observed: But the crimes, the criminals and even the complainants can occasionally possess extraordinary features. When the even flow of life becomes turbid, the police can be called upon to inquire into charges arising out of political antagonism. The powerful processes of criminal law on then be perverted for achieving extraneous ends. Attendant upon such investigations, when the police are not free agents within their sphere of duty, is a great amount of inconvenience, harassment and humiliation.

That can even take the form of the parading of a respectable person in handcuffs, apparently on way to a court of justice. The foul deed is done when an adversary is exposed to social ridicule and obloquy, no matter when and whether a conviction is secured or is at all possible. It is in order to meet such situations, though not limited to these contingencies, that the power to grant anticipatory bail was introduced into the Code of 1973. Section 438 is designed to ensure a valuable right like the right to personal freedom. It is to be noted that the ordinary provision for bail under Sections 437 and 439 Cr.P.C. have not been made otiose by the provision of Section 438. However, as their Lordships observed: An over-generous infusion of constraints and conditions which are not to be found in Section 438 can make its provisions constitutionally vulnerable since the right to personal freedom cannot be made to depend on compliance with unreasonable restrictions. The directions and conditions should be in conformity with those objectives and not to hamper investigation at all. Relying on the observations made in Balch and Jam, AIR. 1977 S.C. 366: (1977) 2 5CR. 62, their Lordships agreed that the power conferred by Section 438 is of an extraordinary character and that it is not ordinarily resorted to like the power conferred by Sections 437 and 439. Their Lordships also agreed that the power to grant anticipatory bail should be exercised with due care and circumspection. The guidelines are found in para 31 of the decision which reads: In regard to anticipatory bail, if the proposed accusation appears to stem not from motives of furthering the ends of justice but from some ulterior motive, the object being to injure and humiliate the applicant by having him arrested, a direction for the release of the applicant on bail in the event of his arrest would generally be made. On the other hand, if it appears likely, considering the antecedents of the applicant, that taking advantage of the order of anticipatory bail he will flee from justice, such an order would not be made. But the converse of those propositions is not necessarily true. That is to say, it cannot be laid down as an inexorable rule that anticipatory bail cannot be granted unless the proposed accusation appears to be actuated by mala fides; and equally, that anticipatory bail must be granted if there is no fear that the applicant will abscond. There are several other considerations, too numerous to enumerate, the combined effect of which must weigh with the court while granting or rejecting anticipatory bail. The nature and seriousness of the proposed charges, the context of the events likely to lead to the making of the charges, a reasonable possibility of the applicants presence not being secured at the trial, a reasonable apprehension that witnesses will be tampered with and the larger interests of the public or the State are some of the considerations which the court has to keep in mind while deciding an application for anticipatory bail. However, their Lordships clearly stated that no hard and fast rules can be laid down in discretionary matters like the grant or refusal of bail, whether anticipatory or otherwise. No such rules can be laid down for the simple reason that a circumstance which, in a given case, turns out to be conclusive, may have no more than ordinary signification in another case. Their Lordships preferred to leave the High Court and the Court of Session to exercise their jurisdiction under Section 438 Cr.P.C. by a wise and careful use of their discretion which, by their long training and experience, they are ideally suited to do. Their Lordships observed that the ends of justice would be better served by trusting these courts to act objectively and in consonance with principles governing the grant of bail which are recognised over the years, than by divesting them of their discretion which the legislature has conferred upon them, by laying down flexible rules of general application. Their Lordships held that the Court may, if there are reasons for doing so, limit the operation of the order to a short period until after the filing of an FIR. in respect of the matter covered by the order. The applicant may in such cases be directed to obtain an order of bail under Section 437 or 439 of the Code within a reasonably short period after the filing of the FIR. as aforesaid. But this need not be followed as an invariable rule. The normal rule should be not to limit the operation of the order in relation to a period of time. Thus, there is nothing to show that an order of anticipatory bail is to continue till the end of the trial. A blanket order of anticipatory bail should not generally be passed. An order which serves as a blanket to cover or protect any and every kind of allegedly unlawful activity, is a blanket order. A blanket order is bound to cause serious interference with the rights and duty of the police in the matter of investigation because, regardless of what kind of offence is alleged to have been committed by the applicant and when, an order of bail which comprehends allegedly unlawful activity of any description whatsoever, will prevent the police from arresting the applicant even if he commits, say, a murder in the presence of the public. Such an order call then become a charter of lawlessness and a weapon to stifle prompt investigation into offences which could not possibly be predicted when the order was passed. The Court which grants anticipatory bail must take care to specify the offence or offences in respect of which alone the order will be effective.(13.) Applying the above guidelines to the facts and circumstances of the instant case we find that the petitioners name is not mentioned in the FIR.; he has not denied his presence at the hotel; accused Abhijeet Choudhury has already been granted bail by the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gauhati; he hails from a respectable family, has deep roots in the society, is not likely to abscond or evade the process of the Court or in any way hamper investigation of the case or tamper with the evidence. He undertakes to abide by any condition imposed by this Court. There has been reasonable apprehension of his being arrested in connection with the case, as the police has been making discreet enquiries about him. We accordingly vacate our interim order dated 10.5.1985 and finally order and direct that if the petitioner is hereafter arrested without warrant by an Officer in Charge of a Police Station in connection with Chandmari Police Station Case No. 84/85, and is prepared either at the time of arrest or at any time while in custody of such officer to give bail, he shall be released on bail of Rs. 5000/- (Five thousand) to the satisfaction of the police officer arresting him; and if a magistrate taking cognizance of the offence decides that warrant should be issued in the first instance against the petitioner, he shall issue a bailable warrant in conformity with the directions given in this order. We further direct that in the event of the petitioner being arrested and enlarged on bail, he shall immediately thereafter make himself available for interrogation by any police officer and subsequently also as and when required by the police. He shall not directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any Police Officer. He shall not leave Assam without permission from the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gauhati. This order shall continue till the trial starts whereafter the petitioner shall obtain a bail order from the trial court.

(14.) In the result, this application is allowed. Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation : 1998 CRI. L. J. 3969

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S. S. NIJJAR, J

Akhalaq Ahmed F. Patel .... Vs .... State of Maharashtra

Criminal Anticipatory Bail Appln. No. 960 of 1998, D/- 26 -3 -1998.

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.204 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Can be granted even after summons or warrant is issued by Magistrate - It is not possible to hold as a proposition of law that Sessions Court or the High Court will have no power to entertain the application for anticipatory bail where either summons or warrants have been issued against the accused. The Court has the jurisdiction to grant anticipatory bail on being satisfied that the accused apprehends arrest in a non-bailable offence

B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Grant of - Petitioner in Government service - No apprehension of his absconding – He entitled for anticipatory bail.

==========

K. R. Sutrale, for Applicant; R. Y. Mirza, A. P. P. for the State.

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :- The petitioner was arrested for offences under Sections 498A, 306 and 34 of I.P.C. He was released on bail on 24-1-1996. The petitioner is a Police Constable and now attached to Azad Maidan Police Station and is a permament resident in Mumbai. The deceased, who is the wife of the petitioner suffered burn injuries at her parents house on 10th November, 1995 at around 00.15 hrs. The father of the deceased is said to have come home at 2.00 a.m. The deceased had been removed to hospital. A statement was recorded of the deceased in the presence of the Executive Magistrate wherein she stated that the husband is not responsible. A statement of the father was also recorded. He also stated that the husband was not responsible. However, the father made another statement on 18th November, 1995 wherein he stated that he had come to know from his daughter that the petitioner and his father were having illicit relations with the sister-in-law of the deceased and, therefore, she was feeling insulted and that is why she has committed suicide. On the basis of this, FIR was registered on 18th November, 1995. However, the petitioner was released on bail on 4-1-1996. Subsequent thereto the father of the deceased has filed a complaint before the Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, 24th Court, Borivli, Mumbai. On the basis of this, the learned Magistrate issued non-bailable warrant. The petitioner came to know about the issue of non-bailable warrant when a newspaper report was published on 10th March, 1998. In view of the above, the petitioner moved an application for anticipatory bail under Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. which has been rejected by the Additional Sessions Judge, Gr. Mumbai by his order dated 30th March, 1998.

1. It was submitted before the learned Additional Sessions Judge that the learned Magistrate has taken cognizance of an alleged offence punishable under Section 302, I.P.C. It was submitted that this is a clear abuse of the process of Court. The petitioner has already been released on bail for offences which are based on the same incident. It was submitted that the petitioner cannot be arrested again and again for the same incident. It was also submitted that the application for anticipatory bail is maintainable before the Sessions Court in view of the fact that non-bailable warrants had been issued. In support of his submission, the learned Counsel has relied on a Full Bench decision of the Andhra Pradesh High Court reported at 1986 Cri L.J. 1303 : (AIR 1986 Andh Pra 345), (Smt. Sheik Khasim v. State). It was, however, submitted by Counsel for the State that in view of the judgment of this Court reported in 1992 Cri L.J. 2373, (Ambalal P. Rashamwala v. State of Maharashtra) the Sessions Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application under Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. In paragraph 6 of the impugned judgment the learned Additional Sessions Judge has held thus :-

"The point which needs consideration is whether the apprehension of arrest is at the hand of police or at the instance of Magistrate. The Hon'ble Bombay High Court has clearly ruled that if the arrest is being apprehended in execution of warrant issued by the Magistrate, the provisions of Section 438, Cr.P.C. has no application. Therefore, in my considered opinion the application is misconceived and needs to be rejected."

These observations have been made by the learned Special Judge on the basis of the judgment of this Court. It would be apt to reproduce the whole judgment delivered by A. A. Cazi, J :-

"ORDER :- The petitioner seeks (a) an anticipatory bail and (b) order to respondent No. 1 (State of Maharashtra) not to execute the fresh non-bailable warrant which has been issued in Case No. 9/S/81 by the learned Metropolitan Magistrate of Tis Hajari Court, Delhi and to stay execution of that warrant till 18th December, 1991.

2. As far back as 10 years ago in 1981 a criminal case was filed by Respondent No. 2, Bashir Beg, against the present petitioner. It appears that the applicant has attended that Court several times and has even engaged Advocate Dinesh Chawla from Delhi to conduct his defence. The matter in the Delhi Court was fixed on 9th September, 1991 and has pointed out various reasons as to why he could not attend the Delhi Court on that date. As regards his Advocate not attending the Court he has pointed out that the Advocates to Tis Hajari were on strike. Thereafter the petitioner received a letter dated 10th October, 1991 from his surety. Shri Shyam Sunder informing the petitioner that the learned Metropolitan Magistrate had issued a fresh non-bailable warrant against the petitioner because of his absence in the Court and had now fixed the next date as 18th December 1991 for trial. The p etitioner also received a letter dated 5-10-1991 from his Advocate informing him that as the Advocates were on strike he had not appeared in the Court of the learned Metropolitan Magistrate and therefore the learned Metropolitan Magistrate had issued a fresh non-bailable warrant against the petitioner and had adjourned the case to 18th December, 1991. The petitioner says that he had already booked a ticket for 14th December, 1991 and he would leave Bombay on 14th December 1991 by Paschim Express by 11 a.m. and that he would go to Delhi and then he would get the non-bailable warrant cancelled and he undertakes to remain present in the Tis Hajari Court of the learned Metropolitan Magistrate, Smt. Sangita Dhingara on 18th December 1991 to face the trial.

3. The present application is clearly misconceived. No such anticipatory bail can be granted after a Magistrate has issued a warrant. The application is dismissed."

3. It is submitted by Mr. Sutrale, appearing for the petitioner, that the observations relied upon by the learned Additional Sessions Judge of Greater Bombay are contrary to the judgments given by Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court noticed above, Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court reported in 1996 (2) Crimes 555 (Pankaj Lochan Sahoo v. State), Division Bench of the Delhi High Court reported in 1997 Cri L.J. 961, Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court reported in 1996 (1) Crimes 238 : (1995 Cri L.J. 3317) (Nirbhay Singh v. State of M.P.) and a Division Bench judgment of the Punjab and Haryana High Court reported in 1985 Cri L.J. 897 (Puran Singh v. Ajit Singh). A perusal of the judgment of Cazi, J. given in the case of Ambalal (1992 Cri L.J. 2373) (supra) shows that there is absolutely no discussion whatsoever of the relevant provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code or the principles governing the grant or refusal of anticipatory bail. The learned Judge has merely expressed an opinion to the effect that no anticipatory bail can be granted after a Magistrate has issued a warrant. These obser-vations in my view cannot be treated as a ratio which is legally binding. They can at best be treated as obiter dicta being observations without consideration of the relevant provisions of law. On the other hand the Full Bench decision of the Andhra Pradesh in the case of Sheik Khasim, (1986 Cri L.J. 1303) (supra) considered the various provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code and the whole gamut of case law on anticipatory bail. The Full Bench notices the off quoted judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia v. State of Punjab, AIR 1980 SC 1632 : (1980 Cri L.J. 1125). In the aforesaid case the Supreme Court observed as follows (Paras 33 and 38) :

"We would, therefore, prefer to leave the High Court and the Court of Session to exercise their jurisdiction under S. 438 by a wise and careful use of their discretion which, by their long training and experience, they are ideally suited to do. The ends of justice will be better served by trusting these Courts to act objectively and in consonance with principles governing the grant of bail which are recognised over the years, than by divesting them of their discretion which the legislature has conferred upon them, by laying down inflexible rules of general application."

Then coming to the modalities regarding the passing of bail orders under S. 438(1), Cr.P.C. the Supreme Court held as follows :

"But notice should issue to the Public Prosecutor or the Government Advocate forthwith and the question of bail should be re-examined in the light of the respective contentions of the parties. The ad interim order too must conform to the requirements of the section and suitable conditions should be imposed on the applicant even at that stage. Should the operation of an order passed under S. 438(1) be limited in point of time? Not necessarily. The Court may, if there are reasons for doing so, limit the operation of the order to a short period until after the filing of an FIR in respect of the matter covered by the order. The applicant may in such cases be directed to obtain an order of bail under S. 437 or 439 of the Code within a reasonably short period after the filing of the FIR as aforesaid. But this need not be followed as an invariable rule. The normal rule should be not to limit the operation of the order in relation to a period of time."

After noticing the aforesaid observations the Full Bench has held that similar modalities can also be applied in the case of granting anticipatory bail under Section 438(1) even in a case where the Criminal Court takes cognizance and issues the warrant. Thus the question has been specifically answered after considering the various provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. In paragraph 13 the Full Bench observed as follows :

"13. For all the aforesaid reasons we hold that the filing of a charge-sheet by the police and issuing of a warrant by the magistrate do not put an end to the power to grant bail under S. 438(1) Cr.P.C. and on the other hand we are of the view that the High Court or the Court of Session has power to grant anticipatory bail under S. 438(1) to a person after the criminal Court has taken cognizance of the case and has issued process viz. the warrant of arrest of that accused person. Therefore, the decision of the Division Bench in Kamalakara Rao's case (1983) 1 APL.J. 97 : 1983 Cri L.J. 872 (supra), upholding the view taken by Madhusudhan Rao J. in N. Dasaratha Reddy's case (1975) 2 APL.J. (HC) 214 (supra), and by Ramachandra Raju, J. in Cr.M.P. 884 of 1981 does not lay down the correct legal position and consequently all these rulings are overruled."

The aforesaid observations leave no manner of doubt that the Sessions Court as well as the High Court have powers to grant anticipatory bail even in cases where warrant has been issued by the Magistrate. The aforesaid view of the Andhra Pradesh Full Bench has been reiterated by a Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court in the case of Nirbhay Singh v. State of M. P., 1996 (1) Crimes 238 : (1995 Cri L.J. 3317). In that very case the Division Bench judgment of the Punjab and Haryana High Court given in the case of Puran Singh v. Ajit Singh, 1985 Cri L.J. 897 has also been approved. Referring to the decisions of the Division Bench of the Punjab and Haryana High Court and the Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court it has been observed as follows :

"5. A Division Bench of the Punjab and Haryana High Court took a contrary (sic) view in Puran Singh v. Ajit Singh. In that case, charge-sheet was filed against the accused named in the F.I.R. after exonerating one of them. A private complaint was filed against the excluded person and the Magistrate ultimately issued non-bailable warrant. The Sessions Court rejected an application moved under Sec. 438, Cr.P.C. on the ground that it was not maintainable. A similar application was filed in the High Court and the Division Bench considered the matter though the trial was almost over, since the question has been referred to by a learned single Judge. A learned single Judge of the Punjab and Haryana High Court had taken a view against the maintainability of such an application in Ramlal v. State of Punjab. The Division Bench held that jurisdiction under Section 438 is not dependent on whether the Magistrate acting under Section 204 has issued bailable or non-bailable warrant, that the arrest may be at the instance of the police or at the instance of the Magistrate who has issued the warrant and in either case it may give rise to an apprehension in the mind of the accused that he may be arrested and such apprehension, if it arises in relation to a non-bailable offence, entitles him to move for anticipatory bail. The Court held that the Court may refuse to give relief if the warrant is a bailable one since it has the same effect as an order under Sec. 438.

6. The Sheikh Khasim Bi v. State, (1996 Cri L.J. 1303) a Full Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court agreed with the view taken by the Punjab and Haryana High Court after elaborate consideration of the legislative history of the provision. The Court held that the provisions in Section 438(3) do not have the amplitude of the provisions in Section 438(1) and the filing of charge-sheet does not put an end to the power under Sec. 438. The Full Bench relied on a Division Bench decision of this Court in Ramsewak v. State of M. P., 1979 Cri L.J. 1485. The Court considered the contention that there may be conflict between non-bailable warrant issued by a Magistrate and an order of anticipatory bail granted by the Sessions Court or High Court and held that in such a case the police shall execute the warrant by arresting the accused and produce him before the Magistrate and shall thereafter release the accused on bail as per the order granting anticipatory bail."

7. The Division Bench of Delhi High Court in the case of P. V. Narasimha Rao v. State (CBI), 1997 Cri L.J. 961 has also approved the judgment of the Punjab and Haryana High Court given in Puran Singh's case (1985 Cri L.J. 897) (supra). In this case, however, the proposition canvassed was converse. It was argued that since only summons had been issued there may be no apprehension of arrest. Considering the submissions made by the Counsel, the Division Bench of Delhi High Court has observed as follows :

8. It is thus crystal clear from above that the power under Section 438, Cr.P.C. to grant anticipatory bail is of an extraordinary character in as much as the bail is granted only after arrest whereas an order of anticipatory bail is to be passed only before arrest. It is of a wider amplitude. It is without any strings and fetters attached to it except those referred to above. The legislators in their wisdom have chosen not to impose any sort of checks, restrictions and impediments in the way of the Courts to grant bail in cases where the Courts come to the conclusion that it is a fit case for them to do so. They will be free to do so without any let or hindrance."

Thereafter the Division Bench of the Delhi High Court adverted to the circumstances which led to the incorporation of Section 438 into the body of the Criminal Prodedure Code. Again the Delhi High Court also noticed the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia. The judgment of the Division Bench of the Punjab and Haryana High Court in Puran Singh's case (1985 Cri L.J. 897) (supra) was approved as follows :

"24. A situation very much akin to the situation in hand arose before the Punjab and Haryana High Court in the case of Puran Singh v Ajit Singh reported as 1985 Cri L.J. 897. While dealing with the said situation it was observed. . . "The main governing factor for the exercise of jurisdiction under S. 438, Cr.P.C. is the apprehension of arrest by a person accused of the commission of a non-bailable offence. The section makes no distinction whether the arrest is apprehended at the hands of the police or at the instance of the Magistrate. The issuance of a warrant by the Magistrate against a person, to my mind justifiably gives rise to such an apprehension and well entitles a person to make prayer for his anticipatory bail. The High Court or the Court of Session may, however, decline to exercise its powers under S. 438(1), Cr.P.C. keeping in view the fact that the Magistrate has summoned the accused through bailable warrant i.e. a relief almost similar to what can be granted by the Court under S. 438(1), Cr.P.C. yet that does not mean that the Court has no jurisdiction to grant anticipatory bail to such an accused person. The grant of bail under S. 438(1) by the High Court or the Court of Session is, to my mind, dependent on the merits of a particular case and not the order of the Magistrate choosing to summon an accused through bailable or non-bailable warrant."

Thereafter the ratio of the judgment is in paragraph 26 which is as follows :-

"26. The above view which we are taking also finds support from the observations of the Andhra Pradesh High Court (Full Bench) in Smt. Shaik Khasim Bi v. The State, AIR 1986 AP 345 : (1986 Cri L.J. 1303). For all the aforesaid reasons we hold that the filing of a charge-sheet by the police and issuing of a warrant by the Magistrate do not put an end to the power to grant bail under S. 438(1), Cr.P.C. and on the other hand we are of the view that the High Court or the Court of Session has power to grant anticipatory bail under S. 438(1) to a person after the criminal Court has taken cognizance of the case and has issued process viz. the warrant of arrest of that accused person."

The Division Bench of Calcutta High Court in the case of Pankaj Lochan Sahoo v. State, (1996) 2 Crimes 555 also notices the judgment of the Supreme Court in Gurbaksh Singh Sibbia's case. In view of the aforesaid enunciation of law by various Courts of this Country it is not possible to hold as a proposition of law that Sessions Court or the High Court will have no power to entertain the application for anticipatory bail where either summons or warrants have been issued against the accused. The Court has the jurisdiction to grant anticipatory bail on being satisfied that the accused apprehends arrest in a non-bailable offence. It is difficult, therefore, to appreciate the reasoning of the learned Additional Sessions Judge to the effect that the application for anticipatory bail is inconceivable because the applicant is liable to be arrested on the basis of the directions issued by the Magistrate rather than the police. This reasoning, in my view, does not conform with the provisions of Section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

4. On merits admittedly on the basis of the same incident an FIR has been registered against the applicant on 18th Nove. 1995. It is also a matter of record that in the said case the petitioner has been released on bail by order dated 4-1-96. The present complaint has been lodged before the Court after a period of two and half years. The petitioner is in Government service. There is hardly any apprehension of the petitioner absconding. At this late stage it can hardly be said that the petitioner is likely to tamper with the evidence or interfere with the witnesses. In view of the above I find this to be a fit case in which the petitioner deserves to be granted anticipatory bail.

5. In view of the above, it is ordered that in the event of the arrest of the petitioner on the basis of the non-bailable warrant issued by the Magistrate, 24th Court, Borivli, Mumbai in case No. 170/W/98 he shall be released on bail on his furnishing PR Bond in the sum of Rs. 5,000/- with one surety in the like amount to the satisfaction of the learned Metropolitan Magistrate, 24th Court, Borivli. The petitioner is entitled to deposit cash till the surety is furnished to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, 24th Court, Borivli, Bombay. Application is allowed.

Certified copy expedited. Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2010 ALL MR (Cri) 2368 , 2010-Crimes-3-604 ,

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V.M. Kanade, J.
Ramesh Kotecha ….V/s….State of Maharashtra
Criminal Application No. 2966 of 2010 Of, Jun 28,2010

==========

Cr. P.C. SS. 205, 251, 71 – Issurance of Non – bailable warrants – It should be issued as alast resort – Magistrate may issue a summons and then a bailable warrant and only if presence of accused is not secured then only N.B.W. may be issued – Magistrate should not insist on the presence of the accused at all times unless it is necessary – There is no need for accused or his advocate to apply for exemption on every date of heareing – If the accused makes even the first appearance through a counsel, he may be allowed to do so.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Heard the learned counsel for the applicant and APP for the State.

(2.) By this application which is filed under Section 482 of the CrPC, the applicant takes exception to the order passed by the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Esplanade, Mumbai, dated 18th June, 2010. By the said order, the learned Magistrate was pleased to reject the application made by the applicant's Advocate for exemption and refused to cancel the non-bailable warrant. Brief facts are as under:

(3.) A complaint was filed against the present applicant for the offence punishable under Section 354 of the IPC which was registered with the Cuffe Parade police station, Mumbai. After filing of the complaint, the complainant remained absent on number of dates. Thereafter, however, her statement was partly recorded on 11th June, 2009. Thereafter, the case was adjourned to 11th August, 2009, 27th August, 2009, 8th October, 2009, 24th November, 2009, 15th December, 2009, 7th April, 2010, 13th April, 2010 and finally to 18th June, 2010. On 13th April, 2010, when the matter appeared before the court, complainant Ms. Leena Francis Soaz was present and she informed the trial court that she was contemplating not to proceed with the case and therefore, sought time to consider this aspect. The learned Magistrate, accordingly, in view of the request made by her, adjourned the case on 18th June, 2010. On 18th June, 2010 when the matter was called out, the applicant's Advocate was not present. The accused also was not present. An application was filed for exemption and the said application was ready. However, since the applicant's Advocate before entering the court room, the learned Magistrate was pleased to issue non-bailable warrant by passing the following order: "Accused remains absent. Issue NBW against accused." Thereafter, the applicant's Advocate made an application for exemption. In the said application, it was mentioned that the applicant was unwell and was unable to attend the Court and therefore, it was prayed that the accused should be exempted from appearing in the court on that day. This application was also rejected by passing the following order: "Learned APP present. Holding Advocate present. Application for exemption rejected. Issue NBW." Being aggrieved by the said order, the applicant has preferred this application under Section 482 of the Cr PC.

(4.) The learned counsel for the applicant submitted that the learned Magistrate erred in issuing non-bailable warrant and in not granting exemption to the accused from appearing in the court. He submitted that the complainant had remained absent on number of occasions and she was also contemplating withdrawal of the complaint. Under these circumstances, the learned Magistrate was not justified in issuing the non-bailable warrant and thereafter, refusing to cancel it when an application for exemption was made. He invited my attention to the judgment of the Apex Court in Inder Mohan Goswami and another v. State of Uttaranchal and others.1 He submitted that the Apex Court had held that non-bailable warrant should normally not be issued if the presence of the accused could be secured. The circumstances under which the said warrant could be issued was laid down in the said judgment. He also invited my attention to judgment of the learned Single Judge of this Court in the case of Bhaskar Sen v. State of Maharashtra and others2, wherein similar guidelines were laid down by the learned Single Judge of this Court.

(5.) I have heard both the learned counsel for the applicant and APP for the State. In my view, the learned Magistrate was not justified in not granting exemption to the applicant and not canceling non-bailable warrant which was earlier issued. The Roznama clearly indicate that the complainant had remained absent on number of dates which are mentioned hereinabove. She had also made a request for a further date in order to reconsider the continuation of the complaint. Under these circumstances, the learned Magistrate ought to have granted exemption particularly, when the application for exemption was filed in which it was stated that the accused was unwell and he could not appear before the Magistrate on that day. It would be relevant to refer to the observations made by the Apex Court in the case of Inder Mohan Goswami (supra) in this context. The Apex Court in paragraphs 50 to 54 has observed as under:

"50. Civilised countries have recognised that liberty is the most precious of all the human rights. The American Declaration of Independence, 1776. French Declaration of the Rights of Men and the Citizen, 1789, Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant of Civil and Political Rights, 1966 all speak with one voice liberty is the natural and inalienable right of every human being. Similarly, Article 21 of our Constitution proclaims that no one shall be deprived of his liberty except in accordance with procedure prescribed by law.

51. The issuance of non-bailable warrants involves interference with personal liberty. Arrest and imprisonment means deprivation of the most precious right of an individual. Therefore, the courts have to be extremely careful before issuing non-bailable warrants. 52. Just as liberty is precious for an individual so is the interest of the society in maintaining law and order. Both are extremely important for the survival of a civilized society. Sometimes in the larger interest of the public and the State it becomes absolutely imperative to curtail freedom of an individual for a certain period, only then the non bailable warrants should be issued. When non-bailable warrants should be issued

52. Non-bailable warrant should be issued to bring a person to court when summons or bailable warrants would be unlikely to have the desired result. This could be when; it is reasonable to believe that the person will not voluntarily appear in court; or the police authorities are unable to find the person to serve him with a summon; or it is considered that the person could harm someone if not placed into custody immediately. 54. As far as possible, if the court is of the opinion that a summon will suffice in getting the appearance of the accused in the court, the summon or the bailable warrants should be preferred. The warrants either bailable or non-bailable should never be issued without proper scrutiny of facts and complete application of mind, due to the extremely serious consequences and ramifications which ensue on issuance of warrants. The court must very carefully examine whether the criminal complaint or FIR has not been filed with an oblique motive."

(6.) Similarly, in the case of Bhaskar Sen (supra), the learned Single Judge had occasion to consider the provisions of Sections 205 and 251 of the Cr PC. In para 10 of the said judgment, the learned Single Judge has observed as under:

"10. A large number of cases are being filed in this Court seeking cancellation of NBW issued either while rejecting the application for exemption or for nonappearance of the accused on one date of hearing even if Advocate for the accused appears on his behalf. It is also observed that the complaints under Section 138 of the Act are being filed against the companies in which all the directors are being arraigned as accused and their presence is being insisted on every date of hearing and no proceedings are being taken up in their absence. It is further observed that the progress of the cases under Section 138 impedes for want of their presence. The fact remains as to why their presence is being insisted on every date of hearing. The idea is to see that the progress of the case is not hindered for want of presence of the accused or even the complainant for that matter. Keeping this in view and against a backdrop of the observations made in the foregoing paragraphs, I deem it appropriate to issue the following directions to the courts trying summons cases and in particular, cases under Section 138 of the Act.

(i) Ordinarily the Court should be generous and liberal in exercising powers under Sections 205 and 317 of the Code and grant exemption to the accused from personal appearance unless presence is imperatively needed or becomes indispensable. While considering the application for exemption, the Court should also bear in mind the nature of accusations and prejudice, if any, likely to be caused to the prosecution or the complainant, if personal attendance of the accused is dispensed with or to the accused if personal attendance is insisted upon, as case may be.

(ii) If an accused makes even the first appearance through a counsel, he may be allowed to do so.

(iii) If an accused is seeking permanent exemption in a case, the Court, while dealing with such application, should take precautions that the accused gives an undertaking to the satisfaction of the Court that he would not dispute his identity as the particular accused in the case, and that a counsel on his behalf would be present in the Court on all dates of hearing and that he has no objection for recording a plea on his behalf of a counsel and in taking evidence in his absence.

(iv) While dealing with the application seeking permanent exemption from appearing in the case as afor-estated, if, the Court for any reasons is of the opinion that such exemption should not be granted, it may do so by recording or indicating reasons for rejecting such prayer.

(v) It is open for the Court to grant exemption which is either permanent or for a specific period, depending upon the facts of each case, on the conditions as it deems fit and proper, requiring the accused to file an undertaking as indicated earlier.

(vi) In a given case, the Court may record a plea of the accused even when his Advocate makes such plea on his behalf in a case where personal appearance of the accused is dispensed with on his furnishing the undertaking in terms of Clause (iii). However, it is open for the Court to refuse such permission for reasons to be recorded separately.

(vii) The Court should avoid issuance of non-bailable warrant in the first instance to secure presence of the accused facing trial and it should be applied as a last resort.

(viii) If a counsel for the accused fails to appear in the matter and his absence impedes further progress of the proceedings including examination of witnesses, the Court may resort to any other course as may be available under the provisions of the Code to secure presence of the accused, including issuance of NBW and may cancel the order of exemption and in such case may or may not grant exemption any more.

(ix) The Court should avoid requiring the accused or his Advocate to apply for exemption on every date of hearing.

(x) While exercising the powers to grant exemption under any circumstance, the Court shall not compromise with the further progress of the proceedings and see to it that the presence or absence of either of the parties does not impede the proceedings.

(xi) In a given case, similar parameters be applied for granting exemption to the complainant if his absence is not likely to cause prejudice, if any, to the accused or hinder the progress of the complaint."

(7.) Perusal of the guidelines laid down by the Supreme Court shows that the Magistrate has a power to issue non-bailable warrant but that should ordinarily be issued as a last resort. Before issuing a non-bailable warrant, the Magistrate may issue summons and then a bailable warrant and only if the presence of the accused is not secured, he may have to take resort to the provision of issuance of non-bailable warrant. In number of judgments of the Apex Court and this Court, it has been held that that Magistrate should not insist on the presence of the accused at all times unless it is absolutely necessary. The ratio of the said judgments, therefore, in my view, squarely applies to the facts of the present case.

(8.) Order is, accordingly, set aside. The non-bailable warrant issued by the Magistrate is quashed.

(9.) Application is allowed and disposed of. Petition allowed.

****

DECEMBER 24, 2013

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

WRIT PETITION NO. 4429 OF 2013

Arunkumar N. Chaturvedi ..Petitioner

Vs.

The State of Maharashtra and Anr ..Respondents

Mr.Rishi Bhuta,for the Petitioner.

Mr. A. R. Patil, APP,for the Respondent State.

CORAM :¬M. L. TAHALIYANI,J.

DATE :¬ DECEMBER 24, 2013.

==========

Application for cancellation of Non – bailable warrant – There is no necessity for accused to remain present – Warrant can be cancelled in absence of accused – Court can not require presence of accused before dealing with application.

==========

P. C.:Heard the learned counsel Mr. Rishi Bhuta for the Petitioner and the learned Additional P. P. Mr. Patil, for the State of Maharashtra.

The judgments of Andhrapradesh High Court and Delhi High Court were cited before the learned Magistrate. The learned Magistrate without considering those judgments has stated that the said judgments were not binding upon him.

Since the Applicant was ready to appear before the Magistrate after cancellation of warrant and since there was reasonable apprehension in the mind of the Applicant that he might be put beyond the bars if he appeared before cancellation of warrant, the learned Magistrate should have considered the application on merits.

In my considered opinion, there is no law that the accused shall personally remain present for cancellation of warrant. If the lawyer makes an application for cancellation of warrant, the same needs to be considered on merits by the learned Magistrate without insisting the for appearance of the Applicant/accused. It is noted by this Court that many Writ Petitions are filed in this Court only because the learned Magistrate straight way take a view that warrant cannot be cancelled unless accused appears before the Court. The view taken by a few of the Magistrates particularly in the city of Bombay, in my opinion, is not correct. It is high time that this Court lets the Magistrate note that the appearance of the applicant/accused is not necessary when application for cancellation of warrant is made. In the circumstances, I pass the following order:¬
(I)The non¬bailable warrant issued against the Applicant stands cancelled.
(II)The Applicant shall appear before the Trial Court on next date of hearing.
(III)The copy of this order shall be forwarded to the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, Bombay for being circulated to all the Additional Chief Metropolitan/ Magistrate and Metropolitan Magistrate.
(IV)The Writ Petition stands disposed of.

(M. L. TAHALIYANI, J.)

****

Cross Citation :2001-DCR-1-500 , 2001-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-33

HIGH COURT OF DELHI

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R.S.Sodhi,J

PREM CASHEW INDUSTRIES .....V/s

(Zen Pareo) LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, UNION TERRITORY OF DELHI

Criminal 55 Of 1999, Criminal Miscellaneous 1051 Of 1999, Sep 22,2000

==========

Application for cancellation of Non – bailable warrant – There is no necessity for accused to remain present – Warrant can be cancelled in absence of accused – Court can not require presence of accused before dealing with application.

==========

(1.) This is a revision petition challenging the order dated 16.1.1999 of the Metropolitan Magistrated where by the learned Magistrate has rejected the application of the petitioner praying for withdrawal of non-bailable warrants. The revision petition before me, besides challenging the order dated 16.1.1999, also raises question of jurisdiction.

(2.) It has been argued before me by learned counsel for the petitioner that the Courts below have no jurisdiction to entertain the complaint inasmuch as the cause of action which arose on the failure to make payment within fifteen days from the date of receipt of the notice, necessarily restricts the jurisdiction to the place where notice has been served and from where the amount has not been released. In support of this contention learned senior counsel has drawn my attention to the judgment of the Supreme Court in Sadanandan Bhadran v. Madhavan Sunil Kumar, 1988 (6) SCC 514. Learned counsel relies upon that following observations in the judgment:

"5. The next question that falls for our determination is whether dishonour of the cheque on each occasion of its presentation gives rise to a fresh cause for action within the meaning for Section 142(b) of he Act. Section 142 reads as under: "142. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974). (a) no court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Section 138 except upon a complaint, in writing, made by the payee or, as the case may be holder in due course of the cheque; (b) such complaint is made within one month of the date on which the cause of action arises under clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138; (c) no court inferior to that of a Metropolitan Magistrate or a Judicial Magistrate of the first class shall try any offence punishable under Section 138."

(3.) From a plain reading of the above Section, it is manifest that a competent court can take cognizance of a written complaint of an offence under Section 138 if it is made within one month of the date on which the case of action arises under clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138.

(4.) In a generic and wide sense (as in Section 20 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908) "cause of action" means every fact which it is necessary to establish to support a right or obtain a judgment. Viewed in that context, the following facts are required to be proved to successfully prosecutes the drawer for an offence under Section 138 of the Act:

(a) that the cheque was drawn for payment of an amount of money for discharge of a debt/liability and. the cheque was dishonoured; (b) that the cheque was presented within the prescribed period; (c) that the payee made a demand for payment of the money by giving a notice in writing to the drawer within the stipulated period ; and (d) that the drawer failed to make the payment within 15 days of the receipt of the notice.

(5.) If we were to proceed on the basis of the generic meaning of the term "cause of action", certainly each of the above facts would constitute a part of the cause of action but then it is significant to note that clause (b) of Section 142 gives it a restrictive meaning, in that, it refers to only one fact which will give rise to the cause of action and that is the failure to make the payment within 15 days from the date of the receipt of the notice. The reason behind giving such a restrictive meaning is not far to seek. Consequent upon the failure of the drawer to pay the money within the period 15 days as envisaged under clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138, the liability for the drawer for being prosecuted for the offence he has committed arises, and the period of one month for filing the complaint under Section 142 is to be reckoned accordingly. The combined reading of the above two Sections of the Act leaves no room for doubt that cause of action within the meaning of Section 142(c) arises -- and can arise only once.

(6.) If we were to proceed on the basis of the generic meaning of the term "cause of action", certainly each of the above facts would constitute a part of the cause of action but then it is significant to note that clause (b) of Section 142 gives it a restrictive meaning, in that, it refers to only one fact which will give rise to the cause of action and that is the failure to make the payment within 15 days from the date of the receipt of the notice. The reason behind giving such a restrictive meaning is not far to seek. Consequent upon the failure of the drawer to pay the money within the period 15 days as envisaged under clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138, the liability for the drawer for being prosecuted for the offence he has committed arises, and the period of one month for filing the complaint under Section 142 is to be reckoned accordingly. The combined reading of the above two Sections of the Act leaves no room for doubt that cause of action within the meaning of Section 142(c) arises -- and can arise only once.

(7.) From the learned counsel wants me to deduce that the cause of action and jurisdiction are one and the same thing, namely, the cause of action is a concept in time and place while jurisdiction is situs, but, however, the same amalgamate into one and that is what is termed as 'cause of action'. On the other hand, my attention has been drawn to the judgment of the Supreme Court in K. Bhaskaran v. Sankaran Vaidhyan Balan and Another, JT 1999 (7) SC 558 where the question of jurisdiction has been adverted to and answered by the Supreme Court as follows:

"11. We fail to comprehend as to how the trial court could have round so regarding the jurisdiction question. Under Section 177 of the Code "every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried in a court within whose jurisdiction it was committed." The locality where the bank (which dishonoured the cheque) is situated cannot be regarded as the sole criteria to determine the place of offence. It must be remembered that offence under Section 138 would not be completed with the dishonour of the cheque.

(8.) It attains completion only with the failure of the drawer of the cheque to pay .the cheque amount within the expiry of 15 days mentioned in Clause (c) of the proviso to Section 138 of the Act. It is normally difficult to fix up a particular locality as the place of failure to pay the amount covered by the cheque. A place, for that purpose, would depend upon a variety of factors. It can either be at the place where the drawer resides or at the place where the payee resides or at the place where either of them carries on business. Hence, the difficulty to fix up any particular locality as the place of occurrence for the offence under Section 138 of the Act.

(9.) Even otherwise the rule that every offence shall be tried by a court within whose jurisdiction it was committed is not an unexceptional or unchangeable principle. Section 177 itself has been framed by the legislature thoughtfully by using the precautionary word "ordinarily" to indicate that the rule is not invariable in all cases. Section 178 of the Code suggests that if there is uncertainty as to where, among different localities, the offence would have been committed the trail can be had in a court have jurisdiction over any of those localities. The provision has further widened the scope by stating that in case where the offence was committed partly in one local area and partly in another local area the court in either of the localities can exercise jurisdiction to try the case. Further again, Section 179 of the Code stretches its scope to a still wider horizon. It reads thus:

"179. Offence triable where act is done of consequence ensues. When an act is an offence by reason of anything which has been done and of a consequence which has ensued, the offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within whose local jurisdiction such thing has been done or such consequence has ensued."

(10.) The above provisions in the Code should have been borne in mind when the question regarding territorial jurisdiction of the courts to try the offence was sought to be determined.

(11.) The offence under Section 138 of the Act can be completed only with the concatenation of a number of acts. Following are the acts which are components of the said offence : (1) Drawing of the cheque, (2) Presentation of the cheque to the bank, (3) Returning the cheque unpaid by the drawee bank, (4) Giving notice in writing to the drawer of the cheque demanding payment of the cheque amount, (5) failure of the drawer to make payment within 15 days of the receipt of the notice.

(12.) It is not necessary that all the above five acts should have been perpetrated at the same locality. It is possible that each of those five acts could be done at 5 different localities. But concatenation of all the above five is a sine qua non for the completion of the offence under Section 138 of the Code. In this context a reference to Section 178(d) of the Code is useful. It is extracted below:

"Where the offence consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be inquired into or tried by a court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas."

(13.) Thus it is clear, if the five different acts were done in five different localities any one of the courts exercising jurisdiction in one of the five local areas can become the place of trial for the offence under Section 138 of the Act. In other words; the complainant can choose any one of those courts having jurisdiction over any one of the local areas within the territorial limits of which any one of those five acts was done. As the amplitude stands so widened and so expansive it is an idle exercise to raise jurisdictional question regarding the offence under Section 138 of the Act."

(14.) Faced with these two different judgments, learned counsel for the petitioner wants me to notice that the judgment in K. Bhaskaran's case (supra) did notice the earlier judgment of the Supreme Court in Sadanandan's case (supra) and, therefore, according to him, this is an observation but not the ratio of the judgment.

(15.) Having heard learned counsel for the parties. I have carefully gone through the judgments cited at the bar. I am of the opinion that cause of action is something quite different from jurisdiction. Cause of action must restrict itself to time whereas jurisdiction is a situs. Cause of action has been dealt with in Sadanandan's case while situs has been dealt with in K. Bhaskaran's case. There is no question of each overlapping the other. There is no ambiguity whatsoever, to my mind, and, therefore, I hold that in the facts and circumstances of this case since the cheque had been presented at Delhi and also notice issued from Delhi, the courts at Delhi have jurisdiction to entertain the complaint. However, now coming to the challenge to the order dated 16.1.99, learned counsel submits that the court below ought to have, in the first instance, disposed of the application and only thereafter required the presence of the accused if the need did them arise. The court ought not to have, according to him, first required the presence of the accused before dealing with the application for cancellation of non- bailable warrants and that court having not decided the application insisting upon the accused to be present, has passed an order without applying its mind to the contentions raised in the application for cancellation of non-bailable warrants. There appears to be a great deal of force in this argument. It is also contended that the application that has been moved must first be decided before the consequences thereon can visit the accused. In this view of the matter, I hold that the order dated 16.1.1999 is bad and remand the matter to the Metropolitan Magistrate to first consider the applications for recall of the non-bailable warrants before passing any other order.

(15.) In view of what has been stated above, the revision petition is disposed of.

****

Cross Citation :2009-Cri.L.J.-0-523,2009-AIR JharR-2-203

HIGH COURT OF BIHAR

Hon'ble Judge(s) : SAMARENDRA PRATAP SINGH, JJ.

SANDEEP KUMAR TEKRIWAL ….V/s….STATE OF BIHAR

Sep 09,2008

==========

Cr. P.C. S. 317 – Trail in absence of accused – Non – bailable warrant issued against accused- Held- Nothing to show thant any order was passed on previous dates asking accused to remain present – Held, issurance of warrant unjustified – Hence quashed.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) HEARD learned counsel for the parties.

(2.) IN the instant writ petition, the petitioner has prayed for quashing the order dated 28-6-2008: passed by Judicial Magistrate, 1st class, Bhagalpur, in connection with Tr. No. 2853 of 2008, arising out of kotwali PS Case No. 0152 of 2000, for offences under Sections 406, 419, 420, 467, 468, 120b of the I. P. C. , whereby his representation under Section 317, Cr. P. C. was not accepted and as such his bail bond was cancelled, and non-bailable warrant (NBW)for arrest was also issued against him.

(3.) THE facts of the case in short is as follows :-

Pursuant to order dated 27-9-2000; passed by the Apex Court in S. L. A. (Cri)No. 3079 of 2000, the petitioner surrendered in the Court below and was released on bail. After taking of cognizance, the matter was transferred to the Court of Md. Sahid Khan, judicial Magistrate, Ist class, Bhagalpur for disposal. The petitioner duly appeared before the trial Court on transfer of case, who vide his order dated 5-3-2000 allowed the petitioner to remain on previous bail. However, the case remained pending, awaiting appearance of accused Prem prakash trivedi. Learned counsel submits, that the aforesaid fact would also transpire from orders of the trial Court including order dated 31-10-2005.

(4.) ON 28-6-2008, the date fixed in the case, three out of four accused including the petitioner were represented under, Section 317 of the Cr. P. C. The other accused Prem prakash Trivedi was as usual absent. The learned magistrate did not accept the representation under Section 317, Cr, P, C. and cancelled bail bond and issued NBW against the petitioner and Bothers.

(5.) LEARNED counsel for the petitioner submits that the rejection of representation under Section 317, Cr. P. C. and cancellation of bail bond and issuance of NBW by a composite order dated 28-6-2008, is in violation of provision of Section 317 of the Cr. P C. itself.

(6.) LEARNED counsel for the State submits that instant writ application is "not maintainable. Furthermore, forfeiture of bond under Section 446, Cr. P. C. is appealable under Section 449, Cr. P. C. He further submits that under Section 317, Cr. P. C. the magistrate by one composite order can cancel the representation, bail bond and can issue NBW also.

(7.) AS maintainability of the writ petition has also been raised by learned State counsel, this Court proceeds to examine the same also.

(8.) LEARNED counsel for the State submits that the petitioner has alternative remedy and could have filed quashing application instead of rushing to this Court in writ jurisdiction. In this respect, he relied upon decisions of the Apex Court in cases of Hari vishnu Kamath v. Ahmad Ishaque and others, reported in AIR 1955 SC 233, Surya Dev rai v. Ram Chander Rai and others, reported in AIR 2003 SC 3044, as well as Ranjit Singh v. Ravi Prakash, reported in AIR SC 3892.

(9.) IN case of Hari Vishnu Kamath (supra), the Apex Court laid down the circumstances in which writ of Certiorari can be issued. Extract of the judgment laid down in para 10 is quoted herein as follows :-

"according to the common law of England 'certiorari' is a high prerogative writ issued by the Court of the King's Bench or Chancery to inferior Courts or tribunals in the exercise of supervisory jurisdiction with a view to ensure that they acted within the bounds of their jurisdiction. To this end, they were commanded to transmit the records of a cause or matter pending with them to the superior Court to be dealt with there, and if the order was found to be without jurisdiction, it was quashed. The Court issuing certiorari to quash, however could not substitute its own decision on the merits, or give directions to be complied with by the Court or the tribunal. Its work-was destructive; it simply wiped out the order passed without jurisdicion and left the matter there. "

(10.) IN the case of Surya Deo Raiv. Ram chander Rai (AIR 2003 SC 3044) (supra), the Apex Court in sub paras (3) and (8) of para 38 extensively laid down scope, limits and circumstances in which writ Of certiorari can be issued. These sub paras are as follows:-

(3) Certiorari, tinder Article 226 of the constitution, is issued for correcting gross errors of jurisdiction, i. e. . , when a subordinate court is found to Have acted (i) without jurisdiction by assuming jurisdiction where there exists none, or (ii) in excess of its jurisdiction by overstepping of crossing the limits of jurisdiction, or (iii) acting in flagrant disregard of law Or the rules of procedure or acting in violation of principles of natural justice whether there is no procedure specified, and thereby occasioning failure of justice. (8) The High Court in exercise of certiorari or supervisory jurisdiction will not convert itself into a Court of Appeal and indulge in re-appreciation or evaluation of evidence or correct errors in drawing Inferences or correct errors of mere formal or technical character;

(11.) THE Apex Court further observed that when theree is manifest error apparent ont the face of proceedings and based on clear ignorance or disregard of Provision of law, the writ would be maintainable

(12.) IN the case of Ranjit Singh (AIR 2004 sc 3892) (supra)there was dispute regarding landlord and tenant in respect of suit premises. The learned Sessions Court was persuaded to form an opinion that the shop, was an old construction which was needed to be demolished as it was in bad condition. The informant Ravi Prakash moved the High court for setting aside the judgment of Appellate court and restoring that of trial Court which relief the High Court granted. The high Court observed that considering the evidence on record, the order of Session's court was not sustainable, In these such circumstances, the Apex Court observed the High Court while exercising jurisdiction under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India cannot act like an Appellate Court,

(13.) ON the other, hand, Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that it is well established,by judicial pronouncement that high Court under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India can can interfere in the following circumstances which are enumerated herein below-

> (a) Erroneous, assumption or excess of jurisdiction, (b) Refusal to exercise jurisdiction (c) Error of law apparent on the face of the record, as distinguished from a mere mistake of law or error of law relating to jurisdiction. (d) Violation of the principles of natural justice. (e) Arbitrary or capricious exercise of authority, or discretion. (f) Arriving at a finding which is perverse or based on no material. (g) A patent or flagrant error in procedure. (h) Order resulting in manifest injustice.

(14.) HAVING heard the learned counsel for the parties, there cannot be any dispute to the proposition that while exercising jurisdiction under Sections 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India, the High Court cannot act like an Appellate Court. The jurisdiction is supervisory in nature, Article 227 of the Constitution is for keeping the subordinate Courts within the bounds of jurisdiction. When the subordinate Court has jurisdiction which it does not have, or has failed to exercise the jurisdiction, or exercises jurisdiction in a manner not permitted by law and thereby has occasioned, a failure of justice, the High Court would step in to exercise its supervisory jurisdiction. However, the distinction between exercise of jurisdiction, for issuance of writ of certiorari under Article 226 of the Constitution and that of supervisory jurisdiction has obliterated to quite an extent over the years. While issuing writ of certiorari the High court may annul or set aside the act, order or proceeding but cannot substitute its own decision in place thereof. In appropriate cases, the jurisdiction of the High Court may not be limited to giving suitable direction, but can pass order in suppression or substitution of the order of the subordinate court as the Court could have made in the facts and circumstances of the case

(15.) HAVING noticed the extent and scope of jurisdiction of this Court under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution of India, I would now examine whether the instant case would fall within the aforesaid ambits. It would be necessary to examine section 317, cr. P. C. at the first instance itself which is quoted herein below :-

317. Provision for inquiries and trial being held in the absence, of accused in certain cases.- (1) At any stage of an inquiry or trial under this Code, if the Judge or magistrate is satisfied, for reasons to be recorded, that the personal attendance of the accused before the Court is not necessary in the interests of justice, or that the accused persistently disturbs the proceedings in Court, the Judge or Magistrate may, if the accused is represented by a pleader, dispense with his attendance and proceed with such inquiry or trial in his absence, and may, at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of such accused. (2) If the accused in any such case is not represented by a pleader, or if the Judge or magistrate considers his personal attendance necessary, he may, if he thinks fit and for reasons to be recorded by him, either adjourns such inquiry or trial, order that the case of such accused be taken up or tried separately.

(16.) SECTION 317, Cr. P. C. provides for inquiries and trial being held in the absence of accused in certain cases. However, if the magistrate finds that personal appearance of the accused is necessary, he would direct that accused would no longer be represented on the next date by a pleader under Section 317, Cr. P. C. but would appear in person. If the accused in spite of such order does not appear in person, it would be open for the learned Magistrate to issue warrant of arrest and proceed in accordance with the procedure prescribed in Chapter-VI of the cr. P. C. and may also cancel bail and bail bond and proceed in accordance with Chapter XXXIII of the Cr. P. C. It does not appear from the order of the preceding dates i. e. 31-1-2008, 26-3-2008 that personal attendance of petitioner would no longer be dispensed with, and he is required tp attend in person. The Magistrate in view of Section 317 (1) Cr. P. C. ought to have given an opportunity to an accused to appear in person who was being allowed to be represented through a pleader. The order of preceding dates in the case on the contrary shows that magistrate in fact accepted the representation under section 317, Cr. P. C. The magistrate has to follow the procedure prescribed therein, if it does not dispenses with his personal attendance. A Magistrate while rejecting a representation under section 317 Cr. P. C. , cannot at the same time cancel bail bond and issue non-bailable warrant of arrest, if on preceding dates has not clearly directed that personal attendance under section 317, Cr. P. C. will no longer be dispensed with. The Court ought to provide a reasonable opportunity to the accused to appear in person whose representation was earlier being allowed under Section 317, Cr. P. C. In this case, it appears that trial lingered as a co-accused Prem Prakash was absconding. Learned counsel for the petitioner has also submitted that there have been no latches on his part.

(17.) IN the instant case, the learned magistrate not only rejected application under section 317, Cr, P. C. but also cancelled the bail bond and issued non-bailable warrant of arrest by a composite order dated 28-6-2008, which is impermissible under Section 317, Cr. P. C. If the Magistrate did not think it appropriate to allow the representation of petitioner under Section 317 Cr. P. C. any more, it could have directed the petitioner to appear in person on dates next. Even then if petitioner or accused does not appear for reasons which do not seem valid to the Magistrate he may proceed to issue warrants as provided in Chapter VI of Cr. P. C. and cancel bail and bail bonds as engrafted in Chapter XXXIII, Cr. P. C. as noticed in para 16. The learned magistrate as such exceeded jurisdiction vested in him and exercised the same erroneously.

(18.) NOW, the Court comes to next submission of the petitioner that appeal lies under Section 449, Cr. P. C. against orders passed under Section 446, Cr. P. C. , which deals with the procedure, when bond is forfeited. He submits that the impugned order is one which has been substantially passed under Section 446 Cr. P. C. as such, writ petition is not maintainable. Let us examine whether the impugned order is one which is passed under Section 446 or Section 446a Cr. P. C.

(19.) SECTION 446a, Cr. P. C. has been inserted in the Code of Criminal Procedure by act No. 63 of 1980, and it relates to cancellation of bail and bail bond. Section 446a, cr. P. C. reads as follows :-

> (a) the bond executed by such person as well as the bond if any, executed by one or more of his sureties in that case shall stand cancelled; and (b) thereafter no such person shall be released only on his Own bond in that case, if the police officer or the Court, as the case may be, for appearance before whom the bond was executed, is satisfied that there was no sufficient cause for the failure of the person bound by the bond to comply with its condition.

(20.) THE impugned order as such is one which would come under purview of Section 446a and not Section 446, Cr. P. C.

(21.) THERE is no corresponding amendment in section 449 of the Cr. P. C. providing for appeal against order cancelling of bail or against order of issuance of NBW under section 446a which is an independent provision and not a clause or sub-section of section 446. In view of aforesaid circumstances, I am not in agreement with the learned counsel for the State that order cancelling bail and bail bond is also appealable under Section 449, Cr. P. C.

(22.) IN view of aforesaid findings, I find that the learned Magistrate exceeded his jurisdiction by cancelling bail and bail bond and issuing no bailable warrant of arrest while rejecting the representation under section 317, Cr. P. C. vide one composite order dated 28-6-2008, without any prior order on preceding dates directing the personal attendance of petitioner, and as result the same is set aside. The petitioner is directed to appear before the learned magistrate within six weeks from today who would allow him to remain on previous bond. The petitioner would abide by any further direction of magistrate in the proceeding. Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2007-AllMR(Cri)-0-2283 , 2008-CRIMES-4-151

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : B.R. GAVAI, J.

Mohd.Sajid Husain Mohd. Shakir Husain .... Vs...State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application 1751 of 2007 Criminal Application 1786 of 2007 Of Criminal Application 1789 of 2007, Jun 27,2007

==========

Cr. P.C. 438 – Anticipatory Bail – I.P.c. 376, 343, r/w 34 and u.s 5 of prevention of Immoral Traffic act – All the applicants are Social Workers, Politicians and Police officers – As such having deep roots in the society – No possibility of fleeing away from the ends of justice – Court inclined to allow bail application.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) BY way of present applications, the applicants are seeking anticipatory bail, in connection with Crime No. 160/2007, registered with Kranti Chowk Police Station, Aurangabad, for the offence punishable under Sections 376, 342 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code, and under Section 5 of the Prevention of Immoral Traffic Act.

(2.) HEARD Shri B. R. Warma, Mrs. S. S. Jadhav, Shri N. S. Ghanekar, Shri A. N. Nagargoje, Shri B. S. Deshmukh, Shri Joydeep Chatterjee, Shri H. T. Joshi, learned counsel, for the applicants and Shri N. B. Khandare, learned Public Prosecutor, for the respondent/ State.

(3.) IT is submitted on behalf of the learned counsel for the applicants that initially in the FIR, which has been lodged by the prosecutrix on 22nd April, 2007, the names of the present applicants, do not appear. It is submitted that only in her supplementary statement and so also in her statement recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, before the learned Magistrate, the names of the present applicants, for the first time, have been implicated by her on 25th April, 2007. It is submitted that taking the prosecution case to be true in entirety, still no case is made out, so as to prima facie book the applicants for the offence punishable under Section 376 of the Indian Penal Code. It is further submitted that the liberty granted by this court vide order dated 11th June, 2007, has not been misused by the applicants and the applicants have been regularly attending the Investigating Officer and cooperating with the Investigating Agency.

(4.) IT is further submitted that from the missing report, which was lodged by the Aunt of the prosecutrix, in the month of November, 2006, at Parbhani, the age of the prosecutrix, is shown to be 16 years. It is further submitted that from the certificate, which has been produced on record by the Investigating Agency, it could be seen that the said certificate is, at least prima facie, not genuine inasmuch as the entry of birth, which is said to be of the year 1991, has been recorded in the year 1996, which is after the period of one year from the date of birth, and as such beyond the statutory period as provided under the Birth and Death Registration Act.

(5.) SHRI Khandare, learned Public Prosecutor, submits that from the school certificate of the prosecutrix, it can be clearly seen that her age on the date of registration of crime was 15 years, 9 months and 22 days. He submits that from the perusal of her statement recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, it would appear that she was compelled to have sexual intercourse with the accused and as such an offence under Section 376 of the IPC, was committed. He submits that for a moment, assuming without admitting that said act was with her consent, still since her age is below 16 years, her consent would be immaterial and even in that event, the accused could be booked for the offence punishable under Section 376 of the IPC. The learned Public Prosecutor further submits that most of the applicants are Police Officers and others are political and social workers and as such, influential citizens. It is submitted that the accused have indulged into acts of tampering with the evidence and influencing the witnesses. He further submits that the Aunt of the prosecutrix has made an application to the Authorities of Remand Home for custody of the prosecutrix. It is submitted that it was done at the behest of the accused in order to secure her release from the Remand Home, where she is protected by the police. He submits that though the applicants have attended the police station as directed by this court, they have not co-operated with the investigation by either refusing to give answers or by giving vague answers.

(6.) THE learned Public Prosecutor relies on the judgment of the Apex Court in the case of Dukhishyam Benupani, Asstt. Director, Enforcement Directorate (FERA) Vs. Arun Kumar Bajoria reported in 1998 (1) Supreme Court Cases 52 and State Rep. by the C. B. I. Vs. Anil Sharma reported in 1997 (7) Supreme Court Cases 187, in support of the proposition that the investigation of a person armed with a pre-arrest order cannot be equated with a custodial interrogation and as such the application for grant of anticipatory bail should be rejected.

(7.) I have perused the first statement of the prosecutrix, her supplementary statement and so also her statement recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, before the learned Magistrate, in the presence of the social worker.

(8.) SINCE the matter is still under investigation, it will not be appropriate for me to reproduce the evidence collected by the prosecution, in view of the Law laid down by the Apex Court in the case of Niranjan Singh and another Vs. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote and others, reported in 1980 (2) Supreme Court Cases 559.

(9.) IN that view of the matter, I refrain myself from dealing with the statement of the prosecutrix, recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, in detail. However, for consideration of the applications, it would be necessary to refer to some part of the statement of the prosecutrix recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is not in dispute that the present applicants have been, for the first time, implicated in the supplementary statement recorded under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, on 25th of April, 2007 and that they were not implicated in the FIR which was registered on 22nd of April, 2007. From the statement of the prosecutrix, it appears that after the death of her father, her mother had remarried. As such, she was residing along with her maternal aunt. She has stated that on one occasion her aunt Mahananda had abused and assaulted her, and therefore, she left house at Parbhani and started for Aurangabad. It is stated that after she came to Aurangabad, she stayed there for some time and after that she returned to Parbhani. However, after her return to Parbhani, her cousin again assaulted her and thereafter, she again came back to Aurangabad and was residing at Mukundwadi. It is stated that at that time she met the accused Tabassum who was also known as Baji. It is alleged that thereafter, she went to reside with said Tabassum. After 2-4 days, she was taken to Mhaismal by Tabassum in one white car. When they went to Mhaismal, one person was sitting there. He was taking drinks. It is alleged that she was made to drink 7-8 glasses of cold drink and after consuming these drinks, she became dizzy and thereafter that unknown person took her inside the room and had forcible sexual intercourse with her. It is stated that thereafter they returned to Aurangabad. She took medical treatment for some time.

(10.) INSOFAR as the present applicants are concerned, the prosecutrix, in her statement under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, has stated that after she recovered from the first incident, she thought that since the other girls were also indulging in the profession, there was nothing wrong for her to continue with the said profession. She has further stated that thereafter accused Tabassum compelled her to have sexual intercourse with various other persons in consideration of money. It is stated that she had intercourse with many persons. However, she was remembering the names of few of them and accordingly the present applicants are roped in by her.

(11.) HOWEVER, from the perusal of the statement, it would reveal that she has stated that all these persons had paid certain amount to her in consideration of having sexual intercourse with her. It has been further stated by her that while accused Tabassum had kept entire money for herself on some occasions, on other occasions, the amount was shared by Tabassum and her in the ratio of fifty/fifty. It has been further stated that she had purchased clothes and ornaments out of the amount earned by her.

(12.) INSOFAR as her age is concerned, no doubt that the prosecution has placed on record, her birth certificate, which shows that on the date of the incident, she was 15 years, 9 months and 22 days. However, her missing report is also on record, wherein her Aunt has shown her age to be 16 years, in the month of November, 2006. At least, at this stage, there is no conclusive proof to show that she was less than 16 years of age. It cannot also be said at this stage that accused were aware of her age at the time of having sexual intercourse with her. From the perusal of the statement of the prosecutrix, at least, prima facie, it appears that she had attained the age of understanding and she was knowing as to what would be right or wrong and after the first incident, she had voluntarily indulged in the profession and had intercourse with the applicants and other persons in consideration of money. She has given the details about the amount received by her from various applicants, which varies from person to person. As already observed by me in the order dated 11th June, 2007 that all the applicants are Police Officers or social workers or political workers and as such, are expected to keep high moral standards. However, while considering the application, this court cannot be swayed away by moralistic principles but has to consider the application on its own merit in the light of material available against the applicants.

(13.) FROM the perusal of her statement under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, therefore, at least, prima facie, it would appear that the case under Section 376 of the IPC could be made out against accused Tabassum and the first person who had forcible sexual intercourse with her at Mhaismal. Insofar as, the present applicants are concerned, prima facie, it is clear from her statement that the prosecutrix had a sexual intercourse with the applicants on her own accord in consideration of money.

(14.) INSOFAR as the Judgment of the Apex Court in the case of State Rep. by the C. B. I. Vs. Anil Sharma (supra), relied on by the learned Public Prosecutor, is concerned, the prosecution in the said case was under Section 13 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, and the accused was charged with acquiring huge wealth far in excess of his known sources of income. In that view of the matter, the court found that the custodial interrogation of the applicant was necessary, so as to investigate the case properly. In the said case, there was also apprehension that the accused would influence the witness and that the said apprehension was found to be reasonable by the court.

(15.) INSOFAR as the Judgment of the Apex Court in the case of Dukhishyam Benupani, Asstt. Director, Enforcement Directorate (FERA) Vs. Arun Kumar Bajoria (supra), is concerned, wherein Their Lordships of the Apex Court, after perusal of the files found that the seriousness of allegations and magnitude of amount involved, did not entitle the person to be enlarged on anticipatory bail. In that view of the matter, the bail granted to the accused therein, came to be rejected.

(16.) WHILE considering the application for grant of anticipatory bail, the following four factors would be relevant.

(i) the nature and gravity or seriousness of accusation as apprehended by the applicant;
(ii) the antecedents of the applicant including the fact as to whether he has, on conviction by a Court, previously undergone imprisonment for a term in respect of any cognizable offence;
(iii) the likely object of the accusation to humiliate or malign the reputation of the applicant by having him so arrested; and
(iv) the possibility of the appellant, if granted anticipatory bail, fleeing from justice.

(17.) INSOFAR as the first factor is concerned, no doubt that the applicants are charged with a serious offence under Section 376 of the IPC. However, as already discussed here-in-above, at least prima facie and at least insofar as the present applicants are concerned, the accusation under Section 376 of the IPC, does not appear to be well founded.

(18.) INSOFAR as the second factor is concerned, it is not the case of the prosecution that the present applicants are having any criminal antecedents or are convicted by the Court or have previously undergone any imprisonment in respect of any cognizable offence.

(19.) INSOFAR as the third factor is concerned, that would not be relevant for the present case. Though there may not be a prima facie case under Section 376 of the IPC, but still, the applicants could be involved in the offence punishable under Section 5 of the Prevention of Immoral Traffic Act.

(19.) INSOFAR as the third factor is concerned, that would not be relevant for the present case. Though there may not be a prima facie case under Section 376 of the IPC, but still, the applicants could be involved in the offence punishable under Section 5 of the Prevention of Immoral Traffic Act.

(20.) INSOFAR as the fourth factor is concerned, it could be seen that all the applicants are either Police Officers, Political and Social Workers and they all are permanent residents of Aurangabad or nearby Districts. All of them have deep roots in the society and as such there is no possibility of fleeing away from the ends of the justice.

(21.) INSOFAR as the contention of the learned Public Prosecutor that the applicants have not abided the conditions, is concerned, it is not disputed that on almost all dates, the applicants have attended the Investigating Officer, as directed by this court. The only contention is that they have not answered some of the questions and have answered some of the questions vaguely. However, except the vague allegations in this respect, no details are given. In no case, the accused can be compelled to give evidence against him.

(22.) INSOFAR as the apprehension of the learned Public Prosecutor, in respect of the influencing of the witnesses are concerned, it can be seen that the only evidence against the applicants, is the statement of the prosecutrix. The prosecutrix is now stationed in the Remand Home at Aurangabad. As already stated, she is fully protected in the Remand Home and is under the protection of the police, so there appears no question of applicants being in a position to influence the prosecutrix.

(23.) IN that view of the matter, I am inclined to allow the applications.

(i) The applications are allowed on the same terms and conditions as were imposed by this court vide order dated 11th June, 2007. However, all the applicants are directed to report to the Investigating Officer, on every Tuesday and Friday, between 10. 00 a. m. to 01. 00 p. m. , till filing of the charge sheet. ii) It is made clear that the observations made here-in-above are prima facie in nature and limited for the disposal of the present applications for anticipatory bail. Nothing observed herein should be construed to have been observed on the merits of the matter. The learned trial court shall not be influenced by the same at the time of trial and will decide the case on merit.

****

Cross Citation :2009-ALL MR (Cri)-0-433

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V.M.KANADE, J.
VIRENDRA SHIV SHANKAR ….V/s….STATE OF MAHARASHTRA

Dec 04, 2008

==========

Cr. P.C. 439, 389 – Accused convicted U.S. 307 of I.P.C. – conflicting version of accused and prosecution witnesses – Prima facie case made out for granting bail – Bail granted.

==========

JUDGEMENT

Heard the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the applicant and the learned APP appearing on behalf of the State. 2. Applicant has been convicted for the offence punishable under section 307 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to suffer rigorous imprisonment for five years. 3. Prosecution case is that the applicant fired two rounds from his 12 bore gun and, as a result, two persons were injured in the said firing. Counsel for the applicant submitted that the applicant is a retired army personnel and he was working as a security guard at Central Warehousing Corporation of India at JNPT, Uran. It is the case of the applicant that two persons injured in the incident were involved in commission of theft and, therefore, in order to protect the property, he has fired two rounds from his 12 bore gun. The learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the applicant invited my attention to cross - examination of P. W. 8 - Tanavkumar Siakiya who has admitted that he was arrested in connection with theft case and that while giving deposition in this case, he was in jail and the case was registered against him at Uran Police Station. He has also admitted that he was removed from the service of Amar Jyoti Security Company. Prosecution case, on the other hand, is that one B. U. Lushkar had informed that he wanted to recover the hand- loan which he had given to the applicant and for that purpose he demanded money from the applicant. However, the applicant instead of returning the hand-loan which was given to him by the said Lushkar fired one round in the air and, thereafter, fired two shots at these two persons. 4. Taking into consideration the said conflicting versions of the accused and the prosecution witnesses, prima facie case is made out for grant of bail. Applicant, admittedly, was working as a security guard at the said urea where the incident took place. Two persons were injured at that site. One injured person had been arrested in connection with the theft case. Defence theory is, therefore, plausible. Applicant is retired from the army. 5. Applicant, therefore, be released on bail in the sum of Rs. 5,000/- with one or two sureties in the like amount. Applicant shall report to the concerned Police Station once in a month. 6. Application is disposed of. Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2003-CRIMES-1-558

HIGH COURT OF CHHATTISGARH

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.H.N.Kuranga,J

Bisahu ….V/s….State of Chhattisgarh

Misc. Crl. Case 2697 Of 2002, Jan 29,2003

==========

Cri. P.C. S. 439 – I.P.c. – 363, 366, 376 – Bail – Accused was alleged to have induced girl – Prosecutrix, aged 17 years to go with him promising her to marry with her – Held, the prosecutrix moved with applicant from place to place – Fit case to grant bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Heard both the counsel. This petition under Section 439 of Cr.P.C. has been filed by applicant - Bisahu for grant of bail. He is the accused in Crime No. 800 of 2002 registered in Police Station: Chhawni Durg, for the offences punishable under Section 363, 366 and 376 of I.P.C. Name of prosecutrix is Veena Sahu aged about 17 years. The case of the prosecution is that on 30/6/2002 she was missing from her house. It is stated that the applicant induced her to go with him promising her to marry her. He took her to Nagpur and from Nagpur to Bhilai and committed rape on her forcibly. Meena Sahu - mother of the prosecutrix filed a missing report on 30/6/2002 before Chhawani Police and thereafter the applicant and the girl were traced in Bhilai on 7/9/2002. After tracing the girl the mother of the girl filed Dehati Nallshi on the same day. It is stated that the statement of the girl was also recorded on the same day. Learned counsel appearing for the applicant submitted that according to the radiological report the girl was aged about 17 years. The fact that the prosecuth-x was moving with the applicant from 30/6/2002 to 7/9/2002 from place to place itself shows that she is a consenting party and the mother of the prosecutrix has not stated in her Dehati Nallshi recorded on 7/9/2002 that the applicant committed rape on the prosecutrix. Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case. I am of the opinion that it is a fit case to admit the applicant to bail. The petition is accordingly allowed. Applicant Bisahu is directed to be released on bail on his executing a bond in sum of Rs. 5,000.00 with two sureties for the like sum to the satisfaction of the concerned Magistrate for his appearance before the said Court/trial Court, or as and where so directed. Parties are entitled for certified copy of this order. Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2009 CRI. L. J. 1887

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R. V. RAVEENDRAN AND J. M. PANCHAL, JJ.

Rasiklal ….V/s….Kishor Khanchand Wadhwani.

Criminal Appeal No. 343 of 2009 (arising out of SLP (Cri.) No. 4008 of 2008), D/- 20 -2 - 2009.

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.436, S.437 - BAIL – Bailable OFFENCE - In case of bailable offence, there is no question of discretion in granting bail. (Para 6)

(B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.436 - Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.500 - BAIL - DEFAMATION - Bail - Release of person accused of bailable offence - Court is not bound to issue notice to complainant and hear him - Cancellation of bail on ground that complainant was not heard and thus principles of natural justice were violated – is illegal.

==========

Harish N. Salve and Sushil Kumar Sr. Advocate, Ankur Chawla, Abhishek Singh, Rahul Pratap and Siddhartha Chowdhury, for Appellant; Dr. Abhishek Manu Singhvi, Sr.. Advocate Sanjeev Sachdeva, Saurabh Sharma and Amit Bhandari, for Respondent.

JUDGEMENT

1. M. PANCHAL, J. :- Leave granted.

2. The appellant is accused in Criminal Complaint No. 1604 of 2005 filed in the Court of learned Judicial Magistrate First Class, Indore, M. P. for alleged commission of offence punishable under Sections 499 and 500 of the Indian Penal Code and assails the order dated March 24, 2008, rendered by the learned single Judge of High Court of Madhya Pradesh, Bench at Indore, in Criminal Revision No. 1362 of 2006 by which bail granted to the appellant by the learned Judicial Magistrate First Class, Indore, M. P. on December 1, 2006 is cancelled on the ground that the order granting bail was passed by the learned Judicial Magistrate First Class, Indore, without hearing the original complainant and was, therefore, bad for violation of principles of natural justice.

3. It is the case of the respondent that the appellant gave an interview on December 15, 2004 on Star News TV Channel and defamed him. The respondent, therefore, filed a Criminal Complaint No. 1604 of 2005 in the Court of learned Judicial Magistrate First Class, Indore, M. P. on January 27, 2005 for alleged commission of offences punishable under Sections 499 and 500 of the Indian Penal Code. The learned Judicial Magistrate examined the respondent on oath as required by Section 200 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 and issued summons to the appellant for commission of alleged offences under Sections 499 and 500 of the Indian Penal Code vide order dated May 9, 2006. The appellant appeared before the Court on November 20, 2006 and submitted an application under Section 317 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 seeking exemption for personal appearance along with vakalatnama of his counsel. In the said application prayer for grant of bail was also made. The application was fixed for hearing on December, 26, 2006. However, on December 1, 2006 the appellant filed an application mentioning his appearance before the Court and to consider his prayer for grant of bail under Section 436 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 as offences alleged to have been committed by him under Sections 499 and 500 of the Indian Penal Code are bailable. The application was heard on the day on which it was filed. The learned Magistrate noticed that the offences alleged to have been committed by the appellant were bailable. Therefore, the appellant was admitted to bail on his furnishing a surety in the sum of Rs. 5000/- and also furnishing a bond of the same amount. While enlarging the appellant on bail the learned Magistrate imposed a condition on the appellant that he would appear before the Court on each date of hearing or else he would be taken into custody and sent to jail. The order dated December 1, 2006 passed by the learned Judicial Magistrate further indicates that in compliance of the direction issued by the Court the appellant furnished a bail bond in the sum of Rs. 5,000/- and also executed a bond for the said amount and that the bail bonds were accepted by the Court after which the appellant was released on bail.

4. The respondent, who is original complainant, filed Criminal Revision No. 1362 of 2006 in the High Court of Madhya Pradesh, Bench at Indore, on December 26, 2006 for cancelling the bail granted to the appellant by the learned Judicial Magistrate First Class, Indore, on the ground that he was not heard and, therefore, the order was violative of principles of natural justice. The learned single Judge, before whom the revision application was notified for hearing, had issued notice to the appellant but the appellant did not remain present before the High Court. The revision application filed by the respondent was taken up for final disposal on March 24, 2008. The learned single Judge, by order dated March 24, 2008, has cancelled the bail granted to the appellant by the learned Judicial Magistrate on the ground that the respondent, who was original complainant, was not heard and, therefore, the order granting bail violates the principles of natural justice. After cancelling the bail granted to the appellant the learned single Judge remitted the matter to the Court below with a direction that the matter be taken up according to law between the parties relating to the grant of bail to the appellant. Feeling aggrieved the appellant has invoked appellate jurisdiction of this Court under Article 136 of the Constitution.

5. This Court has heard the learned counsel for the parties and taken into consideration the documents forming part of the appeal.

6. As is evident, the appellant is being tried for alleged commission of offences punishable under Sections 499 and 500 of the Indian Penal Code. Admittedly, both the offences are bailable. The grant of bail to a person accused of bailable offence is governed by the provisions of Section 436 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The said section reads as under :- 436 - In what cases bail to be taken. - (1) When any person other than a person accused of a non bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer or at any stage of the proceeding before such Court to give bail, such person shall be released on bail :

Provided that such officer or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, and shall, if such person is indigent and is unable to furnish surety, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided :

Explanation. - Where a person is unable to give bail within a week of the date of his arrest, it shall be a sufficient ground for the officer or the Court to presume that he is an indigent person for the purposes of this proviso.

Provided further that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of sub-section (3) of Section 116 or section 446A.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), where a person has failed to comply with the conditions of the bail-bond as regards the time and place of attendance, the Court may refuse to release him on bail, when on a subsequent occasion in the same case he appears before the Court or is brought in custody and any such refusal shall be without prejudice to the powers of the Court to call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof under Section 446."

There is no doubt that under Section 436 of the Code of Criminal Procedure a person accused of a bailable offence is entitled to be released on bail pending his trial. As soon as it appears that the accused person is prepared to give bail, the police officer or the Court before whom he offers to give bail, is bound to release him on such terms as to bail as may appear to the officer or the Court to be reasonable. It would even be open to the officer or the Court to discharge such person on his executing a bond as provided in the Section instead of taking bail from him. The position of persons accused of non-bailable offence is entirely different. The right to claim bail granted by Section 436 of the Code in a bailable offence is an absolute and indefeasible right. In bailable offences there is no question of discretion in granting bail as the words of Section 436 are imperative. The only choice available to the officer or the Court is as between taking a simple recognizance of the accused and demanding security with surety. The persons contemplated by Section 436 cannot be taken into custody unless they are unable or willing to offer bail or to execute personal bonds. There is no manner of doubt that bail in a bailable offence can be claimed by accused as of right and the officer or the Court, as the case may be, is bound to release the accused on bail if he is willing to abide by reasonable conditions which may be imposed on him.

7. There is no express provision in the Code prohibiting the Court from re-arresting an accused release on bail under Section 436 of the Code. However, the settled judicial trend is that the High Court can cancel the bail bond while exercising inherent powers under Section 482 of the Code. According to this Court a person accused of a bailable offence is entitled to be released on bail pending his trial, but he forfeits his right to be released on bail if his conduct subsequent to his release is found to be prejudicial to a fair trial. And this forfeiture can be made effective by invoking the inherent powers of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code. (See : Talab Haji Hussain v. Madhukar Purushottam Mondkar and another (1958 SCR 1226)) reiterated by a Constitution Bench in Ratilal Bhanji Mithani v. Asstt. Collector of Customs and Ann (1967 (3) SCR 926)).

