been made with the jail authorities and the Primary Health Centre at Keshori but that special Team could not find any incriminating material to substantiate the claim of the petitioner. To sum it up, it has given clean chit to the State.

(12.) IT is also contended that the respondent No. 4 Shri A. B. Chavan was not working during the year 1990 in Police Station Arjuni (Mor) and similarly respondent No. 5 named as Shri Suryawanshi who was also not working at the relevant time in the police station Chichgarh. Therefore, according to them, these allegations against the respondents are not well founded. Further it has been stated that the record shows that the petitioner was first time arrested by respondent No. 4 in the year 1993 when she had confessed of having involved in naxal activities and other accused persons who were arrested along with the petitioner also corroborated that petitioner was involved in the naxal activities and petitioner along with other accused were produced before the Magistrate from time to time.

(13.) THE Respondent/state admits that at the relevant time the petitioner was below the age of 18 years when she was shown arrested in the year 1993, but, when she was produced before the Magistrate and remand was obtained by respondent No. 4 Shri A. B. Chavan, the record does not show that the petitioner had raised any objection for not producing her before the Juvenile Court. It is only when the charge-sheet came to be filed in Crime No. 82/90 before the juvenile Court, it was noticed that the petitioner was below the age of 18 years and it is on 24-2-1996 by the order of Special Court designated under TAD A (P)Act, 1987 petitioner came to be released on bail. It is admitted that the petitioner was also co-accused in Crime Nos. 100/92 and 44/92 and charge-sheet in these two cases were subsequently filed before the Juvenile Court on 30-5-1996 against the accused. It is not disputed that the respondent No. 4 was Investigating officer in all these three cases. It is contended that the fact that the petitioner was juvenile was not noticed by the Magistrate before whom the petitioner was produced. It has been brought on record that the respondent No. 4 Shri A. B. Chavan has expired on 10-2-2004, as he met with an accident and as such no further inquiry could be made with said Shri Chavan.

(14.) ON facts, it is the contention of the Respondent/state that the petitioner was involved in Naxal activities and she was arrested only in 1993 and not in 1990. Further the claim of the petitioner that her father has died, is also not true and he is residing at Sukli Ramgad, Taluka Deori. It has been specifically denied on the basis of inquiry conducted by the Special Team that the petitioner was arrested and brought to Police Station Arjuni (Mor) in 1990. The Special Team has also conducted inquiry, recorded the statement of Police Patil, Sarpanch and other villagers, however, did not reveal that petitioner was brought to the police station in the mid-night and she was tied with the tree as alleged and, therefore, the allegations made by the petitioner are not borne out during inquiry. It is specifically denied that the petitioner was ill treated by the police. It has been further contended that the Special Team has verified that lock-up register and did not discover that the petitioner along with four other girls were kept in police lock-up during that period and as such question of ill-treatment to the petitioner does not arise. The prosecution of the petitioner in three cases i. e. Crime Nos. 100/92, 44/92 and 82/90, according to the Respondent/state, is sufficient to show that the petitioner was involved in various serious offences, and that as and when it came to the notice of the authorities that the petitioner was below the age of 18 years i. e. at the time of filing charge-sheet her case was transferred to Juvenile court at Bhandara. The State has shown ignorance about the efforts made on the part of Tejaswi Adiwasi Mahila Mandal and National Human Rights commission but it has admitted that there was one application dated 21-5-1996 found on record which was received from the said Mahila Mandal after the release of the petitioner on 24-2-1996. It has been submitted that on earlier occasion two writ petitions were filed in this Court i. e. Writ Petition No. 244 of 1993 and 59 of 1994 but same came to be dismissed by this Court by order dated 22-11-1993 and 18-1-1996 respectively but the respondent/state has not placed on record any such order in support of this contention.

(15.) BY way of rejoinder, the mother of the petitioner Sayatrabai w/o sakharam Taram has filed an affidavit explaining the position insofar as her husband Sakharam Taram is concerned, wherein she does not claim that he has died but has stated that he has abandoned her and the petitioner when she was three years' old. The mother supports the claim of the petitioner made in the petition that she was picked up forcefully in between the year 1991-92 by Police authorities and was never informed of the reason of her arrest and at that time she was studying in 5th standard in the school at Tukum Saygaon, Tq. Morgaon (Arjuni) and since then the petitioner remained absent from School and compelled to show her absence due to illness for about two months. The petitioner has also filed her reply on affidavit denying all the allegations and submitted that she has claimed that her father is dead because since the time she was 3 to 4 years old her father had abandoned her, her mother and, therefore, she was always told that her father is dead and petitioner is and was never aware about her father.

(16.) IN order to appreciate the case of the petitioner, we have requisitioned the original record and proceedings from the Juvenile Court, Bhandara whereby petitioner was tried in three cases and acquitted for want of evidence of serious charges under the Indian Penal Code, TADA (P) Act and Arms Act. Xerox copies of the communication sent by Tejaswi Adivasi Mahila Mandal dated 19-2-1996 to the President, Maharashtra State Women's Commission, copy of which was also forwarded to the Minister, Tribal Development, acknowledged on 12-3-1996 and also letter dated 12-3-1996 written by the then Minister for Tribal development, Government of Maharashtra, addressed to the Hon'ble Deputy chief Minister, Home Department are placed on record and the internal correspondence amongst police authorities, so also the Birth Certificate of the petitioner issued by the Head Master, showing that the petitioner was admitted in the school on 1-9-1983 and as per the school record her date of birth is 15-4-1977. What we find from the facts is that - admittedly the petitioner was not only a minor but a juvenile even at the time she was officially shown as arrested by the police for the first time on 31-1-1993 in Crime No. 100/92 and subsequently implicated in two more cases i. e. Crime No. 44/92 and Crime No. 82/90. In all these cases, in addition to the offence under the I. P. C. Act and the Arms Act, the petitioner has also been charged for having committed offence under sections 3 and 4 of the TADA (P) Act. It is pertinent to note that first case in which the petitioner came to be arrested, the offence alleged to have been committed on 15-10-1990 and for which the petitioner was charged by the Juvenile Court that -on 15-10-1990 at about 6. 30 to 13 hrs. at village Yarandi Talao in furtherance of common intention with them committed murder of deceased Moreshwar, the alleged informant to police, and further you made the activities against State being members of people war groups Naxalite Organisation and further you were possessing one fire arm in your possession with intention to commit offence as such, and committed offences under sections 302, 107, 109, 216 (a), 121 and 122 read with 34 of the I. P. C. and offences under section 3 read with 25 of Arms Act and under sections 3 and 4 of the TADA (P) Act.

(17.) THE fact that the petitioner was charged for having committed offence on 15-10-1990, which was registered by P. S. O. Morgaon (Arjuni) substantially corroborates the contention of the petitioner that she was picked up by the Police in the year 1990 itself and was in their illegal detention and suffered torture in order to get information about Naxalites. The record and proceedings of the juvenile Court in this case i. e. JCC No. 40 of 1996 and the evidence recorded by the Juvenile Court as well as the judgment clearly indicates that the petitioner was required to be acquitted as it was a case of no evidence and similar was the fact in respect of other two cases in which the petitioner has been prosecuted.

(18.) IN our considered opinion, the contentions of the petitioner that she was arrested, illegally detained and tortured and thereafter falsely implicated in these three cases stand well corroborated and there is no reason to disbelieve her on this count.

(19.) THE very fact that the Special Team constituted by the State after petitioner approached this Court to inquire into her allegations, could not lay hands on any record. It also goes to show that arrest and detention of the petitioner being illegal, question of making any record of the same in the concerned Police station would not arise, otherwise it would have been obligatory for the police to have produced the petitioner before Magistrate within 24 hours of her arrest. One can well appreciate the position and status of the petitioner, who belongs to very poor family and being a tribal (Gond). It was only her mother to stand by her side without having any access to justice. No one is expected to come forward in support of the petitioner and therefore, merely the Special Team has verified the claim of the petitioner by examining the Sarpanch, Police Patil and villagers does not in any manner dislodge the petitioner's claim. Further the fact that the petitioner was tried and acquitted for want of evidence in three cases and probably last acquittal was by judgment and order of the Juvenile Court in JCC No. 40 of 1996 delivered on 15-3-2002, one can understand that the petitioner was under constant pressure and fear of being prosecuted of serious offences in spite of the fact that she was found to be innocent and there was no evidence against her. The respondent/state have put up a case before this Court that petitioner came to be arrested, as she herself confessed of her complicity in these cases and being associated with Naxalites, which was confirmed by the confessions given by the co-accused arrested in the case. The past experience goes to indicate that the petitioner could not have gathered courage to approach any court of law and it is after her last acquittal on 15-3-2002, in the year 2004 she has knocked the doors of this Court to seek action against the police Officials of the Respondent/state, who were responsible for arrest, illegal detention and custodial torture.

(20.) THE learned counsel appearing for the petitioner has placed reliance for the purpose of seeking compensation against the State on the two decisions of this Court. The first being rendered in the case of Rajeev Shankarlal Parmar and another vs. Officer-in-Charge, Police Station Malad, Mumbai and others, 2003 (5) Mh. LJ. 820 and after considering the case Their Lordships found that the petitioner Rajeev who was a juvenile was arrested and detained in prison by the state and found that he was entitled for compensation. The relevant part of the reported judgment in Rajeev's case aptly sums up the case for which the petitioner has knocked the doors of this Court and for the said purpose we are reproducing para Nos. 15 to 21 of the said Judgment as under :-

15. The learned counsel for the petitioners in this connection referred to two decisions of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Rudal Sah vs. State of bihar, AIR 1983 SC 1086 and Bhim Singh vs. State J. and K. , AIR 1986 sc 494. She also relied upon a decision of the Division Bench of this court (Aurangabad Bench) in Baban Khandu Rajput vs. State of maharashtra and others, 2002 ALL MR (Cri) 1373. In Baban Khandu rajput, though the person was kept in illegal custody only for a period of two and half days, the Court awarded an amount of Rs. 10,0007- to the petitioner therein which was ordered to be paid by the State of maharashtra. It was, therefore, submitted that in the facts and circumstances, an amount of Rs. 10,0007- per month may be awarded by way of compensation.

16. Considering the facts and circumstances, however, that an offence had been registered against the first petitioner and as stated by the complainant, the accused was of 22 years age, who alleged to have committed offence punishable under sections 302 and 307 of the Indian penal Code, and according to the Police Officer, the accused himself had stated his age to be 20 years at the time of arrest (which was disputed by the accused) coupled with the fact that the order dated 7th March, 2003 could not be implemented in view of non-availability of police escort, in our considered opinion, the action cannot be termed mala fide or malicious.

17. In the facts and circumstances, therefore, ends of justice would be met, if the respondent-State is ordered to pay to petitioner No. 1 an amount of compensation of Rs. 15,000/- (Rupees Fifteen thousand only). Let such amount be paid within a period of three months from today. Order accordingly.

18. Regarding general guidelines, our attention was invited by the learned counsel to three decisions referred to above i. e. Sheela Barse, gopinath Ghosh and Bhola Bhagat.

19. In Sheela Barse, the Apex Court stated : "if a child is a national asset, it is the duty of the State to look after the child with a view to ensuring full development of its personality. That is why all the statutes dealing with children provide that a child shall not be kept in jail. Even apart from this statutory prescription, it is elementary that a jail is hardly a place where a child should be kept. There can be no doubt that incarceration in jail would have the effect of dwarfing the development of the child, exposing him to beneful influences, coarsening his conscience and alienating him from the society. It is a matter of regret that despite statutory provisions and frequent exhortations by social scientists, there are still large number of children in different jails in the country as is now evident from the reports of the survey made by the District Judges pursuant to our order dated 15th April, 1986. Even where children are accused of offences, they must not be kept in jails. It is no answer on the part of the State to say that it has not got enough number of remand homes or observation homes or other places where children can be kept and that is why they are lodged in jails. It is also no answer on the part of the State to urge that the ward in which the other prisoners are detained. It is the atmosphere of the jail which has a highly injurious effect on the mind of the child, estranging him from the society and breeding in him aversion bordering on hatred against a system which keeps him in jail. We would therefore like once again to impress upon the State Governments that they must set up necessary remand homes and observation homes where children accused of an offence can be lodged pending investigation and trial. On no account should the children be kept in jail and if a state Government has not got sufficient accommodation in its remand homes or observation homes, the children should be released on bail instead of being subjected to incarceration in jail. The problem of detention of children accused of an offence would become much more easy of solution if the investigation by the police and the trial by the Magistrate could not expedited. The report of survey made by District Judges show that in some places children have been in jail for quite long periods. We fail to see why investigation into offences alleged to have been committed by children cannot be completed quickly and equally why can the trial not take place within a reasonable time after the filing of the charge-sheet. Really speaking, the trial of children must take place in the Juvenile Courts and not in the regular criminal Courts. There are special provisions enacted in various statutes relating to children providing for trial by Juvenile Courts in accordance with a special procedure intended to safeguard the interest and welfare of children, but, we find that in many of the States there are no juvenile Courts functioning at all and even where there are juvenile courts, they are nothing but a replica of the ordinary criminal courts, only the label being changed. The same Magistrate who sits in the ordinary criminal Court goes and sits in the Juvenile Court and mechanically tries cases against children. It is absolutely essential, and this is something which we wish to impress upon the state Governments with all the earnestness at our command, that they must set up Juvenile Courts, one in each district, and there must be a special cadre of Magistrates who must be suitably trained for dealing with cases against children. They may also do other criminal work, if the work of the Juvenile Court is not sufficient to engage them fully, but they must have proper and adequate training for dealing with cases against Juveniles, because these cases require a different type of procedure and qualitatively a different kind of approach. We would also direct that where a complaint is filed or First information Report is lodged against a child below the age of 16 years for an offence punishable with imprisonment of not more than 7 years, the investigation shall be completed within a period of three months from the date of filing of the complaint or lodging of the First Information Report and if the investigation is not completed within this time, the case against the child must be treated as closed. If within three months, the charge-sheet is filed against the child in case of an offence punishable with imprisonment of not more than 7 years, the case must be tried and disposed of within a further period of 6 months at the outside and this period should be inclusive of the time taken up in committal proceedings, if any. We have already held in Hussainara Khatoon vs. Home Secretary, State of Bihar, (1979) 3 SCR 169 : (AIR 1979 sc 1360) that the right to speedy trial is a fundamental right implicit in Art. 21 of the Constitution. If an accused is not tried speedily and his case remained pending before the Magistrate or the sessions Court for an unreasonable length of time. It is clear that his fundamental right to speedy trial would be violated unless, of course, the trial is held upon account of some interim order passed by a superior Court or the accused is responsible for the delay in the trial of the case. The consequence of violation of the fundamental right to speedy trial would be that the prosecution itself would be liable to be quashed on the ground that it is in breach of the fundamental right. One of the primary reasons why trial of criminal cases is delayed in the Courts of Magistrates and Additional sessions Judges is the total inadequacy of judge-strength and lack of satisfactory working conditions for Magistrate and Additional sessions Judges. There are Courts of Magistrates and Additional sessions Judges where the workload is so heavy that it is just not possible to cope with the workload, unless there is increase in the strength of Magistrates and Additional Sessions Judges. There are instances where appointments of Magistrates and Additional sessions Judges are held up for years and the Courts have to work with depleted strength and this affects speedy trial of criminal cases. The Magistrates and Additional Sessions Judges are often not provided adequate staff and other facilities which would help improve their disposal of cases. We are, therefore, firmly of the view that every State Government must take necessary measures for the purpose of setting up adequate number of Courts, appointing requisite number of Judge and providing them the necessary facilities. It is also necessary to set up an Institute or Academy for training of Judicial Officers so that their efficiency may be improved and they may be able to regulate and control the flow of cases in their respective courts. The problem of arrears of criminal cases in the Courts of Magistrates and Additional Sessions Judges has assumed rather disturbing proportions and it is a matter of grave urgency to which no State Government can afford to be oblivious. But, here, we are not concerned with the question of speedy trial for an accused who is not a child below the age of 16 years. That is a question which may have to be considered in some other case where this Court may be called upon to examine as to what is reasonable length of time for a trial beyond which the Court would regard the right to speedy trial as violated. So far as a child-accused of an offence punishable with imprisonment of not more than 7 years is concerned, we would regard a period of three months from the date of filing of the complaint or lodging of the First information Report as the maximum time permissible for investigation and a period of 6 months from the filing of the charge-sheet as a reasonable period within which the trial of the child must be completed. If that is not done, the prosecution against the child would be liable to be quashed. We would direct every State government to give effect to this principle or norm laid down by us insofar as any future cases are concerned, but so far as concerns pending cases relating to offences punishable with imprisonment of not more than 7 years, we would direct every State Government to complete the investigation within a period of 3 months from today if the investigation has not already resulted in filing of charge-sheet and if a charge-sheet has been filed, the trial shall be completed within a period of 6 months from today and if it is not, the prosecution shall be quashed. We have by our order dated 5th August, 1986 called upon the state Governments to bring into force and to implement vigorously the provisions of the Childrens Acts enacted in the various States. But we would suggest that instead of each State having its own childrens Act different in procedure and content from the Childrens act in other States, it would be desirable if the Central Government initiates Parliamentary Legislation on the subject, so that there is complete uniformity in regard to the various provisions relating to children in the entire territory of the country. The Childrens Act which may be enacted by Parliament should contain not only provisions for investigation and trial of offences against children below the age of 16 years but should also contain mandatory provisions for ensuring social, economic and psychological rehabilitation of the children who were either accused of offences or are abandoned or destitute or lost. Moreover, it is not enough merely to have legislation on the subject, but it is equally, if not more, important to ensure that such legislation is implemented in all earnestness and mere lip sympathy is not paid to such legislation and justification for non-implementation is not pleaded on ground of lack of finances on the part of the State. The greatest recompense which the State can get for expenditure on children is the building up of a powerful human resource ready to take its place in the forward march of the nation. "

20. In Gopinath, the Court said : "before we part with this judgment, we must take notice of a developing situation in recent months in this Court that the contention about age of a convict and claiming the benefit of the relevant provisions of the Act dealing with Juvenile delinquents prevalent in various State is raised for the first time in this Court and this Court is required to start the inquiry afresh. Ordinarily this court would be reluctant to entertain a contention based on factual averments raised for the First time before it. However, the Court is equally reluctant to ignore, overlook or nullify the beneficial provisions of very socially progressive statute by taking shield behind the technicality of the contention being raised for the first time in this Court. A way has, therefore, to be found from this situation not conducive to speedy disposal of cases and yet giving effect to the letter and the spirit of such socially beneficial legislation. We are of the opinion that whenever a case is brought before the Magistrate and the accused appears to be aged 21 years or below before proceeding with the trial or undertaking an inquiry, an inquiry must be made about the age of the accused on the date of the occurrence. This ought to be more so where Special Acts dealing with Juvenile delinquent are in force. If necessary, the magistrate may refer the accused to the Medical Board or the Civil surgeon, as the case may be, for obtaining creditworthy evidence about age. The Magistrate may as well call upon accused also to lead evidence about his age. Thereafter, the learned Magistrate may proceed in accordance with law. This procedure, if properly followed would avoid a journey up to the Apex Court and the return journey to the grass-root Court. If necessary and found expedient, the High Court may on its administrative side issue necessary instructions to cope with the situation herein indicated. "

21. In Bhola Bhagat, referring to Gopinath Ghosh and reiterating the principle laid down therein, the Court issued the following directions :

"before parting with this judgment, we would like to reemphasis that when a plea is raised on behalf of an accused that he was a "child" within the meaning of the definition of the expression under the Act, it becomes obligatory for the Court, in case it entertains any doubt about the age as claimed by the accused, to hold an inquiry itself for determination of the question of age of the accused or cause an enquiry to be held and seek a report regarding the same, if necessary, by asking the parties to lead evidence in that regard. Keeping in view the beneficial nature of the socially-oriented legislation, it is an obligation of the Court where such a plea is raised to examine that plea with care and it cannot fold its hands and without returning a positive finding regarding that plea, deny the benefit of the provisions to an accused. The Court must hold an enquiry and return a finding regarding the age, one way or the other. We expect the High Courts and subordinate Courts to deal with such cases with more sensitivity, as otherwise the object of the acts would be frustrated and the effort of the legislature to reform the delinquent child and reclaim him as a useful member of the society would be frustrated. The High Courts may issue administrative directions to the subordinate Courts that whenever such a plea is raised before them and they entertain any reasonable doubt about the correctness of the plan, they must as a rule, conduct an inquiry by giving opportunity to the parties to establish their respective claims and return a finding regarding the age of the accused concerned and then deal with the case in the manner provided by law. "

Let the administrative side of the High Court take appropriate action in accordance with law in the light of the observations made and directions issued by the Hon'ble Supreme Court.

(21.) ANOTHER decision on which reliance is placed for the purpose of claiming compensation for illegal detention of juvenile has been rendered in the case of Salim Ikramuddin Ansari and another vs. Officer-in-charge, Borivali police Station, Mumbai and others, 2004 (4) Mh. LJ. 725 wherein Their lordships after dealing with the provisions of the Juvenile Justice Act found that the petitioner was wrongfully confined behind the bar for almost three years because of sheer negligence, indifference and inhuman attitude adopted by the authorities and awarded compensation of Rs. 1 lakh on consideration of the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case.

(22.) FROM the facts which have surfaced before the court from the Record and Proceedings of the three cases in which petitioner was tried before the juvenile Court at Bhandara that too for serious offences under I. P. C. and TADA (P) Act, 1987. We have no hesitation to draw the conclusion that the police officers involved in the investigation of these cases were bound to come across the fact that the petitioner at the time of commission of offences was of 13 years of age as she was taking education in a school which had record of her date of birth and it was obligatory on their part to bring it to the notice of the Magistrate before whom she was produced for the first time. On the other hand, they misrepresented her age as 18 and above and sought her remand, now the State cannot blame the petitioner or the concerned Magistrate for this serious lapse for which the State will have to compensate the petitioner.

(23.) WE have no hesitation to arrive at a conclusion that this is the case where the State has acted in violation of Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution of india and Juvenile Act of 1986 and Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of children) Act, 2000 and its officials have committed offences punishable under section 3, sub-section (2) (i) (ii) and (vii) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989 and for that the State is bound to compensate the victim as provided under Rule 12 (4) of the Scheduled Castes and the Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Rules, 1995 and particularly in respect of Item No. 18 in the serial number of the schedule, which provides for full compensation on account of damages or loss or harm sustained in victimization at the hands of a public servant. Here, we would like to add-as the original respondent No. 4 having expired, though the State is not able to proceed against him, it is to prosecute all concerned police officers who were part of the investigation team for the offence under section 3 (2) (vii) of the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities)

Act, 1989 but the State overlooked violation of these provisions of the said Act and it has failed to prevent atrocities suffered by the petitioner, at the hands of its officials.

(24.) WE have plethora of cases to support our findings, which we would like to refer the first being the case of Joginder Kumar vs. State of U. P. and others, (1994) 4 SCC 260 in which the Hon'ble Supreme Court was required to make the following observations.

"the law of arrest is one of the balancing individual rights, liberties and privileges, on the one hand, and individual duties, obligations and responsibilities on the other, of weighing and balancing the rights, liberties and privileges of the single individual and those of individual collectively; of simply deciding what is wanted and where to put the weight and the emphasis; of deciding which comes first the criminal or society; the law violator or the law abider; of meeting the challenge which Mr. Justice Cardozo so forthrightly met when he wrestled with a similar task of balancing individual rights against society's rights and wisely held that the exclusion rule was bad law that society came first and that criminal should not go free because the constable blundered. "

"no arrest can be made because it is lawful for the Police Officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing, the justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The Police Officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self-esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of the protection of constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. "

"the next case which requires to be referred is that of D. K. Basu vs. State of West Bengal, (1997) 1 SCC 416 wherein the Supreme Court has observed -"custodial torture" is a naked violation of human dignity and degradation which destroys, to a very large extent, the individual personality. It is a calculated assault on human dignity and whenever the human dignity is wounded, civilization takes a step backward the flag of humanity must on each such occasion fly half mast. "

a crime suspect must be interrogated indeed subjected to sustained and scientific interrogation - determined in accordance with the provisions of law. He cannot however be tortured or subjected to third degree methods or eliminated with a view to elicit information, extract confession or derive knowledge about his accomplices, weapons etc. Challenge to terrorism must be met with innovative ideas and approach. State terrorism is no answer to combat terrorism. State terrorism would only provide legitimacy to 'terrorism'. That would be bad for the State, the community and above all for the rule of law. The state must therefore ensure that various agencies deployed by it for combating terrorism act within the bounds of law and not become law unto themselves. That the terrorist has violated human rights of innocent citizens may render him liable to punishment but it cannot justify the violation of human rights except in the manner permitted by law. And the court was required to issue the following directions -

1. The police personnel carrying out the arrest and handling the interrogation of the arrestee should bear accurate, visible and clear identification and name tags with their designations. The particulars of all such police personnel who handle interrogation of the arrestee must be recorded in a register.

2. That the police officer carrying out the arrest of the arrestee shall prepare a memo of arrest at the time of arrest and such memo shall be attested by at least one witness, who may either be a member of the family of the arrestee or a respectable person of the locality from where the arrest is made. It shall also be countersigned by the arrestee and shall contain the time and date of arrest.

3. A person who has been arrested or detained and is being held in custody in a police station or interrogation Centre or other lock-up, shall be entitled to have one friend or relative or other person known to him or having interest in his welfare being informed, as soon as practicable, that he has been arrested and is being detained at the particular place, unless the attesting witness of the memo of arrest is himself such a friend or a relative of the arrestee.
4. The time, place of arrest and venue of custody of an arrestee must be notified by the police where the next friend or relative of the arrestee lives outside the district or town through the Legal Aid Organisation in the District and the Police Station of the area concerned telegraphically within a period of 8 to 12 hours after the arrest.
5. The person arrested must be made aware of this right to have someone informed of his arrest or detention as soon as he is put under arrest or is detained.
6. An entry must be made in the diary at the place of detention regarding the arrest of the person which shall also disclose the name of the next friend of the person who has been informed of the arrest and the names and particulars of the police officials in whose custody the arrestee is.
7. The arrestee should, where he so requests be also examined at the time of his arrest and major and minor injuries, if any present on his/her body, must be recorded at that time. The "inspection Memo" must be signed both by the arrestee and the police officer effecting the arrest and its copy provided to the arrestee. "
8. The arrestee should be subjected to medical examination by a trained doctor every 48 hours during his detention in custody by a doctor on the panel of approved doctors appointed by Director, Health Services of the state or Union Territory concerned. Director, Health Services should prepare such a panel for all tehsils and districts as well.
9. Copies of all the documents including the memo of arrest, referred to above should be sent to the Illaqa Magistrate for his record.
10. The arrestee may be permitted to meet his lawyer during interrogation, though not throughout the interrogation.
11. A police control room should be provided at all district and State headquarters, where information regarding the arrest and the place of custody of the arrestee shall be communicated by the officer causing the arrest, within 12 hours of effecting the arrest and at the police control room it should be displayed on a conspicuous notice board. "
All these directions are inherent in Article 22 of the Constitution of India.
(25.) IN the case of Kishor Singh Ravinder Dev vs. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1981 SC 625 in reference to the 'third degree' method is concerned about police atrocities the Supreme Court has examined the matter in detail and deprecated use of 'third degree' method by the police and observed as under :-no police life style which relies more on fists than on wits, on torture more than culture can control crime because means boomerang on ends and refuel the vice which it seeks to extinguish. Secondly the state must re-educate the constabulary out of their sadistic arts and inculcate a respect for the human person - a process, which must begin by example than by precept if the lower rungs are really to emulate. Thirdly if any policemen are found to have misconducted themselves no sense of police solidarity or inservice comity should induce the authorities to hide the crime. Condign action, quickly taken is surer guarantee of community credence than bruting about that "all is well with the police and their critics are always in the wrong. " Nothing is more cowardly and unconscionable that a person in police custody being beaten up and nothing inflicts a deeper wound on our constitutional culture than a State official running berserk regardless of human rights.

(26.) WHAT one can gather from the aforementioned cases is that lack of accountability of the police force also adds to the custodial violence. The Police is policed mostly by themselves and hence police personnel committing excesses on citizens succeed by and large, in getting away scot free. The contention of the respondent/state in this case that the respondent Nos. 4 and 5 were not posted at the relevant police stations within which jurisdiction the petitioner/victim was residing belies the case of the petitioner, cannot be accepted or digested. The record and proceedings of three cases in which the petitioner came to be falsely implicated and ultimately acquitted on the ground of no evidence were all investigated by original respondents Nos. 4 and 5. We may go a step further and observe that such serious offences alleged to have been committed by Naxalites attracting a draconian law like TADA (P) Act, 1987 must have been monitored by Senior Officials of the police and without their tacit consent police could not have arrested and kept in illegal detention a poor helpless tribal girl of 13 years age who was continuously tortured in most inhuman manner and, therefore, the state rather than coming before the court and offering to punish all those Officers who were concerned with the investigation, sanction and prosecution of the petitioner as well as other co-accused, after conducting fair inquiry into the matter, has tried to cover up their misdeeds and therefore, they are bound to compensate the petitioner/victim. The law relating to compensation is now well settled by series of decisions of the Supreme Court. To mention a few first in the line being that of Rudul Sah vs. State of Bihar and another, AIR 1983 SC 1086 wherein a Supreme Court clearly held that the State is liable to pay compensation to the victim and may recover the same from its officers, who are responsible for the misdeeds. The matter was further dealt with by the Supreme Court in the case of Sebastian Hongray vs. Union of India and others, AIR 1984 SC 571, Bhim singh vs. State of J and K and others, AIR 1986 SC 494, Saheli vs. Commissioner of Police Delhi and others, AIR 1990 SC 513. The principles laid down by the supreme Court in all these cases again came for its consideration in the celebrated case of Smt. Nilabati Behera @ Lalita Behera (through the Supreme court Legal Aid Committee) vs. The State of Orissa and others, JT 1993 (2) SC 503. Therefore, there can be no doubt that the law is well settled that the State will have to compensate the victims of atrocities committed by its officials particularly the police in flagrant violation of fundamental rights and human rights of the victim.

(27.) NOW, the only question which remains to be considered is how much compensation should be granted to the petitioner. The victim had been arrested and illegally detained right from the year 1990 when she was of a tender age of 13 years suffered inhumane torture though the petitioner has not in so many words explained that in what manner she was tortured to show that it was an insult to womanhood but one can understand the agony the victim might have suffered in police custody and, therefore, taking all these facts and circumstances into consideration in our opinion a sum of Rs. 5,00,000/- (Rs. five Lakhs) would be reasonable compensation to which the petitioner is entitled.

(28.) THEREFORE, we order the Respondent/state to pay a sum of Rs. 5,00,000/- (Rs. Five lakhs) to the petitioner within a period of four weeks from the date of pronouncement of the judgment along with costs of the petition which we quantify at Rs. 10,000/ -. We further order and direct the State to conduct a thorough and impartial inquiry by setting up Special Investigating Team of the state C. I. D. headed by I. P. S. Officer not below the rank of D. I. G. and it should consist of a lady Police Officer not below the rank of Superintendent of Police and inquiry should be in the direction of the arrest and detention of the petitioner and her prosecution in the three cases. We, by way of abundant caution, would like to observe that none of the Police Officials associated with the inquiry should be in any manner connected with the investigation of the three cases in which the petitioner was tried.

(29.) THIS exercise has to be undertaken by the State in order to identify police Officers, who were at the relevant time associated with the investigation and prosecution of all accused persons in these three cases where the petitioner was one of the co-accused and also those Senior Officers who have monitored the investigation of these three cases and granted sanction to prosecute the petitioner/victim as well as co-accused and also examine material collected against the petitioner showing her complicity in the crime so that the State can fix responsibility on erring officers and after conducting necessary inquiry if they are found guilty of having committed any offence under any penal provisions, prosecute them for the same and also recover the amount of compensation directed to be paid to the victim. We will highly appreciate it an Action Taken report is submitted to this Court within a period of six months from the date of judgment and order, and for this limited purpose the petition will remain pending on the file of this Court.

(30.) BEFORE parting with this judgment we would also like to observe that pursuant to the direction issued by the Supreme Court in the case of Kartarsingh vs. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569 in which the Hon'ble Supreme Court upheld the validity of TADA (P) Act, 1987, had issued direction to the State government to constitute Review Committee. It is unfortunate that though the petitioner is tribal girl with no access to justice was being prosecuted under the provisions of TADA (P) Act, 1987 along with other offences of serious nature under the Indian Penal Code and Arms Act, her case was never referred to the review Committee probably because the State was oblivious of its duty to do so because the petitioner/victim who was accused was a non entity so far as the state Government was concerned. Rule is made absolute in the aforesaid terms.

Order accordingly.

Judgement

A.K. PATNAIK, C.J. :- This is an appeal filed under Section 2(1) of the M. P. Uchcha Nyayalaya (Khand Nyaypeeth Ko Appeal) Adhiniyam, 2005 against the order dated 24-8-2007 passed by the learned single Judge in W.P. No. 4638 of 2007.

2. The relevant facts briefly are that the appellant was running a Coaching Centre named "Deepika Classes" preparing students for taking Pre-Medical Test, Pre-Engineering Test and other tests for admissions to MBBS, Dental, Engineering, IIT courses. On 8-6-1992, a raid was conducted in the house of the appellant at the instance of Shri Raghava Chandra, the then Collector, Jabalpur and thereafter a Criminal Case No. 314 of 2004 under Sections 420 read with Section 34, IPC was registered against the appellant. After investigation, a charge-sheet was filed and after trial, the appellant was acquitted on 26-8-2004. The appellant then filed Writ Petition No. 4368 of 2004 contending inter alia that although the appellant was in police custody in Police Station, Gorakhpur since 10.00 p.m. on 8-6-1992, he was unnecessarily handcuffed by the Police and a number of daily newspapers published his photographs and his sister, who loved him, on seeing his photographs was shocked and expired on 17-6-1992. The appellant also contended in the writ petition that the prosecution knew right from the beginning that the cases registered against the appellant were false and did not deliberately send notices to the three independent witnesses Jitendra, Shailendra and Arun Chouksey from 1992 up to 2003 and the witnesses were produced before the Court only at the end of 2003 and thus there was violation of the fundamental right to speedy trial guaranteed under Art. 21 of the Constitution. In the writ petition, the appellant prayed that the respondents 2 to 20 should be prosecuted under the relevant sections of law and the respondent No. 21 onwards should be prosecuted for criminal defamation and other sections of law.

3. When the writ petition came up for admission before the Court, a learned single Judge in his order dated 24-2-2005 ordered that he was inclined to admit the matter only with regard to issue regarding grant of compensation for causation of delay in disposal of Criminal Case No. 314 of 2004, which arose in relation to the occurrence of the year 1992 and accordingly directed issuance of notices to respondents 1 and 6 to 17 only.

4. Pursuant to the notices, returns were filed by respondent No. 1 and some other respondents and a learned single Judge of this Court heard the learned counsel for parties, and after going through the documents filed by the appellant as well as the record pertaining to Criminal Case No. 314 of 2004 held that on a few occasions, time was sought from the trial Court by the prosecution but on most of the occasions trial was adjourned at the instance of the appellant himself and from the proceedings of the trial Court, it cannot be held that unnecessary or deliberate adjournments were sought by the prosecution in order to delay the trial and hence the question of granting compensation for delay in trial to the appellant did not arise and accordingly dismissed the writ petition by order dated 24-8-2007.

5. Thereafter, the appellant filed an application for review of the order dated 24-8-2007 passed by the learned single Judge which is numbered as MCC No. 7325 of 2005 in which the appellant contended that the Additional Advocate General, who appeared on behalf of the State submitted a typed copy of the proceedings of Criminal Case No. 314 of 2004 in which incorrect dates of proceedings were mentioned and for this reason, the learned single Judge held that unnecessary and deliberate adjournments were sought by the appellant in order to delay the trial and dismissed the writ petition. The learned single Judge, however, dismissed the review petition by order dated 12-10-2007 saying that the record of the criminal case was very much available when the matter was argued and the order dismissing the writ petition was passed after perusing the record of the Criminal Case and after scrutinizing the same. Aggrieved, the appellant has filed this appeal.

6. We have heard the appellant in person and Mr. Kumaresh Pathak, learned Deputy Advocate General for the State and we find that the main ground taken in the appeal memorandum is that the learned single Judge has failed to appreciate that the prosecution had delayed the trial by almost six years from 9-3-1998 to 26-8-2004. To consider the aforesaid ground-taken in the memorandum of appeal, we have called for the records of Criminal Case No. 314 of 2004 and on perusal of the same, we find that on 9-3-1998, the Court rejected the prayer of the appellant to modify the charges and on 12-3-1998, the charges were framed. Thereafter on 6-4-1998, the case had to be adjourned because the appellant was absent. On 6-5-1998, the case had to be ad-journed because the witnesses were absent. On 27-6-1998, the witnesses and the appellant/accused were absent. On 27-7-1998, the witnesses and the appellant were absent. On 7-9-1998, the case had to be adjourned because the witnesses and the appellant were absent. The delay up to 7-9-1998 was, therefore, on account of absence of the witnesses as well as the absence of the appellant.

7. The first witness on behalf of the prosecution, namely K. C. Jain (P.W. 1), City Magistrate was examined on 15-3-1999. Thereafter, on a number of dates, the case had to be adjourned because the summons could not be served on the witnesses and on 28-6-2000, the trial Court issued show cause notice to the Station Officer. Even thereafter, witnesses were not served with summons on various dates. On 22-3-2002. Rekha Jain (P.W. 2) and Yogendra Pal Singh (P.W. 3) were examined. On 10-12-2002, although the appellant applied for closing the prosecution case, the trial Court rejected the prayer and fixed the case for 3-2-2003 for examining the remaining witnesses. On 6-3-2003, the trial Court pulled up the prosecution for not producing the remaining witnesses and fixed the case for 5-5-2003 for further evidence. On 5-5-2003, the trial Court again took serious note of the delay caused by the prosecution and directed the prosecution to produce the witnesses on the next date. On 9-10-2003, Arun Kumar (P.W. 4) was examined by the prosecution. To examine the two remaining witnesses Jitendra and Shailendra, the Public Prosecutor took time. On 16-10-2003, Jitendra (P.W. 5) was partly examined and his evidence could not be completed in absence of the seized articles. Although Shailendra (P.W. 6) was also present on 16-10-2003 but he could not be examined.

On 3-12-2003, C. N. Dubey was present but he could not be examined since the record of the trial Court had been called for inspection by the Additional District Judge. On 15-12-2003, Shailendra (P.W. 6) was examined. On 16-1-2004, bailable warrants were issued to two witnesses left for examination. On 22-1-2004, the application filed by the appellant for re-examination of C.N. Dubey was rejected. On 6-5-2004, examination of Jitendra (P.W. 5) was completed and the prosecution case was closed. Thereafter, the defence witnesses were examined on 25-5-2004 and 11-6-2004 and the defence evidence was closed on 13-8-2004. Arguments were heard on 20-8-2004 and the appellant was acquitted on 26 8-2004. The aforesaid discussion would show that the State took four years from 15-3-1999 to 6-5-2004 to produce and examine its witnesses in the trial.

8. We may now examine the returns filed by the State in W.P. No. 4368 of 2004 to find out whether the prosecution had any reasonable explanation for the delay. In para 9 of the return filed by the State in W.P. No. 4368 of 2004, it is stated that the appellant has not filed any documents to show that the delay was caused because of the reasons on the part of the answering respondent and that the appellant ought to have approached the appropriate forum to get directions for speedy trial of the criminal case and having not availed the said remedy, he cannot now raise such a ground in this writ petition. In the additional return filed on behalf of the respondent No. 1 State on 19 2-2007, it is stated that the State was not at all responsible for causing any delay in conclusion of the trial but delay has been caused because the Court has been quite lenient and sympathetic towards the appellant and granted every prayer made on behalf of the appellant and thus, it is not correct that the delay has been caused by any laches on the part of the respondent No. 1-State. But as we have seen from the order-sheets of the Criminal Case No. 314 of 2004, the delay is not on account of the leniency and sympathy shown by the Court towards the appellant but because of the prosecution failing to produce and examine the witnesses on the various dates to which the case was fixed. In the return and the additional, return, therefore, no explanation as such has been furnished by the State for the delay in producing and examining the witnesses on behalf of the prosecution during the period 15-3-1999 to 6-5-2004. We accordingly hold that the delay of five years Was on account of the respondent No. 1 State not taking timely steps in producing and examining the witnesses on behalf of the prosecution and that the findings of the learned single Judge in the impugned order that on most of the occasions trial was adjourned at the instance of the appellant and that from the proceedings of the trial Court, it cannot be said that unnecessary adjournments were sought by the prosecution in order to delay the trial are not correct.

9-10. Speedy trial was held as an integral and essential part of the fundamental right to life and liberty of a person, guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution. P. N. Bhagwati, J. (as he then was) speaking for himself and A.D. Koshal, J. held :

".....If a person is deprived of his liberty under a procedure which is not 'reasonable, fair or just', such deprivation would be violative of his fundamental right under Article 21 and he would be entitled to enforce such fundamental right and secure his release. Now obviously procedure prescribed by law for depriving a person of his liberty cannot be 'reasonable, fair or just' unless that procedure ensures a speedy trial for determination of the guilt of such person. No procedure which does not ensure a reasonably quick trial can be regarded as 'reasonable, fair or just' and it would fall foul of Article 21. There can, therefore, be no doubt that speedy trial, and by speedy trial we mean reasonably expeditious trial, is an integral and essential part of the fundamental right to life and liberty enshrined in Article 21. The question which would, however, arise is as to what would be the consequence if a person accused of an offence is denied speedy trial and is sought to be deprived of his liberty by imprisonment as a result of a long delayed trial in violation of his fundamental right under Art. 21."

11. Again in Anukul Chandra Pradhan v. Union of India (1996) 6 SCC 354, the Supreme Court took a view that trial of those involving public men should be concluded more expeditiously and this was the requirement of speedy trial guaranteed under Art. 21 of the Constitution. Para 6 of the judgment of the Supreme Court in Anukul Chandra Pradhan v. Union of India (supra) is quoted hereinbelow ;

"We may also observe, that the Court concerned dealing with the above matters has to bear in mind that utmost expedition in the trial and its early conclusion is necessary for the ends of justice and credibility of the judicial process. Unless prevented by any dilatory tactics of the accused, all trials of this kind involving public men should be concluded most expeditiously, preferably within three months of commencement of the trial. This is also the requirement of speedy trial read into Article 21."

12. With regard to handcuffing, in Prem Shankar Shukla v. Delhi Administration, (1980) 3 SCC 526 : (1980 Cri LJ 930), Krishna Iyer, J. speaking for himself and Chinnappa Reddy, J. made the following observations in para 22 at page 537 of the SCC : (at p. 937 of Cri LJ) :

"Handcuffing is prima facie inhuman and, therefore, unreasonable is over-harsh and at the first flush arbitrary. Absent fair procedure and objective monitoring, to inflict 'irons' is to resort to zoological strategies repugnant to Art. 21. Thus, we must critically examine the justification offered by the State for this mode of restraint. Surely, the competing claims of securing the prisoner from fleeing and protecting his personality claims barbarity have to be harmonized. To prevent the escape of an under-trial is in public interest, reasonable, just and cannot, by itself, be castigated. But to bind a man hand-and-foot, fetter his limbs with hoops of steel, shuffle him, defile his dignity, vulgarise society and foul the soul of our constitutional culture. Where then do we draw the humane line and how far do the rules err in print and praxis?

13. In the instant case, the appellant was well educated person and was coaching students for entrance tests and examinations for admission to MBBS, Engineering, IIT etc. and it is alleged in para 5.6 of the writ petition that when he was already in Police custody in Gorakhpur Police Station at 10.00 p.m. on 8-6-1992, he was unnecessarily handcuffed by the police and number of daily newspapers published the photographs of the appellant handcuffed and his sister, who loved him as son, saw the photographs in the newspapers and was shocked and expired on 17-6-1992. The appellant has produced before us a newspaper in which his photograph with the handcuff has been published. In paragraph 8 of the return filed on 4-2-2006, the respondent No. 1 denied that the appellant was unnecessarily handcuffed, but no reasons have been given in the return why such handcuffing was necessary.

14. The next question is whether the appellant is entitled to any compensation from the respondent No. 1 -State for delay of five years in the trial and for handcuffing in violation of his fundamental rights under Art. 21 of the Constitution. In Rudul Sah v. State of Bihar and another, AIR 1983 SC 1086 : (1983 Cri LJ 1644), the Supreme Court has taken a view that one of the effective ways in which violation of fundamental rights under Art. 21 of the Constitution can reasonably be prevented, is to direct the State to pay compensation to the person whose rights under Art. 21 of the Constitution is affected. In the language of the Supreme Court (Para 10) :

".....Article 21 which guarantees the right to life and liberty will be denuded of its significant content if the power of this Court were limited to passing orders of release from illegal detention. One of the telling ways in which the violation of that right can reasonably be prevented and the compliance with the mandate of Article 21 secured, is to mulct its violators in the payment of monetary compensation. Administrative sclerosis leading to flagrant infringements of fundamental rights cannot be corrected by any other method open to the judiciary to adopt. The right to compensation is some palliative for the unlawful acts of instrumentalities which act in the name of public interest and which present for their protection the powers of the State as a shield. If civilization is not to perish in this country as it has perished in some others too well-known to suffer mention, it is necessary to educate ourselves into accepting that, respect for the rights of individuals is the true bastion of democracy. Therefore, the State must repair the damage done by its officers to the petitioner's rights. It may have recourse against those officers."

15. In fact, in State of Maharashtra and others v. Ravikant S. Patil (1991) 2 SCC 373 : (1991 AIR SCW 871), the Supreme Court referring to the Rudul Sah v. State of Bihar (1983 Cri LJ 1644) (supra) upheld the award of compensation of Rs. 10,000/- by the High Court of Bombay to an under-trial prisoner who had been handcuffed and taken through the streets in a procession by the police during investigation. We are, thus, of the view that the appellant is entitled to compensation for violation of his fundamental rights guaranteed under Art. 21 of the Constitution to speedy trial and not to be handcuffed without valid justification.

16. The next question is how much compensation the appellant is entitled? In D. K. Basu v. State of West Bengal (AIR 1997 SC 610) : (1997 Cri LJ 743), the Supreme Court, after examining the liability of the State to its citizens for infringement of their fundamental right laid down the principle for assessment of compensation to be paid by the State as under (para 55) :

"In the assessment of compensation, the emphasis has to be on the compensatory and not on punitive element. The objective is to apply balm to the wounds and not to punish the transgressor or the offender, as awarding appropriate punishment for the offence (irrespective of compensation) must be left to the criminal courts in which the offender is prosecuted, which the State, in law, is duty bound to do. The award of compensation in the public law jurisdiction is also without prejudice to any other action like civil suit for damages which is lawfully available to the victim or the heirs of the deceased victim with respect to the same matter for the tortuous act committed by the functionaries of the State. The quantum of compensation will, of course, depend upon the peculiar facts of each case and no strait-jacket formula can be evolved in that behalf. The relief to redress the wrong for the established invasion of the fundamental rights of the citizen, under the public law jurisdiction is, thus, in addition to the traditional remedies and not interrogation of them. The amount of compensation as awarded by the Court and paid by the State to redress the wrong done, may in a given case, be adjusted against any amount which may be awarded to the claimant by way of damages in a civil suit."

17. During the five years of delay in the trial from 15-3-1999 to 6-5-2004 caused by the State, the appellant's liberty was not affected inasmuch as he was not under imprisonment but was on bail. Hence, the appellant will not be entitled to a huge amount of compensation as claimed by him. Nonetheless, the appellant was handcuffed without a valid justification and his dignity as a human being had been seriously affected. In the circumstances, an expeditious trial and his acquittal would have restored his personal dignity as early as possible. But the State instead of taking timely steps to produce and examine the prosecution witnesses delayed the trial for long five years. In the facts and circumstances of the case, we award a compensation of Rs. 70,000/-(Rupees seventy thousand only) to the appellant. This compensation will be without prejudice to any claim that the appellant may make in a civil Court for damages.

18. In the result, the impugned order passed by the learned single Judge is set aside and the appeal is allowed. We accordingly direct the respondent No. 1-State to pay the appellant a sum of Rs. 70,000/-(Rupees seventy thousand only) as compensation within a period of three months from today. No order as to costs.

Appeal allowed.

ORAL JUDGMENT (PER P.V. HARDAS, J.)

This is a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India by which the petitioner prays for awarding of compensation on account of the illegal arrest and detention of the petitioner by the Karimnagar police station at Karimnagar (Andhra Pradesh). We may incidentally state here that notice of this petition had been issued to respondents and pursuant to the said notice respondents no.1, 2, 4, 5 and 7 entered their appearance. The Officers of the Karimanagar police station, especially respondent no.6, 8, respondent no.3 Superintendent of Police, Karimnagar and the Home Secretary of the Government of Andhra Pradesh i.e. respondent no.9 though served have chosen not to put in their appearance.

2. According to the petitioner, the petitioner was arrested on 23.1.1998 from his residence at Nanded and was carted all the way from Nanded to Karimnagar. According to the petitioner, the petitioner was detained till 31.1.1998 on which date the petitioner was permitted to leave the police station. During the aforesaid period the petitioner was neither produced before a Magistrate nor any remand order was obtained for continuing the detention of the petitioner. As pointed out by us above, though notice of this petition had been served on respondents no.3, 6, 8 and 9, the respondents have not turned in their appearance nor have they filed any affidavit in reply. Respondents no.4 & 5 who are Officers of Bhagyanagar police station, Nanded and who are alleged to have accompanied the Karimnagar police station for effecting the arrest of the petitioner, in the affidavit in reply contend that they had not accompanied the Karimnagar police station for effecting arrest. No steps had been taken by them in the process of arrest of the petitioner by the Karimnagar police station. Respondent no.7 contend that he was a Driver of a private vehicle which had been engaged by the officers of the Karimnagar police station for effecting the arrest of the petitioner. Therefore, according to respondent no.7 since he was neither member of the police staff nor is instrumental in effecting the arrest of the petitioner and his eventual illegal detention at Karimnagar, he is not liable.

3. Obviously, respondents no.1, 2, 4 and 5 cannot be held liable for payment of any compensation on account of the illegal arrest and illegal detention of the petitioner by the Karimnagar police station. Similarly, respondent no.7 who was merely a Driver of the vehicle also cannot be saddled with the responsibility of paying compensation. Respondents no. 3, 6, 8 and 9 though served with a notice of this Court have not entered their appearance in the present petition. The allegations against respondents no.3, 6, 8 and 9, therefore, are unrebutted.

4. In that light, therefore, we allow this petition as against respondents no.3, 6, 8 and 9 and determine that the petitioner would be entitled to an amount of Rs.1,00,000/- (Rupees One Lakh) as compensation for his illegal arrest and detention by the Karimnagar police station. The amount to be paid by respondent no.9 and to be recovered, if necessary, from respondent no.3, 6 and 8.

5. Petition is accordingly partly allowed. Rule is made absolute on the above terms with no orders as to costs. The petition would stand dismissed as against respondents no.1, 2, 4, 5 and 7 with no orders as to costs.

(1.) THIS is a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India filed by the petitioner, who has been arrested in connection with a murder of one Ganesh Kolekar, which took place in Solapur on 2nd August, 1989. The petition seeks to censure the 3rd and 4th respondents for the action which they have taken against the petitioner, described hereinafter in greater details. The 1st respondent is the Director General of Police, while the 2nd respondent is this judgment because ultimately what we are called upon to decide is whether the action of the 4th respondent in such as to merit censure and also such as to result in the payment of compensation to the petitioner. The 3rd respondent is the Superintendent of Police. According to the petitioner, the Acts complainted of by the petitioner against the 4th respondent were at the instance of the 3rd respondent. After going through the material on record, it has not been possible for us to accept the case of the petitioner that it was at the instance and the behest of the 3rd respondent that the 4th respondent committed the Acts of which complaint has been made in this petition. Hence, we will also not be referring to the 3rd respondent in this judgment. The 4th respondent is the Inspector of Police, who was a the relevant time in charge of Faujdar Chavadi Police Station, Solapur.

(2.) FACTS which have been clearly established on the basis of the material brought on record through the affidavits may be straight away stated. We have already mentioned above that one Ganesh Kolekar was murdered on 2nd of August, 1980. First Information Report in connection with that murder did not include the name of the petitioner as one of the suspects. However, during the course of the investigation, the police suspected that the petitioner was a party to the said murder and naturally he was to be arrested. The petitioner was in fact arrested later at a place called Tumkar in Karnataka State and was brought to Solapur in the early hours of 17th August, 1989. The police allege that the murder of Ganesh Kolekar was a culmination of a warfare between two gangs in Solapur. One Prakash Narote had already been arrested in connection with the said murder of Ganesh Kolekar.

(3.) A paper called Tarun Bharat, published from Solapur, carried in its issue of 17th of August, 1989 a news item submitted by its correspondent which said that the petitioner would be taken in a procession or a parade from Faujdar Chavadi Police Station through the main squares of the city for the purpose of investigation. This is some what unusual because the story is detailed 16th August, 1989; the accused was brought to Solapur, according to the affidavit of the 4th respondent, half an hour after midnight of 16th and 17th August, 1989. It may be that the correspondent of this newspaper had come to know that the petitioner had been arrested at Tumkur as mentioned above. The fact that there was a news that the petitioner would be taken out in a perade from Faujdar Chavadi Police Station through the main squares of Solapur is of some significance. There are several other facts mentioned in this copy filed by the correspondent of this paper. However, we are not taking any cognisance of the same because they are strictly of no evidentiary value as far as this petition is concerned.

(4.) ON 17th of August, 1989, as predicted by the paper, Tarun Bharat, the petitioner was handcuffed and both his arms were tied by a rope and he was taken through the streets and squares of Solapur. This fact is admitted on behalf of the respondents, in the middle part of paragraph 9 of his affidavit-in-raply, the 4th respondent has stated as follows:---

"it is true that the petitioner was handcuffed and tied with rope while he was taken to the above-referred place for investigation purpose. "

The places referred to will be mentioned by us in a short while and when, we do so, it would be clear that they are all prominent places in Solapur, being main squares and leading streets. With this admitted fact, namely the fact that the petitioner was handcuffed and roped and then taken through the streets and main squares of Solapur, and with the further admitted fact that this phenomenon was witnessed by large number of people in the city, one has to consider the question as to whether this was done by the 4th respondent for the purpose of investigation, as he contends in his affidavit-in-reply. The 4th respondent says that the petitioner was so taken through the streets and squares of Solapur for the purpose of investigation. He insists that the petitioner was not paraded. However, it was necessary to subject him to the restraints of handcuffs and ropes for the purpose of preenting his escape if the petitioner intended. It has also been mentioned by him that in some of the areas through which the petitioner was to be taken, there were members of the gang to which the petitioner belonged and there was apprehension that the suit members of the gang could make an attempt to secure the release of the petitioner. We will have to examine whether those contentions of the 4th respondent are true or not.

(5.) BEFORE we proceed to examine the material in this regard, we may briefly mentioned that the 4th respondent has in several paragraphs mentioned that the petitioner has a long criminal record. Several cases in which the petitioner is alleged to be an accused have been referred to in this affidavit. We may, however, note that the 4th respondent has not stated that the petitioner has been convicted even in a single case. The 4th respondent, of course, is free to refer to the fact that several criminal cases are pending against the petitioner, but that itself, in our opinion would not entitled an officer of the rank of the Inspector of Police in charge of a police station to subject a person to the indignity and humiliation to which the petitioner has been subjected in this case. It has also been mentioned by the 4th respondent that the murder of Ganesh Kolekar was the result of enmity between two gangs and the petitioner belonged to one gage. This also, in our opinion, has nothing to do with the necessity of handcuffing and roping the petitioner and then taking him through the main streets and squares of Solapur. If the murder of Ganesh Kolekar was the result of a gang welfare we thought that the 4th respondent would particularly see that the person of the petitioner would not be exposed in the public, as it has been done, when the petitioner was paraded. By taking the petitioner openly, walking through the streets, the 4th respondent in fact took the risk of exposing the person of the petitioner to any possible attack by the members of the rival gang. Here the 4th respondent has committed an act which is devoid of proper caution expected of a senior police officer.

(6.) NOW, we will proceed to examine whether it was necessary for the 4th respondent to take the petitioner through the streets and squares of Solapur city for the purpose of the investigation. What was in fact an investigation which was to be conducted by the 4th respondent in the morning of 17th of August, 1989? The petitioner had been brought to Solapur city from Tumkur in the early hours of 17th of August, 1989, he was yet to be produced before the Magistrate for the first remand in the afternoon. What was the urgency of any steps in the investigation that were contemplated by the 4th respondent? In order to find answer to this question, we will rely independently upon the facts disclosed by the 4th respondent himself. In the second sub-paragraph of paragraph 9 of the affidavit-in-reply, the 4th respondent says that the petitioner was interrogated by him in connection with the offence and, during the course of the said interrogation, the petitioner disclosed that some of the accused were goondas from Bombay and Pune and they were brought by him and lodged in Parijat Lodge, Station Road, Solapur. According to the 4th respondent, the petitioner stated that he would point out the said place. It is also stated that he would point out the house of accused Prakash Narote at Ramlal Chowk and the houses of some other persons at Lobha Master Chawl at Panjarapol Chowk and of another accused at Patra Talim area and the house of another accused near Kali Masjid.

(7.) WITH the object of enabling the petitioner to point out all these places, he was taken from the Police Station first to his bungalow and then to Parijat Lodge and then to various other places as mentioned in paragraph 9 of the affidavit of the 4th respondent. Sai Prasad Lodge owned by Prakash Narote was examined by the 4th respondent and his other staff on being shown by the petitioner. The petitioner was taken to Ramlal Chowk, Panjarapol Chowk, Lobha Master Chawl via Bhayya chowk and Mechanic Chowk. Further he was taken to what is called Patra Talim area and Kali Masjid. He was also taken to Paras Estate, Datta Chowk, Laxmi Market and the Zilla Parishad office. The houses of the persons to be identified by the petitioner were all situated, as the affidavit of the 4th respondent himself shows, at prominent places and Chowks. It is a sad commentary on the efficiency of this Police Officer to require the assistance of an accused person to find out the houses of other persons who were already arrested in connection with the offence houses which are all situated in prominent squares. We presume that these squares are connected with each other by regular streets through which the petitioner was obviously taken. We do not believe that the 4th respondent is so incompetent as to require the assistance of an accused person to identify the houses of these persons who were other wise connected with the offence into which the 4th respondent was investigating. This explanation given by the 4th respondent is, therefore, wholly unacceptable to us.

(8.) THIS is for the additional reason that no contemporaneous record of the so-called investigation done with the assistance of the petitioner has been relied upon by the 4th respondent. It has not been relied upon for the simple reason that no such record exists. We asked the learned Public Prosecutor, Mr. Kachare, who appears for all the respondents, as to whether there is any such contemporaneous record. The answer was in the negative. Was anything recovered? Was anything discovered? Answers to all these questions are in the negative. It is thus crystal clear to us that the explanation of the investigation, which is now being put forth by the 4th respondent is a false explanation. It is false also because no panchanamas were made of the investigation; the police party which took the petitioner through the streets and squares of Solapur was not accompanied by panchas. There is not even a scrap of writing to the effect that the investigation was to be made with the assistance of the petitioner.

(9.) NORMALLY, if an investigation is to be done, the accused is taken in a quiet and an inconspicuous manner to the place where any investigation is to be made. One would expect that when such a dangerous character as the petitioner is to be taken to some places in the city in which, according to the police, he is playing havoc, he would be taken in a vehicle quietly without inviting the attention of the persons in the area. What has been done in the instant case in exactly the reverse of it. The petitioner was taken openly; he was taken walking; he was taken though the streets accompanied undoubtedly by a large posses of policemen. The petitioner says that there were 100 police constables, but we accept the conservative estimate given by the 4th respondent, namely that at best there were 10 to 15 policemen accompanying the petitioner and the 4th respondent, who was leading the party.

(10.) IT is also an admitted position that behind the petitioner there was a police van. The 4th respondent says that police van was belonging to the State Reserve Police over which he had no control. But why was that police van following him? No answer is available in the affidavit of the 4th respondent to this question. Obviously, the 4th respondent must have requisitioned the said police van. Why was the petitioner not put into that police van? The answer of the 4th respondent is that police van accommodated members of the State Reserve Police and it also contained ammunitions. We do not see how despite this, if the ostensible purpose of taking the petitioner to various places was for the purpose of investigation, the petitioner could not have been accommodated for a short time in the said police van. Assuming that the explanation of the 4th respondent that the petitioner could not have been carried in the van belonging to the State Reserve Police is true, we still refuse to accept the necessity of taking the petitioner through the streets and squares of the city of Solapur in an open manner and by handcuffing him and roping him. The petitioner has annexed copies of news items on which he relies. In some of them, photographs of the incident have been published. In the issue of a paper called Sanchar dated 18th of August, 1989, two photographs have been published. One of them shows the 3rd respondent, namely the Superintendent of Police, looking at the petitioner, who had already been handcuffed in the police station. The second photograph shows the petitioner right in the middle of the road surrounded by policemen in uniform and following the 4th respondent with his two hands raised in such a manner that it appears that he was leading a parade of some importance. In our opinion, this was a highly irresponsible manner in which a person accused of an offence is to be taken to whatever destination that may be.

(11.) WE have already mentioned above that by doing this, the 4th respondent exposed the petitioner to possible retaliatery attacks by members of the rival gang. We are sure that he did not intend to do so because he had taken the trouble of surrounding the petitioner with large number of police constables who were, in turn, accompanied by a police van in which armed members of the State Reserve Police were travelling, it is inconceivable that such a large number of policemen were necessary to prevent the escape of one individual like the petitioner.

(12.) THE explanation given by the 4th respondent, therefore, is unacceptable to us. We have already noted that Prakash Narote had already been arrested. Yet the 4th respondent says that the petitioner was taken out in order to point out the house of Prakash Narote. This and other explanations which have been given by the 4th respondent are so hopelessly implausible that no Court will ever accept the same. If some measure of plausibility were to be found in the explanation given by the 4th respondent, may be certain excessive action on his part could have been considered in a lenient manner. Looking at the incident in the context of a news item appearing in a paper of Solapur on 17th of August 1989, which predicted that there would be a parade of the petitioner through the main squares of Solapur city starting from Faujdar Chavdi Police Station, the conduct of the 4th respondent shows nothing but an eagerness on his part to satisfy the morbid curiosity of a section of the citizens of Solapur. Probably, he won the admission and applause of such citizens as the Bhagalpur Police won the admiration and applause of some citizens of Bhagalpur for their cruel act towards the under trial prisoners at Bhagalpur by blinding them. It is not the function of a Police Officer to play to the gallery or to tickle the popular whims and to do such acts as would gain appreciation or applause from the members of the public. The primary and probably the only function of a Police Officer is to carry out the investigation as quickly and as efficiently as possible and to collect evidence which would commend itself to the Court for the purpose of securing a proper and legal conviction by the Court. By treating under trial prisoners in the manner in which it has been done by the 4th respondent in the instant case, he has brought the system of investigation into disrepute.

(13.) THE 4th respondent has subjected the petitioner to wholly unwarranted humiliation and indignity which cannot be done to any citizen of India irrespective of whether he is accused of a minor offence or of a major offence. The nature of the offence will attract the appropriate punishment from the Court. The past history of a particular undertrial prisoner is wholly irrelevant to the question as to whether he has to be handcuffed and roped in the manner in which the petitioner has been subjected to. It is possible that a particular prisoner might have shown proclivity of escaping from police custody. In such a case, probably the handcuffing to the extent it is necessary to prevent an attempt at escaping there any material before us to show that the petitioner had at any time made an attempt to escape from police custody.

(14.) THE finding, therefore, we record is that the 4th respondent has without any justification taken out the petitioner from Faujdar Chavadi Police Station. He has handcuffed the petitioner without any reason for the same. He has roped the petitioner without any justification for the same. He has also paraded the petitioner through the main streets and squares of Solapur city. This parade attracted large number of citizens of the city either out of curiosity or out of morbidity. This probably earned some popularity for the 4th respondent, but the action was wholly unwarranted. We are specifically recording a finding that the petitioner was taken out of the Police Station and parade through the streets and squares of Solapur there being no need at all for the same. We are also recording a finding that there was no investigation to be carried out and in fact no investigation was carried out from the time the petitioner was taken out of the Police Station to the time he was produced before the Magistrate for the first order of remand.

(15.) THE law relating to the treatment of prisoners, especially undertrial prisoners, has been laid down with sufficient precision by the Supreme Court in (Prem Shankar v. Delhi Administration) A. I. R. 1980 Supreme Court 1535. It is not necessary for us to discuss this judgment in greater details. It is sufficient for the purpose of this petition only on refer to certain propositions which have been laid down in the said judgment. In the first place it has been laid down, recalling the judgment of the Supreme Court in (Sunil Batra v. Delhi Administration) A. I. R. 1978 Supreme Court 1675, that imprisonment of a prisoner ipso facto does not eclipse the fundamental rights of a citizen under Articles 19, 21 and 14 of the constitution. Secondly, it has been laid down that insurance against escape does not compulsorily require handcuffing unless no other way is practicable. It has been suggested by the Supreme Court that some increase in the number of escorts is an alternative which ought to be considered.

(16.) FROM the facts of the case before us we notice that there was practically an army which was following the petitioner. This shows that handcuffing was totally unnecessary. The Supreme Court has further stated that the reasons for handcuffing must be recorded contemporaneously. It has not been shown to us in the present case that such a course had been adopted by the 4th respondent. What is of more significance in the admonition of the Supreme Court is that merely calling a person desperate and dangerous is not sufficient justification for handcuffing. Labels such as desperate and dangerous are themselves dangerous and should not be used freely for satisfying the punitive passion for retribution through the process of parading undertrial prisoners cruelly clad in hateful Irons.

(17.) THESE are the propositions which we have culled from the leading judgment delivered by Krishna Iyer, J. , on behalf of himself and Chinnappa Reddy, J. The other judgment is delivered by Pathak, J. , which was inclined to give greater latitude to the persons to whom the custody of prisoners is entrusted. Even the Pathak, J. , has observed as follows :--- "the rule, I think, should be that the authority responsible for the prisoners custody, should consider the case of each prisoner individually and decide whether the prisoner is a person who having regard to his circumstances, general conduct, behaviour and character will attempt to escape or distrub the peace by becoming violent. "

(18.) IN the light of the finding which we have recorded above that the 4th respondent had in fact decided to parade the petitioner with a view to satisfy the curiosity and the perverse interest of a section of the citizens of Solapur, another finding which must follow as the necessary corollary is that the handcuffing and the roping of the petitioner was wholly unnecessary. This is apart from the fact that there is no material on record to show that the petitioner would have escaped from the custody of the police especially when he was surrounded by large posse of policemen and followed by a van of State Reserve Police which carried apart from the members of the State Reserve Police a large quantity of ammunitions. The duty to impose a restraint should not be utilised as an opportunity for exposing an undertrial prisoner to public ridicule and humiliation.

(19.) ARTICLE 21 of the Constitution declares that no person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law. We have no hesitation in holding that life and liberty of a citizen guaranteed under this Article includes life with dignity and liberty with dignity. Liberty must mean freedom from humiliations and indignities at the hands of the authorities to whom the custody of a person may pass temporarily or otherwise under the law of the land. We have already noticed the limitations on the power of the police in respect of handcuffing and of undertrial prisoners. That we must regard as the law of the land. Any provisions in the Rules which are inconsistent with Article 21 of the Constitution, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, will have to be held to be invalid.

(20.) THE 4th respondent has relied upon certain rules to be found in the Bombay Police Manual which, he thinks, permit him to handcuff undertrial prisoners. Rule 411 deals with a situation where a prisoner has to be taken in custody from a Court premises to a Jail or a Borstal School or vice versa. It provides that whenever a prisoner is to be taken, he shall not be handcuffed or bound unless the Court otherwise directs. However, if the Police Officer escorting such prisoner considers it necessary to do so in exceptional circumstances, then he may handcuff or bind such prisoner after leaving the Court premises. It is also provided that if the officer in charge of the escort finds that a prisoner is violent after going a few steps from the Court, he can handcuff him, but he is under an obligation to rush back to the Court and obtain an order from the Court. No prisoner shall be handcuffed or bound while being taken from a jail or Borstal School to the Court premises, unless the Jailor otherwise directs in writing. Here the question does not arise because the petitioner has been taken from the lock-up to the Court of the Magistrate for obtaining an order of remand.

(21.) MR. Kachare has contended that 4th respondent should be regarded as the one in charge of the petitioner and he must also be regarded as the head of the escort party. Therefore, the 4th respondent was free to use his discretion after judging the facts and circumstances of the transfer of the petitioner from the Police Station to the Court. Even if we accept this contention of the learned Public Prosecutor, on the facts noticed above and in the context of the findings which we have recorded above, we fall to appreciate the so called discretion exercised by the 4th respondents.

(22.) RULE 412 mentions that in securing a prisoner under escort, the primary issue is that the policemen in charge should remain alert. If there be negligence in this respect, no amount or method of toying or handcuffring will prevent a prisoners escape. For securing prisoners certain methods are recommended to be ordinarily adopted. They need not be discussed at this stage. It is sufficient, however, to notice that even the Bombay Police Manual did make provisions to treat prisoners in a humane way. The rules insisted that the prisoners should not be subjected to unnecessary and inhuman restraint. All this has been provided in the rules. Least of all, the rules cannot permit the subjection of a prisoner to ridicule and humiliation in front of large number of people this is what has been done by the 4th respondent in the instant case.

(23.) WE may also refer to another rule to which our attention has been drawn by Mr. Rane. It is Rule 204. It mentions, among other or things, that undertrial prisoners should be treated with such reasonable consideration as is compatible with their safe custody and production before the Court. Their status and the probability of their attempting to escape should be taken into account in deciding the necessity or otherwise of the use of handcuffs and allowing them the use of a conveyance at their expense. The provisions relating to the conveyance for the transport of the prisoners are to be found in Rules 411 and 413. In the instant case, the 4th respondent never made any attempt to secure a vehicle to carry the petitioner if at all it was necessary to carry him to the various places for the purpose of investigation, the purpose which we have discardede after considering the explanation given by the 4th respondent. The 4th respondent says that there was no vehicle available at 10. 30 a. m. In that case, was it necessary to take out the prisoner at 10. 30 a. m. itself from the Police Station? It has not been mentioned by the 4th respondent that no vehicle was going to be available for some time and because of this the so-called investigation which the 4th respondent has invented would have been defeated or delayed. We have, therefore, no hesitation in holding that the 4th respondent has trampled upon the right conferred upon the petitioner as a citizen of this country under Article 21 of the Constitution.