8. It may be noticed that sub-section (2) of Section 436 of the 1973 Code empowers any Court to refuse bail without prejudice to action under Section 446 where a person fails to comply with the conditions of bail bond giving effect to the view expressed by this Court in the above mentioned case. However, it is well settled that bail granted to an accused with reference to bailable offence can be cancelled only if the accused (1) misuses his liberty by indulging in similar criminal activity, (2) interferes with the course of investigation, (3) attempts to tamper with evidence of witnesses, (4) threatens witnesses or indulges in similar activities which would hamper smooth investigation, (5) attempts to flee to another country, (6) attempts to make himself scarce by going underground or becoming unavailable to the investigating agency, (7) attempts to place himself beyond the reach of his surety, etc. These grounds are illustrative and not exhaustive. However, a bail granted to a person accused of bailable offence cannot be cancelled on the ground that the complainant was not heard. As mandated by Section 436 of the Code what is to be ascertained by the officer or the Court is whether the offence alleged to have been committed is a bailable offence and whether he is ready to give bail as may be directed by the officer or the Court. When a police officer releases a person accused of a bailable offence, he is not required to hear the complainant at all. Similarly, a Court while exercising powers under Section 436 of the Code is not bound to issue notice to the complainant and hear him.

9. The contention raised by the learned counsel for the respondent on the basis of decision of this Court in Arun Kumar v. State of Bihar and another (JT 2008 (2) SC 584), that the complainant should have been heard by the Magistrate before granting bail to the appellant, cannot be accepted. In the decision relied upon by the learned counsel for the respondent challenge was to the order passed by a learned single Judge of the Patna High Court quashing the order passed by the learned Fast Track Court holding that the respondent No. 2 therein was not juvenile and, therefore, there was no need to refer his case to the Juvenile Justice Board for ascertaining his age and then for trial. The High Court was of the view that the prayer was rejected only on the ground that two or three witnesses were examined and though the accused was in possession of school leaving certificate, mark sheet, etc. to show that he was a juvenile, the prayer could not have been rejected. This Court found that the High Court in a very cryptic manner had observed that the application of the accused deserved to be allowed and directed the Court below to consider, the accused as a juvenile and proceed accordingly. Before this Court it was submitted by the learned counsel for the informant that the documents produced had been analysed by the trial Court and it was found at the time of framing charge that he was major without any doubt. The grievance was made on behalf of the informant before this Court that the High Court did not even consider as. to how the, conclusions of the trial Court suffered from any infirmity and merely referring to the stand of the accused and even without analyzing the correctness or otherwise of the observations and conclusions made by the trial Court the learned single Judge camp, to the conclusion that the accused was a juvenile. This Court concluded that the High Court had failed to notice several relevant factors and no discussion was made as to how the conclusions of the trial Court suffered from any infirmity. It was also noticed by this Court that no notice was issued to the appellant before the matter was disposed of. In view of the above position the order impugned in the appeal was set aside by this Court. To say the least, the facts of the present case are quite different from those mentioned in the above reported decision. Therefore the ratio laid down in the said decision cannot be applied to the fact of the instant case. 2008 AIR SCW 1616

10. Even if notice had been issued to the respondent before granting bail to the appellant, the respondent could not have pointed out to the Court that the appellant had allegedly committed non-bailable offences. As observed earlier, what has to be ascertained by the officer or the Court is as to whether the person accused is alleged to have committed bailable offences and if the same is found to be in affirmative, the officer or the Court has no other alternative but to release such person on bail if he is ready and willing to abide by reasonable conditions, which may be imposed on him. Having regard to the facts of the case this Court is of the firm opinion that the bail granted to the appellant for alleged commission of bailable offence could not have been cancelled by the High Court on the ground that the complainant was not heard and, thus, principles of natural justice were violated. Principles of natural justice is not a 'mantra' to be applied in vacuum in all cases. The question as to what extent, the principles of natural justice are required to be complied with, will depend upon the facts of the case. They are not required to be complied with when it will lead to an empty formality (See State Bank of Patialav. S. K. Sharma (1996 (3) SCC 364) and Karnataka State Road Transport Corporation v. S. G. Kotturappa (2005 (3) SCC 409)). The impugned order is, therefore, liable to be set aside.

11. For the foregoing reasons the appeal succeeds. The order dated March 24, 2008, passed by the learned single Judge of High Court of Madhya Pradesh, Bench at Indore, in Criminal Revision No. 1362 of 2006 cancelling the bail granted to the appellant by the learned Judicial Magistrate is Hereby set aside and order dated December" 1, 2006, passed by the learned Judicial Magistrate First Class, Indore, M. P., in Criminal Complaint No. 1604 of 2005 is hereby restored.

12. The appeal accordingly stands disposed of.

Appeal allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2001 CRI. L. J. 2835

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S. K. AGARWAL, J.

Yogesh Kumar Bhargava ….V/s….State of U.P

Criminal Misc. Application No. 5927 of 2000, D/- 27 -2 -2001.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.70, S.482 - BAIL - Non-bailable warrant - Execution - Stay of - Accused is willing to surrender himself and seeking permission to appear before Court - Execution of non-bailable warrant issued against him stayed in interest of justice.

==========

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :-

1. Heard learned counsel for the applicant and learned AGA.

2. This application has been filed with a prayer to quash the criminal proceeding under Section 3/7 of the Essential Commodities Act pending in the Court of 1st Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate, Budaun vide Case No. 2971 of 1999 - State of U. P. v. Yogesh Kumar and another on the ground that no case is made out against this applicant. It is also prayed that further proceeding may be stayed. It has also orally been prayed that if this Court is not convinced with the arguments of the learned counsel for the applicant then non-bailable warrant issued against the applicant may be quashed and he may be allowed to appear before the Court concerned.

3. Taking up the first two prayers initially I am of the view that proceeding cannot be quashed at this stage. The questions raised before the Court rest on the decision of various facts. Disputed questions of fact cannot be gone into by this Court at this stage because determination of his contention is subject to the recording and appreciation of the evidence. In this view of the matter the first contention of the learned counsel for the applicant has no merit and it is accordingly discarded. Coming to the next submission of the learned counsel for the applicant that he cannot be prosecuted under Clause 19 of the Fertiliser (Control) Order, 1985 for breach of provisions contained in Clause 23 of the said Control Order. He alleges that it is not reported in the first information report that the sub-standard article which was recovered from the shop of the applicant was not in conformity to the specifications prescribed under sub-clauses (1), (2) and (3) of Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order. His case is that it was not substandard but was a non-standard fertiliser. Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order deals with the disposal of non-standard fertiliser. For ready reference sub-clauses 1(a), (b) and (c) of Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order are quoted as under :

(a) the container of such non-standard fertilizer is conspicuously super scribed in red colour with the words "non-standard" and also with the sign "X"; and

(b) an application for the disposal of non-standard fertiliser in Form H is submitted to the registering authority to grant a certificate of authorisation for sale of such fertilisers and a certificate of authorisation with regard to their disposal and price is obtained in Form I;

(c) such non-standard fertiliser shall be sold only to the manufacturers of mixtures of fertilisers or special mixtures of fertilisers or research farms of Government or universities or such bodies.

4. According to these clauses a non-standard fertilisers can be sold by any licensee. The requisite is that it must not be an adulterated fertiliser. Sub-clause (1)(a) of Clause 23 further requires a retailer or whole-seller of such a non-standard fertiliser to print or publish on the wrapper in which such fertiliser is contained in red colour words 'non-setandard' and also sign "X". Sub-clause (1)(b) of Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order requires such a dealer to obtain a certificate of authorisation for sale of such fertiliser regarding its storage as well as regarding its disposal and price in Form I. Sub-clause 1(c) of Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order further creates a kind of a bar. It requires that such non-standard fertiliser shall be sold only to the manufacturers of mixtures of fertiliser or special mixtures of fertilisers or research farms of Government or Universities or other such bodies. When read together these clauses apparently non-standard fertiliser is not open to sale to the farmers or public in general. The sale of such non-standard fertiliser can be made only to the authorities specified in (b) and (c) of sub-clause (1) of Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order. Apart from that sub-clauses (2) and (3) of Clause 23 also prescribe certain other conditions. Regarding fixation of price of such non-standard fertiliser the registering authority after satisfying itself that the sample taken is a representative one may fix its price. While doing so he will also take into consideration the nutrient contents in the sample determined on the basis of a chemical analysis of such non-standard fertiliser. Sub-clause (3) of Clause 23 of the aforesaid Order entitles the Central Government to publish a notification in the official gazette and subject to the conditions prescribed therein for persons who are agent to comply with the condition laid down in (a) and (b) of sub-clause (1) of Clause 23 may exempt the handling agents. As earlier stated, in nut shell, the non-standard fertiliser cannot be sold to any individual farmer or public at large. It can be sold only in accordance with clause 23(1)(c) of the aforesaid Order alone.

5. From perusal of these sub-clauses (a), (b), (c) of clause 28 it is apparent that the non-standard fertiliser can be sold only to these authorities who are specified in Clause

23(1)(c) subject to the condition prescribed in Clause 23(1)(a) of the said Order. The purpose behind imposing the above sanction on sale of non-standard fertiliser to the institutions specified in sub-clause (1)(c) is to provide such institutions, who are engaged in the study of fertiflisers, to enable them to buy fertilisers at much lower price than the price of the standard fertiliser for research. It is so done with a view to encourage research. The person selling such fertiliser has to print on its container (wrapper) "sub-standard" and "X" in red ink. If these conditions are complied with there cannot be any prosecution under Clause 19 of the aforesaid Order of any person for selling non-standard fertiliser. If these conditions are not fulfilled by the dealer then he shall certainly be liable to prosecution. It is contended that there is absolutely no evidence before the Court to warrant his trail. This question requires examination of evidence, which may be done by the trial Court alone after evidence of the witnesses is taken or at the stage of charge. The question right now does not arise, as the prosecution has come up with a case that it is storage for sale of sub-standard fertiliser. It shall be positively a sub-standard fertiliser if the conditions laid down in Clause 23(1) are not fulfilled. Learned counsel for the applicant still may raise this issue before the trial Court at an appropriate stage.

6. The last submission of the learned counsel for the applicant that execution of non-bailable warrant be stayed and the applicant may be permitted to appear before the Court below. Apart from that it is also urged that if an accused is willing to surrender himself it shall not be proper to send him to jail. He must be given an opportunity to do so. In view of the above discussion it shall be expedient in the interest of justice that non-bailable warrant issued against the applicant by the Court below be stayed. In the result, execution of non-bailable warrant is stayed for three weeks. The applicant is directed to appear before the trial Court and make an application for bail, which shall be considered as expeditiously as possible.

With these directions this application is finally disposed of. Ordered accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2010-ALL MR(CRI)1798 ,

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : RANJAN A DESAI, MRIDULA BHATKAR.JJ

Irfan Shamimulla Shaikh ….V/s…State of Maharashtra

Criminal Bail Application No.1001 of 2009 IN Criminal Appeal No.1280 of 2007 Of Mar 03,2010

==========

Cr. P.C. Sec. 439, 389 - Murder case –Conviction – Bail- Disclosure Statement of accused was not properly recorded – Also, there is no evidence on motive – Accused entitled to bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) The applicant/accused is convicted for the offence of murder punishable under section 302 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to life imprisonment and to pay fine of Rs.5,000/- i/d. to suffer R.I. for one year and also convicted for the offence punishable under sections 392,397,201 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to suffer R.I. for seven years each and to pay fine of Rs.5,000/- each i/d to suffer S.I. for one year each by judgment and order dated .30/8/2007 passed by the Ad Hoc Additional Sessions Judge, Sewree, Mumbai.

(2.) The accused was arrested in Crime No.283/2005 registered under sections 454,457,380 of the Indian Penal Code at Deonar Police Station. During the interrogation it was transpired that the applicant/accused had committed murder of his friend one Kama) who has come to Mumbai with money. After such disclosure the applicant accused took police and the panchas near his hut and as per the information given by the applicant accused the police dug the constructed Koba of the platform and found bones, footwear and rope. The said skeleton of the deceased was exhumed from the pit and the present offence was registered. After investigation the applicant accused was tried alongwith the other accused and was convicted for the offence of murder as well as other offences.

(3.) Learned counsel Mr. Mooman for the applicant accused has submitted that the applicant accused is in jail since 6/10/2005, however, learned Judge has taken erroneous approach while appreciating the evidence and he has good chances of getting acquittal in the appeal. Learned counsel has further submitted that though the skeleton was found in the pit, the prosecution failed to prove that it was of Kamal. It is further submitted that the alleged statement u/s.27 of the Evidence Act disclosing the information about the burial of the body is not admissible as it travels beyond the scope of the section. He has further submitted that in the said room alongwith accused Irfan other 2-3 persons were residing and there is no evidence to show when the body was buried. He has further submitted that the super-imposition work which was done by P.W.10 is not authentic to arrive at conclusion that the body was of Kamal. He has further submitted that the prosecution neither brought any motive on record nor did examine wife of Kamal showing that he was missing. Learned counsel hence prayed that the bail application maybe allowed.

(4.) Learned A.P.P. while opposing the bail application argued that the body was found at the instance of the applicant accused under the constructed Koba itself is a clinching circumstance. He has further submitted that the prosecution has examined P.Ws.8 and 9, the neighbours of the applicant/accused who have stated that one Kamal was residing there alongwith the accused during May and June, 2005. P.W.5. Abdul Hamid has deposed that the constructed Koba. Learned APP has further submitted that the medical evidence is against the accused and supports the case of the prosecution and considering the nature of the evidence the applicant/accused is not entitled to bail.

(5.) The prosecution has tendered the evidence on the point of digging of pit, finding of skeleton and also the person who constructed the platform in May/June, 2005. The skeleton was found at the instance of the applicant/ accused. However, it appears from the record that disclosure of the fact by the applicant/ accused was not properly recorded in the form of Section 27 of the Indian Evidence Act. Moreover, the submissions of learned defence counsel Mr. Mooman appeal to us that the prosecution did not lead any evidence on motive. On the point of missing of Kamal evidence of the wife of Kamal or any relative from his native place was required to complete the chain. No such evidence was adduced. Considering these factors and nature of the evidence adduced by the prosecution we are inclined to grant the bail. Under such circumstances Application for bail is allowed. The applicant accused be released on bail of Rs.35.000.00 (Rupees thirty five thousand) with one or two sureties to make up the sum. The applicant/accused is directed to attend Deonar Police Station once in a month. Application allowed.

****

[2009(3) Mh.L.J.(Cri.)19]

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

R.V Raveendran and J.M. Panchal, JJ.

MUNISH BHASIN AND Others

Vs

STATE (GOVERNMENT OF NCT OF DELHI and another

==========

Criminal Procedure Code (2 of 1974), S. 438 — Anticipatory bail — Court Cannot impose conditions which are harsh, onerous of excessive so as to frustrate the very object of grant of anticipatory bail - Court should be extremely chary in imposing conditions while enlarging an acc used on bail ——Accused cannot be subjected to any irrelevant condition at all — To subject an accused to any other condition than mentioned in sections 437 and 438 would be beyond jurisdiction of the power conferred on Court — Condition imposed by the High Court directing appellant to pay a sum of Rs. 12,500/- per month as maintenance to his wife and child is onerous, unwarranted and is liable to be set aside, (Para 8)

==========

For appellants : Ms. Kiran Suri

For respondents : Ms. Madhumita Bhattacharjee

JUDGMENT

J. M. PANCHAL, J. :— Leave granted. The complainant (wife of first appellant) to whom notice was ordered on 25-1-2008 is impleaded as second respondent. "

2. Heard Counsel.

3. The appellant (accused No. 1) assails the condition imposed by the High Court requiring him to pay a sum of Rs. 12,500/- as maintenance to his wife and child while granting anticipatory bail to him and his parents with reference to the complaint filed by his wife for. alleged commission of offences punishable under sections 498A and 406 read with section 34 of the Indian Penal Code.

4. The marriage of the appellant was solemnized with Ms. Renuka on December 05, 2004. She.iias filed a complaint in November 2006, against the appellant and his parents for alleged commission of offences punishable under sections 498A and 406 read with section 34 of the Penal Code on the grounds that after marriage she was subjected to mental and physical cruelty for bringing less dowry and that her stridhan entrusted to them has been dishonestly misappropriated by them.

Cri. Appeal No\ 344'of 2009 decided on 20-2-2009"
20 MUNISH vs. STATE (GOVT. OF NCT OF DELHI) [2009(3) Mh.L.J. (Cri.)

5. Apprehending arrest, the appellant and his parents moved High Court of Delhi for anticipatory bail. The application came up for consideration before a Learned Single Judge of the High Court on 22-2-2007. The Learned Additional Public Prosecutor accepted notice and submitted that the matter was essentially a matrimonial dispute and therefore the parties should be referred to the Mediation and Conciliation Cell of the Delhi High Court. The Learned Judge agreed with the suggestion made by the Additional Public Prosecutor and directed the parties to appear before the Mediation and Conciliation Cell of the Delhi High Court on March 02, 2007. The case was ordered to be listed on 10-5-2007, The Learned Judge further directed that in the event of arrest of the appellant and his parents, before the next date of hearing, they shall be released on bail on their furnishing personal bond in the sum of Rs. 25,000/- each with one surety of like amount to the satisfaction of the Investigating Officer/ Arresting Officer concerned, subject however, to the condition that the appellant and his parents shall surrender their passports to the Investigating Officer and shall file affidavits in the Court that they would not leave the country without prior permission of the Court

6. From the records, it appears that the conciliation proceedings failed and therefore the bail application was taken up for hearing on merits. On representation made by the wife of the appellant, the counsel of the appellant was directed to produce appellant's salary slip. Accordingly, the salary slip of the appellant was produced before the Court which indicated.that the appellant was drawing gross salary of Rs. 41,598/- and after deductions of advance tax etc., his net salary was Rs. 33,000/-. The Learned Single Judge of the High Court took the notice of the fact that the appellant had the duty to maintain his wife and the child and therefore as a condition for grant of anticipatory bail, directed the appellant, by the order dated 7-8-2007 to pay a sum of Rs. 12,500/- per month by way of maintenance to his wife and child. The Learned Single Judge also directed to pay arrears at the rate of Rs. 12,500/- per month from August 2005, that is Rs. 3,00,000/- within six months. The imposition of these conditions for grant of anticipatory bail is the subject-matter of challenge in the instant appeal. ,

7. From the perusal of the provisions of sub-section (2) of section 438, it is evident that when the High Court or the Court of Session makes a direction under sub-secfion (1) to release an accused alleged to have committed non-bailable -offence, the Court may include such conditions in such direction in the light of the facts of the particular case, as it may think fit, including (i) a condition that a person shall make himself available for interrogation by police officer as and when required, (ii) a condition that the person shall not, directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted witi the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Couit or to any police officer, (iii) a condition that the person shall not leave India without the previous permission of the Court and (iv) such other conditions as may be imposed under sub-section (3) of section 437, as if the bail were granted under that section. Sub-section (3) of section 437, inter alia, provides that when a person accused or suspected of the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or more or of an offence under Chapter VI, Chapter XVI or Chapter XVH of the Indian Penal Code or abetment of, or conspiracy or attempt to commit, any such offence, is released on bail under sub-section (1), the Court shall impose the following conditions — >>,

2009(3) Mh.LJ. (Cri.)] MUN1SH vs. STATE (GOVT. OF NCT OF DELHI) 21

(a) that such person shall attend in accordance with the conditions of the bond executed under this Chapter,

(b) that such person shall not commit an offence similar to the offence of which he is accused, or suspected, of the commission of which he is suspected, and

^c) that such person shall not directly or indirectly make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police - officer or tamper with the evidence.

The Court may also impose, in the interests of justice, such other conditions as it considers necessary.

8. It is well settled that while exercising discretion to release an accused under section 438 of the Code neither the High Court nor the Session Court would be justified in imposing freakish conditions. There is no manner of doubt that the Court having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case can impose necessary, just and efficacious conditions while enlarging an accused on bail under section 438 of the Code. However, the accused cannot be subjected to any irrelevant condition at all. The conditions which can be imposed by the Court while granting anticipatory bail are enumerated in sub-section (2) of section 438 and sub-section (3) of section 437 of the Code. Normally, conditions can be imposed (i) to secure the presence of the accused before the investigating officer .or before the Court, (ii) to prevent him from fleeing the course of justice, (iii) to prevent him from tampering with the evidence or to prevent him from inducing or intimidating the witnesses so as to dissuade them from disclosing the facts before the police or Court or (iv) restricting the movements of the accused in a particular area or locality or to maintain law and order etc. To subject an accused to any other condition would be beyond jurisdiction of the power conferred on Court vnder section 438 of the Code. While imposing conditions on an accused who approaches the Court under section 438 of the Code, the Court should be extremely chary in imposing conditions and should not transgress its jurisdiction or power by imposing the conditions which are not called for at all. There is no manner of doubt that the conditions to be imposed under section 438 of the Code cannot be harsh, onerous or excessive so as to frustrate the very object of grant of anticipatory bail under section 438 of the Code. In the instant case, the question before the Court was whether having regard to the averments ma'de by Ms. Renuka in her complaint, the appellant and his parents were entitled to bail under section 438 of the Code. When the High Court had found that a case for grant of bail under section 438 was made out, it was not open to the Court to direct the appellant to pay Rs. 3,00,000/- for past maintenance and a sum of Rs. 12,500/-per month as future maintenance to his wife and child. In a proceeding under section 438 of the Code, the Court would not be justified in awarding maintenance to the wife and child. The case of the appellant is that his wife Renuka is employed and receiving a handsome salary and therefore is not entitled to maintenance. Normally, the question of grant of maintenance should be left to be 'decided by the competent Court in an appropriate proceedings where the parties can adduce evidence in support of their respective case, after which liability of husband to pay maintenance could be determined and appropriate order would be passed directing the husband to pay amount of maintenance to his wife. The record of the instant case indicates that the wife of the appellant has already approached appropriate Court for grant of maintenance and therefore the High Court should have refrained from granting maintenance to the wife and child of the appellant while exercising powers under section 438 of the Code. The condition imposed by the High Court directing the appellant to pay a sum of Rs. 12,500/- per month as maintenance to his wife and child is onerous, unwarranted and is liable to be set aside.

9. For the foregoing reasons, the appeal succeeds.

The direction contained in order dated August 07, 2007 rendered by Learned Single Judge of Delhi High Court in Bail Application No. 423 of 2007 requiring the appellant to pay a sum of Rs. 12,500/- per month by way of maintenance (both past and future) to his wife and child is hereby deleted. Rest of the directions contained in the said order are maintained. It is however clarified that any amount received by the wife of the- appellant pursuant .to the order of the High Court need not be refunded by her to the appellant and will be adjusted subject to the result of application for maintenance filed by wife of the appellant under section 125 of the Code before the appropriate Court. [v]

10. The Appeal is accordingly disposed of Appeal allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2003-ALLMR(CRI)(JOUR)-0-45, 2003-Cr. L.J-0-353

HIGH COURT OF KARNATAKA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S.R.BANNURMATH,J

Kaleem alias Kaleem Pasha ....V/s....State by Central Police Station, Bangalore

Criminal petition 2260 of 2002 Of, Aug 14,2002

==========

Cr. P.C.S. 437 – Bail – Conditions – I.P.C. 363, 392 – Accused directed to pay cash deposit of Rs. 10,000/- - Held- insistence on cash deposit is illegal and liable to be quashed.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) HEARD the learned counsel for the petitioner and the learned High Court Government Pleader appearing for the respondent.

(2.) THE petitioner and others are the accused in Crime No. 65/2002 for the offences under Ss. 363 and 392, IPC. Immediately after the arrest, the petitioner and other accused have sought for releasing them on bail. Considering the rival contentions, the learned

Magistrate by the order dated 7-6-2002 allowed the application and ordered releasing of the petitioner and others on bail on the following conditions :

1. Accused Nos. 1-5 are released on bail on each of them furnishing personal bond of a sum of Rs. 50,000/- and two sureties each. 2. Accused Nos. 1-5 shall deposit a sum of Rs. 10,000/- cash within one month from the day of release. 3. Accused Nos. 1-5 shall mark their attendance before Central Police Station, for 3 months or till laying of the charge-sheet which ever is earlier, every Sunday in between 10-12 a. m. 4. Accused Nos. 1-5 shall not leave the jurisdiction of Bangalore City or Bangalore Rural until charge-sheet is filed. 5. Accused Nos. 1-5 shall not threaten/tamper the complainant or complainant witnesses.

(3.) IN this petition, the petitioner has challenged the imposition of condition No. 2 namely accused depositing a sum of Rs. 10,000/- cash within one month from the date of release on the ground that imposition of this condition is illegal and amounts to miscarriage of justice. It is contended that nowhere under the Code, the law prescribes insistence of cash security. In this regard, the learned counsel has relied upon the pronouncement of this Court in the case of Afsar Khan v. State reported in ILR 1992 Kant 2894 : 1992 Cri L.J. 1676.

(4.) ON the other hand, the learned Government Pleader contended that as per the provision of Sec. 437, especially Clause 131, when a person accused or suspected of a commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment which may extend to 7 years or more or an offence under Chapters 6, 16, 27 of IPC if any such offender is to be released on bail, the Court may impose any condition which the Court considers necessary.

(5.) IN the present case, it is to be considered whether the wording 'any conditions' gives unfettering power to the Court to impose any conditions literally it deems fit. As long back as in the year 1978, the Apex Court in the case of Moti Ram v. State of Madhya Pradesh reported in AIR 1978 SC 1594 : (1978 Cri L.J. 1703) noted that while granting bail it should not be an illusory order. The accused to be released on bail must be able to comply with the conditions and if the conditions are like insistence of heavy cash security or deposit, it would amount to discrimination, inasmuch as moneyed accused may be able to come out on bail by depositing heavy amount, whereas the persons belonging to poor strata, only because he is poor will not be able to get the benefit of the bail granted. As such, the Apex Court directed that the Court should consider prudently to the conditions to be imposed against the accused who is to be released on bail keeping in view certain aspects.

(6.) EVEN in a later case in the case of Keshab Narayan Banerjee v. The State of Bihar reported in AIR 1985 SC 1666 : (1985 Cri L.J. 1857) the Hon'ble Supreme Court held that "insistence of heavy cash security would virtually amount to denial of bail and as such imposition of such conditions are illegal and erroneous". This aspect has again been considered by this Court also in the case of Afsar Khan's case referred to supra.

(7.) TAKING into consideration these aspects, in my view, imposition of Condition No. 2 i. e. insistence of cash deposit of Rs. 10,000/- each on the accused is illegal and liable to be quashed. It is made clear that rests of the conditions are to be maintained. Accordingly, the petition is allowed.

Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2010(3) Crimes 151 (Del)

DELHI HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V.K. Shalt, J.

R Vasudevan .....V/s....CBI New Delhi
Bail Application No. 2381 of 2009, Decided on 14.1.2010

==========

Section 120B—Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988—Sections 7, 8, 12, 13(2) rw/s 13(l)(d) —Bail—Grant of—Petitioner - Prosecution case that petitioner demanded and agreed to accept an illegal gratification of Rs. 7,00,000 from one 'MKB'— Allegations that 'MKB' demanded Rs. 10,00,000 from an Advocate representing a faction of a company who was to get in touch with the petitioner for getting an favourable judgment in the matter of appointing President of the company—Recovery of an amount of Rs. 55,00,000 in cash from residence of petitioner—Recovery of Rs. 1,21,23,800 from a number of lockers of petitioner—Petitioner was arrested on 23.11.2009—Petitioner entitled to be released on bail-

==========

Counsel for the Parties:

For the Petitioners: K.K. Sud, Sr. Advocate with Ghanshyam Sharma, Advocate.

For the Respondent: Sonia Mathur, Standing Counsel for CBI.

JUDGMENT

1. V.K. Shali, J. — This is a bail application filed by the petitioner under Section 439 Cr. P.C. for an offence under Section 120B IPC and Section 7, 8, 12, 13(2) read with Section 13(l)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 registered by the respondent vide case No.03 (A) 9-ACU-IX.

2. Briefly stated the facts of the prosecution case are that CBI had received an information from a reliable source that one Manoj Kumar Banthia vvas approached by Ankur Chawla, Advocate representing a faction of M/s Amar Ujala Publications who was to get in touch with Sh. R. Vasudevan, present petitioner Member of Company Law Board for getting a favourable judgment in the matter of appointing an independent President of the Amar Ujala Publication. It was allegedly revealed that a case relating to Amar Ujala Publication was pending before Mr. R Vasudevan, the present petitioner Member of Company Law Board who had allegedly demanded and agreed to accept an illegal gratification of Rs.7,00,000 from Manoj Kumar Banthia. It is further alleged that Manoj Kumar Banthia in turn demanded Rs.10,00,000 from Ankur Chawla. The information was that this illegal gratification of Rs. 10,00,000 will be paid to Manoj who will then pay Rs.7,00,000 to the petitioner at his official residence located at 11, W-Block, HUDCO Place Extension, Andrews Ganj, New Delhi. On the basis of this information a case under Section 120B IPC read with Sections 7, 8, 12, 13(2) read with Section 13(l)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 was registered against petitioner, Manoj Kumar Banthia, Company Secretary and Ankur Chawla and the matter was handed over to Shri Satyender Gosain, Inspector, ACU (IX) for investigation.

3. On 23rd November, 2009 at about 9.00 p.m. a CBI team consisting of Satender Gosain (Inspector), Sudhansu Shekhar (Inspector) Bhaskar Pratap Singh (Constable), Virender Singh (Constable) along with two independent witnesses Sh. Ashok Kumar and Dr. Sudhir Gupta were organized. The CBI team along with independent witnesses arrived at HUDCO and took suitable position. At about 9.40 p.m. it was seen that a taxi bearing registration No. DL1T 6672 black colour ambassador stopped at the entry of the residential flat leading to the house of the petitioner. A person of the physical description which was disclosed in the source information came out of the taxi who was later on identified as Manoj Kumar Banthia. He was carrying cash to the house of the petitioner. At about 10.35 p.m. Manoj Kumar was seen coming out of the house and going without the paper bag which he was initially carrying. On being intercepted and inquired about the paper bag which he was carrying, initially he got perplexed but on further questioning he revealed that he had left the paper bag at the residence of the petitioner. Thereafter, a raid was conducted at the residence of the petitioner and an amount of Rs. 55,00,000 in cash was recovered from his residence,

4. In the recovery memo cum seizure memo it has been stated by Manoj Kumar that the aforesaid money was given to him by Ankur Chawla. The present petitioner/ accused was arrested and remanded to police custody for a week on the ground that he will be taken to Chennai for the purpose of effecting some recovery, however, he was not taken. It is the case of the respondent that from Chennai a recovery of approximately Rs. 1,21,23,800 or so was effected in cash from the number of lockers of the petitioner apart from the fact that he had number of other bank accounts where 51,00,000 lakhs of rupees were found in balance. The present petitioner was remanded to judicial custody as no further police remand was sought by the CBI.

5. The petitioner filed an application for grant of bail which was dismissed by the learned Special Judge/Sessions Judge vide order dated 4th December, 2009 on the ground that the case was at the initial stages and further that Rs. 1,21,23,800 found in four bank lockers of the petitioner. Apart from that Rs.51,00,000 was found in 13 accounts of different banks of Chennai and Delhi. The learned Special Judge referred to the observations passed by the Apex Court in Surain Singh v. State of Punjab, 2009 II AD (SO 589, wherein it has been observed that the illegal gratification is a gigantic problem with the public servants which is increasing day by day and is corroding the system like cancer.

6. The petitioner feeling aggrieved has filed the present application seeking grant of bail to which reply has been filed by the CBI.

7. I have heard Sh. K.K. Sud the learned senior counsel for the petitioner as well as Ms. Soma Mathur on behalf of the CBI. The contentions of the learned senior counsel for the petitioner are as under:

(a) It was contended by Mr. Sud that admittedly the petitioner was arrested on 23rd November, 2009 and he was remanded to police custody for a period of seven days. After expiry of the said period further police remand was not sought by the respondent and he was remanded to judicial custody which is indicative of the fact that the petitioner was not required for any custodial interrogation. It was urged that no useful purpose would be served by keeping the petitioner incarcerated further especially in the light of the fact that he is a heart patient as he had undergone bypass surgery. It was also contended that although the respondent had sought remand of the petitioner for a period of seven days for the purpose of taking him to Chennai but without taking the petitioner to Chennai the respondent have affected the recovery of cash amounting to Rs. 1,21,23,800 approximately from the lockers of the petitioner, and therefore, the present petitioner is not required for the purpose of any interrogation.

(b) The second contention of the learned senior counsel is to the effect that the case which has been registered against the petitioner is under Section 120B IPC, Sections 7, 8, 12, 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the PC Act. So far as the Sections 7, 8 & 12 are concerned. it was contended that they carry a maximum sentence of five years although it was contended that the offence of abetment will not be made out against the petitioner. So far as the Section 13(2) of the P.C. Act is concerned, it was contended that what was invoked by the respondent was Section 13(l)(d) (ii) of the P.C. Act which makes it a criminal misconduct by a public servant if he by abusing his position as a public servant obtains for himself or for any other person any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage. It was contended that the offence under Section 13(l)(d)(ii) of the P.C. Act carries a maximum punishment of seven years. In the light of these punishments prescribed for the various alleged offences it was contended that the petitioner at best, assuming though not admitting that he had committed an offence of corruption was carrying a maximum sentence of five years or seven years and therefore in terms of Section 437(1) Cr.P.C. which guidelines 'are applicable to Section 439 also the petitioner may not be denied bail. The petitioner has already remained in custody for more than 51 days and no useful purpose would be served by keeping the petitioner incarcerated.

(c) The third argument by the learned Senior Counsel was to the effect that as on date there is no charge under Section 13(l)(e) P.C. Act which is registered against the present petitioner which makes possession of disproportionate assets to the known sources of income of the accused, as a criminal offence inviting the harsh punishment. This submission was urged by the learned counsel for the petitioner on the ground that the effort of the respondent is to create a bias in the mind of the Court qua the present petitioner by alleging, that there was a recovery of Rs.55,00,000 in cash from the petitioner from his Delhi residence and a sum of Rs. 1,21,23,800 by way of cash from four lockers in Chennai apart other recoveries. It was contended that as and when the FIR under Section 13(1)(e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act is registered the petitioner will be issued a show cause notice to which he will have time to reply.

(d) The fourth submission is that the respondent is adopting a discriminatory attitude in the investigation of the matter qua the present petitioner. It is contended that the respondent are hobnobbing with the co-accused Ankur Chawla and are trying to obtain evidence from him only with a view to fix up the present petitioner knowing full well that it was Ankur Chawla king-pin who was representing the group before the present petitioner in the Company Law Board which is alleged to be requiring a favourable order from the petitioner. It was contended that such discriminatory attitude adopted by the CBI cannot be approved, so as to deprive the benefit of bail being granted to the petitioner. On the contrary, it was contended that this is one of the important consideration on the basis of which the Court must take cognizance and consider it to be a relevant factor for the purpose of grant of bail to the present petitioner. The learned senior counsel for the petitioner in this regard has referred to the observations of this High Court in case Binoy Jacob v. CBI, 1993 JCC 131. The learned counsel contended that the petitioner will abide by all such terms and conditions which the Court may like to impose for enlargement of the petitioner on the ground that he has already suffered incarceration for more than 51 days and he is not likely to flee away from the processes of law.

8. The learned counsel for CBI Ms. Sonia Mathur has vehemently contested the grounds urged by the present petitioner for grant of bail. It was contended that the case is at the crucial stage, therefore, the petitioner may not be enlarged on bail. It was contended that the petitioner is an influent tial person, and therefore, not only he with run away from the processes of law but he may even tamper with the evidence. The learned standing counsel further contended that so far as the allegation of adopting a discriminatory attitude qua the present petitioner is concerned, it was contended that the respondent has not exonerated the person named as an accused in the FIR but as and when evidence comes on record against him appropriate action will be initiator against him.

9. The learned counsel for CBI has cor mat nu casu unuer oecuon ioi, of the Prevention of Corruption Act as on date has been registered against the present petitioner, however, as and when the evidence comes on record against the present petitioner of the said offences an appropriate action will be initiated against him. As regards the petitioner being not medically fit it was contended that even the perusal of discharge summary and the other medical papers of the present petitioner indicate that the petitioner had undergone bypass surgery way back in 2007 and he is being provided with facility of necessary medical checkup at regular intervals.

10. I have heard the learned counsel for the petitioner as well as the learned Standing Counsel for CBI on the bail application. I have also carefully gone through the record.

11. No doubt, the offence of corruption is a serious offence and has eaten the vitals of out system more so when it is done by persons who are holding positions of power and authority. But still the question which needs to be considered dispassionately and objectively at this stage is that as to whether in a given case the petitioner who is alleged to save committed the offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act deserves to be enlarged on bail or not. No doubt the grant of bail in a non-bailable offence is a matter of discretion which the Court has exercised judicially but at the same time the bail should not be denied to an accused only as a matter of punishment. There are two paramount considerations which the Court has consider while enlarging the accused on bed. First as to what is the gravity of the and whether the accused would sub- himself to processes of law or not? Sec-sill the grant of bail endanger the fair investigation or the holding of a fair trial or a ---r words will the accused tamper with sentence.

12. Keeping in view me above Droaa parameters no doubt the petitioner was arrested on 23rd November, 2009 immediately after the other co-accused Manoj had delivered a sum of Rs.7,00,000 and the consequent recovery of Rs.55,00,000 which included prima facie this amount shows that the petitioner had been ostensibly misusing his official position in amassing huge cash/wealth for which he has not been able to give any plausible explanation weighs heavily against him. This view further gets fortified by the huge cash recovery of Rs. 1,21,23,800 or so from Chennai but then this ground in itself cannot be ground to deny the bail because then we will be punishing the accused even before he has been found guilty.

13. The next question which arises is whether he will subject himself to processes of law. The learned standing counsel for CBI had raised the question that the petitioner is being quite influential, and therefore, capable of influencing witnesses and consequently bail is denied. As against this the learned senior counsel had referred to the judgment in case titled Ravi Singhal v. UOI & Anr., 1993 JCC 306, in order to urge that a very fact that the petitioner is holding a very high status in the society or a higher position in itself is a sure shot consideration to show that the petitioner is not going to flee from processes of law. He will subject himself to law as and when called upon.

14. I am of the considered opinion that the petitioner is holding a high position, or is influential, or is resourceful works as a double edged weapon which can cut both ways. The position, the status and the influence of an accused person can no doubt be a ground for denial of bail in a case where the apprehension expressed by the investigating agency is genuine and where there are sufficient prima facie reasons to believe that he would influence the witnesses or tamper the evidence to deny the bail to him, but at the same time such a status, position can also be valid consideration to show that the accused has roots in the society and is therefore not going to run away from the processes of law. He will permit and make himself available during the course of investigation or the trial as the case may be. In the instant case the statements of witness have already been recorded. No doubt, the petitioner was holding a sensitive and a high position, but I feel that this is a case where he will not be able to influence the investigation which is almost already complete. Most of the evidence against him is in the nature of recoveries and the documentary evidence regarding the recovery of huge ill gotten money both from his residence in Delhi as well as from Chennai which he cannot tamper. Apart from this the concern of the investigating agency regarding the tampering of evidence or influencing the witnesses, can be taken care of imposing suitable conditions on the accused, while granting bail. Further nothing precludes the investigating agency to move an application for cancellation of the bail of an accused in case it has slightest prima facie evidence to show that he is influencing or trying to influence the investigation or the witnesses. Accordingly, 1 feel in the instant case since the nature of evidence which has been collected by the investigating agency is in the form of huge recovery of unaccounted money in cash both from the Delhi residence and Chennai residence, apart from other circumstantial evidence, I feel that the chances of the petitioner trying to erase the evidence or influence that witness are remote and if he tries to do the same investigating agency shall be free to file the application seeking cancellation of his bail.

15. Another point which arises for consideration is the discriminatory treatment of the petitioner qua the other co-accused Ankur Chawla who is named in the FIR The Sessions Judge had rejected this plea of the petitioner by observing that it is not for the Court to say as to when and which of the accused is to be arrested. This is true that the investigation is in the exclusive domain of the police or the investigating agency and ordinarily the Court would not interfere in the investigation except to the extent what is permitted under Chapter XII of the CPC. But at the same time, the High Court cannot ignore the fact, in case the investigating agency is acting in a discriminatory or arbitrary manner.

16. Coming back to the facts of the present case the FIR has been registered against not only the petitioner but also against the co-accused Manoj who is in custody and one Ankur Chawla a legal practitioner representing a group of shareholders headed by Atul Maheshwari, who were litigating for control of management of Amar Ujala Publication in respect of which a dispute was pending before the present petitioner. The FIR is against all the three persons has been registered on the basis of source information that they were indulging in a conspiracy to commit an offence under various sections of Prevention of Corruption Act yet no action has been taken against the said person by the investigating agency on the ground that the investigating agency has recorded his statement and as and when anything incriminating is brought on record he will be also treated in the same manner in which the petitioner has been. The court fails of understand as to what other evidence ought to have been there before any action could be taken against a co-accused named in the FIR who had prima facie been responsible for arranging the funds and actively participating in giving the bribe. The Santhanam Committee Report which was constituted almost five decades back had observed that there 15 no dearth of people who want to be corrupted and who want to corrupt. If this cancer of corruption is to be treated and eliminated, both of them have to be dealt with equally with a even and heavy hand. That is why the abettor of prevention of corruption entails punishment of five years under P.C Act.

17. In the instant case it seems that colour of dress of the co-accused has weighed with the investigating agency and it has for reasons best known to them chosen to record the statements of the co-accused on couple of occasions who is bound to feign ignorance and make his statement exculpating himself. Such an unfair approach does not befit the premier investigation agency like CBI as it certainly shows discrimination qua the petitioner. Our own High Court in Binoy Jacob (supra) case has very categorically observed that our country is governed by rule of law which envisages that all persons must be dealt with the same manner while doing so. The Court has certainly not only an obligation but also a right to call upon the investigating agency to explain its actions qua a particular co-accused and in case any reasonable explanation is not given it nay draw its own conclusion. .

18. These observations of our own High Court are important consideration. In the present case, I feel that the investigating agency has not adopted a just and fair approach in treating all the accused persons on a even pedestal while as the petitioner has been arrested on 23.11.2009 yet no ac-aon has been taken against the third co accused Ankur Chawla despite the fact that he is specifically named in the FIR and where in view of the Court prima facie there a sufficient evidence to show that he was also a part of the conspiracy not only to commit the offence but also abettor of the offence. Beyond this the Court does not want to observe anything and leave the things to the wisdom of the investigating agency, therefore Court takes this also a valid consideration to exercise discretion for grant of bail to the present petitioner.

19. The learned senior counsel for the petitioner at the fag end had also referred to Section 6A of the Delhi Special Police Establishment Act which requires obtaining of a sanction before registration of an FIR against the petitioner being holder of an office of the rank of the Joint Secretary or above. It was also urged that before his appointment as a Member of the Company Law Board a report from Vigilance as well as IB shows that there is nothing incriminating against him so far as his integrity is concerned which is also a ground for bail. I feel that merely because the petitioner's earlier of criminal misconduct of misusing of his position and amassing a huge cash, for which he is not able to give any reasonable explanation till date has gone un-noticed is not in itself a ground for release of bail. Similarly the vigilance or the IB reports also do not help him in any manner. The alleged non-compliance of Section 6A also does not help the petitioner because I agree with the contention of the learned counsel for the CBI that the offence of corruption may so sudden that in a given case it may defeat the ends of justice if one has to obtain the sanction for registration of the offence.

20. There are two more considerations which weigh with the Court for enlarging the petitioner on bail. These are firstly that the petitioner's remand was obtained for seven days for taking him to Chennai but he was never taken thereafter he was remanded to judicial custody. The CBI never sought any permission to interrogate him, therefore, the continued incarceration of the petitioner in my view is not going to serve and purpose except to deny the benefit of bail to him by way of punishment. Secondly, the petitioner is admittedly patient who has undergone bypass surgery. Although no grievance has been raised by the learned senior counsel for the petitioner regarding the non-availability of medical aid or medical checkup but still the medical status of the petitioner which has been placed on record is certainly also a valid consideration that he had undergone a coronary bypass surgery only in 2007. This in my view is also a ground to be taken into account.

21. Keeping in view the aforesaid facts and the totality of circumstances. I feel that this is a fit case where the petitioner, who is in custody since 23.11.2009, should be released on bail on furnishing personal bond in the sum of Rs.50,000 with two sureties for the like amount to the satisfaction of the learned Special Judge and subject to the following conditions:

(a) That he shall surrender his passport if not already seized.

(b) That he shall not leave the National Capital Territory of Delhi without the permission of the Trial Court and in case he is given permission to leave NCT of Delhi he shall inform the purpose duration of visit as well the address where he is going to stay. Further, no permission be given to visit Chennai till charge sheet is filed.

(c) He shall not tamper with the evidence or influence the witnesses or do any act which will create a reasonable ground to assume that the petitioner is trying to create hurdle in the fair investigation or trial of the case which will entail cancellation of his bail.

(d) The petitioner shall report once in a week at 11.00 a.m. to the Superintendent of Police, Sanjay Kumar Singh. CBI ACU IX, at CGO Complex, New Delhi-03 or such other officer as may be authorized by him so as to enable them to question the petitioner, if so required, till the time his charge-sheet is filed.

22. With these directions, the bail application stands allowed. However, expression of any opinion hereinbefore may not be treated as an expression on the merits of the case.

****

Cross Citation :2000 ALL MR (Cri) 1898

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K. T. THOMAS & D. P. MOHAPATRA, J J.

Jagroop Singh .....Versus.... K. Chatterjee Cri. A. No. 107 of 2000 1st February, 2000.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 –Capacity of accused - Court should examine capacity of prisoner before fixing amount of bail bond - Amount of bail bond reduced from Rs. 2,00,000/- to Rs. 50,000/-.

==========

JUDGMENT :-

1. Leave granted.

2. We heard both sides. If the appellant found it difficult to execute a bond in a sum of Rs. 2,00,000/- (rupees two lakhs) it should not be a ground to continue to detain him in prison. The affordability of the prisoner must also be a consideration for the Court in fixing up the amount of the bond. Subsequently, the High Court reduced the bond amount to Rs. 1,00,000/- (rupees one lakh) and even that was beyond the capacity of the appellant and hence appellant filed this appeal by special leave.

3. We are told that appellant was undergoing detention under an order passed as per the provision of COFEPOSA and the period of detention is to expire on 2-2-2000. We feel that the grievance of the appellant is genuine, as the trouble would not have been undertaken by the appellant in approaching this Court for this limited purpose.

4. After hearing learned Counsel for the appellant and also learned Solicitor General of India we are of the opinion that the bond amount can be reduced again to Rs.50,000 (rupees fifty thousand). We, therefore direct that appellant be released on bail (on completion of his detention period) on his executing a bond in a sum of Rs. 50,000/ - with one solvent surety to the satisfaction of ACMM, New Delhi.

5. The appeal is disposed of.

****

Cross Citation :2002 ALL MR (Cri) 565

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : J.G.CHITRE,J.

Mahipati Bapu Bandgar…..V/s……State of Maharashtra

Criminal Application No.3352 of 2001. 8th October, 2001.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.436 – Absconding of accused is not a ground to be given weightage in grant of bail - Court would not be impressed by the surmises and conjectures- While considering the prayer for bail, the Court has to consider the strength of material which the investigating agency has collected for going to the trial against the accused. Fact of absconding would not by itself disentitle the accused to get the bail. It is a matter of experience that on some occasions even innocent persons hide themselves from police on account of fear.

==========

JUDGMENT

1. Heard. Counsel appearing for the applicant submitted that r.fter the applicant knew that he was wanted for criminal prosecution revolving around the provisions of section 302IPC, he surrendered himself before the concerned Police Station and, therefore, he is in custody and praying for bail. She submitted that there is no evidence against this applicant so as to go to trial for bidding conviction against him. Ms. Kantharia brought it to the notice of this Court that this accused gave a statement showing his willingness to lead the investigating officers to his house where little nail cutter was kept in a cupboard used for storing grocery articles.

2. While considering the prayer for bail, the Court has to consider the strength of material which the investigating agency has collected for going to the trial against the accused. The Court would not be impressed by the surmises and conjecturers.

3. The little nail cutter is a common use article and it can be stored by anybody in the house. The prosecution cannot achieve the advantage unless it establishes prima facie a nexus between such an article and the crime by which the accused has been indicated.

4. In this case, the prosecution has also collected the evidence to show that this accused was seen in the association of the co-accused and his brother some days prior to the murder of Laxmi @ Jaishree whom the main accused, as per the prosecution case, has murdered along with her two children. As per prosecution case, the main accused created a scene of dacoit and wanted to misguide the police machinery by indicating that his wife Laxmi @ Jaishree was murdered by dacoits while committing dacoity. It is the prosecution case that this applicant assisted the main accused in concealing the evidence of that murder. As the material on record shows, there is no evidence to show his active participation in the alleged act of committing the murder.

5. The fact of absconding would not by itself disentitle the accused to get the bail. It is a matter of experience that on some occasions even innocent persons hide themselves from police on account of fear.

6. Thus, this application is allowed. The applicant stands released on bail on furnishing security of Rs.25,000/- with one surety and P. R. Bond to that extent. He shall not threaten, contact, induce any of the prosecution witnesses. He should attend the Wadgaon Police Station twice in a week on Monday and Friday between 9.00 a.m. to 11.00 am. till further orders. The officers of the police station should not detain him for more than two hours.

7. Parties to act on an ordinary copy of this order duly authenticated by the Private Secretary.

Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2009 (1) Bom.C.R.(Cri.) 411

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : Tahilramani V.K. (Smt.), J.

Rafael Palafox Garcia .....V/s..... Union of India & anr.

Criminal Application No. 2015 of 2008, decided on 25-8/25-9-2008.

==========

Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, Sec. 167(2)(a)(ii) -Bail application- On ground that charge-sheet when filed was incomplete because chemical analyst's report was not filed - That Chemical Analyzers report was filed much after 90 days period, hence he was entitled to a bail - Held, in this case seizure was affected on an information and contents had been tested positive for contraband with help of a field kit On merits contraband herein is Acetic Anhydride being a "controlled substance" which is a versatile substance, can be used in manufacture of innocuous medicines. Quantity seized is also less. Therefore, Court is inclined to release applicant on bail in sum of Rs. 1 lakh with two sureties with condition to report to NCB office once a week till conclusion of trial.

==========

Cases referred:

1. Sunil Vasantrao Phulbande Vs. State of Maharashtra, 2003(Supp.) Bom.C.R. 101: 2002(3) Mh.L.J. 689(N.B.): 2005 D.C. (Narcotics) 32.

2. Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre Vs. State of Maharashtra, 1992 B.C.I, (soft) 182 : 1991(1) Mh.L.J. 656.

3. Joaquim M. Correia Vs. State of Goa, Cri.Misc.Appli.88/1998, dt. 18-7-1998.

4. Malin Lundberg Isabelle Vs. Union of India, 2006 B.C.I. 158.

5. Jagdish Budhroji Purohit Vs. State of Maharashtra, 1998 DGLS (soft) 837 : A.I.R. 1998 S.C. 3328 : 1998(7) S.C.C. 270.

6. Dinesh Dalmia Vs. CBI, 2008(Supp.) Bom.C.R. 128 : 2007 DGLS (soft) 946 : 2008(1) S.C.C. 36 : A.I.R. 2008 S.C. 78.

7. K. Veeraswami Vs. Union of India, 1991 DGLS (soft) 323 : 1991(3) S.C.C. 655.

8. Satya Narain Musadi Vs. State of Bihar, 1979 DGLS (soft) 393 : 1980(3) S.C.C. 152: A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 506.

9. Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. R.S. Pai, 2003 Bom.C.R.(Cri.) 572 (S. C.) 2002 DGLS (soft) 369 : 2002(5) S.C.C. 82 : A.I.R. 2002 S.C. 1644.

10. State of Haryana Vs. Mehal Singh, 1978 Cri.L.J. 1810 (P&H).

11. Shreeniwas Bansidhar Somani Vs. Intelligence Officer NCB, Cri Appli. 181/2002, dt. 14-2-2002.

Advocates appeared :

Anil Armey, Sr.Cou. a/w. Pravin Singhal, i/b. Rajeev Sawant & Ass., for applicant.

Smt. Revati M. Dere a/w. Mandar Goswami, for respondent No. 1.

S.S. Pednekar, A.P.P., for State.

JUDGEMENT

1. Heard the learned Counsel for the Applicant and the learned Counsel for the respondent NCB.

2. The applicant is seeking bail in N.D.P.S. Special Case No. 6 of 2008 of N.C.B. pending before the Special Judge for N.D.P.S. cases, Thane. The said case is under sections 29 r/w. 9-A and 25-A of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985.

3. The prosecution case briefly stated is that specific information was received that one Shahnawaz Khan with the help of two persons including the applicant are manufacturing pseudo-ephedrine which is a controlled substance at Siddiqui Farm House in Thane. When the Officers reached the said place, they found the present applicant along with others present there and 290 kgs. of pseudo-ephedrine which is a controlled substance came to be seized from the said place. Prior to seizure, tests were conducted by field test kit by taking small quantity from each packet. The said tests answered positive for presence of pseudo-ephedrine. The applicant-accused came to be arrested on 19.12.2007. He preferred an application for bail before the Special Court. The said bail application came to be rejected by Order dated 29.3.2008. Hence, this application.

4. Two grounds were raised by the learned Counsel for the applicant. The first ground is that at the time of filing of charge-sheet the C.A. report was not filed. Thus an incomplete charge-sheet was filed. At the time of filing of charge-sheet as the C.A. report was not filed, there was no material before the learned Judge to come to the conclusion that the substance seized was pseudo-ephedrine and hence the Court could not have taken cognizance of the said case.

5. In order to appreciate the above contention, it would be necessary to give a few dates. The applicant came to be arrested on 19.12.2007. The charge-sheet came to be filed on 13.2.2008. As the offence is made punishable under Section 25-A admittedly the charge-sheet would have to be filed within 60 days i.e. approximately on 19.2.2008. Though, the charge-sheet was filed on 13.2.2008 at the time of filing charge-sheet, no C.A. report was filed and the C.A. report dated 28.3.2008 was produced before the Court on 29.3.2008. The bail application preferred by the applicant came to be rejected on 29.3.2008.

6. It is contended by the learned Counsel for the applicant that since the offences registered against the applicant are punishable with a term which may extend to 10 years. The case of the applicant would fall within the ambit of section 167(2)(a)(ii) ground that the C.A. report was not filed of the Code and the accused cannot be de- within the stipulated time, tained in custody beyond the period of 60 g. The learned Counsel for the applicant days from the date of first remand of the submitted that in a case under the N.D.P.S. applicant i.e. 19.12.2007 if the charge-sheet Act report of the C.A. is the foundation on is not filed within the said period. It is con- the basis of which the Court can proceed to tended that the prosecution ought to have take cognizance of the offence. It was con-filed the charge-sheet as contemplated un- tended that the Chemical Analyser's report der section 173(2) and (5) of the Code within is the basis to decide whether the substano: a period of 60 days. However, in the instant seized during the raid falls under section case, though the charge-sheet is filed by 9-A or not, which would determine whether the prosecution on 13.2.2008 i.e. within 60 the provisions of N.D.P.S Act are attracted days from the date of first remand of the or not. It was further contended that the applicant, the same being incomplete as it Magistrate in such situation cannot pro-was not accompanied with the documents ceed to take cognizance of the offence for contemplated under sub-section (5) of sec- want of complete charge-sheet/report. It tion 173 of the Code, cannot be treated as was submitted that in the instant case the a charge-sheet/report, which would em- c.A. report was filed in the Court beyond power the Court to take cognizance of the the period of 60 days i.e. on 29.3.2008 and offences and hence applicant is entitled to therefore the prosecution cannot take any be released on bail in view of provisions of advantage in this regard. As the investigate-section 167(2) of the Code.

7. Thus, it was submitted that when the sheet within the stipulated period of 60 days, charge-sheet was filed as the C.A. report a right accrued to the accused to seek release was not filed, it amounted to filing of an on bail under section 167(2) of Cri.P.C. incomplete charge-sheet which cannot be 9. Reliance is also placed on a decision said to be a charge-sheet within the mean- of another Single Judge of this Court in the ing of section 173(5) of Cri.P.C. and as the case oi\Sharadchandra VinayakDongreand charge-sheet, as contemplated under sec- others Vs. State of Maharashtra)[2], reported tion 173 of Cri.P.C. was not filed within the in 1992 B.C.I, (soft) 182 : 1991(1) Mh.L.J. stipulated period of 60 days a right accrued 656. In the said case, admittedly, an into the accused to seek release on bail. In complete charge-sheet had been filed. The support of this contention, reliance was Court held that the incomplete charge-sheet placed on a decision of a Single Judge of cannot be treated as a police report within this High Court in the case of (Sunil the meaning of sub-section (2) of section Vasantrao Phulhande and anotherVs.

State 173 of Cr.P.C. and there is no question of of Maharashtra)[1], reported in 2003(Supp.) Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence Bom.C.R. 101 : 2002(3) Mh.L.J. 689(N.B.): $_{w}i_{tn}$in meaning of section 190(l)(b) of 2005 Drugs Cases (Narcotics) 32. The Cri.P.C. on the basis of the incomplete learned Counsel for the applicant pointed charge-sheet. The said case was under the out that the said case was also under the Bombay Prohibition Act. In this case, ad-N.D.P.S. Act . In the said case also within mutedly, the charge-sheet was incomplete the stipulated time complete charge-sheet as it was specifically stated therein that the was not filed. In the said case, C.A. report investigation is not yet completed. Conse-was filed beyond the stipulated period of quently, it was held that incomplete charge-90 days and prior to that only incomplete heet cannot be treated as police-report, charge-sheet with all other papers except However, such is not the case in the present C.A. report was filed. In the said case, the case, hence, this decision cannot apply in accused came to be released on bail on the the present case.

10. Thereafter, reliance was placed on an unreported decision of a Single Judge of this Court Panaji Bench dated 18.7.1998 in the case of (Joaquim M. Correia Vs. State of Goaf, passed in Criminal Misc. Application No. 88 of 1998. The said case was under the N.D.P.S Act involving charas. In the said case, the entire charge-sheet having been filed in time, the said decision would not be applicable to the facts of the present case.

11. Reliance was also placed on a decision of a Single Judge of this Court dated 22nd December, 2006 in the case of (Ms. Malin Lundberg Isabelle Vs. Union of India & anr.y, in Criminal Application No. 4178 of 2006 reported in 2006 B.C.I. 158. The applicant therein was a foreigner who was in custody since 10th May, 2006 for possession of 6534 gms. of Hashish which is a commercial quantity. The accused was produced before the Special Judge on 10th May, 2006. 180 days period expired on 5th November, 2006. However, entire charge-sheet came to be filed on 6th November, 2006. The reason for filing the charge-sheet on 6th November, 2006 was that 5th November, 2006 being a Sunday, the charge-sheet could not be filed on that day hence it was filed on the very next working day i.e. 6th November, 2006. The Court held that as the charge-sheet was not filed within time the applicant was entitled to be released on bail. However, as no such situation has arisen in the present matter, this decision too would not be applicable to the facts of the present case.

12. On the backdrop of above facts and decisions, the question which arises for my consideration in the present case is whether mere filing of charge-sheet within the pre-scribed time, unaccompanied by material papers as contemplated under section 173(5) of the Code renders it incomplete and such filing of charge-sheet amounts to failure to file the same, which in turn confers on the accused right to be released on bail under section 167(2) of the Code, as the Court would not be competent to take cognizance of the offence on the basis of such incomplete charge-sheet/report.

13. On perusal of all the decisions, it is seen that in the said cases there is no ref-erence to test of the contraband at the spot by field test kit. In the present case, the complaint as well as panchnama specifically mention about field testing kit being taken to the spot and the samples of the seized material being tested at the spot using field testing kit and the test answering positive for pseudo-ephedrine. In Sunil Phulbande's case

(supra) which is a case similar to the present case, there is no reference at all to any test kit report.

14. Useful reference may be made to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of (Jagdish Budhroji Purohit Vs. State of Maharashtra)[5], reported in 1998 DGLS (soft) 837: A.I.R. 1998 S.C. 3328: 1998 (7) S.C.C. 270. In the said case, it was contended that Chemical Analysers report Exh.61 to 67 were not admissible in evidence. The Supreme Court observed that :

> "Moreover, in this case the prosecution had led evidence on P.W. 1 Vijay Kumar Shahasane and P.W. 3 Sidram Dhange, members of the raiding party, to prove that the powder which was found from the factory was Methaqualone and that the tablets which were found from the factory were methaqualone tablets. Both of them have stated that they have received sufficient training and thus have sufficient knowledge about narcotic substance and the methods of testing them. They had carried with them a kit for the purpose of testing when they had raided the factory. On analysis by them the powder was found to be methaqualone and tablets were found containing methaqualone. Therefore, even if Exhibits 61 to 67 are ignored there is sufficient evidence on record to show that methaqualone powder and tablets were found from the appellant's factory. Thus the appellant's conviction under section 22 of the N.D.P.S. Act is quite proper. Both the witnesses have further stated that on analysis the green substance which was found from one of the cabins was hashish. Therefore, conviction of the appellant under section 20(b)(ii) of the N.D.P.S. Act is also quite proper."

15. From the above decision, it is seen that even if there is any lacuna in the C.A. report the report of the field testing kit conducted by the Officers can be relied upon to convict the accused. If the report of the field testing kit can be relied upon to convict the accused then in the present case where similar test was conducted it cannot be said that an incomplete charge-sheet was filed on 13.2.2008. The charge-sheet forwarded to the Court on that day contained material which was sufficient for the Court to take cognizance of the offence. The material before the Court was sufficient for the Court to proceed further and to take cognizance as the material on record on that day clearly showed that 290 kgs. of pseudo-ephedrene came to be seized and the involvement of applicant and other accused was also seen from the material in the charge-sheet filed on 13.2.2008.

16. In the case of Sunil Phulbande (supra) this Court observed that The charge-sheet / report as contemplated under section 173(5) of the Code, forwarded to the Magistrate should be such that on the basis of which Magistrate should be able to proceed further and take cognizance." It was further observed that in a given case, certain documents even though they may not accompany the charge-sheet may not change the nature of the charge-sheet/report contemplated under section 173(2) and (5) of the Code particularly when the material is sufficient for the Court to take cognizance of the offence as per the provisions of the Code. In the present case, on 13.2.2008 there was sufficient material before the Court to take cognizance. Moreover, the C.A. report which was produced on 29.3.2008 was not such as to change the nature of the charge-sheet in this case.

17. In the present case the material at the time of filing of the charge-sheet on 13.2.2008 clearly showed that 290 kgs. of pseudo-ephedrine was found and the applicant was very much present in the farm house where the pseudo-ephedrine was found. Thus, at the time of filing charge-sheet the accused was made aware of the exact nature of the offence alleged against him, so also the Court was aware of the exact nature of the offence alleged against the accused. Thus, there is no question of causing any prejudice to the accused. In the present case, the applicant has not contended that he has been prejudiced in any manner as the C.A. report was not filed along with the charge-sheet. No such pleading infact has been taken by the applicant. As observed earlier, there was sufficient material before the Court and also made known to the accused regarding the prosecution case against the accused.

18. Useful reference may be made to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of (Dinesh Dalmia Vs. CBI\[b], reported in 2008(Supp.) Bom.C.R. 128 : 2007 DGLS (soft) 946 : 2008(1) S.C.C. 36 : A.I.R. 2008 S.C. 78. In the said case also an incomplete charge-sheet came to be filed. In the said case, it was observed that:

> "It is true that ordinarily all documents accompany the charge-sheet. But, in this case, some documents could not be filed which were not in the possession of CBI. As indicated hereinbefore, the said documents are said to have been filed on 20.1.2006 whereas the appellant was arrested on 12.2.2006. The appellant does not contend that he has been prejudiced by not filing of such documents with the charge-sheet. No such plea in fact had been taken. Even if all the documents had not been filed, by reason thereof submission of charge-sheet itself does not become vitiated in law."

19. Indisputably, the power of the Investigating Officer to make a prayer for making further investigation in terms of subsection (8) of section 173 is not taken away only because a charge-sheet under sub-section (2) thereof has been filed. A further investigation is permissible even if order of cognizance of offence has been taken by the Magistrate. In the case of Dinesh Dalmia [supra), it has been further observed that:

> "We may notice that a Constitution Bench of this Court in (K. Veeraswami Vs. Union of India)[7], stated the law in the following terms , 1991 DGLS (soft) 323- . 1991(3) S.C.C. 655. (S.C.C. p. 716, para 76)
>
> "76..... As observed by this Court in (Satya Naram Musadi Vs. State of Bihar)[8], 1979 DGLS (soft) 393 : 1980(3) S.C.C. 152 : A.I.R. 1980 S.C. 506 that the statutory-requirement of the report under section 173(2) would be complied with if the various details prescribed therein are included in the report. This report is an intimation to the Magistrate that upon investigation into a cognizable offence the Investigating Officer has been able to procure sufficient evidence for the Court to inquire into the offence and the necessary information is being sent to the Court. In fact, the report under section 173(2) purports to be an opinion of the Investigating Officer that as far as he is concerned he has been able to procure sufficient material for the trial of the accused by the Court. The report is complete if it is accompanied with all the documents and statements of witnesses as required by section 175(5). Nothing more need be stated in the report of the Investigating Officer. It is also not necessary that all the details of the offence must be stated. The > details of the offence are required to be proved to bring home the guilt to the accused at a later stage i.e. in the course of the trial of the case by adducing acceptable evidence."

20. The charge-sheet is an intimation to the Magistrate that upon investigation into a cognizable case the Investigating Officer has been able to procure sufficient evidence for the Court to enquire into the offence and the necessary information is being sent to the Court. A charge-sheet is a final report within he meaning of sub-section (2) of section 173 of the Code. It is filed so as to enable the Court concerned to apply its mind as to whether cognizance of the offence thereupon should be taken or not. The report is ordinarily filed in the form prescribed therefore. One of the requirement for submission of a police report is whether any offence appears to have been committed and, if so, by whom. In this case from the material available before the Court on 13.2.2008, it was clear that an offence had been committed under section 25 of the N.D.P.S. Act and the applicant was involved in the offence.

21. In the case of (Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. R.S. Pai and another)[9], reported in 2003 Bom.C.R.(Cri.) 572(S. C.) 2002 DGLS (soft) 369 : 2002(5) S.C.C. 82 : A.I.R. 2002 S.C. 1644, it was observed that "it cannot be held that the additional documents cannot be produced subsequently. If some mistake is committed in not producing the relevant documents at the time of submitting the report or charge-sheet, it is always open to the Investigating Officer to produce the same with the permission of the Court." It was further observed that "the word 'shall' used in sub-section (5) cannot be interpreted as mandatory, but as directory. Normally, the documents gathered during the investigation upon which the prosecution wants to rely are required to be forwarded to the Magistrate, but if there is some omission, it would not mean that the remaining documents cannot be produced subsequently. Further, the scheme of sub-section (8) of section 173 also makes it absolutely clear that even after the charge-sheet is submitted, further investigation, if called for, is not precluded. If further investigation is not precluded then there is no question of not permitting the prosecution to produce additional documents which were gathered prior to or subsequent to investigation. In such cases, there cannot be any prejudice to the accused."

Thus, it is seen that though the Investigating Officer is required to produce all the relevant documents at the time of submitting the charge-sheet, at the same time there is no specific provision due to which no additional documents can be produced subsequently by the Investigating agency.

22. A Full Bench of the Punjab and Haryana Court in the case of (State of Haryana Vs. Mehal Singh and another)[I0], reported in 1978 Cri.L.J. 1810 has held that when a charge-sheet is submitted without the reports of experts well within the period of 60/90 days from the date of arrest, merely because the report of the expert was not filed along with it, the accused is not entitled to be released on bail under section 167 (2) Cri.P.C. In the said case it was observed that :

> "The investigation on of an offence cannot be considered to be inconclusive merely for the hat the Investigating Officer, when submitted his report in terms of subsection (2).of section 173 to the Magistrate, a waited the reports of the experts or by some chance, either inadvertently or by design, he failed to append to the police report such documents or the statements under section 161 of the Code, > although these were available with him when he submitted the police report to the Magistrate. Therefore, when a charge-sheet is submitted without the reports of experts well within the period of 60 days from the date of arrest, the accused is not entitled to be released on bail under section 167(2).

>
> It was further observed that:
>
> "... Since a report to qualify itself to be a 'police report' is required to contain only such facts as are mentioned in sub-section (2) of section 173, so if once it j& found that the police report contained all those facts, then so far as the investigation is concerned the same has to be considered to have been completed. It is not incumbent on the Investigating Officer to reduce in writing the statements of the witnesses; he may merely include their names in the list of witnesses in support of the prosecution case when submitting the charge-sheet. Surely, if the charge-sheet thus submitted would be complete as enabling the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offence, there is no rational basis for holding that similar charge-sheet would not be a police report of the requisite kind if the statements of the witnesses although had been recorded under section 161(3), but either by design or by inadvertence are not appended with the report and section (2) of section 173 and from the evidence thus collected he is satisfied that the case deserves to be initiated against the ac* cused. And further even if the Investigating Officer had not received the report of the expert, so far as his job of collecting of the evidence is concerned, that is over the moment he despatches the material for the opinion of the expert and incidentally cites him as a witness if he relies on his testimony."

23. From the decisions referred to above, including that of the Supreme Court, it is clear that it is open to the Investigating Agency to file further documents even after the charge-sheet has been filed. In the present case, as stated earlier, samples in question were tested on the spot and on testing the report showed that the material was pseudo-ephedrine which is a controlled substance. When the charge-sheet was filed on 13.2.2008, it contained all necessary material as contemplated under section 173(5) of Cri.P.C. and the prosecution is not precluded from filing any additional material like the C.A. report at a later stage. Filing of C.A. report has not changed the nature of the offence or the charge-sheet. Thus, there was sufficient material to connect the accused with the offence and there was sufficient material before the Court on 13.2.2008 to take cognizance of the offence. In the present case even though the report of the C.A. was not filed, it cannot be said that an incomplete charge-sheet has been filed and hence the learned Magistrate could not have taken cognizance. Looking to all these facts, I am of the opinion that the applicant is not entitled to bail under the provisions of section 167(2) of Cri.P.C.

24. The second ground canvassed before me is that there is an amendment to the NDPS Act including section 37. In cases of offences under section 19 or 24 or 27-A and offences involving commercial quantity an accused would not be released on bail unless the Court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of such offence. The present applicant is facing prosecution for charges under sections 25-A and 29 read with 9-A of the N.D.P.S. Act and hence ob his case would not be covered un-- section 37 of the NDPS Act. Moreover, far as section 9-A which deals with controlled substance is concerned, there is no categorization of small quantity or commercial quantity. Therefore, it was contended by the learned Counsel for the applicant and in my view rightly so, that the concept of commercial quantity is applicable only to narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and not to controlled substances.

25. Section 9-A of the NDPS Act deals with the power to control and regulate controlled substance. "Controlled substance" means any substance which the Central Government may, having regard to the available information as to its possible use in the production or manufacture of narcotic drugs or psychotropic substances or to the provisions of any international Convention, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare to be a controlled substance. The Ministry of Finance Department of Revenue vide its notification dated 28th December, 1999 has declared pseudo-ephe-drine a controlled substance under the Act. The Central Government being of the opinion that having regard to the use of the con-" trolled substances in the production or manufacture of any narcotic drug or psychotropic substance, it is necessary or expedient so to do in the public interest, in exercise of powers conferred by section 9-A of the Act has made the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (Regulation of Controlled Substance) Order, 1993, which has come into force w.e.f. 15th April, 1993.

26. A controlled substance is not necessarily used only to make narcotic drugs or psychotropic substance, but, it is a versatile substance which can be used in manufacturing of various things including innocuous medicines by the pharmaceutical industry. As far as controlled substances are concerned, there is no provision for minimum term of imprisonment unlike sections 19, 24 and 27-A of the N.D.P.S. Act.

27. In the decision of this Court in the case of (Shreeniwas Bansidhar Somani Vs. The Intelligence Officer NCB and another)", dated 14th February, 2002 in Criminal Application No. 181 of 2002, 1250 kgs. of Acetic Anhydride came to be seized which is a controlled substance. Acetic Anhydride is used to manufacture brown-sugar i.e. heroin. In the said case, this Court held that Acetic Anhydride being a controlled substance, rigors of section 37 of NDPS Act would not be attracted and bail came to be granted to the accused in the said case. It is pointed out that the quantity of the controlled substance in the present case is lesser than the quantity in the case of Shreeniwas Bansidhar [supra) and hence the applicant is entitled to be released on bail.

28. There is extensive amendment introduced in N.D.P.S. Act. The offence falling under section 9-A r/w section 25-A is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to 10 years and also fine which also may extend to Rs. 1 lakh. There was an embargo on the powers of the Court in granting bail under the old provisions of section 37(1)(b) of the Act. From section 37(l)(b) the term "imprisonment of 5 years or more" has been deleted and substituted t>y "for offence under section 19 or section 24 or section 27-A and also for offences involving commercial quantity", the case of the applicant is no more covered by section 37(l)(b) of the Act. The concept of commercial quantity does not apply to controlled substance in view of the provisions relating to commercial quantity specially section 2(viia) and section 2(viid) of the Act and the notification issued by the Government specifying the small quantities and commercial quantities also shows that this concept is peculiar to Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances.

29. In view of the above legal position and the decision in the case of Shreeniwas Bansidhar [supra) Somani [supra), I am inclined to grant bail to the applicant.

30. The applicant-Rafael Palafox Garcia to be released on bail in the sum of Rs.

****

Cross Citation :2009 CRI. L. J. 160

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R. K. RASTOGI, J.

Rajpal & Anr. .....V/s.....State of U. P.

Criminal Appeal No. 5598 of 2008, D/-26-8-2008.

==========

Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974), S. 446 — Issuance of warrant for recovery of security bond — Accused was absconding — Forfeiture of bail bonds - Sureties producing accused before Court — Matter of recovery of amount of bail bond from sureties would require reconsideration — Order passed by trial Court for issuing the recovery warrant against surety is set aside.

==========

JUDGEMENT

ORDER:—This criminal appeal has been filed against the orders dated 20-12-2007, 8-4-2008 and 8-7-2008 passed by the learned Additional Sessions Judge, Xllth Fast Track Court No. 3, Mathura in Misc. case No. 1 of 2008 (State v. Rajpal and another).

2. The facts relevant for disposal of this appeal are that the accused appellants had stood sureties for the accused Maluka in ST. No. 180 of 2005 (State v. Maluka) pending before the above Court. The accused Maluka had absented and a report was received that he had been absconding. Notices were issued to the appellant sureties to produce the accused Maluka. These notices were personally served upon the appellants but they did not appear. Hence an order was passed on 20-12-07 for forfeiting the amount of bail bond and for issuing notices to the sureties under Section 446 Cr. P. C to show cause as to why the amount of 50,000/- should not be realised on them. The appellants did not appear in spite of service of this notice also. Hence an order was passed on 8-4-2008 for issuing warrant of recovery of the amount of surety bond which was of Rs. 50,000/-each against the appellants. Thereafter the appellants appeared in the Court and moved an application. A copy of this application has been filed as annexure 1 of the affidavit filed in the appeal in which it was stated that they were producing the accused Maluka before the court and he should be taken into custody. On this application, the Court passed an order on 24-6-08 for taking accused into custody and sending him to jail. He further ordered to put up the case on the date fixed for orders. The date 8-7-08 was fixed in the case. On that date an order was passed that the recovery warrant had not been received back after recovery, and so a letter be written to the SSP for recovery of the bail amount from the sureties. Aggrieved with that order the sureties have filed this appeal.

3. Heard learned counsel for the appellants and learned A.G.A. for the State. As the point involved in this appeal is legal one. I am deciding it on merits with the consent of the parties at the stage of admission.

4. It is to be seen that when the accused had not appeared, the amount of the surety bond was liable to be forfeited from the appellants and the Trial Court did not commit any illegality by passing an order on 20-12-07 for forfeiting the amount of bail bond. He also passed an order for issuing a notice to the sureties under Section 446 Cr. P. C to show cause as to why the amount of bail bond should not be recovered from them This notice was served upon the sureties a; is apparent from the order dated 8-4-08 by they did not appear. Hence the court right passed an order for issuing recovery war rant to recover the amount of bail bond furor the appellants. However, thereafter the appellants appeared before the court and produced the accused Maluka before the court and the accused was taken into custody or 24-6-2008. The Court also passed an order for putting up the case on the next date i.e., 8-7-2008. On that date the sureties did no1 appear in the Court, and since the recovery warrant had not been received back, the Court passed an order for issuing fresh recovery warrant. It is now to be seen that the appellants had produced the accused Maluka before the Court. Hence they should have filed an objection as provided under para -3 of Section 446 Cr. P.C., but they did not file any such objection.

5. However, since the appellants have produced the accused Maluka as is apparent from the order sheet of the Sessions Trial dated 24-6-2008, the matter of recovery of the amount of the bail bond requires reconsideration and the appeal deserves to be allowed to this extent only that the order passed by the Trial Court for issuing the recovery warrant against the appellant is set aside.

6. The appellants shall appear within a month from today before the court concerned and file their objection against the recovery proceedings as provided in para -3 of Section 446 (1) of Cr. P. C. and after providing reasonable opportunity of hearing to the parties the court shall pass suitable orders on that objection on merits.

7. It is further provided that if appellants fail to file any such objection during the time allowed by this Court, the court shall be at liberty to proceed with the recovery of amount of bail bond from the appellants in accordance with law.

8. The appeal is allowed to this extent.

Appeal allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2003 ALL MR (Cri) 2379 (S.C.)

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : N. SANTOSH HEGDE & B. P. SINGH, JJ.

Bharat Chaudhary & Anr.....Vs.....State of Bihar & Anr.

Criminal Appeal No.1250 of 2003 (arising out of S.L.P. (Cri.) No.2243 of 2003), 8th October, 2003.

Cri.P.C.Sec. 438 – Anitcipatory Bail can be granted even if charge-sheet is filed and cognizance is taken by the court.

The gravity of the offence, need for custodial interrogation, fact of filing of charge sheet etc. cannot by themselves be construed as a prohibition against the grant of anticipatory bail.

The object of S.438 is to prevent undue harassment of the accused persons by pre-trial arrest and detention. The fact, that a Court has either taken cognizance of the complaint or the investigating agency has filed a charge-sheet, would not by itself, prevent the concerned Courts from granting anticipatory bail in appropriate cases. The Courts i.e. the Court of Sessions, High Court or Apex Court has the necessary power vested in them to grant anticipatory bail in non-bailable offences under S.438 of the Crl. P. C. even when cognizance is taken or charge-sheet is filed provided the facts of the case require the Court to do so.

==========

CASES CITED:
PARA

Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh Vs. State of Maharashtra, 1996(1) SCC 667..... .4

VIKASH SINGH, YUNUS MALIK & PRASHANT CHAUDHARY, Advocates, for - Appellants.