(24.) WE have also no hesitation in holding that the 4th respondent has done this by disregarding the very rules according to which he must act. Those rules are to be found in the Bombay Police Manual. The necessity of handcuffing and the necessity of roping the petitioner and the necessity of taking him through the streets and squares of Solapur have not been demonstrated in the smallest measure. On the other hand, the 4th respondent has done the impugned acts without there being any necessity for the same. We have already stated above that this has been done probably for the purpose of winning the applause of the citizens of Solapur, but by doing it he has subjected the petitioner to unnecessary, unwarranted and illegal humiliation and indignity. The character of the petitioner is not in question before us. That will be decided by the Courts which will try his cases. The character of the 4th respondent is before us because it is his conduct that is the subject matter of this petition and we find that conduct wholly unbecoming of an officer of the rank of an Inspector in charge of a Police Station. He has acted outside the scope of the law and outside the scope of the authority which has been vested in him as an officer in charge of a Police Station. We may Incidentally mention that there is no bravery or heroism involved in parading an undertrial prisoner, secured by handcuffing and roping, through the streets of a city. This does not reflect well on the qualities of an officer of a Police Station, such as the 4th respondent.

(25.) HAVING come to these findings, can we direct the 4th respondent to pay compensation to the petitioner while exercising our jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution. There is an authority for the proposition that when the fundamental right of a citizen is infringed without excuse and in a manner not warranted by the law of the land, compensation can be directed to be paid in (Bhim Singh v. State of Jammu and Kashmir) A. I. R. 1986 Supreme Court 494, the Supreme Court held that the police obtaining remand of arrested persona and not producing him before the Magistrate within the requisite period was gross violation of the rights of the arrested person under Articles 21 and 22 (2) of the Constitution of India. Refraining from using stronger words to condemn the authoritarian acts of the police, the Supreme Court held that the custodians of law and order should not become depredators of civil liberties. Their duty is to protect and not to abduct. In Bhim Singhs case, an M. L. A. was arrested and not produced before the Magistrate as required by law within the specified time. The Supreme Court observed that if the personal liberty of a Member of Legislative Assembly is to be played with in this fashion, one can only wonder what may happen to lesser mortals. The State of Jammu and Kashmir was directed to pay to the petitioner before the Supreme Court a sum of Rs. 50,000/ -. The order was passed by the Supreme Court in a petition under Article 32 of the Constitution of India, which Article is for the protection of the fundamental rights of the citizens of this country.

(26.) IN another case, namely, (Rudul Shah v. State of Bihar) A. I. R. 1983 Supreme Court 1086, it was found that a person had been kept in illegal detention for nearly 14 years after his release had been ordered. Taking into consideration that great harm had been done to the petitioner before the Supreme Court by the Government of Bihar, the Supreme Court ordered the State Government as an interim measure, to pay to the petitioner a sum of Rs. 30,000/- in addition to the sum of Rs. 5,000/- which had already been paid. The order which was passed by the Supreme Court, it was made clear, did not preclude the petitioner from bringing a suit to recover appropriate damages from the State and its erring officials. The order of compensation passed by the Supreme Court was in the nature of a palliative.

(27.) IT is, therefore, clear to us that the Court which has got the power of enforcing the observance of the fundamental rights has also got powers to award compensation to the aggrieved party-a-party whose fundamental rights have been violated by the State or the officers of the State Article 226 of the Constitution is also a provision which empowers the High Court to issue directions, orders or writs for the enforcement of fundamental rights. This must necessarily imply a power to give appropriate relief in a case where a fundamental right of a citizen has been violated either by the State or by any official of the State.

(28.) ARTICLE 226 of the Constitution specifically provides that the High Court may issue to any person or authority directions for the enforcement of any of the rights conferred by Part III and for any other purpose. The 4th respondent is a person. He is also a person in whom authority is vested under the Code of Criminal Procedure. He has abused that authority. He has acted outside the scope of that authority. He has acted outside the scope of the law which given him that authority. He has acted outside the rules which he must follow while exercising that authority. We have, therefore, no hesitation in holding that in exercise of the powers of this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution, we can also direct that compensation shall be paid by the State or a person acting on behalf of the State to a citizen whose fundamental rights have been trampled upon.

(29.) HAVING heard Mr. Rane and the learned Public Prosecutor, Mr. Kachare, on the amount of compensation which the 4th respondent should pay to the petitioner and considering the fact that part of the action of the 4th respondent was the result of over enthusiasm, we think that an amount of Rs. 10,000/- should be paid by way of compensation by the 4th respondent to the petitioner. We also direct that the fact that the 4th respondent has been found guilty of violation of the fundamental right of an undertrial prisoner under Article 21 of the Constitution should be entered in the service recorded of the 4th respondent. The 1st respondent in this petition shall inform this Court within two months from the date on which this order is communicated to the 1st respondent that such entry has been made in the service record of the 4th respondent. A copy of this judgment shall be forwarded by the office to the 1st respondent through the learned Public Prosecutor, Mr. Kachare, who has represented him before us. The compensation shall be paid by the 4th respondent to the petitioner on or before 25th of April, 1990.

Order accordingly.

JUDGEMENT

(1.) The petitioner Shri G.L. Gupta, Advocate is the President of District Bar Association, Ratlam. He has filed this petition alleging that Shri Suresh Chandra Kelwa, a practising advocate at Ratlam was hand-cuffed on 11-9-1995 and produced before the Railway Magistrate, Ratlam on 12-9-1995 after being paraded from Ratlam station to the District Court building while in hand-cuffs. Under orders of the learned Railway Magistrate the hand-cuffs were directed to be immediately removed. Subsequently an inquiry was conducted by Shri B.K. Sharma, Superintendent of Police, Railways and in his report to the District and Sessions Judge, Ratlam he has stated that the respondents had hand-cuffed Shri Kelwa "without any justification" and took him from Neemuch to Ratlam which is about 140 Kms. from Neemuch in hand-cuffs. The Superintendent of Police recommended departmental action as well as legal action to prosecute the officers for an offence under Section 220, Indian Penal Code

(2.) Vide order dated 18-3-1998, we directed the Home Secretary, Government of Madhya Pradesh to file an affidavit to disclose as to what action, if any, had been taken to prosecute the officers for the offence under Section 220, Indian Penal Code and to also disclose the details of the departmental action taken against the police officials. Shri V.N. Kaul, Principal Secretary, Department of Home, Government of Madhya Pradesh has filed an affidavit dated 29/08/1998. According to that affidavit, challan has been filed and charges under Section 220, Indian Penal Code have since been framed against Mr. R.K. Sharma, the then SHO, GRP, Neemuch, Shri I.M. Tiwari, the then ASI, GRP, Shri Radhey Shyam, Constable No. 169, GRP and Shri Amar Singh Constable No. 363 GRP, by learned Chief Judicial Magistrate, Neemuch on 10/08/1998. It is also stated that the State Government of Madhya Pradesh had proposed to the Union Public Service Commission, New Delhi to withhold two annual increments of Shri B.K. Sharma, the then Superintendent Railway Police. The Union Public Service Commission has, however, recommended vide its letter dated 14-8-1998 only to record 'severe Censure' and have not agreed to the withholding of two annual increments. Attached with the affidavit are the copies of the charges framed against the four above named officers besides a copy of the letter from the UPSC.

(3.) This Court has on occasions more than one deprecated and condemned the conduct of the escort police in hand-cuffing a person or an under trial without any justification : Sunil Gupta v. State of M.P., (1990) 3 SCC 119 and Khedat Mazdoor Chetna Sangathan v. State of M.P., 1994 (6) SCC 260 : (1994 AIR SCW 4026 : AIR 1993 SC 31 : 1995 Cri L.J. 508).

(4.) Apart from the fact that under Article 141 of the Constitution the law laid down by this Court is the law of the land, Article 144 mandates that all authorities, civil and judicial, in the territory of India shall act in aid of the Supreme Court. Hand cuffing of an undertrial or a prisoner, in spite of the law laid down by this Court, is a serious matter.

(5.) According to the report of the Superintendent of Police the respondents had resorted to hand-cuffing Shri Kelwa. Their action may invite an action under the Contempt of Courts Act against them but we refrain from passing any order under the Contempt of Courts Act in view of the fact that respondents have been charge-sheeted and charges under Section 220, Indian Penal Code have already been framed against them by the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate. The learned Chief Judicial Magistrate shall expeditiously try the case and pass appropriate orders keeping in view the law laid down by this Court on the subject.

(6.) Since the trial has commenced before the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate, we do not propose to proceed further with this application. The petition is therefore disposed of and the rule discharged.

JUDGEMENT

N. A. BRITTO, J.:- Petitioners' Petition dated 02-07-2003, was ordered to be registered as P.I.L. as it involved serious issue of violation of human rights and on 04-08-2003 rule was issued.

2. It is necessary to state some facts which are relevant for the disposal of this petition.

3. On or about 16-06-2003, Crime No.96/03 came to b,e registered at Panaji Police Station upon a complaint of Antonio Paulo D'Cfuz, under Sections 307, 506(ii) read with Section 34, IPC and Sections 3 and 25 of the Arms Act against Kamlesh Naik, Nilesh Mangueshkar and Sanjeev Mangueshkar alias Gabba Mangueshkar, all residents of Taleigao, Panaji. The Petitioner Karishma Kamlesh Naik, is the wife of the said Kamlesh Naik while Petitioners no.2 and 3 Mrs. Richa Rajkumar Naik and Poonam Ravindra Naik respectively, are the sisters in law of the said Nilesh Mangueshkar and Sanjeev alias Gabba Mangueshkar and all of them reside in the same house at Taleigao but in different portions. Respondent Salim Shaik, was the Police Inspector at the relevant time in-charge of Panjim Police Station, while respondent C. L. patil, was the Officer investigating the said case. Respondent Rajan Nigalye, it appears, was not even connected with Panjim Town Police Station and was posted elesewhere at the relevant time.

4. The petitioners alleged that on 17-06-2003, about seven to eight Policemen came to their house in search of the said accused and caused damaged. However, we are not concerned in this Petition, about the said allegation and the petitioners would certainly be at liberty to seek appropriate remedy as regards to the same. On 24-0^-2003, the said accused Kamlesh Naik and Nilesh Naik, surrendered before the J.M.F.C., Panaji, and the learned J.M.F.C., was initially pleased to remand the said two accused to judicial custody but after an application for remand was filed, was pleased to remand the said two accused to Police custody for two days and again for another two days, which police custody remand was to expire on 29-06-2003. This Petition pertains to the incident which took place on 28-06-2003. The petitioners have alleged that they had gone "to lodge a complaint as regards the incident of 17-06-2003, but the Panjim Police Station had refused to entertain their complaint and had been continuously refusing to entertain the same as they were acting on instructions of their local M.L.A., who was also a Minister and that they had tried to approach the Minister but were not granted audience and were told that they having helped his opponent during the last Assembly elections, they should go to him for help. The petitioners alleged that on 28-06-2003 the Panjim Police apparently acting at the behest of the said Minister, stripped Kamlesh Naik and Nilesh Mangueshkar off their shirts and pants, tied their hands at their back and paraded them in their underwear in Taleigao area with the said Minister overseeing the same from some private car from a distance and, therefore, it was apparent that the said Minister was personally seeing to it that his instructions were followed by the police. The petitioners alleged that because of the said inhuman treatment meted out to the said Kamlesh Naik and Nilesh Mangueshkar on 28-06-2003, they approached the S.D.P.O., Shri. Waman Tari and D.I.G., Shri. Karnal Singh, who pleaded helplessness and, therefore, on 29-06-2003, they went for a meeting organised by a private institution, which was attended by the then Chief Minister of Goa, and at the said meeting, at the behest of a city lawyer, Shri, Satish Sonak, the petitioner no.l narrated the incident as regards to the damage to their house whereupon the said Advocate Satish Sonak pleaded with the said Chief Minister to order a judicial inquiry but the Chief Minister is stated to have said that a judicial inquiry would not serve any purpose, etc. The petitioners contending that the illegalities committed by.the police were being refused to be looked into and the Chief Minister having said what he allegedly did, they had no other option but to approach this Court with this Petition.

5. It does appear that the petitioners' complaint to the D.I.G., Shri. Karnal Singh, was entertained. This was reported on the daily newspaper 'Gomantak Times-Weekender' on 29-06-2003 and what transpired at the said meeting was reported by daily 'Herald' on 30-06-2003 and, it also appears that, D.I.G. Shri. Karnal Singh, directed Dy. S. P. Shri. W[aman] Tari to conduct an inquiry, who submitted a report dated 14-07-2003. After perusal of the said report, this Court was not satisfied with the said report dated 14-07-2003, and for the reasons disclosed in the Order dated 04-08-2003. Therefore, this Court directed the District and Sessions Judge, Panaji, to conduct an inquiry into the allegations made by the petitioners, at the time of issuing rule on 04-08-2003. Subsequently, the said Order was modified and the District and Sessions Judge, Panaji, was directed to issue notice to all parties and to record their statements and submit them to this Court for further directions in the matter.

6. As stated on behalf of respondent Director General of Police, it appears that the inquiry report dated 14-07-2003, did reveal certain lapses on the part of the police and, therefore, it was decided to transfer all the six police officers including P.I. Shri. Salim Shaik, P.S.I. Shri. Rajan Nigalye and P.S.I. Shri. C. L. Patil and it was ordered to initiate disciplinary proceedings against the said investigating officer P.S.I. Shri. Rajan Nigalye and P.I. Shri. Salim Shaik, in charge of the Police Station. The petitioner no.l, in her affidavit dated 09-08-2005, has made an allegation that no disciplinary proceedings were initiated against P.I. Salim Shaik and P.S.I. Rajan Nigalye as ordered and, in fact, P.S.I. Rajan Nigalye, was promoted to Inspector of Police, though he was reverted subsequently and, P.S.I. C. L. Patil, was promoted as Inspector of Police.

7. The learned Sessions Judge, by his report submitted on 03-11-2003, submitted along with it five statements recorded of the petitioners as well as both the said accused namely Kamlesh Naik and Nilesh Mangueshkar, eleven affidavits of police officials including that of the P.I. Salim Shaik and as many as 39 affidavits of the members of the public.

8. As far as the incident of parading is concerned, there is no dispute that both the s^id accused Kamlesh Naik and Nilesh Mangueshkar were taken out of the Police lockup and in handcuffs and, according to Police Inspector Salim Shaik, they were taken out because they volunteered to disclose the places of their hideouts after commission of the offence and they were so taken in order to conduct the panchanama. The handcuffing of the said accused is sought to be justified on the ground that at the time of elections, Teleigao was declared as hypersensitive area; the accused were hailing from the said area and were actively involved in criminal activities and, therefore, they were handcuffed as a matter of precaution anticipating high risk of untoward incident; that the chances of the accused slipping out from their custody and abduction was also anticipated and, considering that the police custody was to expire on the next day and that it was dark and late in the day, they decided to take the accused immediately to Taleigao. The handcuffing is also sought to be justified on the ground that it was a 4th Saturday and was a Court holiday and it was too late to call on the Magistrate to seek the requisite permission for handcuffing and due to paucity of time, they immediately decided to visit the places which the accused had offered to show. It has also been stated by respondent Police Inspector Shri. Shaik that the said accused then showed to them in the presence of Panchas, places of their hideouts, etc. The affidavit of Police Inspector Shri. Salim Shaik clearly shows that he, as an Officer-in-charge of the Police Station, was fully aware that permission of a J.M.F.C. was required to be taken before handcuffing an accused. Indeed, the Supreme Court in the case of Prem Shankar Shukla Vs. Delhi Administration (AIR 1980 S.C. 1535) had, inter alia, ordered that:

"Handcuffing is prima facie inhuman, and, therefore, unreasonable, is over-harsh and at the first flush, arbitrary".

"that an accused is involved in over a score of cases is no ground for handcuffing the prisoner. Unless there be reasonable exception of violence or attempted to be rescued, the prisoner should not be handcuffed".

"there are other measures whereby an escort can keep a safe custody of a detenu without the indignity and cruelty implicit in handcuffs or other iron contraptions. Indeed, binding together either the hands or the feet or both has not merely a preventive impact, but also a punitive hurtful ness".

"since there are other ways of ensuring security, it can be laid down as a rule that handcuffs or other fetters shall not be forced on the person of an undertrial prisoner ordinarily".

"It is brutalising to handcuff a person in public and so is unreasonable to do so. Of course, the police escort will find it comfortable to fetter their charges and be at ease but that is not a relevant consideration".

"If a few more guards will suffice, then no handcuffs. If a close watch by armed policemen will do, then no handcuffs. If alternative measures may be provided, then no iron bondage. This is the legal norm".

"The nature of the accusation is not the criterion. The clear and present danger of escape breaking out of the police control is the determinant, and for this there must be a clear material, not glib assumptions".

"The conclusion flowing from these considerations is that there must first be well grounded basis for drawing a strong inference that the prisoner is likely to jump jail or break out of custody or play the vanishing trick. The belief in this behalf must be based on antecedents which must be recorded and proneness to violence must be authentic. Vague surmises or general averments that the undertrial is a crook or desperado, rowdy or maniac, cannot suffice. In short, save in rare cases of concrete proof readily available of the dangerousness of the prisoner in transit - the onus of proof of which is on him who puts the person under irons - the police escort will be committing personal assault or mayhem if he handcuffs or fetters his charge. It is disgusting to see the mechanical way in which callous policemen, cavalier fashion, handcuff prisoners in their charge, indifferently keeping them company assured by the thought that the detainee is under iron restraint."

9. The Apex Court in the case of Citizens for Democracy (1995(3) S.C.C. 743), had issued certain directions and some of them are as follows:-

".....The handcuffs or other fetters shall not be forced on a prisoner - convicted or undertrial - while lodged in a jail anywhere in the country or while transporting or in transit from one jail to another or from jail to Court and back. The police and the jail authorities, on their own, shall have no authority to direct the handcuffing of any inmate of a jail in the country or during transport from one jail to another or from jail to Court and back".

"Where the police or jail authorities have well-grounded basis for drawing a strong inference that a particular prisoner is likely to jump jail or break out of the custody then the said prisoner be produced before the Magistrate concerned and a prayer for permission to handcuff the prisoner be made before the said Magistrate. Save in rare cases of concrete proof regarding proneness of the prisoner to violence, his tendency to escape, he being so dangerous/desperate and the finding that no other practical way of forbidding escape is available, the Magistrate may grant permission to handcuff the prisoner".

"In all the cases where a person arrested by police is produced before the Magistrate and remand - Judicial or non-judicial is given by the Magistrate, the person concerned shall not be handcuffed unless special orders in that respect are obtained from the Magistral at the time of the grant of tjie remandp-"All ranks pf pQlice an$ th,g pr^Qfl authorities, to meticulously obey the attpyg mentioned directions, and in Yio|a|ionby any rank of police in the country or rnemtjer of t.he jail establishment shall be summarily punished under the Contempt of Courts Act apart from other penal consequences under the law".

10. A reference to the case of Sunil Gupta & Ors. Vs. State of M. P. & Ors. ((1990)3 S.C.C. 119), will also not be out of context. In this case, the Apex Court has stated that when a person is remanded by a judicial order by a competent Court, that person comes within the judicial custody of the Court and taking of that person from a prison to the Court or back from the Court to the prison by the escort party is only under the judicial orders of the Court and even if extreme circumstances necessitate the escort party to bind the prisoners in fetters, the escort party should record the reasons for doing so in writing and intimate the Court so that the Court considering the circumstances either approves or disapproves the action of the escort party and issues necessary direction, (emphasis supplied).

11. In the above background, we have heard the learned Senior Counsels on behalf of the parties at length as well as Mrs. Agni, the learned Amicus Curiae. Shri. Dessai, the learned Senior Counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioners, has submitted, that the material on record is more than sufficient to conclude that there has been violation of Article 21 of the Constitution of the said two accused and for suitable action to be taken by this Court for the said violation. Shri. Dessai, has further submitted that the fact that the said police officials were transferred on account of their involvement in the said incident of parade, is sufficient proof that the said accused were paraded as alleged by the petitioners. Shri. Dessai further submits that the affidavits recorded by the learned Sessions Judge, of about forty persons, clearly disclose that the said accused were paraded and against the said forty persons, none have stated to the contrary. As per Shri. Dessai, the said affidavits are sufficient pleadings to dispose of the present petition.

12. hri. Lotlikar, the learned Senior Counsel on behalf of respondent Nos.4 to 6, has submitted that the said affidavits recorded by the learned Sessions Judge, cannot be looked into because no opportunity was given to th said respondents to cross-examine ani controvert the facts stated by them. Shri Lotlikar, the learned Senior Counsel ha submitted that the petition filed by tlv petitioners, when compared to the affidavit subsequently filed by them before the learne< Sessions Judge, shows that the petitioners havi indulged in embellishment and exaggeratioi and, in such a situation, it would be unsafe t< rely upon the affidavits filed by them before the learned Sessions Judge. Shri. Lotlikar ha: submitted that though the respondents hav< admitted about the handcuffing, the explanatioi given by them, per se, could not be rejectee outright. It is the submission of Shri. Lotlika that it would be hazardous for this Court to arrive at any conclusion based on the affidavits of the petitioners and the said accused given before the learned Sessions Judge, who are in the habii of exaggerating their versions.

13. Shri. Kakodkar, the learned Senioi Counsel appearing on behalf of respondent Nos.l to 3 has submitted that the grievances oi the petitioners could be best looked into by the Human Rights Court constituted under Section 30 of the Human Rights Act, 1993, or by the National Human Rights Commission, in the event there is no State Commission constituted under the said Act. Shri. Kakodkar, submits that the limitation provided to approach the National Human Rights Commission, will not come in the way of the petitioners in the event this petition is forwarded by this Court to the said National Human Rights Commission. Shri, Kakodkar has submitted that after the enactment of the Protection of Human Rights Act, 1993, this Court, ought not to entertain individual grievances of violation of human rights and the parties should be left to seek their remedies before the Human Rights Court or the National Human Rights Commission. As per Shri. Kakodkar, the petitioners approached this Court only with a view to put pressure upon the police so that obtaining of bail was facilitated. It is the submission of Shri. Kakodkar that in this petition, there is no public interest involved. Shri. Kakodkar has also submitted that, prima facie, evidence produced by or on behalf of the petitioners, may at the most, be sufficient only to order further inquiry into the matter. Shri. Kakodkar, has submitted that the Investigating Officer, was the best Judge to assess the situation and order the handcuffing of the said two accused and, in any event, it was a bonafide exercise of power, though wrongly exercised.

14. We have considered the submissions made. We are unable to accept the submissions of learned Senior Counsels Shri. Lotlikar and Shri. Kakodkar.

15. We have already elaborately set out herein above, how this petition came to be registered as a P.I.L., and as then stated by the Division Bench of this Court, it was registered with a view to address to the issues arising out of gross violation of human rights by the police as well as inaction on the part of the higher police authorities including the highest executive authority of this State and this Court having entertained the petition in public interest and issued rule, it would be improper after a lapse of almost three years to shut the doors of this Court and direct that the petitioners should seek reliefs elsewhere or approach either the Human Rights Court or for that matter, the National Human Rights Commission. In our view, the petition can be decided and adequate reliefs granted on the basis of the material available on record in view of the admission that the said two accused were handcuffed and the explanation for the handcuffing, as we shall show little later, being wholly untenable and nothing but a glib talk, if we may use that expression, to cover up the said handcuffing. In other words, once handcuffing is admitted, parading can be inferred. We need not go to the statements recorded by the learned Sessions Judge except those affidavits submitted by the respondents themselves, particularly the affidavit of Police Inspector, Salim Shaik.

16. First of all, we must refer to the affidavit filed on behalf of respondent Nos.l to 3, in which, the Deputy Inspector General of Police has clearly admitted that the report submitted by the Sub-Divisional Police Officer, dated 14-07-2003, did reveal certain lapses on the part of the police and, therefore, they were transferred. Although disciplinary proceedings against P.S.I. Rajan Nigalye, the Investigating Officer and P.I. Salim Shaik, the Police Inspector in-charge of Panjim Police Station, were ordered to be initiated, there is no whisper from Senior Counsel Shri. Kakodkar, as to what happened to the said disciplinary proceedings and, we can only conclude that the respondent Nos. 1 to 3 are really not interested in taking any action against the said P.S.I. Nigalye and P.I. Salim Shaik and are only dragging their feet. If certain lapses were revealed then it was appropriate that the respondent State took disciplinary action against the guilty Police Officers, which has not been done till date. In our view, transfer of the said Police Officers was not the remedy. Remedy lay is taking disciplinary action, if found guilty. As already stated, handcuffing of the said two accused is admitted and from the facts disclosed, it can be certainly established that the said two accused were paraded and not necessarily in connection with investigations but for extraneous reasons. No doubt, the said two accused had a rather colourful past in that accused Nilesh V. Mangueshkar had four offences registered against him apart from a Chapter case but they pertained to the years 1998 and the year 1999, respectively. Likewise, against accused Kamlesh Naik, there were four offences registered but the last was of the year 1993 and two Chapter cases of the year 1994-95. However, it is an admitted position that both the said accused had voluntarily surrendered before the Court on 24-06-2003 and, thereafter, were taken by the police to conduct a recovery panchanama on 25-06-2003, when it is alleged that at the instance of accused Kamlesh, a danda was recovered and at the instance of accused Nilesh, a knife/sword was recovered. There has been no explanation why the so-called hideout panchanama for which the accused were allegedly taken on 28-06-2003, was not conducted at the same time or on the same day when said panchanama of recovery under section 27 of the Evidence Act was conducted on 25-06-2003. The accused were also taken on 26-06-2003 for a remand and it is not the case of respondent Nos.4 to 6, that on the aforesaid two occasions, the said two accused had misbehaved or attempted to free from custody and were required to be handcuffed. We are also unable to understand as to why the P.S.I, had to drive the jeep himself. The petitioners have alleged that the said accused were paraded in underwear. We see from the arrest panchanama that both the accused were wearing jeans pants and it has been now stated on behalf of respondent Nos.4 to 6, that at the time of the said hideout panchanama, they were wearing shorts without explaining as to when the said accused were provided with the shorts. There is no contemporary record produced to show that both the said accused were provided shorts after they had changed their jeans pants. The affidavit of Police Inspector, Salim Shaik, clearly discloses that the Police Officers were fully aware of the directions issued by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Citizens of Democracy (supra), and yet, chose to violate the same in letter and spirit. That the weather was gloomy or that it was getting dark, as sought to be projected by Police Inspector Salim Shaik, had nothing to do with the handcuffing of the accused. There is also no explanation as to why towards the end of the day on 24-06-2003, that suddenly a decision was taken to carry out the said hideout panchanama. The hideout panchanama is something, which is unheard of in investigation of criminal cases in as much as even if an accused points out to a place as a place where he was hiding, it can have no relevance in a criminal trial. If -a hideout panchanama was so necessary, there is no explanation as to why it was not carried out at Calangute where the said accused were also stated to have hidden themselves. The fact that Taleigao was declared as a hypersensitive area for the purpose of the elections held in June, 2002, is also not convincing because the heat which is sometimes generated during the time of elections, is not expected to stay for a whole year and, in any event, it must be observed that the said two accused were earlier taken to Taleigao and presumably without putting any handcuffs. If at all it was a Saturday and a Court holiday, the said two accused could have been taken at any time to the residence of the Magistrate apart from the fact that the Magistrates are also known to do roster duty in the morning session on holidays. It is also not the case of the respondents that they had intimated the J.M.F.C. on 29-06-2002, when they were produced, about the said handcuffing, as contemplated in the case of Sunil Gupta (supra). The explanations for handcuffing given are nothing but a sham and are only excuses put forward on behalf of respondent Nos.4 to 6 in order to justify the handcuffing of the said two accused inspite of knowing fully well the directions issued by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Citizens for Democracy (supra). They are not at all convincing and, therefore, have got to be rejected and after the same are rejected, what remains is the fact that the accused were paraded with handcuffs by respondent Nos.4 to 6 without any apparent reason and which means that it was done with a view only to humiliate them. There is no contemporaneous record produced by the respondents, which reflects the so-called reasons justifying their action of handcuffing, apart from the fact that neither prior or post Magisterial permission was not taken. We would not be concerned in this petition, at whose instance the said parading was done.

17. The Apex Court in the case of Bandhua Mukti Morcha Vs. Union of India & Ors. ((1984)3 SCC 161), has stated that it is the fundamental right of everyone in this country, assured under the interpretation given to Article 21 by this Court in Francis Mullin's case ((1981)1 SCC 608), to live with human dignity free from exploitation. This right to live with human dignity enshrined in Article 21 of the Constitution derives its life breath from the Directive Principles of State Policy and particularly clauses (e) and (0 of Article 39 and Articles 41 and 42. The Supreme Court has further stated that where a person or class of persons to whom legal injury is caused by reason of violation of a fundamental right is unable to approach the Court for judicial redress on account of poverty or disability or socially or economically disadvantaged position, any member of the public acting bonafide can move the Court for relief under Article 32 and a fortiorari, also under Article 226, so that the fundamental rights may become meaningful not only for the rich and the well-to-do who have the means to approach the Court but also for the large masses of people who are living a life of want and destitution and who are by reason of lack of awareness, assertiveness and resources, unable to seek judicial redress. We have already indicated the circumstances under which, this petition came to be admitted by this Court and rule issued.

18. The case of State of Maharashtra & Ors. Vs. Ravikant S. Patil ((1991)2 SCC 373), was a case where the accused was arrested with the allegations of murder and was handcuffed and both his arms were tied by a rope and he was taken through the streets and a Division Bench of this Court has held that the Police Inspector had subjected the under trial to unwarranted humiliation and indignity and directed him to pay compensation and he was also censured. In Appeal, the Apex Court did not interfere with the direction of payment of compensation but directed that the same be paid by the State and directed the concerned authorities, if they thought necessary, to hold an inquiry and decide whether any further action had to be taken against the said Inspector of Police Shri. Prakash Chavan.

19. In the case of Fattuji Vs. The Superintendent of Police, Akola & Ors. (2002 ALL MR (Cri) 107), a Division Bench of this Court dealt with the death of an accused in custody and directed the State to compensate the children of the deceased in the sum of Rs. 1,75,0007- and further directed the State not only to take disciplinary proceedings against the Police Officers, who were found responsible for the death of the said accused Suresh Fattuji Gedam, while in police lock-up but also to prosecute them for having committed offence to which they may be found guilty in the course of investigation by handing over the investigation of the case to an Officer of the rank of D.I.G. Police or above. The Court also directed action to be initiated against all those Police Officers, who were on duty at the Police Station during the time when the deceased was arrested and till his death. In the case of Shobha Anil Londase Vs. State of Maharashtra & Ors. (2003 ALL MR (Cri) 1491), another Division Bench of this Court, to which one of us were parties (R.M.S. Khandeparkar, J.) also dealt with custodial death and ordered compensation to be paid in the sum of Rs.3,00,000/- to the petitioner being the husband of the said accused within a period of six weeks and to file compliance report. The Court also directed to hold necessary inquiry to fix up responsibility to contribute the said compensation and ordered to take necessary steps in accordance to the provisions of law to recover the same from those persons and further directed compliance report to be filed within a time prescribed. This Court also directed to initiate necessary proceedings against all the persons responsible for the custodial death of the husband of the petitioner namely Anil Londase and to take legal action against those persons and directed that compliance report be filed within the stipulated time.

20. In the last two cases, referred to herein above, this Court followed the principle laid down by the Apex Court inNilabati Behera Vs. State of Orissa (1993(2) SCC 746), that enforcement of constitutional right and grant of redress embraces award of compensation as part of legal consequences of its contravention and award of compensation is a remedy available in public law, based on strict liability for contravention of fundamental rights.

21. In the case at hand, although respondent Nos. 1 and 3 came to the conclusion, on an inquiry report submitted by the Sub-Divisional Police Officer, that there were certain lapses on the part of the police and, accordingly, transferred all the six Police Officers/Officials, nothing happened as far as the disciplinary proceedings ordered to be initiated against P.S.I. Rajan Nigalye and P.I. Salim Shaik and it has been alleged by the petitioners that inspite of the said Order to initiate disciplinary proceedings, at one stage, P.S.I. Rajan Nigalye was promoted and then again reverted. The handcuffing of the said two accused has been admitted. The reasons assigned for the said handcuffing cannot at all be accepted and they are only a ruse to justify the actions of respondent Nos.4 to 6 and the parading of the said two accused in handcuffs, which was done only to humiliate them. We, therefore, direct the respondent State to compensate each of the said two accused for violation of their human rights and consequent humiliation meted out to them by parading them in handcuffs, in the sum of Rs. 15,0007- each. We further direct respondent No.3 to file a compliance report within a period of six weeks from today, as regards payment of compensation. We direct the respondent State to hold and complete the disciplinary proceedings against respondent Nos.4 to 6, Police Officers, within a period of six months from today and file compliance report within two weeks thereafter. Respondent-State will be at liberty to recover the said compensation from respondent Nos.4 to 6 as deem fit and in accordance with law. We make it clear that no observations made herein will come in the way of prosecution of the said accused in Crime No.96/03.

In view of the above, Rule is made absolute in terms of above directions with costs ofRs.5,000/-. Petition allowed

"K. V. Rajendran .. v.. Inspector of Police"

Cri. O.P. No. 19352 of 1998 and Cri. M.P. No. 9037 of 1998, D/- 1 -3 -2001.

A] Protection of Human Rights – Abuse of power by Govt. officers and Police - Illegal Confinement and brutal torture by Revenue officer – Victim lodge report to police – Police conducted biased enquiry – The accused R.D.O. was allowed to continue to work as RDO in the very same jurisdiction during the enquiry period is highly illegal – Tahsildar/Trainee Magistrate and Police constable and sub-Inspector of Police helped the accused by exceeding their limit – When the statutory authority, namely Police failed to perform their duty under section 154 of Cri. P.C., it is the bounden duty of the High Court to invoke the power u.s. 482 of Cr. P.c. to give suitable direction to register FIR and investigate – The judiciary which is the sentinel of the great liberty of citizens would certainly intervene in the cases where the human dignity is wounded in order to uphold human values and to protect the rights guaranteed under the constitution – Dy. S.P. , C.I.D. was directed to register FIR and take suitable action against the concerned officials.

B] No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is a part of Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

C] The victim was beaten brutally by the RDO and Policemen. He was produced before trainee Magistrate and remand order was obtained even without recording his complaint of torture – the primary report called from the CID support the allegations of petitioner.

D] Human Rights commission - Dropping of enquiry by Human Rights Commission is a no obstacle for the proposed registration of FIR against guilty officers – The petitioner sent a petition to the Commission which was referred to the collector – Collector sent a report to the commission to drop the action as allegations were not proved so commission closed the case and directed the victim that if aggrieved he can approach to any other courts for vindication of his rights – dropping of enquiry by Human Rights Commission is a no obstacle for the proposed registration of FIR against guilty officers – The judiciary cannot keep quiet by shutting its eyes to the illegalities commited by govt. officials.

Judgement

ORDER :- No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment" is a part of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The content of Article 21 of our Constitution, read in the light of Article 19, is similarly elevating. But romance about human rights and rhetoric about constitutional mandates lose credibility if, in practice, the protectors of law and minions of the State become engines of terror and panic people into fear. We are constrained to make these observations as our conscience is in consternation when we read the facts of the case which have given rise to the order challenged before us in this petition.

2. I am reminded of the above observation made by Justice Krishna Iyer, while I go through the facts of this case which are so shocking.

3. K. V. Rajendran, a Senior Lecturer in Physics Department in the Presidency College, Chennai has filed this petition under Section 482, Cr.P.C. seeking for a direction to the respondents police to register an F.I.R. based on the complaint dated 2-9-1998 against Mr. Karunakaran Revenue Divisional Officer, Mayiladuthurai, the sixth respondent herein and other officials for having brutally tortured him and committed other illegal acts between 26-8-1998 and 28-8-1998 and for transfer of the investigation from the State Police to the Central Bureau of Investigation, the fifth respondent herein and also to order payment of compensation.