B. B. SINGH, SHAHID AZAD & HIMANSHU SHEKHAR, Advocates, for - Respondents.

JUDGEMENT

1. Heard learned counsel for the parties.

2. Leave granted.

3. Appellants in this case are husband and wife and were accused by their daughter-in-law of offences punishable under Ss.504, 498-A and 406 of the Indian Penal Code and Ss.3/4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act. Their application, filed under S.438 of the Crl.P.C. for grant of anticipatory bail has been rejected by the High Court of Judicature at Patna. The said order is under challenge in this appeal. When this matter came up for preliminary hearing of 19th May, 2003, we issued notice to the respondents and also made an interim order not to arrest the appellants in the meantime. Today after hearing the parties on facts, we are inclined to grant anticipatory bail to the appellants.

4. Shri. B. B. Singh, learned counsel appearing for the respondent-State, however, raised a legal objection. His contention was that since the Court of first instance has taken cognizance of the offence in question, S.438 of the Crl.P.C. cannot be used for granting anticipatory bail even by this Court and the only remedy available to the appellants is to approach the trial Court and surrender, thereafter apply for regular bail under S.439 of the Crl.P.C. In support of this contention the learned counsel relied on the judgment of this Court in the case of Salauddin A bdulsamad Shaikh Vs. State of Maharashtra, (1996(1) SCC 667).

5. If the arguments of the learned counsel for the respondent-State is to be accepted then in each and every case, where a complaint is made of an non-bailable offence and cognizance is taken by the competent Court then every Court under the Code including this Court would be denuded of its power to grant anticipatory bail under S.438 of the Cr.P.C.

6. We do not think that was the intention of the legislature when it incorporated S.438 in the Cri.P.C. which reads thus :

> "When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence^ he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for direction under this section; and that Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest he shall be released on bail."

7. From the perusal of this part of S.438 of the Crl.P.C, we find no restriction in regard to exercise of this power in a suitable case either by the Court of Sessions, High Court or this Court even when cognizance is taken or charge-sheet is filed. The object of S.438 is to prevent undue harassment of the accused persons by pre-trial arrest and detention. The fact, that a Court has either taken cognizance of the complaint or the investigating agency has filed a charge-sheet, would not by itself, in our opinion, prevent the concerned Courts from granting anticipatory bail in appropriate cases. The gravity of the offence is an important factor to be taken into consideration while granting such anticipatory bail so also the need for custodial interrogation, but these are only factors that must be borne in mind by the concerned Courts while entertaining a petition for grant of anticipatory bail and the fact of taking cognizance or filing of charge-sheet cannot by themselves be construed as a prohibition against the grant of anticipatory bail. In our opinion, the Courts i.e. the Court of Sessions, High Court or this Court has the necessary power vested in them to grant anticipatory bail in non-bailable offences under S.438 of the Crl.P.C. even when cognizance is taken or charge-sheet is filed provided the facts of the case require the Court to do so.

8. The learned counsel, as stated above, has relied on the judgment of this Court referred to herein above. In that case i.e. namely Salauddin Abdulsamad Shaikh, a three-Judge Bench of this Court stated thus :

> "When the Court of Session or the High Court is granting anticipatory bail, it is granted at a stage when the investigation is incomplete and, therefore, it is not informed about the nature of evidence against the alleged offender. It is, therefore, necessary that such anticipatory bail orders should be of a limited duration only and ordinarily on the expiry of that duration or extended duration, the Court granting anticipatory bail should leave it to the regular Court to deal with the matter on an appreciation of evidence placed before it after the investigation has made progress or the charge-sheet is submitted.
>
> Ordinarily the Court granting anticipatory bail should not substitute itself for the original Court which is expected to deal with the offence. It is that Court which has then to consider whether, having regard to the material placed before it, the accused person is entitled to bail."

9. From a careful reading of th,e said judgment we do not find any restriction or absolute bar on the concerned Court granting anticipatory bail even in cases where either cognizance has been taken or a charge-sheet has been filed. This judgment only lays down a guideline that while considering the prima facie case against an accused the factum of cognizance having been taken and the laying of charge-sheet would be of some assistance for corning to the conclusion whether the claimant for an anticipatory bail is entitled for such bail or not. This is clear from the following observations of the Court in the above case :

> "It is, therefore, necessary that such anticipatory bail orders should be of limited duration only and ordinarily on the expiry of the duration or extended duration, Court, granting anticipatory bail, should leave it to the regular Court to deal with the matter on an appreciation of evidence placed before it after the investigation has made progress or charge-sheet is submitted."

10. From the above observations, we are unable to read any restriction on the power of the Courts empowered to grant anticipatory bail under S.438 of the Crl.P.C.

11. We respectfully agree with the observations of this Court in the said case that the duration of anticipatory bail should be normally limited till the trial Court has the necessary material before it to pass such orders and it thinks fit on the material available before it. That is only a restriction in regard to blanket anticipatory bail for an unspecified period. This judgment in our opinion does not support the extreme argument addressed on behalf of the learned counsel for the respondent-State that the Courts specified in S.438 of the Crl.P.C. are denuded of their power under the said section where either the cognizance is taken by the concerned Court or charge-sheet is filed before the appropriate Court. As stated above this would only amount to defeat the very object for which S.438 was introduced in the Crl.P.C. in the year 1973.

12. As observed above and having heard the learned counsel for the parties, we are of the considered opinion that the appellants in this case should be released on bail, in the event of their being arrested, on their furnishing a self-bond each for a sum of Rs.5,000/- and a surety to the like sum. The appellants shall abide by the conditions enumerated in S.438 of the Code.

****

Cross Citation :2008 ALL SCR 1480

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S. B. SINHA & P. P. NAOLEKAR, JJ.

Azar Sah ……V/s…..State of Bihar & Ors.

Criminal Appeal No.604 of 2008 4th April, 2008.

D. N. GOBURDHAN, Ms. PINKY ANAND, Ms. GEETA LUTHRA, for Appellant. NAGENDRA RAI, Sr. Advocate, M. K. CHOUDHARY, Ms. NAMITA CHOUDHARY, GOPAL SINGH, S. K. VERMA, for Respondents.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.437 – Bail – Murder - Long-lasting litigation between two groups - Complainant and family members wanted to take forcible possession - Cross-firing and attack followed - Several persons from both sides receiving injuries - It was not possible to say that respondent applicant had caused injuries to deceased and was the only person responsible for injuries resulting in death -Grant of bail to him justified.

==========

JUDGEMENT

1. Leave granted.

2. On 12.12.2005, an FIR was registered at Turkaulia P.S., District East Champaran, Bihar on the basis of a complaint lodged by the appellant Md. Azhar Sah, alleging that on that date he along with other villagers were ploughing the field at around 1.30 in the afternoon, which is the subject matter of litigation. Soon thereafter, the Sharma brothers including Sudhanshu Kumar Sharma came to the field holding guns in their hands. There were several other persons who came along with the Sharma brothers who were also armed with guns, country-made pistols and rifles. Soon after arriving at the spot, they used filthy language on the complainant. Loknath Sharma and Binda Rai ordered their men to shoot at the complainant party. Following this, Subodh Sharma fired at Ujair Sah and as a result of the injuries sustained he fell down. Further, Loknath Sharma fired at the complainant and Sudhanshu Kumar Sharma, respondent No.4, herein fired at Aseem Sah. Other Sharma brothers fired at different persons. At the end of the fight, the complainant saw the dead bodies of four persons of the complainant party and Ujair Sah was lying badly injured. He was later on taken to the hospital where he died. Five people were brutally killed.

3. Sudhanshu Kumar Sharma moved a bail application before the High Court which was granted by the High Court on the reasoning that although the other accused persons have been refused bail the case of respondent No.4 herein is different than that of persons who have been refused bail.

4. As per the High Court, several persons from both sides had received injuries. It appeared to the High Court, a case of free-fight wherein other persons from the Sharmas received injuries whereas respondent No.4 did not sustain any injury. It is also the case of respondent No.4 that he is a Bank Manager posted at Gopalganj and was not present at the spot when the incident occurred. Submission of the counsel for the respondent was in a way accepted on the basis of the orders of the Court indicating the accused persons to be in possession of the land at the relevant time and that the informant and his other family members were aggressors. There is also the version.of the eye-witnesses that the attack was made on Aseem Sah (since deceased) by different persons. On the cumulative assessment of these facts, the High Court was of the view that the case was made out by respondent No.4 for grant of bail and he was accordingly granted bail by the High Court. Aggrieved by the said order, the appellant-complainant is before this Court by way of this appeal by special leave.

5. As per the version of respondent No.4 from his counter affidavit, the property (agricultural land) where the incident took place was purchased by the Sharma family by registered sale deeds dated 7.8.1962, 6.8.1962, 4.10.1962 and 8.2.1963 whereby they were put in possession of the property and since then they have continuously been enjoying the property in their possession. There was a long-lasting litigation between the two groups regarding the possession and ownership of the property where the incident took place. It was the complainant and his family members who wanted to trespass over the property and take forcible possession over it. That is how the incident occurred. Several persons had assembled at the place of the incident and there was connective cross-firing and attack, as a result of which several persons sustained injuries from the side of Sharmas and Ajay Sharma, nephew of respondent No.4, was murdered and seven other persons received grievous injuries. In the statements recorded by the police of the eyewitnesses, one Mohd. Seraz said that it was Subodh Sharma who was assailant of Aseem Sah, whereas the witnesses Abdul Khair and Abdul Wahab gave names of other accused persons, namely, Shri. Ram Sharma and Kashi Rai as the assailants.

6. From the facts alleged by the appellant as well as respondent No.4, it appears that several persons from both sides received injuries and several persons are responsible for causing injuries to each other's side. Under the circumstances, if different persons have been alleged to have caused injuries to the deceased Aseem Sah, then on the face of it, it cannot be said with certainty at this stage that it was respondent No.4 who caused injuries to the deceased or was the only person who was responsible for causing injuries resulting in death of Aseem Sah.

7. In overall view of the matter, we do not find any good or sufficient reason to take a different view in the case. The appeal is, accordingly, dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

****

Cross Citation :1987-Cri.L.J.-0-1100 , 1987-MPL.J.-0-380

HIGH COURT OF MADHYA PRADESH

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.K.VERMA, J

Mithun …..Vs….State of M.P.

Criminal Misc.Case 1378 Of 1986 Nov 27,1986

==========

Bail – Murder case – oppose of bail application by state- Held- whenever the state opposes an application for grant of bil to an under trial prisoner it has to ensure a speedy trial – failure to take appropriate steps by state accused is entitled to get bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1.) Applicant Mithun alias Shamshad was arrested by the Bahodapur police on or about 10-6-1985 in crime No. 135/85 registered initially under S.307/34 I.P.C. on 6-6-1985 in respect of a transaction in which one Madan @ Pappoo had received injuries from others. Pappoo died from the injuries on 12-6-1985. The case was converted into one under S.302 I.P.C.

(2.) The challan was filed in the month of Sept. '85. The charge of murder was framed on 31-10-1985. Out of a list of 20 prosecution witnesses so far only six have been examined. In criminal misc. case No. 1214/86 decided on 17-10-1986. This Court rejected there preceding bail application with the following observations :-

"From the copies of the order-sheets of the trial Judge, right from 27-12-1985 to 26-8-1986, and also the statement of both the counsel that the case now stands adjourned to 21-10-1986 for recording of prosecution evidence. It is clear that the time from 27-12-1985 till the date of the bail application, was consumed by lack of system in the process of the trial and want of care in securing the attendance of witnesses on the part of the Presiding Judge, the Public Prosecutor and also by the Police Officers. For example, so far only 5 witnesses out of a list of 22 witnesses, have been examined. The learned Judge and the prosecution seem to think that the remaining witnesses would be examined in one day, namely 21-10-1986. There is, however, still an opportunity to the prosecution to obtain dates for day to day trial in the case, if they had their heart set in the matter. I hope and expect that they have..."

(3.) Now, what happened in the sequel is as follows : - On 21-10-1986 no prosecution witnesses were in attendance. On 22-10-1986 one Rambabu's cross-examination was concluded. Then P.W.7 Kanhaiya was examined and discharged. A reference was made to 4 other witnesses. It was said that one Bodharam had died while Anilkumar and Kalloo and one Gita were absent. It was also observed that the summonses issued for service on Anilkumar and Kalloo had not been received back. The learned Public Prosecutor's prayer to produce these witnesses on the next working day was granted. On 23-10-1986 Gita was examined and discharged, but, Anil and Kalloo remained absent. They were ordered to be summoned, and the case was adjourned to 24-10-1986 for remaining witnesses but without having ordered them to be summoned. On 24-10-1986 prosecution witnesses were absent. The Court ordered the prosecutor to keep witnesses in attendance or get them summoned. The case was adjourned to 28-10-1986. The applicant's learned counsel states that on 28-10-1986 no prosecution witnesses were examined. On 29-10-1986 there were no prosecution witnesses. The case was adjourned to 14-11-1986, when only Head Constable Onkarnath Pandey was in attendance who could not be examined in the absence of some record. What was that record is not disclosed in the order sheet. Other witnesses were absent. The Prosecutor prayed for time and the learned trial Judge gave it, and the case now stands adjourned to 29-11-1986. The order sheet does not show the number and the names of the witnesses against whom warrants of arrest bailable in the sum of Rs. 50/- were to be issued.

(4.) The applicant's learned counsel's plea for grant of bail is that there has been no serious attempt at all on behalf of the prosecution and the Trial Court for a speedy trial and, as such, if what has happened so far is any indication, the applicant is surely going to languish for quite some time in jail for no fault of his so far as the tardiness of the trial is concerned, at any rate after 17-10-1986.

(5.) The learned Govt. Advocate says that there is a chance that the remaining witnesses may come and may be examined. What has happened so far does not show that the prosecution and the Trial Court have been mindful to any meaningful degree about the observations made by this Court on 17-10-1986. I may observe - as I have had occasion to say on a few occasions - whenever the State opposes an application for grant of bail to an under-trial prisoner, during trial it has a corresponding liability to ensure a speedy trial. What is more, the trial Judge has also a similar duty to expedite such a trial from day to day, and to take a personal supervisory interest in the matter of issue of summonses and warrants and fixation of dates of hearing. I am afraid the hope and expectation expressed by this Court on 17-10-1986 seemingly did not activate the prosecution and the Trial Court.

(6.) Taking al Cross Citation :l these circumstances into consideration, I am of the view that the change in circumstances since 17-10-1986 makes it clear that any further continuance of the applicant as an under-trial prisoner would amount to a sort of custodial punishment for him. I allow the bail application.

(7.) The applicant be released on a personal bond of Rs. 10,000/- with one surety in the like amount to the satisfaction of the C.J.M. Gwalior for his appearance in the trial on the dates now fixed and on other dates.

(8.) Certified copy on payment of usual charges be furnished to the counsel for the applicant during the course of the day. Application allowed.

Cross Citation :2007 (1) CRJ 635

DELHI HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S. N. AGGARWAL, J

J.K. Jayram & Anr. ….. V/s ….. State

Bail Application No. 3008-09 of 2006 Decided on 30.8.2006 ..

==========

Indian Penal Code, 1860— Section 120-B/406/409/420/468/ 471—Anticipatory Bail—Facts of purely civil nature-—Business transaction— Co-accused already on bail;— Held—Where petitioner have done no criminal wrong who had roots in the society - There is no apprehension of absconding—Petitioner cannot be denied of bail – Anticipatory bail granted.

==========

Case Referred :

1. G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., 2000 (2) SCC 636

Counsel :

Mr. Deepak A. Masih with Mr. Anish Shrestha for Petitioner

Mr. Sunil Sharma, APR for State Mr. Lalit Kumar for Complainant

JUDGEMENT

1. Mr. Sunil Sharma, APP for the State, accepts notice of this application on behalf of the respondent. Mr. Lalit Kumar, Advocate is also present on behalf of the complainant.

2. This bail application is opposed by the learned APP for the State. He has opposed this bail application on the ground that the amount of alleged cheating involved in this case is quite huge and that other C&F Agents appointed by the petitioners have also filed similar complaints against him in the State of Gujrat, Kerala and West Bengal.

3. The facts relevant for the decision of this bail application are as follows :—

The petitioners are accused of offences under Section 120B/4Q6/ 409/420/467/468/471 IPC in case registered against them vide FIR No. 736/2005 with Police Station Punjabi Bagh. The Petitioned' No. 1. is the Chairman of a company called India Household and Health Care Ltd. -(hereinafter referred as IHHL) which was doing the business of importing the health care and household goods of South Korean company named LG House Hold and Health Care Ltd. (hereinafter referred as M/s LGHHL) into India. The Petitioner No.2 is the wife of the Petitioner No.l and a Director of the above named company called IHHL which has been accused by the complainant -for cheating and defrauding.

4. The complainant M/s Akshatha Services Pvt. Ltd. was appointed as Clearing & Forwarding Agent (C&F Agent) by the IHHL. when the IHHL was at the advance stage of discussion to acquire exclusive marketing rights for Indian territory for the Fast Moving Corir sumer Products (FMCG) with the above named South Korean company LGHHL. An agreement dated 01.06.2004 between IHHL and the complainant company is Annexure A-l at Page 18 of the paper book.

5. On Q.I. 11.2003, the LGHHL had entered into a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), annexed as Annexure A-2 at page 58 of the paper book. As per the terms of the MOU, the LGHHL had appointed IHHL as its sole representative, importer and licensee for the import, promotion, sale and marketing of the whole range of Fast Moving Consumer Goods of LGHHL. The said MOU contemplated the achievement of sale of products of LGHHL by 'IHHL worth 4.5 million USD in two years and had an automatic renewal clause based on the performance. The LGHHL had acted upon the MOU and exported its products to India from their factories in Korea, Vietnam. All the products were emblazoned with LG logo along with the name of IHHL printed as sole licensee.

6. In order to promote the business, IHHL had appointed several Clearing & Forwarding Agents. The complainant on whose complaint the present FIR was registered against the petitioners and others is one of such C&F Agents. In continuation of the MOU, the LGHHL had executed a License Agreement with the IHHL on 08.05.2004 crystallizing the rights and liabilities of the parlies. A copy of the said License Agreement is at pages 67 to 90 of the'paper book.

7. It is contended.that pursuant to the aforementioned MOU and the License Agreement, the IHHL had invested huge amount 'to the tune of Rs.500 Crores on promotion, advertisement, creation of the network of distributors and established 23 ware-houses across the India, 4 Regional Headquarters, one Corporate Office, appointed 23 major C&F Agents and also created other nation wise infrastructure. It is further contended that under the MOU, the IHHL had given a purchase commitment of 2 million USD for the year 2004-05 and 2.5 million USD for the year 2005-06. However the IHHL had achieved the entire target of 4.5 million USD in just 7-8 months and had purchased products worth 4.5 million USD from LGHHL by August, 2004. The contention of the counsel for the petitioner is that the achievement of the target by .the IHHL in such a short time had unearthed the potential of the Indian Market and it has .polluted the minds of the officials of LGHHL and on that count LGHHL allegedly started to distant itself from IHHL since September, 2004 onwards, the LGHHL had instructed the IHHL to put on hold the business on the pretext that a serious internal dispute regarding the use of LG logo had arisen in the company and further instructed to put on hold the business until the confusion pertaining to the use of LG logo was resolved within the LG Company. The LGHHL thereafter terminated all business relations with IHHL through a legal notice dated 05.02.2005 sent to IHHL. In the aforesaid notice the stand taken by LGHHL was that the documents viz. the MOD dated 01.il.2003 and the License Agreement dated 08.05.2004 are null and void as the same'were executed on behalf of LGHHL by working level officers who were junior in rank to the Management, The counsel for petitioner has contended that the LGHHL official who had signed the contract with IHHL had also signed the contract with many other countries also. He has referred to page 118-A to 118-1 of the paper book (Annexure-A-6-A) to show the copy of one such Agreement.

8. The learned counsel for the petitioners has argued that the petitioners and the Management of IHHL had done all that was possible to sort out the problem but on account of unilateral termination of the contract of IHHL by LGHHL, the IHHL ran into huge losses on account of-unexpected and unforeseen situation created by LGHHL. It is submitted that the IHHL has filed an arbitration agreement before the Supreme Court and the dispute arising out of unilateral termination of its contract by LGHHL is presently pending in the Supreme Court where a prayer has been made for referring the same to the panel of arbitrators. The counsel has further contended that the LGHHL has colluded with the complainant in order to defeat and circumvent the claim of the IHHL for the unfortunate and most arbitrary termination of the contractual relationship with IHHL by the LGHHL. The FIR in question registered against the petitioners is alleged to be the outcome of that collusion between LGHHL and the complainant company. The counsel for the complainant has contended that the complainant company was induced by IHHL to make a security deposit of Rs. 1.5 crores on the pretext that the complainant was going to be appointed as C&F Agent for LG Company. This contention is denied by the learned counsel for the petitioners. At this stage, the learned APP for the State has contended that the goods supplied by M/s IHHL to the complainant company were of substandard quality and the complainant had asked IHHL to take it back and to return the security deposit of the complainant.' It is submitted that neither the goods were taken back by IHHL nor the security amount of the complainant was refunded to it.

9. The learned counsel for the petitioners has also argued that Vijay R. Singh, Managing Director of IHHL was arrested and he was admitted to regular bail by the Court of Shri CXP. Gupta, ASJ, Rohini, Delhi. In the bail order of petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh, it is mentioned that the dispute between the parties seems to be of civil nature. It is also mentioned in the bail order pertaining to Vijay R. Singh that the genuineness of the documents by and between LGHHL and IHHL is not in dispute, rather the I;O. confirms having verified the same. The bail order in relation to petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh is at pages 152-153 of the paper book. The learned counsel for the petitioners has urged that the petitioners are also entitled to-be admitted to bail applying the principle of parity as their co-accused Vijay R. Singh has already been admitted to bail by the Sessions Court.

10. The learned APP for the State has disputed the parity claimed by the petitioners. He has submitted that the petitioners' co-accused Vijay R. Singh was granted bail by the Sessions Court after he remained in custody for 45 days. According to him since the petitioners are asking for anticipatory bail, they cannot claim parity with their co-accused Vijay R. Singh. The learned APP has also contended that the custodial presence of the petitioners is required for making recovery of account books and other related documents of the company M/s IHHL from them. He has also submitted that the petitioners' go-accused Vijay R. Singh has stated in his disclosure statement that the petitioner No.l alone can tell where security deposit of the complainant worth Rs. 1.5 crores has gone and for that purpose also the custodial presence of the petitioner No.l is required. The learned APP has further submitted that the petitioner No.l despite orders of the Court in his first anticipatory bail application has not co-operated in the investigation. He has said that except for once the petitioner No.l did not appear before the I.O. for his interrogation. This submission of the learned APP implies that the petitioner No.l had attended the inquiry into the case before the I.O. at least on one occasion. The contention of the learned APP that custodial presence of petitioner No.l is required for making recovery of the account books and other related documents of IHHL does not hold any water. I am of the view that if the I.O. could not recover the account books of IHHL from the Managing Director of the said company though he remained in police custody for five days, how could recovery of account books be made from the petitioner No.l.

11. In G. Sagar Suri v. State of U.P., 2000 (2} SCO 636,.the Supreme Court has observed as under:

"It is to be seen if a matter, which is essentially of civil nature, has been given a cloak of criminal offence, criminal proceedings are not a short cut of other remedies available in law. Before issuing process a criminal court has to exercise a great deal of caution, for the accused it is a serious matter. This Court has laid certain principles on the basis of which High Court is to exercise its jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code. Jurisdiction under this Section has to be exercised to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice."

12. In Mis. Indian Oil Corporation v, M/s. NEPC India Ltd. & Qrs. (Criminal Appeal No. 834/2002 decided on 20.7.2006), the Supreme Court has observed that there is a growing tendency in the business circles to convert purely civil disputes into criminal cases on account of a prevalent impression that civil law remedies are time consuming and do not adequately protect th£ interest of lenders/creditors.

13. The ratio of law'laid down by the Supreme Court in the aforementioned two judgments squarely applies to the facts of the present case. In this case also, it prima-facie appears that the complainant company has filed the FIR in question against the petitioners to convert a business dispute of purely civil nature into a criminal case. I am further of the view that in case the petitioners have done any criminal wrong for which FIR in question is registered against them, they can be punished as per law after the trial against them is over. Both the petitioners seeking their anticipatory bail in the present case have roots in the society. There fe no apprehension of their absconding the trial. In my view, the .petitioners cannot be denied bail particularly when their co-accused Vijay R. Singh has already been admitted to bail.

14. In view of the above and having regard to all the facts and circumstances of the case, the petitioners are admitted to anticipatory bail on their executing bail bonds in the sum of Rs.5 lacs each with two sureties each in the like amount to the satisfaction of the concerned Arresting Officer and subject to the further condition that they shall not leave the country without prior permission of the Court. The petitioners are directed that they shall join the investigation as and when called by the I.O.

15. Order dasti to both sides.

****

Cross Citation :2005 (6) CRJ 443

DELHI HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : BADAR DURREZ AHMED, J.

Mohd. Afroj @ Ajay .....V/s ..... NCT Of Delhi

Bail Application No. 1416 of 2006 Decided on 18.5.2006

==========

Indian Penal Code, i860—Section 363/366/342/506 and 376—Bail—Petitioner is in custody—Victim already examined—Victim has married to some one else and has a child therefrom—Witnesses also examined—Held—No question arises to tempering the evidence—Accused entitled to bail.

==========

Counsel :

Mr. S. K. Ral for Petitioner Ms. Richa Kapoor for State

JUDGEMENT

ORDER

1. The learned counsel for the petitioner has submitted that the prosecutrix has already been examined. He submitted that as per the ossification report, the age of the prosecutrix has been given between 16.4 years to 19 years. In other words, the Radiologist has fixed the minimum age of the girl to be 16.4 years which may extend upto 19 years. As a result, the prosecutrix would not be less than 16 years of age and her consent would be material. He submits that even as per the FIR, it would appear as if the prosecutrix fiad consented to the relationship. He further submits that, in any event, now the prosecutrix has been examined and all the public witnesses have been examined and only police witnesses remain to be examined. He requested that the petitioner be released on bail, particularly, because he wants to setup his case for defence.

2. The learned counsel for the State opposed the grant of bail on the ground that the prosecutrix has supported the prosecution case in her statement as PW4. Without going into the merits of the matter, I note that thel petitoiner has already been in custody since 02.02.2005, the prosecutrix hajj already been examined and, therefore, there is no question of the petitioner trying to influence the prosecutrix. It is also informed that the prosecutrix has since been married to somebody else and also has a child. The public witnesses have also been exationer tampering with the evidence or Influencing any of the witnesses. Accordingly, I direct that the petitioner be released on bail on furnishing a personal bond in the sumof Bs. 10.00Q/—witiit two localstireties of the like amount to the satisfaction of the concerned court; The petitioner shall riot make any attempt direct or indirect to contact the prosecutrix.

3. This batt application stands disposed of. Dasti.

****

Cross Citation :2003-DRJ-70-327 ,

HIGH COURT OF DELHI

Hon'ble Judge(s) : S.K.Agarwal J.

Shameet Mukherjee …..Vs….. C.B.I.

Crl. M. (M) 2471 Of 2003 Sep 05,2003

==========

Cr. P.C. – Section 439 – Accused was a Judge of High Court – Arrested under section 120 – B, IPC r/w sec. 7,8,11,12,13 (1) of prevention of corruption Act.- Charges of misuse of power for passing favourable order – Petitioner/accused is having relationship with another accused – Petitioner used to enjoy his hospitality in terms of wine and women – 12 days police remand granted but nothing incriminating was found – Petitioner's wife is ill – Held petitioner entitled to be released on bail.

==========

JUDGEMENT

(1) . By this petition under Sections 439 read with Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (for short 'Cr.P.C.')/ petitioner, who was a former judge of this Court, is seeking bail in the case R.C. No. 3(A)/2003/ACU- X/CBI/AC-III, New Delhi under Sections 120-B, IPC, read with Sections 7, 8, 11 and 12 read with Sections 13(2) and 13(1) of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 (hereinafter'POC Act').

(2) . CBI has filed reply opposing the petition and also praying for cancellation of interim bail granted to the petitioner vide order dated 5.5.2003 passed in Crl. M. (M) No. 1817/2003. On 4.6.2003 Hon'ble Mr. Justice B.A. Khan, while issuing notice, extended the interim bail till further orders, observing:

"Meanwhile, he is asking for extension of interim bail granted to him by order dated 5.5.2003 on medical grounds of his wife and on other attendant circumstances which is to expire on 12.6.2003. The basis of his application remains the same though he asserts that condition of his wife Buffering from advance stage of Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis disease was deteriorating and that she had became totally paralysed by now. It is also submitted that due to advanced stagesof the progression disease, her lung function had also dropped requiring outside machine assisted respiratory support which could be operated by petitioner or his son who had left for Kolkata on 27.5.2003. It is also averred that petitioner's problems had multiplied due to his mother's illness, shifting of his house and refusal of specialist doctors of Mata Chanan Devi Hospital to attend to his wife. Considering all this and also that petitioner had remained in police custody for 12 days and had co-operated with the investigation, interim bail granted to him shall stand extended after 12.06.2003 till further orders from the court on his furnishing personal bond of Rs. 50,000/- with one surety in the like amount to the satisfaction of trial court/duty Magistrate. List on 15.7.2003."

(3) . The case of the prosecution, in brief, is as follows: One Dharamvir Khattar (for short 'DVK'), a businessman, was having close relationship with petitioner and Subhash Sharma, IAS, vice-chairman, Delhi Development Authority (for short 'VC-DDA'); petitioner used to enjoy his hospitality in terms of wine and women and DVK used to act as a conduit for the parties, who wanted their cases pending in petitioner's court to be settled favourably. Official record of petitioner's court used to be taken to the offices of DVK at Mathura Road and Khel Gaon. On 26.3.2003 CBI caught Ashok Kapur, P.S. to former VC-DDA (under suspension) when he was taking out files from the office of DVK at Mathura Road, including the files of the cases in petitioner's court and six page unsigned corrected draft of the order dated 20.02.2003, passed by the petitioner in the suit Azad Singh v. DDA and Ors., (No. 1493/2000) (hereinafter 'the order in question'). Facts leading to the filing of this suit are : that in 1993 DDA decided to widen Aruna Asaf Ali Road, connecting outer ring road and the Mehrauli-Mahilpur Road, to 30 meters; in 1995, it was decided to increase its width to 45 meters. The work was entrusted to Public Works Department (PWD). A strip of land passing through village Kishangarh, could not be handed over to PWD as there were several encroachments. The demolition of unauthorised structures could not be carried because of injunction orders passed by different courts in favour of the affected parties. Two such suits were pending in the Delhi High Court (i) Suit No. 236/2000 titled Simla Choudhury v. DDA and Ors., wherein Hon'ble Mr. Justice J.D. Kapoor vide order dated 1.2.2003 had restrained the defendant DDA from dispossessing the plaintiff without due process of law and (ii) Suit No. 1493/2000 titled Azad Singh v. DDA and Ore., wherein vide order dated 30.9.2002, passed by the petitioner, parties were directed to maintain status quo, as regards possession and construction in relation to the suit property. Vinod Khatri was interested in both these suits. He approached DVK through Mr. Jagdish Chandra, then Director (Lands), DDA for help.) DVK, in turn, approached the petitioner and Vice-Chairman, DDA and they agreed to help by directing the SDM of area for demarcation showing actual possession of the land in village Kishangarh, adjacent to Aruna Asaf Ali Road and by changing the lawyer who was representing these cases on behalf of DDA. It is alleged that as per plan, petitioner passed the order dated 20.2.2003, but did not sign the order immediately. The draft order was recovered on 26.3.2003 by the CBI from Ashok Kapur, as noted above. Prosecution in support of its case has placed reliance on the tape recorded conversation amongst the accused persons; draft copy of the unsigned order dated 20.2.2003; and the statements of the witnesses, recorded during the investigation.

(4) . Learned counsel for the parties were heard at length. Shri A.K. Dutt, learned counsel for the CBI, opposed the bail and referred to the various statements. "Synopsis of Evidence" collected was also filed. Learned counsel for the petitioner, refusing the allegations, argued to the contrary, inter alia, submitting that order dated 20.2.2003, passed in Suit No. 1493/2000 did not confer any right, title or interest on the plaintiff therein and, therefore, it could not be termed as a fruit of conspiracy, as claimed by CBI. After hearing the arguments, on 3.9.2003 the order was reserved. On 5.9.2003, learned standing counsel for CBI mentioned the matter and also filed supplementary affidavit of the Investigating Officer, seeking to withdraw the "Synopsis of Evidence" filed by them, stating, "subsequently, in the course of hearing the respondent filed Synopsis of Evidence, which is not pressed at this stage". It was also submitted that medical condition of petitioner's wife continued to be the same, therefore, CBI does not oppose the bail. In view of this statement, it is not necessary to deal with other submissions made by learned counsel for the parties and the bail is to be confirmed.

(5) . Even on merits, as per the settled law, tape recorded conversation, if proved to be genuine and not tampered with, at best constitutes a corroborative piece of evidence, as held by Supreme Court in Mahabir Prasad v. Surender Kumar, 1982 SC 1043. There is no charge that petitioner had assets disproportionate to the known source of his income. Nothing incriminating was found from his possession or at his instance, during the 12 days police remand, to support the charge. The case was registered on 29.4.2003 and investigation is still in progress; other accused persons, namely, Subhash Sharma, Vinod Khatri and Ashok Kapur, are already on regular bail. The material collected by CBI during investigation would constitute what offence can be considered only after investigation is complete and challan filed. Needless to say that conduct involving moral violations by itself cannot constitute a proof for an offence. For any moral deviation a person may suffer social condemnation. Even a grossly vicious conduct, when alleged to be an offence, has to be established in accordance with the procedure established by law.

(6) . For the foregoing reasons, order dated 4.6.2003, granting interim bail to the petitioner, is confirmed. Petitioner shall remain on bail pending final disposal of the case, on his furnishing personal bond in the sum of Rs. 50,000/- with one surety in the like amount to the satisfaction of the trial court. Bail bond be executed within two weeks.

(7) . Any observation made in this order would not affect the merits of the case during trial. Petition stands disposed of. Order dasti.

****

Cross Citation : 2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 415 (RAJ.)

RAJASTHAN HIGH COURT (JAIPUR)

Hon'ble Judge(s) : RAGHUVENDRA S. RATHORE, J

Chandra Shekhar …..V/s…..State of Rajasthan

S. B. Criminal Misc. Bail Appln No. 1601 of 2011 - Decided On 23/03/2011

==========

Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974) - S. 439 Bail -Allegation of causing bomb explosion against petitioner – On consideration of over all facts and circumstances of case as well as evidence on record, - It will be proper to release petitioner on bail without going in to merits of controversy (Para 10)

==========

JUDGEMENT

ORDER:- Heard the learned counsel for the parties.

2. The case of the prosecution is that a bomb exploded in the area falling within Police Station, Dargah, Ajmer on 11.10.2007 at about 6.00 pm. Thereafter on a report lodged by one Syed Sarwar Chisti, a resident of Khadim Mohalla, Ajmer, the investigation commenced. From the place of incident an unclaimed bag, containing an unexploded bomb, was recovered by the investigation agency. Further, it is disclosed from the investigation that from the bombs (one exploded and another unexploded), two simcards were recovered out of which one was damaged and two mobile phones are said to have been used as timer devices. The number of the damaged simcard, recovered from the exploded bomb, was 89915220000005190837 and the mobile number was 9931304642. The said simcard was that of AIRTEL services in Bihar and Jharkhand and was activated on 02.06.2006. The holder of the simcard was Babulal Yadav son of Shri Ramphar Yadav, resident of House No.210, Village Kangoi, Post Mihijam, District Dumka. Number of the mobile which was used as timer device for the unexploded bomb was 97321-10207. The simcard was that of VODAFONE services in West Bengal. The holder of the said simcard was Babu Lai Yadav son of Shri Manohar Yadav, resident of Samdhi Road, Roop Narayanpur, Asansol, Vardhman. It is also revealed from the investigation that in all 11 simcards were purchased between the period 24.05.2006 to 26.11.2006, on the basis of fabricated voter I.D. Cards and driving licences.

3. During the course of interrogation, Prasad Shrikant Purohit is said to have stated that on 29.12.2007 Swami Aseemanand had told him on phone that one of his close associate Sunil Joshi had been murdered at Devas (Madhya Pradesh) because he had got the bomb exploded at Ajmer. Another accused Devendra Gupta is said to have stated, during interrogation, that late Sunil Joshi had worked for the bomb blast at Ajmer and he alongwith Sandeep Dange, Ramji Kalsangra and Lokesh Sharma were with him. Further, it was revealed that the arrangement for the explosive was made by Lokesh Sharma alongwith Sunil Joshi. Lokesh Sharma was arrested on 15.05.2010 and he had given the information about the place from where the explosive was purchased and also other places where the planning was made and the bombs were prepared. According to Lokesh Sharma, the time device used in the form of mobile phone was purchased from Faridabad. Ishant Chawla was the salesman of L.E.C. Communications, Faridabad and he sold two mobile sets to Lokesh Sharma on 24.04.2007.

4. As per the investigation, the entire planning and steps for its execution was done by late Sunil Joshi @ Manoj Kumar since the month of October, 2005 alongwith other associates. On the basis of fabricated voter I.D. card, one simcards with mobile number 9931310168 and a Nokia 2600 Mobile was purchased on 24.05.2006 from Sarawagi Communication, Jamtada, Another Simcard having mobile number 9931304642 was purchased on 31.05.2006 in the name of Babu Lai Yadav, on the basis of fabricated voter I.D. Card, from the shop being run hv Raiesh Kumar in the name of Mobile Care at Bus Stand, Dumka (Jharkhand). Another simcard with mobile phone number 9732110207 was purchased in the name of Babu Lai Yadav on the basis of fabricated driving licence from Sargam Audio Vision, Station Road, Chitranjan (West Bengal). On arrest of Devendra Gupta, driving licences of West Bengal were recovered from him. The other driving licence on the basis of fabricated ration card and school transfer certificate, in the name of late Sunil Joshi @ Manoj Kumar, was also got prepared by him. After receiving the simcards and mobile phones, the accused Sandeep Dange, Ramji Kalsnagra and Sunil Joshi are said to have prepared the bombs and used them as timer device. On 11.10.2007, soon after the incident, Sunil Joshi had informed Bharat Bhai Rateshwar, resident of Balsad (Gujrat) on mobile phone that bomb blast had taken place at Ajmer.

5. On having come to know, during the course of investigation, that the mobile phones were functioning then their location was traced so as to seize them for the purpose of evidence. On 19.10.2009, the investigation team reached Sujalpur (M.P.) and recovered three mobile phones from the petitioner, Ravindra Patidar and Santosh Patidar, after preparing the seizure memos. Further it had come in the investigation that four mobile phones were received by the accused Chandra Shekhar in the year 2008 from co-accused Sandeep Dange who had kept the mobiles in an atechi and given it to Goverdhan Singh, a resident of Chakrond, District Shajapur (M.P.) and Harinarayan Patidar, as per their statements under Section 164 Cr.P.C. recorded on 23.09.2010 for handing over the same to the petitioner. One mobile phone was then used by the accused petitioner himself and the other three were handed over to Vishnu Patidar, a resident of Khardon Kalan who had destroyed one mobile which was not working.

6. On conclusion of the investigation, challan was filed on 20.10.2010 against six persons for various offences under the Indian Penal Code, The Explosive Substance Act, 1908 and The Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967.

7. It has been submitted by the counsel for the petitioner that the accused petitioner had no concern with the commission of crime and there is no evidence against him in the charge sheet, in respect of the incident of bomb explosion at Ajmer on 11.10.2007. Further, he has submitted that the accused petitioner was neither involved, in any manner, prior to the incident which took place on 11.10.2007, nor he was a member of the group which had planned for bomb explosion or in furtherance of it took steps for collecting the explosive, preparing the bomb, fabricating the I.D. cards and other documents for the purchase of simcard/ mobile phones. According to him, even if the evidence on record is taken as it is, the allegation against the petitioner at the most can be said to be in respect of offence under Sections 201 or 202 IPC. Therefore, he has submitted that the petitioner is in jail since 01.05.2010 and taking into consideration the evidence collected during investigation which has already been concluded, he may now be enlarged on bail.

8. On the other hand, learned Public Prosecutor has strongly opposed the bail application. He has submitted that there is evidence on record, collected during the course of investigation, so as to connect the petitioner with the crime. Further, he has submitted that the mobile phone which was found in possession of the petitioner, on 19.10.2009, was one of those which was used at the time of incident on 11.10.2007. He has also submitted that it has come on record, at later point of time, that the accused petitioner had asked Vishnu Patidar that in case he is asked about the mobiles then he should take the name of Pankaj Patidar. Thus, he has submitted that taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of the case, the bail application of the accused petitioner be dismissed by this Court.

9. In a recent judgment passed by the Hon'bleSupreme Court in the case of State of Kerala vs. Raneef, (2011) 1 SCC 784, decided on 03.01.2011, the order of Kerala High Court passed on 17.09.2010, granting bail to the respondent Dr. Raneef, was upheld and the SLP filed by State of Kerala was dismissed. In the said case, the respondent gave medical aid to one of the wounded accused in pursuance of a previous plan that if and when any of the assailants got injured in the attack on Professor Jacob then immediate medical treatment would be given by the respondent. The respondent had stitched the back of an assailant. The respondent, alongwith other accused was a member of Popular Front of India, a Muslim organisation, and was also the head of its medical committee. Certain documents, CDs, mobile phone, books, etc. including a book called a€<AJehada€™ were allegedly seized from his house and car. The Hon'bleSupreme Court held that the case of the respondent Dr. Raneef was different from those who were the alleged assailants. There was no allegation that the respondent was one of the assailants. Further, it was observed, in para 12 (2), that prima facie the only offence that can be levelled against the respondent (therein) is that under Section 202 IPC, that is, of omitting to give information of the crime to the police, and this offence has also to be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Section 202 is a bailable offence. Accordingly, the appeal filed by the State of Kerala was dismissed by the Hon'bleApex Court.

10. On having carefully considered the overall facts and circumstances of the case as well as the evidence on record filed alongwith the challan, particularly about the persons involved in planning, preparation and commission of the crime which had taken place by way of bomb explosion on 11.10.2007 at Ajmer and without expressing any opinion on the merits of the case, I deem it just and proper to enlarge the petitioner on bail.

11. Consequently, the bail application is allowed and it is ordered that the accused-petitioner Chandra Shekhar S/o Shri Laxmi Narayan Leve in F.I.R. No.85/2007, registered at Police Station Dargah, Ajmer, shall be released on bail; provided he furnishes a personal bond of Rs. 1,00,0007- and two surety bonds of Rs. 50,0007- each to the satisfaction of the learned trial court with the stipulation to appear before that Court on all dates of hearing and as and when called upon to do so.

Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2011 CRI. L. J. (NOC) 430 (MAD.)

MADRAS HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K. N. BASHA J.

Jayalakshmi & Ors. ……V/s ….. State of Tamil Nadu.

Crl. O.P. No. 3270 of 2011 - Decided On 08/02/2011

==========

Criminal P. C. (2 of 1974) - S. 439 - Bail- Case of abetment of suicide - Allegation in complaint that petitioners teachers searched victim by stripping her clothes for theft of cash and as a result, she had committed suicide by hanging herself at her residence - Allegation of searching victim by stripping her clothes not mentioned in suicidal note - Petitioners are ladies and they are very much available in the college premises and there is no allegation that they are attempting to evade the due process of law by absconding or fleeing from justice – They entitled to bail. (Paras 19,22)

==========

JUDGEMENT

ORDER :- The petitioners, who have been arrayed as Al to A4, were arrested on 2.2.2011 for the offence punishable under Section 306IPC in Cr.No.265/2011 on the file of the respondent police have come forward with this petition, seeking for the relief of bail.

2. Mr.K.S.Dinakaran, learned Senior Counsel appearing for the petitioners submitted that the 1st petitioner is the Professor and Head of the Department of BCS in Dr.MGR Janaki College of Arts and Science, Adyar, Chennai and petitioners 2 to 4 are the lecturers working in the same department in the said college. It is submitted that the case of the prosecution is to the effect that a complaint was preferred by a classmate of the victim in this case on 29.1.2011, alleging that a cash of Rs.3,000/- was missing from her hand bag. It is further alleged that in view of the said complaint, the petitioners said to have searched by stripping the clothes of the victim in this case namely Divya, studying in 3rd year BCS course in the said college and as a result, she has committed suicide on 1.2.2011 at 7.45 p.m. by hanging herself at her residence. It is submitted that the further allegation is to the effect that a suicidal note was also left by the victim stating that the teachers enquired all the students for the theft of cash amount in the classroom of the victim.

3. The learned Senior Counsel for the petitioners submitted that the allegations contained in the complaint do not even constitute the ingredients to attract the offence under Section 306 IPC. It is contended that there is absolutely no material available on record to the effect that the petitioners instigated or intentionally aided the victim to commit suicide. The learned Senior Counsel for the petitioners further contended that the alleged suicidal note said to have been written in a notebook of the victim does not disclose the names of the petitioners and the said suicidal note is also very vague and bald. It is pointed out by the learned Senior Counsel for the petitioners that in the suicidal note it is merely stated that the victim was enquired along with other students and the allegations of stripping is not at all mentioned in the alleged suicidal note. It is contended that not only the victim alone was searched, but the other classmates of the victim were also searched even as per the admitted case of the prosecution.

4. The learned Senior Counsel contended that the prosecution claimed that the victim informed her mother on the same day i.e., on 29.1.2011 about the alleged search by stripping her clothes. The parents of the victim has not reported the matter to the Principal of the College. It is contended that the lecturers and the Head of the Department of BCS in the said college have been arrested without any basis and without any valid reasons.

5. The learned Senior Counsel for the petitioners submitted that the victim was said to have been searched on 29.1.2011 and she has attended the college on 31.1.2011 and on 1.2.2011 and the victim alleged to have committed suicide only on 1.2.2011 at 7.45 p.m. at her residence. The learned Senior Counsel contended that the petitioners are very much available and they are hailing from respectable family and they are attending the college for teaching the students and there is absolutely no material whatsoever available on record to show that the petitioners are likely to abscond or flee from justice. The learned Senior counsel submitted that in spite of the above said factors, the respondent police has chosen to arrest the petitioners on 2.2.2011 and they were remanded to judicial custody. Therefore, it is contended that the petitioners are entitled to seek the relief of bail.

6. Per contra, Mr.A.Saravanan, learned Government Advocate (Crl.side) submitted that the case of the prosecution is to the effect that on the basis of the complaint of theft of cash of Rs.3,000/- preferred by the classmate of the victim namely Divya, a 3rd year BCS student of Dr.MGR Janaki College of Arts and Science, Adyar, Chennai, the petitioners, who are working as Professor/Head of the Department of BCS and Lecturers of the same department in the said college said to have searched the victim by stripping her clothes. It is contended that though the allegation of stripping is not mentioned in the suicidal note, the said allegation was made by the mother of the victim as per her statement recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. It is further submitted that the friend of the victim also stated the same in her statement recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. The learned Government Advocate (Crl.side) submitted that the investigation is now pending at the crucial stage and in the event of granting bail, the likelihood of tampering and interfering in the investigation by the petitioners could not be ruled out as some more students have to be examined by the Investigating Officer. The learned Government Advocate (Crl.side) also produced the case diary before this Court.

7. This Court carefully considered the rival contentions put forward by either side and perused the entire materials available on record including the counter filed by the respondent and the case diary.

8. This is a very unfortunate case wherein it is alleged that a victim girl who was studying in the 3rd year BCS course has taken the extreme step of putting an end to her life by hanging herself on the ground that the teachers enquired her by stripping her clothes on the complaint of her classmate for missing of Rs.3,000/- cash. It is equally unfortunate that the petitioners, who are working as Professor/Head of the Department of BCS and Lecturers in the same department of the college, have been implicated in this case and the respondent police arrested and they were languishing in prison right from 2.2.2011. It is pertinent to note that the alleged enquiry and search were taken place on 29.1.2011 and admittedly the victim girl attended the college on 31.1.2011 and on 1.2.2011 and she has taken the extreme step of putting an end to her life at 7.45 p.m. on 1.2.2011.

9. A perusal of the alleged suicidal note said to have been written by the victim in a note book discloses that the same does not contain the signature of the victim. It is relevant to incorporate the exact note hereunder :

(Vernaular matter omitted. Ed)

The above said note does not disclose that the victim has expressed her intention to commit suicide. The said note is addressed to the teacher generally. Yet another aspect to be seen from the said note is that the present allegation of searching the victim by stripping her clothes was not mentioned in the said note. The prosecution alleged that the said version was given by the mother of the victim and by her friend during the course of investigation. It is the admitted version of the prosecution that the victim alone was not subjected to search but her classmates were also subjected to search. One of the classmates by name Padmavathi has stated in her statement recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. that all the classmatesa€™ handbags have been searched uniformly and they have also been searched independently and in a similar way, the victim, Divya, was also searched and she has not stated that the victim was subiected to search by stripping her clothes. At this stage it is also relevant to state that though the mother claimed that she was informed on the same day, i.e., on 29.01.2011 about striping of the clothes by the victim, she has not enquired the teachers and she has not given any report to the Principal. It is seen from the materials available on record by the perusal of the case diary that the victim was attending the college for two days, i.e., on 31.01.2011 and 01.02.2011 and only on the evening of 01.02.2011, i.e., at 7.45 p.m., she has committed suicide. It is pertinent to note that the case was originally registered only under Section 174 Cr.P.C. and the same was altered to one under Section 306 IPC only on 02.02.2011. The names of the petitioners were neither mentioned in the First Information Report nor mentioned in the altered First Information Report while altering the offence under Section 306 IPC. It is merely stated in the altered First Information Report that the college lecturers enquired and searched the victim along with her classmates for missing of cash of Rs.3,000/-from one Anuratha, the classmate of the victim.

10. The learned Senior Counsel for the petitioners vehemently contended that neither the complaint nor other materials available on record do not attract the ingredients for the offence under Sections 306 IPC.

It is relevant to refer few decisions in respect of the ingredients to attract the offence under Section 306 IPC. The Hon'bleApex Court in Mahendra Singh v. State of M.P. reported in 1995 SCC (Cri.) 1157 held hereunder:

a€oeWhoever abets the commission of suicide, and if any person commits suicide due to that reason, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years and shall also be liable to fine. Abetment has been defined in Section 107 IPC to mean mat a person abets the doing of a thing who firstly instigates any person to do a thing, or secondly, engages with one or more other person or persons in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing, or thirdly, intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.a€

11. In a latest decision reported in Gangula Mohan Reddy v. State of Andhra Pradesh reported in (2010) 1 SCC (Cri) 917, the Hon'bleApex Court has held her under:

a€oeAbetment involves a mental process of instigating a person or intentionally aiding a person in doing of a thing.....It also requires an active act or direct act which leads deceased to commit suicide seeing no option and this act must have been intended to push deceased into such a position that he commits suicide.a€

In the said decision, the Hon'bleApex Court has also held that in order to attract the penal provision under Section 306 IPC, there has to be a clear mens rea to commit the offence.

12. At this stage, this Court cannot go deep into the merits of the case by assessing the materials as the said exercise would amount to appreciation of evidence. It is suffice for this Court to evaluate the materials available on record to find out whether there is prima facie ground made out for granting the relief of bail.

13. By keeping the above said principle, it is to be reiterated, as pointed out earlier, that the alleged suicidal note cannot be construed to be a suicidal note and the same does not disclose the intention of the victim to commit suicide. The said note does not contain the names of the petitioners. Above all, the present allegation of searching the victim by stripping her clothes not mentioned in the said note and the signature of the victim is also not found. Added to above such admitted factors, it is to be seen that the perusal of the case diary does not disclose any valid reasons for resorting to the action of arrest. The arrest is not a must in every case. The police officials cannot resort to arrest in arbitrary and mechanical fashion. The facts and circumstances of each case to be considered for taking a decision to arrest an accused.

14. At this juncture, it is relevant to refer a landmark decision rendered by the Hon'bleApex Court in Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P and Others reported in (1999) 4 SCC 260 wherein it was held hereunder:

a€oe The Court has been receiving complaints about violation of human rights because of indiscriminate arrests. A realistic approach should be made in this direction. The law of arrest is one of balancing individual rights, liberties and privileges, on the one hand, and individual duties, obligations and responsibilities on the other; of weighing and balancing the rights, liberties and privileges of the single individual and those of individuals collectively; of simply deciding what is wanted and where to put the weight and the emphasis; of deciding which comes first- the criminal or society, the law violator of the law abide.

a€oeNo arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self-esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the persona€™s complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified.a€

15. The same principle was reiterated by the Hon'bleApex Court again in D.K.Basu v. State of West Bengal reported in AIR 1997 SC 610 by following the principle laid down by the Hon'bleApex Court in Joginder Kumara€™s case.

16. The Hon'bleApex Court again in Som Mittal v. Government of Karnataka reported in (2008) 3 SCC 753, has held as under:

a€oeSection 2(c) CrPC defines a cognizable ofence as an offence in which a police officer may arrest without warrant. Similarly Section 41 Cr.P.C., states that a police officer may arrest a person involved in a cognizable offence. The use of the word a€cemaya€ shows that a police officer is not bound to arrest even in a case of a cognizable offence. Again in Section 157(1) CrPC it is mentioned that a police officer shall investigate a case relating to a cognizable offence, and if necessary take measures for the arrest of a offender. This again makes it clear that arrest is not a must in every case of a cognizable offence. When a police officer should arrest and when not is clarified in Joginder Kumar case.a€

17. At this stage, it is also relevant to refer one of the reports of the National Police Commission, in which it is stated as here under:

a€oeNearly 60% of the arrests were unnecessary, and as such, unjustified. The Commission estimated that 43.25% expenditure in the connected jails was over such prisoners who in the ultimate analysis need not have been arrested at all.a€

18. In a latest decision, the Hon'bleApex Court in Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre v. State of Maharashtra and Ors. reported in 2010 (6) Kar LJ 930, has held as under:

a€ce93.....According to the report of the National Police Commission, the power of arrest is grossly abused and clearly violates the personal liberty of the people, as enshrined under Article 21 of the Constitution, then the courts need to take serious notice of it. When conviction rate is admittedly less than 10%, then the police should be slow in arresting the accused. The courts considering the bail application should try to maintain the balance between the societal interest vis-a-vis personal liberty while adhering to the fundamental principle of criminal jurisprudence that the accused is presumed to be innocent till he is found guilty by the competent court.

95. The gravity of charge and exact role of the accused must be properly apprehended. Before arrest; the arresting officer must record the valid reasons which have led to the arrest of the accused in the case diary. In exceptional cases the reasons could be recorded immediately after the arrest, so that while dealing with the bail application, the remarks and observations of the arresting officer can also be properly evaluated by the Court,

97. A great ignominy, humiliation and disgrace is attached to the arrest. Arrest leads to many serious consequences not only for the accused but for the entire family and at times for the entire community. Most people do not make any distinction between arrest at a pre-conviction stage of post-conviction stage.a€

The principle laid down by the Hon'bleApex Court in the decision cited supra makes it crystal clear that the investigating agency cannot resort to the action of arresting the accused in a mechanical and arbitrary fashion. They have to exercise such power by assigning valid reasons for resorting to arrest the accused. The perusal of the case diary produced by the learned Government Advocate (Crl.side) before this Court reveals that there is absolutely no reason much less valid reason recorded by the investigating agency in the case diary for arresting the accused. Only in the remand report, it is stated that the accused namely the petitioners herein admitted their guilt during his enquiry and accordingly all the four petitioners have been arrested on 2.2.2011 at 1.30 p.m. At this stage, this Court need not go into the admissibility of such statements said to have been recorded by the police as the legal position is very much clear even as per the provision empowering the police officials to record such statements.

19. The perusal of the case diary reveals that the confessional statement said to have been recorded only from the 1st petitioner viz. Jayalakshmi and the 3rd petitioner viz., P.Selvi. It is seen that it was shown by the arresting officer that a confessional statement was recorded from the 1st petitioner in the presence of two witnesses. But as far as the 3rd petitioner viz., P. Selvi is concerned, there is no indication that the said statement was recorded in the presence of witnesses. In respect of the other two petitioners, the case diary does not disclose alleged confession said to have been recorded by the arresting officer. Except the above said two alleged confessional statements said to have been given to the arresting officer, the perusal of the case diary does not disclose that the arresting officer recorded valid reasons in the case diary for arresting the accused. At this juncture, it is relevant to state that all the petitioners are ladies and they are very much available in the college premises and there is no allegation that they are attempting to evade the due process of law by absconding or fleeing from justice. In view of the aforesaid reasons, this Court is of the considered view that the arrest of the petitioners is unnecessary, unwarranted and unjustified.

20. It is pertinent to note that entire faculty members of a particular department of the college have been arrested including the Head of the Department. It is needless to state that such a measure would cause serious hardship to the students of the collge as they have been deprived of their teachings in the respective course in view of the absence of the teachers.

21. A reading of the counter filed by the respondent itself discloses that already material witnesses have been examined and their statements recorded under Section 164 Cr.P.C. and the petitioners are languishing in the prison right from 02.02.2011 and as such, there is no justification for further incarceration.

22. Accordingly, the petitioners are ordered to be released on bail on each of them executing a personal bond for a sum of Rs. 10,000 (Rupees Five thousand only) with one surety for a likesum to the satisfaction of the learned IX Metropolitan Magistrate, Saidapet, Chennai, and on condition that the petitioners shall report before the respondent police daily at 4.30 p.m. to 6.30 p.m. for a period of ten days and thereafter as and when required for interrogation.

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :1992 CRI. L. J. 2873

RAJASTHAN HIGH COURT

Hon'ble Judge(s) : SH. N. L. TIBREWAL, J.

Jar Singh .....V/s ..... State of Rajasthan
S. B. Criminal Misc. IIIrd Bail Appl. No. 2353/ 1991, D/- 16 -8 -1991.

==========

Cri. P.c. Section 439 – Bail – Grant of – Accused in jail – Trial is going very slow – Unnecessary harassment to accused – Held – It appeared that the Judge forgotten his duties towards poor accused who is in jail – An expeditious criminal trial is an fundamental right of the accused – High Court granted bail to the accused even though it was rejected earlier – it is disturbing that the trial courts are so unware of liberties of the citizens- as Preciding Officer is transferred contempt notice is not issued against him.

==========

Mr. I. R. Saini, for Petitioner; Mr. M. K. Kaushik, Public Prosecutor.

Judgement

ORDER :- Though this is a third bail application under Section 439, Cr. P. C., but it requires serious consideration due to circumstances developed later on.

The petitioner is facing trial in Sessions Case No. 53/90 in the court of Addl. Sessions Judge No. 1, Alwar under Sections 498-A and 304-B, I.P.C.

While rejecting the second bail application this Court had observed as under:-- "The contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner is that the petitioner is in jail since June, 1990 and not a single witness has been examined so far though the charges were framed on 23-10-1990. It is the duty of the trial Court to see that no undue delay is caused in the trial of a Sessions Case, and all efforts should be made that after framing of the charges, the trial is completed within two or three months, which had been the usual practice. I expect from the trial Court that all efforts shall be made to complete the trial expeditiously in Sessions Cases, not only in this case but in other cases also in which the accused persons are in jail."

2. There is no dispute that Smt. Sunita committed suicide by swallowing some poisonous pill. The report of the incident was made at Police Station Alwar on March, 31, 1990 by Sh. Roshanlal, the father of the deceased. In the report, an allegation was also made about the demand of dowry by the petitioner and the co-accused Smt. Sharda. The petitioner is the husband of the deceased.

3. The contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner is that in spite of the earlier order of this Court, no progress has been made in the trial of the case. He submits that the petitioner is in jail since June, 1990 and about fourteen months have passed since then, but practically no progress has been made in the trial. The learned counsel submits that the conduct of the petitioner indicates his innocence, in as much as, when he came to know about the illness of his wife he immediately provided her medical aid and when her condition deteriorated, she was shifted to the hospital by him. The learned counsel argues that a day prior to the incident, the petitioner had taken the deceased to her parent's house on the festival of 'Gangor' and they had gone on a bi-cycle. According to the learned counsel, in such cases it has become the fashion and practice to make false accusation of the demand of dowry, though in the community of the petitioner no such demand is made on the part of bridegroom. The learned counsel submits that in fact, in Mali-community, the bridegroom has to pay money to the bride's father for the marriage of his daughter.

4. I would not like to make any comment on the merits of the case, but there are some striking features which are alarming and I would like to highlight the same in this order. The manner in which the trial of the present case has proceeded is not only shocking and painful, but it also demonstrates slackness and indifference towards the duties by the Presiding Officers.

5. Some important dates relevant for the decision of this petition and various relevant order-sheets from the file of the trial court may be referred :

The case was registered at Police Station Alwar on March 31, 1990. The police, after completion of the investigation, submitted a charge-sheet in the month of July, 1990. Then, the case was committed by the Chief Judicial Magistrate and the record of the case was received in the court of Sessions Judge on Oct. 8, 1990. The learned Sessions Judge transferred the case to the court of Addl. Sessions Judge No. 1, Alwar and fixed the next date as 23rd Oct. 1990. On 23rd Oct. 1990, the trial Judge framed charges against the petitioner and the co-accused Smt.Sharda. Thereafter, he fixed the next date as January 9 and 10, 1991 for recording the statements of the prosecution witnesses. On Jan. 9, 1991 no prosecution witness was present, as such, the case was adjourned to Jan. 10, 1991. On Jan. 10, 1991 also no prosecution witness was present and the learned Judge fixed the next date as 12th and 13th March, 1991, for recording statement of the prosecution witnesses. On 12th and 13th March, 1991, it appears that some witnesses were present, but the Judge did not record their statements on a lame execuse that he was under transfer orders. The next date was fixed as April 30, 1991. On April 30, 1991, three prosecution witnesses were present, but their statements could not be recorded as the accused petitioner was not produced in court by the jail authorities on the ground of his being sent to hospital for treatment. Consequently, the next date was fixed as July 12, 1991. On July 12, 1991 statement of only one witness was recorded and the next date has been fixed as Aug. 22, 1991 for recording the statements of other witnesses.

6. It is really disturbing that the trial courts are so unaware of liberties of the citizens. Now, it is a settled proposition of law that expeditious criminal trial is a fundamental right of the accused, especially when he is in jail. No accused can be kept in jail for uncertain period, as an under-trial prisoner, especially when there is no fault on his part. In criminal cases in which the accused is in jail, it is the duty of the Presiding Officer to complete the trial as expeditiously as possible and to record the statements of the prosecution witnesses without any delay, rather day to day; and all efforts are to be made through the police agency to secure the attendance of the witnesses on the date fixed for recording their statements. It is also his duty not to grant adjournment unless it is found extremely necessary. Even if the case has to be adjourned, then the next date should not be after a long period.

7. In the instant case, I find that the case was committed to the Court of Sessions in the month of Oct. 1990. The charges were framed on Oct. 23, 1990. The trial Judge fixed Jan 9 and 10, 1991 as the next dates for recording the prosecution evidence i.e. after more than two and half months. On these two dates not a single prosecution witness was present and the trial Judge adjourned the case and fixed dates as March 12 and 13, 1991 without caring that the petitioner is in jail and the case should not have been adjourned for such a long period.

On March 12 and 13, 1991, some witnesses were present. The Presiding Officer was also there, but he did not choose to record their statements on a lame excuse of his being under transfer orders. Nothing can be more shocking and painful for me to notice that the statements of the witnesses could not be recorded though the Presiding Officer and the witnesses were available on the ground that the Presiding Officer was under transfer orders. Till a Presiding Officer does not give charge, he is expected to work and recording the statements of the witnesses can hardly be a matter of any grievance to anybody. It only shows that the Presiding Officer did not want to work on a lame excuse.

On April 30, 1991, the accused-petitioner was not produced in the Court by the police on the ground that he had been sent to a hospital for treatment. Though, the Court was bound to adjourn the case on this ground but the shocking fact is that the Presiding officer again gave the next date after two and half months.

8. It appears that in the instant case the Presiding Officers have completely forgotten their duties towards the poor accused who is in jell.

I would like to draw the attention of the subordinate courts towards the General Rules (Criminal) 1980.

Chapter (IV) in the General Rules (Criminal) 1980 provides the procedure and manner of 'trials in court of Sessions'.

Just for the guidance and to refresh the memory of the subordinate courts, I may refer some relevant Rules. Rule 39 provides that when an order of commitment for trial has been made, the Magistrate shall at once report the fact to the Court to which commitment is made by a letter in the prescribed form; and shall within eight days from making the said order, submit the entire record to the Court of Sessions and shall send material exhibits and articles within for night thereof together with a calendar in the prescribed form. (Emphasis provided).

Then, Rule 42 provides that Sessions cases should be disposed of with the greatest possible expedition and that Sessions Judge should reserve particular number of days in a week for sessions work.

Rule 43 provides expeditious disposal of Sessions cases, which runs as under :-

"Rule 43 - Expeditious disposal of Sessions trials should ordinarily be held in order in which commitments are made. The Presiding Officer may however exercise his discretion in the matter of giving priority to certain cases particularly cases involving capital sentence subsequently received or where the accused is in jail. Once a sessions trial is opened the Sessions Judge shall see that it is disposed of in the same session and not adjourned to next session. The sessions cases shall be taken up day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined and discharged. The sessions Judge shall take necessary steps to get the summons served on the witnesses in time and if necessary the Superintendent of Police of the district may be asked to make special efforts to secure the attendance of the witnesses. A sessions trial should not be adjounred or postponed except in exceptional circumstances for reasons to recorded in writing."

(Emphasis supplied)

The aforesaid Rules indicate that Session trials should be disposed of in a most expeditious manner and once a session trial is opened, it is the duty of the concerned Judge to see that it is disposed of in thesame session. The case has to be taken day do day until all the witnesses in the cases are examined. It is also the duty of the Presiding Officer to take necessary steps to get the summons served on the witnesses in time and, if necessary, the Superintendent of Police of the district may be asked to make special efforts to secure the attendance of the witnesses. Further, the trial shall not be adjourned or postponed except in exceptional circumstances for reasons to be recorded in writing.

9. In spite of the aforesaid, Rules, the present case has been dealt with in a most casual manner. Keeping utmost judicial restrain I can only express my displeasure about the manner in which the trial has proceeded in this case.

I can expect not only from the Presiding Officer of the Addl. Sessions Judge, Alwar, but from other Sessions Judges also not to forget and ignore the aforesaid Criminal Rules which are meant for their guidance. These rules are meant to be followed. These rules assume importance when the accused is in jail and who can rightly claim an expeditious trial as his fundamental right provided by the Constitution of India.

10. Yet another shocking feature of this case is that in spite of the specific directions given by this Court by order dated April 15, 1991 to complete the trial expeditiously within two or three months, the same has been disobeyed. The manner in which adjournments have been granted and that too by giving long dates undisputedly establishes that the disobedience of the aforesaid order of this court is wilful and deliberate. Subordinate courts are bound to obey the orders of the higher courts. This is also a judicial propriety which is necessary to be strictly followed to maintain judicial system intact. If the orders of the higher courts are willfully and deliberately disobeyed by the subordinate court it amounts to a contempt of the court.

In the course of arguments, at one time I had thought to issue a conempt notice to the concerned Presiding Officer/Officers, but having come to know that the earlier Presiding Officer has been transferred and the new Presiding Officer has taken the charge sometime in the month of March-April, 1991, it shall be suffice to record a warning against them to be vigilant and careful in following the directions of the superior courts.

In the aforesaid background, I have no option, but to release the petitioner on bail under S. 439, Cr. P.C.

Consequently, this petition is allowed and it is hereby directed that the petitioner Jai Singh S/o Pyarelal shall be released on bail provided he furnishes a personal bond in the sum of Rs. 10,000/- (ten thousand only) with two sureties in the sum of Rs. 5,000/- (five thousand only) each to the satisfaction of the trial court for his appearance in the said court or any other court on all the dates of hearing and as and when called upon to do so during the pendency of the trial in this case.

A copy of this order be kept in the personal file of the concerned Presiding Officer.

The Dy. Registrar (Judicial) is also directed to send cyclo-style copy of this order to all Sessions Judges/Addl. Sessions Judges for their guidance and to draw their attention towards Chapter (IV) 'trials in courts of Sessions' contained in General Rules (Criminal) 1980, which are meant to be strictly followed.

Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation : 1994-IJR-0-267 , 1994-AIR(SC)-0-1349

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

[FULL BENCH]

Hon'ble Judge(s) : M. N. VENKATACHALIAH, C.J.I., S. MOHAN AND DR. A. S. ANAND, JJ.

JOGINDER KUMAR .....V/s.....State of Uttar Pradesh
Writ Petition (Criminal) 9 Of 1994 Apr 25,1994

==========

[A] Police – Arrest – Guidelines by Supreme Court – It shall be the duty of the Magistrate before whom the arrested person is produced to satisfy himself that the guidelines regarding arrest are complied by the Police.

[B] Right of arrestee to consult privately with lawyer are fundamental rights.

[C] No arrest can be made in routing manner immediately after the registration of crime – Except in heinous offences arrest must be avoided – If a Police Officer issues notice to attend the station house and not to leave the area without permission can be made, because it is lawful for the police officer to do so – The existence of the power to arrest is one thing but the justification for arrest is another thing. – The Police officer must be able to justify the arrest - Arrest and detention in police lock up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self esteem of a person-D.G.P. of all states shall issue necessary instructions requiring due observance of guidelines issued by Supreme Court.

==========

(1.) ORDER - This is a petition under Art. 32 of the Constitution of India. The petitioner is a young man of 28 years of age who has completed his LL. B. and has enrolled himself as an advocate. The Senior Superientendent of Police, Ghaziabad, respondent No.4 called the petitioner in his office for making enquiries in some case. The petitioner on 7-1-1994 at about 10 O'clock appeared personally along with his brothers Sri Mangeram Choudhary, Nahar Singh Yadav, Harinder Singh Tewatia, Amar Singh and others before the respondent No. 4. Respondent No. 4 kept the petitioner in his custody. When the brother of the petitioner made enquiries about .the petitioner, he was told that the petitioner will be set free in the evening after making some enquiries in connection with a case.

(2.) On 7-1-1994 at about 12-55 p.m., the brother of the petitioner being apprehensive of the intentions of respondent No. 4, sent a telegram to the Chief Minister of U. P. apprehending his brother's implication in some criminal case and also further apprehending the petitioner being shot dead in fake encounter.

(3.) In spite of the frequent enquiries, the whereabouts of the petitioner could not be located. On the evening of 7-1-1994, it came to be known that petitioner is detained in illegal custody of 5th respondent, S.H.O , P. S. Mussorie.

(4.) On 8-1-1994, it was informed that the 5th respondent was keeping the petitioner in detention to make further enquiries in some case. So far as petitioner has not been produced before the concerned Magistrate. Instead the 5th respondent directed the relative of the petitioner to approach the 4th respondent S.S.P. Ghaziabad for release of the petitioner.

(5.) On 9-1-1994, in the evening when the brother of petitioner along with relatives went to P.S. Mussorie to enquire about the wellbeing of his brother, it was found that the petitioner had been taken to some undisclosed destination. Under these circumstances, the present petition has been preferred for the release of Joginder Kumar, the petitioner herein.

(6.) This Court on 11-1-1994 ordered notice to State of U.P. as well as S.S.P. Ghaziabad.

(7.) The said Senior Superintendent of Police along with petitioner appeared before this Court on 14-1-1994. According to him, the petitioner has been released. The question as to why the petitioner was detained for a period of five days, he would submit that the petitioner was not in detention at all. His help was taken for detecting some cases relating to abduction and the petitioner was helpful in co-operating with the police. Therefore, there is no question of detaining him. Though, as on today the relief in habeas corpus petition cannot be granted yet this Court cannot put an end to the writ petition on this score. Where was the need to detain the petitioner for five days; if really the petitioner was not in detention, why was not this Court informed are some questions which remain unanswered. If really, there was detention for five days, for what reason was he detained? These matters require to be enquiried into. Therefore, we direct the learned District Judge, Ghaziabad to make a detailed enquiry and submit his report within four weeks from the date of receipt of this order.

(8.) The horizon of human rights is expanding. At the same time, the crime rate is also increasing. Of late, this Court has been receiving complaints about violation of human rights because of indiscriminate arrests. How are we to strike a balance between the two?

(9.) A realistic approach should be made in this direction. The law of arrest is one of balancing individual rights, liberties and privileges, on the one hand, and individual duties, obligations and responsibilities on the other; of weighing and balancing the rights, liberties and privileges of the single individual and those of individuals collectively; of simply deciding what is wanted and where to put the weight and the emphasis; of deciding which comes first - the criminal or society, the law violator or the law abider; of meeting the challenge which Mr. Justice Cardozo so forthrightly met when he wrestled with a similar task of balancing individual rights against society's rights and wisely held that the exclusion rule was bad law, that society came first, and that the criminal should not go free because the constable blundered. In People v. Defore, (1926) 242 NY 13, 24:150 NE 585, 589, justice Cardozo observed:

"The question is whether protection for the individual would not be gained at a disproportionate loss of protection for society. On the one side is the social need that crime shall be repressed. On the other, the social need that law shall not be flouted by the insolence of office. There are dangers in any choice. The rule of the Adams case (People v. Adams, (1903) 176 NY 351 : 68 NE 636) strikes a balance between opposing interests. We must hold it to be the law until those organs of government by which a change of public policy is normally effected shall give notice to the courts that change has come to pass."

(10.) To the same effect is the statement by Judge learned Hand, In Re Fried, 161 F 2d 453, 465 (2d Cir. 1947):

"The protection of the individual from oppression and abuse by the police and other enforcing officers is indeed a major interest in a free society; but so is the effective prosecution of crime, an interest which at times seems to be forgotten. Perfection is impossible; like other human institutions criminal proceedings must be a compromise."

(11.) The quality of a nation's civilisation can be largely measured by the methods it uses in the enforcement of criminal law.

(12.) This Court in Smt. Nandinia Satpathy v. P. L. Dani AIR 1978 SC 1025 at page 1032 quoting Lewis Mayers stated:

The paradox has been put sharply by Lewis Mayers:

"To strike the balance between the needs of law enforcement on the one hand and the protection of the citizen from oppression and injustice at the hands of the law-enforcement machinery on the other is a perennial problem of statecraft. The pendulum over the years has swung to the right."

Again in para 21 at page 1033 it was observed:

"We have earlier spoken of the conflicing claims requiring reconciliation. Speaking pragmatically, there exists a rivalry between societal interest in effecting crime detection and constitutional rights which accused individuals possess. Emphasis may shift, depending on circumstances, in balancing these interests as has been happening in America. Since Miranda ((1966) 334 US 436) there has been retreat from stress on protection of the accused and gravitation towards society's interest in convicting law-brakers. Currently, the trend in the American jurisdiction according to legal journals, is that 'respect for (constitutional) principles is eroded when they leap their proper bounds to interfere with the legitimate interests of society in enforcement of its laws ... (Couch v. United States (1972) 409 US 322, 336). Our constitutional perspective has, therefore, to be relative and cannot afford to be absolutist, especially when torture technology, crime escalation and other social variables affect the application of principles in producing humane justice."

(13.) The National Police Commission in its Third Report referring to the quality of arrests by the Police in India mentioned power of arrest as one of the chief sources of corruption in the police. The report suggested that, by and large, nearly 60 Per Cent of the arrests were either unnecessary or unjustified and that such unjustified police action accounted for 43.2 Per Cent of the expenditure of the jails. The said Commission in its Third Report at page 31 observed thus:

"It is obvious that a major portion of the arrests were connected with very minor prosecutions and cannot, therefore, be regarded as quite necessary from the point of view of crime prevention. Continued detention in jail of the persons so arrested has also meant avoidable expenditure on their maintenance. In the above period it was estimated that 43.2 per cent of the expenditure in the connected jails was over such prisoners only who in the ultimate analysis need not have been arrested at all."

(14.) As on today, arrest with or without warrant depending upon the circumstances of a particular case is governed by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(15.) Whenever a public servant is arrested that matter should be intimated to the superior officers, if possible, before the arrest and in any case, immediately after the arrest. In cases of members of Armed Forces, Army, Navy or Air Force, intimation should be sent to the Officer commanding the unit to which the member belongs. It should be done immediately after the arrest is effected.

(16.) Under Rule 229 of the Procedure and Conduct of Business in Lok Sabha, when a Member is arrested on a criminal charge or is detained under an executive order of the Magistrate, the executive authority must inform without delay such fact to the Speaker. As soon as any arrest, detention, conviction or release is effected intimation should invariably be sent to the Government concerned concurrently with the intimation sent to the Speaker/Chairman of the Legislative Assembly/Council/Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha. This should be sent through telegrams and also by post and the intimation should not be on the ground of holiday.

(17.) With regard to the apprehension of juvenile offenders S. 58 of the Code of Criminal Procedure lays down as under:

"Officers in charge of police stations shall report to the District Magistrate or, if he so directs, to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limit of their respective stations whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise."

(18.) Section 19(a) of the Children Act makes the following provision: "the parent or guardian of the child, if he can be found, of such arrest and direct him to be present at the children's court before which the child will appear."

(19.) In England, the police powers of Arrest, Detention and lnterrogation have been streamlined by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 based on the report of Sir Cyril Philips Committee (Report of a Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure, Command-papers 8092 19811).

(20.) It is worth quoting the following passage from Police Powers and Accountability by John L. Lambert, page 93:

"More recently, the Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure recognised that "there is a critically important relationship between the police and the public in the detection and investigation of crime" and suggested that public confidence in police powers required that these conform to three principal standards : fairness, openness and workability."

(Emphasis supplied)

(21.) The Royal Commission suggested restrictions on the power of arrest on the basis of the 'necessity of principle'. The two main objectives of this principle are that police can exercise powers only in those cases in which it was genuinely necessary to enable them to execute their duty to prevent the Commission of offences, to investigate crime. The Royal Commission was of the view that such restrictions would diminish the use of arrest and produce more uniform use of powers. The Royal Commission Report on Criminal Procedure - Sir Cyril Philips at page 45 said:

"... ... We recommend that detention upon arrest for an offence should continue only on one or more of the following crtiteria;

(a) the person's unwillingness to identify himself so that a summons may be served upon him;

(b) the need to prevent the continuation or repetition of that offence;

(c) the need to protect the arrested person himself or other persons or property;

(d) the need to secure or preserve evidence of or relating to that offence or to obtain such specified guidelines evidence from the suspect by questioning him; and

(e) the likelihood of the person failing to appear at court to answer any charge made against him."

(22.) The Royal Commission in the abovesaid Report at page 46 also suggested:

"To help to reduce the use of arrest we would also propose the introduction here of a scheme that is used in Ontario enabling a police officer to issue what is called an appearance notice. That procedure can be used to obtain attendance at the police station without resorting to arrest provided a power to arrest exists, for example to be fingerprinted or to participate in an identification parade. It could also be extended to attendance for interview at a time convenient both to the suspect and to the police officer investigating the case ... ... "

(23.) In India, Third Report of the National Police Commission at page 32 also suggested:

"....An arrest during the investigation of a cognizable case may be considered justified in one or other of the following circumstances :-

(i) The case involves a grave offence like murder, dacoity, robbery, rape etc., and it is necessary to arrest the accused and bring his movements under restraint to infuse confidence among the terror stricken victims.