4. The case of the petitioner as found in his affidavit filed along with the petition is summarised as follows :

"(a) The petitioner hails from the village Tharangampadi in Nagapattinam District. His parents and brothers live in Perumalpet, hamlet of Tarangampadi village. The petitioner has been working as a Lecturer after finishing his M.Sc. and M.Phil. in Madras University for the past ten years in different Government Colleges in Ponneri, Villupuram, Krishnagiri and Tindivanam. For the last two years, he has been working as a Senior Lecturer in the Presidency College, Chennai.

(b) On 26-8-1998, Vinayaka Chathurthi day, he left Madras and reached his village in the evening. After dinner, his younger brother Kannan and himself went to the separate room situate near to his house and slept there. At about 11.00 p.m. 10 people headed by the sixth respondent the Revenue Divisional Officer woke them up by shouting and forcibly took the petitioner and put him in the Government jeep which was parked at a distance. Though the petitioner came to know from them that they were all Government officials, they refused to explain why they were arresting and where they were taking him to. Even while the jeep was going, the R.D.O. the sixth respondent began to beat him and asked him as to whether he had given false information to him through telephone regarding smuggling of teakwood from the area. He replied that he was not the person who phoned up.

(c) Then, the jeep reached the Tharangampadi Taluk Office, he was taken inside the room. The R.D.O. in the presence of other officials who were all Tahsildar and Police Constable in the mufti, asked him whether he had made telephone complaint regarding the inaction of the officials over the smuggling of teakwood in the area. Once again, he replied in the negative. The R.D.O. getting infuriated started slapping him on his face several times and gave severe blows with his hands. He also instigated the Head Constable who was one among the gathered people to beat him. After continuous beating by the R.D.O. and the Head Constable for about 15 minutes, the petitioner was quetioned about the private life, profession, family members, etc. He gave all the details. Even then, the R.D.O. did not stop beating. He stood in front of him, held both his shoulders tightly and raised his knee and focibly smashed his testicles. He cried out with unbearable pain and fell down on the floor. Then, the R.D.O. began to threaten him asking to give in writing that he was the person who had telephonically called him asking him to take action against smuggling of teakwood. Even after brutal and violent treatment, he refused to heed to the dictates of the R.D.O. Then, the R.D.O. ordered that he be made to stand with his hands placed on two tables. When he was so standing, he took his metal torch light and dealt two blows on his left hand causing serious injuries on the fingures. Thereafter, with the same torch, the RDO gave two blows on the back portion of his head near the lower skull region. Unable to cope up with the pain, he finally caved in and said that he would sign in any papers. Immediately thereafter, the RDO. Ordered white sheets of papers to be brought and obtained his signature on the blank sheets. The R.D.O. thereafter dictated a statement purporting to be his confession which one of the officials wrote on the blank sheets bearing his signature.

(d) When this occurrence had taken place, he was surrounded by the Tahsildar, revenue officials and mufti police. When he was kept in the Taluk Office in the night of 26/27-8-98, one of the policemen forced him to part with a "Navaratne" ring, which he was wearing. During that time, his brother Kannan along with another co-villager Ravi reached the Taluk Office and personally witnessed the beating inflicted on him. Seeing the inhuman treatment and fearing for his life, they rushed to the local M.L.A. and informed him. But, despite the phone call from local M.L.A. the petitioner was tortured and his signature was obtained in the blank papers. Then, the R.D.O. handed over the petitioner along with signed papers to the Sub-Inspector of Police. Even then, the R.D.O. asked the Sub-Inspector of Police to give him proper treatment in the lock up.

(e) On the basis of the said instruction, the Sub-Inspector of Police took the petitioner to the adjoining Police Station and instructed the policemen present there to chain the ankles to the table of the Writer of the Police Station. Accordingly, it was done. Although the petitioner was crying in great pain and his hands, head and other parts of the body were swollen, the Sub-Inspector of Police did not offer any help.

(f) Next day, i.e. on 27-8-1998 morning, his brother Kannan along with one Marimuthu came to the Police Station and saw him still chained. At about 10.30 a.m. the petitioner was taken in a car to Mayiladuthurai along with some other accused who were brought with him were produced before the concerned Magistrate. But, the petitioner alone was kept aside. Only at 2.00 p.m. he was taken to another room where he was produced before some other Magistrate. Before entering the room, the escorting policemen warned him not to complain about the torture inflicted on him. However, when he was produced before the said Magistrate, he began to narrate the incident by which he was attacked by the R.D.O. and sought for urgent medical treatment. But, the said Magistrate did not arrange for the same, but merely remanded him.

(g) Thereafter, he was taken to Sub Jail, Poraiyar. There, he informed the Jailor about the injuries and requested for the treatment. The Jailor told him that duty doctor would come only next day, i.e. on 28-8-1998. He spent that night in extreme pain without any first aid or medicines in the jail. Next day at 12.00 noon, the duty doctor visited the Sub Jail and examined him and made entries in the register regarding his injuries. On seeing the injuries on head, left hand, testicles and other parts of the body, he was given O.P. chit. In the evening, as per the orders of the Judicial Magistrate No. 2, Mayiladuthurai, he was released for taking appropriate treatment.

(h) Since he had acute pain in private parts, he came to Chennai and got treatment from one Dr. Neelmogam, a Senior Doctor. At the request of the petitioner, on that date itself, office-bearers of the Teachers' Association sent a complaint detailing the brutal attacks made on the petitioner by Karunakaran, the R.D.O., Mayiladuthurai, to the Chief Minister, D.G.P. and other officials. As a result of several petitions given by the petitioner to various authorities, the D.R.O., Nagapattianam was asked to conduct an enquiry. He appeared before him and gave all the relevant materials. However, the D.R.O. persuaded him to compromise the matter and not to proceed against the R.D.O., Karunakaran. When he found that the enquiry was only an 'eye-wash' and police did not take any action, he again sent reminders to the higher officials.

(i) In the meantime, he also came to know that the Deputy Superintendent of Police, S.B. CID, Nagapattinam was entrusted with the task of enquiring into the allegations and after enquiry, the report has been forwarded to the senior police officials. Though D.R.O. enquiry has not been conducted properly, it is reliably understood that the Deputy Superintendent of Police, S.B. CID, Nagapattinam has collected materials and sent the report stating that the allegations in the complaint given by the petitioner are true. Despite that, no action has been taken by the police by registering the F.I.R. and conducting the investigation against the said R.D.O. and other officials. Hence, he has filed this application for the above directions."

5. Originally, the petition was filed only against five respondents. On finding that there are serious allegations against the R.D.O. who is Government official, the permission was sought from this Court by filing separate application in Crl. M.P. No. 9123 of 2000 to implead the said Karunakaran, R.D.O. as one of the respondents. This Court ordered the said petition and allowed to implead him as sixth respondent.

6. Though totally there are six respondents, the counter-affidavits have been filed only by the second respondent, viz., Superintendent of Police, Nagapattinam, District and Karunakaran, R.D.O., Mayiladuthurai, the sixth respondent herein.

7. The statement of the sixth respondent as found in the counter is briefly stated as follows :-

"Karunakaran, the sixth respondent was originally working as Assistant Professor in the Colleges. In 1996, he was selected in the Group I services and appointed as Deputy Collector in the year 1997. He took up his training between 24-4-1997 and 17-8-1998. He joined at Mayiladuthurai as the Revenue Divisional Officer only on 17-8-1998. On 26-8-1998 at about 4.30 p.m. he received a telephone call at his office and the caller informed that one Rajendran, son of Perumal of Vellakoil had secreted teak and sandalwood in the house and asked him to go and seize the same. The caller further informed that when the customs officials were infomed of the same, they visited the place and after receiving bribe they had gone away and that if he also does not initiate action, the same would be published in the daily "The Indian Express". The caller claimed to be one Prasad, a Reporter in Indian Express. Thereafter, he went along with his P.A. and other assistants proceeded in jeep and reached Vellakoil at about 7.00 p.m. and inspected the residence of Rajendran of Vellakoil and no teak or sandalwood was found secreted. Thereafter, he enquired from the said villagers in order to ascertain as to who could have given a false information over the telephone. On enquiry from the villagers, he came to know that the petitioner was the only person who was educated in the village and fluent in speaking English. Therefore, Karunakaran went and questioned the petitioner. Thereafter, he was brought to Taluk Office and there, he was enquired about the telephone conversation. During interrogation, the petitioner gave a statement voluntarily stating that he only gave the false information through telephone. After recording his statement, he handed over his written statement along with him to the police for further enquiry. But, the petitioner gave a complaint to the State Human Rights Commission alleging torture. The District Revenue Officer, on the direction of the Commission, conducted enquiry on his complaint. After finishing the same, the D.R.O. sent a report to the Collector stating that the allegations are false. As such, the averments in the complaint and the affidavit filed by the petitioner are not true. The sixth respondent was also working as an Assistant Professor in College and his parents were also Teachers and as such, he could not indulge in such sort of inhuman activities."

8. The main crux of the counter filed by the second respondent-the Superintendent of Police, Nagapattinam, is this :

"He had also received a complaint from the petitioner relating to the torture by Karunakaran, R.D.O. and on receipt of the same, he directed the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Sirkazhi for enquiring into the matter in reference No. G2/28010/98. In the meantime, it came to be known that the State Human Rights Commission was already enquiring into the matter and therefore, it was decided that no parallel enquiry need be conducted at that time. Ultimately, the State Human Rights Commission also passed an order on 8-10-1998 closing the enquiry. The Deputy Superintendent of Police, Sirkazhi sent a report closing the enquiry on the basis of the Human Rights Commission on the basis of the recommendation of the District Collector in the light of the report of the District Revenue Officer."

9. Pending the main Crl. O.P. No. 19352 of 1998 before this Court, the petitioner also filed Crl. M.P. No. 5358 of 1999 requesting this Court to direct the third respondent-Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID and the fourth respondent-Chief Secretary to Government to produce the report of the third respondent sent to the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, CID, Chennai. In that application, the direction was given to the third respondent to produce his report in a sealed cover before this Court by the order dated 7-12-2000. Accordingly, the same was produced before this Court.

10. On going through the said report, it is seen that one of the complaints which had been sent by the petitioner was received by the Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Chennai also and he directed the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Nagapattinam to conduct a confidential enquiry with regard to the allegations contained in the complaint given by the petitioner regarding the acts of torture committed by Karunakaran and other officials and on that direction, Mr. Sethunathan, D.S.P., SB CID conducted the enquiry and examined several persons and sent a report dated 27-9-1998 stating that the confidential enquiry revealed that most of the allegations made by the petitioner are true.

11. In the light of the above pleadings of the respective parties and the materials placed before this Court, it would be appropriate to deal with the question whether the petitioner would be entitled to reliefs sought for in this petition.

12. According to the petitioner, Karunakaran, R.D.O., Mayiladuthurai, the sixth respondent, suspecting that the petitioner who is an educated person had telephonically asked the R.D.O. to search the premises of one Rajendran of Vellakoil in order to seize the teak and sandalwood secreted, thereby giving false information, took him forcibly when he was sleeping inside his room in Tharangampadi village on 26-8-1998 at about 11.00 p.m. He was taken to Tharangampadi Taluk Office and beaten brutally by torch light and hands on the head and hands causing serious injuries and by knee smashing his testicles and also asked the other police personnel who were in mufti to beat him severely and he was made to put signatures in the blank sheets by compelling him to admit that he was the person who gave the wrong information telephonically. Under the instruction of the R.D.O., the Sub-Inspector of Police also took him to the Police Station where he was chained to a table and he was not given medical aid nor was he allowed to report the matter to the Magistrate before whom he was produced. He got the first aid treatment in the Jail and after came out on bail, he was treated by a senior doctor at Chennai and obtained the certificate that he has sustained grievous injuries on the hands and other injuries on the private parts and head.

13. On the other hand, it is the contention of the sixth respondent Karunakaran, R.D.O. that he did not beat the petitioner. He had a telephonic message from a person who was posing himself as a Reporter in Indian Express that one Rajendran of Vellakoil had concealed the teak and sandalwood in his house and if he does not take action against him, the matter will be published in the Indian Express and on hearing the message, he went and inspected the house of the said Rajendran and he found nothing of that sort and when he enquired the villagers, he came to know that the only person who was conversant with English was the petitioner and therefore, he took him to the Taluk Office and interrogated him and thereafter, he recorded his confession and handed over the confession statement and the petitioner to the Sub-Inspector of Police.

14. Admittedly, both the petitioner and the sixth respondent were not known to each other. It cannot be disputed that the petitioner is a permanent resident of Chennai working as a Senior Lecturer in the Presidency College and he came to the village on 26-8-1998 being the Vinayagar Sathurthi Day. It is also not disputed by the sixth respondent that on suspicion, he was taken to Taluk Office where he was interrogated and after obtaining his statement, he was handed over to the police, who, in turn, registered the case against the petitioner.

15. It is the specific case of the petitioner that he was woken up, taken in a jeep forcibly, beaten in the jeep itself and thereafter, he was brutally beaten with torch light on the hands and head by the R.D.O. at Taluk Office, After he was released on bail, he came to Chennai and got treatment from the Doctor. Thereafter, he sent petition after petition to the higher officials not only by himself but also through the Teachers' Association in which he was one of the members. He also approached the State Human Rights Commission by giving a petition and sent a complaint to the Chief Minister and also gave a complaint to the Superintendent of Police, Magapattinam in whose jurisdiction the occurrence had taken place. In such a situation, the enquiry was initiated by the officials concerned.

16. As stated above, on receipt of the complaint from the petitioner, the State Human Rights Commission directed the District Collector to conduct enquiry and the District Collector also, in turn, directed the District Revenue Officer, Nagapattinam to conduct enquiry. Similarly, the Superintendent of Police, Nagapattinam also directed the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Sirkazhi to conduct enquiry. Besides this, the Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Chennai also directed the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Nagapattinam to conduct a confidential enquiry and sent a report.

17. Now, it is seen from the affidavits filed by the parties that the District Revenue Officer conducted enquiry by examining witnesses and sent the report to the District Collector stating that the allegations are not proved. Accordingly, the District Collector accepted the report and sent the intimation to the State Human Rights Commission. On the basis of the said report, the Human Rights Commission closed the enquiry. However, the Human Rights Commission specifically gave liberty to the petitioner that if he is still aggrieved, he can approach the concerned Human Rights Court or other Court for vindication of his right in accordance with law.

18. As indicated above, the Superintendent of Police, Nagapattinam did not pursue the enquiry, since parallel enquiry was conducted by the District Revenue Officer on the orders of the Human Rights Commission. but, separate confidential enquiry was conducted by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Nagapattinam on the direction of the Superintendent of Police and a report was sent on 27-9-1999 stating that the allegations of illegal detention, torture and assault on the petitioner by Karunakaran, R.D.O., Mayiladuthurai, are true.

19. In the meantime, this appliction seeking for the direction to register the F.I.R. and to hand over the investigation to C.B.I. has been filed on 28-10-1998 and the same has been entertained by this Court on 3-11-1998.

20. Under these circumstances, the finding given by the District Revenue Officer or the order accepting the said report by the District Collector and consequential order passed by the State Human Rights Commission would not disentitle the petitioner to approach this Court seeking for the suitable direction from this Court by invoking inherent powers, especially when the SB CID through confidential enquiry had come to the conclusion that the allegations are true.

21. In this context, this Court is constrained to refer to the following important aspects in order to decide whether the grievance expressed by the petitioner has to be redressed by this Court or not.

22. The petitioner while he was sleeping in his room at the village at about 11.00 p.m. Mr. Karunakaran, R.D.O. the sixth respondent took him, put him in the jeep and brought him to the Taluk Office. The reason for such action given by the sixth respondent in his counter that on the telephonic information given by one Prasad claiming to be a Reporter, India Express regarding the stock of teak and sandalwood in the house of one Rajendran, he went and inspected the said place, but no teak or sandalwood was found secreted and therefore, on suspicion, as he was informed that the petitioner alone was the English speaking person in the village, he took him to the Taluk Office and enquired from him about the telephonic conversation. In the light of this admission, the statement given by the petitioner that he was forcibly taken to the Taluk Office and he was beaten and injuries were inflicted on his testicles by smashing it with knees and the injuries were inflicted on the head and hand by means of torch light by Karunakaran assumes significance. As stated above, the petitioner who is stranger to the sixth respondent had no reason to file the complaint against the R.D.O. by constantly pursuing his request to the officials to take action against him by tapping at the doors of several forums not only by himself but also through Teachers' Association.

23. If the R.D.O. had a genuine suspicion about the petitioner, he had no business to take the petitioner forcibly to the Taluka Office under the garb of enquiry. He would also admit in the counter-affidavit that "since I did not want to embarrass the petitioner in the presence of the villagers, I had brought him to the Taluk Office and enquired him about the telephonic conversation". This sentence would clearly indicate that the sixth respondent wanted that the petitioner shall be suitably dealt with, which cannot be done in the presence of the villagers and therefore, the petitioner was compelled to come with R.D.O. to Taluk Office where the "so-called interrogation" was done.

24. It shall be stated in this context, the law does not authorise the R.D.O. to take a person from his house when he was sleeping in order to enquire about a particular matter at his office. If actually he had any suspicion, that must have been enquired into through proper channel. This act of taking the petitioner forcibly to the Taluk Office is nothing but high-handedness. It is also seen from his counter-affidavit that he is aged about 37 years and he just finished his training on 17-8-1998 and joined at Mayiladuthurai as Revenue Divisional Officer, on the same date i.e. on 17-8-1998. Within nine days, this occurrence had taken place.

25. According to the petitioner, unable to bear the pain over the torture inflicted by the sixth respondent and the police and other officials, he put the signatures in the blank papers. The papers were filled up by one of the officials on the dictation of the R.D.O. According to the R.D.O. it was a voluntary. Had it been a voluntary one, there is no reason as to why the petitioner himself had not written the said statement in his own handwriting. It is also noted that after finishing the writing, the petitioner was asked to read the said written statement and the same was tape recorded. It is found in the enquiry report that R.D.O. admitted having tape recorded. The very fact that the statement of the petitioner at the compulsion of the R.D.O. was read out by the petitioner and the same was tape recorded would itself show that the said statement would not be a voluntary one.

26. Thereafter, the statement was counter-signed by the sixth respondent and the same was handed over to the Sub-Inspector of Police who was present then in the Taluk Office. The Sub-Inspector of Police also was asked to give "proper treatment" to the petitioner in the lock-up. Accordingly, the petitioner was taken to the police station, where he was chained to the table of the Writer and he was not allowed even to pass urine. Both the occurrences relating to the beating by the RDO and other officials and chaining to the table in the police station were seen by the brother of the petitioner and two other local villagers. These facts have not been specifically denied by the Sub-Inspector of Police by filing his counter. On the other hand, the Superintendent of Police, Nagapattinam, the second respondent has filed a counter-affidavit stating that on 26/27-8-1998 at 01.00 hrs. Karunakaran, Revenue Divisional Officer, Mayiladuthurai appeared in person and gave a complaint to him and the same was registered. The relevant portion of the counter is as follows :-

"On 26/27-8-98 at 01.00 hrs. Tr. Karunakaran, Revenue Divisional Officer, Mayiladuthurai appeared in person with a person. He preferred a complaint to me against one Tr. V. Rajendran, S/o Varadarajan (35/98) of Meenayar St., Perumal Pettai who was brought by him. A statement had been recorded by him from the said Rajendran. Tr. Rajendran had admitted in that statement that he had given a phone call to the Revenue Divisional Officer, Mayiladuthurai impersonating as a Reporter of "Indian Express" stating that huge quantity of sandalwood and teak wood logs were being hidden in the house of one Tr. Rajendran S/o Perumal in a house under construction.

On verification by the Revenue Divisional Officer, Mayiladuthurai, it was found as a false one and on enquiry from 7.00 p.m. to 11.30 p.m. the Revenue Diivisional Officer has detected the person who has given the anonymous call as Tr. Rajendran S/o Varadarajan. The said Rajendran had admitted that he is responsible for giving wrong direction to officials in discharging their duty.

The said Rajendran was indentified as a Lecturer in Government Presidency College, Madras in the department of Micro Physics. On the basis of the personal complaint by Revenue Divisional Officer, Mayiladuthurai, a case was registered in Poraiyar Police Station Cr. No. 542/98 under Sections 177, 186 and 506 (ii), IPC in Sl. No. 146 of FIR at 01.00 hrs. on 26/27-8-98 and the accused was arrested after observing all usual formalities. On 27-8-98, he was produced before the learned Judicial Magistrate No. II, Mayiladuthurai and he was remanded to judicial custody as per the orders of the learned Magistrate and on the next day he was bailed out."

27. The statement made by the Superintendent of Police, the second respondent herein, in the counter would show as if the complaint was made to the Superintendent of Police by the Revenue Divisional Officer. This is not factually correct. The reading of the F.I.R. registered in Crime No. 542/98 under Sections 177, 186 and 506(ii), I.P.C. would reveal that the statement of the petitioner was handed over along with him to the Sub-Inspector of Police for necessary action. This statement itself shows that the arrest was shown at 01.00 hrs. on 26/27-8-1998. Therefore, between 11.30 p.m. and 1.00 midnight, the petitioner was in the illegal custody of the R.D.O. at Taluk Office where so-called confession was obtained from the petitioner.

28. Furthermore, it is not known as to how the statement alleging that he gave a false information would attract the offences under Sections 177, 186 and 506(ii), I.P.C. The very fact that the complaint was registered immediately for these offences even without verification whether these would attract any cognizable offence would show that the F.I.R. could not have been registered without the specific instruction to do so by the R.D.O. Even in the counter filed by Karunakaran, R.D.O., he mentioned in para 21, "I humbly submit that I had in fact requested the police not to object to the petitioner being enlarged on bail". When he instructed the Sub-Inspector of Police not to object to the bail petition, it goes without saying that he thinks that he has got power to give a suitable instruction to Sub-Inspector of Police either to register a case or to say no objection in the bail petition. This is nothing but ignorance of law.

29. At this stage, it is relevant to note that in the counter filed by the Superintendent of Police, the second respondent, at the end of para 3, it is mentioned that "the investigation in Cr. No. 542/98 was completed and was referred as mistake of law on 23-12-98". This would clearly show that there is not material that he was the person who gave the false information to the R.D.O. and the R.D.O. only on suspicion, took the law into his own hands and tortured the petitioner by making brutal attacks by causing injuries on the various parts of the body including private parts by smashing the same with knees.

30. Yet another disturbing feature at this stage is to be noticed. According to the petitioner, he was taken to the Court along with the other accused who were involved in the other cases and though all the other accused were produced before the jurisdiction Judicial Magistrate, he was not produced before the said Magistrate and he was kept aside and at 2.00 p.m. he was produced before some other Magistrate who was called to be a Special Magistrate who happened to be the Tahsildar working under the R.D.O., Karunakaran, the sixth respondent herein. It is stated by the petitioner when he entered into the room of the Special Tahsildar, he was warned by escorting police officials that he should not complain about the torture. However, when he was produced before the Special Magistrate, he complained and showed the injuries, but the said Magistrate did not take note of it, but simply remanded him.

31. The fact that he was not produced before the regular Magistrate and he was produced before the Trainee Magistrate who happened to be a Tahsildar has not been denied. There is also no explanation as to why such a discrimination was shown to the petitioner alone. This shows that the Special Magistrate/Tahsildar, who ought to have recorded the statement of the petitioner about the torture against the R.D.O. had not recorded while he was remanded, probably for helping the R.D.O. from future problem.

32. Moreover, it is admitted by the Superintendent of Police, the second respondent in his counter that along with the R.D.O., on receipt of telephonic information, Police Constable accompanied the R.D.O. to Vellakoil village and searched the house of the said Rajendran and thereafter, went to the house of the petitioner. Thus, it is clear that the Constables and Head Constable were there throughout along with the R.D.O., both when the petitioner was taken forcibly to the Taluk Office and he was beaten brutally by the R.D.O. and other policemen. That was the reason why he was not produced before the regular Magistrate, but belatedly he was produced before the Trainee Magistrate/Tahsildar and remand order was obtained even without recording his complaint of torture.

33. The above factors would reveal that from the beginning, the police personnel as well as the Tahsildar/Special Magistrate have either helped the R.D.O., the sixth respondent in exercise of their duty by exceeding their limit or they have acted illegally at the specific instruction of the said R.D.O. under whom they were working under different capacities.

34. At this juncture, the report submitted by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID as directed by this Court on the basis of the confidential enquiry conducted by him on the direction of the Superintendent of Police, SB, CID, Ngapattinam District assumes great importance. On going through the report, it is clear that the observation made in the earlier paragraphs by me would find support. On perusal of the said report, it is obvious that the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB, CID conducted confidential enquiry by examining the relevant and important witnesses at various quarters and found that the most of the allegations contained in the complaint given by the petitioner as against Karunakaran, R.D.O., Mayiladuthurai are correct.

35. The gist of the conclusions arrived at by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID after such confidential enquiry could be summarised as below :-

(1) On 26-8-1998 at about 4.30 p.m. Mr. Karunakaran, R.D.O., Mayiduthurai received a phone call to his office phone number at Mayiladuthurai that sandalwood and teak wood were stocked in the house of one Rajendran of Vallakoil. The caller introducing himself as Prasad, the Editor of Indian Express, told him that if no action is taken immediately, he would publish about this in Indian Express. Therefore, the R.D.O. called Muthuvel, Headquarters Deputy Tahsildar along with jeep of the latter to his office. He requested the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Mayiladuthurai to provide two Constables for his operation. Accordingly, they were sent to the R.D.O.'s office. Then, the R.D.O. proceeded along with the Tahsildar, officials of the R.D.O. and the Police Constables. He went to the house of Rajendran of Vellakoil and searched his house for sandalwood and teak wood but nothing was found. During this search, the R.D.O. told him that the informant through phone asking him to search his premises used English words also and enquired as to who could have done this. Then, Vellakoil Rajendran and others told R.D.O. that the petitioner K. V. Rajendran must have informed through the telephone or must be the person who informed R.D.O. as he is the only person ill-disposed towards Vellakoil Rajedran and well-versed in English. On this information, the R.D.O. went along with the other officials to the house of the petitioner Rajendran around 11.00 a.m. and took him in the jeep to Taluk Office, Tharangampadi.

(2) Kannan, the younger brother of the petitioner was not allowed to accompany the petitioner in the jeep. Thereafter, Kannan went along with one Ravi to Taluk Office. He stated in the enquiry that he witnessed the beating by the R.D.O. The petitioner stated that he reported to Dr. K. Durairaj, Poraiyar during his routine check-up of prisoners on 27-8-1998 showing injuries on his body. The doctor has prescribed medicines Sptron, Brufen and Parastomol. The doctor has has mentioned in page 86 in the "Prisoners' Treatment Register" that he found a contusion on the scalp of the petitioner. But Arjunan, I Grade Warder of Sub Jail, Poraiyar has not made any mention of any injury on the petitioner in the Prisoners' Admission Register, as he did not find any injury at the time of admission of the petitioner. But, the entry made by the Jail Doctor about the injuries on the scalp falsifies this entry.

(3) The allegation of beating by R.D.O. with a torch on his hand would probabilise the fact that the petitioner's left index finger is slightly out of normal shape, arching in the middle. This as well as the middle finger have small humps on their bone, which can be caused by hit on the fingers with a blunt object. The petitioner after his release on 28-9-1998 went and took treatment from Dr. Neelamagam of Malar Hospital and produced the certificate issued by the doctor. The certificate would indicate that the Doctor found hairline fracture of left index finger, bleeding injuries on the head and treatment of testicles etc. If the petitioner had shown his contusion to the doctor at the Sub-Jail, it is natural that he would have shown the injuries on his fingers also. But, the Doctor did not prefer to mention about all the injuries in the register except the contusion on the scalp because the allegation was against the local R.D.O.

(4) Vijayaraghavan, Typist working in the R.D.O. Office admitted during the enquiry that he only wrote the statement of the petitioner, as dictated by the R.D.O. It is also accepted by him that the R.D.O. was having a torch light in his hand. But, none could explain for the injuries on the fingers and the contusion on the head of the petitioner. So, the allegation that the petitioner sustained injuries at the hands of R.D.O. while he was in the custody of the R.D.O. appeared to be true.

(5) The petitioner was asked to read about the statement written by Vijayaraghavan, Typist as dictated by the R.D.O. and while he read out, it was tape recorded at the Taluk Office. Normally the tape recording of a statement will be done during a question and answer session. The tape recorder "Philips" Indian make, belongs to Gr. I.P.C. 525 S. Selvaraj of Poraiyar P.S. The enquiry revealed that after dictation was over, the Sub-Inspector of Police was called to the Taluk Office at 1.00 a.m. on 27-8-1998 and instructed by the R.D.O. to keep the petitioner in his custody by handing over the confession statement endorsed by the R.D.O. and the same was later registered in Poraiyar P.S. Crime No. 542/98 under Sections 177, 186 and 506(ii), I.P.C. There are no ingredients in the alleged statement of the petitioner to attract these sections. The contention of the petitioner that Section 506(ii), I.P.C. was added vindictively to arrest him cannot be brushed aside as the case assumed an importance because it was initiated by the local R.D.O.

(6) Next day morning, the petitioner was escorted by Grade I Constable Rajagopal and Rajendran of Poraiyar Police Station to the Court of J.M. II, Mayiladuthurai in a Tourist Taxi, along with the five other under trial prisoners from the Sub Jail, who are facing trial under Tamil Nadu Prohibition Act. On that date, J.M. I of Mayiladuthurai was holding additional charge of J.M. II, J.M. I was sitting up to 1.00 p.m. and thereafter, he went to Sirkazhi. The petitioner was not produced before the said Magistrate, but at 2.30 p.m. he was produced before the Balasubramanian, Special Judicial Magistrate, Mayiludutharai. He is a Tahsildar undergoing judicial training. He recorded in his remand order "Accused produced. No complaints. Remanded to custody till 10-9-1998". The said Special Judicial Magistrate is a Trainee Magistrate and Revenue Official subordinate to the R.D.O. Therefore, the contention of the petitioner that he was wantonly produced before the Tahsildar after the Judicial Magistrate left at 1.O' Clock in order to avoid the recording of his complaint of torture cannot be said to be wrong.

(7) The injury found on the fingers and the contusion found on the head of the petitioner bear a proximate cause to the allegations of the petitioner. Further, the R.D.O. seems to have acted in haste in fixing the petitioner as the psuedonimous phone caller. As such, the enquiry revealed that there is a prima facie case against the R.D.O. and his staff who accompanied him.

36. From the above factors which are referred to in the earlier paragraphs and from the conclusions arrived at by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID, it is manifest that there are found important aspects which could be undisputedly noticed:

(i) The R.D.O. along with Revenue Officials and Police Constables went to the house of the petitioner at 11.00 p.m. and compelled him to come along with them to Taluk Office where he was tortured by the R.D.O. and others for obtaining a statement from him. The statement was written by the Typist working under R.D.O. as dictated by the R.D.O. The petitioner was asked to read out the statement and the same was tape recorded.

(ii) The Sub-Inspector of Police came to the Taluk Office and received the statement copy alleged to have been made by the petitioner with an endorsement by R.D.O. On the basis of that statement, case was registered under Sections 177, 186 and 506(ii), I.P.C. Only thereafter, arrest was shown. He was in the police lock-up on that entire night. Admittedly, the investigation in this case has been referred as a 'mistake of law'. This shows that the petitioner was admittedly in the custody of the R.D.O. at the Taluk Office from 11.00 p.m. to 1.00 a.m. and thereafter, he was in custody of the police lock-up from 1.00 a.m. till he was taken to the Magistrate for remand. There are no details in the counter filed by the Superintendent of Police, Nagapattinam District as to why the said case was dropped as a 'mistake of law'. However, the fact remains that the further action was dropped. The investigation disclosed in that crime number that the details of the confession given by the petitioner are not true. Furthermore, as concluded by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID, the statement also would not attract any of the offences mentioned in the said statement. Thus, it is clear that the petitioner was in illegal custody from 11.00 p.m. till he was produced before the Magistrate concerned in the case which was subsequently found to be mistake of law. In this situation, the custody both under R.D.O. and the Sub-Inspector of Police cannot be said to be legal.

(iii) Next day, the petitioner was taken to the Court for remand along with the other accused who were facing trial under Tamil Nadu Prohibition Act. J.M. I was incharge of J.M. II at Myladuthurai. Even though the others were produced before the J.M. I, Mayiladuthurai, the petitioner was not produced before him. On the other hand, after the Judicial Magistrate left at 1.00 p.m., he was produced before some other Magistrate at 2.30 p.m. who happened to be the Revenue official subordinate to R.D.O. who was a Trainee Magistrate. This fact is not disputed. There is also no reason as to why he alone was produced before the Trainee Magistrate, who was working under the R.D.O. In this context, the statement made by the petitioner that his complaint of torture against R.D.O. was not recorded by the Special Magistrate cannot be said to be untrue. Furthermore, the Jail Doctor found contusion on the scalp of the petitioner and the Doctor's certificate produced by the petitioner obtained from Malar Hospital, Chennai would show that he had sustained injury not only on the scalp but also hairline fracture on left index finger and bleeding injuries on the other parts of the body.

(iv) The petitioner sent a petition to the Human Rights Commission. The said Commission referred it to the Collector. The Collector, in turn, asked the D.R.O. who is another Revenue Official to conduct inquiry. The R.D.O. after conducting enquiry recommend to the Collector to drop the action since the allegations were not proved. On that basis, the Collector sent a report to the Human Rights Commission. Accordingly, the Commission felt that no further enquiry need be conducted at the level of Commission and if the petitioner is aggrieved, he can approach the concerned Human Rights Court or other Courts for vindication of his rights in accordance with law. In the meantime, the Deputy Superintendent of Police under second respondent began to conduct enquiry. But, when the second respondent came to know that the enquiry is being conducted by the D.R.O., he thought it fit to drop the said enquiry. However, the Superintendent of Police, SB CID directed the third respondent-Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID to conduct confidential enquiry. In obedience to the said direction, he conducted the enquiry, examined the witnesses, collected the medical certificates and sent a report to the Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Chennai s tating that there is a prima facie case made out, since there are sufficient materials available to conclude that the allegations about the torture at the hands of the R.D.O. are true.

37. Mr. Asokan, the learned Senior Counsel appearing for the sixth respondent has produced the report sent by the District Revenue Officer after enquiry to the District Collector, who, in turn, recommended for dropping further action and the order dated 8-10-1998 passed by the State Human Rights Commission holding that no further enquiry need be conducted at the level of Commission. On the strength of these records, the learned Senior Counsel would submit that no further investigation is needed by the police. It is also submitted that it is open to the petitioner to file a private complaint as against the official concerned for the allegations contained in his complaint. He would cite the decision in AIIMS Employees' Union v. Union of India, 1997 SCC (Cri) 303.

38. The above submission, in my view, lacks substance. The decision in 1997 SCC (Cri) 303 (supra) would not apply to the present facts of the case. In the case dealt with by the Supreme Court, the petitioner without adopting the procedure provided under the Criminal Procedure Code, straightway came to the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution seeking for a mandamus. While dealing with the procedure contemplated under Sections 154 to 173 of Cr. P.C., the Apex Court in that case would absorve that when an information constituting the cognizable offence is received and is reduced to writing, the Officer incharge of the Police Station shall register the case and investigate into these cognizable cases under Section 156, Cr. P.C. and after conducting the investigation prescribed in the manner envisaged in Chapter XII, the charge-sheet shall be submitted to the Court having jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence under Section 173, Cr. P.C.

39. In the case on hand, the petitioner has tapped the doors of every forum including the police. Curiously, D.R.O. was asked to conduct enquiry by the District Collector, who is the Revenue official, against the R.D.O. who was allowed to continue to work as R.D.O. in the very same jurisdiction during the relevant period.