(ii) The accused is likely to abscond and evade the processes of law.

(iii) The accused is given to violent behaviour and is likely to commit further offences unless his movements are brought under restraint.

(iv) The accused is a habitual offender and unless kept in custody he is likely to commit similar offences again.

It would be desirable to insist through departmental instructions that a police officer making an arrest should also record in the case diary the reasons for making the arrest, thereby clarifying his conformity to the specified guidelines... .."

(24.) The above guidelines are merely the incidents of personal liberty guaranteed under the Constitution of India. No arrest can be made because it is lawful for the Police Officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The Police Officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a Police Officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified. Except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave Station without permission would do.

(25.) Then, there is the right to have someone informed. That right of the arrested person, upon request, to have someone informed and to consult privately with a lawyer was recognised by Section 56(1) of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 in England (Civil Actions Against the Police -Richard Clayton and Hugh Tomlinson; page 313). That Section provides:

"where a person has been arrested and is being held in custody in a police station or other premises, he shall be entitled, if he so requests, to have one friend or relative or other person who is known to him or who is likely to take an interest in his welfare told, as soon as is practicable except to the extent that delay is permitted by this section, that he has been arrested and is being detained there."

(26.) These rights are inherent in Articles 21 and 22(1) of the Constitution and require to be recognised and scrupulously protected. For effective enforcement of these fundamental rights, we issue the following requirements:

1. An arrested person being held in custody is entitled, if he so requests to have one friend relative or other person who is known to him or likely to take an interest in his welfare told as far as is practicable that he has been arrested and where is being detained.

2. The Police Officer shall inform the arrested person when he is brought to the police station of this right.

3. An entry shall be required to be made in the Diary as to who was informed of the arrest. These protections from power must be held to flow from Articles 21 and 22(1) and enforced strictly.

(27.) It shall be the duty of the Magistrate, before whom the arrested person is produced, to statisfy himself that these requirements have been complied with.

(28.) The above requirements shall be followed in all cases of arrest till legal provisions are made in this behalf. These requirements shall be in addition to the rights of the arrested persons found in the various Police Manuals.

(29.) These requirements are not exhaustive. The Directors General of Police of all the States in India shall issue necessary instructions requiring due observance of these requirements. In addition, departmental instruction shall also be issued that a police officer making an arrest should also record in the case diary, the reasons for making the arrest. Order accordingly.

Cross Citation :1978-AIR(SC)-0-1025 , 1978-SCC-2-424

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : V. R. KRISHNA IYER, JASWANT SINGH AND V. D. TULZAPURKAR, JJ.

NANDINISATPATHY Vs P.L.DANI
Civil 315 Of 1978, Criminal 101 Of 1978 Apr 07,1978

==========

A] Criminal procedure code, 1973 – Sec 160 (1), 161 (2), - Constitution of India Article 20 (3) and 22(1) – Rights to keep silence – Held – Accused has constitutional right to keep silence till end of the trial – the Police Officer cannot pressurize the accused to give answer to their questions– Secondly the Police cannot summon a woman at Police Station – Compelled Testimony includes both physical and psychological compulsion – Threats of prosecution for failure to answer and manner of delivery of answers amounts to compulsion – Proceeding against accused quashed – Appellant – accused given protection under Article 20 (3) that he should not be compelled to answer the questions asked by the police which are self incriminating.

B] Use of torture/third degree is not permissible – However worthy the end is, it will not be permissible to achieve it by sacrificing the dignity of the individual and freedom of the human person by improper means – We have to draw up clear lines between whirl – Pool and the rock where the safety of society and the worth of the human person may co-exist in peace.

C] Police cannot be the law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. If the alibi is that the Sessions Court had directed the accused to appear at the police station, that is no absolution for a police officer from disobedience of the law.

D] Before discussing the core issues, we wish to note our regret, in this case, at a higher level police officer, ignorantly insisting on a woman appearing at the police station, in flagrant contravention of the whole-some proviso to Section 160 (1) of the Cr. P. C. Such deviance must be visited with prompt punishment since policemen may not be a law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. The wages of indifference is reprimand, of intransigence disciplinary action. If the alibi is that the Sessions Court had directed the accused to appear at the police station, that is no absolution for a police officer from disobedience of the law. There is public policy, not complimentary to the police personnel, behind this legislative proscription which keeps juveniles and females from Police Company except at the former's safe residence. May be, in later years, community confidence and consciousness will regard the police force as entitled to better trust and soften the stigmatizing or suspicious provisions now writ across the Code.

==========

V.R.KRISHNA IYER

(1.) Every litigation has a touch of human crisis and, as here, it is but a legal projection of life's vicissitudes.

(2.) A complaint was filed by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Vigilance (Directorate of Vigilance) Cuttack, against the appellant, the former Chief Minister of Orissa under S. 179. Indian Penal Code, before the Sub-Divisional Judicial Magistrate, Sadar, Cuttack alleging offending facts which we will presently explain. There upon the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence and issued summons for appearance against the accused (Smt. Nandini Satpathy). Aggrieved by the action of the Magistrate and urging that the complaint did not and could not disclose an offence, the agitated accused-appellant moved the High Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution as well as under S. 401 of the Cr. P. Code, challenging the validity of the Magisterial proceeding. The broad submissions, unsuccessfully made before the High Court, was that the charge rested upon a failure to answer interrogations by the police but this charge was unsustainable because the umbrella of Art. 20 (3) of the Constitution and the immunity under S. 161 (2) of the Cr. P. Code were wide enough to shield her in her refusal. The plea of unconstitutionality and illegality, put forward by this pre-emptive proceeding was rebuffed by the High Court and so she appealed to this Court by certificate granted under Art. 132 (1), resulting in the above two appeals, thereby taking a calculated risk which might boomerang on the litigant if she failed, because what this Court now decides finally binds.

(3.) Every appeal to this Court transcends the particular is to incarnate as an appeal to the future by the invisible many whose legal lot we decide by laying down the law for the nation under Article 141; and, so, we are filled with humility in essaying the task of unravelling the sense and sensibility, the breadth and depth, of the principle against self-incrimination enshrined in Art. 20 (3) of our Constitution and embraced with specificity by S. 161 (2) of the Cr. P. Code. Here we must remember, concerned as we are in expounding an aspect of the Constitution bearing on social defence and individual freedom, that humanism is the highest law which enlivens the printed legislative text with the life-breath of civilized values. The Judge who forgets this rule of law any day regrets his nescient verdict some day.

(4.) Now, we move on to the riddle of Art. 20 (3), the range of the 'right to silence' and the insulation of an accused person from police interrogation under S. 161 (2) of the Cr. P. Code. Counsel on both sides have presented the rival viewpoints with utmost fairness and some scholarship and we have listened to them, not as an abstract intellectual exercises peppered by lexical and precedential erudition but as deeper dives into the meaning of meanings and the exalted adventures in translation of twinkling symbols. Our Constitutional guarantees are phrased like the great sutras - pregnant brevities enwombing founding faiths.

(5.) The basic facts which have given rise to this case need to be narrated but the law we have to settle reminds us, not of a quondam Minister, the appellant, but of the numerous indigents, illiterates and agnostics who are tensed and perplexed by police processes in station recesses, being unversed in the arcane implications of Art. 20 (3) and unable to stand up to rough handling despite S. 161 (2). Law-in-action is tested b its restless barks and bites in the streets and its sting in hostile camps, especially when the consumers are unaware of the essential contents of the protective provisions, and not by its polished manners and sweet reasonableness in forensic precincts. The pulse of the agitated accused. hand-cuffed and interrogated the rude voice and ready rod of the head constable and the psychic strain, verging on consternation, sobbing into involuntary incriminations, are part of the scenario of police investigation which must educate the Court as it unveils the nuances of Art. 20 (3) and its inherited phraseology. A people whose consciousness of rights is poor a land where legal services at the incipient stages are rare and an investigative personnel whose random resort to third degree technology has ancient roots - these and a host of other realistic factors must come into the court's ken when interpreting and effectuating the constitutional right of the suspect accused to remain silent. That is why quick surgery, when constitutional questions affecting the weaker numbers are involved, can be successful failure. We are cognizant of the improved methods and refined processes of the police forces, especially the Vigilance wings and Intelligence squads with special training in expert investigation and use of brains as against brawn. This remarkable improvement, in Free India, in police practices has not unfortunately been consistent and torture tactics have not been transported for life from our land as some recent happenings have regrettably revealed. Necessarily, the court must be guided by principled pragmaticism, not cloud cuckoo land idealism. This sets our perspective.

The facts:

(6.) Back to the facts, Smt. Nandini Satpathy, a former Chief Minister of Orissa and one time minister at the national level, was directed to appear at the Vigilance Police Station. Cuttack, in September last year for being examined in connection with a case registered against her by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Vigilance, Cuttack under section 5 (2) read with section 5 (1) (d) and (e) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and under sections 161/165 and 120-B and 109 I. P. C. On the strength of this first information, in which the appellant, her son and others were shown as accused persons, investigation was commenced. During the course of the investigation it was that she was interrogated with reference to a long string of questions, given to her in writing. Skipping the details of the dates and forgetting the niceties of the provisions, the gravamen of the accusation was one of acquisition of assets disproportionate to the known, licit sources of income and probable resources over the years of the accused, who occupied a public position and exercised public power for a long spell during which, the police version runs, the lady by receipt of illegal gratification aggrandized herself - a pattern of accusation tragically and traumatically so common against public persons who have exercised and exited from public power, and a phenomenon so suggestive of Lord Actin's famous dictum. The charge, it is so obvious has a wide-ranging scope and considerable temporal sweep, covering activities and acquisitions, sources and resources, private and public dealings and nexus with finances personal and of relatives. The dimensions of the offences naturally broadened the area of investigation, and to do justice to such investigation, the net of interrogation had to be cast wide. Inevitably, a police officer who is not too precise, too sensitive and too constitutionally conscientious is apt to trample under foot the guaranteed right of testimonial tacitness. This is precisely the grievance of the appellant, and the defence of the respondent is the absence of the 'right of silence', to use the familiar phrase of 20th century vintage.

Our Approach :

(7.) Counsel's submissions have zeroed in on some basic questions. Speaking broadly, there are two competing social interests a reconciliation of which gives the clue to a balance between the curtailed or expanded meaning for the sententious clause against self-incrimination in our Constitution. Section 161 (2) Cr. P. C. is more concrete. We may read both before venturing a bhashyam on their text :

"Art. 20 (3) - No person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself."

(8.) Section 161 (2) Cr. P. C. enjoins :

"Such person shall be bound to answer truly all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions the answer to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture."

(9.) The elucidation and application of these provisions will be better appreciated in the specific setting of the points formulated in the course of the arguments. And so we now set down the pivotal issues on which the submissions were focused, reminding ourselves that we cannot travel beyond the Atlantic to lay down Indian law although counsel invited us, with a few citations, to embark on that journey. India is Indian not alien, and jurisprudence is neither eternal nor universal but molded by the national genius, life's realities culture and ethos of each country. Even so, humanist jurists will agree that in this indivisible human planet certain values, though divergently expressed, have cosmic status, spreading out with the march of civilization in space and time. To understand ourselves, we must listen to voices from afar, without forsaking our identity. The Gandhian guideline has a golden lesson for judges when rulings and text books outside one's jurisdiction are cited :

"I do not want my house to be walled in on all sides any my windows to be stuffed. I want the cultures of all lands to be blown about my house as freely as possible. But I refuse to be blown off my feet by any."

(Young India 1-6-1921)".

To build bridges of juridical understanding based on higher values, is good; to don imported legal haberdashery, on meretricious appeal, is clumsy.

The Issues :

(10.) The points in controversy may flexibly be formulated thus :

1. Is a person likely to be accused of crimes i.e. a suspect accused, entitled to the sanctuary of silence as one 'accused of any offence'? Is it sufficient that he is a potential - of course, not distant - candidate for accusation by the police?
2. Does the bar against self-incrimination operate not merely with reference to a particular accusation in regard to which the police investigator interrogates, or does it extend also to other pending or potential accusations outside the specific investigation which has led to the questioning? That is to say, can an accused person who is being questioned by a police officer in a certain case, refuse to answer questions plainly non-criminatory so far as that case is concerned but probably exposes him to the perils of inculpation in other cases in posse or in esse elsewhere?
3. Does the constitutional shield of silence swing into action only in court or can it barricade the 'accused' against incriminating interrogation at the stages of police investigation?
4. What is the ambit of the cryptic expression 'compelled to be a witness against himself' occurring in Article 20 (3) of the Constitution? Does 'compulsion' involve physical or like pressure or duress of an unlawful texture or does it cover also the crypto-compulsion or psychic coercion, given a tense situation or officer in authority interrogating an accused person, armed with power to insist on an answer?
5. Does being 'a witness against oneself' include testimonial tendency to incriminate or probative probability of guilt flowing from the answer?
6. What are the parameters of Section 161 (2) of the Cr. Procedure Code? Does tendency to expose a person to a criminal charge embrace answers which have an inculpatory impact in other criminal cases actually or about to be investigated or tried?
7. Does 'any person' in Section 161 Cr. Procedure Code include an accused person or only a witness?
8. When does an answer self-incriminate or tend to expose one to a charge? What distinguishing features mark off nocent and innocent, permissible and impermissible interrogations and answers? Is the setting relevant or should the answer, in vacuo, bear a guilty badge on its bosom?
9. Does mens rea form a necessary component of section 179 Indian Penal Code, and, if so, what is its precise nature? Can a mere apprehension that any answer has a guilty potential salvage the accused or bring into play the exclusionary rule?
10. Where do we demarcate the boundaries of benefit of doubt in the setting of section 161 (2) Cr. P. C. and Section 179 Indian Penal Code?

Sec 179 Indian Penal Code :

(11.) This formulation does focus our attention on the plural range of rural concerns when a court is confronted with an issue of testimonial compulsion followed by a prosecution for recusancy. Preliminarily, let us see the requirements of section 179 I. P. C. since the appeals directly turn on them. The rule of law becomes a rope of sand if the lawful authority of public servants can be defied or disdained by those bound to obey. The might of the law, in the last resort, of guarantees the right of the citizen, and no one, be he minister or higher, has the discretion to disobey without running a punitive risk. Chapter X of the Indian Penal Code is designed to penalize disobedience of public servants exercising lawful authority. Section 179 is one of the provisions to enforce compliance when a public servant legally demands truthful answers but is met with blank refusal or plain mendacity. The section reads :

"179: Whoever, being legally bound to state the truth on any subject to any public servant refuses to answer any question demanded of him touching that subject by such public servant in the exercise of the legal powers of such public servant, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both."

(12.) A break-down of the provision yields the following pieces : a, the demanding authority must be a public servant; a police officer is obviously one, b, The demand must be to state the truth on a subject in the exercise of legal powers; and, indubitably, an investigating officer enjoys such powers under the Cr. P.C., and here, the requisition was precisely to tell the truth on matters supposedly pertinent to the offences under investigation. Section 161 of the Cr. P. C. obligates 'any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case' to answer truthfully 'all questions relating to such case ... other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge'. In the present case, admittedly, oral answers to written interrogatories were sought, although not honest speech but 'constitutional' silence greeted the public servant. And this refuge by the accused under Art. 20 (3) drove the disenchanted officer to seek the sanction of section 179 Indian Penal Code If the literal force of the text governs the complex of facts, the court must convict, lest the long arm of the investigatory law should hang limp when challenged by the negative attitude of inscrutability, worn by the 'interrogatee' - unless within the text and texture of the section built-in defenses exist. They do, is the appellant's plea; and this stance is the subject of the debate before us.

(13.) What are the defenses open under Section 179 Indian Penal Code read with Section 161 Cr. P.C.? Two exculpatory channels are pointed out by Sri Rath, supplemented by a third paramount right founded on constitutional immunity against testimonial self-incrimination. To itemise them for ready reference, the arguments are that a, 'any person' in section 161 (1) excludes an accused person, b, that questions which form links in the chain of the prosecution case - these include all except irrelevant ones - are prone to expose the accused to a criminal charge or charges since several other cases are in the offing or have been charge sheeted against the appellant and c, the expansive operation of the benignant shield against self-accusation inhibits elicitation of any answers which the accused apprehends may throw inculpatory glow. This wide vindication, if valid, will be the biggest interpretative bonus the court can award to criminals as it foredooms to failure criminal justice and police truth tracking, says the learned Advocate General. True, courts self-criminate themselves if they keep the gates ajar for culprits to flee justice under the guise of interpretative enlargement of golden rules of criminal jurisprudence, The Constitution and the criminal :

(14.) The inherent quandary of the penal law in this area springs from the implanted dilemma of exacting solicitude for possible (14.) The inherent quandary of the penal law in this area springs from the implanted dilemma of exacting solicitude for possible innocents forced to convict themselves out of their own lips by police tantrums and the social obligation of the limbs of the law and agencies of justice to garner truth from every quarter, to discover guilt, wherever hidden, and to fulfil the final tryst of the justice system with society, which is to shield the community against criminality by relentless pursuit of the culprit, by proof of guilt and punishment of crime, not facilitation of the fleeing criminal from the chase of the appointed authorities of the State charged with the task of investigating, testing proving and getting punished those whose anti-social exploits make citizen's life vulnerable.

(15.) The paradox has been put sharply by Lawis Mayers :

"To strike the balance between the needs of law enforcement on the one hand and the protection of the citizen from oppression and injustice at the hands of the law-enforcement machinery on the other is a perennial problem of statecraft. The pendulum over the years has swung to the right. Even as long ago as the opening of the twentieth century, Justice Holmes declared that 'at the present time in this country there is more danger that criminals will escape justice then that they will be subject to tyranny.' As the century has unfolded, the danger has increased.

Conspiracies to defeat the law have, in recent decades, become more widely and powerfully organized and have been able to use modern advances in communication and movement to make detection more difficult. Law-breaking tends to increase. During the same period, an increasing awareness of the potentialities of abuse of power by law-enforcement officials has resulted, in both the judicial and the legislative spheres, in a tendency to tighten restrictions on such officials, and to safeguard even more jealously the rights of the accused, the suspect, and the witness. It is not too much to say that at mid-century we confront a real dilemma in law enforcement.

In consequence, there is clearly discernible a tendency to re-examine the assumptions on which rest our complex of rules and doctrines which offer obstacles, perhaps wisely, to the discovery and proof of violations of law. In such a re-examination, the cluster of rules commonly grouped under the term 'privilege against self-incrimination', which has for many decades been under attack, peculiarly calls for restudy. In the words of Wigmore, 'Neither the history of the privilege, nor its firm constitutional anchorage need deter us from discussing at this day its policy. As a bequest of the 1600's, it is but a relic of controversies and convulsions which have along since ceased ... .. Nor does its constitutional sanction, embodied in a clause of half a dozen words, relieve us of the necessity of considering its policy ... A sound and intelligent opinion must be formed upon the merits of the policy."
(16.) Justice Douglas made this telling comment :
"As an original matter it might the debatable whether the provision of the Fifth Amendment that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself" serves the ends of justice (1952)".
These prologuic lines serve as background to a balanced approach to the crucial question posed before us.
A police lapse :
(17.) Before discussing the core issues, we wish to note our regret, in this case, at a higher level police officer, ignorantly insisting on a woman appearing at the police station, in flagrant contravention of the whole-some proviso to Section 160 (1) of the Cr. P. C. Such deviance must be visited with prompt punishment since policemen may not be a law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. The wages of indifference is reprimand, of intransigence disciplinary action. If the alibi is that the Sessions Court had directed the accused to appear at the police station, that is no absolution for a police officer from disobedience of the law. There is public policy, not complimentary to the police personnel, behind this legislative proscription which keeps juveniles and females from police company except at the former's safe residence. May be, in later years, community confidence and consciousness will regard the police force as entitled to better trust and soften the stigmatising or suspicious provisions now writ across the Code.
(18.) It is necessary, to appreciate the submissions, to remember the admitted fact that this is not the only case or investigation against the appellant and her mind may move around these many investigations, born and unborn, as she is confronted with questions. The relevance of this factor will be adverted to later.
Setting the perspective of Art. 20 (3) and Sec. 161 (2) : (19.) Back to the constitutional quintessence invigorating the ban on self-incrimination. The area covered by Art. 20 (3) and Section 161 (2) is substantially the same. So much so, we are inclined to the view, terminological expansion apart, that Section 161 (2) of the Cr. P. C. is a parliamentary gloss on the constitutional clause. The learned Advocate General argued that Art. 20 (3), unlike Section 161 (1), did not operate at the anterior stages before the case came to court and the accused's incriminating utterance, previously recorded, was attempted to be introduced. He relied on some passages in American decisions but, in our understanding, those passages do not so circumscribe and, on the other hand. the land mark Miranda (1966) 384 US 436 ruling did extend the embargo to police investigation also. Moreover, Art 20 (3), which is our provision, warrants no such truncation. Such a narrow meaning may emasculate a necessary protection. There are only two primary queries involved in this clause that seals the lips into permissible silence. (i). Is the person called upon to testify 'accused of any offence'? (ii) Is he being compelled to be witness against himself? A constitutional provision receives its full semantic range and so it follows that a wider connotation must be imparted to the expressions 'accused of any offence' and 'to be witness against himself'. The learned Advocate General, influenced by American decisions rightly agreed that in expression Section 161 (2) of the Code might cover not merely accusations already registered in police stations but those which are likely to be the basis for exposing a person to a criminal charge. Indeed, this wider construction, if applicable to Art. 20 (3), approximates the constitutional clause to the explicit statement of the prohibition in Section 161 (2). This latter provision meaningfully uses the expression 'expose himself to a criminal charge' : Obviously, these words mean, not only cases where the person is already exposed to a criminal charge but also instances which will imminently expose him to criminal charges. In Art. 20 (3), the expression 'accused of any offence' must mean formally accused in praesenti not in futuro - not even imminently as decisions now stand. The expression 'to be witness against himself' means more than the court process. Any giving of evidence, any furnishing of information, if likely to have an incriminating impact, answers the description of being witness against oneself. Not being limited to the forensic stage by express words in Art. 20 (3), we have to construe the expression to apply to every stage where furnishing of information and collection of materials takes place. That is to say, even the investigation at the police level is embraced by Art. 20 (3). This is precisely what section 161 (2) means. That sub-section relates to oral examination by police officers and grants immunity at that stage. Briefly, the Constitution and the Code are conterminous in the protective area while the Code may be changed, the Constitution is more enduring. Therefore, we have to base our conclusion not merely upon Section 161 (2) but on the more fundamental protection, although equal in ambit, contained in Art. 20 (3).

(20.) In a way this position brings us nearer to the Miranda ((1966) 384 U. S. 436) mantle of exclusion which extends the right against self-incrimination, to police examination and custodial interrogation and takes in suspects as much as regular accused persons. Under the Indian Evidence Act, the Miranda exclusionary rule that custodial interrogations are inherently coercive find expression (section 26), although the Indian provision confines it to confession which is a narrower concept than self-crimination.

(21.) We have earlier spoken of the conflicting claims requiring reconciliation. Speaking pragmatically, there exists a rivalry between societal interest in effecting crime detection and constitutional rights which accused individuals possess. Emphasis may shift, depending on circumstances, in balancing these interests as has been happening in America. Since Miranda ((1966) 384 U.S. 436) there has been retreat from stress on protection of the accused and gravitation towards society's interest in convicting lawbreakers. Currently, the trend in the American jurisdiction according to legal journals, is that 'respect for (constitutional) principles is eroded when they leap their proper bounds to interfere with the legitimate interests of society in enforcement of its laws ... ..' (Couch v.

Unites States. (1972) 409 U.S. 322, 336). Our constitutional perspective has, therefore, to be relative and cannot afford to be absolutist, especially when torture technology, crime escalation and other social variables affect the application of principles in producing humane justice.

(22.) Whether we consider the Talmudic law or the Magna Carta, the Fifth Amendment, the provisions of other constitutions or Article 20 (3), the driving force behind the refusal to permit forced self-crimination is the system of torture by investigators and courts from medieval times to modern days. Law is a response to life and the English rule of the accused's privilege of silence may easily be traced as a sharp reaction to the court of Star Chamber when self-incrimination was not regarded as wrongful. Indeed , then the central feature of the criminal proceedings, as Holdsworth has noted, was the examination of the accused.

(23.) The horror and terror that then prevailed did as a reaction, ... give rise to the reverential principle of immunity from interrogation for the accused. Sir James Stephen has observed :

"For at least a century and a half the (English) Courts have acted upon the supposition that to question a prisoner is illegal... ... This opinion arose from a peculiar and accidental state of things which has long since passed away and our modern law is in fact derived from somewhat questionable source though it may not doubt be defended (Sir James Stephen (1857)."

(24.) Two important considerations must be placed at the forefront before sizing up the importance and impregnability of the anti-self-incrimination guarantee. The first is that we cannot afford to write off the fear of police torture leading to forced self-incrimination as a thing of the past. Recent Indian history does into permit it, contemporary world history does not condone it. A recent article entitled 'Minds behind Bar's, published in the December, 1977 issue of the Listener, tells an awesome story: "The technology of torture all over the world is growing ever more sophisticated - new devises can destroy a prisoner's will in a matter of hours - but leave no visible marks or signs of brutality. And government-inflicted terror has evolved its own dark sub-culture. All over the world, torturers seem to feel a desire to appear respectable to their victims. ... . There is an endlessly inventive list of new methods of inflicting pain and suffering on fellow human beings that quickly cross continents and ideological barriers through some kind of international secret-police net work.

... . "What is encouraging in all this dark picture is that we feel that public opinion in several countries is much more aware of our general line than before. And that is positive. I think, in the long run, Governments can't ignore that. We are also encouraged by the fact that, today, human rights are discussed between governments - they are now on the international political agenda. But, in the end, what matters is the pain and suffering the individual endures in police station or cell."

(25.) Many police officers, Indian and foreign, may be perfect gentlemen, many police stations, here and elsewhere, may be wholesome. Even so, the law is made for the generality and Gresham's Law does not spare the Police force.

(26.) On the other hand, we must never forget that crimes, in India and internationally, are growing and criminals are outwitting the detectives. What holds good in the cities of the United States is infecting other countries, including our own. An American author in a recent book has stated ; "What do you think the city of tomorrow will be? In 1969 the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence made alarming predictions. You will live in a city where everyone has guns. Houses will be protected by grills and spy equipment. Armed citizen patrols will be necessary. The political extremes will be small armies. Buses will have to carry armed guards. There will be hatred and war between the races, and between the rich and the poor. In other words, your city will be place of terror.

"From 1969 to 1974 the number of crimes for each hundred thousand people is up 38% (48, pg. 12). Violent crimes rose 47% (48, pg. 23). Robbery increased 48% (48, pg. 25). Burglary went up a whopping 53% (48, pg. 29). Theft rose 35% (48, pg. 32). The chances are becoming better and better that you or someone dear to you will be a victim. The chances are also better that a close relative will be involved in crime as criminal.
"... ..In only 12% of the serious crimes is there a suspect arrested. Half of those are convicted. (Serious crime includes homicide, burglary, aggravated assault, larceny over $50, forcible rape, robbery, and auto theft). (63, pg. XVIII).
"The situation is so discouraging that only half the people bother to report serious crime (63, pg. XVIII). Even then, in 1974, 82% of the known burglaries went unsolved (48, pg. 42). That means only 18% of the half known to the police were solved.
"... . President Johnson's message to Congress 8/03/1965 is as true today as it was then:
'Crime has become a malignant enemy in America's midst... . We must arrest and reverse the trend towards lawlessness .... We cannot tolerate an endless, self-defeating cycle of imprisonment, release, and reimprisonment which fails to alter undesirable attitudes and behavior. We must find ways to help the first offender avoid a continuing career to crime.'
"

(27.) The first obligation of the criminal justice system is to secure justice by seeking and substantiating truth through proof. Of course, the means must be as good as the ends and the dignity of the individual and the freedom of the human person cannot be sacrificed by report to improper means, however worthy the ends. Therefore, 'Third degree' has to be outlawed and indeed has been. We have to draw up clear lines between the whirl-pool and the rock where the safety of society and the worth of the human person may co-exist in peace.
(28.) We now move down to the role of the Latin Maxim ' nemo tenetur se ipsum tenetur' which literally translated means, a man cannot represent himself as guilty. This rule prevailed in the Rabbinic courts and found a place in the Talmud (no one can incriminate himself). Later came the Star Chamber history and Anglo-American revulsion. Imperial Britain transplanted part of it into India in the Cr. P. C. Our Constitution was inspired by the high-minded inhibition against self-incrimination from Anglo-American sources. Thus we have a broad review of the origins and bearings of the fundamental right to silence and the procedural embargo on testimonial compulsion. The American cases need not detain us, although Miranda v. Arizona ((1966) 384 U. S. 436) being the Lodestar on the subject, may be referred to for grasping the basics of the Fifth Amendment bearing on oral incrimination by accused persons.
(29.) We have said sufficient to drive home the anxious point that this cherished principle which proscribes compulsory self-accusation, should not be dangerously over-broad or illusorily whittled down. And it must openly work in practice and not be a talismanic symbol. The Miranda ((1966) 384 U. S. 436) ruling clothed the Fifth Amendment with flesh and blood and so must we, if Art. 20 (3) is not to prove a promise of unreality. Aware that the questions raised go to the root of criminal jurisprudence we seek light from Miranda for interpretation, not innovation, for principles in their settings, not borrowings for our conditions. The spiritual thrust of the two provisions is the same and it is best expressed in the words of Brown v. Walker (1895) Law Ed 819:
"Over 70 years ago, our predecessors on this Court eloquently stated:
'The maxim nemo tenetur se ipsum accusare had its origin in a protest against the inquisitorial and manifestly unjust methods of interrogating accused persons, which (have) long obtained in the continental system, and , until the expulsion of the Stuarts from the British throne in 1688, and the erection of additional barries for the protection of the people against the exercise of arbitrary power, (were) not uncommon even in England. While the admissions or confessions of the prisoner, when voluntarily and freely made, have always ranked high in the scale of incriminating evidence, if an accused person be asked to explain his apparent connection with a crime under investigation, the case with which the questions ((1966) 384 US 436, 443) put to him may assume an inquisitorial character, the temptation to press the witness unduly, to browbeat him if he be timid or reluctant, to push him into a corner, and to entrap him into fatal contradictions, which is so painfully evident in many of the earlier state trials, notably in those of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, and Udal, the Puritan minister made the system so odious as to give rise to a demand for its total abolition. The change in the English criminal procedure in that particular seems to be founded upon no statute and no judicial opinion, but upon a general and silent acquiescence of the courts in a popular demand. But, however adopted, it has become firmly embedded in English, as well as in American jurisprudence. So deeply did the iniquities of the ancient system impress themselves upon the minds of the American colonists that the States, with one accord, made a denial of the right to question an accused person a part of their fundamental law, so that a maxim, which in England was a mere rule of evidence, became clothed in this country with the impregnability of a constitutional enactment."

Chief Justice Warren mentioned the setting of the case and of the times such as official overbearing, 'third degree'. sustained and protracted questioning incommunicado, rooms cut off from the outside worked methods which flourished but were becoming exceptions. 'But', noted the Chief Justice, 'they are sufficiently widespread to be the object of concern'. The Miranda court quoted from the conclusion of the Wickersham Commission Report made nearly half a century ago, and continued - words which ring a bell in Indian bosoms and so we think it relevant to our consideration and read it:

"To the contention that the third degree is necessary to get the facts, the reporters aptly reply in the language of the preset Lord Chancellor of England (Lord Sankey): It is not admissible to do a great right by doing a little wrong ... . It is not sufficient to do justice by obtaining a proper result by irregular or improper means." Not only does the use of the third degree involve a flagrant violation of Law by the officers of the law, but it involves also the dangers of false confessions, and it tends to make police and prosecutors less zealous in the search for objective evidence. As the New York prosecutor quoted in the report said, 'it is a short cut and makes the police lazy and unenterprising'. Or, as another official quoted remarked: 'If you use your fists, you are not so likely to use your units ((1966) 384 US 436, 448)' We agree with the conclusion expressed in the report, that 'The third degree brutalizes the police, hardens the prisoner against society, and lowers the esteem in which the administration of justice is held by the public.' "

(IV National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, Report on Lawlessness in Law Enforcement 5 (1931).)

(7) Again we stress that the modern practice of in-custody interrogation is psychologically rather than physically oriented. As we have stated before, "Since Chambers v. Florida, (1940) 309 US 227: (84 L Ed 716), this Court has recognized that coercion can be mental as well as physical and that the blood of the accused is not the only hallmark of an unconstitutional inquisition." Blackburn v. State of Alabama, (1960) 4 L Ed 2d 242. Interrogation still takes place in privacy. Privacy results in secrecy and this in turn results in a gap in our knowledge as to what in fact goes on in the interrogation rooms. A valuable source of information about present police practises, however, may be found in various police manuals and texts which document procedures employed with success in the past, and which recommend various other effective tactics. These texts ((1966) 384 US 436, 449) are used by law enforcement agencies themselves as guides. It should be noted that these texts professedly present the most enlightened and effective means presently used to obtain statements through custodial interrogation. By considering these texts and other date, it is possible to describe procedures observed and noted around the country.

The officers are told by the manuals that the 'principal psychological factor contributing to a successful interrogation is privacy - being alone with the person under interrogation'. (Inbau and Reid, Criminal Interrogation and Confessions (1962), at p. 1). The efficacy of this tactic has been explained as follows:

'If at all practicable, the interrogation should take place in the investigator's office or at least in a room of his own choice. The subject should be deprived of every psychological advantage. In his own home he may be confident, indignant. or recalcitrant. He is more keenly aware of his rights and more ((1966) 384 US 436, 450) reluctant to tell of his indiscretions or criminal behaviour within the walls of his home. Moreover his family and other friends are nearby, their presence lending moral support. In his own office, the investigator possesses all the advantages. The atmosphere suggests the invincibility of the forces of the law.' (O'Hara, Fundamentals of Criminal Investigation (1956) at 99).

To highlight the isolation and unfamiliar surroundings, the manuals instruct the police to display an air of confidence in the suspect's guilt and from outward appearance to maintain only an interest in confirming certain details. The guilt of the subject is to be posited as a fact. The interrogator should direct his comments toward the reasons why the subject committed the act, rather than Court failure by asking the subject whether he did it. Like other men, perhaps the subject has had a bad family life, had an unhappy childhood, had too much to drink, had an unrequired desire for women. The officers are instructed to minimise the moral seriousness of the offence, (Inbau and Reid, supra at 34-43, 87) to cast blame on the victim or on society. These tactics are designed to put the subject in a psychological state where his story is but an elaboration of what the police purport to know already-that he is guilty. Explanations to the contrary are dismissed and discouraged.

The texts thus stress that the major qualities an interrogator should possess are patience and perseverance. One writer ((1966) 384 US 436, 451) describes the efficacy of these characteristics in this manner:

'In the preceding paragraphs emphasis has been placed on kindness and stratagems. The investigator will, however, encounter many situations where the sheer weight of his personality will be the deciding factor. Where emotional appeals and tricks are employed to no avail, he must rely on an oppressive atmosphere of dogged persistence. He must interrogate steadily and without relent, leaving the subject no prospect of surcease. He must dominate his subject and overwhelm him with his inexorable will to obtain the truth. He should interrogate for a spell of several hours pausing only for the subject's necessities in acknowledgment of the need to avoid a charge of duress that can be technically substantiated. In a serious case, the interrogation may continue for days, with the required intervals for food and sleep, but with no respite from the atmosphere of domination. It is possible in this way to induce the subject to talk without resorting to duress or coercion. The method should be used only when the guilt of the subject appears highly probable. (O'Hara, Supra at 112)'.

The manuals suggest that the suspect be offered legal excuses for his actions in order to obtain an initial admission of guilt. Where there is a suspected revenge-killing, for example, the interrogator may say:

'Joe, you probably did not go out looking for this fellow with the purpose of shooting him. My guess is, however, that you expected something from him and that's why you carried a gun - for your own protection. You know him for what he was, no good. Then when you met him he probably started using foul, abusive language and he gave some indication that ((1966) 384 US 436, 452) he was about to pull a gun on you, and that's when you had to act to save your own life. That's about it, isn't it, Joe?' (Inbau and Reid, supra, at 40).

Having then obtained the admission of shooting, the interrogator is advised to refer to circumstantial evidence which negates the self-defence explanation. This should enable him to secure the entire story. One text notes that "Even if he fails to do so, the inconsistency between the subject's original denial of the shooting and his present admission of at least doing the shooting will serve to deprive him of a self-defence 'out' at the time of trial." (Ibid).

When the techniques described above prove unavailing, the texts recommend they be alternated with a show of some hostility. One ploy often used has been termed the "friendly-unfriendly" or the "Mutt and Jeff' act:"

A thorough and intimate sketch is made of the versatility of the arts of torture developed officially in American country calculated to break, by physical or psychological crafts, the morale of the suspect and make him cough up confessional answers. Police sops and syrups of many types are prescribed to wheedle unwitting words of guilt from tough or gentle subjects. The end product is involuntary incrimination, subtly secured, not crudely traditional. Our police processes are less 'scholarly' and sophisticated, but?

(30.) Another moral from the Miranda reasoning is the burning relevance of erecting protective fenders and to make their observance a police obligation so that the angelic Art. (20 (3)) may face upto satanic situations. Says Chief Justice Warren:

"In these cases, we might not find the defendants' statements to have been involuntary in traditional terms. Our concern for adequate safeguards to protect precious Fifth Amendment right is, of course, not lessened in the slightest. In each of the cases, the defendant was thrust into an unfamiliar atmosphere and run through menacing police interrogation procedures. The potentiality for compulsion is forcefully apparent, for example, in Miranda, where the indigent Mexican defendant was a seriously disturbed individual with pronounced sexual fantasies, and in Stewart, in which the defendant was an indigent Lost Angeles Negro who had dropped out of school in the sixth grade. To be sure, the records do not evince overt physical coercion or patent psychological ploys. The fact remains that in none of these cases did the officers undertake to afford appropriate safeguards at the outset of the interrogation to insure that the statements were truly the product of free choice. (8, 9) It is obvious that such an interrogation environment is created for no purpose other than to subjugate the individual to the will of his examiner. This atmosphere carried its own badge of intimidation. To be sure. this is not physical intimidation, but it is equally destructive of human dignity. (Professor Sutherland's recent article, crime and Confessions, 79 Harv I. Rev 21, 37 (1965)). The current practice of incommunicado interrogation is at odds with one of our Nations's ((1966) 384 US 436, 458) most cherished principles-that the individual may not be compelled to incriminate himself. Unless adequate protective devices are employed to dispel to compulsion inherent in custodial surroundings, no statement obtained from the defendant can truly be the product of his free choice."

We feel that by successful interpretation judge-centered law must catalyze community-centered legality.

(31.) There is one touch of nature which makes the judicial world kin-the love of justice-in-action and concern for human values. So, regardless of historical origins and political borrowings, the framers of our Constitution have cognized certain pessimistic poignancies and mellow life meanings and obligated judges to maintain a 'fair state-individual balance' and to broaden the fundamental right to fulfill its purpose, lest frequent martyrdoms reduce the article to a mock formula. Even silent approaches, furtive moves, slight deviations and subtle ingenuities may erode the article's validity unless the law outlaws illegitimate and unconstitutional procedures before they find their first firm footing. The silent cause of the final fall of the tall tower is the first stone obliquely and obliviously removed from the base. And Art. 20 (3) is a human article, a guarantee of dignity and integrity and of inviolability of the person and refusal to covert an adversary system into an inquisitorial scheme in the antagonistic ante-chamber of a police station. And in the long run, that investigation is best which uses stratagems least, that policeman deserves respect who gives his fists rest and his wits restlessness. The police are part of us and must rise in people's esteem through firm and friendly, not foul and sneaky strategy. The police reflect the State. the State society. The Indian legal situation has led to judicial concern over the State v. individual balance. After tracing the English and American developments in the law against self-incrimination, Jagannadhadas, J., in M. P. Sharma's case 1954 SCR 1077 at pp. 1085, 1086 : (AIR 1954 SC 300 at p. 303) observed:

"Since the time when the principle of protection against self-incrimination became established in English law and in other systems of law which have followed it, there has been considerable debate as to the utility thereof and serious doubts were held in some quarters that this principle has a tendency to defeat justice. In support of the principle it is claimed that the protection of accused against self-incrimination promotes active investigation from external sources to find out the truth and proof of alleged or suspected crime instead of extortion of confessions on unverified suspicion.... On the other hand, the opinion has been strongly held in some quarters that this rule has an undesirable effect on social interests and that in the detection of crime, the State is confronted with overwhelming difficulties as a result of this privilege. It is said that has become a hiding place of crime and has outlived its usefulness and that the rights of accused persons are amply protected without this privilege and that no innocent person is in need of it...."

"In view of the above background, there is no inherent reason to construe the ambit of this fundamental right as comprising a very wide range, Nor would it be legitimate to confine it to the barely literal meaning of the words used, since it is a recognised doctrine that when appropriate a constitutional provision has to be liberally construed, so as to advance the intendment thereof and to prevent its circumvention... "

Issues Answered, 'Any person' in S. 161, Cr. P. C.:

(32.) We will now answer the questions suggested at the beginning and advert to the decisions of our Court which set the tone and temper of the 'silence' clause and bind us willy nilly. We have earlier explained why we regard S. 161 (2) as a sort of parliamentary commentary on Art. 20 (3). So, the first point to decide is whether the police have power under Ss. 160 and 161 of the Cr. P. C. to question a person who, then was or, in the future may incarnate as, an accused person. The Privy Council and this Court have held that the scope of S. 161 does include actual accused and suspects and we deferentially agree without repeating the detailed reasons urged before us by counsel.

(33.) The Privy Council, in Pakala Narayana Swami's case (AIR 1939 PC 47) reasoned

"If one had to guess at the intention of the Legislature in framing a Section in the words used, one would suppose that they had in mind to encourage the free disclosure of information or to protect the person making the statement from a supposed unreliability of police testimony as to alleged statements or both. In any case the reasons would apply as might be thought a fortiori to an alleged statement made by a person ultimately accused. But in truth when the meaning of words is plain it is not the duty of the Courts to busy themselves with supposed intentions.

I have been long and deeply impressed with the wisdom of the rule. Now I believe universally adopted, at least in the Courts of law in Westminster Hall, that in construing will and indeed statutes, and all written instruments, the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to, unless that would lead to some absurdity, or some repugnance or inconsistency with the rest of the instrument, in which case the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words may be modified, so as to avoid that absurdity and inconsistency, but no farther: Lord Wensleydale in (1857) 6 HLC 61 at p. 106.

My Lords, to quote from the language of Tindal, C. J. when delivering the opinion of the Judges in (1844) 11 CL and F 85 at page 143, 'The only rule for the construction of Acts of Parliament is that they should be construed according to the intent of the Parliament which passed the Act. If the words of the statute are in themselves precise and unambiguous, then no more can be necessary than to expound those words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words themselves alone do in such case best declare the intention of the law-giver. But if any doubt arises from the terms employed by the Legislature, it has always been held a safe means of collecting the intention, to call in aid the ground and cause of making the statue. and to have recourse to the preamble which according to Dyer, C. J. (1952) 1 Plowed 353 is a key to open the minds of the makers of the Act, and the mischiefs which they are intended to redress: Lord Halsbury LC in (1891) AC 531 at p. 542.

They reached the conclusion that 'any person' in S. 161, Cr. P. C.; would include persons then or ultimately accused. The view was approved in Mahabir Mandal's case ((1972) 3 SCR 639) at p. 657 : (AIR 1972 SC 1331). We hold that 'any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case' includes an accused person who fills that role because the police suppose him to have committed the crime and must, therefore, be familiar with the facts. The supposition may letter prove a fiction but that does not repel the section. Nor does the marginal note 'examination of witnesses by police' clinch the matter. A marginal not clears ambiguity but does not control meaning. Moreover, the suppositions accused figures functionally as a witness. 'To be a witness', from a functional angle, is to impart knowledge in respect of a relevant fact, and that is precisely the purpose of questioning the accused under S. 161, Cr. P. C. The dichotomy between 'witnesses' and 'accused' used as terms of art, does not hold good here. The amendment, by Act XV of 1941, of Section 162 (2) of the Cr. P. Code is a legislative acceptance of the Pakala Narayana Swamy reasoning and guards against a possible repercussion of that ruling. The appellant squarely fell within the interrogational ring. To hold otherwise is to fold up investigative exercise, since questioning suspect is desirable for detection of crime and even protection of the accused. Extreme positions may boomerang in law as in politics. Moreover, as the Miranda ((1966) 384 US 436) decision states :

"It is an act of responsible citizenship for individuals to give whatever information they may have to aid in law enforcement.

Confessions remain a proper element in law enforcement. Any statement given freely and voluntarily without any compelling influences is, of course, admissible in evidence. The fundamental import of the privilege while an individual is in custody is not whether he is allowed to talk to the police without the benefit of warnings and counsel, but whether he can be interrogated. There is no requirement that police stop a person who enters a police station and states that he wishes to confess to a crime, or a person who calls the police to offer a confession or any other statements he desires to make. Volunteered statements of any kind are not barred by the Fifth Amendment and their admissibility is not affected by our holding today. (Emphasis added);

A recurrent argument made in these cases is that society's need for interrogation outweighs the privilege. This argument is not unfamiliar to this Court. See. e.g., Chambers v. Florida, (1940) 309 US 227, 240-241 : 84 L. Ed. 716, 724: 60 S Ct 472. The whole thrust of our foregoing discussion demonstrates that the Constitution has prescribed the rights of the individual when confronted with the power of Government when it provided in the Fifth Amendment that an individual cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself. That right cannot be abridged. As Mr. Justice Brandeis once observed:

"Decency, security and liberty alike demand that Government officials shall be subjected to the same rules of conduct that are commands to the citizens. In a Government of laws, existence of the Government will be imperiled if it fails to observe the law scrupulously. Our Government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example, Crime is contagious. If the Government becomes a law-breaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justified the means... bring terrible retribution, Against at the pernicious doctrine this Court should resolutely set its face." Olmstead v. United States, (1928) 277 US 438, 485: 72 L. Ed. 944, 959: 48 S Ct 564: 66 ALR 376 (dissenting opinion).

In this connection, one of our country's distinguished jurists has pointed out: "The quality of a nation's civilization can be largely measured by the methods it uses in the enforcement of its criminal law." (Emphasis supplied).

Article 20 (3) 'Accused of an offence':

(34.) It is idle to-day to ply the query whether a person formally brought into the police diary as an accused person is eligible for the prophylactic benefits of Art. 20 (3). He is, and the learned Advocate-General fairly stated, remembering the American cases and the rule of liberal construction, that suspects, not yet formally charged but embryonically are accused on record, also may swim into the harbour of Art. 20 (3). We note this position but do not have to pronounce upon it because certain observations in Oghad's case ((1962) 3 SCR 10): (AIR 1961 SC 1808) concludes the issue. And is Bansilal's case (1961) 1 SCR 417 at p. 438: (AIR 1961 SC 29 at pp. 38, 39) this Court observed:

"Similarly, for invoking the constitutional rights/against testimonial compulsion guaranteed under Art. 20 (3) it must appear that a formal accusation has been made against the party pleading the guarantee and that it relates to the commission of an offence which in the normal course may result in prosecution. Here again the nature of the accusation and its probable sequel or consequence are regarded as important.

Thus we go back to the question which we have already posed was the appellant accused of any offence at the time when the impugned notices were served on him? In answering this question in the light of the tests to which we have just referred it will be necessary to determine the scope and nature of the enquiry which the inspector undertakes under S. 240; for unless it is shown that an accusation of a crime can be made in such an enquiry, the appellant's plea under Art. 20 (3) cannot succeed. Section 240 shows that the enquiry which the inspector undertakes is in substance an enquiry into the affairs of the company concerned.

If, after receiving the report, the Central Government is satisfied that any person is guilty of an offence for which he is criminally liable, it may, after taking legal advice, institute criminal proceedings against the offending person under S. 242 (1); but the fact that a prosecution may ultimately be launched against the alleged offender will not retrospectively change the complexion or character of the proceedings held by the inspector when he makes the investigation. Have irregularities been committed in managing the affairs of the company if yes, what is the nature of the irregularities? Do they amount to the commission of an offence punishable under the criminal law? If they do who is liable for the said offence? These and such other questions fall within the purview of the inspector's investigation. The scheme of the relevant sections is that the investigation begins broadly with a view to examine the management of the affairs of the company to find out whether any irregularities have been committed or not. In such a case there is no accusation, either formal or otherwise, against any specified individual; there may be a general allegation that the affairs are irregularly, improperly or illegally managed; but who would be responsible for the affairs which are reported to be irregularly managed is a matter which would be determined at the end of the enquiry. At the commencement of the enquiry and indeed throughout its proceedings there is no accused person, no accuser and no accusation against anyone that he has committed an offence. In our opinion a general enquiry and investigation into the affairs of the company thus contemplated cannot be regarded as an investigation which starts with an accusation contemplated in Art. 20 (3) of the Constitution. In this connection it is necessary to remember that the relevant sections of the Act appear in Part VI which generally deals with management and administration of the companies."

(35.) In Raja Narayanlal Bansilal v. Manek Phiroz Mistry ((1961) 1 SCR 417): (AIR 1961 SC 29). The admissibility of a statement made before an Inspector appointed by the Government of India under the Indian Companies Act. 1923, to investigate the affairs of a Company and to report thereon was canvassed. It was observed.

"... ..one of the essential conditions for invoking the constitutional guarantee enshrined in Art. 20 (3) is that a formal accusation relating to the commission of an offence, which would normally lead to his prosecution, must have been levelled against the party who is being compelled to give evidence against him."

Sinha, C. J., speaking for the majority of the Court in Kathi Oghad's case (AIR 1961 SC 1808), stated thus :

"To bring the statement in question within the prohibition of Art. 20 (3), the person accused must have stood in the character of an accused person at the time he made the statement. It is not enough that he should become an accused, any time after the statement has been made."

Further observations in Bansilal's case (AIR 1961 SC 29) make it out that in an enquiry undertaken by an Inspector to investigate into the affairs of a company, the statement of a person not yet an accused, is not hit by Art. 20 (3). Such a general enquiry has no specific accusation before it and, therefore, no specific accused whose guilt is to be investigated. Therefore, Art. 20 (3) stands excluded. In R. C. Mehta (1969) 2 SCR 461: (AIR 1970 SC 940) also the court observed:

"... Normally a person stands in the character of an accused when a First Information Report is lodged against him in respect of an offence before an Officer competent to investigate it, or when a complaint is made relating to the commission of an offence before a Magistrate competent to try or send to another Magistrate for trial of the offence. Where a Customs Officer arrests a person and informs that person of the grounds of his arrest, (which he is bound to do under Art. 22 (1) of the Constitution) for the purpose of holding an enquiry into the infringement of the provisions of the Sea Customs Act which he has reason to believe has taken place, there is no formal accusation of an offence. In the case of an offence by infringement of the Sea Customs Act and punishable at the trial before a Magistrate there is an accusation when a complaint is lodged by an officer competent in that behalf before the Magistrate."

Reliance was placed on Goenka's case (Cri As. Nos. 131 and 132 of 1961, D/- 20-9-1963 (SC)) where this Court has said:

"The information collected under S. 19 is for the purpose of seeing whether a prosecution should be launched or not. At that stage when information is being collected there is no accusation against the person from whom information is being collected. It may be that after the information has been collected the Central Government or the Reserve Bank may come to the conclusion that there is no case for prosecution and the person concerned may never be accused. It cannot therefore be predicted that the person from whom information is being collected under S. 19 is necessarily in the position of an accused. The question whether he should be made an accused is generally decided after the information is collected and it is when a show cause notice is issued, as was done in this case on 4/07/1955, that it can be said that a formal accusation has been made against the person concerned. We are therefore of the opinion that the appellant is not entitled to the protection of Art. 20 (3) with respect to the information that might have been collected from him under S. 19 before 4/07/1955."

(36.) It is plausible to argue that, where realism prevails over formalism and probability over possibility, the enquiries under criminal statutes with quasi-criminal investigations are of an accusatory nature and are sure to end in prosecution, if the offence is grave and the evidence gathered good. And to deny the protection of a constitutional shield designed to defend a suspect because the enquiry is preliminary and may possibly not reach the court is to erode the substance while paying hollow homage to the holy verbalism of the article. We are not directly concerned with this facet of Art. 20 (3); nor are we free to go against the settled view of this Court. There it is.

At what stage of the justice process does Art. 20 (3) operate?

(37.) Another fatuous opposition to the application of the constitutional inhibition may be noted and negatived. Does the ban in Art. 20 (3) operate only when the evidence previously procured from the accused is sought to be introduced into the case at the trial by the court? This submission, if approved, may sap the juice and retain the rind of art. 20 (3) doing interpretative violence to the humanist justice of the proscription.

(38.) The text of the clause contains no such clue, its intendment is stultified by such a judicial 'amendment' and an expansive construction has the merit of natural meaning, self-fulfilment of the 'silence zone' and the advancement of human rights. We over-rule the plea for narrowing down the play of the sub-article to the forensic phase of trial. It works where the mischief is, in the womb, i. e. the police process. In the language of Miranda ((1966) 384 US 436):

"Today, then, there can be no doubt that the Fifth Amendment privilege is available outside of criminal court proceedings and serves to protect persons in all settings in which their freedom of action is curtailed in any significant way from being compelled to incriminate themselves."

The constitutional shield must be as broad as the contemplated danger. The Court in M. P. Sharma's case (AIR 1954 SC 300) took this extended view

"Indeed, every positive volitional act which furnishes evidence is testimony, and testimonial compulsion connotes coercion which procures the positive volitional evidentiary acts of the person, as opposed to the negative attitude of silence or submission on his part. Nor is there any reason to think that the protection in respect of the evidence so procured is confined to what transpires at the trial in the court room. The phrase used in Art. 20 (3) is "to be a witness" and not to "appear as a witness": It follows that the protection afforded to an accused in so far as it is related to the phrase "to be a witness" is not merely in respect of testimonial compulsion in the court room but may well extend to compelled testimony previously obtained from him. It is available therefore to a person against whom a formal accusation relating to the commission of an offence has been leveled which in the normal course may result in prosecution. Whether it is available to other persons in other situations does not call for decision in this case (emphasis added):

(39.) Considered in this light, the guarantee under Article 20 (3) would be available in the present cases to these petitioners against whom a First Information Report has been recorded as accused therein. It would extend to any compulsory process for production of evidentiary documents which are reasonably likely to support a prosecution against them.

(40.) We have to apply this rule of construction, an offshoot of the Heydon's case doctrine ((1584) 76 ER 637), while demarcating the suspect and the sensitive area of self-crimination and the protected sphere of defensive silence. If the police can interrogate to the point of self accusation, the subsequent exclusion of that evidence at the trial hardly helps because the harm has been already done. The police will prove through other evidence what they have procured through forced confession. So it is that the foresight of the framers has pre-tempted self incrimination at the incipient stages by not expressly restricting it to the trial stage in court. True, compelled testimony previously obtained is excluded. But the preventive blow falls also on pre-court testimonial compulsion. The condition, as the decisions now go, is that the person compelled must be an accused. Both precedent procurement and subsequent exhibition of self-criminating testimony are obviated by intelligent constitutional anticipation.

(i) What is an incriminatory statement? (ii) What is compelled testimony?

(41.) Two vital, yet knotty, problems demand solution at this stage. What is 'being witness against' oneself? Or. in the annotational language of Section 161 (2), when are answers tainted with the tendency to expose an accused to a criminal charge? When can testimony be castigated as 'compelled? The answer to the first has been generally outlined by us earlier. Not all relevant answers are criminatory; not all criminatory answers are confessions. Tenancy to expose to a criminal charge is wider than actual exposure to such charge. The spirit of the American rulings and the substance of this Court's observations justify this 'wheels within wheels' conceptualization of self-accusatory statements. The orbit of relevancy is large. Every fact which has a nexus to naypart of a case is relevant but such nexus with the case does not make it noxious to the accused. Relevance may co-exist with innocence and constitutional censure is attracted only when inference of nocence exists. And an incriminatory inference is not enough for a confession. Only, if, without more, the answer establishes guilt, dies it amount to a confession. An illustration will explicate our proposition.

(42.) Let us hypothesize a homocidal episode in which A dies and B is suspected of murder; the scene of the crime being 'C'. In such a case a bunch of questions may be relevant and yet be innocent. Any one who describes the scene as well-wooded or dark or near a stream may be giving relevant evidence of the landscape. Likewise, the medical evidence of the wounds on the deceased and the police evidence of the spots where blood pools were noticed are relevant but vis-a-vis B may have no incriminatory force. But an answer that B was seen at or near the scene, at or about the time of the occurrence or had blood on his clothes will be criminatory, is the hazard of inculpatory implication. In this sense A answers that would, in themselves, support a conviction are confessions but answers which have a reasonable tendency strongly to point out to the guilt of the accused are incriminatory. Relevant replies which furnish a real and clear link in the chain of evidence indeed to bind down the accused with the crime become incriminatory and offend Art. 20 (3) if elicited by pressure from the mouth of the accused. If the statement goes further to spell in terms that B killed A, it amounts to confession. An answer acquires confessional status only if, in terms or substantially, all the facts which constitute the offence are admitted by the offender. If his statement also contains self-exculpatory matter it ceases to be a confession. Article 20 (3) strikes at confessions and self-incriminations but leaves untouched other relevant facts.

(43.) In Hoffman v. United States ((1950) 341 US 479) the Supreme Court of the United States considered the scope of the privilege against self-incrimination and held that it would extend not only to answers that would in themselves support a conviction but likewise embrace those which would furnish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prosecute the claimant. However, it was clarified that the link must be reasonably strong to make the accused apprehend danger from such answer. Merely because he fancied that by such answer he would incriminate himself he could not claim the privilege of silence. It must appear to the court that the implications of the question, in the setting in which it is asked, made it evident that a responsive answer or an explanation of why it cannot be answered might be dangerous because injurious disclosure could result. The apprehension of incrimination from the answer sought must be substantial and real as distinguished from danger of remote possibilities or fanciful flow of inference. Two things need emphasis. The setting of the particular case, the context and the environment i.e. the totality of circumstances must inform the perspective of the court adjudging the incriminatory injury, and where reasonable doubt exists, the benefit must go in favour of the right to silence by a liberal construction of the Article. In Malloy v. Hogan, ((1964) 12 L Ed 2-d 653), the Court unhesitatingly held that the claim of a witness of privilege against self-Incrimination has to be tested on a careful consideration of all the circumstances in the case and where it is clear that the claim is unjustified, the protection is unavailable. We have summarised the Hoffman standard and the Malloy test. Could the witness (accused) have reasonably sensed the peril of prosecution from his answer in the conspectus of circumstances? That is the true test. The perception of the peculiarities of the case cannot be irrelevant in proper appraisal of self-incriminatory potentiality. The cases of this Court have used different phraseology but set down substantially the same guidelines.

(44.) Phipson, it is true, has this to say on self-incrimination: 'The rule applies to questions not only as to direct criminal acts, but as to perfectly innocent matters forming merely links in the chain of proof.' We think this statement too widely drawn if applied to Indian Statutory and Constitutional Law. Cross also has overstated the law, going by Indian provisions by including in the prohibition even those answers 'which might be used as a step towards obtaining evidence against him.' The policy behind the privilege, under our scheme, does not swing so wide as to sweep out of admissibility statements neither confessional per se nor guilty in tendency but merely relevant facts which, viewed in any setting, does not have a sinister import. To spread the net so wide is to make a mockery of the examination of the suspect, so necessities in the search for truth. Overbreadth undermines, and we demur to such morbid exaggeration of a wholesome protection. Neither Hoffman ((1950) 341 US 479) nor Malloy (1964) 12 Law Ed 2d 653) nor Maness (1975) 42 L Ed 2d 574) drives us to this devaluation of the police process. And we are supported by meaningful hints from prior decisions. In Kathi Kalu Oghad's case (1962) 3 SCR 10 at p. 32: (AIR 1961 SC 1808 at p. 1815), this court authoritatively observed, on the bounds between constitutional proscription and testimonial permission:

"In order that a testimony by an accused person may be said to have been self-incriminatory, the compulsion of which comes within the prohibition of the constitutional provisions, it must be of such a character that by itself it should have the tendency of incriminating the accused, if not also of actually doing so. In other words, it should be a statement which makes the case against the accused person at least probable. considered by itself".

Again, the court indicated that Art. 20 (3) could be invoked only against statements which 'had a material bearing on the criminality of the maker of the statement'. 'By itself' does not exclude the setting or other integral circumstances but means something in the fact disclosed a guilt element. Blood on clothes, gold bars with notorious marks and presence on the scene or possession of the lethal weapon or corrupt currency have a tale to tell, beyond red fluid, precious metal, gazing at the stars of testing sharpness or value of the rupee. The setting of the case is an implied component of the statement.

(45.) The problem that confronts us is amenable to reasonable solution. Relevancy is tendency to make a fact probable. Crimination is a tendency to make guilt probable. Confession is a potency to make crime conclusive. The taint of tendency, under Art. 20 (3) and section 161 (1), is more orless the same, It is not a remote, recondite, freak or fanciful inference but a reasonable, real, material or probable deduction. This governing test holds good, it is pragmatic, for you feel the effect, its guilty portent, fairly clearly.

(46.) We, however, underscore the importance of the specific setting of a given case for judging the tendency towards guilt. Equally emphatically, we stress the need for regard to the impact of the plurality of other investigations in the offing or prosecutions pending on the amplitude of the immunity. 'To be witness against oneself' is not confined to particular offence regarding which the questioning is made but extends to other offences about which the accused has reasonable apprehension of implication from his answer. This conclusion also flows from 'tendency to be exposed to a criminal charge'. 'A criminal charge' covers any criminal charge then under investigation or trial or imminently threatens the accused.

(47.) The setting of the case or cases is also of the utmost significance in pronouncing on the guilty tendency of the question and answer. What in one milieu may be colourless, may, in another be criminal. 'Have you fifty rupees in your pocket? asks a police officer of a P. W. D. engineer. He may have. It spells no hint of crime. But if, after setting a trap, if the same policeman, on getting the signal, moves in and challenges the engineer, 'have you 50 rupees in your pocket?' The answer, if 'yes', virtually proves the guilt. ' Were you in a particular house at a particular time?' is an innocent question; but in the setting of a murder at that time in that house, where none else was present, an affirmative answer may be an affirmation of guilt. While subjectivism of the accused may exaggeratedly apprehend a guilty inference lingering behind every non-committal question, objectivism reasonably screens nocent from innocent answers. Therefore, making a fair margin for the accused's credible apprehension of implication from his own mouth, the court will view the interrogation objectively to hold it criminatory or otherwise, without surrendering to the haunting subjectivism of the accused. The dynamics of constitutional 'silence' cover many interacting factors and repercussions from 'speech'.

(48.) The next serious question debated before us is as to the connotation of 'compulsion' under Art. 20 (3) and its reflection in Section 161 (1). In Kathy Kalu Oghad's case (AIR 1961 SC 1808) (supra), Sinha C. J.. explained :

"In order to bring the evidence within the inhibition of cl. (3) of Art. 20 it must be shown not only that the person making the statement was an accused at the time he made it and that it had a material bearing on the criminality of the maker of the statement, but also that he was compelled to make that statement, 'Compulsion' in the context, must mean what in law is called 'duress'. In the Dictionary of English Law by Earl Jowitt, 'duress' is explained as follows:

'Duress is where a man is compelled to do an act by injury, beating or unlawful imprisonment (sometimes called duress in strict sense) or by the threat of being killed, suffering some grievous bodily harm, or being unlawfully imprisoned (sometimes called menace, or duress per minas). Duress also includes threatening, beating or imprisonment of the wife, parent or child of a person.'

The compulsion in this sense is a physical objective act and not the state of mind of the person making the statement, except where the mind has been so conditioned by the some extraneous process as to render the making of the statement involuntary and, therefore, extorted. Hence, the mere asking by a police officer investigating a crime against a certain individual to do a certain thing is not compulsion within the meaning of Art. 20 (3). Hence, the mere fact that the accused person, when he made the statement in question was in police custody would not, by itself, be the foundation for an inference of law that the accused was compelled to make the statement. Of course, it is open to an accused person to show that while he was in police custody at the relevant time, he was subjected to treatment which, in the circumstances of the case, would lend itself to the inference that compulsion was, in fact, exercised. In other words, it will be a question of fact in each case to be determined by the Court on weighing the facts and circumstances disclosed in the evidence before it."

This question of fact has to be carefully considered against the background of the circumstances disclosed in each case.

(49.) The policy of the law is that each individual, accused included, by virtue of his guaranteed dignity, has a right to a private enclave where he may lead a free life without overbearing investigatory invasion or even crypto-coercion. The protean forms gendarme duress assumes the environmental pressures of police presence, compounded by incommunicado confinement and psychic exhaustion, torturesome interrogation and physical menaces and other ingenious, sophisticated procedures - the condition, mental, physical, cultural and social, of the accused, the length of the interrogation and the manner of its conduct and a variety of like circumstances, will go into the pathology of coerced para-confessional answers. The benefit of doubt, where reasonable doubt exists, must go in favour of the accused. The U. S. Supreme Court declared, and we agree with it, that '... .our contemplation cannot be only of what has been but of what may be. Under any other rule a constitution would indeed be as easy of application as it would be deficient in efficacy and power. Its general principles would have little value and be converted by precedent into impotent and lifeless formulas. Rights declared in words might be lost in reality. And this has been recognized. The meaning (1966) 384 US 436 (444)) and vitality of the Constitution have developed against narrow and restrictive construction.' ((1909) 54 L Ed 793, 810).

Making Art. 20 (3) effective in action.

(50.) Impregnability of the constitutional fortress built around Art. 20 (3) is the careful concern of the Court and, for this purpose, concrete directives must be spelt out. To leave the situation fluid, after a general discussion and statement of broad conclusions, may not be proper where glittering phrases pale into gloomy realities in the dark recesses where the law has to perform. Law is what law does and not what law says. This realisation obligates us to set down concrete guidelines to make the law a working companion of life. In this context we must certainly be aware of the burdens which law enforcement officials bear, often under trying circumstances and public ballyhoo and amidst escalating as well as novel crime proliferation. Our conclusions are, therefore, based upon an appreciation of the difficulties of the police and the necessities of the Constitution.

(51.) The functional role and practical sense of the law is of crucial moment. "An acre in Middlesex," said Macaulay, "is better than a principality in Utopia." (Introduction to 'Law in America' by Bernard Schwartz.) This realism has great relevance when dealing with interrogation, incrimination, police station, the Constitution and the code.

(52.) Now we will first formulate our findings on the various matters argued before us and discussed above. Then we will fortify the observance of the legal requirements by the police through practical prescriptions and proscriptions.

(53.) We hold that Section 161 enables the police to examine the accused during investigation. The prohibitive sweep of Art. 20 (3) goes back to the stage of police interrogation - not, as contended, commencing in court only. In our judgment the provisions of Art. 20 (3) and Section 161 (1) substantially cover the same area, so far as police investigations are concerned. The ban on self-accusation and the right to trial is under way, goes beyond that case and protects the accused in regard to other offences pending or imminent, which may deter him from voluntary disclosure of criminatory matter. We are disposed to read 'compelled testimony' as evidence procured not merely by physical threats or violence but by psychic torture, atmospheric pressure, environmental coercion, tiring interrogative polixity, overbearing and intimidatory methods and the like - not legal penalty for violation. So, the legal perils following upon refusal to answer, or answer truthfully. cannot be regarded as compulsion within the meaning of Art. 20 (3). The prospect of prosecution may lead to legal tension in the exercise of a constitutional right, but then, a stance of silence is running a calculated risk. On the other hand, if there is any mode of pressure, subtle or crude, mental or physical, direct or indirect, but sufficiently substantial, applied by the policeman for obtaining information from an accused strongly suggestive of guilt, it becomes 'compelled testimony', violative of Art. 20 (3).

(54.) A police officer is clearly a person in authority. Insistence on answering is a form of pressure especially in the atmosphere of the police station unless certain safeguards erasing duress are adhered to. Frequent threats of prosecution if there is failure to answer may take on the complexion of undue pressure violating Art. 20 (3). Legal penalty may by itself not amount to duress but the manner of mentioning it to the victim of interrogation may introduce an element of tension and tone of command perilously hovering near compulsion.

(55.) We have explained elaborately and summed up, in substance, what is self-incrimination or tendency to expose oneself to a criminal charge. It is less than 'relevant' and more than 'confessional'. Irrelevance is impermissible but relevance is licit but when relevant questions are loaded with guilty inference in the event of an answer being supplied, the tendency to incriminate springs into existence. we hold further that the accused person cannot be forced to answer questions merely because the answers thereto are not implicative when viewed in isolation and confined to that particular case. He is entitled to keep his mouth shut if the answer sought has a reasonable prospect of exposing him to guilt in some other accusation actual or imminent, even though the investigation underway is not with reference to that. We have already explained that in determining the incriminatory character of an answer the accused is entitled to consider - and the Court while adjudging will take note of - the setting, the totality of circumstances, the equation, personal and social, which have a bearing on making an answer substantially innocent but in effect guilty in import. However, fanciful claims, unreasonable apprehensions and vague possibilities cannot be the hiding ground for an accused person. He is bound to answer where there is no clear tendency to criminate.

(56.) We have no doubt that Section 179 I. P. C. has a component of mens rea and where there is no wilful refusal but only unwitting omission or innocent warding off, the offence is not made out. When there is reasonable doubt indicated by the accused's explanation he is entitled to its benefit and cannot be forced to substantiate his ground lest, by this process, be is constrained to surrender the very privilege for which he is fighting. What may apparently be innocent information may really be nocent or noxious viewed in the wider setting.

(57.) It may not be sufficient merely to state the rules of jurisprudence in a branch like this. The man who has to work it is the average police head constable in the Indian countryside. The man who has to defend himself with the constitutional shield is the little individual, by and large. The place where these principles have to have play is the unpleasant police station, unused to constitutional nuances and habituated to other strategies. Naturally practical points which lend themselves to adoption without much sophistication muse be indicated if this judgment is to have full social relevance. In this perspective we address ourselves to the further task of concretizing guidelines.

(58.) Right at the beginning we must notice Art. 22 (1) of the Constitution, which reads: "No person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds for such arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult, and to be defended by, a legal practitioner of his choice."

The right to consult an advocate of his choice shall not be denied to any person who is arrested. This does not mean that persons who are not under arrest or custody can be denied that right. The spirit and sense of Art. 22 (1) is that it is fundamental to the rule of law that the services of a lawyer shall be available for consultation to any accused person under circumstances of near-custodial interrogation. Moreover, the observance of the right against self-incrimination is best promoted by conceding to the accused the right to consult a legal practitioner of his choice.

(59.) Lawyer's presence is a constitutional claim in some circumstances in our country also, and, in the context of Art. 20 (3), is an assurance of awareness and observance of the right to silence. The Miranda decision ((1966) 384 US 436) has insisted that if an accused person asks for lawyer's assistance, at the stage of interrogation, it shall be granted before commencing or continuing with the questioning. We think that Art. 20 (3) and Art. 22 (1) may, in a way, be telescoped by making it prudent for the Police to permit the advocate of the accused, if there be one, to be present at the time he is examined. Over-reaching Art. 20 (3) and section 161 (2) will be obviated by this requirement. We do not lay down that the Police must secure the services of a lawyer. That will lead to 'police-station-lawyer' system, an abuse which breeds other vices. But all that we mean is that if an accused person expresses the wish to have his lawyer by his side when his examination goes on, this facility shall not be denied, without being exposed to the serious reproof that involuntary self-crimination secured in secrecy and by coercing the will, was the project.

(60.) Not that a lawyer's presence is a panacea for all problems of involuntary self-crimination, for he cannot supply answers or whisper hints or otherwise interfere with the course of questioning except to intercept where intimidatory tactics are tried, caution his client where incrimination is attempted and insist on questions and answers being noted where objections are not otherwise fully appreciated. He cannot harangue the police but may help his client and complain on his behalf, although his very presence will ordinarily remove the implicit menace of a police station.

(61.) We realize that the presence of a lawyer is asking for the moon in many cases until a public defender system becomes ubiquitous. The police need not wait more than for a reasonable while for an advocate's arrival. But they must invariably warn - and record that fact -about the right to silence against self incrimination; and where the accused is literate take his written acknowledgment.

(62.) 'Third degree' is an easy temptation where the pressure to detect is heavy, the cerebration involved is hard and the resort to torture may yield high dividends. Das Gupta, J., dissenting for the minority on the bench, drove home a point which deserves attention while on constitutional construction:

"It is sufficient to remember that long before our Constitution came to be framed the wisdom of the policy underlying these rules had been well recognised. Not that there was no view to the contrary; but for long it has been generally agreed among those who have devoted serious thought to these problems that few things could be more harmful to the detection of crime or conviction of the real culprit, few things more likely to hamper the disclosure of truth than to allow investigators or prosecutors to slide down the easy path of producing by compulsion, evidence, whether oral or documentary, from an accused person. It has been felt that the existence of such an easy way would tend to dissuade person in charge of investigation or prosecution from conducting diligent search for reliable independent evidence and from sifting or available materials with the care necessary for ascertainment of truth. If it is permissible in law to obtain evidence from the accused person by compulsion, why tread the hard path of laborious investigation and prolonged examination of other men, materials and documents? It has been well said that an abolition of this privilege would be an incentive for those in charge of enforcement of law 'to sit comfortably in the shade rubbing red pepper into a poor devil's eyes rather than to go about in the sun hunting up evidence.' (Stephen, History of Criminal Law, p. 442). No less serious is the danger that some accused persons at least, may be induced to furnish evidence against themselves which is totally false - out of sheer despair and an anxiety to avoid an unpleasant present. Of all these dangers the Constitution-makers were clearly well aware and it was to avoid them that Art. 20 (3) was put in the Constitution."

(63.) The symbiotic need to preserve the immunity without stifling legitimate investigation persuades us to indicate that after an examination of the accused, where lawyer of his choice is not available, the police official must take him to a magistrate, doctor or other willing and responsible non-partisan official or non-official and allow a secluded audience where he may unburden himself beyond the view of the police and tell whether he has suffered duress, which should be followed by judicial or some other custody for him where the police cannot teach him. The collocutor may briefly record the relevant conversation and communicate it - not to the police - but to the nearest magistrate, Pilot projects on this pattern may yield experience to guide the practical processes of implementing Art. 20 (3). We do not mandate but strongly suggest.

(64.) The statement of the accused, if voluntary, is admissible, indeed, invaluable. To erase involuntariness we must erect safeguards which will not 'kill the goose'. To ensure this free will by inbuilt structural changes is the deside-ratum. Short-run remedies apart, long-run recipes must be innovated whereby fists are replaced by wits, ignorance by awareness, 'third degree' by civilized tools and technology. The factotum policeman who does everything from a guard of honour to traffic patrol to subtle detection is an obsolescent survival. Special training, special legal courses, technological and other detective updating, are important. An aware policeman is the best social asset towards crimelessness. The consciousness of the official as much as of the community is the healing hope for a crime-ridden society. Judge-centred remedies don't work in the absence of community centered rights. All these add up to separation of investigatory personnel from the general mass and in service specialisation of many hues on a scientific basis. This should be done vertically and horizontally. More importantly, the policeman must be released from addiction to coercion and be sensitized to constitutional values.

(65.) The Indian Republic cannot fulfil its social justice tryst without a serious strategy of cultural and organisational transformation of police intelligence and investigation, abjuring first and emphasizing wits, setting apart a separate, sophisticated force with special skills, drills, techniques and technology and aloof from the fossilising, sometimes marginally feudal, assignments - like V.I.P. duty, sentry duty, traffic duty law and order functions, border security operations. They must develop an ethos and ethic and professionalism and probity which can effectively meet the challenge of criminal cunning the menace of macabre intricacies and the subtle machinations of white collar criminals in politics, business and professions and can do so without resort to vulgarity violence or other vice. The methods, manners and morals of the police force are the measure of a society's cultural tolerance and a Government's real refinement.

(66.) Such a broad project is overdue. Constitutions are not self-working. Judicial fire-fighting does not prevent fires. So it is that we stress hopefully the larger changes now needed especially because the recurrent theme of police role in a Welfare State is reportedly engaging the attention of a national commission. Our observations are fragmentary being confined to the constitutional imperative of Art. 20 (3). A holistic perspective informs our suggestions. Our purpose is not to sterilise the police but to clothe the accused with his proper right of silence. Article 20 (3) is not a paper tiger but a provision to police the police and to silence coerced crimination. The dissenting words of Mr. Justice White bear quotation in this context :

"... . The court's duty to assess the consequences of its action is not satisfied by the utterance of the truth that a value of our system of criminal justice is 'to respect the inviolability of the human personality' and to require Government to produce the evidence against the accused by its own independent labors, (Ante, at 715). More than the human dignity of the accused is involved; the human personality of others in the society must also be preserved. Thus the values reflected by the privilege are not the sole desideratum; society's interest in the general security is of equal weight."

"The obvious underpinning of the Court's decisions is a deep-seated distrust of all confessions. As the Court declares that the accused not be interrogated without counsel present, absent a waiver of the right to counsel, and as the Court all but admonishes the lawyer to advise the ((1966) 384 US 436, 538) accused to remain silent, the result adds up to a judicial judgment that evidence from the accused should not be used against him in any way, whether compelled or not. This is the not so subtle overtone of the opinion that it is inherently wrong from the police to gather evidence from the accused himself. And this is precisely the nub of this discent. I see nothing wrong or immoral and certainly nothing unconstitutional in the police's asking a suspect whom they have reasonable cause to arrest whether or not he killed his wife or in confronting him with the evidence on which the arrest was based, at least where he has been plainly advised that he may remain completely silent. Until today "the admissions or confessions of the prisoner, when voluntarily and freely made, have always ranked high in the scale of incriminating evidence'. Brown v. Walker, (1895) 40 L. Ed. 819, see also Hopt v. Utah, (1884) 28 L. Ed. 262. Particularly when corroborated, as where the police have confirmed the accused's disclosure of the hiding place of implements or fruits of the crime, such confessions have the highest reliability and significantly contribute to the certitude with which we may believe the accused is guilty. Moreover, it is by no means certain that the process of confessing is injuries to the accused. To the contrary it may provide psychological relief and enhance the prospects for rehabilitation.

This is not to say that the value of respect for the inviolability of the accused's individual personality should be accorded no weight or that all confessions should be indiscriminately admitted. This Court has long read the Constitution to proscribe compelled confessions, a salutary rule from which there should be no retreat."

The law will only limp along until the tools are turned. We have propose the first stone, not the last step.

(67.) A final note on the actual case on hand. While some aspects of Art. 20 (3) have been authoritatively expounded, other aspects have remained obscure and unexplored. A flash flood of demands against self-incriminatory interrogation has risen now when very important persons of yesterday have got caught in the criminal investigation coils of today. And when the big fight forensic battles the small gain by the victory, if any. The fact that the scope of the protection against self-accusation has not been clarified before in this area makes it necessary for us to take a gentler view in this case, in the interest of justice. Moreover on our interpretation, the Magistrate, trying the case under S. 179, Indian Penal Code and in a setting where the accused allegedly has a number of other offences to answer for, will be thrown into a larger enquiry than the simplistic one ordinarily needed :

(68.) We have declared the law on a thorny constitutional question where the amber light from American rulings and beacon beams from Indian precedents have aided us in our decision. It is quite probable that the very act of directing a woman to come to the police station in violation of S. 160 (1), Cr. P. C. may make for tension and negate voluntariness. It is likely that some of the questions are self-criminatory. More importantly, the admitted circumstances are such that the trying Magistrate may have to hold an elaborate enquiry about other investigations, potential and actual, to decide about the self-accusatory character of the answers. And, finally, the process of proving proneness for self-incrimination will itself strike a blow on the very protection under Art. 20 (3). We have more reasons than one to conclude that the ends of justice will be ill-served by endless magisterial chase of a charge the legal clarity of which is, by this judgment, being authoritatively unveiled and the factual foundation of which may have some infirmities. And the consequences of refusal to answer, if most of the questions are self-condemning and a few formal ones innocuous, were not gone into by us. So, we suggested to counsel that the authority of the law be vindicated by the accused undertaking to answer all relevant, not criminatory, interrogations and, on this pledge of compliance, the State withdrawn the prosecution pro tempore. If the accused went back on the undertaking a prosecution could again be launched and the party proceeded against for breach of the plighted word. The response from the State is a remarkable assertion of legal rectitude and exposition of the principles for exercise of the power to withdraw, and, finally, a conclusion couched thus :

"After careful consideration from all angles and in the facts and circumstances on record, Government have come to the conclusion, that there are no circumstances to justify withdrawal by the State Government."

(69.) We think that a litigant, be he the highest or lowest in the State, should not lecture to the Court but listen and explain its difficulties. We do not draw any inference about the prosecution as motivated, which was the appellant's recurrent theme; for that is irrelevant in Court. But we confess that the statement of the State calls to mind the words of Hamlet : "The lady protests too much, methinks."

(70.) We must record our appreciation of the services of the Advocate-general but in the statement put in, the State's counsel perhaps, had to 'speak the speech'. Maybe.

(71.) To conclude. We have bestowed some thought on the law and consider this case pre-eminently one where the Government, acting without ill-will or affection, should have withdrawn the prosecution. By Government we mean the complainant - public servant who is the party respondent. We do not need the Government to exercise its power to direct its subordinate to withdraw and know that it is not eo nomine party before us - a public servant is not a benamidar of Government but an officer, in his own right, saddled with statutory behests to execute. We note with satisfaction that this Government is moved only by legal, not extraneous, considerations in launching and refusing to withdraw the prosecution against the appellant. We have indicated some (not all) reasons, pertinent in law, for legitimately with-drawing a prosecution and the very fact that this Court suggested it is ordinarily sufficient to rule out the charge of improper grounds and yet the State argues overzealously about the proper criteria! We could have given more relevant reasons but do not do so since the correct course, at this stage is to quash the prosecution as its stands at present.

(72.) Why do we? To serve the ends of justice. When a woman is commanded into a police station, violating the commandment of S. 160 of the Code when a heavy load of questions is handed in, some permissible, some not, where the area of constitutional protection against self-crimination is (until this decision) blurred in some aspects, when in this Court, counsel for the accused unreservedly undertaken to answer in the light of the law we here lay down, when the object of the prosecution is to compel contrite compliance with S. 161, Cr. P. C. abandoning all contumacy and this is achieved by the undertaking, when the pragmatic issues involved are so complex that effective barricades against police pressure to secure self-incrimination need more steps as indicated in our judgment, we hold that persistence in the prosecution is seeming homage to the rule of law and quashing the prosecution secures the ends of justice-the right thing to do is to quash the prosecution as it stands at present. We regret that this dimension of the problem has escaped the Executive's attention for reasons best left unexplored.

(73.) The conspectus of circumstances persuades us to exercise our power under Art. 266 read with Art. 136 and S. 401 of Cr. P. C. to make the following direction. We are satisfied that many of the questions put by the police are not self-incriminatory, remote apprehensions being wholly irrelevant. To answer is citizen's duty; failure is asking for convictions. The appellant shall undertake to answer all questions put to her which do not materially incriminate her in the pending or imminent investigations or prosecutions. If she claims immunity regarding any questions she will, without disclosing details, briefly state in which case or offence in the offing makes her reasonably apprehend self-incrimination by her refused answers. If, after the whole examination is over, the officer concerned reasonably regards any refusal to answer to be a wilful violation under pretence of immunity from self-incrimination, he will be free to prosecute the alleged offender after studying the refusal to answer in the light of the principles we have set out. Section 179, Indian Penal Code should not be unsheathed too promiscuously and teasingly to tense lay people into vague consternation and covert compulsion although the proper office of S. 179, Indian Penal Code is perfectly within the constitutional limits of Art. 20 (3).

(74.) The appellant, through her counsel, undertakes to abide by the above directions to answer all police interrogations relevant but not self-incriminatory (as explained earlier). The police officer shall not summons her to the police station but examine her in terms of the proviso to S. 160 (1) of the Cr. P. code. The appellant shall, within 10 days from today, file a written undertaking on the lines directed above, although, regardless thereof her counsel's undertaking will bind her. Indeed, we direct her to answer in accordance with the law we have just clarified.

(75.) The prosecution proceedings in complaint case No. 2 (c) 388 of 1977 on the file of the Sub-Divisional Magisttrate, Sadar, Cuttack, are hereby quashed and the appeals allowed.

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :JT 2012 (1) SC 159, LAWS(SC)-2012-1-28, ACC-2012-76-792

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Coram :- P.Sathasivam , J.Chelameswar JJ.
Decided on January 16, 2012
CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 159 OF 2012
Maulana Mohd. Amir RashadiAppellant VERSUS
State of Uttar PradeshRespondents

==========

BAIL- I.P.C. Sections 302,307, 325/34 - Murder - In an attack by Respondent, when appellant alongwith his supporters was going to attend a meeting, one died and others injured - FIR filed - Charge-sheet served - Application for bail, objected to by appellant on the ground that threats to life were being received from respondent for pursuing the case - High Court granted conditional bail - Justification - Respondent in jail since long time - Two important witnesses already examined - Adequate protection given to appellant - Assurance by State that trial will not be prolonged. Held, on facts no interference is needed specially when High Court has granted conditional bail and liberty to trial court to jail respondent in case of breach of conditions. Proper steps to be taken if fresh threats are given.

==========

JUDGEMENT
P.Sathasivam, J. –
1. LEAVE granted.
2. THIS appeal is directed against the final judgment and order dated 06.08.2010 passed by the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad in Criminal Misc. Bail Application No. 28420 of 2009 whereby the High Court has granted bail to Mr. Ramakant Yadav - respondent No.2/accused in Case Crime No. 622 of 2009, FIR No. 63 of 2009 under Sections 302 and 307 of the Indian Penal Code, 1860 (in short 'IPC'), Police Station Phoolpur, District Azamgarh, U.P.
Brief facts:
(a) According to the appellant, he is the President of a political party, namely, Rashtriya Ulema Council. On 12.08.2009, a meeting of the Party was to be held at Phoolpur, District Azamgarh, U.P. from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and he was to attend the said meeting in the capacity of Chief Guest. b) At about 1.45 p.m., the appellant started towards the venue of the meeting and his convoy was being led by 10 to 15 supporters who were riding on motorcycles. At that moment, the second respondent/accused came from behind in the convoy of cars and immediately after crossing the appellant's car and his supporters, the convoy of cars belonging to the second respondent/accused suddenly stopped on the road without giving any signal and the second respondent/accused came out of his vehicle armed with a gun along with his supporters who were also carrying guns and they started giving kick blows to one of the motorcycle riders who fell down and the pillion riders of the said motorcycles were fired upon by the second respondent and his supporters from their respective guns and thereafter, they ran away from the place. Adbul Rehman-the pillion rider sustained serious fire arm injuries. When he was taken to the hospital at Varanasi, he succumbed to his injuries. c) On the basis of a written complaint in the Police Station, Phoolpur, FIR No. 63 of 2009 under Sections 302 and 307 IPC was registered. The second respondent was arrested only on 24.08.2009. It was further stated by the appellant that the accused is a habitual criminal and has a criminal background having more than three dozen cases involving serious offences against him. The second respondent filed a Criminal Bail Application being No. 28420 of 2009 before the High Court praying for his release. The appellant filed his objection. He also highlighted that from 14.08.2009, the appellant started receiving threatening calls from the second respondent warning him not to pursue the case otherwise he shall be eliminated. d) On completion of the investigation, charge sheet was filed on 15.07.2010 against respondent No.2 and three other persons under Sections 302, 307 and 325 read with 34 IPC and the trial of the case has been started by examining the injured witness - Farhan as PW-1 on 29.04.2010 and 15.07.2010. e) Pending proceeding of the trial, the High Court, by impugned order dated 06.08.2010, granted conditional bail to the second respondent. Questioning the same and of the fact that the appellant had received several threat calls, he filed the present appeal for setting aside the same.

Heard Mr. Jaspal Singh, learned senior counsel for the appellant and Mr. Basava Prabhu S. Patil, learned senior counsel for the contesting second respondent.

3. THE only point for consideration in this appeal is whether the High Court was justified in enlarging the second respondent on bail after imposing certain conditions.

It is not in dispute and highlighted that the second respondent is a sitting Member of Parliament facing several criminal cases. It is also not in dispute that most of the cases ended in acquittal for want of proper witnesses or pending trial. As observed by the High Court, merely on the basis of criminal antecedents, the claim of the second respondent cannot be rejected. In other words, it is the duty of the Court to find out the role of the accused in the case in which he has been charged and other circumstances such as possibility of fleeing away from the jurisdiction of the Court etc.

4. IN the case relating to FIR No. 63 of 2009, he was arrested and in jail since 24.08.2009. Another important aspect is that after filing of charge-sheet on 15.07.2010, prosecution examined two important witnesses as PWs 1 and 2. This was the position prevailing on 26.07.2010. Even thereafter, now more than a year has rolled. Counsel appearing for the State assured that the trial will not be prolonged at the instance of the prosecution and ready to complete the evidence within a period to be directed by this Court. The other objection of the appellant for grant of bail is that he had received threats from the second respondent and his supporters warning him not to pursue the case against him. It is brought to our notice that based on the representations of the appellant, adequate protection had already been provided to him.

Taking note of all these aspects, particularly, the fact that the second respondent was in jail since 24.08.2009, the trial has commenced by examining the two witnesses on the side of the prosecution and the assurance by the State that trial will not be prolonged and conclude within a reasonable time and also of the fact that the High Court while granting bail has imposed several conditions for strict adherence during the period of bail, we are not inclined to interfere with the order of the High Court. In fact, in the impugned order itself, the High Court has made it clear that in case of breach of any of the conditions, the trial Court will have liberty to take steps to send the applicant therein (respondent No.2 herein) to jail again. In addition to the same, it is further made clear that if the appellant receives any fresh threat from the second respondent or from his supporters, he is free to inform the trial Court and in such event the trial Court is free to take appropriate steps as observed by the High Court. We also direct the Trial Court to complete the trial within a period of four months from the date of the receipt of copy of this order without unnecessary adjournments.

With the above observation, finding no merit for interference with the order of the High Court, the appeal is dismissed.

****

Pendency of 28 Crimes cannot be a ground to reject the bail

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY
CRIMINAL BAIL APPLICATION NO.373 OF 2011

Raosaheb Patole …..Vs…… The State of Maharashtra

Mr. V.R. Doifode, for the Applicant.

Mrs. G.P.Mulekar, APP for the Respondent State.

CORAM: R.C. CHAVAN, J.

DATED: 24th March, 2011

1. This is an application for bail by a person who had participated in robbery. He was not identified in the T.I. parade. No recovery has been made at his instance. The co-accused from whom recovery has been made, has been admitted to bail. Another co-accused who has been identified in T.I. Parade, has also been admitted to bail. But the applicant was refused bail as there were as many as 28 crimes registered against the applicant of similar nature. This cannot be a ground for refusing bail to the applicant. Some stringent conditions could be imposed on the applicant so that the applicant does not indulge in similar activities till the trial is over. In view of this, the applicant arrested in CR No. 75 of 2010, registered at Vimantal Police Station, Pune, be released on bail on his furnishing PR Bond in the sum of Rs.25,000/- with one or more solvent sureties in the aggregate sum of Rs. 25,000/-, on the condition that the applicant shall attend the concerned police station every night between 9.00 p.m. to 11.00 p.m. till the trial is over. No relaxation of condition would be sought by the applicant, till the trial is over.

2. Application is disposed of.

(R. C. CHAVAN, J.)

****

Cross Citation :2002 CRI. L. J. 165

MADHYA PRADESH HIGH COURT

(GWALIOR BENCH)`

Coram : 1 FAKHRUDDIN, J. (Single Bench)

Crl. Revn. No. 8 of 2001, D/- 18 -5 -2001.

Tehsildar Singh, Petitioner v. State of M.P., Respondent.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437BAIL - Bail - Grant of - Murder case – Different versions of dying declaration and investigation – Grant of bail and transfer of investigation - FIR and dying declaration of deceased showing names of actual culprits who participated in incident - However, later part of investigation showing different thing and turned narration of facts recorded in F.I.R. and dying declaration, resulting in making brother of deceased as an accused - Further though FIR and dying declaration are on record brother of deceased is arrested, challan is filled, charge is framed against him and he is detained in custody - Facts of case such as requiring investigation by C.B.I. - C.B.I. enquiry accordingly ordered - But since enquiry will take long time applicant (brother of deceased) ordered to be released on furnishing personal bond in sum of Rs. 50, 000/- and two solvent surities in like amount.

(Paras 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17)

==========

Rakesh Saxena, for Petitioner; Padam Singh, Addl. Govt. Advocate and Praveen Mishra, for Respondent.

Judgement

ORDER :- Shri Rakesh Saxena, Counsel for the applicant.

Shri Padam Singh, Addl. Govt. Advocate for the respondent No. 1/State.

Shri Praveen Mishra, Counsel for the respondents Nos. 2, 3 and 4.

With the consent of the parties, the revision is finally heard.

2. This revision petition is against the order dated 27-11-2000, passed by Fourth Additional Sessions Judge, Morena in Sessions Trial No. 256/2000, whereby the applicant/accused has been charged for the offence under Section 302 of I.P.C. read with Sections 27 and 25(i)(b) of the Arms Act.

3. The facts leading to filing this case are as under : The incident had occurred on 18-4-2000 at 8/8.30 a.m. in the morning while complainant Subedar Singh s/o Albelsingh accompanied by his brother Tehsildarsingh and sister Usha was going to the field on the tracter and when he was at some distance of his house, what he saw is that accused Tikamsingh, Prahladsingh and Ramraj came from the front side, accused Ramraj was armed with gun. It is stated that accused Tikamsingh and Prahlad Singh filthyly abused him and also threatened to kill him. Thereafter, it is alleged that accused Ramraj, with intention to kill, fired from his gun at the complanant, Subedar Singh which hit on his abdomen, causing injuries and the blood came out. The incident was witnessed by his brother Tehsildar Singh and sister Usha. The accused-persons thereafter ran away from the spot. The report of the incident was lodged by the complainant himself along with his brother and sister at the police station, which was registered by Shri Vipin Pathak, Head Constable of Police Station, Porsa, who referred the injured to the Primary Health Centre, Porsa. It is stated that during treatement, complainant died and therefore, the offence which was initially registered under Section 307/34, I.P.C. was converted into Section 302 of I.P.C. The dying declaration of complainant was also recorded. The F.I.R. and dying declaration recorded indicated that it was Ramraj s/o Bhagwansingh, Tikamsingh s/o Bhagwansingh and Prahladsing s/o Bhagwan Singh, who caused the death of Subedarsingh, Accused Ramraj was said to have fired, which hit Subedarsingh resulting in death.

4. In this case, as stated above, the F.I.R. was recorded by Shri Vipin Pathak and he also conducted some part of investigation. Shri S.R. Sankhediya, I.O. is the person, who took over the investigation later on and completed it. According to his investigation, it is Tehsildar, who is accused and he caused death of his brother. He stated that he recorded the statements of Tikamsingh and Prahlad Singh on 16-6-2000. As the dying declaration and the F.I.R. lodged show that it is accused Ramrajsingh, who is said to have fired, the I.O. present in Court, was question as to whether the statement of accuused Ramraj was recorded. After seeing the record/case diary, he stated that the statement of Ramraj was not recorded despite the fact that he was in village with his brothers namely Tikamsingh and Prahlad Singh. This fact as also mentioned in the statements of Tikamsingh and Prahlad Singh said to have been recorded on 16-6-2000 by the Investigating Officer.

5. On 1-5-2001, considering the seriousness of the matter, this Court had recorded a detailed order sheet and also directed for issuance of notice to Shri Vipin Pathak, Head Constable of P.S., Porsa, who registered the F.I.R. and conducted part of investigation and the Dr. D.C. Parashhar, who recorded the Dying declaration of Subedar Singh on 18-4-2000 and subsequently gave statement in writing on 18-6-2000, for their personal appearance before this Court on the next date of hearing, i.e. 3-5-2001. It was also left open to the discretion of the I.G., Chambal Division and the Supdt. of Police, Morena to address, if they so desired.

6. On 3-5-2001, Shri Surendra Singh, I.G., Chambal Division Bench and Shri Dr. Vijay Kumar, S.P., Morena both were present before this Court, and also addressed.

7. Learned counsel for the applicant submitted that the F.I.R. and dying declaration, which are on the record, prima facie, unless they are found to be incorrect, to show that applicant Tehsildarsingh is not at all the author of the crime. The I.O. Shri S.R. Sankhediya questioned by this Court, who on the other hand, stated that he came to know that the brother of deceased himself was the assailant.

@page-CriLJ167
8. Learned Counsel for the applicant stated the F.I.R. was sent under Section 157, Cr.P.C. to a Magistrate and under Section 159, Cr.P.C. the accused was formally arrested on 18-6-2000, as he was already in custody in another case registered for the offence under Sections 399, 400, 402, I.P.C. and Section 25/27 of the Arms Act read with Section 11/13 of the M.P. Daketi Adhiniyam.
9. As stated by the counsel for the parties and noted above, the F.I.R. and the dying declaration recorded on 18-4-2000 clearly show that it was Ramraj, Tikamsingh and Prahlad Singh, who participated in the incident and accused Ramraj fired at the complainant, which he sustained on the stomach, resulting in death. It is however, noted that the later part of the investigation which was completed by another I.O. Shri Sankhediya, after taking it over, says different thing and turned the narration of facts recorded in the F.I.R. and the dying declaration to different way which has resulted in making the brother of deceased, who is applicant Tehsildar as an accused and not only that inspite of dying declaration and the F.I.R. naming others and the documents being on record, the accused Tehsildar is arrested, challan is filed and the charge has been framed against him by this Court for causing death of his real brother. The documents, i.e. F.I.R. dying declaration of the deceased, recorded by the doctor on 18-4-2000 and the subsequent statement of the same doctor dated 18-6-2000, are there on the record in original.
10. This Court heard all the parties including the Investigating Officers noticee as recorded in earlier order sheet doctor and Shri J.P. Gupta, Sr. Counsel appeared as Amicus Curiae, at length.
11. A perusal of the record and the documents, especially, the F.I.R. and the dying declaration, shows the involvment of accused Ramraj and the other two companions, who are his brothers. Subsequently, how the prosecution says that it is Tehsildar, who is an accused. Saying so is the statement of the doctor given on 18-6-2000.
12. Learned counsel for the applicant submits that unless the dying declaration recorded is proved to be false the same cannot be ignored. It is stated that ignoring the F.I.R. and the dying declaration, the applicant has been made an accused on the basis of investigetion and the statement of the doctor given subsequently on 18-6-2000.
13. Under the circumstances, counsel for the parties submitted and agreed that the matter is such one which requires fresh investigation by the Central Bureau of Investigation. In the opinion of this Court also, the facts which have emerged require due investigation by the C.B.I. It is not disputed that Subedar Singh had died. It is also not disputed that he died homicidal death. According to the prosecution, documents, i.e. F.I.R. daying declaration, which has recorded on 18-4-2000 shows the innocence of the accused Tehsildar Singh, who on investigation made subsequently and on the statement of the doctor recorded on 18-6-2000 and the investigation, has been made, an accused, as stated by the counsel representing him.
14. In view of the above, to avoid miscarriage of justice the matter needs thorough probe. Accordingly, it is directed that the matter shall be investigated by the C.B.I. afresh. All parties to render due co-operation to C.B.I.
15. Counsel for the applicant submits that the applicant Tehsildar Singh is in jail. It is stated that the inquiry by the C.B.I. will take a long time. Therefore, it is prayed that the applicant be released on bail.
16. Counsel for the parties heard on the application (M. Cri. P. No. 317/2000, for grant of bail.

17. Having heard counsel for the parties and after considering the facts and circumstances and the material on record, in the opinion of this Court, it is just and proper to release the applicant on bail, on furnishing a personal bond in the sum of Rs. 50,000/- with two solvent sureties in the like amount each to the satisfaction of the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Morena for his appearance before the Court on all the dates fixed by that Court unless otherwise ordered subject to the following conditions :-
(1) that the applicant shall attend the Court concerned on every fifteen days after his release on bail;
(2) that he shall submit his pass port size photograph and the requisite details of the movable immovable property belonging to him, at the time of furnishing a personal
@page-CriLJ168
bond, before the C.J.M. concerned;
(3) that the applicant shall attend all the dates fixed or given by C.B.I. during investigation and shall not temper with the evidence in any manner and shall not misuse the liberty, failing which his bail is liable to be cancelled and the investigating Agency/Competent Court would be at liberty to take necessary steps for his arrest;
(4) that the bail bonds shall contain crime number of the police station and before accepting the bail bonds copies of the same shall be supplied to the ADP/APP, who shall forward the same to the P.S. concerned;
18. In view of what has been stated above, the impugned order framing charge is set aside as the entire matter is being handed over to the C.B.I. for fresh investigation. The C.B.I. if required, shall collect the relevant documents in original from the trial Court, which shall be supplied by Court concerned.
19. Let the record of the court-below be sent back along with the copy of this order.
20. Photocopy of this order to the concerned.

Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :AIR (36) 1949 Calcutta 582 [C.N.159]

HARRIES C.J. AND J.P. MITTER J.

(Division Bench)

Kamala Pandey Vs. The King

Criminal Revn. No. 534 of 1949, Decided on 3rd June 1949

==========

Criminal P.C. (1989), S. 499 – Imposing Condition in bail which keeps the accused away from his family and also keeping away from the means of livelihood is impossible to comply for any one and should never be imposed.

Held, such condition should never be imposed – How can a man in ordinary circumstances afford to live at place 'X' when his family lived at 'Y' and in all probability his sole means of livelihood was at 'Y' – The contention of sessions Judge that the petitioner will tamper with the witnesses at place 'Y' if he allowed to enter that place is not proper because it is common knowledge that in every bail case the police allege that there is danger of tampering with witnesses, if witnesses can be tampered in this way it shows inefficiency of police – The condition imposed is such that it is not possible for any person to comply with – it tantamount to refusing bail –

The order of Sessions Judge illegal and therefore set aside – Accused directed to be released on bail unconditionally.

==========

JUDGEMENT :-

Harries C.J. – This is a petition for revision of an order of a learned Sessions Judge canceling the petitioner's bail. The petitioner together with a man named Nageshwar were charged with stealing from a railway wagon. Negeshwar has been granted bail and he is still on bail, and at is to be observed that the allegation is that certain stolen property was found on a search of Nageshwar's house.

2] The petitioner was eventually granted bail by this learned Sessions Judge, but granted bail upon a condition, namely, that he did not leave the limits of the town of Midnapore. Had the petitioner been living in Midnapore no objection could be taken to this condition. But the petitioner is not an inhabitant of Midnapore, but lived with his family at Kharagpur. Imposing a condition that he should not leave Midnapore is practically tantamount to refusing bail. How can a man in ordinary circumstances afford to live at Midnapore when his family live at Kharagpur and in all probability his sole means of livelihood was at Kharagpur / it is Suggested that this petitioner has bronken this condition on two occasions, but it appears to me that it is a condition which should never be imposed. The learned Sessions Judge justifies the condition because it is alleged that the petitioner will tamper with the witnesses at Kharagpur. It is common knowledge that in every bail case the police allege that there is a danger of tampering with witnesses, and if witnesses can be tampered with in this way, it does not speak very highly of the efficiency of the police. I cannot see what real danger there is in granting this man bail when his co-accused has been granted bail. Why is not there a danger that Nageshwar will tamper with witnesses ?

3] As I have said, the condition imposed, though on the face of it an innocent one, really makes it impossible for the petitioner to comply with it. In cases of this sort the Sessions Judge should make up his mind whether he is going to grant bail or reject it. Granting bail with a condition such as this which no person can possibly comply with is, as I have said, tantamount to refusing the bail and in such cases the Sessions Judge should refuse the bail rather that impose this sort of condition.

4] In my view the petitioner should be released unconditionally on bail and I would, therefore, allow this petition, set aside the order of the learned Sessions Judge and grant the petitioner bail to the satisfaction of the District Magistrate of Midnapore.

5] The rule is accordingly made absolute.

****

Cross Citation :2011 (2) SUPREME COURT CASES (CrI) 848,

2011 (6) SUPREME COURT CASES 189

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Coram : (MARKANDEY KATJU & GYAN SUDHA MISRA, JJ.)

PRAKASH KADAM & Others ….VS….. RAMPRASAD VISHWANATH GUPTA & ANR.

Criminal Appeal Nos.1174-1178 of 2011 [Arising out of SLP((Criminal) Nos. 3865-69 of 2011]-Decided on 13-05-2011.

==========

WHEN POLICE ARE ACCUSED :-

A. Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 439(2) and 437(5) Bail — Cancellation of —Police acting as contract killers — Accused policemen allegedly killed deceased in a false police encounter at behest of third person — Held, position and standing of accused, etc. are factors other than misuse of bail to be considered for bail cancellation — Witnesses can have no security to their life if policemen who are supposed to uphold and protect law become predators — In the circumstances of case, held, High Court rightly cancelled bail as there exists prima facie case against accused policemen which disentitles them to bail — Human and Civil Rights.

B. Constitution of India — Art. 21 — Fake encounter killing(s) by police — Death sentence warranted — Held, where a fake encounter is proved against policemen in a trial, they must be given death sentence, treating it as the rarest of rare.

c. Rule of Law – Anarchy – Matsyanayaya – larger fish devouring the smaller ones or the strong despoiling the weak – Observed, the country is heading towards such a state of lawlessness. [Paras 30 to 33]

31. Thus in the Shanti Parva of Mahabharat Vol. 1 it is stated:- "Raja chen-na bhavellokey Prithivyaam dandadharakah Shuley matsyanivapakshyan durbalaan balvattaraah"

32. This shloka means that when the King carrying the rod of punishment does not protect the earth then the strong persons destroy the weaker ones, just like in water the big fish eat the small fish. In the Shantiparva of Mahabharata Bheesma Pitamah tells Yudhishthir that there is nothing worse in the world than lawlessness, for in a state of Matsyayaya, nobody, not even the evil doers are safe, because even the evil doers will sooner or later be swallowed up by other evil doers.

==========

JUDGMENT

Markandey Katju, J.-A curse shall light upon the limbs of men; Domestic fury and fierce civil strife Shall cumber all the parts of Italy; Blood and destruction shall be so in use And dreadful objects so familiar That mothers shall but smile when they behold Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war; All pity choked with custom of fell deeds: And Caesar's spirit, ranging for revenge, With Ate by his side come hot from hell, Shall in these confines with a monarch's voice Cry "Havoc!" and let slip the dogs of war; That this foul deed shall smell above the earth With carrion mean, groaning for burial. -- (Shakespeare: Julius Caesar Act 3 Scene 1)

1. Leave granted. Heard learned counsel for the appellants and perused the record.

2. This case reveals to what grisly depths our society has descended.

3. This appeal has been filed against the impugned judgment and order dated 21.1.2011 passed by the High Court of Judicaure at Bombay in Criminal Application Nos. 5283-5285 and 5303-5304 of 2010 by which the High Court has cancelled the bail granted to the appellants by the Sessions Court.

4. The appellants are policemen accused of a contract killing in Sessions Case No. 317/2010 which is pending before the Sessions Judge, Greater Bombay. The appellants have been charge-sheeted for offences punishable under Sections 302/34,120-B, 364/34 IPC and other minor offences. The victim of the offence is deceased Ramnaryan Gupta @ Lakhanbhaiyya. The prosecution case is that the appellants were engaged as contract killers by a private person to eliminate the deceased.

5. The case of the prosecution in brief is that the deceased Ramnarayan Gupta and the accused No. 14, Janardan Bhange were, once upon a time, very close to each other. Both of them had been working as estate agents and, mainly their business was to purchase land from the farmers whose land has been acquired by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act and to whom 12 percent of the land was given by the Government. This 12 percent of the land was being purchased at meager price by the deceased and accused No. 14, Janardan Bhange and was being

Supreme Court Judgements @ www.stpl-india.in2011 STPL(Web) 498 SC 2 Prakash Kadam Vs. Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta sold on premium at later stage. During the course of that business, both of them had been exchanging the files pending with them for disposal pertaining to the said land.

6. There were some differences between the deceased Ramnarayan Gupta and accused No. 14, Janardan and hence it is alleged that the accused Janardan decided to eliminate the deceased in a false police encounter. Hence, he hired the services of the accused, and in pursuance of the said conspiracy the deceased Ramnarayan Gupta and his friend Anil Bheda were abducted on 11.11.2006 from near a shop named Trisha Collections at Vashi, New Bombay by 4 or 5 well-built persons who appeared to be policemen and were forcibly bundled into a Qualis car. The complainant, brother of the deceased, sent telegrams and fax messages to different authorities complaining that the said two persons had been abducted by some persons who appeared to be policemen and were in danger of losing their lives.

7. It is alleged that at Bhandup Complex the deceased was shifted to an Innova vehicle. The deceased and witness Anil Bheda were taken to D.N. Nagar police station in two separate vehicles i.e. one Qualis and the other Innova. It is alleged that the deceased was killed and his dead body was thrown near Nana-Nani Park at Versova. The dead body, after some time, was collected from the said place by the police to create a false case of police encounter. A case vide C.R. No. 302/2006 was registered on 11.11.2006 at Versova Police Station against deceased Ramnarayan Gupta on the complaint made by accused No. 9. In the said FIR it was shown that accused No. 9 and other police officers had gone to Nana-Nani Park on the basis of certain information and that the deceased was asked to surrender before the police. Instead of surrendering before the police, the deceased had attempted to kill the police and in retaliation he was shot by them.

8. It is also alleged that witness Anil Bheda was initially detained at D.N. Nagar Police Station and thereafter he was taken to Kolhapur and he was further detained at Mid Town Hotel at Andheri. As such the witness Anil Bheda was in custody of the police for about one month from 11.11.2006. His wife had lodged a missing complaint at Vashi police station on the same day, but she was compelled to withdraw that complaint.

9. The complainant is the brother of the deceased and is a practicing advocate. He came to know within a few minutes of the incident of abduction of his brother. He, therefore, along with advocate Mr. Ganesh Ayyer, started searching for his brother and in the meantime he had also sent telegrams to Police Commissioner of Thane, Mumbai and New Bombay of the alleged abduction of his brother and indicated apprehension that his brother would be eliminated in a false police encounter. On the same day it was flashed on T.V. channels that the deceased had been killed in a police encounter. The complainant, therefore, approached the High Court on 15.11.2006 by filing a writ petition (WP 2473/2006) to get directions from the High Court to the police to register a case in respect of death of his brother.

10. On the aforesaid writ petition the High Court on 13.2.2008 passed an order that the offence of murder be registered against the accused. During the investigation the statement of Anil Bheda and other witnesses were recorded. So far, the police have charge-sheeted 19 accused.

11. After the High Court by its order dated 13.2.2008 had directed the Metropolitan Magistrate, Railway Mobile Court, Andheri to make an inquiry under Section 176(1A) Cr.P.C., the Metropolitan Magistrate after holding the inquiry submitted a report dated 11.8.2008 that Ramnarayan Gupta was shot by the police when he was in police custody. The report also stated that the death had not taken place at the spot alleged by the police, and that the deceased had not disappeared from the police custody before he was done to death, but that the deceased was Supreme Court Judgements @ www.stpl-india.in2011 STPL(Web) 498 SC 3 Prakash Kadam Vs. Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta abducted by the police. The report also held that a false FIR was lodged by accused No. 9 Police Inspector Pradip Suryavanshi of D.N. Nagar Police Sttion to show that Ramnarayan Gupta was killed in a police encounter at Nana-Nani Park, and this FIR was filed to cover up the murder of the deceased Ramnarayan Gupta.

12. After the inquiry report was submitted by the Metropolitan Magistrate, the Division Bench of the Bombay High Court by its order dated 13.8.2009 in the aforesaid criminal writ petition constituted a Special Investigation Team for investigation of this case. Mr. K.M.M. Prasanna, DCP, Mumbai City, was appointed as head of the investigation team, and he was directed to record the statement of the complainant and to treat that statement as the FIR. Copy of the order of the Bombay High Court dated 13.8.2009 is Annexure P-3 to this appeal. Accordingly, the statement of the complainant was recorded on 20.8.2009 which was treated as the FIR (Annexure P4 to this appeal) and investigation was carried out. The statement and supplementary statement of Anil Bheda, which corroborates the prosecution case, is Annexure P5 to this appeal.

13. During investigation, it was revealed that accused No.1 Police Inspector Pradip Sharma (who is described as an `encounter specialist'), accused No.9 - PI Pradip Suryawanshi and accused No. 14 - Janardan Bhanage, had entered into a conspiracy to eliminate Ramnarayan Gupta. It appears that accused No.14 Janardan Bhanage had some personal enmity with Ramnarayan Gupta. Thereafter other officers and some criminals were involved in the execution of the said conspiracy. Accused No.4 - Shailendra Pande , accused No.5 - Hitesh Solanki, accused N0.6 - Akil Khan, accused No.8 - Manoj Mohan Raj, accused No.12 - Mohd. Moiddin and accused No.21 - Suresh Shetty and accused No.7 police constable Vinayak Shinde had abducted Ramnarayan Gupta and Anil Bheda from Vashi, on 11.11.2006. Accused No.1 PI Pradip Sharma, accused No.2 Police Constable Tanaji Desai, accused No.9 P.I. Pradip Suryavanshi, accused No.15 API - Dilip Palande were the persons who actually fired and shot dead the deceased. Accused No.11 API Nitin Satape and accused no.22 PSI Arvind Sarvankar claimed to have fired during the encounter, though the bullets fired from their fire arms were not recovered. Accused Nos. 13,16, 17, 18 and 19, whose bail orders were cancelled by the High Court, are said to be the members of the team which shot him dead. Accused No.13 Devidas Sakpal had allegedly guarded Anil Bheda at Hotel Mid Town on certain occasions and accused No.16 Head Constable Prakash Kadam had joined the abductors at about 4.30 p.m. and since then he was with Anil Bheda. He was also with Anil Bheda when he was taken out from D.N.Nagar Police Station in the evening and also later on at Hotel Mid Town from time to time.

14. On behalf of the prosecution, it is pointed out that in the FIR lodged by P.I. Pradip Suryavanshi showing the killing of Ramnarayan Gupta in an encounter at Nana-Nani Park, he had given names of police officers and police staff, who were in that team. The names of accused Nos.13,16, 17, 18 and 19 are shown in the said FIR. On that basis an entry was made in the station diary, where also the names of these persons were shown. It is also pointed out that in the magisterial enquiry, which was initially directed by the Police Commissioner, these persons had claimed to be members of the encounter team. When the complainant filed the Writ Petition against the State for taking action against the culprits, some of these persons had appeared to contest the writ petition. After the writ petition was allowed and this Court directed investigation, accused Nos. 13, 16, 19 and 20 filed Special Leave Petition challenging that order, which was dismissed. Everywhere they had taken the plea that Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead in an encounter and that they were members of the Police team involved in that encounter and were also present at the time of the alleged encounter. The learned Counsel also pointed out that there is sufficient material to show that these persons were involved in the commission of the crime.

Supreme Court Judgements @ www.stpl-india.in2011 STPL(Web) 498 SC 4 Prakash Kadam Vs. Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta

15. The Sessions Court granted bail to the appellants but that has been cancelled by the High Court by the impugned judgment.

16. It was contended by learned counsel for the appellants before us, and it was also contended before the High Court, that the considerations for cancellation of bail is different from the consideration of grant of bail vide Bhagirathsinh s/o Mahipat Singh Judeja vs. State of Gujarat (1984) 1 SCC 284, Dolat Ram and others vs. State of Haryana (1995) 1 SCC 349 and Ramcharan vs. Sta te of M.P. (2004) 13 SCC 617.

17. However, we are of the opinion that that is not an absolute rule, and it will depend on the facts and circumstances of the case. In considering whether to cancel the bail the Court has also to consider the gravity and nature of the offence, prima facie case against the accused, the position and standing of the accused, etc. If there are very serious allegations against the accused his bail may be cancelled even if he has not misused the bail granted to him. Moreover, the above principle applies when the same Court which granted bail is approached for canceling the bail. It will not apply when the order granting bail is appealed against before an appellate/revisional Court.

18. In our opinion, there is no absolute rule that once bail is granted to the accused then it can only be cancelled if there is likelihood of misuse of the bail. That factor, though no doubt important, is not the only factor. There are several other factors also which may be seen while deciding to cancel the bail.

19. This is a very serious case and cannot be treated like an ordinary case. The accused who are policemen are supposed to uphold the law, but the allegation against them is that they functioned as contract killers. Their version that Ramnarayan Gupta was shot in a police encounter has been found to be false during the investigation. It is true that we are not deciding the case finally as that will be done by the trial court where the case is pending, but we can certainly examine the material on record in deciding whether there is a prima facie case against the accused which disentitles them to bail.

20. Accused No. 11 API Nitin Sartape, accused No.17 PSI Ganesh Harpude, and accused No.19 PSI Pandurang Kokam, who were attached to Versova Police Station, as per the station diary entry 33 of Versova Police Station left Versova Police Station to go to D.N.Nagar Police Station on a special assignment. That entry No.33 was taken in the station diary of Versova Police Station at 18.05 hours. Entry No.25 in the station diary of D.N.Nagar Police Station at 18.55 hrs. shows that Police Inspector Suryavanshi, API Dilip Palande (accused No.15), PSI Arvind Sarvankar (accused No.22), PSI Patade (accused No.18) and API Sartape (accused No.11), PSI Harpude (accused No.17) and Police Constable Batch No.26645 i.e. Pandurang Kokam (accused No.19) left the Police Station to go near Nani Nani Park to verify and to arrest a hardened criminal. It appears that 3 police officers i.e. AP Sartape, PSI Harpude and Constable Pandurang Kokam were specially called from the Versova Police Station and they were in the team of the police officers and staff who accompanied PI Suryavanshi. This team left the police station at 18.55 hrs. as per the said entry and it appears that at about 8 to 8.15 p.m. Ramnarayan was shot dead. At this stage, the defence of the accused need not be taken into consideration, because during the investigation, it has been found that there was no encounter and Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead in a fake encounter. This station diary No.25 of 18.55 hrs. goes to show that accused No.17 PSI Hapude, accused No.18 PSI Patade and accused No.19 Constable Pandurang Kokam were the members of the team which killed Ramnarayan. Not only this, as per the record of D.N.Nagar Police station, on 11.11.2006, at 6 p.m. Police Inspector Suryavanshi, API Sartape and PSI Anand Patade had collected weapons and ammunition. Naturally, those weapons were collected by the Supreme Court Judgements

@ www.stpl-india.in2011 STPL(Web) 498 SC 5 Prakash Kadam Vs. Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta said officers to go to some place for a mission. According to them, they went to at Nana Nani Park where Ramnarayan Gupta was killed. In view of this, the presence of PSI Patade in the team which executed the said plan and killed Ramnarayan does not appear to be in doubt. Merely because accused No.18 PSI Patade himself did not fire is not sufficient. Accused Nos. 17 Ganesh Harpude and accused No.19 Pandurang Kokam, as pointed out above, were also members of that team. It is also material to note that these accused persons had consistently taken a stand that they were present at the time of the said encounter and this is clear from their stand taken before the High Court as well as before the Supreme Court in Special Leave Petition filed by the accused Nos. 13, 16, 19 and 21. In that SLP also they had stated that accused Nos. 17 and 18 were also in the encounter team. Hence there is a prima facie case against them.

21. As far as accused Nos. 16, 17, 18 and 19 are concerned, there is sufficient material to prima facie establish their role in this conspiracy and the alleged execution of Ramnarayan Gupta. Accused No.13 was allegedly given duty of guarding Anil Bheda at Hotel Mid Town where he was being detained illegally. It is contended by the learned Counsel for the accused that if any duty of guarding or surveillance is given to a Police Constable by his superiors, he is bound to discharge that duty and merely because he was given the guarding duty, it cannot be said that he was party to the conspiracy. However, it cannot be forgotten that accused No.13 was one of the petitioners before the Supreme Court and had claimed that he was a member of the encounter team along with PI Suryavanshi and others, and this admission finds corroboration from the contents of the FIR registered by PI Suryavanshi himself.

22. In fact, the prosecution material collected during the investigation prima facie indicates that Ramnarayan Gupta was abducted during the day time and was taken to D.N.Nagar Police Station and from there he was taken to some unknown place where he was shot dead. At 9 p.m. some police officers came back to the police station and deposited their weapons and kept their blood stained clothes. 23. In our opinion this is a very serious case wherein prima facie some police officers and staff were engaged by some private persons to kill their opponent i.e. Ramnarayan Gupta and the police officers and the staff acted as contract killers for them. If such police officers and staff can be engaged as contract killers to finish some person, there may be very strong apprehension in the mind of the witnesses about their own safety. If the police officers and staff could kill a person at the behest of a third person, it cannot be ruled out that they may kill the important witnesses or their relatives or give threats to them at the time of trial of the case to save themselves. This aspect has been completely ignored by the learned Sessions Judge while granting bail to the accused persons.

24. In our opinion, the High Court was perfectly justified in canceling the bail to the accused-appellants. The accused/appellants are police personnel and it was their duty to uphold the law, but far from performing their duty, they appear to have operated as criminals. Thus, the protectors have become the predators. As the Bible says "If the salt has lost its flavour, wherewith shall it be salted?", or as the ancient Romans used to say,"Who will guard the Praetorian guards?" (see in this connection the judgment of this Court in CBI vs. Kishore Singh, Criminal Appeal Nos.2047-2049 decided on 25.10.2010).

25. We are of the view that in cases where a fake encounter is proved against policemen in a trial, they must be given death sentence, treating it as the rarest of rare cases. Fake `encounters' are nothing but cold blooded, brutal murder by persons who are supposed to uphold the law. In our opinion if crimes are committed by ordinary people, ordinary punishment should be given, but if the offence is committed by policemen much harsher punishment should be given to them because they do an act totally contrary to their duties.

Supreme Court Judgements @ www.stpl-india.in2011 STPL(Web) 498 SC 6 Prakash Kadam Vs. Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta

26. We warn policemen that they will not be excused for committing murder in the name of `encounter' on the pretext that they were carrying out the orders of their superior officers or politicians, however high. In the Nuremburg trials the Nazi war criminals took the plea that `orders are orders', nevertheless they were hanged. If a policeman is given an illegal order by any superior to do a fake `encounter', it is his duty to refuse to carry out such illegal order, otherwise he will be charged for murder, and if found guilty sentenced to death. The `encounter' philosophy is a criminal philosophy, and all policemen must know this. Trigger happy policemen who think they can kill people in the name of `encounter' and get away with it should know that the gallows await them.

27. For the above reasons, these appeals are dismissed.

28. Before parting with this case, it is imperative in our opinion to mention that our ancient thinkers were of the view that the worst state of affairs possible in society is a state of lawlessness. When the rule of law collapses it is replaced by Matsyanyaya, which means the law of the jungle. In Sanskrit the word `Matsya' means fish, and Matsyanyaya means a state of affairs where the big fish devours the smaller one. All our ancient thinkers have condemned Matsyanyaya vide `History of Dharmashastra' by P.V. Kane Vol. III p. 21. A glimpse of the situation which will prevail if matsyanyaya comes into existence is provided by Mark Antony's speech in Shakespeare's `Julius Caesar' quoted at the beginning of this judgment.

29. This idea of matsyanyaya (the maxim of the larger fish devouring the smaller ones or the strong despoiling the weak) is frequently dwelt upon by Kautilya, the Mahabharata and other works. It can be traced back to the Shatapatha Brahmana XI 1.6.24 where it is said "whenever there is drought, then the stronger seizes upon the weaker, for the waters are the law," which means that when there is no rain the reign of law comes to an end and matsyanyaya beings to operate.

30. Kautilya says, `if danda be not employed, it gives rise to the condition of matsyanyaya, since in the absence of a chastiser the strong devour the weak'. That in the absence of a king (arajaka) or when there is no fear of punishment, the condition of matsyanyaya follows is declared by several works such as the Ramayana II, CH. 67, Shantiparva of Mahabharat 15.30 and 67,16. Kamandaka II. 40, Matsyapurana 225.9, Manasollasa II. 20.1295 etc.

31. Thus in the Shanti Parva of Mahabharat Vol. 1 it is stated:- "Raja chen-na bhavellokey Prithivyaam dandadharakah Shuley matsyanivapakshyan durbalaan balvattaraah"

32. This shloka means that when the King carrying the rod of punishment does not protect the earth then the strong persons destroy the weaker ones, just like in water the big fish eat the small fish. In the Shantiparva of Mahabharata Bheesma Pitamah tells Yudhishthir that there is nothing worse in the world than lawlessness, for in a state of Matsyayaya, nobody, not even the evil doers are safe, because even the evil doers will sooner or later be swallowed up by other evil doers.

33. We have referred to this because behind the growing lawlessness in the country this Court can see the looming danger of matsyanyaya.

34. The appeals are dismissed, but it is made clear that the trial court will decide the criminal case against the appellants uninfluenced by any observations made in this judgment, or in the impugned judgment of the High Court.

****

Cross Citation :2011 ALL MR (Cri) 1122

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

Coram :- J. H. Bhatia, J.

Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta Vs. Prakash Ganpat Kadam & Anr.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 5283 OF 2010 with criminal application Nos. 5284, 5285, 5303, 5304, of 2010 21st January, 2011.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 - Cancellation of bail - Police Officers and staff engaged by some private persons to kill their opponent - Police Officers and staff acting as contract killers - Strong apprehension in mind of witnesses about their own safety - Held, very strong reasons and circumstances exist in the present case for cancellation of bail.

In the present case, Sessions Judge either missed the important material or he misread the same while granting bail to these accused persons. It is a very serious case wherein prima facie, some police officers staff were engaged by some private persons to kill their opponent i.e. Ramnarayan Gupta; the police officers and the staff acted contract killers for them. If such police officer and staff can be engaged as contract killers to finish some person, there may be very strong apprehension in the mind of the witnesses about their own safety. If the police officers and staff could kill a person at the behest of .third person it will not be difficult for them to kill the important witnesses or their relatives to bring pressure on them at the time of trial of the a to save themselves. This aspect has been completely ignored by the learned Sessions Judge while granting bail to the accused persons. Very strong reasons and circumstances exist in the present case due to which cancellation of bail is absolutely necessary] the interest of justice. 2006 ALL MR (Cri): (S.C.) and (2004)13 SCC 617 - Re on.

==========

Shri R.V.Gupta, applicant in person present in Court.
Shri M.K.Kocharekar, i/b. Shri Rajiv Sawant, Advocates, for the respondent No.1 (except Appln. No.5285/2010).
Shri H.H.Nagi, i/b. H.H.Nagi & Associates, Advocates for respondent No.1 (in Appl. No.5285/2010)
Shri R.N.Misra, Spl. P.P. a/w Shri S.A. Shaikh, APP, for the Respondent No.2 - State.

CORAM: J.H.BHATIA,J.
DATE : 21st January, 2011.
P.C.

1. These five Applications are filed by the original complainant/first informant Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta for cancellation of bail granted by the Sessions Court to accused No.13 Police Constable Devidas Sakpal, accused No. 16 - Head Constable Prakash Kadam, accused No.17 PSI Ganesh Harpude, accused No.18 - PSI Anand Patade and accused No.19 Constable Pandurang Kokam by orders passed on different dates in Sessions Case No.317/2010.

2. Prosecution case, in brief, is that deceased Ramnarayan Gupta was the brother of complainant Ramprasad Gupta. In the afternoon of 11.11.2006, Ramnarayan and his friend Anil Bheda were abducted by four or five well-built

3 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw persons, who appeared to be policemen, by forcibly loading him in a silver coloured Qualis Car. The complainant sent telegram and fax messages to different authorities in the name of wife of Anil Bheda or himself complaining that Anil Bheda and Ramnarayan Gupta were abducted by some persons, who appeared to be policemen and there was danger to life of both of them. In the evening at about 8.15 p.m. a breaking news was flashed on T.V. that Ramnarayan Gupta was killed in an encounter with the police at Nana-Nani Park near Versova. Anil Bheda was illegally detained at different places for about 30 days. After he was released, it was revealed that Anil Bheda and Ramnarayan Gupta were initially taken to D.N.Nagar Police Station and at about 7 p.m. Anil Bheda was taken away from the police station by a vehicle by some policemen and was kept away from the police station for about 1-1/2 hour or 2 hours. In the evening at about 9 p.m., Anil Bheda was brought back to D.N.Nagar Police Station. At that time, he noticed that some police officers and staff were keeping their fire arms and blood stained clothes in a room. Later on, Anil Bheda was detained for about 30 days at different places including at Hotel Mid Town situated in Andheri. The complainant moved several authorities complaining that his brother was murdered, but no action was taken by the authorities concerned. He finally filed a Writ Petition, being W.P. No.2473/2006 under Article 226 of the Constitution of India and by an order dated 13.2.2008, the Division Bench of this Court directed 4 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw that enquiry be made by Metropolitan Magistrate as required under Section 176(1-A) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Metropolitan Magistrate, after holding the enquiry came to conclusion that Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead by the police after he was abducted and when he was in police custody. He also held that the false FIR was lodged by accused No.9 Police Inspector Pradip Suryavanshi of D.N.Nagar Police Station to show that Ramnarayan Gupta was killed in an encounter with Police. when on being police asked to surrender, he fired against the police when he was in police custody, and that it was filed only o cover up the murder of Ramnarayan Gupta. After the enquiry report was submitted, the Division Bench of this Court by order dated 13.8.2009 in the aforesaid Writ petition constituted a special investigation team for investigation of this case. Mr. K.M.M.Prasanna, DCP, Mumbai City, was appointed as Investigating Officer and he was directed to record the statement of the complainant and to treat that statement as FIR. Accordingly, statement of the complainant was recorded on 20.8.2009 and investigation was carried out.

3. During investigation, it was revealed that accused No.1 Police Inspector Pradip Sharma, accused No.9 - PI Pradip Suryawanshi and accused No. 14 - Janardan Bhanage, had entered into conspiracy to eliminate Ramnarayan Gupta. It appears that accused No.14 Janardan Bhanage had some personal 5 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw enmity with Ramnarayan Gupta. Thereafter other officers and some criminals were involved in the execution of the said conspiracy. Accused No.4 – Shailendra Pande , accused No.5 - Hitesh Solanki, accused N0.6 - Akil Khan, accused No.8 - Manoj Mohan Raj, accused No.12 - Mohd. Moiddin and accused No.21 – Suresh Shetty and accused No.7 police constable Vinayak Shinde had abducted Ramnarayan Gupta and Anil Bheda from Vashi, on 11.11.2006. Accused No.1 PI Pradip Sharma, accused No.2 Police Constable Tanaji Desai, accused No.9 P.I. Pradip Suryavanshi, accused No.15 API - Dilip Palande were the persons who actually fired and shot dead. Accused No.11 API Nitin Satape and accused no.22 PSI Arvind Sarvankar claimed to have fire during the encounter though the bullets fired from their fire arms were not recovered. Accused Nos. 13,16, 17, 18 and 19, whose bail orders are sought to be cancelled, are said to be the members of the team which shot him dead. Accused No.13 Devidas Sakpal had allegedly guarded Anil Bheda at Hotel Mid Town on certain occasions and accused No.16 Head Constable Prakash Kadam had joined the abductors at about 4.30 p.m. and since then he was with Anil Bheda. He was also with Anil Bheda when he wastaken out from D.N.Nagar Police Station in the evening and also later on at Hotel Mid Town from time to time.

4. On behalf of prosecution, it is pointed out that in the FIR lodged by 6 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw P.I. Pradip Suryavanshi showing the killing of Ramnarayan Gupta in encounter at Nana-Nani Park, he had given names of police officers and police staff, who were in that team. Names of accused Nos.13,16, 17, 18 and 19 are shown in the said FIR. On the basis of that entry was taken in the station diary, where also names of these persons were shown. It is also pointed out that in the Magisterial enquiry, which was initially directed by the Police Commissioner, these persons had claimed to be members of the encounter team. When the complainant filed the Writ Petition against the State for taking action against the culprits, some of these persons had appeared to contest the writ petition. After the writ petition was allowed and this Court directed investigation, accused Nos. 13, 16, 19 and 20 filed Special Leave Petition challenging that order. Everywhere they had taken the plea that Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead in an encounter and that they were members of the Police team involved in that encounter and were also present at the time of encounter. The learned Counsel also pointed out that there is sufficient material to show that these persons were involved in the commission of crime.

5. On the other hand, the learned Counsel for the accused persons vehemently contended that once the Sessions Court had granted bail by giving plausible reasons, the bail cannot be cancelled unless there are very strong circumstances and reasons. According to them, it was always the plea of the 7 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw police officers and staff that Ramnarayan Gupta, who was the hardened criminal with number of cases against him, was absconding and on that day P.I. Suryavanshi got information from some informant that said Ramnarayan Gupta was likely to visit Nana Nani Park and therefore he formed a group of the police officers and went there to arrest him. However, when Ramnarayan Gupta was asked to surrender, he fired against the police officers and therefore it became necessary for the police party to fire at him and therefore it was a genuine encounter and that he was not killed while in police custody.

6. In Bhagirathsinh s/o Mahipat Singh Judeja Vs. State of Gujarat (1984) 1 SCC 284 and Dolat Ram and Ors. vs. State of Haryana (1995) 1 SCC 349 and Ramcharan vs. State of M.P. (2004) 13 SCC 617, the Supreme Court has from time to time held that the consideration of cancellation of bail is different from the consideration for grant of bail. It has been held that bail can be cancelled only on existence of cogent and overwhelming circumstances, but not on reappreciation of the facts of the case. It is also settled that cancellation of bail should not be by way of punishment even if prima facie case against the accused is established. On the other hand, the prosecution contended that while granting bail, the Court has to look into the nature and gravity of charges, the character, behaviour, means, position and standing of the accused and reasonable 8 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw apprehension of the witnesses being tampered with. For this, the learned Counsel for the prosecution relied upon Anil Kumar Tulsiyani vs. State of U.P. and Anr. (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 565 wherein the Supreme Court observed thus in paras 10 and 11 :-

"10. By now it is well-settled principle of law that one of the considerations in granting bail in non-bailable offences is the gravity and the nature of the offence. The High Court has not at all addressed to this issue while granting bail to the respondent.

11. This Court in state of U.P. v. Amarmani Tripathi in which one of us (Raveendran,J) was a member has considered various decisions of this Court and observed that the circumstances to be considered in an application for bail are accused being an advocate was in commanding position and had standing in the society. In this background, there was reasonable apprehension of the witnesses being tampered with, coerced, threatened or intimidated by using his influence. As these circumstances were not considered by the High Court while granting bail, the Supreme Court set aside that order and cancelled bail.

(i) whether there is any prima facie or reasonable ground to believe that the accused had committed the offence; (ii) nature and gravity of the charge; (iii) severity of the punishment in the event of conviction; (iv) danger of the accused absconding or fleeing, if released on bail; (v) character, behaviour, means, position and standing of the accused; (vi) likelihood of the offence being repeated; (vii) reasonable 9 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw apprehension of the witnesses being tampered with; and (viii) danger, of course, of justice being thwarted by grant of bail" (SCC p.31, para 18)"

In that case, bail was granted to the accused, who was an Advocate and that order was challenged before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that the respondent i.e.

7. On behalf of the accused, it was argued that the deceased had criminal antecedents. However, the learned Counsel for the prosecution contended that even if it is assumed that he had criminal record, still after taking him in custody police had no authority to kill him and if the police officers and staff involved in unlawful elimination are granted bail, they, by virtue of their authority and power and most of them being members of encounter teams of the 10 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw police, may pressurise the witnesses and may cause danger to the life of the surviving witnesses.

8. In Dinesh M.N. (S.P.) vs. State of Gujarat 2008 Cri.L.J.3008, a police officer was granted bail in the case of fake encounter of Sohrabuddin, who had allegedly shady reputation and criminal antecedents. The High Court, after consideration of the material on record, cancelled the bail and that order was challenged before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court dismissed the appeal and observed thus in para 14 :-

"14.... In the instant case, the trial Court seems to have been swayed by the fact that Sohrabuddin had shady reputation and criminal antecedents. That was not certainly a factor which was to be considered while granting bail. It was nature of the acts which ought to have been considered."

The Supreme Court also observed in para 12 that even though reappreciation of evidence as done by the Court granting bail is to be avoided, the Court dealing with application for cancellation of bail under Section 439(2) can consider whether irrelevant materials were taken into consideration. The relevant material, if not taken into 11 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw consideration, can also be looked into by the Court dealing with application for cancellation of bail.

9. The learned Sessions Judge, while granting bail to the accused persons, who are respondents in these applications, generally observed that the FIR was lodged by accused No.9 PI Pradip Suryavanshi and accordingly entry was taken in the station diary. According to the learned Sessions Judge, none of these accused persons had any control over lodging of that FIR by PI Suryavanshi or on taking entries in the station diary and none of them had personally taken any entry in the station diary about their presence.

In para 17 of the order dated 22.11.2010 granting bail to accused No. 16 Prakash Kadam, the learned Sessions Judge observed thus :-

"17. It may be noted here that this material may be sufficient to frame a charge u/s 120B of IPC against the applicant. However, it is also possible that this evidence may not be sufficient to prove the case against the applicant beyond all reasonable doubts. This being the nature of the evidence, I do not see any reason to keep the applicant as an under trial prisoner....." 12 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw

Even though these observations are not repeated in the orders granting bail to other accused persons, the learned Sessions Judge appears to have dealt with the bail applications with the above view in his mind.

While considering the application for bail, the Court has to consider the material only to find out whether any prima facie case is made out or not. Similarly, at the time of framing charge also the Court has to consider the material just to find out whether prima facie case is made out or not for framing the charge. At the time of considering the application for bail, the Court is not expected to consider the prosecution evidence minutely and particularly the defence of the accused, to come to conclusion whether the material is sufficient to prove guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt. From the above referred observations, it appears that the Court came to conclusion that the material may be sufficient to frame a charge of conspiracy under Section 120B of IPC. In this case, charge is about murder of Ramnarayan Gupta as per conspiracy for that purpose. Therefore, the prosecution is for the offence under Section 302 read with Section 120B IPC. Having come to conclusion that the material may be sufficient to frame the charge, it was not only inappropriate but absolutely wrong on the part of the trial Court to say that evidence may not be sufficient to 13 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw prove the case against the accused beyond all reasonable doubt. That was not the stage to consider the material from the angle as to whether the accused could be convicted after applying the standard of proof required in the criminal case.

10. The learned Sessions Court observed that as far as accused No.16 - Prakash Kadm is concerned, only role attributed to him is that he had guarded the witness Anil Bheda in the vehicle for some time. The learned Sessions Judge appears to have ignored the fact that according to the prosecution, Head Constable Prakash Kadam had joined the abductors at about 4.30 p.m. and from that time he was guarding Anil Bheda in the vehicle. He had come to the police station and he was also with him when he was taken away from the police station, during the time from 7 p.m. to about 9 p.m., during which the police team appeared to have taken away Ramnarayan Gupta from the police station to some unknown place, where he was shot dead. Not only this, Prakash Kadam was also guarding Anil Bheda when he was confined at different place, including at Hotel Mid Town, for a period of about 30 days. Anil Bheda was illegally detained during that period by the police only because he was the eye-witness of abduction himself 14 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw and Ramnarayan Gupta from Vashi and this evidence of Anil Bheda would be very important for the prosecution, as according to prosecution, Ramnarayan Gupta was killed in a fake encounter while in police custody and not in a genuine encounter at Nani Nani Park as claimed in the FIR lodged by PI Suryavanshi. The accused No.16 Prakash Kadam must be a confidant of the officers who had hatched the conspiracy of murder and had executed. That is why he was given a very responsible duty of guarding Anil Bheda in keeping away from the police station when Ramnarayan Gupta was to be taken away for the purpose of elimination.

11. Accused No. 11 API Nitin Sartape, accused No.17 PSI Ganesh Harpude, and accused No.19 PSI Pandurang Kokam, who were attached to Versova Police Station, as per the station diary entry 33 of Versova Police Station left Versova Police Station to go to D.N.Nagar Police Station on a special assignment. That entry No.33 was taken in the station diary of Versova Police Station at 18.05 hours. Entry No.25 in the station diary of D.N.Nagar Police Station at 18.55 hrs. shows that Police Inspector Suryavanshi, API Dilip Palande (accused No.15), PSI Arvind Sarvankar (accused No.22), PSI Patade (accused No.18) and 15 Cri-A-5283-10-&-Ors.sxw API Sartape (accused No.11), PSI Harpude (accused No.17) and Police Constable Batch No.26645 i.e. Pandurang Kokam (accused No.19) left the Police Station to go near Nani Nani Park to verify and to arrest a hardened criminal. It appears that 3 police officers i.e. AP Sartape, PSI Harpude and Constable Pandurang Kokam were specially called from the Versova Police Station and they were in the team of the police officers and staff who accompanied PI Suryavanshi. This team left the police station at 18.55 hrs. as per the said entry and it appears that at about 8 to 8.15 p.m. Ramnarayan was shot dead. At this stage, the defence of the accused need not be taken into consideration, because during the investigation, it has been found that there was no encounter and Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead in a fake encounter. This station diary No. 25 of 18.55 hrs. goes to show that accused No.17 PSI Hapude, accused No.18 PSI Patade and accused No.19 Constable Pandurang Kokam were the members of the team which killed Ramnarayan. Not only this, as per the record of D.N.Nagar Police station, on 11.11.2006, at 6 p.m. Police Inspector Suryavanshi, API Sartape and PSI Anand Patade had collected weapons and ammunition. Naturally, those weapons were collected by the said officers to go to some place for a mission. According to them, they went to at Nana Nani Park where Ramnarayan Gupta was killed. In view of this, presence of PSI Patade in the team which executed the said plan and killed Ramnarayan cannot be in doubt. Merely because accused No.18 PSI Patade himself did not fire is not sufficient. Accused Nos. 17 Ganesh Harpude and accused No.19 Pandurang Kokam, as pointed out above, were also members of that team. It is also material to note that these accused persons had consistently taken a stand that they were present at the time of the said encounter and this is clear from their stand taken before the High Court as well as before the Supreme Court in Special Leave Petition filed by the accused Nos. 13, 16, 19 and 21. In that SLP also they had stated that accused Nos. 17 and 18 were also in encounter team.

12. The learned Counsel for the accused contended that these accused persons were not present at the time when Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead. According to him, because the superior officer PI Suryavanshi had filed the FIR in a particular way, these officers and staff were obliged to take same stand in their various applications and petitions before the different Courts and the Supreme Court. I am unable to accept this contention. If these persons were not involved and were not present in the alleged encounter, they could have taken a plea that they were not present at the time of alleged encounter. The accused cannot claim to have taken false plea before the High Court or the Supreme Court at least at this stage. However, a the same time, it is to be noted that the story of encounter was prima facie, cooked to cover the murder and to defend the police officers and staff and the FIR was lodged by PI Suryavanshi, who himself was one of the police officers who had fired. In my opinion, though the story of encounter appears to be false, the FIR may be looked into after circumstance which may provide corroboration to prosecution story, while granting or refusing bail.

13. I have pointed out that as far as accused Nos. 16, 17, 18 and 19 are concerned, there is sufficient material to establish their role in this conspiracy and the alleged execution of Ramnarayan Gupta.

Accused No.13 was allegedly given duty of guarding Anil Bheda at Hotel Mid Town where he was being detained illegally. It is contended by the learned Counsel for the accused that if any duty of guarding or surveillance is given to a Police Constable by his superiors, he is bound to discharge that duty and merely because he was given the guarding duty, it cannot be said that he was party to the conspiracy. However, it cannot be forgotten that he was one of the petitioners before the Supreme Court who had claimed that he was a member of the encounter team along with PI Suryavanshi and others and this admission finds corroboration from the contents of the FIR registered by PI Suryavanshi himself.

14. Learned Counsel for accused No.18 - PSI Patade produced a statement about the calls from his mobile. According to him, he was given different duties on 11.11.2006 and he was located at different places as can be seen from the said record. He points out that he was at ESIC Nagar from 6.55 till 7.28 p.m. and at 9.03 p.m. he was near Nana Nani Park. According to him, this shows that PSI Patade was not present at the scene of offence at Nana Nani park between 7 p.m. to 8.15 p.m. when Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead. The learned Counsel presums that Ramnarayan Gupta was killed at Nana Nani Park. In fact, that is the story created by PI Suryavanshi that Ramnarayan Gupta was shot dead in an encounter at Nana Nani Park.

In fact, the prosecution material collected during the investigation shows that Ramnarayan Gupta was abducted during the day time and was taken to D.N.Nagar Police Station and from there he was taken to some unknown place. At 9 p.m. some police officers came back to the police station and deposited their weapons and kept their blood stained clothes. Prosecution is not in a position to establish wheel actually Ramnarayan Gupta was killed. As pointed out earlier, at 6 p.m. PSI Patade had collected weapon and ammunition at D.N.Nagar Police Station and as per Station Diary entry they left the police station at 18.55 hrs. During the period from 6.55 p.m. to 7.28 p.m. he was located in ESIC Nagar. It is important to note that there is no record of any call on his mobile between 7.28 p.m. to 9.03 p.m. and it is not known where he was located during that period. Therefore, on the basis of the above referred telephone record, it cannot be presumed that PSI Patade was not member of the police team which killed Ramnarayan Gupta. In any case, this defence of the accused cannot be looked into at this stage but may be considered at the time of trial.

15. After perusal of the record and the impugned orders passed by the Sessions Court, I find that the learned Sessions Judge had either missed the important material or had misread the same while granting bail to these accused persons. It is a very serious case, wherein prima facie, some police officers and staff were engaged by some private persons to kill their opponent i.e. Ramnarayan Gupta and the police officers and the staff acted as contract killers for them. If such police officers and staff can be engaged as contract killers to finish some person, there may be very strong apprehension in the mind of the witnesses about their own safety. If the police officers and staff could kill a person at the behest of third person, it will not be difficult for them to kill the important witnesses or their relatives to bring pressure on them at the time of trial of the case to save themselves. This aspect has been completely ignored by the learned Sessions Judge while granting bail to the accused persons. In my opinion, very strong reasons and circumstances exist in the present case due to which cancellation of bail is absolutely necessary in the interest of justice.

16. For the aforesaid reasons, these Applications are allowed and the orders passed by the Sessions Court granting bail to the accused Nos. 13, 16, 17, 18 and 19 are hereby quashed. Bail granted to them is cancelled and they are directed to surrender immediately.

17. At this stage, the learned Counsel for the accused persons make an oral request to stay this order for four weeks so that they may approach the Supreme Court. Request is rejected.

****

Cross Citation :2012 CRI. L. J. 2101

SUPREME COURT

(From : Patna)

Coram : 2 Dr. B. S. CHAUHAN AND JAGDISH SINGH KHEHAR, JJ.

Criminal Appeal Nos. 525-526 of 2012 (arising out of S. L. P. (Cri.) Nos. 304-305 of 2012), D/- 14 -3 -2012.

Jai Prakash Singh v. State of Bihar and Anr

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438, S.439 - BAIL - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Bail - Regular or anticipatory - Considerations for granting are substantionally same - Not substantially different- only difference is that the anticipatory bail is before arrest and regular bail is after arrest.
(Para 13)

==========

Judgement

Dr. B.S. CHAUHAN, J. :- Leave granted.
2. These criminal appeals have been preferred against the judgments and orders dated 19.9.2011 and 25.10.2011 passed by the High
@page-CriLJ2102
Court of Judicature at Patna in Crl. Misc. Nos. 28318 and 33546 of 2011, by which the High Court has enlarged the respondents Rajesh Kumar Singh alias Pappu Singh and Sanjay Kumar Singh alias Mintu Singh on anticipatory bail under Section 438 of Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (hereinafter referred as 'Cr.P.C.')
3. Facts and circumstances giving rise to these appeals are that :
A. On 5.6.2011, the appellant Jai Prakash Singh lodged an FIR of Laheria Sarai Case No. 304 of 2011 under Sections 302/34 of Indian Penal Code, 1860 (hereinafter referred as 'I.P.C.'), alleging therein that the informant/complainant and his elder brother Shiv Prakash Singh were having a medicine shop for the last 2-3 years. On 5.6.2011 around 10.00 p.m., his brother closed the shop and proceeded towards his house on his motorcycle. He was chased by the aforesaid respondents on a motorcycle and stopped. They opened indiscriminate firing and thus, he died on the spot. In the FIR, it was also alleged that the said respondents had threatened the complainant to kill him and his brother 10-15 days ago as there had been some old dispute of accounts between the parties.
B. As per the post-mortem report, the deceased received 5 bullet injuries on his person and he died because of the same. The said respondents had applied for anticipatory bail, however, their applications stood rejected by the learned Sessions Judge vide order dated 11.8.2011 observing that in the investigation, a strong motive had been found against the said respondents and there were certain affidavits of eye-witnesses to the effect that the said respondents were the assailants.
C. Aggrieved, the said respondents filed Miscellaneous Criminal Petitions for grant of anticipatory bail under Section 438, Cr.P.C. before the Patna High Court. The said applications have been allowed passing the impugned orders granting them anticipatory bail on the grounds that the FIR itself made it evident that there was some previous dispute between the parties which led to a quarrel and the accused had fair antecedents.
Hence, these appeals.
4. Shri Dvijendra Kumar Pandey, learned counsel appearing for the appellant, has submitted that the High Court committed grave error while granting anticipatory bail to the said respondents without considering the gravity of the offence and the manner in which the offence had been committed and without realising that the FIR had been lodged promptly within a period of two hours of the incident and both the said accused persons had been named therein. Thus, the impugned judgments and orders are liable to be set aside.
5. On the contrary, Ms. Kavita Jha and Ms. Prerna Singh, learned counsel appearing for the said respondents and the State of Bihar, have opposed the appeals contending that the High Court has imposed very serious conditions while granting the anticipatory bail. The order does not require any interference at this stage. The appeals have no merit and are liable to be dismissed.

6. We have considered the rival submissions made by the learned counsel appearing for the parties and perused the record.
7. The provisions of Section 438, Cr.P.C. lay down guidelines for considering the anticipatory bail application, which read as under:
"438. Direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest.-(1) Where any person has reason to believe thathe may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to theHigh Court or the Court of Session for a direction underthis section that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail; and that court may, after taking into consideration, inter alia, the following factors, namely:
(i) The nature and gravity of the accusation;
(ii) The antecedents of the applicant including the fact as to whether he has previously undergone imprisonment on conviction by a court in respect of any cognizable offence;
(iii) the possibility of the applicant to flee from justice; and
@page-CriLJ2103
(iv) where the accusation has been made with the object of injuring or humiliating the applicant by having him soarrested, either reject the application forthwith or issue an interim order for the grant of anticipatory bail."
8. In view of the above, it is mandatory on the part of the court to ensure the compliance of the pre-requisite conditions for grant of anticipatory bail including the nature and gravity of the accusation.
9. Admittedly, the deceased had received several gun shot injuries. According to the post-mortem report, the following injuries were found on the person of the deceased:
"A . Abrasions: (1) 1 1/4" x1/4" 1"-right and enter post of forehead (2) 1/4" x 1/4" 1/2" x 1/4" and 1/2" x 1/10" in the lower 1/2 of the left leg (3) 1/4" x l/4" right kneecap.
B. Fire Arm injuries (1) entry wound 1/4 dia with inverted contused margins and abrasions. Collar placed on the outer aspect of the right arm 2" proxical to elbow -passed thro' arms breaking the bone into pieces and lacerating the to come out thro' exit wound 1/3" x 1/9" with even in the middle and inner portion of arm. Another entry wound, 1/5" in dia with abrasion collar, inverted margin and tattooing around (1-1/2" x 1-1/2") was also present 1" distal to the preventing entry wound and come out through the same exit wound.
(2) Entry wound -1/4" dia with inverted contused margin an abrasion collar in right anterior axillary line 5" below nipple-right 8th intercortal space-right lobe of liver mes entry-small intestine at one place-came out through exit wound 1/3" in dia in lower left iliac fosa in the axilary line with inverted margin.
(3) Entry wound 1/4" dia with contused inverted margins and abrasion collar placed in the left iliac fosa-color at one place-small intestine at one place came out this exit wound -" x 1/2" on right abdominal flank with everted margin, in anterior oscillary line 9" below nipple.
(4) Entry wound 1/3" in dia with contused inverted margin and abrasion collar over upper and inner part of left and soft tissue of the arm to came out through the exit wound 1/3" in dia with everted margin on the back of left arm 3" above (proximal) elbow.
(5) Entry wound 1/4" in dia on the back of abdomen 4" outer to midline at T12 level, with inverted and contused margins and abrasions collar mesentry large intestine at one place exit through a wound 1/4" dia with inverted margin in the hand.
Along the tracks, the tissue were lacerated. Fluid blood red clots were seen inside abdominal cavity about 1000 cc in volume. Organs appeared pale. Both sides of the heart were partially full and the urinary bladder was found full. Stomach contained about 20 cc food without alcoholic smell. Skull and brain showed nothing particular.
Opinion Death resulted from hemorrhage and both due to fire arm injuries mentioned above."

10. The learned Sessions Judge did not consider it proper to grant anticipatory bail, rather rejected the same after considering the submissions made on behalf of the said accused persons observing that the court had perused the Case Diary, para 90 of which revealed a very strong motive. There was material against the said accused in the case diary. The deceased had received multiple abrasions and 5 gun shot injuries, thus, it was not a fit case to enlarge the accused on anticipatory bail.
11. Admittedly, the FIR had been lodged promptly within a period of two hours from the time of incident at midnight. Promptness in filing the FIR gives certain assurance of veracity of the version given by the informant/complainant.
12. The FIR in criminal case is a vital and valuable piece of evidence though may not be substantive piece of evidence. The object of insisting upon prompt lodging of the FIR in respect of the commission of an offence is to obtain early information regarding the circumstances in which the crime was committed, the names of actual culprits and the part played by them as well as the names of eye-witnesses present at the scene of occurrence. If there is a delay in lodging the FIR, it looses the advantage of spontaneity, danger creeps in of the introduction of coloured version, exaggerated account or concocted story as a result of large number of consultations/deliberations. Undoubtedly, the promptness in lodging the FIR is an assurance regarding truth of the informant's version. A promptly lodged FIR reflects the first hand account of what has actually happened, and who was responsible for the offence in question. (Vide: Thulia Kali v. The State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1973 SC 501; State of Punjab v. Surja Ram, AIR 1995 SC 2413 : (1995 AIR SCW 3571); Girish Yadav and Ors. v. State of M.P., (1996) 8 SCC 186 : (AIR 1996 SC 3098 : 1996 AIR SCW 1557); and Takdir Samsuddin Sheikh v. State of Gujarat and Anr., AIR 2012 SC 37 : (2011 AIR SCW 6486)).
@page-CriLJ2104
13. There is no substantial difference between Sections 438 and 439, Cr.P.C. so far as appreciation of the case as to whether or not a bail is to be granted, is concerned. However, neither anticipatory bail nor regular bail can be granted as a matter of rule. The anticipatory bail being an extraordinary privilege should be granted only in exceptional cases. The judicial discretion conferred upon the court has to be properly exercised after proper application of mind to decide whether it is a fit case for grant of anticipatory bail.
14. In State of M.P. and Anr. v. Ram Kishna Balothia and Anr., AIR 1995 SC 1198 : (1995 AIR SCW 1267), this Court considered the nature of the right of anticipatory bail and observed as under:
"We find it difficult to accept the contention that Section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is an integral part of Article 21. In the first place, there was no provision similar to Section 438 in the old Criminal Procedure Code….. Also anticipatory bail cannot be granted as a matter of right. It is essentially a statutory right conferred long after the coming into force of the Constitution. It cannot be considered as an essential ingredient of Article 21 of the Constitution. And its non-application to a certain special category of offences cannot be considered as violative of Article 21."
15. While deciding the aforesaid cases, this Court referred to the 41st Report of the Indian Law Commission dated 24th September, 1969 recommending the introduction of a provision for grant of anticipatory bail wherein it has been observed that "power to grant anticipatory bail should be exercised in very exceptional cases".
16. Ms. Kavita Jha, learned counsel appearing for the accused/respondents has vehemently advanced the arguments on the concept of life and liberty enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution of India placing a very heavy reliance on the observations made by this Court in Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre v. State of Maharashtra and Ors., AIR 2011 SC 312 : (2012 AIR SCW 3813), and submitted that unless the custodial interrogation is warranted in the facts and circumstances of the case, not granting anticipatory bail amounts to denial of the rights conferred upon a citizen/person under Article 21 of the Constitution. We are afraid the law as referred to hereinabove does not support the case as canvassed by learned counsel for the accused-respondents. More so, the Constitution Bench of this Court in Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569 : (1994 Cri LJ 3139), while summing up the law in para 368, inter alia, held as under:

"Section 20(7) of the TADA Act excluding the application of Section 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure in relation to any case under the Act and the Rules made thereunder, cannot be said to have deprived the personal liberty of a person as enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution."

(See also: Narcotics Control Bureau v. Dilip Prahlad Namade (2004) 3 SCC 619) : (AIR 2004 SC 2950 : 2004 AIR SCW 1757).

Therefore, we are not impressed by the submissions so advanced by learned counsel for the accused-respondents.