40. The petitioner in his affidavit filed before this Court has categorically stated in para 25 of the affidavit that Mr. Hariharan, D.R.O., Nagapattinam who conducted enquiry was all the time trying to persuade the petitioner to compromise the matter and not to proceed ahead with his demand to prosecute the R.D.O. Karunakaran. It is further stated in the affidavit that an impression was created in his mind that the said D.R.O. was trying to somehow extricate the R.D.O. from the case.

41. The said statement made in para 25 regarding the biased enquiry by the D.R.O. has not been specifically refuted in any of the counter-affidavits. Moreover, the above statement cannot be ignored lightly in the light of the fact that from the beginning both Tahsildar/Trainee Magistrate and the Police Constables and Sub-Inspector of Police of Poraiyar Police Station had been helping the R.D.O. throughout.

42. Under these circumstances, when the statutory authority, namely police failed to perform the duty under Section 154, Cr. P.C., it is the bounden duty of this Court to invoke the powers under Section 482, Cr. P.C. to give suitable directions to register F.I.R. and investigate, particularly when the contents of the complaint would make out cognizable offences like wrongful confinement, torture, extortion and causing injuries on the vital parts of the body, etc.

43. Furthermore, the Human Rights Commission itself in its order gave liberty to the petitioner that he can approach the concerned Human Rights Court or other Courts for vindication of his rights. Under these circumstances, he has approached this Court by way of vindication of his rights seeking for this direction.

44. In the light of the above pathetic and pitiable factual situation, the judiciary cannot keep quiet by shutting its eyes.

45. The judiciary which is the sentinel of the great liberty of citizens would certainly intervene in the cases where the human dignity is bound in order to uphold human values and to protect the rights guaranteed under the Constitution.

46. The Goverenment officials required to be sensitised to the values of human dignity and to the restraint in power. When they allow an inhuman conduct on the part of the officials, it exhibits both the indifference and insensitiveness to human dignity and the constitutional rights of the citizens.

47. As Joeph Addison said :

"Better to die ten thousand deaths than wound my honour."

If dignity or honour vanishes what remains of life !

48. The protection of the individual from oppression and abuse by the law enforcing officers is a major interest in a free society. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter.

49. If human rights are to triumph, executives must be sensitised, legislators ethicalised and Judges conscientised.

50. The Universal Declaration in Article 3 proclaims that everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person. But between rhetoric and reality there is a gaping gap.

51. In this connection, it is worthwhile to refer to the decision of the Supreme Court in State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Cri LJ 527 : (AIR 1992 SC 604), wherein it has been held thus :-

"But if a police officer transgresses the circumscribed limits and improperly and illegally exercises his investigatory powers in breach of any statutory provisions causing serious prejudice to the personal liberty and also property of a citizen, then the Court on being approached by the person aggrieved for the redress of any grievance has to consider the nature and extent of the breach and pass appropriate orders as may be called for without leaving the citizens to the mercy of police echelons since human dignity is a dear value of our Constitution. Needs no emphasis that no one can demand absolute immunity even if he is wrong and claim unquestionable right and unlimited powers exercisable up to unfathamable cosmos. Any recognition of such power will be tantamount to recognition of 'Divine Power' which no authority on search can enjoy."

52. In then light of the materials available and the conclusion arrived at in the confidential enquiry, it is clear that the R.D.O. has transgressed his limit and illegally exercised his powers causing serious prejudice to the personal liberty of the petitioner. In such an event, this Court on being approached by the person aggrieved for the redress of the grievance has to pass appropriate orders to render justice to the person aggrieved.

53. In this petition, the petitioner has prayed to direct the respondents to register an F.I.R. based on the complaint made by the petitioner dated 2-9-1998 against Mr. Karunakaran, R.D.O., Mayiladuthurai and other officials for torturing him and for commission of other illegal acts and consequently, transfer further investigation to the C.B.I., fifth respondent and order payment of compensation.

54. As noted above, the third respondent has already conducted confidential enquiry and submitted that report to the Superintendent of Police, SB CID stating that there are enough prima facie materials to take action on the complaint given by the petitioner against the sixth respondent and others.

55. Under these circumstances, it would be appropriate to direct the third respondent to register F.I.R. for the various offences mentioned in the complaint given by the petitioner dated 2-9-1998 against Karunakaran, R.D.O., sixth respondent and other officials and conduct investigation. Since the confidential report show that the preliminary confidential enquiry has been conducted in a proper way by the third respondent, it is unnecessary to hand over the investigation to C.B.I. Accordingly, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, SB CID, Nagapattinam District, the third respondent is directed to register F.I.R., as noted above, and take suitable action against the persons concerned in accordance with the procedure contemplated under law, continue the investigation and file the final report.

56. Regarding the claim of interim compensation, the learned Counsel for the petitioner cited judgments in Bodhisattwa Gautam v. Subhra Chakraborty, (1996) 1 SCC 490 : (AIR 1996 SC 922) and D. K. Basu v. State of W.B., (1997) 1 SCC 416 : (1997 Cri LJ 743).

57. In my view, the question of compensation can be considered at the later stage. The more important is that the R.D.O., sixth respondent who has taken law into his own hands and caused serious prejudice to the personal liberty of the petitioner has to be booked and investigation has to be conducted after registration of the F.I.R. Therefore, the question regarding the entitlement of compensation and quantum of the same can be considered by the appropriate forum and at appropriate stage.

58. With these observations, the petition is allowed. Consequently, no separate order is necessary in Crl. M.P. No. 9037 of 1998.

Petition allowed.

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

CORAM : KULDIP SINGH AND A.S. ANAND, JJ.

SHRI D.K. BASU v State of West Bengal

[A] Constitution of India Art. 21 & 22 custodial violence Guidelines regarding Arrest – Violation of – Failure to Comply with requirements of guidelines laid down by Supreme court shall apart from rendering the concerned official liable for departmental action also render him liable to be punished for contempt of Court and the proceedings for it may be instituted in any High court of India having territorial jurisdiction.

[B] PROOF OF CUSTODIAL TORTURE – Held – It is impossible to have direct evidence of custodial torture by the police – It is difficult to secure evidence against the policemen responsible for resorting to third degree method since they are in charge of police station records which they can manipulate – The witnesses are either police men or co-prisoners who are highly reluctant as prosecution witnesses due to fear of retaliation by the superior officers of the Police – The Courts are required to change their outlook and attitude particularly in cases involving custodial crimes - They should adopt a realistic approach rather than a narrow technical approach so that the guilty should not escape – The victim of the crime should have satisfaction that ultimately the Majesty of law has prevailed.

"One of us (namely, Anand, J.) speaking for the court went on to observe: The trial court and the High Court, if we may say so with respect, exhibited a total lack of sensitivity and a could not careless' attitude in appreciating the evidence on the record and thereby condoning the barbarous their degree methods which are still being used, at some police stations, despite being illegal. The exaggerated adherence to and insistence upon the establishment of proof beyond every reasonable doubt, by the prosecution, ignoring the ground realities, the case situations and the peculiar circumstances of given case as in the present case, often results in miscarriage of justice and makes the justice delivery system a suspect. In the ultimate analysis the society suffers and criminal gets encouraged. Tortures in police custody, which of late are on the increase, receive encouragement by this type of an unrealistic approach of the Courts because it reinforces the belief in the mind of the police that no harm would come to them, if an odd harm would come to them, if an odd prisoner dies in the lock-up, because there would hardly be any evidence available to the prosecution to directly implicate implicate them with the torture. The Courts, must not loose sight of the fact that death in police custody is perhaps one of the worst kind of crime in a civilised society, governed by the rule of law and poses a serious threat to an orderly civilised society." This Court then suggested:

The Courts are also required to have change in their outlook and attitude particularly in cases involving custodial crimes and they should exhibit more sensitivity and adopt a realistic rather than a narrow technical approach, while dealing with the case of custodial crime so that as far as possible with their powers, the guilty should not escape so that the victim of the crime has the satisfaction that ultimately the Majesty of Law has prevailed."

[C] STATE TERRORISM - Use of third degree method not permitted to police – Experience shows that worst violations of Human Rights takes place during the course of investigation where police uses torturing method and adops techniques of screening arrest by either not recording the arrest or describing the deprivation of liberty merely as a prolonged interrogation - The increasing incidence of torture and death in custody has assumed such alarming proportions that it is affecting the credibility of the Rule of Law and the administration of criminal justice system. The community rightly feels perturbed. Society's cry for justice become louder.

- If the functionaries of the Government become law breakers, it is bound to breed contempt for law and would encourage lawlessness and every man would have the tendency to become law unto himself thereby leading to anarchism – No civilized national can permit that to happen – The precious rights guaranteed by Article 21 of the constitution cannot be denied to convicts, under trials deteneus and other prisoners in custody except according to the procedure established by law by placing such reasonable restrictions as are permitted by law – It must be remembered that law does not permit use of third degree methods or torture of accused during interrogation and investigation with a view to solve crime – End cannot justify the means no society can permit that the police would be accomplishing behind the closed doors what legal order forbid.

- State Terrorism is no answer to combat terrorism – To provide legitimacy to terrorism will be bad for the state – The terrorist has violated human rights of innocent citizens may render him liable for punishment but it cannot justify the violation of his human rights except in the manner permitted by law – Need therefore is to develop scientific methods of investigation and train the investigators properly to investigate to meet the challenge.

[D] HOW TO CHECK ABUSE OF POLICE POWER (para 30):- Presence of Counsel for assestee be permitted during investigation – How do we check the abuse of police power? Transparency of action and accountability perhaps are two possible safeguards which this Court must insist upon. Attention is also required to be paid to properly develop work culture, training and orientation of the police force consistent with basic human values. Training methodology of the police needs restructuring. The force needs to be infused with basic human values and made sensitive to the constitutional ethos. Efforts must be made to change the attitude and approach of the police personnel handling investigations so that they do not sacrifice basic human values during interrogation and do not resort to questionable forms of interrogation. With a view to bring in transparency, the presence of the counsel of the arrestee at some point of time dying the interrogation may deter the police from using third degree methods during interrogation.

[E] GUIDELINES REGARDING ARREST (para 36)

We, therefore, consider it appropriate to issue the following requirements to be followed in all cases of arrest or detention till legal provisions are made in that behalf as preventive measurers:

(1) The police personnel carrying out the arrest and handling the interrogation of the arrestee should bear accurate, visible and clear identification and name tags with their designations. The particulars of all such police personnel who handle interrogation of the arrestee insist be recorded in a register.

(2) That the police officer carrying out the arrest of the arrestee shall prepare a memo of arrest at the time of arrest and such memo shall be attested by atleast one witness, who may be either a member of the family of the arrestee or a respectable person of the locality from where the arrest is made. It shall also be counter signed by the arrestee and shall contain the time and date of arrest.

(3) A person who has been arrested or detained and is being held in custody in a police station or interrogation centre or other lock-up, shall be entitled to have one friend or relative or other person known to him or having interest in his welfare being informed, as soon as practicable, that he has been arrested and is being detained at the particular place, unless the attesting witness of the memo of arrest is himself such a friend or a relative of the arrestee.

(4) The time, place of arrest and venue of custody of an arrestee must be notified by the police where the next friend or relative of the arrestee lives outside the district or town through the Legal Aid Organisation in the District and the police station of the area concerned telegraphically within a period of 8 to 12 hours after the arrest.

(5) The person arrested must be made aware of this right to have someone informed of his arrest or detention as soon as he is put under arrest or is detained.

(6) An entry must be made in the diary at the place of detention regarding the arrest of the person which shall also disclose the name of the next friend of the person who has been informed of the arrest and the names and particulars of the police officials in whose custody the arrestee is.

(7) The arrestee should, where he so requests, be also examined at the time of his arrest and major and minor injuries, if any present on his/herbed, must be recorded at that time. The "Inspection Memo" must be signed both by the arrestee and the police officer effecting the arrest and its copy provided to the arrestee.

(8) The arrestee should be subjected to medical examination by a trained doctor every 48 hours during his detention in custody by a doctor on the panel of approved doctors appointed by Director, Health Services of the concerned State or Union Territory. Director, Health Services should prepare such a penal for all Tehsils and Districts as well.

(9) Copies of all the documents including the memo of arrest, referred to above, should be sent to the illegal Magistrate for his record.

(10) The arrestee may be permitted to meet his lawyer during interrogation, though not throughout the interrogation.

(11) A police control room should be provided at all district and State Headquarters, where information regarding the arrest and the place of custody of the arrestee shall be communicated by the officer causing the arrest, within 12 hours of effecting the arrest and at the police control room it should bc displayed on conspicuous notice board.

[F] PUNITIVE MEASURES :- (PARA 41 AND 42)

UBI JUS IBI REMEDIUM - There is no wrong without a remedy. The law wills that in every case where a man is wronged and undamaged he must have a remedy. A mere declaration of invalidity of an action or finding of custodial violence or death in lock-up, does not by itself provide any meaningful remedy to a person whose fundamental right to life has been infringed. Much more needs to be done.

Some punitive provisions are contained in the India Panel Code which seeks to punish violation of right to life. Section 220 provides for punishment to an officer or authority who detains or keeps a person in confinement with a corrupt or malicious motive Sections 330 and 331 provide for punishment of those who inflict injury grievous hurt on a person to extort confession or information in regard to commission of all offence. Illustrations (a) and (b) to Section 330 make a police officer guilty of torturing a person in order to induce him to confess the commission of a crime or to induce him to point out place where stolen property is deposited. Section 330, therefore, directly makes torture during interrogation and investigation punishable under the Indian Penal Code. These statutory provisions are, however, inadequate to repair the wrong done to the citizen. PROSECUTION OF THE OFFENDER IS AN OBLIGATION OF STATE IN CASE OF EVERY CRIME BUT THE VICTIM OF CRIME NEEDS TO BE COMPENSATED MONETARILY ALSO. The Court, where the infringement of the fundamental right is established, therefore, cannot stop by giving compensatory relief, not by way of damages as in a civil action but by way of compensation under the public law jurisdiction for the wrong done, due to breach of public duty by the Sate of not protecting the fundamental right to life of the citizen. To repair the wrong done and give judicial redress for legal injury is compulsion of judicial consequence.

[G] COMPENSATORY RELIEF – has to be granted despite of availability of alternate remedies.

The old doctrine of only relegating the aggrieved to the remedies available in civil law limits the role of the court too much as protector and guarantor of the indefeasible rights of the citizens. The courts have the obligation to satisfy the social aspirations of the citizens because the courts and the law are for the people and expected to respond to their aspiration. The purpose of public law is not only to cigilized public power but also to assure the citizen that they live under a legal system which aims to protect their interests and preserve their rights .

[H] CONSTITUTIONAL SAFEGUARDS : (para 17)

Fundamental rights occupy a place of pride in the Indian Constitution. Article 21 provides "no person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law". Personal liberty thus, is a sacred and cherished right under the Constitution. The expression "life or personal liberty" has been held to include the right to live with human dignity and thus, it would also include within itself a guarantee, against torture and assault by the State or its functionaries. Article 22 guarantees Protection against arrest and detention in certain cases and declares that no person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed of the grounds of such arrest and he shall not be denied the rights to consult and defend himself by a legal practitioner of his choice. Clause (2) of Article 22 directs that the persons arrested and detained in custody shall be produced before the nearest Magistrate within a period of 24 hours such arrest, excluding the time necessary for the journey form the place of arrest to the court of the Magistrate. Article 20(3) of the Constitution lays down that a person accused of an offence shall not be compelled to be a witness against himself. These are some of the constitutional safeguards provided to a person with a view a protect his personal liberty against any unjustified assault by the State. In tune with constitutional guarantee a number of statutory provisions also seek to protect personal liberty, dignity and basic human rights of the citizens. Chapter V of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 deals with the powers of arrest of a person and the safeguards which are. required to be followed by the police to protect the interest of the arrested person. Section 41, Cr. P.C. confers powers on any police officer to arrest a person under the circumstances specified therein without any order or a warrant of arrest from a Magistrate. Section 46 provides the method and manner of arrest. Under this Section no formality is necessary while arresting a person. Under Section 49, the police is not permitted to use more restraint than is necessary to prevent the escape of the person. Section 50 enjoins every police officer arresting any person without warrant to communicate to him the full particulars of the offence for which he is arrested and the grounds for such arrest. The police officer is further enjoined to inform the person arrested that he is entitled to be released on bail and lie may arrange for sureties in the event of his arrest for a non-bailable offence. Section 56 contains a mandatory provision requiring the police officer making an arrest without warrant to produce the arrested person before a Magistrate without unnecessary delay and Section 57 echoes Clause (2) of Articles 22 of the Constitution of India. There are some other provisions also like Section 53, 54, and 167 which are aimed at affording procedural safeguards to a person arrested by the police. Whenever a person dies in custody of the police, Section 176 requires the Magistrate to hold an enquiry into the cause of death.

Dr. Anand, J. - The Executive Chairman, Legal Aid Services, West Bengal, a non-political organisation registered under the Societies Registration Act, on 26th August, 1986 addressed a letter to the Chief Justice of India drawing his attention to certain news items published in the Telegraph dated 20, 21 and 22 of July, 1986 and in tile Statesman and Indian Express dated 17th August, 1986 regarding deaths in police lock-ups and custody. The Executive Chairman after reproducing the news items submitted that it was imperative to examine the issue in depth and to develop "custody jurisprudence" and formulate modalities for awarding compensation to the victim and/or family members of the victim for atrocities and death caused in police custody and to provide for accountability of the officers concerned. It also stated in the letter that efforts are often made to hush up the matter of lock-up deaths and thus the crime goes unpunished and "flourishes". It was requested that the letter alongwith the news items be treated as a writ petition under "public interest litigation" category.

2. Considering, the importance of the issue raised in the letter and being concerned by frequent complaints regarding custodial violence and deaths in police lock up, the letter was treated as a writ petition and notice was issued on 9.2.1987 to the respondents.

3. In response to the notice, the State of West Bengal filed a counter. It was maintained that the police was not hushing up any matter of lock-up death and that wherever police personnel were found to be responsible for such death, action was being initiated against them. The respondents characterised the writ petition as misconceived misleading and untenable in law.

4. While the Writ petition was under consideration, a letter addressed by Shri Ashok Kumar Johri on 29.7.87 to the Hon'ble Chief Justice of India drawing the attention of this Court to the death of one Mahesh Bihari of Pilkhana, Aligarh in police custody was received. That letter was also treated as a writ petition and was directed to be listed alongwith the writ petition filed by Shri D.K. Basu. On 14.8.1987 this Court made following order:

"In almost every states there were allegations and these allegations are now increasing in frequency of deaths in custody described generally by newspapers as lock-up deaths. At present there doesn't appear to be any machinery to effectively deal with such allegations. Since this is an all India question concerning all States, it is desirable to issue notices to all the Sates Governments to find out whether they are desire to say anything in the matter. Let notices issue to all the State Governments. Let notice also issue to the Law Commission of India with a request that suitable suggestions may be made in the matter. Notice be made returnable in two months from today."

5. In response to the notice, affidavits have been filed on behalf of the States of West Bengal, Orissa, Assam, Himachal Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Haryana, Tamil Nadu, Meghalaya, Maharashtra and Manipur. Affidavits have also been filed on behalf of Union Territory of Chandigarh and the Law Commission of India.

6. During the course of hearing of the Writ petitions, the court felt necessity of having assistance from the Bar and Dr. A.M. Singhivi senior advocate was requested to assist the Court as amicus curiae.

7. Learned counsel appearing for different States and Dr. Singhivi, as friend of the Court, present the case ably and though the effort on the part of the States initially was to show that "everything was well" within their respective States, learned counsel for the parties, as was expected of them in view of the importance of the issue involved, rose above their respective briefs and rendered useful assistance to this Court in examining various facts of the issue and made certain suggestions for formulation of guidelines by this Court to minimise, if not prevent, custodial violence and for award of compensation to the victims of custodial violence and kith and kin of those who die in custody on account of torture.

8. The Law Commission of India also in response to the notice issued by this Court forwarded a copy of the 113th Report regarding "Injuries in police custody and suggested incorporation of Section 114-B in the India Evidence Act."

9. The importance of affirmed rights of every human being need no emphasis and, therefore, to deter breaches thereof becomes a sacred duty, of the Court, as custodian and protector of the fundamental and the basic human rights of the citizens. Custodial violence, including torture and death in the lock ups, strikes a blow at the Rule of Law, which demands that the powers of the executive should not only be derived from law but also that same should be limited by law. Custodial violence is a matter of concern. It is aggravated by the fact that it is committed by person who are supposed to be the protectors of the citizens. It is committed under the shield of uniform and authority in the four walls of a police station or lock-up, the victim being totally helpless. The protection of an individual from torture and abuse by the police and other law enforcing officers is a matter of deep concern in a free society. These petitions raise important issues concerning police powers, including whether monetary compensation should be awarded for established infringement of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution of India. The issues are fundamental.

10. "Torture" has riot been defined in the Constitution or in other penal laws. "Torture" of a human being by another human being is essentially an instrument to impose the will of the 'strong' over the 'week' by suffering. The word torture today has become synonymous with the darker side of human cilivlisation.

"Torture is a wound in the soul so painful that sometimes you can almost touch it, but it is also so intangible that there is no way to heal it.

Torture is anguish squeezing in you, chest, cold as ice and heavy, as a stone paralyzing as steep and dark as the abyss. Torture is despair and fear and rage and hate. It is a desire to kill and destroy including yourself."

- Adriana P. Bartow.

11. No violation of any of the human rights has been the subject of so many Conventions and Declarations as 'torture' - all aiming at total banning of it in all forms but inspite of the commitments made to eliminate torture, the fact remains that torture is more widespread now than ever before. "Custodial torture" is a naked violation of human dignity and degradation which destroys, to a very large extent, the individual dignity and whenever human - dignity is wounded, civilisation takes a step backward - flag of humanity must on each such occasion fly half-mast.

12. In all custodial crimes what is of real concern is not only infliction of body pain but the mental agony which a person undergoes within the four walls of police station or lock-up. Whether it is physical assault or rape in police custody, the extent of trauma, a person experiences is beyond the purview of law.

13. "Custodial violence" and abuse of police power is not only peculiar to this country, but it is widespread. It has been the concern of international community because the problem is universal and the challenge is almost global. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948, which marked the emergence of a worldwide trend of protection and guarantee of certain basic human rights, stipulates in Article 5 that "No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degarding treatment or punishment." Despite the pious declaration, the crime continues unabated, though every civilised nation shows its concern and takes steps for its eradication.

14. In England, torture was once regarded a normal practice to get information regarding the crime, the accomplices and the case property or to extract confessions, but with the development of common law and more radical ideas imbibing human thought and approach, such inhuman practices were initially discouraged and eventually almost done away with, certain aberrations here and there notwithstanding. The police powers of arrest, detention and interrogation in England were examined in depth by Sir Cyril Philips Committee – 'Report of a Royal Commission on Criminal Procedure' (command – Papers 8092 of 1981). The report of the Royal Commission is, instructive. In regard to the power of arrest, the Report recommended that the power to arrest without a warrant must be related to and limited by the object to be Carved by the arrest, namely, to prevent the suspect form destroying evidence or interfering with witnesses or warning , accomplices who have not yet been arrested or where there is a good reason to suspect the repetition of the offence and not to every case irrespective of the object sought to be achieved.

15. The Royal Commission suggested certain restrictions on the power of arrest on the basis of the 'necessity principle The Royal Commission Said:

"..... we recommend that detention upon arrest for an offence should continue only on one or more of the following criteria:

(a) the person's unwillingness to identify himself so that a summons may be served upon him;

(b) the need to prevent the continuation or repetition of that offence;

(c) the need to protect the arrested person himself or other persons or property;

(d) the need to secure or preserve evidence of or relation to that offence or to obtain such evidence from the suspect by questioning him; and

(e) the likelihood of the person failing to appear at court to answer any charge made against him."

The Royal Commission also suggested: "To help to reduce the use of arrest we would also propose the introduction here of a scheme that is used in Ontario enabling a police officer to issue what procedure can be used to obtain attendance at the police station without resorting to arrest provided a power to arrest exists, for example to be finger printed or to participate in an identification parade. It could also be extended to attendance for interview at a time convent both to the suspect and to the pole office investigating the case....."

16. The power of arrest, interrogation and detention has now been streamlined in England on the basis of the suggestions made by the Royal Commission and incorporated in Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984 and the incidence of custodial violence has been minimized there to a very great extent.

17. Fundamental rights occupy a place of pride in the Indian Constitution. Article 21 provides "no person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law". Personal liberty thus, is a sacred and cherished right under the Constitution. The expression "life or personal liberty" has been held to include the right to live with human dignity and thus, it would also include within itself a guarantee, against torture and assault by the State or its functionaries. Article 22 guarantees Protection against arrest and detention in certain cases and declares that no person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed of the grounds of such arrest and he shall not be denied the rights to consult and defend himself by a legal practitioner of his choice. Clause (2) of Article 22 directs that the persons arrested and detained in custody shall be produced before the nearest Magistrate within a period of 24 hours such arrest, excluding the time necessary for the journey form the place of arrest to the court of the Magistrate. Article 20(3) of the Constitution lays down that a person accused of an offence shall not be compelled to be a witness against himself. These are some of the constitutional safeguards provided to a person with a view a protect his personal liberty against any unjustified assault by the State. In tune with constitutional guarantee a number of statutory provisions also seek to protect personal liberty, dignity and basic human rights of the citizens. Chapter V of Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 deals with the powers of arrest of a person and the safeguards which are. required to be followed by the police to protect the interest of the arrested person. Section 41, Cr. P.C. confers powers on any police officer to arrest a person under the circumstances specified therein without any order or a warrant of arrest from a Magistrate. Section 46 provides the method and manner of arrest. Under this Section no formality is necessary while arresting a person. Under Section 49, the police is not permitted to use more restraint than is necessary to prevent the escape of the person. Section 50 enjoins every police officer arresting any person without warrant to communicate to him the full particulars of the offence for which he is arrested and the grounds for such arrest. The police officer is further enjoined to inform the person arrested that he is entitled to be released on bail and lie may arrange for sureties in the event of his arrest for a non-bailable offence. Section 56 contains a mandatory provision requiring the police officer making an arrest without warrant to produce the arrested person before a Magistrate without unnecessary delay and Section 57 echoes Clause (2) of Articles 22 of the Constitution of India. There are some other provisions also like Section 53, 54, and 167 which are aimed at affording procedural safeguards to a person arrested by the police. Whenever a person dies in custody of the police, Section 176 requires the Magistrate to hold an enquiry into the cause of death.

18. However, inspite of the constitutional and statutory provisions aimed at safeguarding the personal liberty and life of a citizen, growing incidence of torture and deaths in police custody had been a disturbing factor. Experience shows that worst violations of human rights takes place during the course of investigation, when the police with a view to secure evidence or confession often resorts to third degree methods including torture and adopts techniques of screening arrest by either not recording the arrest or describing the deprivation of liberty merely as a prolonged interrogation. A reading of the morning newspapers almost every day carrying reports of dehumanizing torture, assault, rape and death in custody of police, or other governmental agencies is indeed depressing. The increasing incidence of torture and death in custody has assumed such alarming proportions that it is affecting the creditability of the Rule of Law and the administration of criminal justice system. The community rightly feels perturbed. Society's cry for justice becomes louder.

19. The Third Report of the National Police Commission in India expressed its deep concern with custodial violence and lock-up deaths. It appreciated the demoralizing effect which custodial torture was creating on the society as a whole. It made some very useful suggestions. It suggested:

"..... An arrest during the investigation of a cognizable case may be considered justified in one or other of the following circumstance:-

(i) The case involves a gave offence like murder, dacoity, robbery, rape etc., and it is necessary to arrest the accused and bring his movements under restraint to infuse confidence among the terror stricken victims.

(ii) The accused is likely to abscond and evade the processes of law.

(iii) The accused is given to violent behaviour and is likely to commit further offences unless his movements are brought under restraint.

(iv) The accused is a habitual offender and unless kept in custody his is likely to commit similar offences again. It would be desirable to insist through officer making an arrest should also record in the case diary the reasons for making the arrest, thereby clarifying his conformity to the specified guidelines....."

The recommendations of Police Commission (supra) reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. These recommendations, however, have not acquired any statutory status so far.

20. This Court in Joginder Kumar Vs. State [1994 (4) SCC 260] () to which one of us, namely Anand, J. was a party) considered the dynamics of' misuse of police power of arrest and opined:

"No arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of the power of arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another.... No arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation about the genuineness ad bonafides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person his liberty is serious matter."

21. Joginder Kumar's case (supra) involved arrest of a practicing lawyer who had been called to the police station in connection with a case under inquiry on 7.1.94. On not receiving any satisfactory account of his whereabouts, the family members of the detained lawyer preferred a petition in the nature of habeas corpus before this Court on 11.1.94 and in compliance with the notice, the lawyer was produced on 14.1.94 before this Court. The police version was that during 7.1.94 and 14.1.94 the lawyer was not in detention at all but was only assisting the police to detect some cases. The detenue asserted otherwise. This Court was not satisfied with the police version. It was noticed that though as on that day the relief in habeas corpus petition could not be granted but the questions whether there had been any need to detain the lawyer for 5 days and if at all he was not in detention then why was this Court not informed, were important questions which required an answer. Besides, if there was detention for 5 days, for what reason was he detained. The Court, therefore, directed the District Judge, Ghaziabad to make a detailed enquiry and submit his report within 4 weeks. The Court voiced its concern regarding complaints of violations of human rights during and after arrest. It said:

"The horizon of human rights is expanding. At the same time, the crime rate is also increasing. Of late, this Court has been receiving complaints about violations of human rights because of indiscriminate arrests. How are we to strike a balance between the two? A realistic approach should be made in this direction. The law of arrest is one of balancing individual rights, liberties and privileges, on the on one had, and individual duties, obligations and responsibilities on the other, of weighing and balancing the rights, liberties and privileges of the single individual and those of individuals collectively of simply deciding what is wanted and where to put the weight and the emphasis; of deciding which come first – the criminal or society, the law violator or the abider....."

This Court then set down certain procedural "requirements" in cases of arrest.

22. Custodial death is perhaps one of tile worst crimes in a civilised society governed by the Rule of Law. The rights inherent in Articles 21 and 22(1) of the Constitution require to be jealously and scrupulously protected. We cannot wish away the problem. Any form of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment would fall within the inhibition of Article 21 of the Constitution whether it occurs during investigation, interrogation or otherwise. If the functionaries of the Government become law breakers, it is bound to breed contempt for law and would encourage lawlessness and every man would have the tendency to become law unto himself thereby leading to anarchanism. No civilised national can permit that to happen. Does a citizen shed off his fundamental right to life, the moment a policeman arrests him? Can the right to life of a citizen be put in abeyance on his arrest? These questions touch the spinal cord of human rights jurisprudence. The answer, indeed, has to be an emphatic 'No'. The precious right guaranteed by Article 21 of the Constitution of India cannot be denied to convicts, under trials, detenues and other prisoners in custody except according to the procedure established by law by placing such reasonable restrictions as are permitted by law.

23. In Neelabati Bahera Vs State of Orissa [1993 (2) SCC,746], (to which Anand, J. was a party) this Court pointed out that prisoners and declines are not denuded of their fundamental rights under Article 21 and it is only such restrictions as are permitted by law, which can be imposed on the enjoyment of the fundamental rights of the arrestees and detenues. It was observed:

"It is axiomatic that convicts, prisoners or undertrials are not denuded of their fundamental rights under Article 21 and permitted by law, which can be imposed on the enjoyment of fundamental right by such persons. It is an obligation of the State to ensure that there is no infringement of the indefeasible rights of a citizen to life, except in accordance with law, while the citizen is in its custody. The precious right guaranteed by Article 21 of the Constitution of India cannot be denied to in custody, except according to procedure established by law. There is a great responsibility on the police or prison authorities to ensure tatha the citizen in its custody is not deprived of his right to life. His liberty is in the very nature of things circumscribed by the very fact of his confinement and therefore his interest in the limited liberty left to him is rather precious. The duty of care on the part of the Sate is strict and admits of no exceptions. The wrongdoer is accountable and the Sate responsible if the accountable in Sate is responsible if the person in custody of the police is deprived of his life except according to the procedure established by law.

24. Instances have come to our notice where the police has arrested a person without warrant in connection with the investigation of an offence, without recording the arrest and the arrested person has been subjected to torture to extract information form him for the purpose of further investigation or for recovery of case property or for extracting confession etc. The torture and injury caused on the body of arrestee has sometimes resulted into his death. Death in custody is not generally shown in the records of the lock-ups and every effort is made by the police to dispose of the body or to make out a case that the arrested person died after he was released from custody. Any compliant against such torture or death is generally not given any attention by the police officers because of ties of brotherhood. No first information report at the instance of the victim or his kith and kin is generally entertained and even the higher police officer turn a blind eye to such complaints. Even where a formal prosecution is launched by the victim or his kith and kin, no direct evidence is available to substantiate the charge of torture or causing hurt resulting into death as the police lock-up where general torture or injury is caused is away from the public gaze and the witnesses are either police men or co-prisoners who are highly reluctant to appear as prosecution witnesses due to fear of retaliation by the superior officers of the police. It is often seen that when a complaint is made against torture, death or injury, in police custody, it is difficult to secure evidence against the policemen responsible for resorting to third degree methods since they are incharge of' police station records which they do not find difficult to manipulate. Consequently, prosecution against the delignuent officers generally results in acquittal. State of Madhya Pradesh Vs. Shyamsunder Trivedi & Ors. [1995 (3) Scale, 343 =] is an apt case illustrative of the observations made by us. In that case, Nathu Banjara was tortured at police station, Rampura during the interrogation. As a result of extensive injuries caused to him he died in police custody at the police station. The defence set up by the respondent police officials at the trial was that Nathu had been released from police custody at about 10.30 p.m. after interrogation on 13.10.1986 itself vide entry Ex. P/22A in the Roznamacha and that at about 7.00 a.m. on 14.10.1981, a death report Ex. P/9 was recorded at the police station, Rampura, at the instance of Ramesh respondent No. 6, to the effect that he had found "one unknown person" near a tree by the side of the tank riggling with plain in his chest and that as soon as respondent No. 6 reached near him, the said person died. The further case set up by SI Trivedi, respondent No. 1, incharge of the police station was that after making a Roznamacha entry at 7.00 a.m. about his departure from the police station (respondent No. 1 - Shyamsunder Trivedi) and Constable RajRam respondent proceeded to the spot where the dead body was stated to be lying for conducting investigation under Section 174 Cr. P.C. He summoned Ramesh Chandra and Goverdhan respondents to the spot and in their presence prepared a Panchanama Ex. P/27 of the dead body recording the opinion therein to the effect that no definite cause of death was known.

25. The First Additional Sessions Judge acquitted all the respondents of all the charges holding that there was no direct evidence to connect the respondents with the crime. The State of Madhya Pradesh went up in appeal against the order of acquittal and the High Court maintained the acquittal of respondents 2 to 7 but set aside he acquittal of respondent No. 1, Shyamsunder Trivedi for offences under Section 218, 201 and 342 IPC. His acquittal for the offence under Section 302/149 and 147 IPC was, however, maintained. The State filed an appeal in this Court by special leave. This Court found that the following circumstances had been established by the prosecution beyond every reasonable doubt and coupled with the direct evidence of PWs 1,3,4,8 and 18 those circumstances were consistent only with hypothesis of the guilt of the respondents and were inconsistent with their innocence:

(a) That the deceased had been brought alive to the police station and was last seen alive there on 13.10.81;

(b) that the dead body of the deceased was taken out of the police station on 81 at about 2 p.m. for being removed to the hospital;

(c) that SI Trivedi respondent No. 1, Ram Naresh Shukla, Respondent No. 3, Rajaram, respondent No. 4 and Ganiuddin respondent No. 5 were present at the police station and had all joined hand to dispose of the dead body of Nathu- Banjara;

(d) that SI Trivedi respondent No. 1 created false evidence and fabricated false clues in the shape of documentary evidence with a view to screen the offence and for that matter, the offender;

(e) SI Trivedi respondent in connivance with some of his subordinates, respondents herein had taken steps to cremate the dead body in host haste describing the deceased as a 'lavaris' though the identity of the deceased, when they had interrogated for a sufficient long time was well known to them and opined that:

"The observations of the High Court that the presence and participation of these respondents in the crime is doubtful are not borne out from the evidence on the record and appear to be an unrealistic over simplification of the tell tale circumstances established by the prosecution."