17. This Court in Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre (supra) after considering the earlier judgments of this Court laid down certain factors and parameters to be considered while considering application for anticipatory bail :

"122. The following factors and parameters can be taken into consideration while dealing with the anticipatory bail :

@page-CriLJ2105

i. The nature and gravity of the accusation and the exact role of the accused must be properly comprehended before arrest is made;

ii. The antecedents of the applicant including the fact as to whether the accused has previously undergone imprisonment on conviction by a Court in respect of any cognizable offence;

iii. The possibility of the applicant to flee from justice;

iv. The possibility of the accused's likelihood to repeat similar or the other offences.

v. Where the accusations have been made only with the object of injuring or humiliating the applicant by arresting him or her.

vi. Impact of grant of anticipatory bail particularly in cases of large magnitude affecting a very large number of people.

vii. The courts must evaluate the entire available material against the accused very carefully. The court must also clearly comprehend the exact role of the accused in the case. The cases in which accused is implicated with the help of sections 34 and 149 of the Indian Penal Code, the court should consider with even greater care and caution because over-implication in the cases is a matter of common knowledge and concern;

viii. While considering the prayer for grant of anticipatory bail, a balance has to be struck between two factors namely, no prejudice should be caused to the free, fair and full investigation and there should be prevention of harassment, humiliation and unjustified detention of the accused;

ix. The court to consider reasonable apprehension of tampering of the witness or apprehension of threat to the complainant;

x. Frivolity in prosecution should always be considered and it is only the element of genuineness that shall have to be considered in the matter of grant of bail and in the event of there being some doubt as to the genuineness of the prosecution, in the normal course of events, the accused is entitled to an order of bail.

123. The arrest should be the last option and it should be restricted to those exceptional cases where arresting the accused is imperative in the facts and circumstances of that case.

124. The court must carefully examine the entire available record and particularly the allegations which have been directly attributed to the accused and these allegations are corroborated by other material and circumstances on record."

18. Parameters for grant of anticipatory bail in a serious offence are required to be satisfied and further while granting such relief, the court must record the reasons therefore. Anticipatory bail can be granted only in exceptional circumstances where the court is prima facie of the view that the applicant has falsely been enroped in the crime and would not misuse his liberty. (See: D.K. Ganesh Babu v. P.T. Manokaran and Ors., (2007) 4 SCC 434 : (AIR 2007 SC 1450 : 2007 AIR SCW 1896); State of Maharashtra and Anr. v. Mohd. Sajid Husain Mohd. S. Husain and Ors., (2008) 1 SCC 213 : (AIR 2008 SC 155 : 2007 AIR SCW 6354); and Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal and Ors., (2008) 13 SCC 305) : (AIR 2009 SC 254 : 2008 AIR SCW 7220).

19. The case at hand, if considered in the light of aforesaid settled legal proposition, we reach an inescapable conclusion that the High Court did not apply any of the aforesaid parameters, rather dealt with a very serious matter in a most casual and cavalier manner and showed undeserving and unwarranted sympathy towards the accused.

20. The High Court erred in not considering the case in correct perspective and allowed the said applications on the grounds that in the FIR some old disputes had been referred to and the accused had fair antecedents. The relevant part of the High Court judgment impugned before us reads as under:

"Considering that the only allegation in the First Information Report is that there was previously some dispute between the deceased and the petitioner and they had quarrelled on account of the same, let the petitioner above named, who has fair antecedents, be released on anticipatory bail……."

@page-CriLJ2106

21. In the facts and circumstances of this case, we are of the considered opinion that it was not a fit case for grant of anticipatory bail. The High Court ought to have exercised its extraordinary jurisdiction following the parameters laid down by this Court in above referred to judicial pronouncements, considering the nature and gravity of the offence and as the FIR had been lodged spontaneously, its veracity is reliable. The High Court has very lightly brushed aside the fact that FIR had been lodged spontaneously and further did not record any reason as how the pre-requisite conditions incorporated in the statutory provision itself stood fulfilled. Nor did the court consider as to whether custodial interrogation was required.

The court may not exercise its discretion in derogation of established principles of law, rather it has to be in strict adherence to them. Discretion has to be guided by law; duly governed by rule and cannot be arbitrary, fanciful or vague. The court must not yield to spasmodic sentiment to unregulated benevolence. The order dehors the grounds provided in Section 438, Cr.P.C. itself suffers from non-application of mind and therefore, cannot be sustained in the eyes of law.

22. The impugned judgments and orders dated 19.9.2011 and 25.10.2011 passed by the High Court of Judicature at Patna in Crl. Misc. Nos.28318 and 33546 of 2011 are, thus, set aside. The anticipatory bail granted to the said respondents is cancelled. Needless to say that in case the said respondents apply for regular bail, the same would be considered in accordance with law. With the aforesaid observations, appeals stand disposed of.

Appeals allowed.

****

Cross Citation : 2008 CRI. L. J. 1083

ANDHRA PRADESH HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 P. SWAROOP REDDY, J. (Single Bench)

Cri. Petn. No. 6642 of 2007, D/- 22 -11 -2007.

Kamireddy Mangamma Reddy and Ors. v. State of A.P.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.438 - Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.498A - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - CRUELTY BY HUSBAND OR HIS RELATIVE - Anticipatory bail - Accused persons married sister-in-laws of complainant and their husbands alleged to have instigated other accused persons i.e., husband, father-in-law etc. to harass complainant - One sister-in-law and her husband were residing in U. S. A. - Held, it is very difficult to believe that accused used to harass complainant, all the way - Accused persons entitled to anticipatory bail.

Section 498-A, I. P. C. is incorporated by the Legislature basically in the interest of women and to safeguard them from harassment. But, it has become somewhat counter productive. In several cases, women are harassed, arrested and humiliated on the complaints given under Section 498-A, I. P. C. The truth or otherwise of the allegations is subject to proof. For giving complaint absolutely no authentic and prima facie material like medical evidence is required, but no such complaints, in several cases, number of women are being arrested. In cases of arrest of married young women, they might face problems from their husbands and in-laws; in case unmarried women are arrested their marriage prospects would be badly affected and if Government servants are arrested their service prospects are affected. In the present case, only one woman is the alleged victim; but at least four women might have to go to jail even before trial, affecting their reputation, subjecting them to rude treatment at Police Station etc. Only in cases where, strong and authentic evidence like letters written by the accused-husband to the spouses or their parents etc., are available and where there is sufferance of serious injuries or death of the victim only, perhaps, it is desirable to refuse anticipatory bail, that, too, for the accused-husband. (Paras 6, 7)

==========

D. Bhaskar Reddy, for Petitioners; Public Prosecutor, for Respondent.

Judgement

ORDER :- This petition for granting anticipatory bail is filed by A-3 to A-7 in Cr. No. 251 of 2007 of P. S., Narsaraopet Town, Guntur District.

2. A-3 is the mother; A-4 is the elder sister; A-5 is the brother-in-law, being the husband of A-4; A-6 is the younger sister and A-7 is the brother-in-law, being the husband of A-6, of A-1, the husband of the de facto complainant.

3. According to the complainant at the time of marriage twelve cents of plot worth Rs. 6.00 lakhs; cash of Rs. 3.00 lakhs; gold ornaments of Rs. 1.00 lakh and household articles worth Rs. 50,000.00 were given to the husband (A-1) at the time of marriage, which was held on 19-5-2006. One month after the marriage, at the instance of A-2 to A-7, A-1 started harassing the complainant. A-3 went to USA some time after the marriage of the complainant and before her leaving for USA, A-3 subjected the complainant to harassment both, physically and mentally and A-5, who is residing in USA is behind the scene in subjecting the complainant to cruelty. He used to change the minds of all the accused to subject her to harassment for money. From USA he used to speak over telephone, everyday and direct the other accused to harass the complainant, as A-5 bore grudge against the complainant. At the instance of A-5 all the accused abused and beat her several times for no fault of her. A-1 became a puppet in the hands of other accused and finally on 30-9-2006 A-1 necked her out from the matrimonial house.

4. Thus most of the allegations in the complaint are vague and petitioner Nos. 2 to 5 are married sisters and their husbands, who are admittedly living elsewhere and out of them, A-5 is living in USA. It is very difficult to believe that from USA A-5 every day used to telephone and instigate the other accused to harass the complainant. As per the complaint, A-5 has grudge against the complainant, but it is not stated as to why A-5 should have grudge against the complainant.

5. The contention of the learned counsel for the petitioners is that A-1, husband of the complainant filed a petition for divorce and a copy of the same is enclosed with this petition. As per the divorce petition, the complainant, herself, has been harassing the petitioners/accused.

6. The nature of allegations referred to in the complaint, particularly against the present petitioners, particularly against petitioner Nos. 2 to 5, the married daughters and their husbands, would show that in all probability, the allegations are false and exaggerated. It is very difficult to believe that the third petitioner used to harass the complainant, all the way from USA by instigating the other accused, particularly when no reasons are shown for him to have any grievance against the complainant. The reference to A-5 in the complaint, might be A-3 and, in fact, even that also would not make any difference.

@page-CriLJ1084

7. In these circumstances, I hold that it is a fit case for granting anticipatory bail to the petitioners. Accordingly the petition is allowed. All the petitioners, who are A-3 to A-7 in Cr. No. 251 of 2007 of P. S., Narsaraopet Town, on their surrender before the Station House Officer of the said police station, within ten days from today, shall be enlarged on bail, on each of them executing a personal bond for a sum of Rs. 10,000.00 with two sureties for the like sum each to the satisfaction of the Station House Officer of P. S., Narsaraopet Town, Guntur District. The petitioners shall abide by the conditions laid down in Section 438, Cr. P. C.

8. Before parting with the petition, I feel it desirable to observe that there is rampant misuse of S. 498-A, I. P. C. False complaints are given against kith-and-kin of the husband, including the married sisters and their husbands; unmarried sisters and brothers and married brothers and their wives. There are instances where even young children, aged below ten years, were also implicated in the offences of this nature. My experience, while sitting in matrimonial Bench revealed that several families are ruined; marriages have been irretrievably broken down and chances of reconciliation of spouses have been spoiled on account of unnecessary complaints and the consequent arrest and remand of the husbands and their kith-and-kin. To discourage this unhealthy practice, it is desirable that anticipatory bail is granted very liberally in all cases of S. 498-A, I. P. C., particularly when the petitioner/accused is not the husband of the complainant and when the allegations are not very specific and prima facie do not inspire confidence.

9. Section 498-A, IPC is incorporated by the Legislature basically in the interest of women and to safeguard them from harassment. But, it has become somewhat counter productive. In several cases, women are harassed, arrested and humiliated on the complaints given under Section 498-A, IPC. The truth or otherwise of the allegations is subject to proof. For giving complaint absolutely no authentic and prima facie material like medical evidence is required, but on such complaints, in several cases, number of women are being arrested. In cases of arrest of married young women, they might face problems from their husbands and in-laws; in case unmarried women are arrested their marriage prospects would be badly affected and if Government servants are arrested their service prospects are affected. In the present case, only one woman is the alleged victim; but at least four women might have to go to jail even before trial, affecting their reputation, subjecting them to rude treatment at Police Station etc.

10. Only in cases where, strong and authentic evidence like letters written by the accused-husband to the spouses or their parents etc. are available and where there is sufferance of serious injuries or death of the victim only, perhaps, it is desirable to refuse anticipatory bail, that, too, for the accused- husband. Another important aspect is in this type of cases; there is no chance of witnesses turning hostile or being influenced by the accused, as the witnesses would invariably be the kith-and-kin of the alleged victim like herself and her parents etc. These aspects have to be kept in view, while dealing with the cases of anticipatory bail/bail in cases of offences involving Section 498-A, IPC.

Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2010 ALL MR (Cri) 1466

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

D. G. KARNIK, J.
Rajdev Kumar Mathura Yadav @ Pappu Vs.State of Maharashtra
Mr. PRABHANJAY R. DAVE with SACHIN P. DALVI, for the Applicant.
Mr. D. N. SALVI with Mr. MANDAR GOSWAMI, for the CBI.
Mr. A. S. GADKARI, APP, for the State.

==========

Constitution of India, Art.21 - Criminal P.C. (1973), S.439 - Speedy trial - Accused charged under Ss.366-A, 372, 373 of I.P.C. r/w. Ss.3 to 6 of Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act in custody for more than 18 months - Delay attributable to prosecution - This has resulted in infringement of fundamental right of applicant for speedy trial - In the circumstances, held, irrespective of other circumstances the applicant is entitled to be released on bail. (Para [7])

==========

JUDGMENT :- Heard.

2. By this application, applicant seeks bail in connection with C.R. No.RC 2/S/2008 registered by CBI Special Crime Branch, Mumbai for offence punishable u/ss.366-A, 372, 373 of IPC r/w. sections 3, 4, 5 and 6 of The Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956.

3. The short question that arises for consideration in this matter is whether the constitutional right of a fair and expeditious trial on the applicant has been violated entitling him to be released on bail. One of the grievances of the applicant is that though applicant has been arrested nearly 18 months ago on 30th September, 2008, the trial is not being held and that too on account of the lapses solely attributable to the State. The applicant is languishing in jail without trial on account of neglect of the State.

4. Learned counsel for the CBI points out that the lapses, if any, are not attributable to the CBI but are attributable to the State police or the jail authorities. Applicant cannot therefore get the benefit of the lapses on behalf of the State Government. Article 21 confers a right of a speedy trial. That right is not affected whether the prosecuting agency responsible for prosecution is Union or the State Government. Both must act in co-ordination with each other to ensure that the constitutional right of an accused for speedy trial is not violated.

5. By an order dated 8th February, 2010, a report was called from the learned District & Sessions Judge as to why the trial was delayed and even a charge had not been framed. The learned District Judge-4 and Addl. Sessions Judge before whom the case is pending has submitted his report vide letter dated 23rd February, 2010. He has attributed four causes for the delay. They are : -

(1) On some dates, charge could not be framed because the application for bail by some of the accused were pending.

(2) On some dates all the accused were not produced and in the absence of the accused charge could not be framed.

(3) On some dates advocate for the CBI - the prosecuting agency was absent.

(4) On some dates, advocates for some of the accused were absent and therefore charge could not be framed.

The first three causes are attributable to the State.

6. In this regard, a reference can be made to the following dates, mentioned in the report of the Sessions Judge.

(i) 17/4/2009 - Only accused nos.2, 3, 6 and 7 were produced and the other accused were not produced from the jail.

(ii) 15/5/2009 - None of the accused were produced from jail.

(iii) 29/5/2009 - Only accused nos.2, 4 and 5 were produced and the other accused were not produced from jail.

(iv) 3/8/2009 - Accused were produced, but Spl.P.P for CBI was absent.

(v) 29/8/2009 - Accused were not produced from jail.

(vi) 10/9/2009 - Accused were not produced from jail.

(vii) 7/10/2009 - Spl.P.P for the CBI as well as Officer of the CBI were absent.

(viii) 15/10/2009 - Spl.P.P for CBI was absent.

(ix) 5/11/2009 - Spl.P.P for CBI was absent.

(x) 11/11/2009 - Spl.P.P for CBI was absent.

(xi) 24/11/2009 - Accused were not produced from jail and the Spl.P.P for CBI was also absent.

(xii) 30/11/2009 - Spl. P.P for CBI was absent.

(xiii) 22/12/2009 - Accused were produced but the Spl.P.P for CBI was absent.

(xiv) 6/01/2010 - Spl.P.P for CBI was absent.

(xv) 20/2/2010 - Only accused nos.1, 4 and 5 were produced and other accused were not produced from jail.

7. The dates mentioned above are as reported by the learned Addl. Sessions Judge. They clearly demonstrate that the trial could not be proceeded and even a charge could not be framed against the applicant, though applicant is in custody for nearly 18 months. The report of the Sessions Judge discloses that the major, if not the sole, reason for the delay in the trial is attributable to the prosecution whether it be the CBI or State Government. This has resulted in infringement of the fundamental right of the applicant for the speedy trial. In the circumstances, irrespective of the merits of the case, the applicant is entitled to be released on bail. Hence, I pass the following order : -

O R D E R

Applicant be released on bail on his executing P.R. Bond of Rs.20,000 /- with two sureties for the like amount subject to the following conditions :

(i) Applicant shall not threaten the prosecution witness.

(ii) Applicant shall report his presence in the office of CBI, Special Crime Branch New Mumbai once a fortnight i.e to say on 1st or 2nd and 15th or 16th of every British Calendar Month.

(iii) Within 48 hours of his release, the applicant shall inform to the CBI, SCB his present residential address, residential telephone number and cell number and shall intimate any change therein within 48 hours of the change.

Any breach of the condition shall result in cancellation of the bail.

Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2007 CRI. L. J. 2890

PATNA HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 DHARNIDHAR JHA, J. (Single Bench)

Cri. Misc. No. 50053 of 2006, D/- 26 -4 -2007.

"Dinesh Parwat v. State of Bihar"

==========

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.438 - BAIL - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Criminal Miscellaneous Application before High Court for anticipatory bail - Withdrawn - Regular bail application filed before lower Court - Can be allowed - It is true that a petition being dismissed as withdrawn is also a dismissal, but if no merit has been touched by the Court in passing such dismissal order on account of withdrawal of the petition then in that case it could never be creating a situation under which the lower Courts could be said to have acted against the rejection order passed by the superior Court so as to allowing or refusing it. Even if the superior Courts touched upon the merits of the case while dismissing a petition under S. 438, Cr. P.C. it could not create a bar for any of the lower Courts to proceed to hear a petition for bail and direct the release of the accused from custody after consideration of all the facts and circumstances. (Para 20)

(B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437(5) - BAIL – Accused an advocate - Application for bail - Rejected by Magistrate - Copies for rejection order made available within few hours - On same day application for release on bail filed before Sessions Court - Such fact could not disentitle Sessions Judge to pass order allowing bail application - More so when applicant was advocate and to avoid revolt by members of bar, the order could have been passed - Moreover as the accused-applicant was an advocate, to avoid situation like the members of the Bar going up in arms and rising in revolt against the Judicial Officers as soon as one of their colleagues is either remanded to custody or is refused the prayer for bail the order for allowing bail could have been passed. It could have been one of the reasons for directing the release of the accused on the same day on which his prayer was rejected by the Chief Judicial Magistrate. (Para 17)

Where on the very date on which the prayer for bail was rejected by the Magistrate, the petition for bail was filed before the Sessions Court and the order for release the accused on bail was passed, the order was not liable to be set aside though this may not be a normal phenomenon obtained in all judgeships of the State that copies of rejection orders or petitions for bail were made available within a few hours and on the same day the orders were passed, but, that could hardly disentitle the Sessions Judge to entertain the petition and hear the same on the same day. There is no rule forbidding any Court to receive petitions on the very day on which a subordinate Court has passed an order. The practice might be otherwise only with a view not to causing discomfiture to the general litigants in presenting their petitions. The normal judicial behaviour do require uniformity and it was expected that the same uniformity would have been observed in the present case as well as the office of the Sessions Judge, but for that the Sessions Judge could not be faulted. Moreover as the accused-applicant was an advocate, to avoid situation like the members of the Bar going up in arms and rising in revolt against the Judicial Officers as soon as one of their colleagues is either remanded to custody or is refused the prayer for bail the order for allowing bail could have been passed. It could have been one of the reasons for directing the release of the accused on the same day on which his prayer was rejected by the Chief Judicial Magistrate. (Para 17)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras
Cross Citation :2004 Cri LJ 1359 : AIR 2004 SC 2890 : 2004 AIR SCW 527 : 2004 AIR - Jhar HCR 1060 16, 21
1980 Cri LJ 588 (AP) 13
1978 Cri LJ 129 : AIR 1978 SC 179 16, 21
Vitesh Kr. Singh, for Petitioner; Y. V. Giri, Sr. Advocate, for Opposite parties.

JUDGEMENT ORDER :- The Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gopalganj disposed of the prayer for bail of O.P. No. 2 Rajesh Giri who surrendered before him in connection with Keteya P.S. case No. 92 of 2006 under Sections 307 etc. of the Indian Penal Code by rejecting prayer for bail. The O.P. No. 2 filed B. P. No. 963 of 2006 on the same day of rejection of his prayer by the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate, i.e. on 20-9-2006. The learned Sessions Judge, Gopalganj directed the petition to be put up before him on the same day, i.e. 20-9-2006 and after hearing the learned counsel for the petitioner and the Public Prosecutor directed the release of O.P. No. 2 on bail. The informant of the case, i.e. the petitioner Dinesh Parwat felt aggrieved by the above order and filed the present criminal miscellaneous petition with a prayer to cancel the order of bail passed by the learned Sessions Judge, Gopalganj.

2. The fact of the case was that in an occurrence dated 31-5-2006 all the accused persons came into the orchard situated in front of the house of the informant-petitioner Dinesh Parwat and started abusing him. The accused persons surrounded the petitioner and accused Rajendra Giri ordered to kill him upon which O.P. No. 2 Rajesh Giri dealt a farsa blow on the head of the petitioner with an intention to kill him whereby bleeding injury was caused to the petitioner. Accused Rajesh Giri and Brijesh Giri dealt lathi blow to the petitioner informant on his left and right hands and both the above noted accused i.e. Rakesh and Brijesh also assaulted Sunil Parwat the full brother of the informant and injured him. When the uncle of the petitioner informant came to rescue. Suresh Parwat was also assaulted with lathi by the accused persons and was injured badly. Accused Rajdeo Parwat assaulted Suresh Parwat on his head causing a wound. One Surendra Singh friend of the informant was also assaulted by Birendra Parwat.

3. The case registered under Sections 323, 324, 325, 307 etc. of the Indian Penal Code on 31-5-2006 and the investigation was taken up. Injury report in respect of injury found on the person of petitioner Dinesh Parat indicated that there were as many as six injuries in the form of an incised wound, two swellings and two contusions. Injury No. 1 which may be the resultant injury of the assault allegedly given by O. P. No. 2 to the petitioner informant was an incised wound measuring 2.1/2" x 1/4" x scalp deep on left frontal and occipital region of head bleeding profusely. The doctor recorded that the bleeding may be dangerous to life. In his final opinion the doctor reported the above noted injury to be simple in nature. The two contusions and two swellings were on different parts of hand of the informant petitioner and were simple in nature. However, the doctor reserved the opinion in respect of injury No. 2 and 4 and subsequently sent his final opinion dated 1-6-2006 according to which injury No. 2 a swelling on right clavicular region measuring 2" x 1" with abrasion measuring 1/2" x 1/2" was found to be grievous on account of the fracture of the right clavicular bone. Injury No. 4 was finally reported to be simple. O.P. No. 2 Rajesh Giri filed an anticipatory bail petition which was heard by the learned Sessions Judge vide anticipatory bail petition No. 281/06 and was rejected by his order dated 22-8-2006. While passing the order the learned Sessions Judge considered the allegation against O.P. No. 2 of dealing farsa blow on the head of the petitioner informant and the resultant injury which was simple in nature and, as such, by the operative final paragraph of his order directed the lower Court (i.e. the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gopalganj) to "consider the nature of injury and the fact that the petitioner is a practising lawyer of this place while passing order of regular bail". Accordingly, O.P. No. 2 appeared, as indicated at the very outset, before the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gopalganj on 20-9-2006 and made a prayer for being released on bail and that has rejected ultimately resulting into filing of B.P. No. 963 of 2006 on 20-9-2006 and as per order passed in that bail petition the O.P. No. 2 was released from custody. It may also be of some importance to note that after rejection order of the anticipatory bail petition No. 281 of 2006 O.P. No. 2 approached this Court through criminal miscellaneous petition No. 36949 of 2006 and that was withdrawn on 19-9-2006 whereafter the petitioner surrendered before the Chief Judicial Magistrate.

4. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioner informant submitted that it was true that there was no recognized ground for cancellation available in the present case but as regards application of discretionary power it has to be available equally to all persons to approach the Court of the Sessions Judge, Gopalganj under similar circumstances. It was contended that there was no practice prevailing in any judgeship specially in the judgeship of Gopalganj that on rejection of the prayer for bail by a Magistrate the Sessions Judge hears the petition on the same day and disposes it of. It was also contended that it appears that the Judgeship of Gopalganj exhibited some special interest in the case of O.P. No. 2 so as to issuing the certified copy of the rejection order which was made over to the accused and that the petition for bail was presented before the learned Sessions Judge while in other cases the matter would have been directed to be placed for hearing the next day, the learned Judge directed the same to be placed on the same day and accordingly released the petitioner. The other circumstance placed before this Court was that the order of bail passed by the learned Sessions Judge on 20-9-2006 was that after rejection of the anticipatory bail petition with some observation by the Sessions Judge. The O.P. No. 2 filed criminal miscellaneous petition No. 36949 of 2006 and withdrew it on 19-9-2006 to surrender in the Court below on the next day. The learned Sessions Judge ought to have waited for some times to ponder over the legal position as to whether under the above circumstances he could have passed the order releasing O.P. No. 2 from custody. Learned counsel very fairly conceded that besides the above, there was no legally recognised ground available to him for seeking the cancellation of the impugned order dated 20-9-2006, passed in B.P. No. 963 of 2006.

5. Shri Y. V. Giri, Senior Advocate appearing on behalf of O.P. No. 2 drew my attention to annexure-1 to his counter-affidavit which is the order passed in anticipatory bail petition No. 281/2006 in which certain observations were given as a matter of direction to the Chief Judicial Magistrate for his consideration as and when O.P. No. 2 appeared with the prayer for bail. Shri Giri also drew my attention towards the fact that there was a counter-case for the same incident in which the mother of O.P. No. 2 was the informant and the case was registered as Kateya P.S. case No. 93 of 2006 which was under different sections of the Indian Penal Code. It was further contended that the nature of injury was simple and there was a direction by way of observation of the Learned Sessions Judge to the Chief Judicial Magistrate, to consider the allegation in the light of the injuries and pass the order of bail as and when O.P. No. 2 appeared before him. It was further contended that petition for bail of O.P. No. 2 was heard by A.C.J.M. Gopalganj who was not a regular Court for such matters and he hears and disposes criminal matters in the first half of the day so as to take up usual business of hearing civil matters in the later part of the day and accordingly as soon as the order was passed and signed the application for copy was made and the same being supplied, the application was filed on the same day before the learned Sessions Judge. As such, there was no question of the sanctity of the Courts and the order being doubted.

6. The relevant provision of the Cr. P.C. which was applicable in the present case is Section 437. The provision is as under :

437. "When bail may be taken in case of non-bailable offence (1) When any person accused of, or suspected of, the commission of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of police station or appears or is brought before a Court other than the High Court or Court of Session, he may be released on bail, but :-

(i) such person shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life;

(ii) such person shall not be so released if such offence is a cognizable offence and he had been previously convicted of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for seven years or more, or he had been previously convicted on two or more occasions of a non-bailable and cognizable offence : Provided that the Court may direct that a person referred to in clause (i) or clause (ii) be released on bail if such person is under the age of sixteen years or is a woman or is sick or infirm :Provided further that the Court may also direct that a person referred to in clause (ii) be released on bail if it is satisfied that it is just and proper so to do for any other special reason. Provided also that the mere fact that an accused person may be required for being identified by witnesses during investigation shall not be sufficient ground for refusing to grant bail if he is otherwise entitled to be released on bail and gives an undertaking that he shall comply with such directions as may be given by the Court.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, subject to the provisions of Section 446A and pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) When a person accused or suspected of the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or more or of an offence under Chapter VI, Chapter XVI or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860), or abetment of, or conspiracy or attempt to commit, any such offence, is released on bail under sub-section (1), the Court may impose any condition which the Court considers necessary -

(a) in order to ensure that such person shall attend in accordance with the conditions of the bond executed under this Chapter, or

(b) in order to ensure that such person shall not commit an offence similar to the offence of which he is accused or of the commission of which he is suspected, or

(c) otherwise in the interest of justice.

(4) An officer or a Court releasing any person on bail under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), shall record in writing his or its (reasons or special reasons) for so doing.

(5) Any Court which has released a person on bail under sub-section (1) of sub-section (2), may if it considers it necessary so to do, direct that such person be arrested and commit him to custody.

(6) If, in any case triable by a Magistrate, the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within a period of sixty days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, such person shall if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing, the Magistrate otherwise directs.

(7) If, at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non-bailable offence and before judgment is delivered, the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable ground for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused, if he is in custody, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered."

7. The question which has been raised in the present petition does not make it necessary to analyse the entire provision of the afore-noted section. It is sufficient to consider the provisions of sub-section (1) of the section which provides that if a person accused of committing any non-bailable offence appears before a Court other than High Court or the Court of Sessions, he may be released on bail. Thus the general rule laid down by the above provision is that an accused having committed any non-bailable offence has to be released on bail. If any hindrance or fetter appears created by the provision in acting according to the above general rule of releasing the accused on bail by a Magistrate, it is by virtue of clause (i) and (ii) of sub-section (1). According to clause (i) the accused shall not be released if there "appears reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life", clause (ii) of sub-section (i) forbids the release of the accused on bail if the offence is a cognizable offence and he had been previously convicted of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for seven years or more, he had been previously convicted on two or more occasions of a cognizable offence. It may further appear after considering the first three provisos added to sub-section (1) that the bar created by clauses (i) and (ii) may not operate to obstruct the order directing the release of an accused under Section 437(1) if the accused is of 16 years of age or is a woman or is sick or infirm or for any special reason the Court found it necessary on being satisfied about the existence of such reasons, so to do. The third circumstance for releasing the accused may be that accused was to be put on T.I.P. for identification by the witnesses during investigation if the accused was otherwise entitled so to be released and was ready to give an undertaking of complying with the direction of the Court given to him.

8. On a careful consideration of the language of clause (i) what appears is that for releasing an accused on bail there could not be many considerations except the reasonable grounds for believing that the accused was guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life. What appears to me is that the offence of the case in which release of the accused on bail is sought for should be punishable with death or imprisonment for life. That by itself may not be sufficient for refusing the prayer for bail. There must be reasonable grounds appearing from material placed before the Magistrate so as to forming an opinion of the level of 'belief' that the accused has indeed committed an offence punishable as indicated above. Mere commission of the offence, thus, may not be sufficient. The nature of the material creating 'belief' in the mind of the Court must be of such quality as to creating definite impression about the accused being guilty of committing such an offence. Mere allegation of dealing assault may not be sufficient in the light of the above discussion unless the grounds reasonably raise an inference regarding the ultimate guilt into the mind of the Court.

9. When the provision talks about the existence of 'reasonable grounds for believing' in the mind of the Court it definitely rules out 'suspicion' about the guilt of accused. This has always to be borne in mind that there is vast difference between the 'belief' and 'suspicion'. Belief to me is an opinion concrete and definite regarding the existence of a fact or a situation arising out of set of facts ruling out any other inference. Whereas 'suspicion' is simply a state of fearful apprehension not concretizing itself into an acceptable reasonable inference about the existence/non-existence of any reasonable grounds as to be treated in the realm of belief.

10. The other part of the Section 437(i) is not of that much importance as regards creating a bar of jurisdiction in releasing an accused as appears in clause (1) of the provision. It may be noted that there is no mention that the case should be triable exclusively by the Court of Sessions. It is true that the offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life may be triable by the Court of sessions. But, if one considers the schedule I to the Cr. P.C. one could find out that there are as many as 51 sections in the Indian Penal Code which provide for sentence of life imprisonment and majority of them are triable by the Courts of magistrate.

11. If one considers provision of Section 472 of the Indian Penal Code one could find that the punishment provided under that section is also imprisonment for life but the offence has been made bailable. This could be the case with many other provisions contained in the IPC. Could it then be proper for a Magistrate merely because the offence under Section 472 of the Indian Penal Code is punishable by imprisonment for life that he should refuse to release the accused from custody for such an offence? It could simply be misusing the provision of Section 437(i)(ii) Cr. P.C. Likewise, refusing to release the accused in an offence which may not be punishable with life imprisonment or with death or where there could be a doubt or there could be room clearly available for making further inquiry about the complicity of the accused in commission of such an offence would not then it be justified for the Magistrate to refer to the trial forum prescribed by the Cr. P.C. and release the accused on bail. In my considered view the section of an offence or the imprisonment prescribed or the special nature of enactment could never be the considerations if there is no reasonable ground appearing before the Magistrate to compel him to believe that the accused had committed such an offence punishable by sentences as stated by Section 437(i)(ii) Cr. P.C.

12. Under the above premise I could very well note that while considering the question of releasing accused on bail the Magistrate has to consider the allegation which might be appearing against a particular accused besides other materials, like, the injury report in a case of assault to assess the allegation. He should also consider the commission of offence in the light of the allegation enforced by other materials which might have been collected by the investigating agency during the course of investigation. Those materials could be the statement of witnesses or the victim of the offence. If the Court comes to a conclusion that there was doubt or there was still some room left for holding further inquiry by him about the reasonableness of the material and that is insufficient, then in my view the case could be covered by Section 437(ii) Cr. P.C. and in that case also the Court should release the accused on bail.

13. It is not that I am all alone in holding the above view that the merit of the allegations could be considered. The High Court of Andhra Pradesh has done it in the case of K. Narayanaswamy v. The State of Andhra Pradesh in 1980 Cri LJ 588. In the above context I may add that it may not always be improper for the Court to consider the constitution of an offence on facts alleged. It could take a contrary view on that aspect too.

14. When a Court comes to a conclusion that there could be a case made out, after hearing the accused and the Public Prosecutor requiring a direction for the release of the accused, it may not be sufficient in itself for issuing such a direction. The Court has to assure itself from sufficient materials about the manner and circumstances of committing the offence, the position and the status of the accused with reference to those of the witnesses, the likelihood of the accused fleeing from justice or of repeating the same offence or of jeopardising his own life being faced with a grim prospect of conviction in the case or of tampering with the witnesses the history of the case as well as of its investigation. If there is prospect of the accused repeating the commission of the same or more serious nature of the offence then it could also be considered for not releasing the accused on bail. I, hasten to add that these considerations could not be on conjectures and surmises. If the prosecution wants a Court to consider all or any of the above circumstances for not releasing the accused from custody, there must be acceptable materials produced before the Court and the Court could consider it to its full satisfaction, then only the circumstances could be said to be existing, else not.

15. The above was not necessary for me to be dealt with. But considering the controversy which has been raised through the present petition regarding the jurisdiction of various Courts in issuing bail orders I thought it proper to properly place as to what could be the construction upon the provision of Section 437, Cr. P.C.

16. Cancellation of an order of bail could be a matter to be dealt with by the Court u/S. 437(5) Cr. P.C. which has released the accused on bail or by the Court of Sessions or the High Court by virtue of their powers under Section 439, Cr. P.C. but that could not be done as and when the Courts are approached with such a prayer. As was noted by the Apex Court in (2004) 2 SCC 362 : 2004 Cri LJ 1359, Mehboob Dawood Sheikh v. State of Maharashtra and in many other decisions that rejection of bail stands on one footing but cancellation of bail is a harsh order because it takes away the liberty of an individual granted and is not lightly to be resorted to. For cancelling the bail of an accused there must be grounds shown to the Court and not only shown, the Court has to be satisfied about them that they existed on the basis of materials acceptable to it. These grounds are well recognised as may appear from the above noted decision of the Apex Court as also from the earlier decision of the Apex Court rendered in Gurucharan Singh v. State (Delhi Administration) reported in AIR 1978 SC 179 : 1978 Cri LJ 129. While dealing with the provision and the law of grant/cancellation of bail it was noted that if there was a chance of (i) jumping of bail, (ii) of interfering or influencing the witnesses, (iii) of interfering with the investigation or prosecution, or (iv) of obstructing the judicial process or (v) of misusing or abusing the bail, the order of bail could be cancelled and the accused could be committed to custody. To the above criteria I could add, if I am permitted to do so, that if the accused after being released on bail has committed graver offence or if he appears a threat to peace and tranquillity of the society or if there is danger to his own life, then under these circumstances as well the accused could be committed to custody after cancelling bail. The other category of case requiring interference by the Court of sessions or by the High Court could be the utterly wrong application of the discretionary jurisdiction and directing release of accused on bail. Such category of cases could not be exhaustive but, to illustrate, if the accused, who is an assailant of the deceased in a case and about whose complicity there is sufficient acceptable material is released on bail by the Magistrate or the Sessions Court, the High Court or the Supreme Court may interfere in such case of improper application of the discretionary power of granting bail and by directing the committal of the accused to custody.

17. Coming to the facts of the present case, it is true that on the very date on which the prayer for bail of O.P. No. 2 was rejected by the learned C.J.M. Gopalganj petition for bail was filed before the learned Sessions

Judge, Gopalganj and the order for release of O.P. No. 2 on bail was passed. This may not be a normal phenomenon obtained in all judgeships of the State and specially in the judgeship of Gopalganj that copies of rejection orders on petitions for bail are made available within a few hours and on the same day the orders are passed. But, that could hardly disentitle the sessions Judge to entertain the petition and hear the same on the same day. There is no rule forbidding any Court to receive petitions on the very day on which a subordinate Court has passed an order. The practice might be otherwise only with a view not to causing discomfiture to the general litigants in presenting their petitions. The normal judicial behaviour do require uniformity and it was expected that the same uniformity would have been observed in the present case as well by the office of the Sessions Judge, but for that the Sessions Judge could not be faulted. There are many considerations which out weigh judicial practice. One such consideration is avoiding unseemly situation like the members of the Bar going up in arms and rising in revolt against the judicial officers as soon as one of their colleagues is either remanded to custody or is refused the prayer for bail. We have many instances in our State being reported from different judgeships. Admittedly O.P. No. 2 was an advocate practising in Civil Court Gopalganj and might be that the learned Sessions Judge acted in the manner as is presently complained of, only to avoid such a situation. It is not that the judges are fearful of advocates, rather the judges avoid causing discomfort and harassment to the general litigant in whose interest the system of judiciary works. I believe that it could have been one of the reasons for directing the release of the O.P. No. 2 on the same day on which his prayer was rejected by the Chief Judicial Magistrate.

18. Copies on urgent applications have to be supplied within 24 hours. An Additional Chief Judicial Magistrate handles the criminal matter only when the Chief Judicial Magistrate is either absent or is on leave or is not in a position to discharge his judicial functions. The primary functions of the Court of A.C.J.M. is that of the permanent subordinate Judge and it is a very heavy file on all stations on the civil side of original jurisdiction. This is a common phenomenon which could be observed in every Civil Court that Additional Chief Judicial Magistrates hear and dispose of criminal matters during the first few hours of their sitting so as to free themselves to devote the remaining time to their original side of jurisdiction. In view of the above prevailing practice in the Civil Court it could safely be assumed that the order refusing prayer for bail of O.P. No. 2 might have been passed before 12 a.m. in all possibilities making it not difficult for O.P. No. 2 to obtain the copies and file a petition.

19. As regards the use of discretionary powers by the learned Sessions Judge, it was not contended that it was wrongly applied in directing the release of O.P. No. 2. Even the injury which was corresponding to the allegation against O.P. No. 2 by dealing a farsa blow on the head of the petitioner Dinesh Parwat was simple, only scalp deep and was neither grievous nor dangerous to life. There was no opinion either coming from the doctor that the injury could have endangered the life of petitioner. This observation was made by the learned sessions judge earlier also while hearing and disposing of anticipatory bail petition No. 281 of 2006 in which the C.J.M. was directed to consider the nature of the allegation in the light of the injury. Unfortunately the A.C.J.M. did not pay proper heed to the observations of the learned Sessions Judge and went on to reject the prayer. Considering the nature of the injury, I feel that it would not have been the case in which the magistrate should have rejected the prayer for bail.

20. As regards the submission that O.P. No. 2 had withdrawn the criminal miscellaneous petition bearing No. 36949 of 2006 from this Court which was dismissed on that account and, as such, divested the Courts of powers to pass an order in the matter. I have some reservations about the submission. It is true that a petition being dismissed as withdrawn is also a dismissal, but if no merit has been touched by the Court in passing such dismissal order on account of withdrawal of the petition then in that case it could never be creating a situation under which the lower Courts could be said to have acted against the rejection order passed by the superior Court so as to allowing or refusing it. Even if this is my most humble consideration the superior Courts touched upon the merits of the case while dismissing a petition under Section 438, Cr. P.C., it could not create a bar for any of the lower Courts to proceed to hear a petition for bail and direct the release of the accused from custody after consideration of all the facts and circumstances. The considerations for granting or refusing bail under Sections 437 and 438 could not be said always to be similar and the same. The specific and detailed provisions of Section 437 could itself be sufficient to support my view as to what could be the considerations while dealing with the prayer for regular bail on surrender of the accused before the Court or the accused being in custody. In that view of the matter the learned Sessions Judges' hands were not fettered by the order passed on 19-9-2006 by this Court in the above noted criminal miscellaneous petition on account of the same being dismissed as withdrawn.

21. It was fairly conceded by the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner that the present petition had not been filed on any of the grounds which could be pressed into service for seeking cancellation of an order of bail. Those grounds have been enumerated by me in the earlier part of the present order and which were indicated firstly in Gurucharan Singh v. State (Delhi Administration) (supra) and thereafter in many other decisions including (2004) 2 SCC 362 : 2004 Cri LJ 1359). There is no allegation that after being released O.P. No. 2 had threatened the witness or subverted the investigation or any judicial proceeding in respect of the case or that he was reported to have committed graver offences or that he was a threat to the society. If these conditions are not available then the present petition could be said to be meritless as regards the prayer for cancellation of bail. Granting of bail is a rule as appears flowing from Section 437, Cr. P.C. The exceptional order of rejecting or cancelling the same could not be resorted to merely for the asking. Having said the above, I find that the present petition is meritless and the same is hereby dismissed as such. Petition dismissed.

Cross Citation :2004 CRI. L. J. 1506

KARNATAKA HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 Mrs. MANJULA CHELLUR, J. (Single Bench)

Criminal Petn. No. 2892 of 2003, D/- 7 -1 -2004.

Devindrappa and another, Petitioners v. State of Karnataka, Respondent.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.309(2), S.167(2) - REMAND - Powers of remand - Exercise of - Remand of accused to custody on filing of chargesheet - Can only be under S. 309(2) and that too after cognizance is taken - Time lag between date of filing of charge sheet and date of cognizance of custody for intervening period - Is unauthorised - Same entitles him to bail, as the custody was neither under section 167, Cr.P.C. nor under Sec. 309 Cr.P.C.

The power of Magistrate to remand the accused to custody could be exercised either under Section 167 or under Section 309, Cr.P.C. once charge sheet is filed, period of remand under Section 167, Cr.P.C. comes to an end. If further custody is necessary, it can be done only under Section 309, Cr.P.C. To remand the accused to custody under Section 309, Cr.P.C. Magistrate has to apply his mind to the facts and material available in the final report i.e. charge sheet and decide whether cognizance of the offence could be taken or not. If he takes cognizance of the offence, then, he can exercise his power under Section 309(2), Cr.P.C. to remand the accused. Accused were arrested on 6-2-2003 and the 90 days period would come to an end, at any cost by 6-5-2003 or 7-5-2003. The period for investigation allowed under the Act would come to an end at any cost before 7-5-2003. After 7-5-2003, no application under S. 167, Cr.P.C. came to be filed though such right was available to the accused. The charge sheet was filed on 10-6-2003 the detention from 7-5-2003 till 10-6-2003, did not become unauthorised. But after filing of the charge sheet on 10-6-2003; he could not have been detained in custody under - Section 167, Cr.P.C. The Magistrate ought to have exercised his mind to the material available on record to take cognizance. Unfortunately, he took cognizance on 27-6-2003. Subsequent to taking cognizance, the custody is under Section 309(2), Cr.P.C. and the same would be authorised. Therefore, the detention in the between 10-6-2003 to 27-6-2003 becomes illegal and they are entitled to be released on bail under Section 439, Cr.P.C. as the custody was neither under Section 167, Cr.P.C. nor under Section 309, Cr.P.C.

(Paras 13, 14)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras

State of Maharashtra v. Mrs. Bharati Chandmal Verma , 2002 Cri LJ 575 : AIR 2003 SC 285 : 2001 AIR SCW 5003 (Disting.) 10.1

Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cri LJ 1832 : AIR 2001 SC 1910 : 2001 AIR SCW 1500 (Disting.) 10.2

Dharmanand alias Mahato v. State , 1994 Cri LJ 730 : 1994 All LJ 238 10.3

Umashanker v. State of M.P., 1982 Cri LJ 1186 (Madh Pra) 10.4

Gyanu Madhu Jamkhandi v. State of Karnataka, 1977 Cri LJ 632 (Kant) 10.5

Ravi B. Naik, for Petitioners; P.M. Nawaz, Govt. Pleader, for Respondent.

Judgement

ORDER :- Heard the learned counsel for the petitioners and the learned Govt. Pleader for the respondent State and perused the records.

2. These two petitioners are accused before the trial Court for offences punishable under Sections 143, 147, 148, 324, 307, 302 r/w 149, IPC. The petitioners had filed bail application under Section 439, Cr.P.C. before the I Addl. Sessions Court, Bangalore which was rejected on 6-8-2003. Therefore, they have come up before this Court under Section 439, Cr.P.C. for grant of bail.

3. The petitioners are accused Nos. 1 and 5. They have sought for bail on two grounds, one on the question of law and the other on merits.

4. Sri Ravi B. Naik, learned Counsel for the petitioners contended that on 6-2-2003, the petitioners were arrested and produced before JMFC and since then they are in judicial custody. The charge sheet came to be filed on 10-6-2003 which was beyond the period of 90 days. The learned Magistrate took cognizance of the offence on the basis of the charge sheet only on 27-6-2003. In between 12-6-2003 and 26-6-2003 they were remanded to judicial custody. Therefore, their custody from 10-6-2003 till 27-6-2003 is illegal and hence, petitioners are entitled for bail.
5. So far as 2nd ground i.e. on parity is concerned, it is argued that the other accused are granted bail against whom it is alleged that they also assaulted the deceased on the head with a stick and axe. Therefore, on these two grounds the petitioners are entitled for bail.
6. Heard both sides.
7. It is contended by the petitioners that on the basis of the two grounds mentioned above, the petition deserves to be allowed.
8. As against this, learned Govt. Pleader Sri P.N. Nawaz, contended that if the petitioners/accused have not filed an application under Section 167, Cr.P.C. seeking for bail before filing of charge sheet on 10-6-2003, the petitioners are not entitled to be released on bail.
9. On perusal of the lower Court records, it is seen, these two petitioners were produced before the Court on 6-2-2003. The entire order sheet is perused in order to ascertain when the charge sheet is filed. However, the order sheet dated 27-6-2003 shows on 10-6-2003, the PSI, Shahabad Rural Police Station, has submitted charge sheet against six accused persons including these two petitioners. It is also noted on 27-6-2003 that accused Nos. 1 and 5, the petitioners herein were in judicial custody. Section 167, Cr.P.C. reads as under :
Section 167, Cr.P.C. Procedure when investigation cannot be completed in twenty four hours -
1) Whenever any person is arrested and detained in custody, and it appears that the investigation cannot be completed within the period of twenty four hours fixed by Section 57, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well founded, the officer-in-charge of the police station or the police officer making the investigation, if he is not below the rank of sub-Inspector, shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Judicial Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall at the same time forward the accused to such Magistrate.
@page-CriLJ1508
2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time, authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole; and if he has no jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction.
Provides that -
(a) The Magistrate may authorise the detention of the accused person, otherwise than in the custody of the police, beyond the period of fifteen days, if he is satisfied that adequate grounds exist for doing so, but no Magistrate shall authorise the detention of the accused person in custody under this paragraph for a total period exceeding -
i) ninety days, where the investigation relates to an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for a term of not less than ten years ;
ii) sixty days, where the investigation relates to any other offence, and on the expiry of the said period of ninety days, or sixty days, as the case may be, the accused person shall be released on bail if he is prepared to and does furnish bail, and every person released on bail under this sub-section shall be deemed to be so released under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII for the purposes of that Chapter.

b) no Magistrate shall authorise detention in any custody under this section unless the accused is produced before him;
c) no Magistrate of the second class, not specially empowered in this behalf by the High Court, shall authorise detention in the custody of the police.
Provided that before the expiry of the period aforesaid, the Executive Magistrate shall transmit to the nearest Judicial Magistrate the records of the case together with a copy of the entries in the diary relating to the case which was transmitted to him by the Officer in charge of the police station or the police officer making the investigation, as the case may be.
3) A Magistrate authorising under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing.
4) Any Magistrate other than the Chief Judicial Magistrate making such order shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making, it, to the Chief Judicial Magistrate.
5) If in any case triable by the Magistrate as summons case, the investigation is not concluded within a period of six months from the date on which the accused was arrested, the Magistrate shall make an order stopping further investigation into the offence unless the officer making the investigation into the offence satisfies the Magistrate that for special reasons and in the interests of justice the continuation of the investigation beyond the period of six months is necessary.
6) Where any order stopping further investigation into an offence has been made under sub-section (5), the Sessions Judge may, if he is satisfied, on an application made to him or otherwise, that further investigation into the offence ought to be made, vacate the order made under sub-section (5) and direct further investigation to be made into the offence subject to such directions with regard to bail and other matters as he may specify.
10. Learned counsel for the petitioners relied on the following decisions :
1. AIR 2002 SC 285 : (2002 Cri LJ 575) (State of Maharashtra v. Mrs. Bharati Chandmal Varma alias Ayesha Khan) :
This was a case where offences under Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999, was discovered apart from IPC offence. Originally, they were arrested for offences under the penal Code and they were in custody from 2-4-2001. During investigation of IPC offences, police discovered that crime under M.C.O.C. Act was also committed by the accused. Therefore, they commenced investigation under the Special Act from 21-4-2001 after obtaining sanction from the concerned authority under the said Act. The question which came up before their Lordships was whether 2-4-2001 should be the date for consideration of 90 days under Section 167, Cr.P.C. or 21-4-2001, the date on which permission was obtained for investigation under the Special enactment. In this regard, their Lordships held that though investigation under the Special Enactment commenced on 21-4-2001, to apply Section 167(2) proviso of the Code, there was no necessity to consider when actually the investigation had commenced. It was further held that said proviso was intended only for the purpose of keeping the arrested person under detention during investigation where a maximum period of such detention is envisaged. It was held that on expiry of period provided under Section 167, Cr.P.C. further custody becomes unauthorised and the person in custody shall be released on bail if he is prepared to and furnish bail. It was also held in this case that if accused is found to have committed more than one offence, distinct from each other, the period of custody or detention in one crime cannot be related to the distinct crime. But however, it was held if initially the detention in one crime is for an offence and during investigation, some other crime is also revealed pertaining to the same cause of action, the period envisaged in the proviso to Section 167(2) does not get extended. It was held the respondent/accused would get a right to be released on bail on account of default, of investigating agency to complete the investigation without the period envisaged from the date of first remand of the accused.
@page-CriLJ1509

2. AIR 2001 SC 1910 : (2001 Cri LJ 1832), (Uday Mohanlal Acharya v. State of Maharashtra):

Where after expiry of period of 60 days for filing challan the accused filed an application for being released on bail and was prepared to offer and furnish bail, however, the Magistrate rejects application on erroneous interpretation about non application of S. 167(2) to case pertaining to MPID Act of 1999 and accused approaches higher forum and in meanwhile, charge sheet is filed, the indefeasible right of accused of being released on bail does not get extinguished by subsequent filing of charge sheet. The accused can be said to have availed of his right to be released on bail in enforcement of his indefeasible right will, however, have to be produced before the Magistrate on a charge sheet being filed in accordance with S. 209 and the Magistrate must deal with him in the matter of remand to custody subject to the provisions of the Code relating to bail and subject to the provisions of cancellation of bail.

An accused must be held to have availed of his right flowing from the legislative mandate engrafted in the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 167 of the Code of if he has filed an application after the expiry of the stipulated period alleging that no challan has been filed and he is prepared to offer the bail, that is ordered, and it is found as a fact that no challan has been filed within the period prescribed from the date of the arrest of the accused . Such an interpretation would subserve the purpose and the object for which the provision in question was brought on to Statute Book. In such a case, therefore, even if the application for consideration of an order of being released on bail is posted before the Court after some length of time, or even if the Magistrate refuses the application erroneously and the accused moves the higher forum for getting formal order of being released on bail in enforcement of his indefeasible right then filing of challan at the stage will not take away right of the accused. This is the only way how a balance can be struck between the so called indefeasible right of the accused on failure on the part of the prosecution to file challan within the specified period and the interest of the society, at large in lawfully preventing an accused for being released on bail on account of inaction on the part of the prosecuting agency. Personal liberty is one of the cherished objects of the Indian Constitution and deprivation of the same can be only in accordance with law and in conformity with the provisions, thereof, as stipulated under Art. 21 of the Constitution. When the law provides that the Magistrate could authorise the detention of the accused in custody up to a maximum period as indicated in the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 167, any further detention beyond the period without filing of challan by the Investigating Agency would be a subterfuge and would not be in accordance with law and in conformity with the provisions of the Cr. P. C. and as such could be violative of Art. 21 of the Constitution.

3. 1994 Cri LJ 730 (All) (Dharmanand alias Mahato v. State).

The right of the accused to be released on bail if the charge-sheet is not filed within the period of 90/60 days, as the case may be, is absolute and cannot be defeated or taken away on subsequent filing of charge-sheet or by remand under S. 309(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The right of bail in such a case continues till the accused is released on his furnishing bail bonds etc. In default of non-filing of charge-sheet by prosecution within the prescribed period the Magistrate should pass an order enlarging the accused on bail, irrespective of the fact whether an application for bail is or is not moved by the accused and should call upon the accused to furnish bail bonds. If the accused is prepared and does furnish bail bonds, then he has to be released on bail. If the accused fails to furnish bail bonds, then only he should be remanded under the provisions of S. 309(2), Cr. P. C. But if after remand the accused furnishes bail bonds, even after receipt of charge-sheet, then he has to be released from the custody because the order of bail survives even after filing of charge-sheet. The Magistrate cannot detain an accused in custody on furnishing bail bonds. The Magistrate has to follow the provisions strictly if the accused furnishes bail bonds.

@page-CriLJ1510

4. 1982 Cri LJ 1186 (MP) (Umashanker v. State of Madhya Pradesh).

A person accused under Sections 302, 364 and 365 of the Penal Code, after being under continuous detention for more than 90 days filed an application for release on bail under Sec. 167(2), Proviso (a). The challan was filed pending the application. On filing of the challan the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence and remanded the accused to custody under Sec. 309. Thereafter he disposed of the application, dismissing it on the ground that as the remand under Sec. 167(2) stood altered to one under Sec. 309 the Proviso to Section 167(2) was no more applicable and hence the applicant could not be released on bail.

Held: alteration of the remand u/S. 167(2) to one under Sec. 309 pending the application u/S. 167(2), Proviso (a) was illegal. Rejection of bail was also illegal.

If a challan is filed before the expiry of the maximum period for which an accused can be detained in custody u/S. 167, further remand to custody can be ordered u/S. 309. No maximum period of remand is provided for under S. 309. The Magistrate however cannot postpone the release of an accused on bail under Proviso (a) to S. 167(2) after the expiry of 90 days or 60 days as the case may be, just to enable the police to file the challan and to alter the detention u/S. 167 to one u/S. 309. It is the duty of the Magistrate soon after the expiry of the maximum period, to inform the accused of his right to be released on bail u/S. 167(2), Proviso (a). Once the accused of his own or on being told of his right by the Magistrate, is prepared to furnish bail the Magistrate must order the accused to be released on bail without waiting for the challan and must release him when bail is furnished.

5. 1977 Cri LJ 632 (Kant) (Gyanu Madhu Jamkhandi v. State of Karnataka).

If on he filing of the charge-sheet, a Magistrate does not, for a number of days proceed to apply his mind and take cognizance of the offence made out, he cannot for those number of days, exercise powers of remand to judicial custody either under S. 167 or under S. 309(2). The situation can be solved by a Magistrate applying his mind to the facts and material available in the final report and the documents produced along with it in no time after the filing of the final report and deciding whether cognizance of the offence made out should be taken or not; if he decides to take cognizance of the offence, then, he can under S. 309(2), proceed to exercise his power of remand.

11. From the reading of the above decisions, it is very clear that on the expiry of the period envisaged from the date of arrest, the accused gets a right to claim that he should be enlarged on bail provided he furnishes bail as ordered by the concerned Court but this does not mean the accused can just walk out of the custody on the expiry of such period. He must file an application expressing the willingness to exercise that right and also expressing his willingness to furnish bail. Such right would be available till filing of the charge-sheet. In other words, prompt action is required on the part of the learned Magistrate to dispose of the application filed by the accused for bail for enforcement of his indefeasible right alleged to have accrued in his favour on account of default on the part of the Investigating Agency to complete investigation within specified period. If no chargesheet has been filed by the Investigating Agency, if the accused is unable to furnish the bail, the further custody of the accused even beyond specified period in the said section, will not be unauthorised. If investigation is completed and charge-sheet is filed during that period, then, the so-called indefeasible right of the accused would stand extinguished.

@page-CriLJ1511

12. As could be ascertained from the order sheet of the trial Court, the petitioners herein have not filed an application either u/S. 167(2), Cr. P. C. for bail or u/S. 439, Cr. P. C. after the expiry of 90 days and before the cognizance was taken on 27-6-03. Here, we have to see, before cognizance is taken for the offence, whether the order of custody by the learned Magistrate is in order or not. Sec. 309, Cr. P. C. has to be read here, which reads as under:

"Sec. 309, Cr. P. C.: Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings: (1) In every inquiry or trial, the proceedings shall be held as expeditiously as possible and in particular, when the examination of witnesses has once begun, the same shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the same beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded.

(2) If the Court, after taking cognizance of an offence, or commencement of trial, finds it necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn, any inquiry or trial, it may, from time to time, for reasons to be recorded, postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody:

Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this Section for a term exceeding fifteen days at time:

Provided further that when witnesses are in attendance, no adjournment or postponement shall be granted, without examining them, except for special reasons to be recorded in writing.

Provided also that no adjournment shall be granted for the purpose only of enabling the accused person to show cause against the sentence proposed to be imposed on him.

13. The power of Magistrate to remand the accused to custody could be exercised either under Sec. 167 or u/S. 309, Cr. P. C. Once charge-sheet is filed, period of remand u/S. 167, Cr. P. C. comes to an end. If further custody is necessary, it can be done only u/S. 309, Cr. P. C. To remand the accused to custody u/S. 309, Cr. P. C., the learned Magistrate has to apply his mind to the facts and material available in the final report i.e. charge-sheet and decide whether cognizance of the offence could be taken or not. If he takes cognizance of the offence, then, he can exercise his power u/S. 309(2), Cr. P. C. to remand the accused.

14. In the present case, the two citations of the Apex Court are not applicable to the facts of the present case because it is not a case where an application u/S. 167(2), Cr. P. C. came to be filed by the accused after the expiry of the period envisaged therein and the same was kept pending for a long time beyond filing of charge-sheet. On the other hand, the charge-sheet came to be filed on 10-6-03 but till 27-6-03, no cognizance was taken. When once charge-sheet is filed on 10-6-03, the custody cannot be u/S. 167(2), Cr. P. C. In this case, they were arrested on 6-2-03 and the 90 days period would come to an end, at any cost by 6-5-03 or 7-5-03. The period for investigation allowed under the Act would come to an end at any cost before 7-5-03. After 7-5-03, no application u/S. 167, Cr. P. C. came to be filed though such right was available to the accused. In view of the Supreme Court decision in 2001, the detention from 7-5-03 till 10-6-03, did not become unauthorised. But however, after filing of the charge-sheet on 10-6-03, he could not have been detained in custody u/S. 167, Cr. P. C. The learned Magistrate ought to have exercised his mind to the material available on record to take cognizance. But unfortunately, he took cognizance on 27-6-03. Subsequent to taking cognizance, the custody is u/S. 309(2), Cr. P. C. and the same would be authorised. Therefore, the detention in the present case between 10-6-03 to 27-6-03 becomes illegal and they are entitled to be released on bail u/S. 439, Cr. P. C. as the custody was neither u/S. 167, Cr. P. C. nor u/S. 309, Cr. P. C.

15. Having regard to above discussion, petition deserves to be allowed and it is accordingly allowed, subject to the following conditions:

(a) The petitioner shall be released on bail on their executing a bond for Rs. 25,000/- each along with two solvent sureties for the like sum to the satisfaction of the lower Court;

@page-CriLJ1512

(b) They shall not tamper the prosecution witnesses.

Petition allowed.

****

Cross Citation :2005 ALL MR (Cri) 1020

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

(AURANGBAD BENCH)

NARESH H. PATIL, J.

Punjaram s/o Ashroba @ Asroba Kangne & Ors.

Vs.

State of Maharashtra

Shri. R. N. DHORDE, Advocate, instructed by Shri. R. L. KUTE, Advocate, for the Applicants.

Shri. R. P. PHATAKE, Additional Public Prosecutor, for Respondent.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), Ss.173(2), (5), 167(2) - Filing of incomplete charge-sheet - Such filing of a police report could not be termed as provisional charge-sheet - Such failure would entitle accused to claim his indefeasible right conferred under S.167(2). Bail granted - Submission of a proforma as envisaged in section 173(2) by the police without any accompaniments as envisaged in section 173(5) does not indicate completion of investigation in a criminal case. That would entitle an accused to claim his indefeasible right conferred under section 167(2). What is contemplated in section 173(8) is further investigation. (Para [16])

The police report submitted under section 173(2) of the Code in the present case, therefore, would amount to an incomplete report or charge-sheet for the purposes of consideration of the application of the provisions of Section 167(2) of the Code. Such a police report could not be termed as provisional charge-sheet and the accused be denied their indefeasible right conferred by the statutory provisions. The benefit accrued to an accused under the provisions of section 167 of the Code further relates to his personal liberty guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution of India. Therefore, the said right accrued to an accused is indefeasible one and the provisions of section 167(2) will have to be viewed from this angle too. (Para [17])

==========

CASES CITED :

Velinedipurnam Vs. State, 1994 Cri.L.J. 2579 [5 , 10]

Satya Narain Musadi Vs. State of Bihar , AIR 1980 SC 506 [7 , 15 , 19]

Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre Vs. State of Maharashtra , 1991 Cri.L.J. 3329 [7 , 16 , 22]

Sunil Vasantrao Phulbande Vs. State of Maharashtra , 2002(3) Mh.L.J. 689 [7]

Balu Rakhmaji Khamkar Vs. State of Maharashtra , 1995(4) Bom.C.R. 335 [8 , 16]

Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. R. S. Pai, 2002 ALL MR (Cri) 1396 (S.C.) : 2002 Cri.L.J. 2029 [9 , 16]

M. C. Venkatareddy Vs. State of A. P. , 1994 Cri.L.J. 257 [20]

Uday Mohanlal Acharya Vs. State of Maharashtra , 2001 ALL MR (Cri) 713 (S.C.) : AIR 2001 SC 1910 [21]

JUDGMENT :- Heard learned counsel for the parties.

2. A question raised before this Court is as to whether a report filed under section 173(2) Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (hereinafter, referred to as "the Code" for the sake of brevity), without filing the investigation papers, as envisaged under section 173(5) of the Code, which is referred to as "charge sheet", defeats the indefeasible right of the accused conferred by the provisions of Section 167(2) of the Code.

3. On a complaint filed on 27-7-2004 by one-Radhabai Chate widow of the deceased, a Crime at No.116/2004 came to be registered with the Mantha Police Station, District Jalna, for an offence punishable under sections 302, 201 read with section 34 of the Indian Penal Code. In connection with the said offence the applicants along with three other accused persons were arrested by the police on different dates and after they were remanded for few days in the police custody, were remanded to Magisterial custody.

4. These applicants filed an application on 29-10-2004 in the Court of the Judicial Magistrate, First Class, Partur, District Jalna. According to the record and proceedings, which is placed before me, the endorsement of the Magistrate's Court shows that the said application was filed in R.C.C. No.312/2004 at 4.30 p.m. On29-10-2004 the further endorsement made by the learned Magistrate is to the effect that the said application was placed before the Court at 4.45 p.m. and the Assistant Superintendent of the Court was directed to submit a report as to whether a charge-sheet was filed in the said case. The Assistant Superintendent (Judicial) submitted a Say on 29-10-2004 itself that final charge-sheet is not submitted along with police papers on the said day but a provisional charge-sheet at 2.00 p.m. was filed. The matter was thereafter directed to be put up by the Court on the next day i.e. 30-10-2004. On the said date by an order the Judicial Magistrate dismissed the application as the period of 90 days was already completed and a report was filed in the prescribed proforma as mentioned under section 173 of the Code on 29-10-2004 at 2.00 p.m. which was placed before the Court at 2.45 p.m. and the application for claiming relief under section 167(2) was filed at 4.30 p.m. in the office of the Court and was placed before the Court at 4.45 p.m.

5. The applicants thereafter filed an application before the Sessions Court claiming benefit under section 167(2) of the Code as no charge-sheet was filed within the period prescribed by Section 167(2)(a)(i) of the Code. The said application was filed by the present applicants on 2-11-2004. By an order dated 6-11-2004 the learned 1st Ad-hoc Additional Sessions Judge rejected the said application. While rejecting the application reliance was placed on a judgment in the case of Velinedipurnam Vs. State reported in 1994 Cri.L.J. 2579 delivered by the Andhra Pradesh High Court.

6. The learned counsel appearing for the applicants contends that the report submitted in the proforma as provided under section 173(2) of the Code does not amount to filing of a charge-sheet indicating completion of investigation in a criminal case. Complete report as envisaged in Section 173(3) could be one which complies with the requirement under the provisions of section 173(2) and (5) of the Code. For the purposes of claiming benefit of indefeasible right of an accused conferred by the provisions of Section 167(2) the prosecution, according to the learned counsel, must indicate that the investigation in the case has been completed. In the present case the police filed a proforma as prescribed under section 173(2) of the Code and there was not a single piece of paper indicating the stage of investigation process undertaken by the police machinery. Therefore, filing of such a proforma shall not defeat the indefeasible right accrued to an accused disentitling him to claim the relief conferred by law.

7. The learned A.P.P. was of the opinion that keeping in view the judgment of Satya Narain Musadi Vs. State of Bihar reported in AIR 1980 SC 506 and the view adopted by our High Court in Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre Vs. State of Maharashtra reported in 1991 Cri.L.J. 3329 the report to be filed under section 173(2) by the prosecution shall include the necessary investigation papers amounting it to be a charge-sheet indicating completion of investigation for the purposes of consideration of the issue as to whether benefit is to be granted to an accused under section 167(2). He places reliance in the case of Sunil Vasantrao Phulbande Vs. State of Maharashtra reported in 2002(3) Mh.L.J. 689 wherein identical question was considered by this Court by placing reliance on the judgment in Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre (cited supra).

8. The learned A.P.P. in fairness submitted that some High Courts have taken a contrary view and have held that filing of report under section 173(2) without complying with the provisions of section 173(5) amounts to filing of report under section 173(2) disentitling the accused to claim relief under section 167(2). The learned A.P.P. even relied upon a case of Balu Rakhmaji Khamkar Vs. State of Maharashtra reported in 1995(4) Bom.C.R. 335.

9. In the case of Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. R. S. Pai reported in 2002 Cri.L.J. 2029 : [2002 ALL MR (Cri) 1396 (S.C.)] the Apex Court observed that, as there is no specific prohibition, it cannot be held that additional documents cannot be produced subsequently. If some mistake is committed in not producing the relevant documents at the time of submitting the report or charge-sheet, it is always open to the investigating officer to produce the same with the permission of the Court.

10. In the case of 1994 Cri.L.J. 2579 (cited supra) a Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court was of the view that if all the necessary details as contemplated under S.173(2), Cr.P.C. are not disclosed in the police report in the first instance, but they are furnished at a later date, perhaps it is for the Court to consider the probative value of those details furnished later during the trial of the case, but to say that the police report filed with certain omissions or gaps is not a valid report contemplated under S.173(2) is reading something more in the statute. It is further observed that non filing of all the enclosures under S.173(5) along with the report filed under S.173(2) is not a ground to release the accused on the premise that full charge-sheet is not filed within the stipulated time.

11. I have considered the rival submissions of the parties and perused the record of the trial Court.

"Investigation" is defined in clause (h) of Section 2 of the Code which reads :

"(h) "investigation" includes all the proceedings under this Code for the collection of evidence conducted by a police officer or by any person (other than a Magistrate) who is authorised by a Magistrate in this behalf."

"Police report" is defined in clause (r) of Section 2 which reads :

"(r) "police report" means a report forwarded by a police officer to a Magistrate under sub-section (2) of section 173."

12. The provisions of Section 167(2) of the Code indicate that whenever any person is arrested and detained in custody, and it appears that the investigation cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by section 57, the officer in charge of the police station shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Judicial Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary and the Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded can authorise the detention of the accused in such custody for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole and he may further order detention for a period of ninety days, where the investigation relates to an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for a term not less than ten years.

13. The provision of Section 57 of the Code reads :-

"57. Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours. - No police officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court."

14. The plain reading of the provisions of section 167 would show that, it refers to making of investigation by police and in case the investigation is not completed within 24 hours the accused in certain circumstances gets a right to claim relief under different provisions of section 167 of the Code.

15. In the case of Satya Narain (cited supra) the Apex Court was considering the case of taking cognizance by the Magistrate and while considering the issue it was observed that even if a narrow construction is adopted that the police report can only be what is prescribed in S.173(2) there would be sufficient compliance if what is required to be mentioned by the statute has been set down in the report. The Apex Court in clear terms states that one cannot divorce the details which the report must contain as required by sub-section (2) from its accompaniments which are required to be submitted under sub-section (5) and a whole of it is submitted as report to the Court.

16. An accused can claim indefeasible right under section 167(2) in case the police fails to file a police report or charge-sheet within 90 days. Submission of a proforma as envisaged in section 173(2) by the police without any accompaniments as envisaged in section 173(5) does not indicate completion of investigation in a criminal case. Therefore, in my considered view filing of report under section 173(2) in the proforma as prescribed by the statute without there being any accompaniments or the investigation papers indicating completion of investigation would entitle an accused to claim his indefeasible right conferred under section 167(2). What is contemplated in section 173(8) is further investigation. I am supported in my view by the judgments reported in 1991 Cri.L.J. 3329 and 2002 Cri.L.J. 2029 (cited supra) and I hold that I am not convinced to take a different view. In the case of Balu Rakmaji Vs. State of Maharashtra reported in 1995(4) Bom.C.R. 335 (cited supra) the facts of the said case were that a charge-sheet was filed in the Court of the Special Judge but the same was not accepted by the concerned Clerk and Nazir on the ground that, photographs of seized articles have not been supplied and unless those photographs were given, the charge-sheet could not be accepted. On the facts the judgment does not apply to the present set of facts and the issues raised before me. In the case of 2002 Cri.L.J. 2029 : [2002 ALL MR (Cri) 1396 (S.C.)] (cited supra) it was a case where the investigating machinery sought to produce additional documents which were gathered during investigation but were not produced before the Court. Such is not a situation here.

17. There is one distinguishing feature while considering the issue of grant of benefit of the provisions of Section 167 of the Code to an accused. The provisions of Section 167 refer to completion of investigation as contemplated under section 57 of the Code and not to taking cognizance of an offence. Therefore there shall be sufficient material placed before the Court in the shape of a report showing completion of the investigation of the offence. The police report submitted under section 173(2) of the Code in the present case, therefore, would amount to an incomplete report or charge-sheet for the purposes of consideration of the application of the provisions of Section 167(2) of the Code. Such a police report could not be termed as provisional charge-sheet and the accused be denied their indefeasible right conferred by the statutory provisions. The benefit accrued to an accused under the provisions of section 167 of the Code further relates to his personal liberty guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution of India. Therefore, the said right accrued to an accused is indefeasible one and the provisions of section 167(2) will have to be viewed from this angle too.

18. Learned counsel for the applicants places reliance on the following judgment.

19. In the case of Satya Narain Vs. State of Bihar reported in AIR 1980 SC 506 while dealing with the issue concerning cognizance of case to be taken by Magistrate and filing of the report under section 173(2), the Apex Court observed in para 10:-

"10. ..... The report as envisaged by S.173(2) has to be accompanied as required by sub-sec. (5) by all the documents and statements of the witnesses therein mentioned. One cannot divorce the details which the report must contain as required by sub sec.(2) from its accompaniments which are required to be submitted under sub-sec. (5). The whole of it is submitted as a report to the Court."

20. In the case of M. C. Venkatareddy Vs. State of A. P. reported in 1994 Cri.L.J. 257 (Andhra Pradesh High Court) while dealing with the identical issue, as is raised in the present case, it was observed :

"9. ..... If the police report is forwarded to the Magistrate for taking it on file, but if the Magistrate finds that the said report is not in consonance with S.173(2) read with S.173(5) Cr.P.C. he declines to take it on record and that act is only administrative and not judicial. The judicial act commences only when the charge-sheet is in order and the Magistrate proceeded further under Chapter XVI. Unless the charge-sheet is in the official custody of the court together with its accompaniments to be furnished to the accused, it cannot be construed that there is a filing of charge-sheet,"

21. In the case of Uday Mohanlal Acharya Vs. State of Maharashtra reported in AIR 2001 SC 1910 : [2001 ALL MR (Cri) 713 (S.C.)] it was observed by the Apex Court:

"An accused must be held to have availed of his right flowing from the legislative mandate engrafted in the proviso to sub-section (2) of S.167 of the Code if he has filed an application after the expiry of the stipulated period alleging that no challan has been filed and he is prepared to offer the bail, that is ordered, and it is found as a fact that no challan has been filed within the period prescribed from the date of the arrest of the accused. Such an interpretation would subserve the purpose and the object for which the proviso in question was brought on to Statute Book.'

22. In the case Sharadchandra Vinayak Dongre Vs. State of Maharashtra reported in 1991 Cri.L.J. 3329 this Court observed :

"25. The question thus emerges naturally is, whether the Magistrate can take cognizance on the admittedly "incomplete charge-sheet" forwarded by the police. The answer stubbornly and admittedly must be in the negative, because the investigation is yet incomplete and the "police report" yet remains to be filed. Thus, the filing of the incomplete charge-sheet cannot circumvent the provisions of sub-sec. (2) of S.173 of the Code and incomplete report or an incomplete charge-sheet with whatsoever expression it may be called does not meet the obligatory requirements of law. If the view as contended by the State is accepted, the provisions of S.167(2) or to say S.468 of the Criminal Procedure Code can always be circumvented by the prosecution and the apparent legislative intents under those provisions would not only be not effectuated but undoubtedly stultified."

23. For the reasons stated above I am not inclined to follow the contrary view adopted by the Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court.

24. Apart from the legal issues raised in this application, after perusal of the record and proceedings of the trial Court and after hearing the submissions of the learned A.P.P. I have found that the record relating to acceptance of the police report submitted under section 173(2) is not properly maintained. The initial endorsement on the police report made by the Assistant Superintendent (Judicial) of the court indicates that it was filed on 27-10-2004 at 2.00 p.m. but on 30-10-2004 the Assistant Superintendent submitted a report to the Court that inadvertently in stead of 29-10-2004 he had made endorsement on the report showing receipt of the same on 27-10-2004. He prayed for excusing him for this mistake. The learned Magistrate by his order made on 30-10-2004 warned the Assistant Superintendent that he should be careful in future and to avoid such mistakes. By a further application made to the Court on 1-11-2004 the Assistant Superintendent sought permission from the Court to correct the endorsement made on the charge-sheet and by an order dated 1-11-2004 the learned Magistrate permitted him to carry out the corrections. The learned counsel for the applicants submitted that these endorsements made by the Court officer are suspicious and such confusion ought to have been avoided.

25. An affidavit-in-reply was filed in this Court by Mr. Baburao Rathod, presently working as Police Sub-Inspector, Police Station, Mantha, District Jalna, who stated in para 2 of the reply that investigation was completed and charge-sheet was filed by the Police Inspector, Shri. S. S. Kamble on 29-10-2004. In spite of such an averment, the police preferred to file only the report in the shape of a proforma as envisaged under section 173(2) of the Code.

26. The Police Sub-Inspector filed an application on 29-10-2004 to the Court stating that 90 days' period is over and much of the investigation remains to be completed and therefore provisional charge-sheet is being filed. He prayed that provisional charge-sheet be accepted and 15 days time be granted for submitting the original charge-sheet. The learned Magistrate endorsed on the said application on 29-10-2004 to the effect that said report was placed before him at 2.45 p.m. and till that time no challan under section 167 Cr.P.C. was placed before the Court and the investigating officer shall show under which provision such report/request was made. Considering the record of the case and the submissions advanced by the learned counsel for the applicants, I am of the view that the trial Courts must be vigilant to avoid such situation which would create undesirable controversies concerning the record of the Court. Even this Court in the case reported in 1995(4) Bom.C.R. 335 had an occasion to observe :

"10. There are growing instances wherein the charge-sheet submitted is either refused or is not accepted and contentions are raised before the courts that the charge-sheet was submitted within time but it was not accepted. It is the duty of every Court before whom the charge-sheet is filed to examine it on the very day when it is submitted and make an endorsement by Presiding Officer himself about its acceptance. If the charge-sheet is incomplete in respect of any of the necessary contents as defined in section 173 (2), this can specifically be pointed out in the order passed by learned Magistrate or the Judge as the case may be. This would protect investigating agency as well as registry of Court against unsustainable allegations."

27. The learned counsel for the applicants had even argued the application for bail on merits. As the applicants deserve to be released on bail by granting benefit under section 167(2), I have not considered the bail application on factual merits of the case. The application, therefore, has to be allowed. The learned APP at this stage says that in view of the peculiar facts of the case, the applicants shall be ordered to stay away from the village till conclusion of the trial. The learned counsel for the applicants submits that, they are willing to abide by such a condition.

28. The applicants (1) Punjaram s/o Ashorba @ Asroba Kangne, (2) Vishnu s/o Ashorba Chate and (3) Pralhad s/o Haribhau Chate shall be released in the sum of Rs.20,000/- each with one surety in the like amount each and on conditions that, (1) they shall not enter village Takalkhopa, Taluka Mantha, till conclusion of the trial, (2) they shall report Mantha Police Station once in a month and shall not tamper with the prosecution evidence in any manner and (3) they shall not contact the prosecution witnesses directly or indirectly.

29. The Criminal Application stands disposed of.

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2003 ALL MR (Cri) 1107

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

(NAGPUR BENCH)
D. D. SINHA & S. T. KHARCHE, JJ.

Mohammad Gausuddin s/o. Wali Mohammad Vs. State of Maharashtra
Criminal Appeal No.3 of 2003
Mr. S. V. MANOHAR, Advocate for Appellant.
Mrs. BHARTI DANGRE, Additional Public Prosecutor for Respondent.

==========

(A) Bail - Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), S.50 - Sanction to take cognizance of offences - Failure to obtain sanction by prosecuting agency - Accused entitled to bail - Similarly, we cannot ignore the fact that Section 50 opens with the non-obstante clause and prohibits the Special Court from taking cognizance without valid sanction from the appropriate Govt. Prima facie taking into consideration the above referred factors, the appellant has made out a case for grant of bail. AIR 1996 SC 204 and AIR 1963 SC 765 - Followed. (Paras [91 , 92 and 93])

(B) Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), Ss.30(1), 32(1) – Confession before specific Police Officer - Admissibility of in evidence - Confession shall be admissible in trial of such person only for an offence under this Act and Rules made thereunder - Confession made by accused, cannot be a substantive piece of evidence against co-accused, abettor or conspirator who is being tried jointly for the same offences - Such a confessional statement not a ground to refuse bail to accused.

(C) Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), S.50 - Sanction to take cognizance of offences - Sanction by competent authority is condition precedent for taking cognizance of the offence - Court is forbidden from taking cognizance of the offence without such sanction - If Special Court takes cognizance of the offence without a valid sanction, such action is without jurisdiction and any proceedings adopted thereunder will be without jurisdiction. (Paras 54 & 55)

As far as provisions of Sections 21(2) and 22(3) are concerned, the word 'knowledge' used in these provisions needs to be construed on the backdrop of the concept of mens rea. In case of other criminal offences, mens rea and intention are required. So far as the offences contemplated under sub-section (2) of Section 21 and sub-section (3) of Section 22 of POTA are concerned, the offender needs to have knowledge without which it will be difficult to fasten criminal liability on a person under these provisions of POTA. Absolute liability is not to be lightly presumed but has to be clearly established.

(D) Evidence Act (1872), S.34 - Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), S.21(3) - Entry made in loose chit - Admissibility of, in evidence - Amount of Rs.36,60,000/- allegedly paid by accused to Naxalite group - Mere loose paper/chit and entries made thereunder – is not sufficient to connect accused with the crime in question.

(E) Prevention of Terrorists Act (2002), Ss.49(7), 50, 32(1) - Grant of bail – If any evidence is inadmissible then it is a ground to be considered while deciding the bail application - Charge under POTA - At the stage of grant or refusal of bail, evidence cannot be appreciated - However admissibility/inadmissibility of evidence will have a positive bearing in considering the aspect of grant or refusal of bail and therefore, this aspect cannot be ignored by the court - However, it cannot be ignored that what is inadmissible in law at this stage cannot become admissible at the later point of time unless it depends upon further evidence to be adduced by prosecution and, therefore, such issues and such legal aspects are prima facie required to be considered by the Judge of the Special Court, particularly keeping in view the mandate of Section 49(7) of the POTA. However, admissibility/inadmissibility of evidence will have a positive bearing in considering the aspect of grant or refusal of bail and, therefore, this aspect cannot be ignored by the court. While passing the impugned order, dated 16-11-2002, the Judge of the Special Court has not considered all these issues in the light of the law laid down by the Apex Court in this regard and, therefore, the order is unsustainable in law. (Para [93])

==========

(Paras [98 and 99])

CASES CITED :

Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 [9 , 59]

Kalpnath Rai Vs. State (through CBI), AIR 1998 SC 201 [10]

Param Hans Yadav and Sadanand Tripathi Vs. State of Bihar , AIR 1987 SC 955 [10]

Nathu Vs. State of Uttar Pradesh , AIR 1956 SC 56 [10]

Director of Enforcement Vs. M/s. MCTM Corporation Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1996 SC 1100 [11 , 62]

The State Vs. Laldas, AIR 1953 Bombay 177 [13]
Abdul Wahab Ansari Vs. State of Bihar , (2000)8 SCC 500 [13]
Ajit Kumar Palit Vs. State of West Bengal , AIR 1963 SC 765 [13 , 57]
Dr. Anand R. Nerkar Vs. Smt. Rahimbi Shaikh Madar, 1991 Cri.L.J. 557 [13]
Jamuna Singh Vs. Bhadai Shah, AIR 1964 SC 1541 [26]
Narsingh Das Tapadia Vs. Goverdhan Das Partani, (2000)7 SCC 183 [27]
Kishore Kumar Gyanchandani Vs. G.D. Mehrotra, AIR 2002 SC 483 [27]
Kartarsingh Vs. State of Punjab , 1994 SCC 569 [28]
State of Tamilnadu Vs. Nalini, 1999 ALL MR (Cri) 1273 (S.C.) : 1999 Cri.L.J. 3324 [47]
Anil Saran Vs. State of Bihar , AIR 1996 SC 204 [57]
State of West Bengal Vs. Mohammed Khalid, AIR 1995 SC 785 [58]
Nathulal Vs. State of Madhya Pradesh , AIR 1966 SC 43 [66]

D. D. SINHA, J.:- Heard Mr. Manohar, learned counsel for the appellant and Mrs. Dangre, learned Additional Public Prosecutor for the respondent.

2. The appellant has preferred Criminal Appeal No.679 of 2002 against the order, dated 16-11-2002, passed by Additional Sessions Judge, Gadchiroli, whereby the application moved by the petitioner for grant of bail in view of Section 167(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code/Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code came to be dismissed. The appellant filed another Criminal Appeal No.3 of 2003 against the order, dated 17-12-2002, whereby the applications made by the appellant below Exhs.11, 12 and 5 came to be dismissed. Since both these orders deal with rejection of the bail application of the appellant, both these appeals were heard together and disposed of by the common order.

3. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel for the petitioner, contended that the appellant is a reputed businessman and also a trustee of a Medical Trust and was also given an award by the Income Tax Department for being the highest tax payer of the circle and as such he is a respectable citizen. The appellant is a victim at the hands of the investigating agency apart from the fact that there is no evidence, whatsoever, to connect the appellant with the crime.

4. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel for the appellant, contended that a report was lodged by one Bapu Reddy on 21-6-2002 with the Police Authorities alleging that he along with one Narendra Reddy was abducted by the members of Bakanna group on the gun point from Kaleshwar Unit in the forest of Navegaon . Bapu Reddy, who was threatened by Bakanna, to collect an amount of Rs.9,84,000=00 from the Tendu Unit Contractors, was also compelled to write a chit/note. Narendra Reddy was sent with the said chit to the other Tendu Leaves Contractors. Bapu Reddy, however, in the meanwhile, managed to flee from the clutches of the Bakanna gang. In the said report, dated 2-6-2002, it was stated by Bapu Reddy that a truck of Tendu leaves was also burnt by a gang of Bakanna (Naxalite). On the basis of the said report, Police Station Officer, Sironcha, registered offences under Sections 363, 368 read with Sections 143, 147, 148, 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code, as well as Sections 3, 25 of the Arms Act vide Crime No.27/2002. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel, contended that at a later point of time, the Police Authorities applied provisions of Sections 3(3), (5), 21(2) and 22(3) of the Prevention of Terrorists Act, 2002 (hereinafter referred to as "The POTA" for brevity).

5. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel, contended that the appellant Gausuddin surrendered before the court on 6-11-2002. A charge-sheet in the case is filed on 2-12-2002.

6. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel for the appellant, contended that allegations against the appellant are that on 2-5-2002, the appellant attended a meeting with Bakanna (Naxalite) and as such he is guilty under Section 21(2) of the POTA. It is contended that Section 21(2) lays down that a person commits an offence if he arranges, manages, or assists in arranging or managing a meeting which he knows is to support terrorists organization, to further the activities of the terrorists organization, or to be addressed by a person who belongs or profess to belong to a terrorists organization. It is contended that in order to substantiate these allegations, the witnesses relied on by the prosecution are Tulsigiri and Pocham. It is contended that Tulsigiri's statement is recorded on 9-6-2002. Tulsigiri, at the relevant time, was working as a Police Patil of Chittoor and in his statement he has stated that on 2-5-2002, the appellant along with other contractors came to the village and went to the house of this witness Tulsigiri and the witness was informed that the appellant and other Tendu Patta contractors wanted to discuss about the rate of plucking of Tendu leaves with the villagers and, therefore, this witness - Police Patil convened a meeting of villagers wherein 32 to 35 villagers were present. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel, contended that the statement of Tulsigiri further reveals that when Tendu leaves contractors, including the appellant, were discussing with the villagers regarding rate for plucking of Tendu leaves, 20 to 25 Naxalites, armed with guns, arrived on the spot and Bakanna (Naxalite) thereafter discussed with the contractors and declared that the rate of Rs.147/- shall be paid to the villagers for plucking the Tendu leaves.

7. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel, contended that another witness Pocham also disclosed the similar story in his statement and from the statements of these two witnesses, it is clear that the appellant along with other Tendu leaves contractors had neither arranged, nor had managed or assisted in arranging or managing a meeting, but the Naxalites intruded in the meeting held by the appellant and other Tendu leaves contractors with the villagers and as such it cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be said that the appellant-accused is prima facie guilty for the offence punishable under Sub-section (2) of Section 21 of the POTA.

8. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel further contended that it is alleged by the prosecution that the appellant is responsible for funding the terrorists organization and, therefore, has committed an offence under Sub-section (3) of Section 22 of the POTA. It is contended that under Sub-Section (3) of Section 22, a person commits an offence is he provides money or other property, and knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that it will or may be used for the purpose of terrorism. It is contended that the prosecution, in order to substantiate this charge, placed reliance on a chit which, according to the prosecution, was seized at Perimili in the district of Andhra Pradesh. On the chit, there are certain calculations made which, according to the prosecution, reveal that an amount of Rs.36,60,000=00 was paid by the appellant to the Naxalite group. It is contended by Mr. Manohar that the said entry and/or chit is inadmissible in evidence as it could be seen that under Section 34 of the Evidence Act, it is only the entries in the books of accounts regularly kept in the course of business are admissible. It is submitted that the chit produced by the prosecution is an inadmissible piece of evidence. It could further be seen that the said chit is seized in a different offence, and neither from the appellant, nor from any individual, but is claimed to have been lying in the jungle. It is contended that the author of the said chit is also not known, nor the chit reveals that any amount is paid by the present appellant to any Naxalite. It is contended that under Section 34 of the Evidence Act, only a Book of Accounts, which is regularly kept in the course of business is admissible and the loose sheets or loose papers cannot be termed as a book and as such the same is an inadmissible piece of evidence.

9. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel for the appellant, further submitted that apart from the said fact that the chit, which was produced by the prosecution, was not admissible, the prosecution has no evidence to show that the entries made in the said chit are trustworthy and the transaction has taken place in view of the recitals in the same chit and the appellant has parted with the amount as claimed by the prosecution and shown and described in the said chit. It is contended that the prosecution has not at all produced any evidence to show that any payment of an amount as represented by the entries in the chit was made by the appellant and the same was received by a Naxalite group of Bakanna. In order to support the contention, reliance is placed by the learned counsel on the judgment of the Apex Court in case of Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. V.C. Shukla and others (AIR 1998 SC 1406) which holds that loose sheets are not admissible in evidence and the entries in such sheets are not even a prima facie evidence.

10. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel, states that according to the prosecution there is a confessional statement recorded by one of the co-accused Mr. Kamlakar, according to whom, certain amount was paid by the appellant to Bakanna through another co-accused Alimuddin. It is contended that the said confessional statement of the co-accused is not a substantive piece of evidence against the present appellant. In order to substantiate this contention, reliance is placed by the learned counsel for the appellant on the judgments of the Apex Court in (1) Kalpnath Rai Vs. State (through CBI) (AIR 1998 SC 201), (2) Param Hans Yadav and Sadanand Tripathi Vs. State of Bihar and others (AIR 1987 SC 955), and (3) Nathu Vs. State of Uttar Pradesh (AIR 1956 SC 56). Mr. Manohar, learned counsel contended that in view of this legal position, there is no prima facie evidence to show that the present accused had provided any money or other property which he has reasonable belief or knowledge that the same would be used for any terrorists activities.

11. Mr. Manohar further states that mens rea is the important facet as far as the criminal law is concerned. It is submitted that mens rea is a state of mind and unless it is found that the accused has an intention to commit crime, he cannot beheld guilty of committing the crime. In other to substantiate the contention, reliance is placed on the decision of the Supreme Court in Director of Enforcement Vs. M/s. MCTM Corporation Pvt. Ltd. and others (AIR 1996 SC 1100). It is contended that it is not the case of the prosecution that the present appellant has intentionally aided or abetted the commission of any crime and as such the accused cannot be held responsible for any offence punishable under Sections 21(2), 22(3) or 3(3) of the POTA.

12. Mr. Manohar argued that other evidence relied upon by the prosecution is the telephone call made from the telephone which was in possession of Bakanna to the present appellant. It is submitted that the calls were alleged to have been made to the appellant on 4-5-2002, 6-5-2002, 9-5-2002, 18-5-2002 and 22-5-2002 and it could be seen that the duration of the calls is less than a minute, except the last call which was made on 22-5-2002. It is submitted that the calls, according to the prosecution, were made by Bakanna to the appellant. It is submitted that the appellant cannot have a control over the calls made on his telephone by any person. It is further submitted that on 25-5-2002, the appellant lodged a report with the Superintendent of Police, Aheri, and stated therein that the appellant had received threats from Bakanna and requested for protection. It is contended that no protection was granted to the appellant in spite of his written complaint. On the other hand he is being falsely implicated in the crime in question and came to be arrested. It is contended that this is a case wherein a victim is being prosecuted as an accused and the accused are moving scot free. It is contended that the telephone number from where calls were received is in the name of another co-accused Kamlakar and, therefore, there is no evidence with the prosecution to show that the calls are made by Bakanna from the telephone number of Kamlakar. It is, therefore, contended that the evidence in respect of these calls alleged to have been made by Bakanna does not remotely connect the accused with the crime in question.

13. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel, contended that provisions of Section 50 of the POTA lay down that no court shall take cognizance of any offence under this Act without the previous sanction of the Central Government, or the State Government, as the case may be. It is submitted that in the present case, a charge-sheet has been filed by the prosecution on 2-12-2002 without there being any valid sanction from the appropriate Government. It could be further seen that the trial court, which is the Special Court under the POTA, has taken cognizance of the matter and it could be seen from Para 29 on internal page 26 of the trial court's order, wherein the Special Court has verified the charge-sheet and has registered a case as a special case under the provisions of POTA. It is submitted that the Court has to apply its mind before registering the case under the provisions of the POTA. The Court has taken cognizance of the matter having verified the charge-sheet and having registered the matter under the provisions of the POTA. It is submitted that in view of the express bar under Section 50, the trial court ought to have discharged the present appellant. It is contended that the question of sanction has to be raised at the earliest and the court has to decide the said question at the earlier juncture. In the present case after the Special Court took cognizance of the matter, the accused moved an application for discharge and raised an objection as to the validity of the prosecution in absence of a sanction from the competent authority, i.e., the State Government. The trial court ought to have considered the issue and in absence of a sanction, ought to have discharged the accused. It is contended that the question of sanction has to be raised at the earliest and it is held by the Bombay High Court in a decision in The State Vs. Laldas and others (AIR 1953 Bombay 177) as also by the Apex Court in a decision in Abdul Wahab Ansari Vs. State of Bihar and another ((2000)8 SCC 500). Mr. Manohar submits that it is categorically laid down in the judgment of the Apex Court in Ajit Kumar Palit Vs. State of West Bengal and another (AIR 1963 SC 765) that where a statute prescribes material on which alone a judicial mind shall operate before any step is taken, obviously the statutory requirement must be fulfilled. It is submitted that in the present case the court has taken a judicial notice of the charge-sheet filed by the prosecution and thereby had directed to register the case under the POTA. It is submitted that before registering the case under POTA, a Special Judge has to apply his mind as to whether the case falls under POTA or not and in a given situation, if the case does not fall under the provisions of POTA, the matter will have to be referred to the ordinary Criminal Court. It is submitted that the court having registered the matter under POTA, there was an application of mind by the Special Judge and the Court has taken a judicial notice of the charge-sheet filed by the prosecution and as such the Court has taken cognizance of the matter. It is submitted that in view of Section 50 of the POTA, the cognizance taken by the trial court is bad and no prosecution could have been launched against the present appellant in absence of a sanction from the State Government. In order to substantiate this aspect of the matter, reliance is placed on the judgments of the Apex Court reported in AIR 1963 SC 765 (supra) and Dr. Anand R. Nerkar Vs. Smt. Rahimbi Shaikh Madar and others (1991 Cri.L.J. 557). Similarly, it is contended by the learned counsel for the appellant that so far as prosecution under sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA is concerned, there is no evidence with the prosecution other than the evidence referred to hereinabove which is inadequate to connect the appellant with the offence contemplated under sub-section (5) of Section 3.

14. Mr. Manohar, learned counsel for the appellant, contended that as far as offences under Sections 363, 368, read with Sections 143, 147, 148, 149, 325 of the Indian Penal Code as well as Section 3/25 of the Arms Act are concerned, there is absolutely no evidence produced by the prosecution in order to connect the appellant with the crime in this regard. The report of Bapu Reddy, dated 2-6-2002, does not even remotely implicate the present appellant in any of the crimes under the provisions of the Indian Penal Code as well as Arms Act and, therefore, there is absolutely no evidence against the appellant produced by the prosecution in order to connect the appellant with the crimes alleged to have been committed by the appellant under the provisions of the Indian Penal Code and Arms Act.

15. Mrs. Dangre, learned Additional Public Prosecutor, on the other hand, contended that there is evidence available with the prosecution to establish a prima facie case against the appellant for the offences charged. It is contended that so far as Section 21(2) of the POTA is concerned, the prosecution is relying on the statements of Tulsigiri Somaiya (Police Patil), resident of Chittoor and Pocham Madavi, resident of Chittoor, Tq. Sironcha, as well as confessional statement of Kamlakar Olala.

16. The Additional Public Prosecutor stated that as far as statement of Tulsigiri is concerned, the same was recorded by the Investigating Officer on 9-6-2002. Recitals in the said statement reveal that on 2-5-2002, the present appellant along with his manager and two other Tendu Patta contractors along with their managers came to village Chittoor at about 8=00 p.m., in two jeeps. In the said statement, it is further stated that the present appellant asked the Police Patil, i.e., Tulsigiri, to collect the villagers for the purpose of discussion in relation to deciding the rate of plucking of Tendu leaves. Accordingly, Tulsigiri, Police Patil, called the villagers and about 30 to 32 villagers gathered at the place and engaged in discussion in respect of plucking of Tendu leaves (Pattas). In the meantime, one Kalim Sheikh, resident of Sironcha, came on the spot and informed that nobody should leave the place as Bakanna is going to visit the spot and fix the Tendu Pattas plucking rate. Thereafter, after a gap of about half an hour, 20 to 25 Naxalites with guns wearing bluish-green dresses arrived at the spot and the Head of the said group Bakanna introduced himself to the people gathered there. Bakanna took aside three Tendu Patta contractors including the present appellant and had a discussion with them for about half an hour and later on disclosed to the people of the villages who gathered there that the contractors will pay Rs.147/-. Thereafter the contractors also disclosed that they will pay the said amount and the people should start work of plucking of Tendu Pattas.

17. The Additional Public Prosecutor further contended that as far as the statement of Pocham Madavi is concerned, he has stated in his statement that the present appellant had reached village Chittoor by a jeep and had asked Police Patil to collect people for having discussion in respect of fixing of rate of plucking of Tendu leaves. Police Patil summoned the people of village Chittoor. This witness Pocham Madavi also participated in the said meeting. He has further stated in the said statement that when the meeting was in progress, Naxalites visited the spot and they took aside the contractors and had a discussion with them for about half an hour. Thereafter the Naxalite leader Bakanna disclosed the rates fixed for plucking of Tendu Pattas.

18. Mrs. Dangre, learned Additional Public Prosecutor, contended that so far as the confessional statement of another co-accused Kamlakar Olala is concerned, the same was recorded by Additional Superintendent of Police on 10-6-2002 under Section 32 of the POTA, and has been forwarded to the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gadchiroli. The person making confessional statement as well as original statement of confession was sent to the Chief Judicial Magistrate, Gadchiroli, within forty-eight hours as required under Section 32 of the POTA. The said statement was thereafter recorded by the Chief Judicial Magistrate as per the provisions of Section 32(3). Kamlakar Olala in his confessional statement had stated that around 1st May, 2002, Bakanna had called the present appellant and other Tendu Patta contractor Umesh Poreddiwar. Accordingly they had a meeting with Bakanna for about one hour and after fixing of Tendu Patta plucking rate, it was agreed at Rs.147/-. Kamlakar in his confessional statement further stated that Bakanna told the contractor Poreddiwar and the present appellant Gausuddin that they should pay a party fund which was agreed by the contractors. Kamlakar further stated that he visited Chittoor where present appellant also arrived by a jeep. Kamlakar further stated that he had gone to Hyderabad and had purchased one cordless phone which was connected to the telephone of his residence bearing no.33212 and he had handed over one handset of the said cordless connection to Bakanna and it was used by Bakanna. In his confessional statement, Kamlakar further stated that on a message from Krishna to collect amount of Rs.3,00,000=00 from the contractor - present appellant Gausuddin, he visited Alapalli and Gausuddin was not there. However, the amount of Rs.3,00,000=00 was kept ready and it was delivered to Kamlakar by one Alim.

19. Ms. Dangre, learned APP, contended that the above two circumstances, i.e., the statement of Tulsigiri Pocham and confessional statement of Kamlakar, would reveal that the present appellant Gausuddin had arranged for a meeting on 2-5-2002 and the meeting was to support the terrorists organization and further the activities of terrorists organization as it was in connivance with Bakanna which is clear from the confessional statement of Kamlakar. That, prior to the meeting at Chittoor, the present appellant Gausuddin had a meeting with Bakanna and the rate was already decided. Thus, there is a prima facie evidence available against the appellant for the offence punishable under Section 22(2) of the POTA.

20. The Additional Public Prosecutor contended that for implicating the appellant Gausuddin for an offence punishable under Section 22(3) of the POTA, the prosecution relies on the following material :-

a) Confessional statement of Kamlakar is recorded under Section 32 of the POTA. It is contended that Kamlakar in his confessional statement has stated that he had collected the amount of Rs.3 lakhs from the depot of appellant Gausuddin and the amount of Rs.3 lakhs was handed over to him by one Alim at the instance of appellant.
b) Recovery of chit from dumps. The APP states that during the course of investigation, it was found that Umesh Poreddiwar was working as a contractor for plucking of Tendu leaves and on his involvement in the said offences, the Superintendent of Police, Alapalli, wrote to the Police Station, Teremalli about any record in respect of Umesh Poreddiwar in a mission "Anand-II" operated against Naxalites in the month of May, 2001. One dump was found and the material found in it demonstrates that Tendu Patta contractors had given financial assistance to the Naxalites. Therefore, in order to verify whether Umesh Poreddiwar or his relatives had entered into any transaction with Naxalites, the record of recovery of material from dump was called for by Additional Superintendent of Police, Aheri. The Recovery Panchanama, dated 29-7-2002 was perused which reveals a chit showing names of some Tendu Patta contractors and specifying the standard bag and the amount vide Document Nos.8M and 8Q. The said chit as well as writing in the form of 8M and 8Q showing the amount to be collected from Tendu Patta units operating in the region written in Telgu language demonstrate that Tendu Patta contractors operating unit-wise had supplied money to Naxalites. The said documents were taken into custody by the Additional Superintendent of Police, Aheri, from the Superintendent of Police, Perimalli. The Document 8M shows the name of present appellant Gausuddin, against whom the standard bags 36,000 and amount of Rs.36,06,000=00 are mentioned.

21. The Additional Public Prosecutor further contended that the present appellant was issued with the notice under Section 149 of the Criminal Procedure Code in the month of January, 2002 on allotment of a contract of plucking of Tendu Pattas, asking him to refrain from aiding any person who is associated with People's War Group (PWG), which was declared as a terrorists organization under the POTA. It was further informed that if he suspects any person indulging in such activity, he should immediately report the said matter to the police authorities.

22. Mrs. Dangre, learned APP, therefore, contended that recovery of a chit from dump as well as confessional statement of Kamlakar reveal that the present appellant had provided money to the terrorists organization which was used for the purpose of terrorizing, as the People's War Group is declared as a terrorists organization under the POTA. It is further contended that in spite of notice under Section 149 of the Criminal Procedure Code issued in the month of January, 2002, the appellant, for the first time, reported the matter about having threats on 25-5-2002, i.e., after a long gap between the meeting, dated 2-5-2002 and, therefore, it is an afterthought. It is contended that from the above material, it can be seen that there is a prima facie evidence available against the appellant for the offence under Section 22(3) of the POTA.

23. Mr. Dangre, learned APP, contended that so far as sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the POTA is concerned, the prosecution is relying on the following material:-

a) In the confessional statement of Kamlakar, it is stated that Telephone No.33212 was operated by Bakanna. In the list of telephone calls from this telephone number, calls have been detected to be made to Telephone No.66356, which was used by the present appellant who was residing in the house of Sampoorna Singh and who had stated in his statement that he had given the telephone number to be used by the present appellant Gausuddin. Thus, it can be seen that Bakanna had called the present appellant on several dates and the dates are very relevant as the phone calls have been detected from the months of March to May.

b) Mrs. Dangre further contended that Sampoorna Singh is the resident of Alapalli. He had given the house on rent to the present appellant Gausuddin and his Telephone bearing No.66356 was also given to the present appellant Gausuddin for his use. It is contended that all these facts are finding place in the statement of Sampoorna Singh.

c) It is further contended by learned APP that in the statement of Somaiya Lachchu, he had stated that he was working as a carrier of messages for Naxalite leader and on one occasion, he had taken a message from commander Nootan to the appellant Gausuddin and Gausuddin on the said letter had come to visit the said commander Nootan and had a discussion with him for about an hour. It is, therefore, contended that the above referred material does show that the present appellant was associated with the Naxalite movement of PWG, which is operating in Gadchiroli district and has been declared as a terrorists organization and the present appellant had voluntarily aided and promoted the objects of the terrorists organization and is, therefore, liable to be prosecuted under sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the POTA.

24. The Additional Public Prosecutor lastly contended that it is, no doubt, true that there is a bar in the form of Section 50 of the POTA, which prevents the court from taking cognizance of any offence without previous sanction of the Central Government or the State Govt., as the case may be. However, the question is what is the point of time when the court is said to have taken cognizance of offence. The word 'cognizance' means to become aware of the facts and to take notice judiciously. As per the scheme formulated in the Criminal Procedure Code, the initiation of proceedings against the person commences on the cognizance of the offence by the Magistrate in any of the following three categories contemplated in Section 190 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which deals with initiation of proceedings, and they are as follows :-

i) in respect of cognizable offence on a complaint by the aggrieved person;

ii) on the police report in cognizable offence when the police has completed their investigation and come to the Magistrate for issuance of process;

iii) when the Magistrate himself takes notice of the offence and issues process.

25. The act of cognizance requires an overt act on the part of the Magistrate, who is taking cognizance of the offence. The police machinery in the form of a final report files a charge-sheet under Section 173 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the said act is the end of initiation of proceedings at the instance of police machinery which are initiated pursuant to filing of First Information Report under Section 154 of the Criminal Procedure Code. On filing of charge-sheet, the police/investigating agency declares that its investigation is complete and whatever has been found in the form of investigation, is submitted before the competent court in the form of a final report which also is known as a charge-sheet. Therefore, mere filing of a charge-sheet could not be said to be a part of judicial act, but it is only when there is an application of mind on the part of judicial authority, it could be said that the cognizance is taken on the report of the investigating officer. Therefore, it is not mandatory for the Magistrate to approve the police report and the Magistrate may even disagree with the police report and direct further investigation under Section 156(3) of the Criminal Procedure Code by the police machinery before it can take cognizance of an offence.

26. It is further contended that before it can be said that the Magistrate has taken cognizance of any offence under Section 190 of the Criminal Procedure Code, he must not have only applied his mind, but he must have done so for the purpose of proceeding in a particular way as indicated in subsequent provisions of Chapter XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code. This position of law is enumerated in the judgment of the Apex Court in Jamuna Singh and others Vs. Bhadai Shah (AIR 1964 SC 1541).

27. Mrs. Dangre, learned Additional Public Prosecutor, further contended that the act of taking cognizance is defined from filing of complaint, which can be seen from the judgment of the Apex Court in Narsingh Das Tapadia Vs. Goverdhan Das Partani and another ((2000)7 SCC 183), paras 8, 9 and 10. Similar is the another judgment of the Apex Court in Kishore Kumar Gyanchandani Vs. G.D. Mehrotra and another (AIR 2002 SC 483). It is contended that in the present case the act of registering the case under POTA is merely an administrative act committed by the Additional Sessions Judge and there is no application of mind to the final report submitted by the police and as such it could not be said that he has taken cognizance of the offence under the provisions of POTA. The requirement of Section 50 in obtaining sanction before cognizance is taken in the present case is not violated in absence of application of judicial mind by the Special Court and, therefore, the proceedings cannot be vitiated on this count.

28. Mrs. Dangre, learned Additional Public Prosecutor, contended that Section 32 of the POTA is analogous to Section 15 of the TADA and the validity of Section 15 of the TADA has been upheld by the Supreme Court in case of Kartarsingh Vs. State of Punjab reported in 1994 SCC 569. It is, therefore, contended that the confessional statement of Kamlakar is admissible and can be relied upon. It is contended that when the statement of Tulsigir Pocham coupled with confessional statement made by Kamlakar is considered, there is a prima facie case made out against the appellant for the offence under the provisions of the POTA.

29. Before we advert to the facts of the present case, we would like to express that necessity to evolve this legislation by the Central Government was felt because of the method of madness, which is adopted by the various terrorist Organizations to attack the symbol of power to destabilise sovereign nations. If it does not work, terrorists change strategy to attack religious symbols. Their sinister plan is to provoke the sectarian and communal violence. These are not fanatics on the loose, but pawns of mastermind bent upon to destabilise our country. Terrorists always have the advantage of surprise attack combined with suicidal zeal, which makes the job of security personnel extremely difficult, specially if the strategy is focussed to soft targets like helpless innocent children, women and citizens. To curb these terrorist violence, the new enactment Prevention of Terrorism Act, 2002 (POTA) has been enacted. The object of enacting this Act from the statements and objects and reasons appended to Prevention of Terrorism Bill, 2002 reads thus :

"The country faces multifarious challenges in the management of its internal security. There is an upsurge of terrorist activities, intensification of cross border terrorist activities and insurgent groups in different parts of the country. Very often, organized crime and terrorist activities are closely inter-linked. Terrorism has now acquired global dimensions and has become a challenge for the entire world. The reach and methods adopted by the terrorist groups and organizations take advantage of modern means of communication and technology using high-tech facilities available in the form of communication systems, transport, sophisticated arms and various other means. This has enabled them to strike and create terror among people at will. The existing criminal justice system is not designed to deal with the types of heinous crimes with which the proposed law deals with."

30. In view of the situation, as stated above, it was felt necessary to enact a legislation for prevention of, and for dealing with, terrorist activities. However, sufficient safeguards are sought to be provided in the proposed law to prevent the possibility of its misuse.

31. In the instant case, the prosecution has filed charge-sheet against appellant Gausuddin for the offence under Sections 3(3)(5), 21(2) and 22(3) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act in addition to the offences under the Indian Penal Code. Before we consider the material/evidence collected by the prosecution at this stage of proceedings whether adequate or inadequate for the purpose of holding prima facie case against appellant Gausuddin for the offences charged under POTA, it would be appropriate to consider the ingredients of these provisions.

32. The "terrorist act" is defined in clause (g) of Section 2 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, which reads thus :

"terrorist act has the meaning assigned to it in sub-section (1) of Section 3, and the expression "terrorist" shall be construed accordingly."

Sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act reads thus :

"3) (1) Whoever -

(a) with intent to threaten the unity, integrity, security or sovereignty of India or to strike terror in the people or any section of the people does any act or thing by using bombs, dynamite or other explosive substances or inflammable substances or firearms or other lethal weapons or poisons or noxious gases or other chemicals or by any other substances (whether biological or otherwise) of a hazardous nature or by any other means whatsoever, in such a manner as to cause, or likely to cause, death of, or injuries to any person or persons or loss of, or damage to, or destruction of, property or disruption of any supplies or services essential to the life of the community or causes damage or destruction of any property or equipment used or intended to be used for the defence of India or in connection with any other purposes of the Government of India, any State Government or any of their agencies, or detains any person and threatens to kill or injure such person in order to compel the Government or any other person to do or abstain from doing any act;

(b) is or continues to be a member of an association declared unlawful under the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967 (3 of 1967), or voluntarily does an act aiding or promoting in any manner the objects of such association and in either case is in possession of any unlicensed firearms, ammunition, explosive or other instrument or substance capable of causing mass destruction and commits any act resulting in loss of human life or grievous injury to any person or causes significant damage to any property, commits a terrorist act.

Explanation - For the purposes of this sub-section, "a terrorist act" shall include the act of raising funds intended for the purpose of terrorism."

33. While considering the provisions of sub-section (1) of Section 3, the prosecution must have evidence to show that person has engaged himself in the following activities :

1) he intended to threaten the unity, integrity, security or sovereignty of India ,

2) he intended to strike terror in the people,

3) any section of people does any act or thing by using bombs, dynamites or other explosive substances or inflammable substances or firearms or other lethal weapons or poisons or noxious gases or other chemicals or by any other substances (whether biological or otherwise) of a hazardous nature,
4) similarly such person by any other means whatsoever in such a manner as to cause or likely to cause death of or injuries to any person or persons,

5) or such person causes loss or damage to or destruction of property or disruption of any supplies or services essential to the life of the community or cause damage or destruction of any property or equipment used or intended to be used for the defence of India or in connection with any other purposes of the Government of India, any State Government or any of their Agencies,

6) such person detains any person and threatens to kill or injure such person in order to compel Government or any other person to do or abstain from doing any act,

34. Clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 3, therefore, contemplates above referred situation and if there is evidence to show that the person is indulging in these activities, would be a person alleged to have committed a terrorist act.

35. Similarly clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 further provides that -

(1) person who is or continues to be a member of the Association declared unlawful under the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967 or

(2) person voluntarily does an act aiding or promoting in any manner the objects of such Organization,

(3) and such person is in possession of unlicensed firearms, ammunition, explosives or other instrument or substance capable of causing mass destruction and commits any act resulting in loss of human life or grievous injury to any person or causes a significant damage to any property, commits a terrorist act.

36. The above referred provision provides various contingencies and if prosecution has evidence to show that the person is involved in or carrying on one of the above referred activities, he can be said to commit a terrorist act. It is not necessary that person must be involved in or carrying on or used to carry on all the activities referred to hereinabove. However, the fact remains that prosecution must possess the evidence to show that the person is involved in or carrying on one of the activities referred to in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 or is involved in or carrying on more than one of these activities before person can be said to have committed a terrorist act.

Explanation to sub-section (1) of Section 3 reads thus :

"For the purposes of this Section, "a terrorist act" shall include the act of raising funds intended for the purpose of terrorism."

Plain reading of the explanation contemplates that raising of funds in India for the purpose of terrorism, is an act, which is included in the definition of a "terrorist act" and the person shall be committing a terrorist act contemplated in sub-section (1) of Section 3 irrespective of the fact that he is not involved in or carrying out any of the activities mentioned in clause (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

Sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act reads thus :

"3) Whoever conspires or attempts to commit, or advocates, abets, advises or incites or knowingly facilitates the commission of, a terrorist act or any act preparatory to a terrorist act, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than five years, but which may extend to imprisonment for life and shall also be liable to fine."

The ingredients of sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act will have to be considered on the backdrop of definition of terrorist act mentioned in sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act since all the circumstances and factors enumerated in sub-section (3) are ultimately related to the terrorist act and, therefore, under the scheme of sub-section (3) of Section 3, it needs to be considered accordingly.

While applying ingredients of sub-section (3) of Section 3, the prosecution must have evidence to show that person has conspired to commit a terrorist act, attempted to commit terrorist act, or advocated, abetted and advised to commit terrorist act and incited or knowingly facilitated commission of terrorist act. Even at the cost of repetition, we would like to mention here that terrorist act consists of factors and circumstances shown and described in clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act. Therefore, in that context, each factor mentioned in sub-section (3) of Section 3 will have to be considered and prosecution has to show that the person has conspired to commit the terrorist act as defined in clauses (a) and (b) of Section 3 or attempted to commit or advocated, abetted, advised or incited or knowingly facilitated commission of a terrorist act. Even the preparatory aspect, which is likely to be culminated into a terrorist act is made punishable accordingly under the provisions of sub-section (3) of Section 3 of Prevention of Terrorism Act.

37. On the backdrop of these legal provisions, it will be proper to scrutinise the prosecution evidence in order to decide as to whether material/evidence produced by the prosecution is sufficient to deny or grant bail to the appellant.

38. Another provision, which is relevant and attracted according to prosecution is Section 21(2) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act. In order to understand the scheme of this Section, it will be proper to reproduce whole of Section 21, which reads thus :

"21) Offence relating to support given to a terrorist organization - (1) A person commits an offence if -

(a) he invites support for a terrorist organization, and

(b) the support is not, or is not restricted to, the provisions of money or other property within the meaning of Section 22.

(2) A person commits an offence if he arranges, manages or assists in arranging or managing a meeting, which he knows is -

(a) to support a terrorist organization, or

(b) to further the activities of a terrorist organization, or

(c) to be addressed by a person who belongs or professes to belong to a terrorist organization.

(3) A person commits an offence if he addresses a meeting for the purpose of encouraging support for a terrorist organization or to further its activities.

(4) A person guilty of an offence under this section shall be liable on conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or with fine or with both.

Explanation - For the purpose of this section, the expression "meeting" means a meeting of three or more person whether or not the public are admitted."

In the present case we are concerned with sub-section (2) of Section 21 only.

The title of Section 21 clearly contemplates that this Section relates to offences pertaining to support given by the individual or anybody for that matter to the terrorist organization. What is meant by terrorist organization is defined in Chapter III of the Prevention of Terrorism Act. Sub-section (1) of Section 18 contemplates that for the purposes of this Act, an organization is a terrorist organization if -

(a) it is listed in the Schedule or,

(b) it operates under the same name as an organization listed in that Schedule.

Sub-section (2) of Section 18 contemplates that the Central Government is vested with the power, which may by order in the Official Gazette -

(a) add an organization to the Schedule,

(b) remove an organization from that Schedule,

(c) amend that Schedule in some other way.

As far as sub-sections (3) and (4) of Section 18 are concerned, we are not much concerned in the controversy in issue.

39. The purport of Section 21 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act needs to be construed on the backdrop of the provisions of Chapter III and Section 18. It must be noted that Schedule contemplated under Section 18 gives names of various Organizations declared by the Central Government as terrorist Organizations and anybody giving support to such Organizations, will be a person or body of persons committing an offence under Section 21. With this background, let us analyse the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 21 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act, which is applied by the prosecution on the appellant.

40. Plain reading of the said provision makes it clear that in order to attract this provision, prosecution needs to have an evidence to show that a person has arranged, managed or assisted in arranging or managing a meeting, which he knew is -

1) to support a terrorist organization, which means an organization or one of the organizations enlisted in Schedule contemplated under Section 18 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act,

2) to further the activities of a terrorist organization enlisted in the Schedule,

3) the said meeting is addressed by a person who belongs or profess to belong to a terrorist organization.

On the backdrop of above ingredients of sub-section (2) of Section 21, it will be proper to scrutinise the evidence available with prosecution.

41. Now let us analyse the ingredients of sub-section (3) of Section 22 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act. However, for better understanding of the provisions of this Section, entire Section is reproduced below, which reads thus :

"22) Fund raising for a terrorist organization to be an offence - 1) A person commits an offence if he -

(a) invites another to provide money or other property; and

(b) intends that it should be used, or has reasonable cause to suspect that it may be used, for the purposes of terrorism.

(2) A person commits an offence if he -

(a) receives money or other property, and

(b) intends that it should be used, or has reasonable cause to suspect that it may be used, for the purpose of terrorism,

(3) A person commits an offence if he -

(a) provides money or other property, and

(b) knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that it will or may be used for the purposes of terrorism.

(4) In this section, a reference to the provision of money or other property is a reference to its being given, lent or otherwise made available, whether or not for consideration.

(5) A person guilty of an offence under this section shall be liable on conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding fourteen years, or with fine or with both."
The title of Section 22 is totally unambiguous and contemplates that fund raising for a terrorist organization is an offence under this Section. In the instant proceedings, we are only concerned with sub-section (3) of Section 22. Before we consider purport of sub-section (3) of Section 22, we feel it necessary to express that once again analogous situation to that of Section 21 is emerging from the provisions of Section 22 of Prevention of Terrorism Act, where raising fund for terrorist organization means organization, which is enlisted in Schedule of Section 18, is made an offence under this provision. Sub-section (3) of Section 22 contemplates that a person commits an offence if he -

(1) provides money or other property, and

(2) knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that it will or may be used for the purposes of terrorism.

The word terrorism cannot be construed in isolation and will have to be considered as per scheme of Section 22 and, therefore, will have to be given a requisite meaning, i.e. terrorism created by such terrorist organizations, which are enlisted in Schedule of Section 18 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

42. On the backdrop of these provisions, prosecution must have evidence to show that a person has provided money or property or knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that such money or property will or may be used for the purposes of terrorism by such organization. The sum and substance of this provision is that prosecution must show in order to attract the provisions of sub-section (3) of Section 22 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act that the person has provided money or property to the terrorist organization and/or at least he knew or had reasonable cause to suspect that it may be used for terrorism either by the organization or by individual, who is member of such terrorist organization. It is no doubt true that explanation to sub-section (1) of Section 3 provides that raising fund intended for the purpose of terrorism either by the terrorist organization or by individual is a terrorist act and is punishable under Section 3 of the Prevention of Terrorism Act. However, offence under Section 22 is in respect of fund raising for the terrorist organization and, therefore, it will have to be viewed and construed accordingly. With these ingredients in mind, we will have to scrutinise the prosecution evidence brought on record by the prosecution.

43. Another provision, i.e., Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA needs consideration, since the appellant is also prosecuted under this Section. For our convenience and for ready reference, the same is reproduced below :-

"Any person who is a member of a terrorist gang or a terrorist organization, which is involved in terrorist acts, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to imprisonment for life or with fine which may extend to rupees ten lakh or with both.

Explanation - For the purposes of this sub-section, "terrorist organization" means an organization which is concerned with or involved in terrorism."

The plain reading of this Section contemplates that before imposing a criminal liability under this Section, the person has to be the member of a terrorist gang or a terrorist organization and that organization should be involved in terrorist act as contemplated under Clause (a) of Sub-section (1) of Section 3 of POTA. Therefore, the prosecution must possess evidence to show that the accused is a member of terrorist gang or organization which is involved in terrorist act. In absence of such evidence, no criminal liability can be fastened on a person prosecuted under this provision. It is, no doubt, true that explanation to Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of POTA carves out a different definition of terrorist organization distinct than what is contemplated under Section 18 of Chapter-III of POTA. In view of the explanation to Sub-section (5) of Section 3, terrorist organization means an organization which is concerned with or involved in terrorism. This terrorist organization need not necessarily be the one contemplated under Section 18 of POTA. For the purpose of Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of POTA, the definition of terrorist organization means any organization which is concerned with and involved in terrorism. The definition of terrorist organization contemplated in the explanation to Sub-section (5) of Section 3 has a restrictive meaning and is relevant only in the context of provision of Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA.

44. Similarly, important legal provision, which is of a vital importance, is Section 32 of the POTA. In order to appreciate the scheme of the Section, we have reproduced the whole Section, which reads thus :-

" 32. Certain confessions made to Police Officers to be taken into consideration .- (1) Notwithstanding anything in the Code or in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (1 of 1872), but subject to the provisions of this section, a confession made by a person before a police officer not lower in rank than a Superintendent of Police and recorded by such police officer either in writing or on any mechanical or electronic device like cassettes, tapes or sound tracks from out of such sound or images can be reproduced, shall be admissible in the trial of such person for an offence under this Act or rules made thereunder.

(2) A police officer shall, before recording any confession made by a person under sub-section (1) explain to such person in writing that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so, it may be used against him:

Provided that where such person prefers to remain silent, the police officer shall not compel or induce him to make any confession.

(3) The confession shall be recorded in an atmosphere free from threat or inducement and shall be in the same language in which the person makes it.

(4) The person from whom a confession has been recorded under sub-section (1), shall be produced before the Court of a Chief Metropolitan Magistrate or the Court of a Chief Judicial Magistrate along with the original statement of confession, written or recorded on mechanical or electronic device within forty eight hours.

(5) The Chief Metropolitan Magistrate or the Chief Judicial Magistrate, shall record the statement, if any, made by the person so produced and get his signature or thumb impression and if there is any complaint of torture, "such person shall be directed to be produced for medical examination before a Medical Officer not lower in rank than an Assistant Civil Surgeon and thereafter, he shall be sent to judicial custody."

This provision is analogous to Section 15 of the TADA, 1987 as it stood before Amending Act 43 of 1993. For the convenience of considering the purport of these two Sections, we are reproducing the relevant provisions of Section 15 as it stood then, which reads thus :-

"Section 15 - Certain confessions made to Police Officers to be taken into consideration- (1) Notwithstanding anything in the Code or in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, but subject to the provisions of this Section, a confession made by a person before a Police Officer not lower in rank than a Superintendent of Police and recorded by such Police Officer either in writing or on any mechanical device like cassettes, tapes or sound tracks from out of which sounds of images can be reproduced, shall be admissible in the trial of such person for the offence under this Act or Rules made thereunder."

45. In the year 1993, by the Amending Act 43 of 1993, Section 15 is amended and the following words are inserted in the main Section 15 after the words "in the trial of such person; co-accused, abettor or conspirator". Similarly, by the same Amending Act, proviso is also added which reads thus :-

"Provided that co-accused, abettor or conspirator is charged and tried in the same case together with the accused."

46. While considering the purport of Section 32 of the POTA, there are two vital aspects which need consideration - one is whether the regular Rules relating to confession under the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 vide Sections 24 to 27 as well as Sections 162, 164, 281 and 463 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which have a bearing on the question of recording of statement/confession of a person whether stands excluded, and second whether the confession under Section 32 of the POTA made by a person is admissible only against such person or is also admissible in the trial of such person, or co-accused, abettor, or conspirator for an offence under this Act and Rules framed thereunder: Provided that the co-accused, abettor or conspirator is charged and tried in the same case together with the accused.

47. The plain reading of provisions of Section 32 of the POTA makes it clear that Sections 162, 164, 281 and 463 of Criminal Procedure Code, which have a bearing on the question of recording statement/confession of a person and Sections 24 to 30 of the Evidence Act which deal with various aspects of confession of an accused stand excluded - vis-a-vis Sub-section (1) of Section 32 of the POTA, and cannot be called in aid to invalidate recording of confession of an accused by a Police Officer of the specified rank and/or its admissibility in the trial of such person. It must be made clear that non-obstante clause in Section 32(1) of the POTA does not exclude application of all the provisions of Criminal Procedure Code and the Indian Evidence Act in the trial of offences under POTA. A similar question fell for consideration before the Apex Court in respect of Section 15(1) in case of State of Tamilnadu Vs. Nalini (1999 Criminal Law Journal 3324) and in Para 680, Their Lordships of the Apex Court observed thus :-
"The difference between Section 30 of the Indian Evidence Act and Section 15(1) of the TADA Act may also be noticed here. Whereas the former provision requires that the maker of the confession and others should be tried jointly for the same offence, the latter provision does not require that joint trial should be for the same offence. Another point of distinction is that under Section 30 of the Evidence Act, the Court is given discretion to take into consideration the confession against the maker as well as against those who are being tried jointly for the same offence, but Section 15(1) of TADA Act mandates that confession of an accused recorded thereunder shall be admissible in the trial of the maker of confession or co-accused, abettor or conspirator, provided the co-accused, abettor or conspirator is charged and tried with the accused in the same case. Both Section 30 of the Evidence Act as well as Section 15 of the TADA Act require joint trial of the accused making confession and co-accused, abettor or conspirator."

Similarly, another relevant observations of Their Lordships in case of Nalini are in Para 681 of the Judgment which read thus :-

"Having excluded the application of Sections 24 to 30 of the Evidence Act to a confession recorded under Section 15(1) of the TADA Act, a self-contained scheme is incorporated therein for recording confession of an accused and its admissibility in his trial with co-accused, abettor or conspirator for offences under the TADA Act or the rules made thereunder or any other offence under any other law which can jointly be tried with the offence with which he is charged at the same trial. There is thus no room to import the requirements of Section 30 of the Evidence Act in Section 15 of the TADA Act."

In the instant case, Section 32 also provides a self-contained scheme for recording of confession of an accused by the specific police officer and its admissibility in trial of such a person, i.e., the maker of the confession and, therefore, in view of above referred observations of the Apex Court, there is no room to import the requirements of Section 30 of the Evidence Act in Section 32 of the POTA.

48. Lastly, the observations made by the Apex Court in Para 694 of Nalini's case are also very relevant and read thus :-

"I have already pointed out the difference in the phraseology of S.15 of the TADA Act. The Parliament used the expression "shall be admissible in the trial of such person or co-accused, abettor or conspirator" in S.15 which is different from the language employed in S.30 of the Evidence Act which says that the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession. It has to be presumed that the Parliament was aware of the interpretation placed by the Courts including Privy Council and Supreme Court on S.30 of the Evidence Act but chose to frame S.15 differently obviously intending to avoid the meaning given to the phrase 'the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person....' used in S.30 of the Evidence Act. On the language of S.15(1), it is clear that the intention of the Parliament is to make the confession of an accused substantive evidence both against the accused as well as the co-accused."

49. On the backdrop of the above referred law laid down by the Apex Court in Nalini's case in respect of the analogous provisions of the TADA Act, we can safely conclude that in the phraseology used in Section 32(1) of the POTA, the Parliament used the expression "shall be admissible in trial of such person" which is different from the language used in Section 30 of the Act. From the language of Section 32(1), it is clear that the intention of the Parliament is to make such confession of the accused substantive evidence in the trial of such accused only. This differentia in respect of admissibility of confession is based on the intention of the Parliament as well as the language used in Subsection (1) of Section 30 of the POTA, which clearly demonstrates that confession made by a person before the specific police officer shall be admissible in trial of such person for an offence under this Act and Rules made thereunder. While dealing with the case in hand, we will have to keep this aspect in mind while considering the grant or refusal of bail to the appellant.

50. Similarly, another important aspect, which we have to consider, is whether the confession under Section 32(1) is a substantive piece of evidence against the co-accused. This proposition of law necessarily would depend upon two things. Firstly whether under the scheme and in view of language of Section 32(1), keeping in view the legislative intent, such confession is admissible in trial of such person for the offence under this Act and Rules made thereunder, or the same is admissible against co-accused, abettor or conspirator as in the case of amended Section 15(1) of the TADA Act. Secondly, it will also have to be considered as to whether confession contemplated under Section 32(1) of POTA is a substantive evidence against co-accused, abettor and conspirator as in the case of amended Section 15(1) of the TADA Act.

51. In view of Nalini's case, we have already held keeping in view the phraseology used in Section 32(1) of the POTA, legislative intent of the Parliament in using the words "shall be admissible in trial of such person only". Therefore, it can safely be inferred that such confession made by a person contemplated under Section 32(1) of POTA is admissible in law in the trial of such person and, therefore, by necessary implication, it cannot be admissible against co-accused, abettor, conspirator, who is being tried jointly for the same offence.

52. In view of the above legal position, it further emerges that if the confession under Section 32(1) of POTA is admissible in law in the trial of such person, by necessary implication, it cannot be a substantive piece of evidence against the co-accused, abettor or conspirator, who is being tried jointly for the same offences.

53. Another important as well as relevant provision, which needs our consideration, is Section 50 of the POTA. For the purpose of convenience and ready reference, the same is incorporated below :-

"50. Cognizance of offences.- No Court shall take cognizance of any offence under this Act without the previous sanction of the Central Government or as the case be, the State Government."

This provision is analogous to provisions of Section 20-A of the TADA Act, 1987 with the only difference that under TADA Act, 1987, for taking cognizance, previous sanction of Inspector General of Police or as the case may be, the Commissioner of Police, was mandatory. However, in POTA, previous sanction of the Central Govt., or State Govt., is required.

54. The law is well settled when a statute requires a sanction of a competent authority as a pre-condition for taking cognizance by the Court and the relevant sanction order is produced which itself indicates that the material is considered and then after applying mind, the sanctioning authority accorded sanction, the same would be sufficient to hold that there is a valid sanction. Besides, when the sanction order itself is not sufficient to indicate that the sanctioning authority applied his mind, then the prosecution is entitled to adduce evidence aliunde of the person who accorded sanction and that would be a sufficient compliance. After going through the said evidence, the court can come to the conclusion that the relevant materials were considered by the sanctioning authority and it is thereafter he accorded sanction in question.

55. So far as Section 50 is concerned, sanction is a condition precedent for taking cognizance, since the Section opens with the non-obstante clause. Taking cognizance is the act which the Special Court has to perform and granting sanction is an act which the sanctioning authority has to perform. Latter is a condition precedent for former. We must bear in mind that sanction is not granted to the Special Court to take cognizance of the offence, but it is granted to the prosecuting agency to approach the court concerned for enabling it to take cognizance of the offence and to proceeding to trial against the person arraigned in the report. Thus, a valid sanction is sine qua non for enabling the prosecuting agency to approach the court to enable the court to take cognizance of the offence under POTA as disclosed in the report. The corollary is that if there was no valid sanction, the designated court gets no jurisdiction to try a case against any person mentioned in the report, as the court is forbidden from taking cognizance of the offence without such sanction. If the Special Court has taken cognizance of the offence without a valid sanction, such action is without jurisdiction and any proceedings adopted thereunder will be without jurisdiction. This, in fact, is the legal position which emerges from the provisions of Section 50 of the POTA.

56. Now, another important aspect, which needs our consideration, is which act constitutes taking of cognizance by the Court. In order to consider this proposition, relevant observations in some of the judgments of the Apex Court are the guiding principles which would enable us to reach the conclusion in this regard.

57. In case of Anil Saran Vs. State of Bihar and another (AIR 1996 SC 204), in Para 4 the Apex Court has observed thus :-

"We find no force in the contention. Thus the Code defines "cognizable offence" and non-cognizable offence, the word 'cognizance' has not been defined in the Code. But it is now settled law that the Court takes cognizance of the offence and not the offender. As soon as the Magistrate applies his judicial mind to the offence stated in the complaint or the police report etc., cognizance is said to be taken. Cognizance of the offence takes place when the Magistrate takes judicial notice of the offence. Whether the Magistrate has taken cognizance of offence on a complaint or on a police report or upon information of a person other than the police officer, depends upon further (sic) taken pursuant thereto and the attending circumstances of the particular case including the mode in which case is sought to be dealt with or the nature of the action taken by the Magistrate. Under sub-section (1) of Section 190 of the Code, any Magistrate may take cognizance of an offence (a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence, (b) upon a police report of such facts, and (c) information received from any person other than a police officer, or upon his own knowledge, that such offence has been committed."

Similarly, in case of Ajit Kumar Palit Vs. State of West Bengal and another (AIR 1963 SC 765) in Para 9 of the Judgment, Their Lordships of the Apex Court have observed thus :-

"The provisions of S.190(1) being obviously, and on its own terms, inapplicable, the next question to be considered is whether it is the requirement of any principle of general jurisprudence that there should be some additional material to entitle the Court to take cognizance of the offence. The word "cognizance" has no esoteric or mystic significance in criminal law or procedure. It merely means - become aware of and when used with reference to a Court or Judge, to take notice of judicially. It was stated in Gopal Marwari Vs. Emperor, AIR 1943 Pat. 245 (SB) by the learned Judges of the Patna High Court in a passage quoted with approval by this Court in R.R. Chari Vs. State of Uttar Pradesh, 1951 SCR 312 at p.320 : (AIR 1951 SC 207 at p.210) that the word 'cognizance' was used in the Code to indicate the point when the Magistrate or Judge takes judicial notice of an offence and that it was a word of indefinite import, and is not perhaps always used in exactly the same sense. As observed in Emperor Vs. Sourindra Mohan, ILR 37 Cal. 412 at p.416, "taking cognizance does not involve any formal action; or indeed action of any kind, but occurs as soon as a Magistrate, as such, applies his mind to the suspected commission of an offence." Where the statute prescribes the materials on which alone the judicial mind shall operate before any step is taken, obviously the statutory requirement must be fulfilled. Thus, a sessions judge cannot exercise that original jurisdiction which magistrates specified in Section 190(1) can, but the material on which alone he can apply his judicial mind and proceed under the Code is an order of commitment. But statutory provision apart, there is no set material which must exist before the judicial mind can operate. It appears to us therefore that as soon as a special judge receives the orders of allotment of the case passed by the State Government it becomes vested with jurisdiction to try the case and when it receives the record from the Government it can apply its mind."

The law laid down by the Apex Court in the above referred judgments clearly demonstrates that taking of cognizance merely means, become aware of and when used with reference to a Court or Judge, to take notice of judicially. Similarly the word "cognizance" used in the Code indicates the point when the Magistrate or a Judge takes judicial notice of an offence.

58. The law laid down by the Apex Court in case of State of West Bengal and another Vs. Mohammed Khalid and others (AIR 1995 SC 785) also throws light on the issue in question. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Para 28 have observed thus:-

"A cognizance which is barred cannot be overcome by a sanction. The Court must look at the validity of sanction. In this case, the sanction was never produced before the Court. On the contrary, the Court took cognizance automatically. The specific case of these respondents before the High Court was, there was no such sanction. The burden that the sanction was granted in relation to the facts constituting the offence has not been discharged. While taking cognizance perusal of sanction is not mentioned. This order is conclusive."

The other relevant observations of the Apex Court are made by Their Lordships in Para 41 of the Judgment, which read thus :-

"Similarly, when Section 20A(2) of TADA makes sanction necessary for taking cognizance - is only to prevent abuse of power by authorities concerned. It requires to be noted that this provision of Section 20A came to be inserted by Act 43 of 1993. Then, the question is as to the meaning of taking cognizance. Section 190 of the Code talks of cognizance of offences by Magistrates. This expression has not been defined in the Code. In its broad and literal sense, it means taking notice of an offence. This would include the intention of initiating judicial proceedings against the offender in respect of that offence of taking steps to see whether there is any basis for initiating judicial proceedings or for other purposes. The word "cognizance" indicates the point when a Magistrate or a judge first takes judicial notice of an offence. It is entirely a different thing from initiation of proceedings; rather it is the condition precedent to the initiation of proceedings by the Magistrate or the Judge. Cognizance is taken of cases and not of persons."

In case of State of West Bengal Vs. Mohd. Khalid, the Apex Court has, in no uncertain terms, mandated that the word "cognizance" indicates the point when the Magistrate or a Judge takes judicial notice of an offence, and is different from initiation of proceedings. Order of sanction is the condition precedent to the initiation of proceedings by the Magistrate or the Judge and the cognizance is always taken of a case and not of a person. If on the backdrop of these legal propositions emerging from the Judgments of the Apex Court and in view of provisions of Section 50 of the POTA, it will be necessary for us to consider the material on record in order to see whether the Court in the instant case has taken cognizance of the offence or not under this Act without previous sanction of the appropriate Government.

59. In order to appreciate the case of the prosecution as well as the prosecution evidence in respect of chit/note seized at Perimili in Andhra Pradesh, wherein there are certain calculations made, is admissible in the evidence in view of the provisions of Section 34 of the Evidence Act. The observations of the Apex Court in case of Central Bureau of Investigation Vs. V.C. Shukla and others (AIR 1998 SC 1406) are very relevant. Their Lordships of the Apex Court in Para 17 observed thus :-

"17. From a plain reading of the Section it is manifest that to make an entry relevant thereunder it must be shown that it has been made in a book, that book is a book of account and that book of account has been regularly kept in the course of business. From the above Section it is also manifest that even if the above requirements are fulfilled and the entry becomes admissible as relevant evidence, still, the statement made therein shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability. It is thus seen that while the first part of the section speaks of the relevancy of the entry as evidence, the second part speaks, in a negative way, of its evidentiary value for charging a person with a liability."

It is thus seen that while the first part of the Section speaks of relevancy of entry as evidence, the second part speaks in a negative way of its evidentiary value for charging a person with liability. Similarly, Their Lordships in Para 34 have observed thus :-

"34. The rationale behind admissibility of parties' books of account as evidence is that the regularity of habit, the difficulty of falsification and the fair certainty of ultimate detection given them in a sufficient degree a probability of trustworthiness (Wigmore on evidence $ 1546). Since, however, an element of self interest and partisanship of the entrant to make a person - behind whose back and without whose knowledge the entry is made liable cannot be ruled out the additional safeguard of insistence upon other independent evidence to fasten him with such liability, has been provided for in Section 34 by incorporating the words 'such statements shall not alone be sufficient to charge any person with liability'."

In para 35, Their Lordships have observed thus:-
"35. The probative value of the liability created by an entry in books of account came up for consideration in Chandradhar Vs. Gauhati Bank, (1967)1 SCR 898 : (AIR 1967 SC 1058). That case arose out of a suit filed by Gauhati Bank against Chandradhar (the appellant therein) for recovery of a loan of Rs.40,000/-. In defence he contended, inter alia, that no loan was taken. To substantiate their claim the Bank solely relied upon certified copy of the accounts maintained by them under Section 4 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1891 and contended that certified copies became prima facie evidence of the existence of the original entries in the accounts and were admissible to prove the payment of loan given. The suit was decreed by the trial court and the appeal preferred against it was dismissed by the High Court. In setting aside the decree this Court observed that in the face of the positive case made out by Chandradhar that he did not ever borrow any sum from the Bank, the Bank had to prove the fact of such payment and could not rely on mere entries in the books of account even if they were regularly kept in the course of business in view of the clear language of Section 34 of the Act. This Court further observed that where the entries were not admitted it was the duty of the Bank, if it relied on such entries to charge any person with liability, to produce evidence in support of the entries to show that the money was advanced as indicated therein and thereafter the entries would be of use as corroborative evidence."

60. On the backdrop of the above referred proposition laid down by the Apex Court - vis-a-vis Section 34 of the Evidence Act, it will be necessary for us to first ascertain whether the entries in the document/chit with which we are concerned fulfil the requirements of Section 34 as laid down by the Apex Court and is admissible in evidence. The question of probative value of such document will come only after we prima facie reach the conclusion about admissibility of such document in evidence in view of the law laid down by the Apex Court - vis-a-vis Section 34 of the Evidence Act. We feel it necessary to express that while interpreting and construing the purport of the criminal statute, regard must be had to the fact that it must be interpreted strictly according to the language used in such statute, object and purpose for which the statute is evolved and the legislative intent for creating such statute. There is no scope for interpreting criminal statute broadly, liberally and progressively. The overriding principle must be an adherence to the specific object presented by such legislation, into which each individual provision must fit in order to maintain essential details which the framers would have intended, had they been faced with circumstances of today. To hold otherwise would stultify not only the object of such legislation, but also the legislative intent. What we feel is that a stultification of legislation must be prevented if this is possible without doing violence to the language of the statute and the criminal law needs to be interpreted strictly according to the object which it has to achieve as well as the purpose for which it is evolved, keeping in view the legislative intent. Keeping in view the above referred principles in mind, we have interpreted the above referred relevant provisions of the POTA and the fact of grant of refusal of bail will have to be considered on the basis of evidence which is available with the prosecution agency at this stage in the light of the interpretation arrived at by us of the relevant provisions of the POTA mentioned hereinabove.

61. Another important aspect which needs our consideration, before we consider the facts and circumstances of the present case, is to appreciate the concept of mens rea. It is one of the principles of English Criminal Law that a crime is not committed if the mind of the person doing the act in question be innocent. It is stated that actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea (the intent and act must both concur to constitute the crime). Although, prima facie, and as a general rule, there must be a mind at fault before there can be a crime, it is not an inflexible rule, and a statute may relate to such a subject matter and may be so framed as to make an act criminal whether there has been any intention to break the law or otherwise to do a wrong or not. Mens rea of mind stigmatized as wrongful by the criminal law which when compounded with relevant prohibited conduct constitutes a particular crime. Crimes involving mens rea are of two types, (i) crimes of basic intent and (ii) crimes of specific intent. In the former class of crimes, the mens rea does not go beyond the actus reus. In the second, it goes beyond the contemplation of prohibited act and foresight of its consequence has a purposive element.

62. As stated by Williams : What does legal mens rea mean? It refers to the mental element necessary for the particular crime, and this mental element may be either intention to do immediate act or bringing about the consequence or (in some crimes) recklessness as to such act or consequence. In a different and more precise language, the mens rea means intention or recklessness as to the element constituting actus reus . These two concepts, intention and recklessness, hold a key to the understanding of large part of criminal law, some crimes require intention and nothing else will do, but some can be committed either intentionally or recklessly. Some crimes require particular kind of intention or knowledge [Williams on Criminal Law (General/part page 30)]. Referring to the elements of mens rea , Glanville Williams states : the mere commission of a criminal act (or bringing about the state of affairs that the law provides against) is not enough to constitute a crime, at any rate in the case of more serious crime. This generally requires, in addition, some element of wrongful intent or other fault. The Apex Court in the case of Director of Enforcement Vs. M.C.T.M. Corporation Pvt. Ltd. - AIR 1996 SC 1100 has in para 7 observed thus :

" Mens rea " is a state of mind. Under the criminal law, mens rea is considered as the "guilty intention" and unless it is found that the 'accused' had the guilty intention to commit the 'crime' he cannot be held 'guilty' of committing the crime."

Their Lordships of the Apex Court in para 8 of the above referred judgment considered the breach of civil obligation by the accused which attract penalty under the FERA and observed thus :

"It is true the breach of "civil obligation" which attracts 'penalty' under Section 23(1)(a), FERA, 1947 and a finding that the delinquent has contravened the provisions of Section 10, FERA, 1947 that would immediately attract the levy of 'penalty' under section 23, irrespective of the fact whether the contravention was made by the defaulter with any "guilty intention" or not. Therefore, unlike in a criminal case, where it is essential for the 'prosecution' to establish that the 'accused' had the necessary "guilty intention" or in other words the requisite mens rea to commit the alleged offence with which he is charged before recording his conviction, the obligation on the part of the Directorate of Enforcement, in cases of contravention of the provisions of Section 10 of FERA, would be discharged where it is shown that the "blameworthy conduct" of the delinquent had been established by wilful contravention by him of the provisions of Section 10, FERA, 1947."

The above referred observations of the Apex Court would demonstrate that under the criminal law unless it is found that the accused had guilty intention to commit the crime, he cannot be held guilty of committing the crime. Similarly even in case of breach of civil obligations, it is required to be proved before imposing penalty that the delinquent had wilfully contravened the provisions of the Act.

63. On the backdrop of the legal proposition vis-a-vis mens rea, the relevant provisions of POTA needs consideration. Clause (a) of Sub-section (1) of Section 3 of POTA starts with the following words - would be a person committing terrorist act. Plain reading of clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 of POTA contemplates that whoever commits an offence in respect of the contingency enumerated in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 of POTA needs to have intention (mens rea) to commit such offence mentioned therein.

"Whoever with intent to threaten the unity, integrity, security or sovereignty of India...."

64. So far as clause (b) is concerned, the situation is slightly different and contemplates that whoever voluntarily does an act of aiding or promoting in any manner the object of such association, would be a person committing a terrorist act. We are not concerned so far as other provisions of clause (b) are concerned in the present case. The act of aiding and promoting the object of such association must be a voluntary act and not under duress or threat.

65. Sub-section (3) of Section 3 of POTA also needs to be understood in its right perspective. The section contemplates that whoever conspires or attempts to commit, or advocates, abets, advises or incites or knowingly facilitates the commission of a terrorist act or any act preparatory to a terrorist act, shall be punishable..... Under the scheme of the provision, conspiring, attempting, advocating, abating, advising and facilitating must be for commission of a terrorist act and, as we have observed hereinabove, clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 3 defines what is meant by terrorist act and requires intention to commit such acts and, therefore, by necessary implication the person who is charged with criminal liability under Sub-section (3) of Section 3 of POTA must possess requisite criminal intention in conspiring, attempting, advocating, abating, advising, facilitating and inciting to commit terrorist act. In absence thereof, the entire bearing of the criminal liability under these provisions would change.

66. So far as sub-section (2) of Section 21 of POTA is concerned, it is the knowledge which is requisite to commit an offence under this provision. Without such requisite knowledge mere arranging, managing or assisting in arranging or managing a meeting by itself is not enough to fasten the criminal liability as contemplated under this provision. As far as sub-section (3) of Section 22 of POTA is concerned, similar situation emerges from this section. The person must have a requisite knowledge or at least has reasonable cause to suspect that the money or property will be used for the purpose of terrorism, without such knowledge it will be difficult to fasten criminal liability under this Section. As far as provisions of Sections 21(2) and 22(3) are concerned, the word 'knowledge' used in these provisions needs to be construed on the backdrop of the concept of mens rea. In case of other criminal offences, mens rea and intention are required. So far as the offences contemplated under sub-section (2) of Section 21 and sub-section (3) of Section 22 of POTA are concerned, the offender needs to have knowledge without which it will be difficult to fasten criminal liability on a person under these provisions of POTA. Absolute liability is not to be lightly presumed but has to be clearly established. The concept of mens rea is aptly described by Their Lordships of Apex Court in the case of Nathulal Vs. State of Madhya Pradesh - AIR 1966 SC 43. In para no.4 of the judgment Their Lordships observed thus :

"The law on the subject is fairly well settled. It has come under judicial scrutiny of this Court on many occassions. It does not call for a detailed discussion. It is enough to restate the principles. Mens rea is an essential ingredient of a criminal offence. Doubtless a statute may exclude the element of mens rea, but it is a sound rule of construction adopted in England and also accepted in India to construe a statutory provision creating an offence in conformity with the common law rather than against it unless the statute expressly or by necessary implication excluded mens rea. The mere fact that the object of the statute is to promote welfare activities or to eradicate a grave social evil is by itself not decisive of the question whether the element of guilty mind is excluded from the ingredients of an offence. Mens rea by necessary implication may be excluded from a statute only where it is absolutely clear that the implementation of the objection of the statute would otherwise be defeated."

The above referred observations of the Apex Court in no uncertain terms mandate that mens rea is an essential ingredient of a criminal offence unless the statute excludes the element of mens rea. Applying the principles to the relevant provisions of POTA with which we are concerned in the present case referred to hereinabove and under which the appellant is prosecuted, it is evident that for committing terrorist act, as contemplated in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 3, mens rea is necessary to commit an offence mentioned therein. Insofar as sub-section (3) of Section 3 of POTA is concerned and as far as offences contemplated under sub-section (2) of Section 21 and sub-section (3) of Section 22 of POTA are concerned, it is knowledge which is requisite before committing the crime under these provisions.

67. We are well aware that at the stage of bail this Court examines the matter from the stand point of prima facie case and does not enter into threadbare analysis of the merits of the evidence. It is undoubtedly left to the trial Court to consider the same at the appropriate stage. However, in the present case, the appellant has filed an appeal under Section 34 of POTA against the order passed by the designated Court. It is the duty of the Appellate Court to look into the material/evidence collected by the prosecution at this stage of the trial and consider the same in order to arrive at a conclusion as to whether the said evidence is sufficient prima facie to connect the accused with the crime or not and is admissible one in evidence. We are also aware that judicial approach in dealing with the case where the accused is charged of an offence of serious nature should be cautious, circumspect and careful and this Court needs to consider the matter carefully and examine all the relevant and material circumstances before granting/refusing the bail to the accused.

68. At the same time, it must be borne in mind that while considering the statutory provisions and their effect, this Court is required to interprete them correctly keeping in view the object and intent of the legislature. It is the duty of the Court to apply the correct interpretation of the relevant provisions to the evidence collected by the prosecution and is further required to find out whether, in the circumstances, the accused had made out a case for grant of bail or not. In the instant case, since this Court is exercising appellate power under Section 34 of POTA, the Court is also required to consider the validity of the impugned orders passed by the designated Court whereby the bail has been refused, since this Court ultimately would be required to confirm or set aside the impugned orders passed by the designated Court. Similarly, sub-section (7) of Section 47 contemplates that where the Public Prosecutor opposes the application of the accused to release on bail, no person accused of an offence punishable under this Act or any Rule made thereunder, shall be released on bail unless the Court is satisfied that there are grounds for believing that he is guilty of committing such offence and in order to reach such satisfaction, though prima facie in nature, the Court is required to scrutinize the material/evidence available on record in the form of Charge-sheet.

69. On the backdrop of the above referred legal propositions propounded by the Apex Court, it is necessary for us to consider the material/evidence produced by the prosecution before the Special Court in the light of these propositions of law in order to conclude whether the appellant has made out a case for grant of bail, or the material is adequate to connect the accused with the crime in question justifying the impugned order of rejection of bail application of the appellant.

70. In the instant case, the appellant is charge-sheeted for the offences punishable under Sections 363, 368, 143, 147, 148, 149, 121, 364(A) read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code, under Section 3/25 of the Arms Act and under Sections 3(2), (3), (5), 21(2), 21(3) of the POTA, 2002. In order to connect the appellant with the crime in question and for the offences charged, the prosecution is relying on the following evidence :-

(a) Report, dated 26-6-2002, lodged by one Bapu Reddy in the Police Station, Sironcha;

(b) Statement of witness Tulsigir Samaiya (Police Patil) of Chittoor recorded on 9-6-2002;

(c) Statement of witness Pocham Madavi, resident of Chittoor;

(d) Confessional Statement of co-accused Kamlakar Olala under Section 32 of the POTA;

(e) Recovery of chit from the dump, on the basis of which the prosecution claims that the recitals in the chit reveal that the appellant has given financial assistance to the Naxalites.

(f) Statement of Sampoorna Singh in order to corroborate that the telephone no.66365, at the relevant time, was used by appellant Gausuddin, on which number the calls were received from telephone no.33212 alleged to have been made by Bakanna as per recitals in the confessional statement of Kamlakar.

The Additional Public Prosecutor categorized the above referred evidence in order to show availability of prima facie evidence against the appellant for the respective offences under POTA in the following manner :-

For Sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the POTA, the prosecution is relying on following evidence :-

(i) Phone calls/Telephone List.

In the confessional statement of Kamlakar, it is stated that Telephone No.33212 was operated by Bakanna (Naxalite). In the list of telephone calls from this telephone number, the calls have been detected to be made on telephone no.66356, which was used by present appellant who was residing in the house of Sampoorna Singh and who had stated in his statement that he had given the telephone to be used by the present appellant Gausuddin. The prosecution, therefore, alleged that Bakanna had called the present appellant on several dates and the dates are every relevant as the phone calls have been detected from the months of March to May.

(ii) Statement of Sampoorna Singh :

Sampoorna Singh is the resident of Alapalli. He had given the house on rent to the present appellant Gausuddin along with his telephone no.66356, which was, at the relevant time was under use of the appellant.

(iii) Statement of witness Somaiya Lachchu :

In his statement, Somaiya had stated that he was working as a carrier of message from a Naxalite leader and on one occasion, he had taken a message from Commander Nootan to the appellant Gausuddin and Gausuddin on the said letter had come to visit the Commander and had a discussion with him for about an hour.

71. So far as prosecution of the appellant for the offence under Section 21(2) of the POTA is concerned, the prosecution is relying on the following evidence :

a) Statement of Tulsigiri, which was recorded by the Investigating Officer on 19-6-2002,

b) Statement of witness Pocham Madavi, and

c) Confessional statement of Kamlakar Olala under Section 32 of the POTA.

72. So far as prosecution of the appellant under Section 22(3) of the POTA is concerned, the prosecution is relying on the following evidence :-

(1) Confessional statement of Kamlakar Olala recorded under Section 32 of the POTA.

(2) Recovery of a chit from dump.

(3) Notice under Section 149 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

73. Similarly, so far as Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA is concerned, there is no specific independent evidence available as such with the prosecution in this regard which has been fairly conceded by the Additional Public Prosecutor and the prosecution is relying on the above referred evidence only even for the offence under Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA.

74. It will be appropriate for us now to scrutinize the above referred material/evidence available with the prosecution in the form of a charge-sheet in order to find out whether a prima facie case is made out for connecting the appellant-accused with the crime in question. The said evidence needs to be considered in the light of interpretation arrived at by us of the provisions of POTA as well as law laid down by the Apex Court in this regard. So far as Sections 363, 368, 143, 147, 148, 149, 121, 368-A, read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code are concerned, the prosecution is relying on the statement/report, dated 26-6-2002, lodged by witness Bapu Reddy in the Police Station, Sironcha. The recitals in the report reveal that the author of the report, i.e., Bapu Reddy along with one Narendra Reddy was abducted by members of Bakanna group on the gunpoint from Kaleshwar unit in the forest of Navegaon . Bapu Reddy, who was threatened by Bakanna to collect an amount of Rs.9,84,000=00 from Tendu unit contractors, was also compelled to write a chit/note. Narendra was sent with the said chit to other Tendu leaves contractors, Bapu Reddy, however, in the meanwhile, managed to free himself from the clutches of Bakanna gang, and lodged a report, dated 2-6-2002. It is also stated in the report that one truck of Tendu leave was also burnt by the gang of Bakanna.

75. So far as offences under the Indian Penal Code as well as under the Arms Act are concerned, for which the appellant is prosecuted, the above referred report of Bapu Reddy is the only piece of evidence available with the prosecution at this stage. This fact has not been disputed by Mrs. Dange, learned APP. The plain reading of the above referred report of Bapu Reddy does not implicate the present appellant for the offences alleged to have been committed by the appellant under the provisions of Indian Penal Code as well as Arms Act. The recitals in the said report reveal that Bapu Reddy was abducted by members of the gang of Bakanna, and he was made to write a note in order to collect the amount from the other Tendu leaves contractors, and one Narendra Reddy was sent with the said note to the other Tendu leaves contractors. Apart from these allegations, there is absolutely nothing in the said report in order to show the complicity of the appellant in the crime in question so far as it relates to the offences under the Indian Penal Code and the Arms Act.

76. Now it will be appropriate for us to consider the evidence/material available with the prosecution under the provisions of POTA.

77. So far as Section 3 of the POTA is concerned, the prosecution is relying on the confessional statement of another co-accused Kamlakar, wherein co-accused Kamlakar has stated that his telephone bearing no.33212 was operated by Bakanna (Naxalite) and the list of telephone calls reveals that the telephone calls were made from telephone no.33212 on telephone no.66356, which was used by the present appellant who was residing in the house of Sampoorna Singh. The prosecution, on the basis of the recitals in the confessional statement of co-accused Kamlakar, which was recorded on 10-6-2002 by the Additional Superintendent of Police under Section 32 of the POTA, wanted to connect the accused with the offence under Section 3(3) of POTA along with the statement of witness Sampoorna Singh.

78. For the purpose of prosecuting the appellant under Section 21(2) of the POTA, the prosecution has relied on the following material:-

1) Statement of Tulsigiri Somaiya, Police Patil of Chittoor recorded on 9-6-2002. Perusal of the statement of Tulsigiri would reveal that he is the Police Patil of village Chittoor and on 2-5-2002, the present appellant along with his manager and two other Tendu Patta contractors along with their managers came to village Chittoor at about 8=00 p.m., in two jeeps. In the said statement, he has further stated that the present appellant asked Tulsigiri Somaiya to gather villagers for discussion on plucking of Tendu Pattas. Accordingly Tulsigiri called the villagers for this purpose and within a short time about 30 to 32 people gathered and participated in the discussion on fixing of rate for plucking of Tendu Pattas. The statement further reveals that in the meantime one Kalim Sheikh, resident of Sironcha came on the spot and informed that nobody should leave the place as Bakanna is going to visit the spot and fix the Tendu Patta plucking rate. About half an hour thereafter 20 to 25 Naxalites with guns wearing bluish-green dresses arrived at the spot and the head of the said group Bakanna introduced himself to the people who gathered there. Bakanna took aside three Tendu Patta contractors and had a discussion with them for about half an hour and later on disclosed the people who had gathered there that the contractors will pay Rs.147/- (One Hundred and Forty Seven). Thereafter the contractor also disclosed that they would pay the said amount and the people should start the work of plucking of Tendu leaves.