26. One of us (namely, Anand, J.) speaking for the court went on to observe: The trial court and the High Court, if we may say so with respect, exhibited a total lack of sensitivity and a could not careless' attitude in appreciating the evidence on the record and thereby condoning the barbarous their degree methods which are still being used, at some police stations, despite being illegal. The exaggerated adherence to and insistence upon the establishment of proof beyond every reasonable doubt, by the prosecution, ignoring the ground realities, the case situations and the peculiar circumstances of given case as in the present case, often results in miscarriage of justice and makes the justice delivery system a suspect. In the ultimate analysis the society suffers and criminal gets encouraged. Tortures in police custody, which of late are on the increase, receive encouragement by this type of an unrealistic approach of the Courts because it reinforces the belief in the mind of the police that no harm would come to them, if an odd harm would come to them, if an odd prisoner dies in the lock-up, because there would hardly be any evidence available to the prosecution to directly implicate implicate them with the torture. The Courts, must not loose sight of the fact that death in police custody is perhaps one of the worst kind of crime in a civilised society, governed by the rule of law and poses a serious threat to an orderly civilised society." This Court then suggested:

The Courts are also required to have change in their outlook and attitude particularly in cases involving custodial crimes and they should exhibit more sensitivity and adopt a realistic rather than a narrow technical approach, while dealing with the case of custodial crime so that as far as possible with their powers, the guilty should not escape so that the victim of the crime has the satisfaction that ultimately the Majesty of Law has prevailed.

27. The State appeal was allowed and the acquittal of respondents 1,3,4 and 5 was set aside. The respondents were convicted for various Offences including the offence under Section 304 Part II/34 IPC and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and fines ranging from Rs. 20,000/- to Rs. 50,000/-. The fine was directed to be paid to the heirs of Nathu Banjara by way of compensation. It was further directed:

"The trial Court shall ensure, in case the fine is deposited by the accused respondents, that the payment of the same is made to the heirs of deceased Nathu Banjara, and the Court shall take all sort precautions as are necessary to see the money is not allowed to fall into wrong, hand and its utilised for benefit of the members of the family of the decreased Nathu Banjara, and if found practical by deposit in Nationalised Bank or post office on such terms as the Trial Court may in consultation with heirs for the deceased consider fit and proper."

28. It needs no emphasis to say that when the crime goes unpunished, the criminals are encouraged and the society suffers. The victim of crime or his kith and kin become frustrated and contempt for law develops. It was considering these aspects that the Law Commission in its 113th Report recommended the insertion of Section 113B in the Indian Evidence Act. The Law Commission recommended in its 113th Report that in prosecution of police officer for an alleged offence of having caused bodily injury to a person, if there was evidence that the injury was caused during the period when the person was in the custody of the police, the court may presume the injury was caused by the police officer having the custody of that person during that period. The Commission further recommended that the court, while considering the question of presumption, should have regard to all relevant circumstance including the period of custody, statement made by victim, medical evidence and evidence which the Magistrate may have recorded. Change of burden of proof was, thus, advocated. In Shyam Sunder Trivedi's case (supra) this Court also expressed the hope that the Government and the legislature would give serious thought to the recommendation of the Law Commission. Unfortunately the suggested amendment, has no been incorporated in the statute so far. The need of amendment requires no emphasis - sharp rise in custodial violence, torture and death in custody, justifies the urgency for the amendment and we invite Parliament's attention to it.

29. Police is no doubt, under a legal duty and his legitimate right to arrest a criminal and to interrogate him during the investigation of an offence but it must be remembered that the law does not permit use of third degree methods or torture of accused in custody during interrogation and investigated with a view to solve the crime. End cannot justify the means. The interrogation and investigation into a crime should be in true sense purposeful to make the investigation effective. By torturing a person an using third degree methods, the police would be accomplishing behind the closed doors what the demands of our legal order forbid. No society can permit it.

30. How do we check the abuse of police power? Transparency of action and accountability perhaps are two possible safeguards which this Court must insist upon.

Attention is also required to be paid to properly develop work culture, training and orientation of the police force consistent with basic human values. Training methodology of the police needs restructuring. The force needs to be infused with basic human values and made sensitive to the constitutional ethos. Efforts must be made to change the attitude and approach of the police personnel handling investigations so that they do not sacrifice basic human values during interrogation and do not resort to questionable forms of interrogation. With a view to bring in transparency, the presence of the counsel of the arrestee at some point of time dying the interrogation may deter the police from using third degree methods during interrogation.

31. Apart from the police, there are several other governmental authorities also like Directorate of Revenue Intelligence, Directorate of Enforcement, Coastal Guard, Central Reserve Police Force (CRPF), Boarder Security Force (BSF), the Central Industrial Security Force (CISF), the State Armed Police, Intelligence Agencies like the Intelligence Bureau, R.A.W., Central Bureau of investigation (CBI), CID, Traffic Police, Mounted Police and ITBP, which have the power to detain a person and to interrogate him in connection with the investigation of economic offences under the Essential Commodities Act, Excise and Customs Act, Foreign Exchange Regulation Act etc. There are instances of torture and death in custody of these authorities as well. In Re Death of Sawinder Singh Grover [1995 Supp (4) SCC, 450], (to which Kuldip Singh, J. was a party) this Court took suo moto notice of the death of Sawinder Singh Grover during his custody with the Directorate of Enforcement. After getting an enquiry conducted by the Additional District Judge, which disclosed a prima facie case for investigation and prosecution, this Court directed the CBI to lodge a FIR and initiate criminal proceedings against all persons named in the report of the Additional District Judge and proceed against them. The Union of India/Directorate of Enforcement was also directed to pay a sum of Rs. 2 lacs to widow of the deceased by way of ex gratia payment at the interim stage. Amendment of the relevant provisions of law to protect the interest of arrested persons in such case too is genuine need.

32. There is one other aspect also which needs our consideration. We are conscious of the fact that police in India have to perform a difficult ad delicate task, particularly in view of the deteriorating law and order situation, communal riots, political turmoil, the increasing number of underworld and armed gangs and criminals. Many hard core criminals like extremists, the terrorists, drug peddlers smugglers who have organized gangs, have taken strong roots in the society. It is being said in certain quarters that with more and more liberalization and enforcement of fundamental rights, it would lead to difficulties in the detection of crimes committed by such categories of hardened criminals by soft peddling interrogation. It is felt in those quarters that if we lay too much of emphasis on protection of their fundamental rights and human rights such criminals may go scot-free without exposing any element or iota of criminality with the result, the crime would go unpunished and in the ultimate analysis the society would suffer. The concern is genuine and the problem is real. To deal with such a situation, a balance approach is needed to meet the ends of justice. This is all the more so, in view of the expectation of the society that police must deal with the criminals in an efficient and effective manner and bring to book those who are involved in the crime. The cure cannot, however, be worse than the disease itself.

33. The response of American Supreme Court to such an issue in Mirranda Vs. Arizona 384 US 436 is instructive. The Court said:

"A recurrent argument, made in these case is that society's need for interrogation out-weights the privilege. This argument is not unfamiliar to this Court. See e.g., Chambers V. Florida 309 US 227 240-41, 84L ed 716, 724, 60 S CT 472 (1940). The whole thrust of our foregoing discussion demonstrates that the Constitution has prescribed the rights of the individual when confronted with the power of Government when it provided in the Fifth Amendment that an individual cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself. That right cannot be abridged." (Emphasis ours)

34. There can be no gain saying that freedom of an individual must yield to the security of the State. The right of preventive detention of individuals in the interest of security of the State in various situations prescribed under different statutes has been upheld by the Courts. The right to in the detenues, culprits or arrestee in the interest of the nation, must take precedence over an individual's right to personal liberty. The latin maxim salus populi est suprema lex (the safety of the people is the supreme law) and salus populi est suprema lex (safety of the State is the supreme law) co-exist and are not only important and relevant but lie at the heart of the doctrine that the welfare of an individual must yield to that community. The action of the Sate, however, must be "right, just and fair". Using any form of torture for extracting any kind of information would neither be 'right nor just nor fair' and, therefore would be impermissible, being offensive to Article 21. Such a crime-suspect must be interrogated - indeed subjected to sustained and scientific interrogation - determined in accordance with the provisions of law. He cannot, however, be tortured or subjected to third degree methods or eliminated with a view to elicit information, extract confession or drive knowledge about his accomplice, weapons etc. His constitutional right cannot be abridged except in the manner permitted by law, though in the very nature of things there would be qualitative difference in the method of interrogation of such a person as compared to an ordinary criminal Challenge of terrorism be met with innovative ideas and approach. State terrorism is no answer to combat terrorism. State terrorism would only provide legitimacy to terrorism. That would be bad for the State, the community and above all for the Rule of law unto themselves. That the terrorist has violated human rights of innocent citizens may render him liable for punishment but it cannot justify the violation of his human rights except in the manner permitted by law. Need, therefore is to develop scientific methods of investigation and train the investigators properly to interrogate to meet the challenge.

35. In addition to statutory and constitutional requirements to which we have made a reference, we are of the view that it would be useful and effective to structure appropriate machinery for contemporaneous recording and notification of all cases of arrest and detention to bring in transparency and accountability. It is desirable that the officer arresting a person should prepare a memo of his arrest at the time of arrest in the presence of atleast one witness who may be a member of the family of the arrestee or a respectable person of locality from where the arrest is made. The date and time of arrest shall be recorded in the memo which must also be counter signed by the arrestee.

36. We, therefore, consider it appropriate to issue the following requirements to be followed in all cases of arrest or detention till legal provisions are made in that behalf as preventive measurers:

(1) The police personnel carrying out the arrest and handling the interrogation of the arrestee should bear accurate, visible and clear identification and name tags with their designations. The particulars of all such police personnel who handle interrogation of the arrestee insist be recorded in a register.

(2) That the police officer carrying out the arrest of the arrestee shall prepare a memo of arrest at the time of arrest and such memo shall be attested by atleast one witness, who may be either a member of the family of the arrestee or a respectable person of the locality from where the arrest is made. It shall also be counter signed by the arrestee and shall contain the time and date of arrest.

(3) A person who has been arrested or detained and is being held in custody in a police station or interrogation centre or other lock-up, shall be entitled to have one friend or relative or other person known to him or having interest in his welfare being informed, as soon as practicable, that he has been arrested and is being detained at the particular place, unless the attesting witness of the memo of arrest is himself such a friend or a relative of the arrestee.

(4) The time, place of arrest and venue of custody of an arrestee must be notified by the police where the next friend or relative of the arrestee lives outside the district or town through the Legal Aid Organisation in the District and the police station of the area concerned telegraphically within a period of 8 to 12 hours after the arrest.

(5) The person arrested must be made aware of this right to have someone informed of his arrest or detention as soon as he is put under arrest or is detained.

(6) An entry must be made in the diary at the place of detention regarding the arrest of the person which shall also disclose the name of the next friend of the person who has been informed of the arrest and the names and particulars of the police officials in whose custody the arrestee is.

(7) The arrestee should, where he so requests, be also examined at the time of his arrest and major and minor injuries, if any present on his/herbed, must be recorded at that time. The "Inspection Memo" must be signed both by the arrestee and the police officer effecting the arrest and its copy provided to the arrestee.

(8) The arrestee should be subjected to medical examination by a trained doctor every 48 hours during his detention in custody by a doctor on the panel of approved doctors appointed by Director, Health Services of the concerned State or Union Territory. Director, Health Services should prepare such a penal for all Tehsils and Districts as well.

(9) Copies of all the documents including the memo of arrest, referred to above, should be sent to the illaqa Magistrate for his record.

(10) The arrestee may be permitted to meet his lawyer during interrogation, though not throughout the interrogation.

(11) A police control room should be provided at all district and State Headquarters, where information regarding the arrest and the place of custody of the arrestee shall be communicated by the officer causing the arrest, within 12 hours of effecting the arrest and at the police control room it should bc displayed on conspicuous notice board.

37. Failure to comply with the requirements herein above mentioned shall apart form rendering the concerned official liable for departmental action also render him liable to be punished for contempt of court and the proceedings for contempt of court may be instituted in any High Court of the Country, having territorial jurisdiction over the matter.

38. The requirements, referred to above flow from Articles 21 and 22(1) of the Constitution and need to be strictly followed. These would apply with equal force to the other governmental agencies also to Which a reference has been made earlier,

39. These requirements are in addition 1, the constitutional and statutory safeguards and do not detract from various other directions given by the courts from time to time in connection with the safeguarding the rights and dignity of arrestee.

40. The requirements mentioned above shall be forwarded to the Director General of Police and the Home Secretary of very State Union Territory and it shall be their obligation to circulate the same to every police station, under their charge and get the same notified at ever police station at a conspicuous place. It would also be useful and serve large interest to broadcast the requirements on the All India Radio besides being shown on the National network of Doordarshan and publishing and distributing pamphlets in the local language containing these requirements for information of the general public. Creating awareness about tile rights of the arrestee would in our opinion be a step in the right direction to combat the evil of custodial crime and bring in transparency and accountability. It is hoped that these requirements would been to curb, if not totally eliminate the use of questionable methods during interrogation and investigation leading to custodial commission of crimes.

PUNITIVE MEASURES

41. UBI JUS IBI REMEDIUM - There is no wrong without a remedy. The law wills that in every case where a man is wronged and undamaged he must have a remedy. A mere declaration of invalidity of an action or finding of custodial violence or death in lock-up, does not by itself provide any meaningful remedy to a person whose fundamental right to life has been infringed. Much more needs to be done.

42. Some punitive provisions are contained in the India Panel Code which seeks to punish violation of right to life. Section 220 provides for punishment to an officer or authority who detains or keeps a person in confinement with a corrupt or malicious motive Sections 330 and 331 provide for punishment of those who inflict injury grievous hurt on a person to extort confession or information in regard to commission of all offence. Illustrations (a) and (b) to Section 330 make a police officer guilty of torturing a person in order to induce him to confess the commission of a crime or to induce him to point out place where stolen property is deposited. Section 330, therefore, directly makes torture during interrogation and investigation punishable under the Indian Penal Code. These statutory provisions are, however, inadequate to repair the wrong done to the citizen. Prosecution of the offender is an obligation of State in case of every crime but the victim of crime needs to be compensated monetarily also. The Court, where the infringement of the fundamental right is established, therefore, cannot stop by giving compensatory relief, not by way of damages as in a civil action but by way of compensation under the public law jurisdiction for the wrong done, due to breach of public duty by the Sate of not protecting the fundamental right to life of the citizen. To repair the wrong done and give judicial redress for legal injury is compulsion of judicial consequence.

43. Article 9(5) of the International Convenient on Civil and Political Rights, 1996 (ICCRP) provides that "anyone who has been the victim of unlawful arrest or of courts, the Government of India at time of its ratification (of ICCRP) in 1979 had made a specific reservation to the effect the Indian legal system does not recognise a right to compensation for victims of unlawful arrest or detention and thus become a party to covenant. That reservation, however, has now lost its relevance in view of law laid down by this Court in a number of case awarding compensation this Court in number of cases awarding compensation for the infringement of the fundamental right to life of a citizen. {See with advantage Rudal Shah Vs. State of Bihar [1983 (4) SCC, 141]: Sebastian M. Hongrey Vs. Union of India [184 (3) SCC, 339] and 1984 (3) SCC, 82]; Bhim Singh Vs. State of J & K [1984 (Supp) SCC, 504 and 1985 (4) SCC, 677] Saheli Vs. Commissioner of Police, Delhi [1990 (1) SCC, 422]} There is indeed no express provision in the Constitution of India for grant of compensation for violation of a fundamental right to life, nonetheless, this Court has judicially evolved a right to compensation in cases of established unconstitutional depravation of personal liberty or life, [See: Neelabati Bahera Vs. State (Supra)].

44. Till about two decades ago the liability of the Government for tortious act of its public servants was generally limited and the person affected could enforce his right in tort by filing a civil suit and there again the defence of sovereign immunity was allowed to have it play. For the violation of the fundamental right to life or basic-human rights, however, this Court has taken the view that the defence of sovereign immunity is not available to the State for the tortious acts of the public servants and for the established violation of the rights guaranteed by Article 21 of the Constitution of India. In Neelabati Bahera Vs. State [supra] the decision of this Court in Kasturi Lal Raila Ram Jain Vs. State of U.P. [1996 (1) SCR, 375] wherein the plea of sovereign immunity had been upheld in a case of vicarious liability of the State for the tort committed by its employees was explained thus:

"In this context it is sufficient to say that the decision of this Court in Kasturilal unpholding the State's plea of sovereign immunity for tortious acts of its servants is confined to the sphere of liablity in tort, which is distinct form the State's liablity for contravention of fundamental rights to which the application in the constitutional scheme and is no defence to the constitutional remedy under Articles 32 and 226 of the Constitution which enables award of fundamental rights, when the only practicable mode of enforcement of the fundamental rights call be the award of compensation. The decisions of this Court in Rudal Sah and others in that contravention of fundamental rights, in the constitutional remedy under Articles 32 and 226 of the Constitution. On the other hand, Kasturilal related to the value of goods seized and not returned to the owner due to fault of damages for the tort of conversation under the ordinary process, and not a claim for compensation for violation of fundamental rights. Kasturilal is, therefore, inapplicable in this context and distinguishable."

45. The claim in public law for compensation for unconstitutional deprivation of fundamental right to life and liberty, the protection of which is guaranteed under the Constitution, is a claim based on strict liability and is in addition to the claim available in private law for damages for tortious acts of the public servants. Public Law proceedings serve a different purpose than the private law proceedings. Award of compensation for established infringement of the indefeasible rights guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution is a remedy available in public law since the purpose of public law is not only to civilise public power but also to assure the citizens that they live under a legal system wherein their rights and interests shall be protected and preserved. Grant of compensation in proceedings under Article 32 or 226 of the Constitution of India for the established violation of the fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 21, is an exercise of the Courts under the public law jurisdiction for penalising the wrong doer and fixing the liability for the public wrong on the State which failed in the discharge of its public duty to protect the fundamental rights of the citizen.

46. The old doctrine of only relegating the aggrieved to the remedies available in civil law limits the role of the courts too much, as the protector and custodian of the indefeasible rights of the citizens. The courts have the obligation to satisfy the social aspirations of the citizens because the courts and the law are for the people and expected to respond to their aspirations. A Court of law cannot close its consciousness and aliveness to stark realities. Mere punishment of the offender cannot give much solace to the family of the victim - civil action for damages is a long drawn and cumbersome judicial process. Monetary compensation for redressal by the Court finding the infringement of the indefeasible right to life of the citizen is, therefore, a useful and at times perhaps the only effective remedy to apply balm to the wounds of the family members of the deceased victim, who may have been the bread winner of the family.

47. In Nilabati Bahera's case (supra), it was held :

"Adverting to the grant of relief to the heirs of a victim of custodial death for the infraction or invasion of his rights guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution of India, it is not always enough to relegate him to the ordinary remedy of a civil suit to claim damages for the tortious act of the State as that remedy in private law indeed is available to the aggrieved party. The citizen complaining of the infringement of the indefeasible right under Article 21 of the Constitution cannot be told that for the established violation of the fundamental right to life, he cannot get any relief under the public law by the courts exercising writ jurisdiction. The primary source of the public law proceedings stems from the prerogative writs and the courts have, therefore, to evolve 'new tools' to give relief in public law by molding it according to the situation with a view to preserve and protect the Rule of Law. While concluding his first Hamlyn Lecture in 1949 under the title "Freedom under the Law" Lord Denying in his own style warned:-

"No one can suppose that the executive will never be guilty of the sins that are common to all of us. You may be sure that they will sometimes do thing which they ought not to do : and will not do things that they ought to do. But if and when wrongs are thereby suffered by any of us what is the remedy? Our procedure for securing our personal freedom is efficient, our procedure for preventing the abuse of power is not. Just as the pick and shovel is no longer suitable for the winning of coal, so also the procedure of mandamus, certiorari, and actions on the case are not suitable for the winning of freedom in the new age. They must be replaced by new and up-to date machinery, by declarations, injunctions and actions for negligence... This is not the tasks of Parliament.... the courts must do this. Of all the great tasks that lie ahead this is the greatest. Properly exercised the new powers of the executive lead to the welfare state; but abused they lead to a totalitarian state. None such must even be allowed in this country".

48. A similar approach of redressing the wrong by award of monetary compensation against the State for its failure to protect the fundamental rights of the citizen has been adopted by the courts of Ireland, which has a written constitution, guaranteeing fundamental rights, but which also like the Indian Constitution contains no provision of remedy for the infringement of those rights. That has, however, not prevented the Courts in Ireland from developing remedies, including the award of damages, not only against individuals guilty of infringement, but against the State itself.

49. The informative and educative observations of O' Dalaigh CJ in The State (at the Prosecution of Quinn) v. Ryn [1965] IR 70 (122) deserve special notice. The Learned Chief Justice said:

"It was not the intention of. the Constitution in guaranteeing the fundamental rights of the citizen that these rights should be set at bought or circumvented. The intention was that rights of substance were being assured to the individual and that the Courts were the custodians of those rights. As a necessary corollary, it follows that no one can with impunity set these rights at bought or circumvent them, and that the Court's powers in this regard are as ample as the defence of the Constitution requires." (Emphasis supplied)

50. In Byrne v. Ireland [1972] IR 241, Walsh J opined at p 264:

"In several parts in the Constitution duties to make certain provisions for the benefit of the citizens are imposed on the State in terms which bestow rights upon the citizens and, unless some contrary provision appears in the Constitution, the Constitution must be deemed to have created a remedy for the enforcement of these rights. It follows that, where the right is one guaranteed by the State, it is against the State that the remedy must be sought if there has been a failure to discharge the constitutional obligation imposed".

(Emphasis supplied)

51. In Maharaj Vs. Attorney General of Trinidad Tobago [(1978) 2 All. E.R. 670], the Privy Council while interpreting Section 6 of the Constitution of Trinidad and Tobago held that though not expressly provided therein, it permitted an order for monetary compensation, by way of 'redress' for contravention of the basic human rights and fundamental freedoms. Lord Diplock speaking for the majority said:

"It was argued on behalf of the Attorney General that Section 6(2) does not permit of an order for monetary compensation despite the fact that this kind of redress was ordered in jaundoo v. Attorney General of Guyana. Reliance was placed on the reference in the subsection to enforcing, or securing the enforcement of, any of the provisions of the said foregoing sections' as the purpose for which orders etc. could be made. An order for payment of compensation, it was submitted, did not amount to the enforcement of the rights that had been contravened. In their Lordships' view an order for payment of compensation when a right protected under Section I 'has been' contravened is clearly a form of 'redress' which a person is entitled to claim under Section 6(1) and may well be the only practicable form of redress, is by now it is in the instant case. The jurisdiction to make such an order is conferred on the High Court by para (a) of Section 6(2), viz. jurisdiction to hear and determine any application made by any person in pursuance of sub-section (1) of this section. The very wide powers to make orders, issue writs and give directions are ancillary to this."

52. Lord Diplock then went on to observe (at page 680):

"Finally, their Lordships would say something about the measure of monetary compensation recoverable under Section 6 where the contravention of the claimant's constitutional rights consists of deprivation of liberty otherwise than by due process of law. The claim is not a claim in private law far damages for the tort of false imprisonment, under which the damages recoverable are at large and would include damages for loss of reputation. It is a claim in public law for compensation for deprivation of liberty alone."

53. In Simpson vs. Attorney General [Baigent's case] (1994 NZLR, 677) the Court of Appeal in New Zealand dealt with the issue in a very elaborate manner by reference to a catena of authorities from different jurisdictions. It considered the applicability of the doctrine of vicarious liability for torts like unlawful search, committed by the police officials which violate the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act, 1990. While dealing with the enforcement of rights and freedoms as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights for which no specific remedy was provided. Hardie Boys J. observed:

"The New Zealand Bill of Rights Act unless it is to be no more than an empty statement, is a commitment by the Crown that those who in the three branches of the government exercise its function powers duties will observe the rights that the Bill affirms. It is I consider implicit in that commitment, indeed essential to its worth, that the courts are not only to observe the Bill in the discharge of their own duties but are able to grant appropriate and effective remedies where rights have been infringed. I see no reason to think that this should depend on the terms of a written constitution. Enjoyment of the basic human rights are the entitlement of every citizen and their protection the obligation of every ciglized state. They are inherent in and essential to the structure of society. They do not depend on the legal or constitutional form in which they are declared. The reasoning that has led the Privy Council and the Courts of Ireland and India to the conclusions reached in the cases to which I have referred (and they are but a sample) is in my own opinion equally valid to the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act if it is to have life and meaning." (Emphasis supplied)

54. The Court of Appeal relied upon the judgments of the Irish Courts, the Privy Council and referred to the law laid down in Nilabati Behera Vs. State (supra) thus :

"Another valuable authority comes from India, where the constitution empowers the Supreme Court to enforce rights guaranteed under it. In Nilabati Behera v. State of Orissa (1993) Crl. LJ 2899, the Supreme Court awarded damages against the State to the mother of a young man beaten to death in police custody. The Court held that its power of enforcement imposed a duty to "force new tools", of which compensation was an appropriate one where that was the only mode of redress available. This was not a remedy in tort, but one in public law based on strict liability for the contravention of fundamental rights to which the principle of sovereign immunity does not apply. These observations of Anand J it p 2912 may be noted.

The old doctrine of only relegating the aggrieved to the remedies available in civil law limits the role of the courts too too much as protector and guarantor of the indefeasible rights of the citizens. The courts have the obligation to satisfy the social aspirations of the citizens because the courts and the law are for the people and expected to respond to their aspiration. The purpose of public law is not only to cigilized public power but also to assure the citizen that they live under a legal system which aims to protect their interests and preserve their rights."

55. Each of the five members of the Court of Appeal in Simpson's case (supra) delivered a separate judgment but there was unanimity of opinion regarding the grant of pecuniary compensation to the victim, for the contravention of his rights guaranteed under the Bill of Rights Act, notwithstanding the absence of an express provision in that behalf in the Bill of Rights Act.

56. Thus, to sum up, it is now a well accepted proposition in most of the jurisdictions, that monetary or pecuniary compensation is an appropriate and indeed an effective and sometime perhaps the only suitable remedy for redressal of the established infringement of the fundamental right to life of a citizen by the public servants and the State is victoriously liable for their acts. The claim of the citizen is based on the principle of strict liability to which the defence of sovereign immunity is not available and the citizen must receive the amount of compensation from the State, which shall have the right to be indemnified by the wrong doer. In the assessment of compensation, the emphasis has to be on the compensatory and not on punitive element. The objective is to apply balm to the wounds and not to punish the transgressor or the offender, as awarding appropriate punishment for the offence (irrespective of compensation) must be fell to the criminal courts in which the offender is prosecuted, which the State, in. law, is duty bound to do. The award of compensation in the public law jurisdiction is also without prejudice to any other action like civil suit for damage which is lawfully available to the victim or the heirs of the deceased victim with respect to the same matter for the tortious act committed by the functionaries of the State. The quantum of compensation will, of course, depend upon the peculiar facts of each case and no strait, jacket formula can be evolved in that behalf. The relief to redress the wrong for the established invasion of the fundamental rights of the citizen, under the public law jurisdiction is, thus, in addition to the traditional remedies and not in derogation of them. The amount of compensation as awarded by the Court and paid by the State to redress the wrong done, may in a given case, be adjusted against any amount which may be awarded to the claimant by way of damages in a civil suit.

57. Before parting with this judgment we wish to place on record our appreciation for the learned counsel appearing for the States in general and Dr. A.M. Singhvi, learned senior counsel who assisted the Court amicus curiae in particular for the valuable assistance rendered by them.

3. There is no dispute at the bar that the petitioners No. 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6 are residents of Daryaganj, New Delhi while the petitioner No. 3 is a resident of Faridabad, Haryana : they are then obviously not within the limits of Shillong Police Station or within the adjoining police station. The notices reproduced hereinabove indicate that the petitioners have been required to appear before the respondent No. 6 at the C. I. D. Headquarters at Shillong. Before proceeding further, it may be useful to refer to the provisions of Sections 91 and 160, Cr. P. C. hereunder :

"91. Summons to produce document or other thing.- (1) Whenever any Court or any officer in charge of a police station considers that the production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons, or such officer by a written order, to the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it, or to product it at, at the time and place stated in the summons or order.

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition if he causes such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.
(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed-
(a) to affect sections 123 and 124 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (1 of 1872), or the Banker's Book Evidence Act, 1891 (13 of 1891), or
(b) to apply to a letter, postcard, telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the postal or telegraph authority"
"160. Police Officer's power to require attendance of witnesses.- (1) Any police officer making an investigation under this Chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining police station who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case; and such person shall attend as so required :
Provided that no male person under the age of fifteen years or woman shall be required to attend at any place other than the place in which such male person or woman resides.
(2) The State Government may, by rules made in this behalf, provide for the payment by the police officer of the reasonable expenses of every person, attending under sub-section (1) at any place other than his residence."
4. Insofar as Section 91 is concerned, there is no difficulty. If a Court or a police officer considers the production of a document or a thing for the purposes of investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under the Code, it can require the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be, to attend and produce it at the time and place stated in the summons or order. However, the personal attendance of the person, in whose possession or power the document or thing is believed to be, cannot be insisted upon for production of such document or thing : the mere production of such document or thing will obviate his personal attendance. It is, however, with respect to Section 160 that the controversy has cropped up. Because the personal attendance of the petitioners are considered by the respondent No. 6 to be necessary as they appear to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the criminal case registered at Laban Police Station, Shillong. Mr. V. K. Jindal, the learned senior counsel for the petitioners, vehemently submits that when the petitioners are admittedly residents of Delhi, the summons for their personal appearance issued by the respondent No. 6 at Shillong is contrary to the provisions of Section 160 inasmuch as this provision speak of the persons being summoned to be necessarily within the limits of the police station of the police officer making the investigation or the adjoining police station. According to the learned senior counsel, the language of Section 160 is clear and unambiguous and does not leave any room for two views, namely, the persons, even if they are acquainted with the facts and circumstances, to be summoned must be residing within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the police officer making the investigation or the adjoining police station, and any other interpretation will be doing violence to the plain language of the section. Per contra, Mr. S. P. Mahanta, the learned Additional Advocate General, submits with equal vehemence that for requisitioning the attendance of a person, who is well acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case, it is not necessary that he should be residing within the limits of the police station of the investigating officer or any adjoining police station. He heavily relies on the decision of the Bombay High Court in Anirudha S. Bhagat v. Ramnivas Meena, 2005 Cri LJ 3346 (DB) in support of his contention. He contends that the petitioners have no case for resisting the summons and are only interested in stalling the investigation of the case to avoid criminal prosecution of heinous crimes. He, therefore, urges this Court to dismiss the writ petition with heavy costs.

5. Section 160, Cr. P. C. authorizes a police officer making an investigation, by order in writing, (i) to require the attendance before himself, (ii) of any person, who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case, and (iii) who is residing within the limits of his own police station or any adjoining police station. The expression "who being within the limits of his own" read with the words following it, namely, "or any adjoining station" can only mean the person, who is to be summoned, must reside within the limits of the police station of the police officer making the investigation. So read, it becomes clear that such police officer making the investigation can enforce the attendance of a person acquainted with the facts and circumstances only if the latter resides within the limits of his own police station or adjoining station. If the person being summoned does not reside within the limits of the police station of the police officer making the investigation or, at any rate, within the limits of the adjoining police station, it appears that such police officer cannot enforce his attendance even though he may be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case being investigated by him. The proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 160 says that no male person under the age of fifteen years or woman shall be required to attend at any place other than the place in which such male person or woman resides. Then, sub-section (2) of Section 160 further provides that the State Government may, by rules made in this behalf, provide for the payment by the officer of the reasonable expenses of every person, attending under sub-section (1) at any place other than his residence. Conjoint reading of both the sub-sections and the proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 160 plainly indicate, firstly, that the person to be summoned by the officer making the investigation must reside within the local limits of his own police station or within the adjoining area, secondly, that in the case of a male person under the age of fifteen years or woman, their attendance cannot be enforced at any place other than their residence even if they reside within the limits of the police station of the police officer making the investigation or within the limits of the adjoining police station and, thirdly, that reasonable expenses of every person other than a male person under the age of fifteen years or woman attending such requisition at any place within the limits of the police station shall have to be paid by the concerned police officer as per rules framed by the State Government in this behalf. If the contention of the learned Additional Advocate General that under Section 160, the police officer making the investigation is not disabled from requiring the attendance of a witness residing beyond the local limits of his police station or adjoining station, is accepted, that will amount to ignoring the words "being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station". In my opinion, such interpretation is against all canons of interpretation. It is not a sound principle of construction to brush aside words in a statute as being inapposite surplusage, if they can have appropriate application in circumstances conceivably within the contemplation of the statute (see Ashwini Kumar Ghosh v. Arabinda Bose, AIR 1952 SC 369). "In the interpretation of statutes", observed Das Gupta, J. in J. K. Cotton Spinning and Weaving Mills Co. Ltd. v. State of U. P., AIR 1961 SC 1170 (at page 1174), "the Courts presume that the Legislature inserted every part thereof for a purpose and the legislative intention is that every part of the statute should have effect." The Legislature is deemed not to waste its words or to say anything in vain and a construction which attributes redundancy to the Legislature will not be accepted except for compelling reasons. When the language of Section 160 is plain and unambiguous, this Court cannot plunge headlong into a discussion of the reason which motivated the Legislature into enacting this provision and took into consideration the hardship and inconvenience being caused to the investigating agency if they are not allowed to enforce the attendance of witnesses residing beyond their police station or adjoining police station. The rule of purposive construction cannot also be invoked in this provision. The correct principle, according to the learned author, G. P. Singh, J., is that after the words have been construed in the context and it is found that the language is capable of bearing only one construction, the rule in Heydon's case ceases to be controlling and gives way to the plain meaning rule. But the rule cannot be used to "the length of applying unnatural meanings to familiar words or of so stretching the language that its former shape is transformed into something which is not only significantly different but has a name of its own especially when "the language has no evident ambiguity or uncertainty about it. (see Principles of Statutory, Interpretation, 9th Edn. pp. 119-120). In the view that I have taken, the impugned notices are ultra vires the provisions of Section 160 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, and cannot be sustained in law. I have carefully gone through the case Anirudha S. Bhagat (2005 Cri LJ 3346) (supra) cited by the learned Additional Advocate General, but, with respect, I find myself unable to agree with view taken by the Division Bench of the Bombay High Court for the reasons already stated in the foregoing.

6. Consequently, this writ petition succeeds. The impugned notices issued by the respondent No. 6 to the petitioners under Section 160, Cr. P. C. are hereby quashed. No further notice under S. 160, Cr. P. C. shall be issued by him upon the petitioners hereafter to enforce their attendance from Delhi as witnesses in connection with Laban P. S. Case No. 63(11)04. Insofar as the notice under Section 91, Cr. P. C. is concerned, it is hereby declared that the personal attendance of the petitioners before the respondent No. 6 is not necessary merely for production of the documents required by him in connection with that case. However, there shall be no costs.

(A) Delhi Police Act (1978), S.140 - Offence by Police Officer - Bar to prosecution lodged after three months - Shelter of period of three months can be taken only if act done by police officer is under colour of duty - Case of murder by police officials - Will not fall within expression 'colour of duty' occurring in S. 140. (Paras 35, 36, 42)

(B) Penal Code (45 of 1860), S.300, Exception 3 - MURDER - POLICE OFFICERS - Death by police officials - Benefit of exception 3 to S.300 - Obligation to prove an exception is on preponderance of probabilities but it nevertheless lies on defence - Accused police party had fired without provocation at car killing two innocent persons and injuring one - Incident occurred on account of mistaken identity of deceased as wanted criminal by police party - Defence of police party that deceased had first resorted to firing - Found unacceptable as it was proved, that 7.65 mm pistol had been surreptitiously placed in car to create defence - Though police party was acquitted to plant pistol in car on grounds that it was not possible to pinpoint culprit who had done so - This can, by no stretch of imagination, be taken to mean that pistol had been planted in car has been disbelieved by High Court - Accused police party not entitled to benefit of exception 3 to S. 300. JUDGEMENT

HARJIT SINGH BEDI, J. :- This judgment will dispose of Criminal Appeal Nos.2231 of 2009, 2476 of 2009 and 2477-2484 of 2009. The facts have been taken from Criminal Appeal No. 2231 of 2009 (Satyavir Singh Rathi v. State thr. C.B.I.).

2. On the 31st March 1997 Jagjit Singh and Tarunpreet Singh PW-11 both hailing from Kurukshetra in the State of Haryana came to Delhi to meet Pradeep Goyal in his office situated near the Mother Dairy Booth in Patparganj, Delhi. They reached the office premises between 12.00 noon and 1.00 p.m. but found that Pradeep Goyal was not present and the office was locked. Jagjit Singh thereupon contacted Pradeep Goyal on his Mobile Phone and was told by the latter that he would be reaching the office within a short time. Jagjit Singh and Tarunpreet Singh, in the meanwhile, decided to have their lunch and after buying some ice-cream from the Mother Dairy Booth, waited for Pradeep Goyal's arrival. Pradeep Goyal reached his office at about 1.30 p.m. but told Jagjit Singh and Tarunpreet Singh that as he had some work at the Branch of the Dena Bank in Connaught Place, they should accompany him to that place. The three accordingly left for the Bank in the blue Maruti Esteem Car bearing No. UP-14F-1580 belonging to Pradeep Goyal. Mohd. Yaseen, a hardcore criminal, and wanted by the Delhi Police and the police of other States as well, in several serious criminal cases, was being tracked by the Inter-State Cell of the Crime Branch of the Delhi Police and in the process of gathering information of his movements, his telephone calls were being monitored and traced by PW-15 Inspector Ram Mehar. The appellant Satyavir Singh Rathi, Assistant Commissioner of Police and the In-Charge of the Inter-State Cell, received information that Mohd. Yaseen would be visiting a place near the Mother Dairy, Patparganj, Delhi at about 1.30 p.m. on the 31st March 1997. Inspector Anil Kumar (appellant in Criminal Appeal No.2484 of 2009) of the Crime Branch was accordingly detailed by ACP Rathi to keep a watch near the Mother Dairy Booth in Patparganj and he was actually present at that place when Tarunpreet Singh and Jagjit Singh met Pradeep Goyal in his office. Jagjit Singh who was a cut haired Sikh (without a turban though he sported a beard) was mistaken for Mohd. Yaseen by Inspector Anil Kumar. As the Inspector was, at that stage, accompanied only by two police officials, Head Constable Shiv Kumar and Constable Sumer Singh, he called for reinforcements from ACP Rathi who was at that time present in his office in Chanakayapuri. On receiving the call, ACP Rathi briefed the staff in his office and told them that two young persons had been spotted near the Mother Dairy Booth in Patparganj and that one of them, a bearded young man, resembled Mohd. Yaseen, the wanted criminal. The ACP, along with a police party consisting in all of 12 persons, left the Inter-State Cell office at 1.32 p.m. to assist the police team led by Inspector Anil Kumar. As per the record, barring Head Constable Srikrishna and Constable Om Niwas, all the officials, including ACP Satyavir Singh Rathi were armed with service weapons. The police officials and the weapons they were carrying are given hereunder:

(i) ACP Satyavir Singh Rathi 9 MM Pistol No.0592
(ii) Insp. Anil Kumar .38 Revolver No.1147
(iii) SI Ashok Rana .38 Revolver No.1139
(iv) SI A Abbas .38 Revolver No.1114
(v) ASI Shamsuddin .38 Revolver No.1112
(vi) HC ShivKumar .38 Revolver No.1148
(vii) HC Mahavir Singh .38 Revolver No. 0518
(viii) HC Tej Pal .38 Revolver No.1137
(ix) Ct.Sunil Kumar SAF carbine
(x) Ct. Subhash Chand .38 Revolver No.1891
(xi) Ct. Kothari Ram AK-47 No.5418
(xii) Ct. Bahadur Singh AK-47 No. 2299
(xiii) Ct. Sumer Singh .38 Revolver No.1906

3. In the meanwhile, the Maruti Esteem car, which had been followed by Inspector Anil Kumar and the other two officials with him, stopped at the Dena Bank at 2.00 p.m. Pradeep Goyal then got down from the car, leaving Jagjit Singh and Tarunpreet Singh behind. Jagjit Singh, however, on the request of Pradeep Goyal, occupied the driver's seat so that the car was not towed away by the police. Pradeep Goyal then went on to the Dena Bank where two of his employees Vikram and Rajiv were waiting for him outside the Bank. The three then went inside the Bank whereafter Vikram returned to the car to pick up a briefcase belonging to Pradeep Goyal. Tarunpreet Singh also accompanied Vikram to the Bank while Jagjit Singh continued to sit alone in the driver's seat. Pradeep Goyal came out from the Bank at about 2.30 p.m. and after giving instructions to his employees, sat in the Esteem car on the front left seat whereas Tarunpreet Singh got into the rear seat. The car driven by Jagjit Singh thereafter moved on towards Barakhamba Road. As the car halted at the red light on Barakhamba Road, the two police parties, one headed by ACP Satyavir Singh Rathi and other by Inspector Anil Kumar, joined forces. The car was immediately surrounded by the police officials who fired from almost all sides killing Pradeep Goyal and Jagjit Singh instantaneously and causing grievous injuries to Tarunpreet Singh. The three occupants were removed to the RML Hospital in a Police Control Room Gypsy, but Pradeep Goyal and Jagjit Singh were declared dead on arrival. On receiving information with regard to the shootout, Inspector Niranjan Singh- PW 42, the SHO of Police Station, Connaught Place, New Delhi, rushed to the place of incident followed by senior police officials, including the DCP. On an inspection of the car, Inspector Niranjan Singh PW recovered a 7.65 mm pistol loaded with 7 live cartridges in the magazine, a misfired cartridge in the breech and two spent cartridge cases of 7.65 mm bore from inside the car. These items were taken into possession. Inspector Anil Kumar also handed over a written complaint with regard to the incident to Inspector Niranjan Singh, who in turn sent the same to the Police Station with his endorsement, and an FIR No. 448/97 dated 31st March 1997 under Sections 186/353/307 of the IPC and Section 25 of the Arms Act was registered against the occupants of the car. In the complaint, Inspector Anil Kumar recorded that after the car had stopped at the red light, it had been surrounded by the police and that he had thereafter knocked at the driver's window asking the occupants to come out but instead of doing so, Jagjit Singh had started firing at the police party from inside the car resulting in gun shot injuries to Constables Sunil Kumar and Subhash Chand and that it was thereafter that the police personnel had opened fire at the car in self defence with a view to immobilizing the occupants and to prevent their escape. The incident, however, sparked a huge public outcry. The very next day Dinesh Chand Gupta, father-in-law of Pradeep Goyal, made a complaint to the Lt. Governor, Delhi on which another FIR No. 453/97 was registered at Police Station Connaught Place, New Delhi against the police personnel involved in the shootout for an offence punishable under Section 302/34 of the IPC. In the complaint, it was alleged that the police officials had surrounded the car and had fired indiscriminately and without cause, at the occupants killing the two and causing grievous injuries to the third. The initial investigation with regard to the incident was carried out by Inspector Niranjan Singh but pursuant to the orders of the Government of India made on the 1st April of 1997 the investigation was handed over to the Central Bureau of Investigation (hereinafter called the CBI) and the two FIRs were amalgamated for the purpose of investigation. The CBI, on investigation, came to the conclusion that the police party headed by ACP Satyavir Singh Rathi and Inspector Anil Kumar had fired on the Maruti Esteem car without provocation and that FIR No. 448/97 dated 31st March 1997, registered on the complaint of Inspector Anil Kumar, was intended to act as a cover-up for the incident and to justify the police action. The CBI accordingly found that no shot had been fired from inside the car by Jagjit Singh, as alleged, and that the claim in this FIR that two police officials, who were a part of the police party, had sustained gun shot injuries as a result of firing from the car, was false. The investigation also found that the 7.65 MM pistol and cartridges allegedly recovered from inside the car had actually been planted therein by members of the police party with a view to creating a defence and screening themselves from prosecution. As a result of the investigation made in both the FIRs, a charge sheet was filed before the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate on the 13th June 1997. The said Magistrate took cognizance for the offences punishable under Section 302/307/201/120-B/34 by his order dated 10th July 1997 against 10 members of the police party and in addition, under Section 193 of the IPC against Inspector Anil Kumar for having lodged a false report with regard to the incident. The matter was then committed for trial. The trial court recorded the evidence of 74 witnesses and also took in evidence a large number of documents, including the reports of the Forensic Science Laboratory. In the course of a very comprehensive judgment dated 10th July, 1997 the trial court recorded the conviction and sentence as under:

4. All the substantive sentences were directed to run concurrently. The matter was thereafter taken in appeal to the Delhi High Court which re-examined the entire evidence and concluded that the conviction of the appellants under Section 302/120B of the IPC could not be sustained and they were entitled to acquittal of that charge, but their conviction and sentence under Sections 302 and 307 of the IPC was liable to be maintained with the aid of Section 34 of the IPC instead of Section 120B of the IPC. It was also directed that the conviction and sentence of ACP Rathi and Inspector Anil Kumar under Sections 193, 201/34 and 203/34 of the IPC was liable to be maintained. The appeals were accordingly allowed to this very limited extent. It is in this background that the matter is before us after the grant of Special leave on the 23rd November 2009.

5. We have heard the learned counsel for the parties in extenso in arguments spread over several days. Mr. Amrendra Sharan, the learned senior counsel appearing in the lead case i.e. the appeal of ACP Satyavir Singh Rathi, has raised several arguments in the course of the hearing. He has first pointed out that the prosecution story and the findings of the trial court as well as of the High Court with regard to the manner of the incident and how it happened were erroneous and the defence version that the appellants had fired at the car in self-defence after Jagjit Singh had first fired a shot through the window injuring two policemen was, in fact, the correct one in the light of the prosecution evidence itself that a 7.65 mm bore pistol, and two fired cartridge cases had been found and recovered from the car itself as deposed to by PW13, PW15, PW35, PW41 and PW57 and as these witnesses had not been declared hostile the prosecution was bound by their statements. In this connection, the learned counsel has placed reliance on Javed Masood and Anr. v. State of Rajasthan 2010 (3) SCC 538 : (AIR 2010 SC 979 : 2010 AIR SCW 1656). It has also been pleaded that the fact that a single shot had been followed by a volley had been deposed to by PW-26 Avtar Singh who was an injured witness and also by ASI Om Bir-PW who was in a police control room Gypsy stationed closed by. It has further been pointed out that from the evidence of the aforesaid witnesses it was clear that all the window panes of the car had been broken which indicated that a shot had indeed been fired from inside the car. In addition, it has been urged by Mr. Sharan that the investigation made by the CBI was completely partisan and though a large number of independent witnesses had been examined at site, none had been cited as witnesses, and that even Dr. V.Tandon, who had extracted the bullet from the person of Constable Sunil Kumar, had not been produced as a witness. It has been highlighted that no investigation had been made as to the ownership of the 7.65 mm pistol or as to how and who had planted it in the car, as alleged. It has further been submitted that there was no common intention on the part of ACP Rathi along with his co-accused to commit the murders as he was sitting in his Gypsy far away from the place of the shoot out and there was no evidence whatsoever to suggest that he had either encouraged or directed the other police officials to shoot at the car and as such his conviction with the aid of Section 34 of the IPC, could not be sustained. He has, in this connection, cited Ram Nath Madhoprasad and Ors. v. State of M.P. AIR 1953 SC 420. As a corollary to this argument, the learned counsel has also emphasized that as the trial court had framed a charge under Section 302/120B and in the alternative under Section 302/34 of the IPC but had chosen to record a conviction under the former provision only and had not rendered any opinion on the alternative charge, it amounted to a deemed acquittal of the alternative charge and as the State had not challenged the matter in appeal, the High Court was not justified in an appeal filed by the accused in altering the conviction from one under Section 302/120B of the IPC to one under Section 302/34 of the IPC. In this connection, the learned counsel has placed primary reliance on Sangaraboina Sreenu v. State of A.P. 1997 (5) SCC 348 : (AIR 1997 SC 3233 : 1997 AIR SCW 3290) and Lokendra Singh v. State of M.P. 1999 SCC (Crl) 371 and Bimla Devi and Anr. v. State of J and K 2009 (6) SCC 629 : (AIR 2009 SC 2387 : 2009 AIR SCW 3216) and in addition on Kishan Singh v. Emperor AIR 1928 P.C. 254, The State of Andhra Pradesh v. Thadi Narayana 1962 (2) SCR 904 : (AIR 1962 SC 240) and Lakhan Mahto v. State of Bihar 1966 (3) SCR 643 : (AIR 1966 SC 1742). The learned counsel has also urged that it was settled beyond doubt that the provisions of Section 313 of the Code of Criminal Procedure had to be scrupulously observed and it was obligatory on the trial court to put all the incriminating circumstances in the prosecution story to an accused so as to enable him to effectively meet the prosecution case and if some material circumstance was not put to an accused, it could not be taken into account against him and had to be ruled out of consideration in the light of the judgments reported as Hate Singh Bhagat Singh v. State of Madhya Bharat AIR 1953 SC 468, Vikramjit Singh v. State of Punjab 2006 (12) SCC 306) : (2006 AIR SCW 6197) and Ranvir Yadav v. State of Bihar 2009 (6) SCC 595 : (AIR 2009 SC (Supp) 1439 : 2009 AIR SCW 3475). The learned counsel has also furnished a list of 15 circumstances which had not been put to the accused, particularly to ACP Rathi, at the time when his statement had been recorded. It has, in addition, been pleaded that the prosecution was barred as the cognizance in this case had been taken beyond the period of 3 months as envisaged in Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act, 1978 and on the factual aspect has referred us to various dates relevant in the matter. In this connection, the learned counsel has placed reliance on Jamuna Singh and Ors. v. Bhadai Shah AIR 1964 SC 1541 and Prof. Sumer Chand v. Union of India and Ors. 1994 (1) SCC 64 : (AIR 1993 SC 2579 : 1993 AIR SCW 3240). It has finally been submitted by Mr. Sharan that the sanction under Section 197 of the Code of Criminal Procedure too had been given without application of mind and as the entire record was not before the Lt. Governor, all relevant material had not been considered and for this additional reason also, the prosecution was not justified. In this connection the learned counsel has placed reliance on State of Karnataka v. Ameerjan 2008 (1) SCC (Crl) 130 : (AIR 2008 SC 108 : 2007 AIR SCW 6217). Mr. Uday U.Lalit, the learned senior counsel appearing for Head Constable Mahavir Singh, the appellant in Criminal Appeal No. 2476/2009, has pointed out that there were 15 persons in all in the police party and of them only 10 persons had been sent for trial and of the 5 left out, three had not used the firearms which they had been carrying and Head Constable Mahavir Singh (as per the evidence on record) had not fired into the car, his case fell in the category of those who had not been sent up for trial and, as such, he too was entitled to acquittal. It has also been pointed out that after the dead body of Jagjit Singh had been cremated, a bullet had been recovered from his ashes allegedly fired from the weapon of Head Constable Mahavir Singh but as the High Court had disbelieved the evidence of this recovery, there was no evidence against him. He has, in addition, supported Mr. Sharan's arguments on Section 313 of the Cr.P.C. and has contended that the scope and rigour of Section 313 remained unchanged despite the introduction of Section 315 of the Cr.P.C. which now made an accused a competent witness in his defence.

6. Mr. Balasubramaniam, the learned senior counsel for Inspector Anil Kumar in Criminal Appeal No. 2484 of 2009, has also supported the arguments raised by the other counsel with regard to the common intention of the appellant more particularly as he had not fired at the car though armed. He has also pleaded that even accepting the prosecution story as it was, the only inference that could be drawn was that the police party had fired at the car in self-defence and that such an inference could be drawn from prosecution story had been accepted by this Court in Mohan Singh and Anr. v. State of Punjab AIR 1963 SC 174.

7. Mr. Vineet Dhanda, the learned counsel for the appellants in Criminal Appeal Nos. 2477-2483 of 2009, has pointed out that although the appellants in these matters had admitted that they had fired into the car yet the fact that Mohd. Yaseen was a dreaded criminal with 21 criminal cases against him including 18 of murder, the police party had to be careful and they had fired back only after the first shot by Jagjit Singh. The learned counsel, however, has confined his primary argument to the fact that the appellants were acting on the orders of ACP Rathi, who was their superior officer, and as they had taken an oath at the time of induction to office to follow the orders of superior officers, they were liable for exoneration of any kind of misconduct as per Section 79 of the IPC. He has also pointed out that the appellants had, in their statements recorded under Section 313 of the Cr.P.C., unanimously stated that the orders for the firing had been given by ACP Rathi.

8. Mr. Harin Rawal, the Additional Solicitor General representing the CBI has, however, controverted the submissions made by the counsel for the appellants. It has been pointed out that the investigation had revealed that the incident had happened as the police party was under the impression that Jagjit Singh was in fact Mohd. Yaseen and in their anxiety to get at him, had decided to eliminate him pursuant to their common intention. It has been highlighted that the defence that Jagjit Singh had first resorted to firing from inside the car had been found to be unacceptable by both the courts below and a positive finding had been recorded that the 7.65 mm bore pistol had been surreptitiously placed in the car to create a defence. He has further pointed out that the prosecution story with regard to the incident had been proved by independent evidence and as the investigation was being handled by the Delhi Police at the initial stage, some attempt had apparently been made to help the appellants in order to create a cover-up story. The argument that the CBI had conducted a partisan investigation has also been controverted. It has been highlighted that all relevant evidence had been produced before the Court and nothing had been withheld and that in any case allegations of a partisan investigation could be made against an individual officer but could not be generalized against an organization as vast as the CBI and no argument had been addressed identifying any officer(s) of the CBI of any misconduct. It has also been submitted that from the evidence of the prosecution witnesses and the conduct of the appellants pre and post-facto the incident indicated that the murders had been committed pursuant to their common intention and this was also supported by the fact that a false story had been put up in defence. It has also been pointed out that deemed acquittal theory projected by

Mr. Sharan could not be applied in the present case as the judgment reported in Lokendra Singh's case cited by him had been doubted in Lakhjit Singh and Anr. v. State of Punjab 1994 Suppl. (1) SCC 173 : (1993 AIR SCW 2938) and the matter had thereafter been referred to a larger Bench which in the judgment reported in Dalbir Singh v. State of U.P. 2004 (5) SCC 334 : (AIR 2004 SC 1990 : 2004 AIR SCW 2119) had over-ruled the judgment in Lokendra Singh's case (supra) and that the judgment in Dalbir Singh's case had subsequently been followed in Dinesh Seth v. State of NCT of Delhi 2008 (14) SCC 94

: (AIR 2008 SC (Supp) 400 : 2008 AIR SCW 5639). It has been highlighted that the judgment in Bimla Devi's case (AIR 2009 SC 2387 : 2009 AIR SCW 3216) (supra) relied upon by Mr. Sharan had not taken note of the last two cited cases. It has, further been contended by Mr. Rawal that though it was a matter of great importance that all incriminating circumstances must be put to an accused, but if some material had been left out it would not ipso-facto mean that it had to be ruled out of consideration as it was for an accused to show that prejudice had been suffered by him on that account. It has been pointed out that the issue of prejudice ought to have been raised by the appellants at the very initial stage before the trial court and as this had not happened, the prosecution was fully justified in arguing that no prejudice had been caused. The learned ASG has placed reliance on Shobhit Chamar and Anr. v. State of Bihar 1998 (3) SCC 455 : (AIR 1998 SC 1693 : 1998 AIR SCW 1469) and Santosh Kumar Singh v. State thr. CBI 2010 (9) SCC 747 for this submission. The arguments raised by Mr. Sharan with regard to Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act and Section 197 of the Cr.P.C. have also been controverted. It has been submitted that Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act would apply only to offences committed under that Act and not to other offences and that in any case in order to claim the protection under Section 140, the act done by a police officer had to be "under the colour of duty" and as "murder" would not come in that category, no protection thereunder was available. In this connection, the learned ASG has placed reliance on The State of Andhra Pradesh v. N.Venugopal and Ors. AIR 1964 SC 33, State of Maharashtra v. Narhar Rao AIR 1966 SC 1783, State of Maharashtra v. Atma Ram AIR 1966 SC 1786 Bhanuprasad Hariprasad Dave and Anr. v. The State of Gujarat AIR 1968 SC 1323, and Prof. Sumer Chand's case (AIR 1993 SC 2579 : 1993 AIR SCW 3240) (supra) as well. In so far as the sanction under Section 197 of the Cr.P.C. is concerned, it has been pleaded that the Lt. Governor had all relevant material before him when the order granting sanction had been made and that the material was adequate for him to take a decision and merely because some of the evidence had been received by the CBI after the grant of sanction, would not invalidate the sanction. In this connection, the learned ASG has placed reliance on S.B.Saha and Ors. v. M.S.Kochar AIR 1979 SC 1841.

9. The learned ASG has also controverted Mr. Lalit's arguments with regard to the culpability of appellant Head Constable Mahavir Singh. It has been pointed out that the bullet recovered from the ashes of Jagjit Singh had been found to have been fired from the weapon of Head Constable Mahavir Singh but the High Court had declined to accept this part of the prosecution story as Didar Singh PW who had produced the bullet before the Haryana Police after picking it up from the funeral ashes, had not deposed in his evidence that he had handed over the bullet to the Police. It has, however, been submitted that Head Constable Mahavir Singh had indeed fired his weapon had been admitted by him and the story that he had fired in the air to disperse a huge and turbulent crowd that had collected, was not borne out by the evidence. Mr. Balasubramaniam's argument with regard to the involvement of Inspector Anil Kumar has also been challenged by the ASG by urging that though he admittedly had not fired his weapon but his case did not fall in the category of those police officials who had not been sent for trial. It has been submitted that the appellant had in fact been the prime mover in the entire story. Dealing with the arguments addressed by Mr. Vineet Dhanda, the learned ASG has highlighted that there was no evidence to suggest that it was on the orders of ACP Rathi that the firing had been resorted to, except for the self-serving statements made by the appellants under Section 313. It has, accordingly, been pointed out that this set of appellants could not claim the benefit of Section 79 of the Indian Penal Code.

10. On hearing the learned counsel for the parties, several facts appear to be admitted on record but are compounded by a tragedy of errors. These relate to the place and time of incident, the presence of the appellants duly armed with most of them having fired into the car with their service weapons, that Mohd. Yaseen was admittedly a notorious criminal and that Jagjit Singh (deceased) had been mistaken by Inspector Anil Kumar for Mohd. Yaseen, and that Pradeep Goyal owned a blue Esteem car with a Uttar Pradesh number plate, and had his office in Patparganj near the Mother Dairy Booth. It is in this background that the prosecution and the defence versions have to be examined. The prosecution story has already been narrated above and does not require any recapitulation in detail. Suffice it to say that Inspector Anil Kumar and his two associates had followed the car driven by Pradeep Goyal to the Dena Bank Branch at Connaught Place and it was after Pradeep Goyal and the others had left the Dena Bank premises and were near the Barakhamba Road crossing that the two police parties, one headed by Inspector Anil Kumar, and other by ACP Rathi, had joined forces and surrounded the car as it stopped at a red light, and had fired into it killing two persons and injuring one. It is at this stage that the prosecution and the defence deviate as it is the case of the defence that after the car had been surrounded, Inspector Anil Kumar had knocked at the driver's window asking the occupants to come out but instead of doing so Jagjit Singh had fired two shots at the police which had led to a fusillade in self defence. It is true that Avtar Singh PW, who was an injured witness and ASI Ombir Singh, PW-13 did say that the multiple firing had been preceded by one solitary shot which apparently is in consonance with the defence version. Likewise, PW-13 ASI Ombir Singh, PW15 Inspector Ram Mehar, PW-35 Inspector Rishi Dev, PW41 Constable Samrat Lal, and PW-57 S.I. Sunil Kumar testified that a 7.65 mm bore pistol along with two fired cartridges and 7 live cartridges in the magazine and one misfired cartridge in the breech, had been recovered from the car. This story too appears to support the case of the defence. It is equally true that it is not always necessary for the accused to plead self- defence and if the prosecution story itself spells it out, it would be open to the court to examine this matter as well, as held by this Court in Mohan Singh's case (AIR 1963 SC 174) (Supra) and in James Martin vs. State of Kerala 2004 (2) SCC 203. Likewise, it is now well settled in the light of the judgment in Javed Masood's case (AIR 2010 SC 979 : 2010 AIR SCW 1656) (supra) that if a prosecution witness is not declared hostile by the prosecution, the evidence of such a witness has to be accepted by the prosecution. It must also be observed that though the prosecution is bound to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt, the obligation on an accused under Section 105 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 is to prove it by a preponderance of probabilities. We have, accordingly, examined the evidence under the above broad principles.

11. As already indicated above, PW's Avtar Singh and Ombir Singh did state that a single shot had been followed by multiple shots thereafter. Avtar Singh, however, apparently did not receive a bullet injury as the simple abrasion on him had been apparently caused by a flying splinter from the tarmac but we have extremely independent evidence on this score as well. PW-1 Geeta Ram Sharma, the Chief Photographer of the Statesman Newspaper, which has its office adjacent to the red light on Barakhamba Road, deposed that on the 31st March 1997 at about 2 - 2.30 p.m. while he was sitting in his room along with his colleagues PWs Sayeed Ahmed and Shah Nawaz, they had heard the sound of firing from the Barakhamba Road side and that he along with the other PWs had come out to the crossing along with their camera equipment and had seen a blue Esteem car standing there with two bodies lying alongside and one injured person sitting on the road with a large number of police men, including some in mufti, present. He stated that on his directions Shah Nawaz and Sayeed Ahmed had taken a large number of photographs of the site and 14 of them were also produced as Exs. P-1 to P-14. He further stated that Vijay Thakur, one of the Reporters of the Statesman had also been present. Sayeed Ahmed and Shah Nawaz aforementioned appeared as PW-2 and PW-67 and supported the story given by PW-1 Geeta Ram Sharma. He also proved the photograph marked Ex. 'X' which shows that the driver's window was intact. We have perused the photograph ourselves and find that the driver's window was definitely intact. The photograph is in black and white and has been taken through the driver's window and the man wearing white with a dark tie seen in the photograph has two shades of white, the portion through the window having a dull hue and the portion above, far brighter. It has come in the evidence of PW-Tarunpreet that the car A.C. was on when the firing took place and the windows had been drawn up. We can also take notice that in this background, the windows and windshield would be of tinted glass. Likewise, we are also of the opinion that had the shots been fired through the driver's window or the windshield some powder residues would have been left around the bullet holes as the shots would have been fired from almost a touching distance. PW-37 Roop Singh from the Central Forensic Science Laboratory, who had examined the car very minutely detected no such residue and also testified that the appreciable powder distance of a 7.65 mm pistol could be one to two feet but would depend on the sitting posture of the person firing. He also stated that in all at least 29 bullet holes had been detected on the car of 9 mm, 7.62 mm and .380 calibre weapons and that most of the seven exit holes in the car could have been caused by bullets fired from the rear and left side into the car and exiting thereafter, although the possibility of an exit hole being caused by a bullet fired from inside the car could also not be ruled out. He further pointed out that as the bullet fired at Constable Subhash Chand remained embedded in his body and had not been taken out for medical reasons, it was not possible to give an opinion whether it was a bullet of 7.65 mm calibre. The defence story that Constables Sunil and Subhash had suffered injuries on account of the firing of two shots from inside the car, is further belied by the medical evidence. PW-16-Dr. Harmeet Kapur carried out the medico legal examination of Constable Subhash Chand Ex.PW16/B. He found three bullet injuries on his person, which indicated blackening. These injuries could not have been caused by firing from inside the car as the blackening from a pistol would be, at the most, from a foot or two. Likewise, PW-17 Dr. Neeraj Saxena who had examined Constable Subhash Chand, also found three separate gun shot injuries on his person. He also produced in evidence his treatment record Ex.PW17/B. This doctor was not even cross-examined by the prosecution. It needs to be emphasized that all the weapons used in the incident fired single projectiles (i.e. bullets), whereas the distance between the gun shot injuries on the two injured policemen show at least 3 different wounds of entry on each of them. On the contrary, it appears that the injuries suffered by them were caused by the firing amongst the policemen as they had surrounded and fired into the car indiscriminately and without caution ignoring that they could be a danger to themselves on cross-fire on uncontrolled firing. It has, in fact, been pointed out by Mr. Sharan that ACP Rathi had written to his superiors pointing to the ineptitude of his team of officers but he had been told that no other staff was available. The present case illustrates and proves the adage that a weapon in the hands of an ill- trained individual is often more of a danger to himself than a means of defence. In this background, the evidence of PW's Geeta Ram Sharma, Sayeed Ahmad and Shah Nawaz, PW-50 Constable K.K.Rajan and PW-51 Constable Rajinderan Pilley becomes extremely relevant. PW-13 ASI Ombir Singh who was the Officer In-Charge of the PCR Gypsy parked near the Fire Station Building adjoining Barakhamba Road, had undoubtedly supported the defence version that a single shot had been followed by a volley. Constable Rajan and Constable Pilley, who were present along with ASI Ombir Singh, categorically stated that they had not heard any single fire and it was only the continuous firing that had brought them rushing to the site and having reached there, they had taken the three victims to the R.M.L. Hospital. Their story is corroborated by the evidence of the three newspaper employees. Tarunpreet Singh PW was also categoric that no shot had been fired from inside the car. The story therefore that Jagjit Singh had fired at the police party when accosted is, therefore, on the face of it, unacceptable. In this overall scenario even if it is assumed that the driver's window had been found broken as contended by the defence, it would still have no effect on the prosecution story.

12. We now come to the question as to the recovery of the 7.65 mm bore pistol allegedly used by Jagjit Singh as this fact is intimately connected with the defence version. First and foremost, it appears that even prior to the arrival of PW-42 SHO Niranjan Singh, the Car had already been searched and the site violated as a cell phone belonging to one of the victims had been picked up by appellant ASI Ashok Rana and handed over to the SHO. The fact that undue interest had been taken by the offending police officials is also clear from Ex. P/10 a photograph showing the ASI looking into the car. More significantly, however, PW-12 Sant Lal, the official Photographer of the Delhi Police, took two photographs Ex. PW12/28 and PW12/29 of the driver's seat from very close range but they show no pistol or empty shells. Even more significantly ACP Rathi submitted a detailed written report Ex.D.16/8 on the 1st of April, 1997 to his superior officer in which he talks about the firing by Jagjit Singh but makes no mention as to the recovery of a pistol from the car although as per the defence story the weapon had been picked up by the SHO soon after the incident. Likewise, in the report Ex. PW-42/C lodged by Inspector Anil Kumar appellant with the Connaught Place Police immediately after the incident, there is no reference whatsoever to the presence of a 7.65 mm pistol in the car. It is also relevant that the pistol had been sent to the Central Forensic Science Laboratory but PW-46 S.K.Chadha who examined the weapon, could find no identifiable finger prints thereon.

13. The cumulative effect of the above evidence reveals the starkly patent fact that the defence story projected was a palpably false one and the police officials involved having realized almost immediately after the incident (perhaps on questioning Tarunpreet Singh-PW) that they had made a horrific mistake, immediately set about creating a false defence. The trial court and the High Court have accordingly opined on the basis of the overall assessment that the defence version was a concoction and that the prosecution story that it was the unprovoked firing by the appellants which had led to the death of Jagjit Singh and Pradeep Goyal and grievous gun shot injuries to Tarunpreet Singh, had been proved on record.

14. This finding also completely dislodges Mr. Subramaniam's argument that in case the defence, as laid, was not entirely acceptable, the accused were nevertheless entitled to claim the benefit of Exception 3 to Section 300 of the Indian Penal Code. This Exception pre-supposes that a public servant who causes death, must do so in good faith and in due discharge of his duty as a public servant and without ill-will towards the person whose death is caused. In the light of the fact that the positive case set up the defence has been rejected by the trial court, the High Court as well as by us, the question of any good faith does not arise. On the contrary, we are of the opinion that the appellants had fired without provocation at the Esteem Car killing two innocent persons and injuring one. As already mentioned above, the obligation to prove an exception is on the preponderance of probabilities but it nevertheless lies on the defence. Even on this touchstone the defence cannot succeed. It is true that the High Court has acquitted the appellants of planting the

7.65 mm bore pistol in the car. However, this acquittal has been rendered only on the ground that it was not possible to pinpoint the culprit who had done so. This can, by no stretch of imagination, be taken to mean that the story that the pistol had been planted in the car has been disbelieved by the High Court. The reliance of the defence on Mohan Singh's case and James Martin's Case (AIR 1963 SC 174) (supra) is, therefore, irrelevant on the facts of this case. It is true that the Prosecution is bound by the evidence of its witnesses as held in Javed Masood's case. In the present matter, however, we see that the recovery of the 7.65 mm weapon appears to be an admitted fact, but with the rider that it had been planted to help the defence.

15. The argument that the CBI had conducted a partisan and motivated investigation, is based largely on three premises; firstly, that all the independent witnesses whose statements had been recorded under Section 161 of the Cr.P.C. at the site, had not been brought in evidence, secondly, that Constables Sunil Kumar and Subhash Chand had suffered gun shot injuries but the CBI had tried to create evidence that these injuries were as a consequence of firing by their co-appellants in that an effort had been made to show that the bullet recovered from the ashes of Jagjit Singh after his cremation had been fired from the weapon carried by Head Constable Mahavir Singh, thirdly, that Dr. V. Tandon who had extracted the bullet from the hand of Constable Sunil Kumar, had not been even cited as a witness.

16. As against this, the learned ASG has pointed out that it was not necessary to produce every person whose statement had been recorded under Section 161 and as the incident was admitted by the defence, though a counter version had been pleaded, the Court was called upon to decide which of the two versions was correct, and in this background all witnesses who were material had been examined. It has further been pointed out that the bullet which had allegedly been recovered from the ashes of Jagjit Singh, had been handed over to Sub- Inspector Ram Dutt of the Haryana Police who in turn had handed it over to the investigating officer of the CBI and as such, the CBI had nothing to do with that recovery.