79. Another evidence in this regard is the statement of Pocham Madavi, who had stated the similar facts as stated by Tulsigiri in his statement. Pocham Madavi has stated that the appellant had reached village Chittoor in the evening hours by a jeep and he had asked the Police Patil to collect people for having a discussion in respect of rates. The Police Patil gathered some people. Pocham Madavi also participated in the said meeting. This witness further stated that when the meeting was in progress, Naxalites visited the spot and they took aside contractors and had a discussion with them for half an hour. Thereafter the Naxalite leader Bakanna disclosed the rates fixed for plucking of Tendu Pattas.

80. It is not disputed by learned APP that the appellant is prosecuted for the offence under Section 21(2) of the POTA on the basis of statements of Tulsigiri Samaiya and Pocham Madavi as well as confessional statement of co-accused Kamlakar Olala. So far as confessional statement of Kamlakar Olala is concerned, we will deal with this piece of evidence at a later point of time. However, it is necessary to consider the recitals in the statements of Tulsigiri as well as Pocham Madavi, and needs to find out whether it fulfils the requirement of Section 21(2) of the POTA, and connect the accused with the offence under this Section in the light of interpretation arrived at by us which is referred to hereinabove. The title of Section 21 of the Act clearly contemplates that this Section relates to the offences pertaining to support given by an individual or a body or anybody for that matter to the terrorist organisation. The purport of Section 21 has already been considered by us as referred to hereinabove. However, at the cost of repetition, we reiterate the same. The plain reading of the provisions of Section 21 makes it clear that in order to attract this provision, prosecution needs to have an evidence to show that (1) a person has arranged, managed or assisted in arranging or managing a meeting which he knows is to support a terrorists organisation which means an organisation or one of the organisations enlisted in the schedule contemplated under Section 18 of the POTA, (2) to further the activities of a terrorists organisation enlisted in the Schedule, and (3) the said meeting is addressed by a person who belongs to or professes to belong to terrorists organisation. The recitals in the above referred statements prima facie do not show that the meeting, which was arranged by Tulsigiri, was for the purpose of supporting the terrorists organisation or to further the activities of the terrorists organization in connivance with the appellant who was in the know of this aspect. Similarly, it will be difficult for us at this stage to conclude this issue one way or the other. However, in our considered view and in view of the interpretation arrived at by us of Sub-section (2) of Section 21 of the POTA as well as recitals in the statements of Tulsigiri and Pocham, we are prima facie of the view that the appellant has made out a case for grant of bail on this count.

81. The prosecution wants to take aid of confessional statement of co-accused Kamlakar Olala, which was recorded by the Additional Superintendent of Police on 10-6-2002 under Section 32(1) of the POTA in order to substantiate its charge against the appellant for an offence under Section 21(2) as a piece of evidence in addition to the statements of Tulsigiri and Pocham. Before we consider the recitals in the confessional statement, it will be appropriate for us to keep in mind the interpretation arrived at by us of Section 32 of the POTA referred to hereinabove. We are quite aware of the fact that since we are dealing with the issue of grant or refusal of bail to the appellant, it will not be possible for us a conclude this aspect one way or the other. However, in view of the interpretation arrived at by us regarding Section 32 of the POTA and the legal propositions emerging in this regard on the basis of the law laid down by the Apex Court referred to hereinabove, in our considered view, bail cannot be refused to the appellant in view of the confessional statement of Kamlakar for the offence punishable under Section 21(2) of the POTA.

82. The appellant is prosecuted for an offence under Section 22(3) of the POTA and in order to sustain the charge under this Section, prosecution is relying on the following evidence:-

(a) Confessional statement of Kamlakar recorded under Section 32 of the POTA and recovery of a chit from dumps.

So far as confessional statement of Kamlakar under Section 32 of the POTA is concerned, we are faced with the similar situation in respect of admissibility of the said confessional statement against the appellant. However, at this stage of the proceedings, it will not be possible to conclude this issue one way or the other. However, in view of the interpretation arrived at by us regarding Section 34 of the POTA and the legal proposition emerging in this regard on the basis of the law laid down by the Apex Court referred to hereinabove, the recitals in the confessional statement against the appellant cannot be a ground to refuse bail to the appellant.

83. The evidence produced by the prosecution, i.e., recovery of a chit from dump which reveals that firstly the said chit or note is not seized or recovered during the course of investigation of the present crime, but was recovered during investigation of some other crime in Andhra Pradesh. On the said chit, there are certain calculations made, which, according to the prosecution, are that an amount of Rs.36,60,000=00 was paid by the appellant to the Naxalite group. It is not disputed that the chit is not seized during investigation of the present crime. Similarly, the same is also not seized from anybody, but from the dumps in Andhra Pradesh while conducting some other investigation. Similarly, the admissibility of this document will have to be considered in view of the provisions of Section 34 of the Evidence Act before we consider the question of probative value of such document. We have considered the purpose of Section 34 in detail and interpreted the same on the basis of the law laid down by the Apex Court in the above referred judgments and also recorded its interpretation of Section 34 hereinabove. From the plain reading of Section 34, it is manifest that to make an entry relevant thereunder, it must be shown that it has been made in a book. That book is a book of accounts and that book of accounts has been regularly kept in the course of business. In view of this interpretation, the loose paper/chit and the entries made thereunder, in our view, are insufficient to connect the accused with the crime in question keeping in view the admissibility of this document in evidence on the basis of interpretation arrived at by us of Section 34 of the Evidence Act.

84. Lastly the prosecution is relying on the notice issued under Section 149 of the Criminal Procedure Code in the month of January, 2002, which reveals that on allotment of a contract of plucking of Tendu Pattas, the appellant and other contractors were asked to refrain from aiding any person, who is associated with People's War Group (PWG), which was declared as a terrorists organization under POTA. It was further informed that if the appellant suspected any person, he should immediately report the said matter to the Police Authorities during the course of business activities. The contention of the prosecution is that in spite of the said notice issued to the appellant, the appellant, for the first time, reported the matter to Police on 25-5-2002, i.e., after a long gap between the meeting, dated 2-5-2002, wherein Bakanna (Naxalite) came and declared the rates to be paid to the labourers for plucking Tendu Pattas and, therefore, this is a piece of evidence which connects the appellant with the offence punishable under Section 22(3) of the POTA. It is not disputed that the appellant has lodged a report dated 25-5-2002 with the Additional Superintendent of Police, Aheri, wherein he has stated that he had received threats from Bakanna to transfer Penti Paka and Wardham units or he would be killed. The appellant has expressed a strong apprehension about the safety of his collection centres and damage to his bags since he has received threats from the Naxalites. The report further reveals that earlier also when he had gone to Chittoor with his managers Umesh Poreddiwar and Kamlakar, Khaleel, he had seen some persons in "Khaki" dresses with weapons who threatened them to give rate of Rs.150/- for collection or face consequences. The appellant has expressed a threat to his life in the said report. Recitals in the said report, in no uncertain terms, reveal that the conduct of the appellant by lodging a report, dated 2-5-2002, would show that the appellant reported the matter to the police and, therefore, complied with the directions issued in the notice under Section 149 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The recitals in the report not only demonstrate that the appellant has received threats from the Naxalites, but has also made a reference to the threats given to the appellant by Naxalites at Chittoor where the meeting was arranged by Tulsigiri with the villagers for the purpose of discussing the rates for plucking the Tendu Pattas to be given to village labourers. The conduct of the appellant, therefore, does not prima facie reveal that he had voluntarily or otherwise provided money or property to the Naxalites which he new, will be used for the purpose of terrorism. On the other hand, recitals in the report are otherwise. In view of these aspects, we are of the view that the applicant has made out a case for grant of bail even in respect of offence under Section 22(3) of the POTA.

85. While considering this aspect, few other circumstances are necessary to consider. The prosecution case is that Bakanna made telephone calls to the appellant from 4-5-2002 to 22-5-2002. Similarly, the list of telephone bill shows that duration of each call is less than a minute, except the last call, which is alleged to have been made by Bakanna on 22-5-2002, is of two minutes and fifteen seconds. The prosecution has not undertaken a procedure contemplated under Chapter-IV of POTA which deals with interception of communications in certain cases. There is nothing on record to show that whether there was any conversation between the person calling from telephone on 33212 to telephone no.66356, except that the list of telephone bill which shows that the calls were made between 4-5-2002 to 22-5-2002 from phone bearing no.33212 to telephone no.66356. Phone no.33212, as per the prosecution, is in the name of Kamlakar, the other co-accused and in his confessional statement, he has stated that cordless handset of this telephone number was given to Bakanna at the relevant time and, therefore, the prosecution wants us to presume that the call must have been made by Bakanna to the appellant. The purport of Section 32(1) of the POTA has been considered by us as referred to hereinabove and on the backdrop of the legal proposition emerging from the same, it would be difficult for us to give any weightage to the recitals in the confessional statement of Kamlakar.

86. So far as Section 3, Sub-section (3) of POTA are concerned, the prosecution is relying on the confessional statement of co-accused Kamlakar in order to show that telephone no.33212, which was in his name at the relevant time, was operated by Bakanna. The list of telephone calls from his telephone number reveal that calls have been made from his telephone number to telephone no.66356, which was used by the present appellant who was residing in the house of Sampoorna Singh and, therefore, this aspect is inadequate to connect the appellant with the offence under Section 3(3) of the POTA. Similarly, the statement of witness Sampoorna Singh only reveals that this witness is a resident of Alapalli and he had given his house on rent to the present appellant with telephone no.66356 and nothing more. If the recitals in the confessional statement in view of the interpretation arrived at by us in respect of Section 32(1) of the POTA cannot be called in aid to support the prosecution case, then the simplicitor statement of Sampoorna Singh is also prima facie difficult to connect the accused with the offence punishable under Section 3(3) of the POTA.

87. Another statement, which is relied on by the prosecution, is that of witness Samaiya Lachchu. However, recitals in the statement would show that he was working as a carrier of messages from Naxalite leader and on one occasion he had taken a message from Commander Nootan to the appellant and the appellant on the said letter had come to visit the Commander and had a discussion with him for about half an hour. It is pertinent to note that the so called commander Nootan is not the accused in the present case, nor the appellant is charged with aiding and abetting or giving financial aid to commander Nootan who is associated and related to Naxalite movement of People's War Group (PWG). Therefore, there is no prima facie evidence that the appellant in the present prosecution can be said to be connected with the offence punishable under Section 3(3) of the POTA.

88. Lastly, so far as provisions of Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of POTA are concerned, there is no other evidence available with the prosecution apart from the above referred evidence to connect the appellant with the offence under Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA. In view of the purport of Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA, the above referred evidence available with the prosecution, in our view, prima facie does not connect the appellant with the offence under Sub-section (5) of Section 3 of the POTA.

89. Another argument, which is advanced by learned counsel for the appellant in the present case is that the charge-sheet has been filed by the prosecution on 2-12-2002 without there being any valid sanction from the appropriate Govt., and the Special Court under POTA has taken cognizance of the matter, which could be seen from Para 29 of internal page 26 of the trial court's order, which reads thus :-

"ORDER

Chargesheet presented by Dy.S.P. Aheri (S.D.P.O.) through Shri. Dilip Zalake, S.D.P.O. Aheri.

It is verified.

Sd/-

Superintendent

Court of the Additional District Judge and Addl. Sessions Judge, Gadchiroli 443 605

Dt. 2-12-2002 at 12=00 p.m.

Special Case No.1 of 2002

Filed on 2-12-2002.

O

It be registered as Special Case under provisions of POTA 2002.

Sd/-

ASJ

2-12-2002".

It is, therefore, contended by Mr. Manohar that the above referred order-sheet reflects the application of mind by the Additional Sessions Judge and after due application of mind, the Judge of the said court has taken cognizance by ordering registration of case under the provisions of POTA. It is, therefore, contended that in the instant case the court has taken cognizance de hors of the provisions of Section 50 of the POTA and, therefore, the prosecution, which is launched against the appellant, is invalid in law.

90. It is, no doubt, true that it will not be possible for us to record our conclusive finding in this regard at this stage. However, since this issue has a positive bearing on the overall prosecution and the same needs to be prima facie considered by us at this stage, particularly keeping in view the provisions of Section 49 (7) of the POTA, whereby the court is required to reach the requisite satisfaction before releasing the accused on bail.

91. We have already discussed hereinabove in detail the legal proposition propounded by the Apex Court in respect of what is meant by taking cognizance by a Court or a Judge and the clear position, which emerges from the said scenario, is that taking of cognizance merely means to become aware and when used with reference to the Court or a Judge, to take notice of judicially. The word "cognizance" used in the Code indicates the point when the Magistrate or a Judge takes judicial notice of the offence. It is necessary to mention that this is a special legislation and, therefore, offences committed under this special legislation are to be tried by the Special Court. In other words, the Special Court gets jurisdiction to try the criminal case only when the Judge is of the view, after going through the charge-sheet or the papers of investigation which are filed in the court, that the provisions of POTA are attracted and the case against such offender can be registered under the provisions of POTA. That means the Judge is aware of and has taken the judicial notice of the offence and it is only thereafter he has ordered registration of the offence. In the context of the present case, in our view, the above referred factors prima facie would show that this is not the case where it can be said that the Judge has not taken a judicial notice of the offence.

92. It is undisputed fact that the prosecution has not obtained sanction for prosecution required under Section 50 of the POTA till this date. Similarly, we cannot ignore the fact that Section 50 opens with the non-obstante clause and prohibits the Special Court from taking cognizance without valid sanction from the appropriate Govt.. Prima facie taking into consideration the above referred factors, we are of the view that the appellant has made out a case for grant of bail.

93. Since we are dealing with the appeal filed by the appellant, it will be necessary for us to consider the validity of the impugned orders passed by the Special Court. In the instant appeals, we are not concerned with the provisions of Section 167(1) and (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code, since the appellant is seeking a bail on merits and challenged the impugned orders accordingly and, therefore, it is not necessary for us to adjudicate upon this aspect of the matter. We have perused the impugned order, dated 16-11-2002, which is the subject-matter of challenge in Criminal Appeal No.679 of 2002 as well as the order, dated 17-12-2002, which is the subject-matter of challenge in Criminal Appeal No.3 of 2002. Perusal of order, dated 16-11-2002, would show that in para 28 the Judge of the Special Court in view of Section 53(2) of the POTA, which reads thus :-

"53(2) - In a prosecution for an offence under sub-section (3) of Section 3, if it is proved that the accused rendered any financial assistance to a person, having knowledge that such person is accused of, or reasonably suspected of, an offence under that section, the Special Court shall draw adverse inference against the accused."

has held that there is a presumption available in favour of the prosecution and against the accused. The very finding of the Special Court is misconceived, since this presumption is only available when the prosecution first proves the offence under Sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the POTA, and not otherwise. The very approach of the trial court is misconceived and devoid of substance and, therefore, cannot be sustained in law. Similarly, the trial court did not take into consideration the legal requirements of Section 32(1) of the POTA as per the scheme of that provision as well as Section 50 of the POTA. It is, no doubt, true that at the time of grant or refusal of bail, the considerations are different and no decisive conclusion can be drawn at this stage. However, it cannot be ignored that what is inadmissible in law at this stage cannot become admissible at the later point of time unless it depends upon further evidence to be adduced by prosecution and, therefore, such issues and such legal aspects are prima facie required to be considered by the Judge of the Special Court, particularly keeping in view the mandate of Section 49(7) of the POTA. Similarly, at this stage evidence cannot be appreciated in that sense of the term. However, admissibility/inadmissibility of evidence will have a positive bearing in considering the aspect of grant or refusal of bail and, therefore, this aspect cannot be ignored by the court. While passing the impugned order, dated 16-11-2002, the Judge of the Special Court has not considered all these issues in the light of the law laid down by the Apex Court in this regard and, therefore, the order is unsustainable in law.

94. So far as another impugned order, dated 17-12-2002, is concerned, the said order also suffers from the same vice and in addition to that the observations made by the learned Judge of the Special Court in Para 27 while interpreting Section 50 of POTA are prima facie misconceived. Similarly, we are of the prima facie view that the approach of the trial court so far as aspect of taking cognizance is concerned is also not sustainable in law. Though the Special Court has passed very lengthy orders while refusing bail, however, the sum and substance of the observations and the findings recorded thereunder prima facie do not warrant rejection of bail application of the appellant.

95. We wish to record our concern regarding investigation and prosecution of the offenders under Special Acts by the prosecution. The special legislations are evolved by the Parliament in order to take care of extraordinary situation arising out of certain categories of extremely serious offences which cannot be taken care of and dealt with by the general criminal law of the land, which is in force. We expect that prosecution agency should be extremely careful, vigilant and effective while conducting investigation in respect of such offences and the same should be strictly according to the requirements of provisions of such special legislations like POTA, TADA Act etc.; otherwise the very purpose and object of such legislations would be defeated.

96. Similarly, we expect the prosecuting agency to be aware of the law regarding recording of confession of the person as per the mandate of Section 32(1) of the POTA. We have interpreted this Section in our present judgment keeping in view the relevant law laid down by the Apex Court in this regard as well as language used in this provision, legislative intent and purpose of the Act. The situation is not new to the prosecuting agency as TADA Act was enacted by the Parliament in the year 1987 and the aspect of confession and its admissibility against co-accused jointly tried in the same trial was considered by the Parliament insufficient to deal with the extraordinary situation emerging from the offences under TADA. Therefore, the Parliament by Amending Act 43 of 1993 amended Section 15(1) of TADA Act and inserted certain provisions making confession of the co-accused recorded under the provisions of the TADA Act admissible in evidence against the co-accused, abettors, conspirators who are jointly tried in the same trial, and is treated as substantive evidence against the co-accused. On the backdrop of these facts, we expect prosecuting agency to be aware of these legal aspects of provisions of Section 32(1) of the POTA and should conduct investigation keeping in view all these vital aspects in respect of admissibility of confession recorded under Section 32(1) of the POTA, and not to repeat such mistake of solely relying on the confessional statement of the accused, time and again, to prove the offence/offences against the co-accused and regard must be had to the provisions of Section 32(1) of the POTA. Prosecuting agency is expected to collect independent evidence to connect the offender with the crime under the provisions of POTA and should not rely solely on confessional statement of co-accused for this purpose in order to bring home the guilt of the accused under the provisions of the Special Act.

97. Similarly, we fail to understand what prohibits the prosecuting agency to comply with the mandatory requirements of law as contemplated by Section 50 of POTA. The Special Courts are constituted to deal with these extraordinary situations. At the same time, the Legislature has provided certain safeguards in order to avoid misuse or abuse of the provisions of this Act, and made it mandatory for the prosecution to obtain previous sanction of the Central Govt., or the State Govt., as the case may be, and prohibited the Special Court from taking cognizance of any offence under this Act without previous sanction of the Central Government or State Government, as the case may be. The purport of Section 50 of POTA is two-fold. Firstly it casts a duty of obtaining sanction for prosecution of the offences under provisions of POTA by prosecution from the appropriate Government and secondly the Courts are debarred from taking cognizance of the offence under this Act without previous sanction of the appropriate Government. We have already interpreted this Section in the earlier paragraphs of this Judgment and, therefore, we do not wish to reiterate the same. However, we fail to understand as to why these mandatory requirements are not fulfilled by the prosecution in such cases. At the same time, we deprecate the approach of the Judge of Special Court to treat these proceedings under Special Act casually. The Judges of the Special Courts are expected to keep in mind the purport of the fact of taking cognizance of an offence under this Act and consequences thereof. If the Court as well as prosecuting agency fail to act according to the mandate of this Section, the whole object of the Act is likely to be frustrated and the purpose for which such Special Acts are enacted would be defeated. Similarly, we expect the appropriate Government to complete procedural mandatory formality of granting sanction, if necessary, without wasting any time and fulfil the mandatory requirement of Section 50 of POTA. The appropriate Government is expected to keep in mind the far-reaching consequences in case the procedural requirement mandated by provisions of Section 50 is not fulfilled. Inaction or delay on the part of the appropriate Government in this regard shall, undoubtedly, not only frustrate the object of the Act, but also result in giving benefit to the unscrupulous elements.

98. We cannot turn the Nelson's eye to the fact that the necessity to evolve this legislation by the Central Govt., was felt because of the method of madness which is adopted by various terrorist organizations to attach the symbol of power to destabilize the sovereign nation and our nation faced multifarious challenges in the management of its internal security. Similarly, there was an upsurge in terrorists activities, insurgent groups in different parts of the country. In such situation, the prosecuting agency, while doing investigation of the offences under such special legislation, should strictly conduct the investigation according to the provisions of such legislation and are expected to conduct the investigation in a more responsible manner keeping in view the mandate of the provisions of POTA, since they are accountable to the country for their lapses.

99. Another aspect, which we feel, needs attention of the prosecuting agency is that there are broadly three categories of offences which can be dealt with by different criminal laws. The categories mentioned herein are illustrative in nature and not exhaustive in character. The first category of offences is those which can be adequately dealt with by general criminal laws of this nation which are in force. The second category of offences is those which cannot be dealt by general criminal laws and for which special legislations are evolved by the Parliament or State Legislatures, as the case may be and Special Acts are enacted to deal with such situation. These are the special legislations and, therefore, procedure evolved for investigation in respect of such offences in many ways is different than the regular/normal procedure of investigation in the regular criminal offences. The investigating agency, in our view, is duty bound to keep such procedure in mind and investigate the offences under the Special Acts strictly according to provisions of such Special Acts in order to achieve the object and purpose for which Special Acts are enacted by the Parliament. The third category of offenders is, who, in fact, are not criminals, but are common people consisting of professionals like doctors, chartered accountants, businessmen etc., who are under coercion, duress or threat from the criminals are required to part with monetary consideration. However, their such conduct is made punishable under the Special Act. In our view, in such situation, it is the duty of the investigating agency to find out whether raising of funds or providing monetary assistance to the criminals or criminal organizations is done by such persons voluntarily or with the knowledge that such money would be used for furthering the object of such criminal organization. If the prosecution agency fails to take into consideration these aspects while conducting investigation under the provisions of the special legislation, then there is a possibility that such investigation would invariably culminate into prosecuting the common man and the hard core criminals or terrorists would go scot free which will frustrate the very object and purpose of the Act. Similarly, there is a duty cast upon the citizens to approach police authorities as soon as they receive threats from such criminals for parting with monetary consideration, in order to help the police authorities to arrest and prosecute such unscrupulous elements. We cannot ignore the contemporary law and order situation in our country. However, we hope and trust that in future the prosecuting agency will keep in mind the interpretation arrived at by us in respect of certain important provisions of POTA and the observations made by us in the present judgment in order to achieve the purpose for which the Parliament has evolved the special legislation to fulfil the object of the Special Act.

For the reasons stated hereinabove, we hereby quash and set aside the impugned order, dated 16-11-2002, passed by Additional Sessions Judge, Gadchiroli, in Misc. Criminal Application No.12 of 2002, and the order, dated 17-12-2002, passed in Special Case No.1 of 2002 by the Additional Sessions Judge, Gadchiroli, so far as it relates to rejection of grant of bail to the appellant, and release the appellant on bail on the following terms and conditions :-

The appellant be released on bail subject to furnishing a cash surety of Rs.5,00,000=00 (Rupees Five Lakhs Only) and one surety in the like manner. He shall not enter jurisdiction of Gadchiroli District till the trial is over, and shall stay at Warangal and report to Police Station, Mathwada (Warangal) three times a week, i.e. on every Monday, Wednesday and Sunday between 4.30 p.m. and 7.30 p.m..

Order accordingly.

****

Cross Citation :2004 ALL MR (Cri) 2889

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

D. B. BHOSALE, J.

Mr. Bhaskar Sen Vs. State of Maharashtra & Ors.

Criminal Writ Petition No.1424 of 2003

WITH Criminal Writ Petition No.3191 of 2004

WITH Criminal Writ Petition No.3192 of 2004

WITH Criminal Writ Petition No.3129 of 2004, 1st September, 2004.

==========

Criminal P.C. (1973), Ss.205, 317 - Personal attendance of accused - Dispensing with - Magistrate should dispense with attendance in appropriate cases of accused- Ordinarily court should be generous and liberal in exercising powers under Ss.205 and 317 – The Court should avoid requiring the accused or his advocate to apply for exemption for every date – Only when the presence of accused is must and trial cannot proceed in absence of accused then only application for exemption is necessary - Court should avoid issuance of NBW in the first instance and it should be issued only as a last resort - Detailed instructions about procedure to be followed in the interest of speedy disposal of pending cases and undue harassment to accused laid down.

==========

Eq. Citation : 2013 CRI. L.J. 616

ORISSA HIGH COURT : CUTTACK

CORAM : MR. V.GOPALA GOWDA , CJ AND MR. JUSTICE S.K.MISHRA , J.

W.P.(Crl.) No. 1096 of 2011

on 5 October, 2012

Arun Kumar Budhia. ... Petitioner Versus

State of Orissa and another. ... Opposite parties For petitioner - M/s. Goutam K. Acharya, K.M.Patra, P.K.Das, S.K.Behera, K.G.Hadai, J.K.Mohapatra and Miss R.Nayak.

For opposite parties - Government Advocate, (for opposite parties 1 and 2) and

Mr. S.D.Das, Asst. Solicitor General (for opposite party no.3).

==========

The accused is entitled to get a copy of the First Information Report Articles 21 and 22 provides that the liberty of a citizen cannot be interfered or curtailed lightly by the authorities. So it is to be determined, whether at the stage of initial investigation, the accused has a right of receiving information regarding the accusation or allegation made against - a person, who is in custody of the same, has the liability to give a copy thereof to the person who has interest in the same or whose interest is adversely affected by the same.

> Thus, we allow the writ application and direct that : (i) The accused is entitled to get a copy of the First Information Report at an earlier stage than as prescribed under Section 207 of the Cr.P.C. (ii) An accused who has reason to suspect that he has been roped in a criminal case and his name may be finding place in a First Information Report can submit an application through his representative/ agent for grant of a certified copy before the concerned police officer or to the Superintendent of Police on payment of such fee which is payable for 8 obtaining such a copy from the court. On such application being made, the copy shall be supplied within twenty-four hours. (iii) Once the First Information Report is forwarded by the police station to the concerned Magistrate or any Special Judge, on an application being filed for certified copy on behalf of the accused, the same shall be given by the court concerned within two working days. The aforesaid direction has nothing to do with the statutory mandate inhered under Section 207 of the Code.

(iv) The copies of the F.I.Rs., unless reasons recorded regard being had to the nature of the offence that the same is sensitive in nature, should be uploaded on the Odisha Police website or by the district police website, as the case may be, within twenty-four hours of lodging of the F.I.R. so that the accused or any person connected with the same can download the F.I.R and the appropriate application before the Court as per law for redressal of his grievances.

(v) The decision not to upload the copy of the F.I.R. on the website of Odisha police/District police office shall not be taken by an officer below the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police or Assistant Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, and that too by way of a speaking order. A decision so taken by the DSP/ACP shall also be duly communicated to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(vi) The word 'sensitive' apart from the other aspects which may be thought of being sensitive by the competent authority as stated hereinbefore 9 would also include concept of privacy regard being had to the nature of the F.I.R.

(vii) In case a copy of the F.I.R. is not provided on the ground of sensitive nature of the case, the person aggrieved by the said action, after disclosing his identity, can submit a representation with the Commissioner of Police/Superintendent of Police of the District, who shall constitute a committee of three high officers and the committee shall deal with the said grievance within three days from the date of receipt of the representation and communicate it to the aggrieved person.

(viii) The Superintendent of Police shall constitute the committee within eight weeks from today.

(ix) In cases wherein decisions have been taken not to give copies of the F.I.Rs. regard being had to the sensitive nature of the case, it will be open to the accused/his authorized representative to file an application for grant of certified copy before the court to which the F.I.R. has been sent and the same shall be provided in quite promptitude by the concerned court not beyond three days of the submission of the application.

(x) The directions for uploading the F.I.R. on the website of Odisha Police shall be given effect from 3Ist January, 2013.

==========

S.K.Mishra, J. - In this writ petition, the petitioner has prayed for issuance of a writ of mandamus to the State of Odisha to make provision for supply of copy of F.I.R. registered by the police to the accused persons and/or their relatives and to direct 2

the Odisha Police to upload the F.I.Rs. in their website within a reasonable time after registration.

2. The petitioner is an Advocate and has filed this writ petition in the nature of a public interest litigation to solve the difficulties faced by the accused persons, who were named in the F.I.R. registered against them in receiving copy of the F.I.R. for seeking appropriate relief for protecting their right to life and personal liberty. It is brought to the notice of the Court that most of the times the accused named in the F.I.R. is not aware of lodging an F.I.R. or contents thereof and, therefore, without an authenticated copy of the same, he faces handicap in moving appropriate applications before the Courts for protecting his liberty.

3. The State has filed a counter affidavit and in the said counter affidavit, the State has sought to bring to the notice of the Court that there is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code or in the G.R. & C.O. (Crl.) to provide copies of the F.I.R. to the accused by the Police Officers.

4. In order to appreciate the contentions raised by the learned counsel for the petitioner, it is appropriate to take note of various provisions those are applicable. Section 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, hereinafter referred as the 'Code' for brevity, provides for information in cognizable cases. Section 154 of the Code is quoted below:

"154. Information in cognizable cases :- (1) Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant; and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid, shall be signed by the person giving it, and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such 3 officer in such form as the State Government may prescribe in this behalf.

(2) A copy of the information as recorded under sub-section (1) shall be given forthwith, free of cost, to the informant. (3) Any person aggrieved by a refusal on the part of the officer in charge of a police station to record the information referred to in sub-section (1) may send the substance of such information, in writing and by post, to the Superintendent of Police concerned who, if satisfied that such information discloses the commission of a cognizable offence, shall either investigate the case himself or direct an investigation to be made by any police officer subordinate to him, in the manner provided by this Code, and such officer shall have all the powers of an officer in charge of the police station in relation to that offence."

5. Section 154 of the Code provides for information as to the cognizable cases and investigation of such cases, whereas Section 156 of the Code provides for police officer's power to investigate cognizable cases. After investigation, final report is submitted by the police to the Magistrate having territorial jurisdiction.

6. After completion of investigation and submission of charge-sheet, before trial, the accused is entitled to copies of the police report as provided in Section 207 of the Code. The said Section reads as follows: "207. Supply to the accused of copy of police report and other documents.- In any case where the proceeding has been instituted on a police report, the Magistrate shall without delay furnish to the accused, free of cost, a copy of each of the following:-

(i) the police report;

(ii) the first information report recorded under section 154; (iii) the statements recorded under sub-section (3) of section 161 of all the persons whom the prosecution proposes to examine as its witnesses, excluding therefrom any part in regard to which a request for such exclusion has been 4 made by the police officer under sub-section (6) of section 173;

(iv) the confessions and statements, if any, recorded under section 164;

(v) any other document or relevant extract thereof forwarded to the Magistrate with the police report under sub-section (5) of section 173;

Provided that the Magistrate may, after perusing any such part of a statement as is referred to in clause (iii) and considering the reasons given by the police officer for the request, direct that a copy of that part of the statement or of such portion thereof as the Magistrate thinks proper, shall be furnished to the accused: Provided further that if the Magistrate is satisfied that any document referred to in clause (v) is voluminous, he shall, instead of furnishing the accused with a copy thereof, direct that he will only be allowed to inspect it either personally or through pleader in Court."

7. Section 207 of the Code therefore mandates that after completion of investigation and submission of final form before the learned Magistrate, it is the duty of the learned Magistrate to furnish the accused a free copy of the documents, which includes police report, F.I.R., statements recorded under Sections 161 and 164 of the Code etc. However, this provision comes into play only after the investigation is over and after submission of the final form. Prior to that, there is no provision under the Code for an accused to be supplied with a copy of the F.I.R. It is argued at length that in absence of the copy of the

F.I.R., the very right of the accused to get himself defended cannot be fulfilled as he is not in a position to know the nature of the allegation, so that he will approach the appropriate forum for obtaining necessary relief for protecting his right and liberty. 5

8. Article 21 of the Constitution of India clearly provides for protection of life and personal liberty, which is quoted below:

"21. Protection of life and personal liberty.- No person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law."

Thus, it is luculent that Article 21 of the Constitution of India provides for protection of citizens' life and personal liberty and it can be only curtailed by due procedure established by law. Thus, if a person is accused of committing a crime and there is chance of being apprehended by the police, he has a right to have an information about the allegations against him even at the initial stage of investigation. The Constitution of India provides in Article 22 regarding protection against arrest and detention in certain cases, which is quoted below: "22. Protection against arrest and detention in certain cases.- (1) No person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds for such arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult, and to be defended by, a legal practitioner of his choice. (2) Every person who is arrested and detained in custody shall be produced before the nearest magistrate within a period of twenty four hours of such arrest excluding the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Court of the magistrate and no such person shall be detained in custody beyond the said period without the authority of a magistrate.

(3) Nothing in clauses (1) and (2) shall apply-

(a) to any person who for the time being is an enemy alien; or

(b) to any person who is arrested or detained under any law providing for preventive detention.

4. No law providing for preventive detention shall authorize the detention of a person for a longer period than three months unless-

(a) an Advisory Board consisting of persons who are, or have been, or are qualified to be appointed as, Judges of a High Court has reported before the expiration of the said period of three months that there is in its opinion sufficient cause for such detention:

Provided that nothing in this sub-clause shall authorize the detention of any person beyond the maximum period prescribed by any law made by Parliament under sub-clause (b) of Clause (7); or

(b) such person is detained in accordance with the provisions of any law made by Parliament under sub-clauses (a) and (b) of clause (7).

5. When any person is detained in pursuance of an order made under any law providing for preventive detention, the authority making the order shall, as soon as may be, communicate to such person the grounds on which the order has been made and shall afford him the earliest opportunity of making a representation against the order.

6. Nothing in clause (5) shall require the authority making any such order as is referred to in that clause to disclose facts which such authority considers to be against the public interest to disclose.

7. Parliament may by law prescribe-

(a) the circumstances under which, and the class or classes of cases in which, a person may be detained for a period longer than three months under any law providing for preventive detention without obtaining the opinion of an Advisory Board in accordance with the provisions of sub-clause (a) of clause (4); (b) the maximum period for which any person may in any class or classes of cases be detained under any law providing for preventive detention; and

PRINCIPLES OF NATURAL JUSTICE

It is not possible for the Court to decide an issue, not raised/agitated by the authority for the reason that other party did not have opportunity to meet it and such a course would violate the Municipal Council Vs. State of Punjab AIR 1997 SC 2841)

Similarly, in Vs.K. Majotra Vs. Union of India & Ors., (20(b) 8 SCC 40, the Apex Court held as under:-

"The Courts would be well advised to decide the petitions on the points raised in the petition and if in a rare case keeping in view the facts and circumstances of the case any additional points are to be raised then the concerned and affected parties should be put to notice on the additional points to satisfy the principles of natural justice. Parties cannot be taken by surprise."

IT is a setfled JegaJ proposition that no paity can be permitted to agitate an issue unless there are specific pleadings in this behalf.There can be no dispute to the settled iegaJ proposition that the Court or Tribunal is not permitted to decide a case going out of pleadings of the parties nor the evidence led on a non-existing plea is permitted to be taken into consideration, (Vide Sri Mahant Govind Rao Vs. Sita Ram Kesho, (1898) 25 IA 195 (PC); Messers Trojan & Co. Vs. RM. N.N. Nagappa Chettiar, AIR 1953 SC 235; Kishori Lai Vs. M/s. Chaltibai, AIR 1959 SC 504; Samant N. Balakrishan Vs. George Fernandez & Ors., AIR 1969 Sc 1201; Dalim Kumar Sain & Ors. Vs. Smt. Nand Rani Dassi & Anr., AIR 1970 Cal. 292; Rao Sahab Vs. Rangnath GopaJrao, AIR 1971 SC 2548; Bhoona Bi & Anr, Vs. Gujar Bi, AIR 1973 Mad 154; DR. R.K. S. Chauhan Vs. State of U.P. & Ors., 1995 Supp (3) SCC 688; Commissioner of Income Tax Vs. Park Hotel, (1996) 2 SCC 15; Syed Dastagir Vs. T. R. Gopalakrishna Setty, AIR 1999 SC 3029; Sankaran Pillai (Dead) by LRs Vs. Vs.P. Venuguduswami & Ors., AIR 1999 SC 1218; J. Jermons Vs. Aliammal, AIR 1999 SC 3041; Life Insurance corporation of India & Ors. Vs. Jyotish Chandra Biswas, (2000) 6 SCC 562; OM Prakash Gupta Vs. Ranbir B. Goyai, (2002) 2 SCC 256; and Ashutosh Gupta Vs. State of Rajasthan & Ors., (2002) 4 SCC 34).

.

Cross Citation :1993 CRI. L. J. 2621

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 B. P. SINGH, J. (Single Bench)

Cril. Misc. Bail Application No. 8157 of 1990,D/-4 -9 -1991.

Mohammad Mian, Petitioner v. State of U. P., Respondent.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437 - BAIL - Bail - Delayed trial - Prosecution failing to produce some witnesses for two years, seeking eight adjournments - Accused not responsible for delay - Bail to be granted. (Para 4 ,5)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras
1979 Cri LJ 1036 : AIR 1979 SC 1360 (Explained) 3
AIR 1978 SC 597 3
Ravindra Sharma for Petitioner; A. G. A. for Respondent.
Judgement
ORDER :- The applicant, Mohammad Mian, is being prosecuted for committing the offence punishable under Section 302 I.P.C., P.S. Ojhani, District Budaun.
2 According to recital in the F.I.R., Budha was shot dead by the applicant, Mohammad Mian, on 20-6-1989 at 7.00 P.M. near the culvert of Bilsi Road, Ojhani. A charge sheet was submitted against the applicant under Section 302 I.P.C. and the case S.T. No. 240 of 1989 - is pending in the court of learned sessions Judge, Budaun.
@page-CriLJ2622
3 The main contention of the learned counsel for the applicant is that there has been inordinate delay in the trial of the case and as the applicant has been in jail for more than two years, he may be enlarged on bail. Reliance has been placed upon the case of Hussainara v. State of Bihar, AIR 1979 SC 1360 : (1979 Cri LJ 1036). In the case of Hussainara the Supreme Court has observed as follows at page 1041 (of Cri LJ) :-
"We think that even under our Constitution, though speedy trial is not specifically enumerated as a fundamental right, it is implicit in the broad sweep and content of Article 21 as interpreted by this Court in Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 597. We have held in that case that Article 21 confers a fundamental right on every person not to be deprived of his life or liberty except in accordance with the procedure prescribed by law and it is not enough to constitute compliance with the requirement of that Article that some semblance of a procedure should be prescribed by law and it is not enough to constitute compliance with the requirement of that Article that some semblance of a procedure should be prescribed by law, but that the procedure should be reasonable, fair and just. If a person is deprived of his liberty under a procedure which is not reasonable, fair or just, such deprivation would be violative of his fundamental right under Article 21 and he would be entitled to enforce such fundamental right and secure his release. Now obviously procedure prescribed by law for depriving a person of his liberty cannot be 'reasonable, fair or just' unless that procedure ensures a speedy trial for determination of the guilt of such person. No procedure which does not ensure a reasonably quick trial can be regarded as 'reasonable, fair or just' and it would fall foul of Article 21. There can, therefore, be no doubt that speedy trial, and by speedy trial we mean reasonably expeditious trial, is an integral and essential part of the fundamental right to life and liberty enshrined in Article 21. The question which would, however, arise is as to what would be the consequence if a person accused of an offence is denied speedy trial and is sought to be deprived of his liberty by imprisonment as a result of a long delayed trial in violation of his fundamental right under Article 21. Would he be entitled to be released unconditionally freed from the charge levelled against him on the ground that trying him after an unduly long period of time and convicting him after such trial would constitute violation of his fundamental right under Article 21 ? That is a question we shall have to consider when we hear the writ petition on merits on the adjourned date. But one thing is certain and we cannot impress it too strongly on the State Government that it is high time that the State Government realised its responsibility to the people in the matter of administration of justice and set up more courts for the trial of cases. We may point out that it would not be enough merely to establish more courts but the State Government would also have to man them by competent judges and whatever is necessary for the purpose of recruiting competent judges such as improving their conditions of service, would have to be done by the State Government, if they want to improve the system of administration of justice and make it an effective instrument for reaching justice to the large masses of people for whom justice is today a meaningless and empty word."

While emphasising that a reasonable expeditious trial of a criminal case is an integral part of fundamental right to life and liberty as enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution of India, the Supreme Court, in Hussainara's case, has intentionally refrained from answering the question as to what shall be the consequence if a person accused of an offence is denied speedy trial and is sought to be deprived of his liberty of imprisonment as a result of abnormal delay in the conclusion of his trial. The Parliament was conscious of the delay in the investigation and trial of criminal cases. When the new Cr. P.C. was enacted in 1973 a new provision under Section 167(2)(a) was added in old Section 167 to cover the state of investigation of criminal cases, which provides, that no magistrate shall authorise the detention of an accused person in custody under Section 167 Cr. P.C. for a total period exceeding 90 days, where the investigation relates to an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for a term not less than ten years and 60 days, where the investigation relates to any other offence, and on the expiry of the said period of 90 days or 60 days, as the case may be, the accused person shall be released on bail if he is prepared to and does furnish bail.

@page-CriLJ2623

4. Section 437(6) of the Code of Criminal Procedure deals with the trial of cases in the court of magistrate and provides that if in any case, triable by a magistrate, the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within the period of 60 days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, such person shall, if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail unless the magistrate for reasons to be recorded in writing directs otherwise. But no such provision was enacted. so far as the trial of criminal cases by the sessions Judge was concerned. The only relevant provision is to be found in Section 309 of the Code which provides that in any enquiry or trial, proceedings shall be held as expeditiously as possible, and in particular, when the examination of witnesses has once begun, the same shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the court finds the adjournment of the same beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded. Thus there is no specific provision to grant bail to an accused facing trial in the court of a Sessions Judge if there has been inordinate delay in the trial of his case.

5 Sri Ravindra Sharma, learned counsel for the applicant, has argued that in the present case the applicant Mohammad Mian is languishing in jail for more than two years and he should be released on bail as it is not certain how much long the learned sessions Judge will take to conclude the trial. When there is no statutory provision under which an accused can claim his release on bail for there being inordinate delay in his trial before the sessions Judge, I am of the view that it would not be prudent to lay down that in every case the accused should be enlarged on bail if there has been a long and inordinate delay in his trial. The reason is very simple. If such a view is taken it will give a long handle to the accused and his pairokars and in some cases they may resort to delaying and dilatory tactics in order to bring their cases to a stage where it can be safely claimed that there has been long and inordinate delay in the trial of the case. The cases are not unknown where trials before the sessions Judges have been delayed due to the dilatory tactics adopted by the unscrupulous pairokars of the accused. There may also be cases where the delay may be caused due to other reasons for which the accused is not responsible. For example there can be a case where the delay has been caused due to inability on the part of the prosecution to bring its witnesses to the court. In such a case the court may, in appropriate cases, enlarge the accused on bail.

6. In the present case the case was committed to the court of Sessions on 6-11-1989 and the charge was framed on 11-4-1990. The statement of P.W. 1. Babu, commenced on 24-8-1990 and was concluded on 29-8-1990. On a perusal of copy of order sheet filed by the applicant it is quite clear that during the period 10-5-1990 to 15-3-1991 the prosecution was not in a position to bring its witnesses to court on eight dates. Some other dates were also fixed on which the case was not taken up due to one reason or the other. It is obvious that in this case the accused, Mohammad Mian cannot be saddled with the responsibility of delaying the trial. Considering all the circumstances of the case I am of the view that this is one of those cases where the applicant should be enlarged on bail for the reason that there has been inordinate and undue delay in the trial of the case.

7. Let the applicant, Mohammad Mian, be released on bail in Crime No. 258 of 1989, under Section 302 I.P.C., P.S. Ujahni, District Budaun, provided he furnishes two sureties and a personal bond to the satisfaction of C. J. M. Buduan Application Allowed.

****

Cross Citation :1991 CRI. L. J. 1176

RAJASTHAN HIGH COURT

(JAIPUR BENCH)

Coram : 1 I. S. ISRANI, J. (Single Bench)

Cri. Misc. Bail Appln. No.3661 of 1989 D/- 22 -1 -1990.

Gyan Prakash, Petitioner v. State of Rajasthan, Respondent.

==========

Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.439, S.441 - BAIL - MURDER - Bail-Grant of-Accused charged for murder-Proceedings being conducted carelessly and slowly-Accused can be granted bail on personal bond and sureties - The right to life and liberty is guaranteed by Art.21 of the Constitution and the liberty of the person who even may be an accused person, cannot be curtailed unless the circumstances so require. When a person is an accused of a criminal offence and is behind bar, the least that is expected from a judicial Court is to see that the trial Court proceeds at a reasonable pace so that the liberty of the accused person is not curtailed unnecessarily for a long time. Where the accused charged for murder was behind the bars since 25 months and the prosecution had examined only 11 witnesses out of 22 and approach of the trial court was very careless and casual and prosecution was wasting time and prolonging the trial, the accused should be granted bail on furnishing personal bond and sureties to the satisfaction of the trial Court. (Paras 4, 5, 6)

==========

Narendra Jain, for Petitioner; L. K. Sharma, Public Prosecutor, for the State.

Judgement

ORDER : -This 4th bail application has been filed by the petitioner, who is charged to have committed offence u/S.302 IPC.

It is pointed out by Shri Jain, learned counsel for the petitioner that FIR was lodged on 10-7-1987 and the petitioner was arrested on 23-11-1987. His first bail application was dismissed while making observation that the eye-witnesses mentioned in the said order should be examined within a period of three months and that thereafter the petitioner shall be at liberty to approach this Court again.

The second bail application was dismissed on 4-5-1988. In this application it was observed by this Court that the trial court has not taken care to see that the witnesses are examined within time as directed by the Court. It was again directed that the eye-witnesses mentioned in the order be examined within three months and the petitioners were given liberty to approach this Court thereafter. The third bail application was filed on 28-10-1988. In this application the evidence of the eye-witnesses was considered and the bail application was rejected without causing any prejudice to the case of either of the parties on merits.

2. It is submitted by the learned counsel that the trial is proceeding at a snail's pace @page-CriLJ1177 which is evident from the fact that the petitioner has been in custody since 25 months and out of 22 prosecution witnesses, only 11 have been examined so far. The learned counsel has filed certified copies of the order sheets of the trial court from 18-12-1988 to 18-12-89 when the case was adjourned to 5-2-1990. It is, therefore, submitted that keeping in view the protracted trial, the petitioner deserves to be released on bail.

3. It is submitted by Shri Sharma, learned Public Prosecutor that the direction of the Court given that at least one date should be fixed for every week was only regarding examining the eye witnesses, so far as the names had been mentioned while rejecting the second third bail application. Thereafter no specific direction was given. He prays that time of three months be granted to complete the prosecution evidence.

4. A bare perusal of the orders of the trial court produced, shows that the prosecution agency has been conducting the case carelessly and the trial is proceeding at snail's pace. On 16-1-1989, 17-1-1989, and 18-1-89, no witness of prosecution was present. Thereafter the case was posted for 8, 9 and 10th March, 1989. However, no summons were issued from office of the Court and, therefore, no witness was present on 8-3-89. Thereafter a case was posted for 19 to 22 April, 1989. On 19-4-1989, one witness P.W. 9 was examined and no other witness was present. On 20-4-1989, one witness Ram Narayan was present but was not examined. On 21-4-89, no witness was present and on 22-4-1989, Additional S. P. was present but he was given-up by the prosecution. Thereafter the case was posted to 15th to 17th June, 1989. No witness was present on 15th and 16th June, 1989. On 17th June 1989, one witness Nathu Singh was present but was not examined by the prosecution. Thereafter case was adjourned to 5th July, 1989, but no witness was present. Again the case was adjourned to 24th July, 1989, on which date also no witness was present. Thereafter the case was adjourned to 24th Aug. 1989, when P.W. 10 was examined but no other witness was present. The case was then adjourned to 26-9-1989 but no prosecution witness was present. Thereafter the case was adjourned to 20-11-1989, when no witness was present. Again the case was adjourned to 18-12-1989, when two witnesses were produced but the accused-persons could not be brought from the jail as no guards were available for bringing them. The case was thereafter adjourned to 5-2-1990. This clearly shows that the trial court also has no control over the proceedings of the case and no effort was made to secure the presence of the witnesses even though the petitioner is behind the bars. On several dates the prosecution failed to produce any witness. The trial court has been casually giving long dates even after the period of one month or even more. When the accused person is behind the bar, it is duty of the trial court to make all efforts to see that the trial proceeds at reasonable fast pace so that the accused-persons, who are considered to be innocent till proved guilty do not remain behind the bars for any time than absolutely necessary. The right to life and liberty is guaranteed by Art.21 of the Constitution and the liberty of the person, who even may be an accused person, cannot be curtailed unless the circumstances so require. When a person is an accused of a criminal offence and is behind bar, the least that is expected from a judicial Court is to see that the trial court proceeds at a reasonable pace so that the liberty of the accused person is not curtailed unnecessarily for a long time.

5. In this case the accused petitioner is behind bars since 25 months and still the prosecution has examined only 11 witnesses out of 22 witnesses, they want to produce.

Even when the witnesses are present in Court, have not been examined and one such witness who is to be given up has been unnecessarily summoned and thereafter given-up when appeared in Court, which shows the casual approach of the trial court and the prosecution agency in wasting the time and prolonging the trial.

6. In these circumstances, this bail application is allowed and the petitioner Gyan Prakash is granted bail provided he furnishes personal bond in the sum of Rs. 10,000/- and two sureties in the sum of Rs.5,000/- each to the satisfaction of the trial court with stipulation to appear in that Court on each and every date of hearing and whenever called upon to do so.

@page-CriLJ1178

Application allowed.

****

Cross Citation :1990 CRI. L. J. 2201

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

Coram : 1 G. H. GUTTAL, J. (Single Bench)

Criminal Appln. No. 2630 of 1989, D/- 9 -1 -1990.

Ashak Hussain Allah Detha alias Siddique and another, Applicants ….Vs….

Assistant Collector of Customs (P.), Bombay and another, Opposite Parties.

==========

(A) Constitution of India, Art.22(2) - Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.57 - - Meaning of - Commencement of arrest - It starts with the arrester taking a person into his custody by action or words restraining him from moving anywhere beyond the arrester's control, and it continues until the person so restrained is either released from custody or, having been brought before a Magistrate, is remanded in custody by the Magistrate's Judicial Act - It stands to reason therefore, that what label the investigating officer affixes to his act of restraint is irrelevant. For the same reason, the record of the time of arrest is not an index to the actual time of arrest. The arrest commences with the restraint placed on the liberty of the accused and not with the time of "arrest" recorded by the Arresting Officers. (Para 7)

(B) Constitution of India, Art.22(2) - Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.57 - DETENTION - Detention for interrogation - It is not authorised by law - There is no authority in the Investigating Officers to detain a person for the purpose of interrogation or helping them in the enquiry. (Para 8) - Practice of procuring statement by coercive methods deprecated.

. This manipulation and abuse of the legislative sanction for the use of statements of the accused requires to be censured in the strongest terms. (Para 9)

(D) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.439 - Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act (61 of 1985), S.37 - NARCOTIC DRUGS - Application for bail - Statements of accused during investigation obtained by coerceive and violent methods - Court will weigh this fact in considering application for bail.

It cannot be said that at the stage of considering application for bail, it is not open to the Court to examine whether the statements are voluntary or whether the accused were illegally detained and assaulted and that the statements as they are and the complaint as it is, is the ultimate truth for the purpose of the application for bail. Such a submission is without any merit. It ignores that grant or refusal to grant bail being a matter of discretion, every fact relevant to the exercise of such discretion has to be considered. However, well intended the action of the prosecution is, if the circumstances reveal that the statements on the basis of which the prosecution seeks to have the accused convicted, are not voluntary, the Court's discretion must naturally be influenced by the deplorable practices followed by the Investigating Officers for procurring the statements. The accused who are tried on the basis of such tainted evidence may well be acquited. But then the time spent in custody does not return to them after their acquittal. It is, therefore, necessary to consider whether the prosecution is in possession of credible evidence. (Para 14)

==========

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras

1990 Cri LJ 903 (Bom) 9

(1989) Criminal Appln. No. 2508 of 1989, D/-9-1-1989 (Bom), Arvind Mehram Patel v. Intelligence Officer, Narcotics Control Bureau, Bombay 9

(1989) Criminal Appln. No. 2677 of 1989, D/-6-12-1989 (Bom), Hamid Umar Patel v. Y.O. Shah 9

(1984) 1 All ER 1054 : (1984) 2 WLR 660, Holgate-Mohammed v. Duke 7

(1977) 2 All ER 835 : (1977) 1 WLR 812, R. v. Lemsatef 8

(1947) 1 All ER 567 : 176 LT 443 : 63 TLR 231, Christie v. Leachinsky 7

P.R. Vakil with R.G. Merchant and S. Ali Hasan, for Applicants; A.R. Gupte (for No. 1) and R.Y. Mirza, Public Prosecutor (for No. 2), for Opposite Parties.

Judgement

ORDER :- The five accused are alleged to have committed the offences punishable under S.21 r/w. S.29 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985, hereinafter referred to as "the N.D.P.S. Act" and Ss. 135(1)(a) and 135(1)(b) both r/w. S.135(1)(ii) of the Customs Act, 1962. The Applicants herein Ashak Hussain Allah Detha alias Siddique and Riyaz Ahmed Afzal are, respectively, accused Nos. 4 and 5. They are hereafter referred to as the applicants of Ashak and Riyaz. They apply for bail.

I. THE PROSECUTION CASE

2. The accused No. 1 Hamid Khan was residing in Room No. 301 and the applicants in Room of R.K. Hotel, Lamington Road Bombay Saidulla, who is in pakistan, despatched a large consignment of narcotic drugs on 19th July, 1989. A lorry, driven by Shersingh, carried the contraband. Accused No. 1 Hamid Khan met the Applicants in Room No. 201 and inquired of them whether the consignment had arrived. Meanwhile, Shersingh met the applicants and told them that he had brought the consignment from Pakistan. The applicants took Shersingh to the room of the accused No. 1. Accused No. 1 took Shersingh in a Maruti Car with him. These facts have been recorded in the statements of the applicants under S.108 of the Customs Act. According to these statements, the role of the applicants in the transaction ended with the introduction of Shersingh with the accused No. 1 Hamid Khan.

3. The consignment was unloaded under the supervision-of Hamid Khan - Accused No. 1, into two fiat cars driven by the accused. Nos. 2 and 3. The officers of the respondent No. 1 intercepted the cars and seized the contraband.

4. The statement of accused No. 1 Hamid Khan is also recorded under S.108 of the Customs Act. He claims to have handed over the keys of the cars to Afzal, accused No. 5, and returned to his room. After an hour or so, presumably after delivery or disposal of the contraband, Afzal handed over the keys back to him.

II. DETENTION AND ASSAULT BY THE INVESTIGATING OFFICERS :

5. Admittedly, the statements of all the accused were recorded by the same officers between the midnight of 19th July, 1989 when the former were detained and the midnight of 20th July, 1989. Thus, for 24 hours the accused were under detention by the respondents' officers. They were not allowed to leave the offices of the respondent No. 1 at any time. They were not produced before the Magistrate within 24 hours as required by law. They were produced before the Magistrate on 21st July, 1989, at 5.20 p.m. The applicants did not have legal assistance. The applicants contend that they complained to the learned Magistrate of assault by the officers who recorded the statements.

@page-CriLJ2204

However, the order of the learned Magistrate dated 21st July, 1989, remanding the accused to judicial custody records that the accused made no complaint of illtreatment. However, immediately on their admission in the jail, they made a complaint to the authority of the jail about the assault and pain in the bodies. On the application of the applicants, they were examined by the Chief Medical Officer, Bombay Central Prison. The applicants claim that there is record of injuries made by the Chief Medical Officer, Bombay Central Prison Hospital, Bombay. Therefore, the report of the Chief Medical Officer, Bombay Central Prison Hospital, Bombay, was called for. He has made two reports, the substance of which is as under :-

He examined Afzal, accused No. 5 on 22nd July, 1989. Afzal complained of assault by stick at 3.00 p.m. on 20th July, 1989. The report of the Chief Medical Officer is that Afzal had tenderness on (a) the left chondrial region (b) back (c) right scapular region and (d) right and left gluteal regions.

Similarly, he examined Ashak, accused No. 4 on the same day, who complained of assault by stick on chest at 4.00 p.m. on 20th July, 1989. The injuries were more severe than those on the body of Afzal. They are - (a) bruises on the interscapular region, size 2"x ½", 3"x ½" and 2"x ½"; (b) bruises on the left side of neck size 2"x1/2"; (c) tenderness on both soles of feet, left gluteal region and on the left cheek (d) bruses on right middle of lower leg.

III. THE POINTS URGED :

6. On these facts, Mr. Vakil urged these points :

(a) In view of the injuries found immediately upon their admission into the jail, the confessions must be held to have been extorted by physical assault and illegal detention. The time of the assault stated by the Applicants conforms to the period they were detained for interrogation. Therefore, the confessional statements are not voluntary and they should be rejected.

(b) Secondly, what are recorded as statements of the applicants are partial record of what they had stated. Hamid Khan has implicated the applicants because Hamid Khan says that he handed over the keys of the cars to the applicants who took them and returned them after an hour. The consistent practice of all the Investigating Officers is to confront the maker of the statement with the statements of other accused who implicate him. Either this was not done or if it was done, the denials of the applicants of the incriminating statement made by Hamid Khan have not been recorded. Thus, what have been produced before the Court as the statement the applicants are not a full record of what the applicants had stated.

Mr. Gupta urged that this is not a fit case for releasing the applicants on bail According to him, S.37 of the N.D.P.S. Act precludes every Court including the High Court and the Supreme Court from releasing the accused on bail except in the circumstances stated therein.

IV. "ARREST" - MEANING AND COMMENCEMENT OF :

7. Admittedly, the Applicants were detained without any authority from the midnight of 20th July, 1989 to 5.20 p.m. of 21st July, 1989 - for 17 hours. Their arrest has been so recorded that their production before the Magistrate falls within 24 hours stipulated by Art.22(2) of the Constitution of India and S.57 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Prosecution urges that after the "arrest" they were not detained beyond 24 hours. This submission is a distortion of the true meaning of the constitutional guarantee against detention without the sanction of judicial Tribunal. The word "arrest" has not been defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure or in any other law. The true meaning needs to be understood. The word "arrest" is a term of art. It starts with the arrester taking a person into his custody by action on or words restraining him from moving anywhere beyond the arrester's control, and it continues until the person so restrained is either released from custody or, having been brought before a Magistrate, is remanded in custody by the Magistrate's judicial act1. In substance "arrest" is the restraint on a man's personal liberty by the power or colour of lawful authority [The Law Lexicon - P. Ramanatha Aiyar Reprint Edition 1987, page 85]. In its natural sense also "arrest" means the restraint on or deprivation of one's personal liberty [The Law Lexicon - T.P. Mukherjee, (1989) page 177-178.].

@page-CriLJ2205

1. Christie v. Leachinsky, (1947) 1 All ER 567; Holgate Mohammed v. Duke, (1984) 1 All ER 1054. Both quoted in WORDS AND PHRASES LEGALLY DEFINED Vol. 1, Third Edition - page 113.

It is thus clear that arrest being a restraint on the personal liberty, it is complete when such restraint by an authority, commences [The Law Lexican - P. Ramanatha Aiyar Reprint Edition 1987, page 85]. Whether a son is arrested or not does not depend on the legality of the Act. It is enough if an authority clothed with the power to arrest, actually imposes the restraint by physical act or words. Whether a person is arrested depends on whether he has been deprived of his personal liberty to go where he pleases [The Law Lexicon - T.P. Mukherjee (1989), Page 177-178]. It stands to reason, therefore, that what label the investigating officer affixes to his act of restraint is irrelevant. For the same reason, the record of the time of arrest is not an index to the actual time of arrest. The arrest commences with the restraint placed on the liberty of the accused and not with the time of "arrest" recorded by the Arresting Officers.

The argument that the applicants were not arrested at the mid-night of 19th July, 1989 but were detained for interrogation is untenable. Since the offences under the N.D.P.S. Act are cognisable [Section 37(1) of the N.D.P.S. Act.], the Investigating Officers possess the authority to arrest without warrant. They arrest a suspect or do not arrest at all. The "detention in custody for interrogation known to law. Interrogation is known. A person may be lawfully interrogated. But during such interrogation he is a free man. If he is detained, not allowed to leave the office of the Respondent No. 1 and compelled the eat and sleep there, he is under detention. This restraint is in reality an arrest.

In this case, the applicants were not allowed to leave the Office of the Respondent No. 1 after the mid-night of 19th July, 1989. In the circumstances of this case, the applicants were arrested at the mid-night of 19th July, 1989.

8. The Investigating Officers may lawfully detain a suspect for an offence. But detention in custody for interrogation is not authorised by law. The Investigating Officers may detain for an offence only. In an English Case where the Customs Officers detained a person "for helping with their inquiries", it was held that there was no authority in the Customs Officers to detain a person except for an offence2. The principle that emerges is this : Any restraint on a person's liberty except for an offence is illegal. There is no authority in the Investigating Officers to detain a person for the purpose of interrogation or helping them in the enquiry.

2. R. v. Lemsatef - (1977) 2 A11 ER 835

"If the idea is getting around amongst either customs and excise officers or police officers that they can arrest or detain people, as the case may be, for this particular purpose, the sooner they disabuse themselves of that idea the better". .

On this principle it follows that the detention of the Applicants on the mid-night of 19th July, 1989 was illegal if it was not far having committed an offence under the N.D.P.S. Act. If it was for having committed an offence, the detention was "arrest" and it commenced at the mid-night of 19th July, 1989.

9. My experience of such illegal detention is not confined to this case. In Arvind Mehram Patel and another v. The Intelligence Officer, Narcotics Control Bureau, Bombay (Criminal Appln. No. 2508 of 1989, decided on 9th November, 1989.), the suspects were detained from 1.00 a.m. of 1st October, 1989 to 4.00 p.m. of 4th October, 1989 when they were produced before the Magistrate. During this period, they too were assaulted. In Prajesh Shantilal Vaghani v. The Intelligence Officer, Narcotics Control Bureau, Bombay (Cri. Appln. No. 2631 of 1989 decided on 6-12-1989 (reported in 1990 Cri LJ 903).), and Hamid Umar Patel v. Y.O. Shah, Intelligence Officer, Narcotics Control

@page-CriLJ2206

Bureau Bombay (Cri. Appln. No. 2677 of 1989 decided on 6-12-1989.), the accused were similarly detained from 6th September, 1989 to 10th September, 1989 and were assaulted. They were produced before the Magistrate an 10th September, 1989. The tendency to detain suspects for questioning and manipulate the record to show a later time of arrest is a reprehensible practice of recent origin followed only by the Officers of the Customs Department and the Narcotics Control Bureau. In cases under the N.D.P.S. Act and Customs Act, the prosecution is, no doubt, entitled to rely upon the statements of the accused recorded during investigation. But what the Investigating Officers do, in such cases, is to procure statements, by assault, illegal detention and fear of continued detention. Then they present these documents as "statements". That is not what the law permits them to do. They can certainly rely upon the statements made by the accused voluntarily. But that is different from saying that the statements may be procured by any means and the accused be convicted on such statements. This manipulation and abuse of the legislative sanction for the use of statements of the accused requires to be censured in the strongest terms.

V. EFFECT OF ILLEGAL DETENTION AND ASSAULT :

10. The illegal detention is compounded by physical assault. No doubt, in the case of Afzal, there were no works of injuries such as bruises, haematoma and so on. But the medical evidence is that he had tenderness on six parts of his body. It is difficult to hold, as has been suggested by Mr. Gupte, that the pain and tenderness can be feigned. Doctors cannot make out tenderness without physical examination. Even if a patient feigns pain in the body, it is the response to physical examination that leads to the conclusion of tenderness.

In the case of Ashak, Accused No. 4, there are actual marks of injuries. There is no doubt therefore that Ashak too was assaulted. It is significant that the parts like interscapular region and gluteal region were chosen for the assault in the case of both the Applicants.

11. Mr. Gupte made a feeble suggestion unsubstantiated by facts that the reports of the Chief Medical Officer could be procured. No such accusation is made in the affidavits. Besides, no factual basis for such unjustified accusation is discernible from the circumstances of this case. The Chief Medical Officer a public servant, had no axe to grind by making false reports. In any case, the suggestion is unfounded.

12. The Investigating Officers, no doubt suffer from a disadvantage as such crimes are committed in secrecy and at odd hours of the night. The intelligence on the basis of which the Investigating Officers act may furnish accurate information and the interception of the contraband may have been honest. But the intelligence on the basis of which the Investigating Officers act, has to be transformed into legally valid statements of the accused. There is no substitute for this legal requirement. However, honestly the Intelligence Officers believe that the applicants are guilty of the crime, the subjective conviction of the Investigating Officers about the guilt of the Accused cannot be a substitute or legally admissible evidence. The statements of the applicants procured in their oppressed state of mind resulting from assault, fear, denial of access to the family, should be viewed with great caution. This is especially, so, at the stage of granting bail, for, the prospect of conviction on the basis of such material becomes poor.

13. Mr. Gupte has no explanation about the injuries nor has he any other alternative theory about how the applicants received injuries. Indeed, Mr. Gupte confessed that he was unable to explain how the injuries were caused. In the absence of any explanation, I hold that the injuries were caused by assault by the Investigating Officers.

A look at the affidavit made by S.K. Pandey, Intelligence Officer reveals that the prosecution has made no attempt to meet the case of the Accused. Mr. Pandey does not state that he was present when the applicants were produced before the Magistrate on 21st July, 1989. This is important because Magistrate records that no complaint was made by the applicants against the Investigating Officers and the applicants urge that they did. On the basis of the statement in the Order of the learned Magistrate, Mr. Gupte urged that the evidence of injuries is fabricated and false. According to the accused, the learned Magistrate, who hears application for remand, is burdened with scores of applications which he disposes off in short time. Therefore, they urge that there was no occasion to ask whether the accused had any complaint against the Intelligence Officers. In view of this controversy, it was necessary for the prosecution to assert through the statement of an Officer present in the Court that the learned Magistrate did ask the accused and the accused replied that they had no complaint Mr. Pandey does not say that he was present in the Court. His affidavit is notable not for what it reveals but for what it conceals. There are no statements as to how the statements were recorded, who interpreted them when the applicants were detained and so on. All that he asserts that the accused were not assaulted and that there were no injuries on their body when they were produced before the learned Magistrate. The affidavit is a catalogue of arguments and not of facts.

@page-CriLJ2207

14. Mr. Gupte also urged that at the stage of considering application for bail, it is not open to the Court to examine whether the statements are voluntary or whether the Accused were illegally detained and assaulted. According to him, the statements as they are and the complaint as it is, is the ultimate truth for the purpose of the application for bail. The submission is without any merit. It ignores that grant or refusal to grant bail being a matter of discretion, every fact relevant to the exercise of such discretion has to be considered. However, well intended the action of the prosecution is, if the circumstances that the statements on the basis of which the prosecution seeks to have the accused convicted, are not voluntary, the Court discretion must naturally be influenced by the deplorable practices followed by the Investigating Officers for procuring the statement. The accused who are tried on the basis of such tainted evidence may well be acquitted. But then the time spent in custody does not return to them after their acquittal. It is, therefore necessary to consider whether the prosecution is in possession of credible evidence.

15. To sum up, therefore, the statements of the Applicants were procured while they were in illegal detention and by physically assaulting them. The reports of the Chief Medical Officer reveal that the assault took place while they were in custody of the Investigating Officers. The statements of the Applicants which include confessions, are, therefore, tainted by violence and crime. These statements, though admissible in evidence, are tainted by illegality. They would need a very strong corroboration before they are acceptable. The statement of Hamid Khan, Accused No. 1, implicates the Applicants. But the attention of the Applicants was never drawn to those parts of the statement of Hamid Khan which implicate the Applicants. If the Applicants were confronted with those statements they must have denied the role ascribed to them. If they did deny, the Investigating Officers were in duty bound to record the denials too. If the Applicants were not confronted with the statement of Hamid Khan, or if the Applicants' denials are not recorded, the record of the statements cannot be said to be complete and faithful. Hamid Khan, being a co-accused, cannot corroborate the statements of the Applicants. The statements of the Applicants need to be kept out of view unless they receive corroboration from other sources. There is no such corroboration except from the statement of Hamid Khan who is a co-accused. In these circumstances, it cannot be said that the prosecution is in possession of evidence on the basis of which conviction is reasonably certain.

VI. HIGH COURT'S POWER TO RELEASE UNDER SECTION 439 OF THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE - IS IT LIMITED BY SECTION 37 OF THE N.D.P.S. ACT ?

16. Lastly, Mr. Gupte urged an important but untenable argument, the substance of which is this. Section 37 of the N.D.P.S. Act, inter alia provides that no person accused on an offence punishable for a term of imprisonment of five years or more under the Act shall be released on bail or on his own bond unless "the Court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offence and that he is not likely to commit any offence while on bail". According to Mr. Gupte, this limitation applies not only to the Court trying the offence but also to the High Court and the Supreme Court. "The Court" according to Mr. Gupte, is a generic expression including in its ambit every Court dealing with cases under the N.D.P.S. Act.

@page-CriLJ2208

Therefore, the argument proceeds, notwithstanding the High Court's power to release accused on bail under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the High Court cannot release an accused suspected to have committed an offence under the N.D.P.S. Act unless it is satisfied that there are no reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of such offence.

17. It is necessary to set out briefly the scheme of the constitution and the conception of the Special Court constituted by the N.D.P.S. Act. The word "Court" has not been defined in the Act. The N.D.P.S. Act was amended with effect from 6th January, 1989 by Act 2 of 1989. Section 36 of the N.D.P.S. Act before the amendment provided that, notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, any offence punishable under Sections 26, 27 and 32 of the Act may be tried summarily by the Magistrate of the First Class. Section 37, as it stood before the N.D.P.S. (Amendment) Act, 1988, made every offence under the N.D.P.S. Act cognizable. These Sections were omitted by the N.D.P.S. (Amendment) Act No. 2 of 1989. In their place, Sections 36, 36A, 36B, 36C, 36D and 37 were introduced. Section 36 empowers the Government to constitute Special Courts for trying offences under the Act. The offences under the N.D.P.S. Act are exclusively triable by such Special Courts [Section 36A of the N.D.P.S. Act]. The Special Court shall consist of a single Judge who shall have held the office of the Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge immediately before his appointment as a Special Judge. [Section 36 of the N.D.P.S. Act]. Under Section 36A, all the offences under the N.D.P.S. Act shall be triable only by the Special Court or until the Special Court is constituted, by the Sessions Judge. Since the Special Court is the trial Court, the Accused, upon his arrest, has to be produced before the Magistrate in accordance with Section 167 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Upon such production, the Magistrate is empowered to authorise detention for a period not exceeding 15 days. The Magistrate is then required to forward the accused to the Special Court which possesses the same power which the Magistrate has under Section 167 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Special Court is empowered to take cognizance of a crime under the Act upon perusal of the police report or upon a complaint made by an Officer of the Central Government or State Government authorised in that behalf.

18. Section 36A(3) goes on to lay down that "Nothing contained "in this Section" shall be deemed to affect the special powers of the High Court regarding bail under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973....."3. Clause (b) of Sub-Section (1) of Section 439 empowers the High Court to set aside or modify the condition imposed by Magistrate while releasing an accused on bail. The Special Court is empowered to take cognizance under Section 167 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 36A(3) goes on to clarify that the powers of modification the conditions under Section 439(1)(b) may be exercised by the High Court as if the word "Magistrate" was substituted by the words "Special Court". For the purpose of bail and bail bond, the Special Court shall be deemed to be a Court of Session and the person conducting a prosecution before such Court, a Public Prosecutor. [Section 36-C of the N.D.P.S. Act].

3. Section 36A(3) of the N.D.P.S. Act -

"Nothing contained in this Section shall be deemed to affect the special powers of the High Court regarding bail under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, and the High Court may exercise such powers including the power under clause (b) of Sub-Section (1) of that Section as if the reference to "Magistrate" in that Section included also a reference to a "Special Court" constituted under Section 36".

The question is whether the words "the Court" in Section 37 of the N.D.P.S. Act mean only the Special Court constituted under that Act or includes every other Court including the High Court hearing cases under the N.D.P.S. Act. In order to understand this submission its effect must be borne in mind. The first effect is to impose a limitation on the wide powers of the High Court under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, thereby taking away an established jurisdiction of the High Court. Secondly, in order to read "the Court" to include the High Court and the Supreme Court, the language used by the Parliament will have to be strained.

@page-CriLJ2209

19. In Section 36 as it stood before the commencement of the N.D.P.S. (Amendment) Act, the word "Court" did not occur for the simple reason that the offences under the Act were triable by Magistrates of the First Class. In the place of a Magistrate, the Legislature has created a Special Court. In a sense, the words "the Court" used in Section 36A and Section 37 are substitute for "a Magistrate of the First Class". Thus, the Court which tried the offences before the commencement of Amendment Act No. 2 of 1989, was the Magistrate. No doubt Sections 36 and 37 which empowered the Magistrate to try the cases have been repealed by Act 2 of 1989 and substituted inter alia by Section 37. However, reference to the repealed provision for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of the words that replaced the repealed words is a recognised rule of construction of statutes (Craies on Statute Law, 7th Edn., page 414).

The legislature which employed the words "the Court" in the place of "the Magistrate of the First Class", naturally conceived "the Court" as the substitute for "a Magistrate of the First Class". The substitution of "the Court" for "a Magistrate" establishes a functional identity between the two. It cannot therefore be said that the High Court falls within the meaning of "the Court" which in the historical context must mean the Court taking cognizance of the crime.

20. A comparative analysis of the restricted power of the Magistrate and the wide power of the High Court in the matter of bail furnishes another guiding principle. Section 437 empowers a Court "other than the High Court or Court of Session" to release the Accused on bail. In other words, Section 437 does not apply to the High Court or the Court of Session. Clauses (i) and (ii) of Sub-Section (1) of Section 437 impose restrictions on the power of the Magistrate to release the accused on bail. Section 437(1) precludes the Magistrate from releasing an accused on bail (i) "if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life" or (ii) "such person has been previously convicted of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for seven years or more....." There are no such limitations on the power of the High Court or the Court of Session under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Therefore, the jurisdiction of the High Court or the Court of Session in the matter of granting bail in cognizable offences is unfettered and is not limited by the nature of the offence or the sentence prescribed therefor, The limitation imposed on "the Court" by Section 37(1)(ii) is that before releasing a person on bail, the Court must be satisfied that "there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is not guilty of such offence". An identical restriction is found in Section 37(1)(i) of the Code of Criminal Procedure which limits the Magistrate's power to release on bail so that he shall not release the accused if "there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life". The Parliament which substituted the Special Court for the Magistrate as the Court of trial, was aware of this distinction and the unfettered authority of the High Court and the Court of Session to release accused on bail. The Parliament which created the Special Court conceived it as the Court of trial subject to the limitations on the power to grant bail which are similar to the restrictions on the Magistrate's power under Section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Thus the Special Court and the Magistrate's Court have an identity distinct from that of the High Court. Therefore the Parliament could not have intended to equate the Court which is subject to restrictions similar to those in Section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure with the High Court whose power to release on bail is not so restricted.

21. Against the background of these provisions, consider certain rules of construction. The Parliament was aware of the distinction between the powers of the High Court and the trial Court. As already stated, Section 36A(3) expressly excludes the High Court from the operation of that Section "regarding bail under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1973". Since the Legislature was aware of the High Court's special power to grant bail, it is reasonable to hold that the Parliament which employed the words "the Court" designedly omitted the use of the words "the High Court or the Supreme Court". In order to know what a statute does mean, it is one important step to know what it does not mean; and if it be quite clear that there is something which it does not mean, then that which is suggested or supposed to be what it does mean must be in harmony and consistent with what it is clear that it does not mean (Craies on Statute Law, 7th Edition, page 108). It follows that what a statute forbids must be consistent with what it permits. Thus, if Section 37 forbids the High Court from granting bail except on the conditions stipulated therein, such prohibition must be consistent with the other provisions of the N.D.P.S. Act and the Code of Criminal Procedure.

@page-CriLJ2210

The Parliament has used the words "High Court" in Section 36 of the N.D.P.S. Act whereunder the Special Court is constituted with the concurrence of the Chief Justice of the High Court. Section 36B of the Act invests the High Court with the Appellate and Revisional jurisdiction over the Special Court. The Parliament, aware of the special jurisdiction of the High Court, has designedly refrained from employing the words "High Court", or "Supreme Court" in Section 37. Therefore, the legislative intent clearly is to exclude the High Court from the ambit of "the Court" in Section 37 of the Act. The argument that "the Court" referred to in Section 37 of the Act, includes the High Court does not answer the legislative design in omitting the use of the words "High Court" in Section 37 of the N.D.P.S. Act.

22. Acceptance of the argument that the High Court's power to grant bail is limited by the circumstances set out in Section 37(1)(b) is to deprive the High Court of its jurisdiction established for over a century. A distinct and unequivocal enactment is required for the purpose of either adding to or taking from the jurisdiction of a superior Court of law (Craies on Statute Law, 7th Edn., page 122). A strong leaning exists against construing a statute so as to oust or restrict the jurisdiction of the superior Courts (Mexwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edition, page 153). The jurisdiction of Superior Courts is not taken away except by express words or necessary implication (Craies on Statute Law, 7th Edition, page 123). It appears impossible to me to suppose that the Parliament can have intended under an enactment like this by the general words "the Court" to effect so material change in the jurisdiction of the High Court exercised for over a century. The rational of this rule of construction rests upon the reluctance of the Parliament to disturb the established state of law or to deny the subjects access to the seat of justice. Such a conclusion cannot be drawn in the absence of clear words.

23. There is another feature of this enactment which negatives the argument advanced by Mr. Gupte.

Section 37(2) goes on to explain that the two limits in S.37(1)(b) on the powers of "the Court" are "in addition to the limitations under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 .... on granting of bail". Now, therefore, the Parliament had in mind the limitations on the power to grant bail under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. Naturally, therefore, it had in its contemplation those Courts whose' authority under the Code of Criminal Procedure is subject to limitations in regard to the grant of bail. When the Parliament thought of limitations under the Criminal Procedure Code it must be taken that the Parliament knew that there was only one Court whose authority to release accused on bail was fettered by limitations. It is the Magistrate's authority under Section 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that is subject to limitations and not the High Court's. This is simple because the Courts referred to in Section 439 do not suffer from any limitations on their power to release the accused on bail. In this context, it should be remembered that the N.D.P.S. Act by its amendment in 1989 has substituted the Special Court as the Court of Remand and the Court taking cognizance which power is, under the Code of Criminal Procedure exercised by the Magistrate of the First Class. It is clear to me, therefore, that Sections 37(1) and 37(2) refer to the Court which suffers from limitations on their power to release on bail, since the High Court's power under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not subject to any limitations, the words "the Court" do not include the High Court.

@page-CriLJ2211