17. It is true that all witnesses have not been examined but we find that in the circumstances this was not necessary. It will also be seen that as per the prosecution story, appellants Sunil Kumar and Subhash Chand, had been caused injuries by shots fired from the weapons of Head Constable Tej Pal Singh and Constable Kothari Ram appellants. As per the report of the CFSL Ex.P/37F, the bullet recovered from the person of Constable Sunil Kumar had been fired from the .380 revolver of Head Constable Tej Pal Singh and as per the evidence of PW-37 Roop Singh, the possibility that the metallic bullet which was embedded on the person of Constable Subhash Chand appellant could be the steel core portion of a shattered 7.62 mm bullet of the weapon of Constable Kothari Ram. Much argument has, however, been made by the learned defence counsel on the evidence of PW-37 Roop Singh wherein some doubt has been expressed as to the identity of the bullet allegedly recovered from the hand of Constable Sunil Kumar. He stated in his examination-in-chief that he had received parcel No.12 along with a covering letter dated 7th April, 1997 referring to the bullet recovered from Sunil Kumar's hand. He further stated that he had opened the parcel and had found one .380 calibre bullet and no other object therein and that he had re-sealed the bullet in the parcel. It appears from the evidence of PW-37 that parcel No.12 was again opened in Court and at that stage it was found to contain not only a .380 calibre bullet but also one fired 7.65 mm bullet. The witness, however, stated that when the parcel had been received by him in the Ballistics Department from the Biology Department of the Laboratory, the 7.65 mm bullet had not been in it. A pointed question was thereafter put to him as to how he could explain the presence of the 7.65 mm bullet in parcel No.12. In answer to this question, he stated as under:

"When this parcel was opened on the earlier hearing and at that time after .380 bullet was exhibited the other bullet i.e. 7.65 mm (Ex.PW37/24) was found lying on the table, and so in these circumstances the said 7.65 mm bullet was exhibited."
18. Taken aback by this unforeseen development, the prosecution filed an application dated 4th December, 1999 for clarification.
A reply thereto was filed by the defence on the 4th of January, 2000. On re-examination, the witness suggested that the 7.65 mm bullet had been mixed up with the .380 bullet by some Advocate when the parcel had been opened in Court on an earlier date during court proceedings. In the light of the fact that the trial court and the High Court have already held (and also held by us) that no shot had been fired from inside the car from the 7.65 mm pistol, the possibility of a 7.65 mm bullet being in the parcel becomes suspect and it appears that some mischief was being played out. We must also notice that we are dealing with appellants who are all police officials and the trial court has clearly hinted that there appeared to be some connivance between the appellants and the investigation. In any case, the creation of some confusion vis- a-vis the bullets, is a matter which would undoubtedly help the defence and a presumption can thus be raised that this had been stage managed by the defence. This aspect too cannot be ignored. The argument raised by the learned counsel for the appellants, therefore, that the application filed for clarification had been withdrawn as the prosecution was shying away from the truth is not sustainable as this had happened in the light of the clarification given by PW-37 Roop Singh. Nothing ominous or sinister can be read into this.
19. The learned counsel has also challenged the recovery of the bullet from the ashes of Jagjit Singh. This submission is based on the evidence of PW-8 Didar Singh, the elder brother of Jagjit Singh and PW-49 ASI Ram Dutt to whom the bullet had been handed over by Didar Singh and the statements of Dr. G.K.Sharma and PW-24 Yashoda Rani who had X-rayed the dead body and found no image of a bullet therein. It has accordingly been argued that this too was the brainchild of the CBI and a crude attempt to inculpate Constable Mahavir Singh. The trial court had accepted the prosecution story that this spent bullet had been recovered from the ashes of Jagjit Singh. This part of the prosecution story has, however, been rejected by the High Court by observing that the trial court had ignored the evidence on this score as Didar Singh PW-8 had nowhere stated that he had picked up of a bullet from the ashes and handed it over to Sub-Inspector Ram Dutt and more particularly as the two doctors who had X-rayed the dead body had found no trace of a bullet. We endorse this finding of the High Court in the light of the uncertain evidence on this score but to allege that the CBI officials had a hand in planting the bullet, is unwarranted. It will be seen from the evidence of PW-49 Ram Dutt that Jagjit Singh had been cremated on the 2nd of April, 1999 and the bullet had been recovered the next day when the ashes were being collected and had been handed over to him the same day and that it had thereafter been sealed and deposited in the Malkhana. The CBI, at this stage, had nothing to do with the recovery of the bullet as PW-72 Inspector Sumit Kumar of the CBI had taken it into possession duly sealed vide Memo Ex. PW49/A dated 11th April, 1999. It is also relevant that the weapon bearing Butt No.518 carried by Head Constable Mahavir Singh had been seized by the Delhi Police on the 1st April, 1997 itself and the CBI did not have access to it which could have enabled it to create any false evidence on this score. We must also recall that the police party comprised 15 personnel. Only 10 who played an active role had been prosecuted. This background points to a fair investigation.

We are, therefore, of the opinion that no fault whatsoever can be found in the investigation made by the CBI.

20. The primary argument, however, of the appellants that even assuming the prosecution story to be the correct, there was no common intention on the part of the appellants to commit murder, must now be examined. Highlighting the role attributed to the two appellants ACP Rathi and Inspector Anil Kumar, it has been submitted that ACP Rathi had not fired at the car and was in fact sitting 20 meters away from the firing site. Mr. Lalit, appearing for Inspector Anil Kumar, has also supported this argument and submitted that Inspector Anil Kumar too had not fired at the car and the only role attributed to him was a knock at Jagjit Singh's window calling upon him to step out but instead of doing so he had fired back leading to a nasty shoot out. It has, accordingly, been submitted by the learned counsel that the finding of the High Court that all the appellants were guilty under Section 302/34 etc. was wrong.

21. The learned ASG has, however, submitted that the question as to whether Section 34 of the IPC would apply would depend upon the facts of the case and for this reason, the sequence of events preceding the incident, the actual incident itself, and post facto the incident, would have to be taken into account.

22. We have considered the arguments of the learned counsel very carefully. It bears reiteration that the trial court had convicted all the appellants on the primary charge under Section 302 read with section 120-B of the IPC, but the High Court has acquitted them under that provision and convicted them under Section 302/34 etc. of the IPC instead. This aspect would have to be examined in the background of the defence story that had been projected and as the entire police operation had been conducted in a secret manner as no outsider had any access to what is going on in the matter relating to Mohd. Yaseen. Admittedly, the target was Mohd. Yaseen, concededly a notorious criminal with a bounty on his head, as he had been involved in a large number of very serious criminal matters. The incident happened on account of a mistake as to the identity of Jagjit Singh who could pass off as a Muslim and it is nobody's case that the police party had intended to eliminate Jagjit Singh and his friends. The courts below have been very clear on this score and have observed that keeping in mind the background in which the incident happened, that it was not the outcome of an act in self defence but was pursuant to the common intention to kill Mohd. Yaseen. The possibility of a hefty cash reward and accelerated promotion acted as a catalyst and spurred the police party to rash and hasty action. As to the role of ACP Rathi and Inspector Anil Kumar, the High Court has found that it was Rathi who was the leader of the police party in his capacity as the ACP and therefore, it was not necessary for him to be in the forefront of the attack on the Esteem car and Inspector Anil Kumar who had admittedly knocked at the window could be treated likewise as being the next officer in the hierarchy. We have seen the site plan and notice that ACP Rathi was sitting in his Gypsy about 15 meters away from the car when the incident happened. It has come in evidence that when Inspector Anil Kumar had conveyed the fact of Jagjit Singh's and Tarunpreet Singh's presence at the Mother Dairy Booth at Patparganj, the ACP had got together a police party of heavily armed officers, briefed them, and they had thereafter moved on to Connaught Place. It has been found as a matter of fact that when Inspector Anil Kumar had followed the Car to the Dena Bank, Jagjit Singh had been left behind in the car alone for quite some time but Inspector Anil Kumar and his two associates had made absolutely no attempt to apprehend him at that stage or to counter check his identify as the Inspector had Mohd. Yaseen's photograph with him. Even more significantly the Inspector made no attempt to identity Pradeep Goyal or Tarunpreet Singh whatsoever, although admittedly he was in close wireless contact with ACP Rathi. This is the pre-incident conduct which is relevant. The facts as brought reveal a startling state of affairs during the incident. It is the case of the defence that the car had been surrounded to immobilize the inmates and to prevent them from escaping and that it was with this intention that Inspector Anil Kumar had knocked on the driver's window asking the inmates to get out but he had been answered by firing from inside the car. This plea cannot be accepted for the reason that the defence has already been rejected by us. Moreover PW-37 testified that there were no bullet marks on the tyres and they remained intact even after the incident, despite 34 shots being fired at the car, and 29 bullet holes, most of them of entry, thereon. On the other hand, the appellants presupposed that one of the inmates was Mohd. Yaseen, the wanted criminal and that the firing was so insensitive and indiscriminate that some of the shots had hit Constables Subhash Chand and Sunil Kumar. The post-facto conduct of the appellants is again relevant.

Inspector Anil Kumar gave a report on the 1st April 1997 immediately after the incident, which was followed by a report by ACP Rathi the next day giving the counter version. This has been found by us to be completely untenable. The High Court was, therefore, justified in holding that in the light of the above facts, it was not necessary to assign a specific role to each individual appellant as the firing at the car was undoubtedly with a clear intent to annihilate those in it and was resorted to in furtherance of the common intention of all the appellants. In Abdul Sayeed v. State of M.P. 2010 (10) SCC 259 : (2010 AIR SCW 5701), it has been held as under :

"49. Section 34 IPC carves out an exception from general law that a person is responsible for his own act, as it provides that a person can also be held vicariously responsible for the act of others if he has the "common intention" to commit the offence. The phrase "common intention" implies a prearranged plan and acting in concert pursuant to the plan. Thus, the common intention must be there prior to the commission of the offence in point of time. The common intention to bring about a particular result may also well develop on the spot as between a number of persons, with reference to the facts of the case and circumstances existing thereto. The common intention under Section 34 IPC is to be understood in a different sense from the "same intention" or "similar intention" or "common object". The persons having similar intention which is not the result of the prearranged plan cannot be held guilty of the criminal act with the aid of Section 34 IPC. (See Mohan Singh v. State of Punjab : (AIR 1963 SC 174).)

50. The establishment of an overt act is not a requirement of law to allow Section 34 to operate inasmuch this section gets attracted when a criminal act is done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all. What has, therefore, to be established by the prosecution is that all the persons concerned had shared a common intention. (Vide Krishnan v. State of Kerala (AIR 1997 SC 383 : 1996 AIR SCW 3754) and Harbans Kaur v. State of Haryana" (AIR 2005 SC 2989 : 2005 AIR SCW 274).)

23. In conclusion, we must hold that the appellants were liable to conviction under Sections 302/34 etc. of the IPC.

24. We now come to Mr. Sharan's connected argument with regard to the deemed acquittal theory of the appellants for the offence under Sections 302, 307 read with Section 34 of the IPC by the trial court. At this stage, we may recall that the trial court had framed a charge under Section 302/307 read with Section 120-B of the IPC and an alternative charge under Section 302/307 read with Section 34 of the IPC but without opining on the alternative charge, had convicted the appellants for the offence under Section 302/307 read with Section 120- B of the IPC. It has accordingly been contended that as the appellants had been deemed to have been acquitted of the charge of having the common intention of committing the murders and there was no appeal by the State against the deemed acquittal against under that charge, it was not open to the High Court to alter or modify the conviction. The learned ASG has, however, pointed out that a contrary view had been expressed earlier in Lakhjit Singh's case (1993 AIR SCW 2938) (supra) and as a consequence of this apparent discordance, the matter had been referred to a Bench of three Judges in Dalbir Singh's case (AIR 2004 SC 1990 : 2004 AIR SCW 2119) (supra) which had overruled the judgment in Sangaraboina Sreenu's case (AIR 1997 SC 3233 : 1997 AIR SCW 3290) (supra) and by implication overruled Lokendra Singh's case (supra) as well. He has further highlighted that the judgment in Dalbir Singh's case (supra) had been followed in Dinesh Seth's case (AIR 2008 SC (Supp) 400 : 2008 AIR SCW 5639) (supra) but both these cases had not even been alluded to in Bimla Devi's case (AIR 2009 SC 2387 : 2009 AIR SCW 3216) (supra). He has accordingly pointed out that the very basis of Mr. Sharan's argument on the theory of deemed acquittal was lacking.

25. We have considered the arguments of the learned counsel very carefully. We must, at the outset, emphasize that the judgments referred to above and cited by Mr. Sharan are largely on the basis that a charge for the offence of which the appellants had ultimately been acquitted, had not been framed and therefore, it was not possible to convict an accused in the absence of a charge. For example, in Sangaraboina Sreenu's case (supra) a judgment rendered in two paragraphs, this Court held that only a charge under Section 302 had been framed against the accused, therefore, he could not be convicted under Section 306 of the IPC although the Court noticed that the offence under Section 306 was a comparatively minor offence, within the meaning of Section 220 of the Cr.P.C. It was also noticed that the basic constituent of an offence under Section 302 was homicide whereas the offence under Section 306 was suicidal death and abetment thereof. This judgment was followed in Lokendra Singh's case (supra) wherein a similar situation existed. It appears, however, that both these judgments had over looked the judgment in Lakhjit Singh's case (supra) as in this case a Division Bench of this Court had held that a conviction under Section 306 of the IPC could be recorded though a charge under Section 302 had been framed. In arriving at this conclusion, the Bench observed that the accused were on notice as to the allegations which would attract Section 306 of the IPC and as this section was a comparatively minor offence, conviction thereunder could be recorded. On account of this apparent discordance of opinion over the issue involved, the matter was referred to a Bench of three Judges in Dalbir Singh's case (AIR 2004 SC 1990 : 2004 AIR SCW 2119) (supra). By this judgment, the opinion rendered in Sangarabonia Sreenu's case (supra) was overruled, as not being correctly decided. Ipso facto, we must assume that the decision in Lokender Singh's case (supra) must also be read as not correctly decided. The judgment in Dalbir Singh's (supra) has subsequently been followed in Dinesh Seth's case (supra). We must, therefore, record that the judgment rendered in Bimla Devi's case (supra) which does not take into account the last two cited cases, must be held to be per incuriam. Kishan Singh's and Lakhan Mahto's cases (AIR 1928 PC 254 and AIR 1966 SC 1742) (supra) were cases where no charge had been framed for the offences under which the accused could be convicted whereas Thadi Narayana's case (AIR 1962 SC 240) was on its own peculiar facts.

26. We find the situation herein to be quite different. We must notice that the charges had indeed been framed in the alternative and for cognate offences having similar ingredients as to the main allegation of murder. Section 386 of the Cr.P.C. refers to the power of the appellate court and the provision insofar relevant for our purpose is sub-clause (b) (ii) which empowers the appellate court to alter the finding while maintaining the sentence. It is significant that Section 120-B of the IPC is an offence and positive evidence on this score has to be produced for a successful prosecution whereas Section 34 does not constitute an offence and is only a rule of evidence and inferences on the evidence can be drawn, as held by this Court in Lachhman Singh and Ors. v. The State AIR 1952 SC 167. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the question of deemed acquittal in such a case where the substantive charge remains the same and a charge under Section 302/120B and an alternative charge under section 302/34 of the IPC had been framed, there was nothing remiss in the High Court in modifying the conviction to one under Section 302/307/34 of the IPC. It is also self evident that the accused were aware of all the circumstances against them. We must, therefore, reject Mr. Sharan's argument with regard to the deemed acquittal in the circumstances of the case.

27. The learned counsel for the appellants have also argued on the failure of the court in putting all relevant questions to them when their statements under Section 313 of the Cr.P.C. had been recorded. Mr. Sharan has also given us a list of 15 questions which ought to have been put to the ACP as they represented the crux of the prosecution story. It has been submitted that on account of this neglect on the part of the court the appellants had suffered deep prejudice in formulating their defence. Reliance has been placed on Hate Singh Bhagat Singh (AIR 1953 SC 648), Vikramjit Singh (2006 AIR SCW 6197) and Ranvir Yadav's cases (AIR 2009 SC (Supp) 1439 : 2009 AIR SCW 3475) (supra). It has however been pointed out by the learned ASG that the 15 questions referred to were largely inferences drawn by the courts and relatable to the evidence on record, and the inferences were not required to be put to an accused. He has further submitted even assuming that there had been some omission that by itself would not a fortiori result in the exclusion of evidence from consideration but it had to be shown further by the defence that prejudice had been suffered by the accused on that account inasmuch that they could claim that they did not have notice of the allegations against them. In this connection, the learned ASG has placed reliance on Shivaji Sahebrao Bobde v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 2622 and Santosh Kumar Singh and Shobit Chamar's cases (AIR 1998 SC 1693 : 1998 AIR SCW 1469) (supra).

28. Undoubtedly, the importance of a statement under Section 313 of the Cr.P.C. insofar as the accused is concerned, can hardly be minimized. This statutory provision is based on the rules of natural justice for an accused must be made aware of the circumstances being put against him so that he can give a proper explanation and to meet that case. In Hate Singh's case (AIR 1953 SC 648) (supra) it was observed that:

"the statements of an accused person recorded under Ss.208,209 and 342 are among the most important matters to be considered at a trial. It has to be remembered that in this country an accused person is not allowed to enter the box and speak on oath in his own defence. This may operate for the protection of the accused in some cases but experience elsewhere has shown that it can also be a powerful and impressive weapon of defence in the hands of an innocent man. The statements of the accused recorded by the Committing Magistrate and the Sessions Judge are intended in India to take the place of what in England and in America he would be free to state in his own way in the witness-box. They have to be received in evidence and treated as evidence and be duly considered at the trial.

This means that they must be treated like any other piece of evidence coming from the mouth of a witness and matters in favour of the accused must be viewed with as much deference and given as much weight as matters which tell against him. Nay more. Because of the presumption of innocence in his favour even when he is not in a position to prove the truth of his story, his version should be accepted if it is reasonable and accords with probabilities unless the prosecution can prove beyond reasonable doubt that it is false. We feel that this fundamental approach has been ignored in this case."

29. It must be highlighted that the judgment in this case was rendered in the background that in the absence of any provision in law to enable an accused to give his part of the story in court, the statement under Section 342 (now 313) was of the utmost importance. The aforesaid observations have now been somewhat whittled down in the light of the fact that Section 315 of the Cr.P.C. now makes an accused a competent witness in his defence. In Vikramjit Singh's case (2006 AIR SCW 6197) (supra), this Court again dwelt on the importance of the 313 statement but we see from the judgment that it was primarily based on an overall appreciation of the evidence and the acquittal was not confined only to the fact that the statement of the accused had been defectively recorded. In Ranvir Yadav's case (AIR 2009 SC (Supp) 1439 : 2009 AIR SCW 3475) (supra) this Court has undoubtedly observed that even after the incorporation of Section 315 in the Cr.P.C., the position remains the same, (in so far as the statements under Section 313 are concerned) but we find that the judgment was one of acquittal by the Trial Court and a reversal by the High Court and this was a factor which had weighed with this Court while rendering its judgment. In any case the latest position in law appears to be that prejudice must be shown by an accused before it can be held that he was entitled to acquittal over a defective and perfunctory statement under Section 313. In Shivaji's case (AIR 1973 SC 2622) (supra), a judgment rendered by three Hon'ble Judges, it has been observed in paragraph 16 as under :

"It is trite law, nevertheless fundamental, that the prisoner's attention should be drawn to every inculpatory material so as to enable him to explain it. This is the basic fairness of a criminal trial and failures in this area may gravely imperil the validity of the trial itself, if consequential miscarriage of justice has flowed. However, where such an omission has occurred it does not ipso facto vitiate the proceedings and prejudice occasioned by such defect must be established by the accused. In the event of an evidentiary material not being put to the accused, the court must ordinarily eschew such material from consideration. It is also open to the appellate court to call upon the counsel for the accused to show what explanation the accused has as regards the circumstances established against him but not put to him and if the accused is unable to offer the appellate court any plausible or reasonable explanation of such circumstances, the court may assume that no acceptable answer exists and that even if the accused had been questioned at the proper time in the trial court he would not have been able to furnish any good ground to get out of the circumstances on which the trial court had relied for its conviction. In such a case, the court proceeds on the footing that though a grave irregularity has occurred as regards compliance with Section 342, Cr.P.C., the omission has not been shown to have caused prejudice to the accused."

30. The judgment in Santosh Kumar Singh's case (supra) is to the same effect and is based on a large number of judgments of this court.

31. It is clear from the record herein that the appellants, all police officers, had been represented by a battery of extremely competent counsel and in the course of the evidence, the entire prosecution story with regard to the circumstances including those of conspiracy and common intention had been brought out and the witnesses had been subjected to gruelling and detailed cross-examinations. It also bears reiteration that the incident has been admitted, although the defence has sought to say that it happened in different circumstances. It is also signally important that all the accused had filed their detailed written statements in the matter. All these facts become even more significant in the background that no objection had been raised with regard to the defective 313 statements in the trial court. In Shobhit Chamar's case (AIR 1998 SC 1693 : 1998 AIR SCW 1469) (supra) this Court observed:

"We have perused all these reported decisions relied upon by the learned advocates for the parties and we see no hesitation in concluding that the challenge to the conviction based on non-compliance of Section 313 Cr.P.C. first time in this appeal cannot be entertained unless the appellants demonstrate that the prejudice has been caused to them. In the present case, as indicated earlier, the prosecution strongly relied upon the ocular evidence of the eye witnesses and relevant questions with reference to this evidence were put to the appellants. If the evidence of these witnesses is found acceptable, the conviction can be sustained unless it is shown by the appellants that a prejudice has been caused to them. No such prejudice was demonstrated before us and, therefore, we are unable to accept the contention raised on behalf of the appellants."

These observations proceed on the principle that if an objection as to the 313 statement is taken at the earliest stage, the court can make good the defect and record an additional statement as that would be in the interest of all but if the matter is allowed to linger on and the objections are taken belatedly it would be a difficult situation for the prosecution as well as the accused. In the case before us, as already indicated, the objection as to the defective 313 statements had not been raised in the trial court. We must assume therefore that no prejudice had been felt by the appellants even assuming that some incriminating circumstances in the prosecution story had been left out. We also accept that most of the 15 questions that have been put before us by Mr. Sharan, are inferences drawn by the trial court on the evidence. The challenge on this aspect made by the learned counsel for the appellants, is also repelled.

32. Mr. Sharan has also referred us to Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act, 1978 to contend that as the cognizance in the present matter had been taken more than three months from the date of the incident, the prosecution itself was barred. Elaborating on this aspect, the learned counsel has submitted that the incident had happened on the 31st March 1997 and an incomplete charge-sheet had been filed within three months i.e. on the 13th June 1997 but cognizance in the matter had admittedly been taken beyond three months i.e. on the 10th July 1997. The learned counsel has, in support of this plea, relied on the judgment in Jamuna Singh (AIR 1964 SC 1541) and Prof. Sumer Chand's case (AIR 1993 SC 2579 : 1993 AIR SCW 3240) (supra) to argue that the provisions of Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act had to be strictly applied, more particularly where the act complained of had been done in the discharge of official duty. The learned ASG has, however, submitted that the provisions of Section 140 of Delhi Police Act would be applicable only to offences referred to in the Act itself and found largely in Section 80 onwards and not to cases where the offence was linked to any other penal provision and that in any case the police official involved had to show that the action taken by him had been taken under colour of duty. The learned counsel has in this connection relied on N. Venugopal (AIR 1964 SC 33), Narhar Rao (AIR 1966 SC 1783), Atma Ram (AIR 1966 SC 1786), Bhanuprasad Hariprasad Dave (AIR 1968 SC 1323) and on Professor Sumer Chand's cases (supra).

33. Before we examine the merits of this submission, we need to see what the High Court has held on this aspect. The High Court has observed that an incomplete charge-sheet had been filed within time inasmuch that the statements of the witnesses recorded under Section 161 of the Cr.P.C. had not been appended therewith and we quote :

"and the prosecuting agency had, therefore, taken adequate care in filing the charge-sheet well within time and could not, thus, have anticipated that the Court of the learned Chief Metropolitan Magistrate would have its own problems in taking immediate cognizance of the offences on the charge-sheet within three months from the date of commission of the crimes, it could not have applied for a sanction for prosecution under Section 140 of the Act as it was not at all required in that situation. If the Court of learned Chief Metropolitan Magistrate had difficulty in taking cognizance of the offences for absence of the copies of statements under Section 161 Cr.P.C., it could have very well posted the case for a shorter date before expiry of three months and could have required the CBI to make available the copies of required material for taking cognizance of the offences. We are unable to find from the proceedings recorded by the learned Chief Metropolitan Magistrate the reason as to why instead of requiring the CBI to produce the copies of required material within a day or two, such a longer date was fixed for according consideration for taking cognizance of the offences. Whatever be the reason for delay in taking cognizance of the offences in the facts and circumstances of the case, we are unable to accept the plea that any sanction under Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act was required to sustain the prosecution against the appellants, particularly when the charge-sheet had been filed in the Court well before the expiry of three months' period."

34. We are, however, not called upon to go into the correctness or otherwise of the observations of the High Court, as we intend giving our own opinion on this score.

Sub-section (1) of Section 140 is reproduced below:

"Bar to suits and prosecutions.- (1) In any case of alleged offence by a police officer or other person, or of a wrong alleged to have been done by such police officer or other person, by any act done under colour of duty or authority or in excess of any such duty or authority, or wherein it shall appear to the court that the offence or wrong if committed or done was of the character aforesaid, the prosecution or suit shall not be entertained and if entertained shall be dismissed if it is instituted, more than three months after the date of the act complained of.

Provided that any such prosecution against a police officer or other person may be entertained by the court, if instituted with the previous sanction of the Administrator, within one year from the date of the offence.

35. This Section postulates that in order to take the shelter of the period of three months referred to therein the act done, or the wrong alleged to have been done by the police officer should be done under the colour of duty or authority or in excess of such duty or authority or was of the character aforesaid, and in no other case. It must, therefore, be seen as to whether the act of the appellants could be said to be under the colour of duty and therefore, covered by Section 140 ibidem.

36. At the very outset, it must be made clear from the judgment of this Court in Jamuna Singh's case (AIR 1964 SC 1541) (supra) that the date of cognizance taken by a Magistrate would be the date for the institution of the criminal proceedings in a matter. The facts given above show that the cognizance had been taken by the Magistrate beyond three months from the date of incident. The larger question, however, still arises as to whether the shelter of Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act could be claimed, in the facts of this case. We must, at the outset, reject the learned ASG's argument that Section 140 would be available to police officials only with respect to offences under the Delhi Police Act and not to other penal provisions, in the light of the judgment in Professor Sumer Chand's case (AIR 1993 SC 2579 : 1993 AIR SCW 3240) (supra) which has been rendered after comparing the provisions of the Police Act, 1861 and Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act, 1978 and it has been held that the benefit of the latter provision would be available qua all penal statutes.

37. The expression `colour of duty' must now be examined in the facts of this case. In Venugopal's case (AIR 1964 SC 33) (supra), this Court held as under:

"It is easy to see that if the act complained of is wholly justified by law, it would not amount to an offence at all in view of the provisions of S.79 of the Indian Penal Code. Many cases may however arise wherein acting under the provisions of the Police Act or other law conferring powers on the police the police officer or some other person may go beyond what is strictly justified in law. Though Sec.79 of the Indian Penal Code will have no application to such cases, Sec.53 of the Police Act will apply. But Sec.53 applies to only a limited class of persons. So, it becomes the task of the Court, whenever any question whether this section applies or not arises to bestow particular care on its decision. In doing this it has to ascertain first what act is complained of and then to examine if there is any provision of the Police Act or other law conferring powers on the police under which it may be said to have been done or intended to be done. The Court has to remember in this connection that an act is not "under" a provision of law merely because the point of time at which it is done coincides with the point of time when some act is done in the exercise of the powers granted by the provision or in performance of the duty imposed by it. To be able to say that an act is done "under" a provision of law, one must discover the existence of a reasonable relationship between the provisions and the act. In the absence of such a relation the act cannot be said to be done "under" the particular provision of law."

38. This judgment was followed in Narhar Rao's case (AIR 1966 SC 1786) (supra) . This Court, while dealing with the question as to whether the acceptance of a bribe by a police official with the object of weakening the prosecution case could be said to be under `colour of duty' or in excess of his duty, observed as under:

"But unless there is a reasonable connection between the act complained of and the powers and duties of the office, it cannot be said that the act was done by the accused officer under the colour of his office. Applying this test to the present case, we are of the opinion that the alleged acceptance of bribe by the respondent was not an act which could be said to have been done under the colour of his office or done in excess of his duty or authority within the meaning of S.161(1) of the Bombay Police Act. It follows, therefore, that the High Court was in error in holding that the prosecution of the respondent was barred because of the period of limitation prescribed under Sec.161(1) of the Bombay Police Act. The view that we have expressed is borne out by the decision of this Court in State of Andhra Pradesh vs. N.Venugopal, AIR 1964 SC 33, in which the Court had construed the language of a similar provision of S.53 of the Madras District Police Act (Act 24 of 1859). It was pointed out in that case that the effect of S.53 of that Act was that all prosecutions whether against a police officer or a person other than a police officer (i.e. a member of the Madras Fire Service, above the rank of a fireman acting under S.42 of the Act) must be commenced within three months after the act complained of, if the act is one which has been done or intended to be done under any of the provisions of the Police Act. In that case, the accused police officers were charged under Ss.348 and 331 of the Indian Penal Code for wrongly confining a suspect Arige Ramanua in the course of investigation and causing him injuries. The accused were convicted by the Sessions Judge under Ss.348 and 331 of the Indian Penal Code but in appeal the Andhra Pradesh High Court held that the bar under S.53 of the Police Act applied and the accused were entitled to an acquittal. It was, however, held by this Court that the prosecution was not barred under S.53 of the Police Act, for it cannot be said that the acts of beating a person suspected of a crime or confining him or sending him away in an injured condition by the police at a time when they were engaged in investigation are acts done or intended to be done under the provisions of the Madras District Police Act or Criminal Procedure Code or any other law conferring powers on the police. The appeal was accordingly allowed by this Court and the acquittal of the respondent set aside."

39. Both these judgments were followed in Atma Ram's case (AIR 1966 SC 1786) (supra) where the question was as to whether the action of a Police Officer in beating and confining a person suspected of having stolen goods in his possession could be said to be under colour of duty. It was held as under :

"The provisions of Ss.161 and 163 of the Criminal Procedure Code emphasize the fact that a police officer is prohibited from beating or confining persons with a view to induce them to make statements. In view of the statutory prohibition it cannot, possibly, be said that the acts, complained of, in this case, are acts done by the respondents under the colour of their duty or authority. In our opinion, there is no connection, in this case between the acts complained of and the office of the respondents and the duties and obligations imposed on them by law. On the other hand, the alleged acts fall completely outside the scope of the duties of the respondents and they are not entitled, therefore, to the mantle of protection conferred by S. 161 (1) of the Bombay Police Act."

40. Similar views have been expressed in Bhanuprasad Hariprasad Dave's case (AIR 1968 SC 1323) (supra) wherein the allegations against the police officer was of taking advantage of his position and attempting to coerce a person to give him a bribe. The plea of colour of duty was negatived by this Court and it was observed as under:

"All that can be said in the present case is that the first appellant a police officer, taking advantage of his position as a police officer and availing himself of the opportunity afforded by the letter Madhukanta handed over to him, coerced Ramanlal to pay illegal gratification to him. This cannot be said to have been done under colour of duty. The charge against the second appellant is that he aided the first appellant in his illegal activity."

41. These judgments have been considered by this Court in Professor Sumer Chand's case (AIR 1993 SC 2579 : 1993 AIR SCW 3240) (supra) which has been relied upon by both sides. In this case, Professor Sumer Chand and several others were brought to trial initiated on a first information report but were acquitted by the trial court. Professor Sumer Chand thereupon filed a suit against the Investigating officer and other police officials for malicious prosecution claiming Rs.3 Lacs as damages. This Court held that the prosecution had been initiated on the basis of a First Information Report and it was the duty of a Police Officer to investigate the matter and to file a charge-sheet, if necessary, and that there was a discernible connection between the act complained of by the appellant and the powers and duties of the Police Officer. This Court endorsed the opinion of the High Court that the act of the Police Officer complained of fell within the description of `colour of duty'.

42. In the light of the facts that have been found by us above, it cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be claimed by anybody that a case of murder would fall within the expression `colour of duty'. We find absolutely no connection between the act of the appellants and the allegations against them. Section 140 of the Delhi Police Act would, therefore, have absolutely no relevance in this case and Mr. Sharan's argument based thereon must, therefore, be repelled.

43. The learned Counsel has also raised an argument that the sanction under Section 197 of the Cr.P.C. had been mechanically given and did not indicate any application of mind on the part of the Lt. Governor. It has accordingly been prayed that the entire prosecution was vitiated on this score. Reliance has been placed by Mr. Sharan for this argument on Ameerjan's case (AIR 2008 SC 108 : 2007 AIR SCW 6217) (supra). This argument has been controverted by the learned ASG who has pointed out that a bare reading of the sanction order as well as the evidence of PW-48 C.B. Verma, the concerned Deputy Secretary in the Delhi Government who had forwarded the file to the Lt. Governor, revealed that all material relevant for according the sanction had been given to the Lt. Governor. The learned ASG has placed reliance on S.B.Saha's case (AIR 1979 SC 1841) (supra) as well as on Ameerjan's case above- referred.

44. We have considered this argument very carefully in the light of the evidence on record. We first go to the evidence of PW-48 C.B. Verma. He deposed that a request had been received from the CBI for according sanction for the prosecution of the appellants along with the investigation report and a draft of the sanction order. He further stated that on receipt of the aforesaid documents the matter had been referred first to the Law Department of the Delhi Administration and then forwarded to the Home Department and then to the Chief Secretary and finally, the entire file had been put up before the Lt. Governor who had granted the sanction for the prosecution of the ten officials. It is true that certain other material which was not yet available with the CBI at that stage could not obviously have been forwarded to the Lt. Governor, but we see from the various documents on record that even on the documents, as laid, adequate material for the sanction was available to the Lt. Governor. We have perused the sanction order dated 10th of October 2001 and we find it to be extremely comprehensive as all the facts and circumstances of the case had been spelt out in the 16 pages that the sanction order runs into. In Ameerjan's case (AIR 2008 SC 108 : 2007 AIR SCW 6217) (supra) which was a prosecution under the Prevention of Corruption Act (and sanction under Section 19 thereof was called for), this Court observed that though the sanction order could not be construed in a pedantic manner but the purpose for which such an order was required had to be borne in mind and ordinarily the sanctioning authority was the best person to judge as to whether the public servant should receive the protection of Section 19 or not and for that purpose the entire record containing the materials collected against an accused should be placed before the sanctioning authority and in the event that the order of sanction did not indicate a proper application of mind as to the materials placed before the sanctioning authority, the same could be produced even before the Court. Admittedly, in the present case only the investigation report and the draft sanction order had been put before the Lt. Governor but we find from a reading of the former that it refers to the entire evidence collected in the matter, leaving the Lt. Governor with no option but to grant sanction. In S.B. Saha's case (AIR 1979 SC 1841) (supra), this Court was dealing primarily with the question as to whether sanction under Section 197 of the Cr.P.C. was required where a Customs Officer had misappropriated the goods that he had seized and put them to his own use. While dealing with this submission, it was also observed as under:

"Thus, the material brought on the record up to the stage when the question of want of sanction was raised by the appellants, contained a clear allegation against the appellants about the commission of an offence under Section 409, Indian Penal Code. To elaborate, it was substantially alleged that the appellants had seized the goods and were holding them in trust in the discharge of their official duty, for being dealt with or disposed of in accordance with law, but in dishonest breach of that trust, they criminally misappropriated or converted those goods. Whether this allegation or charge is true or false, is not to be gone into at this stage. In considering the question whether sanction for prosecution was or was not necessary, these criminal acts attributed to the accused are to be taken as alleged."

45. As already indicated above, the Lt. Governor had enough relevant material before him when he had accorded sanction on the 10th October 2001.

46. We now come to the other appeals in which some additional arguments have been raised. In Criminal Appeal No. 2476/2009 of Head Constable Mahavir Singh, Mr. Lalit has argued that 15 persons in all had constituted the police party and 10 persons had been sent up for trial including ACP Rathi and Inspector Anil Kumar and five others, three of them armed who had not fired any shot, and two other who had not been armed, had not been prosecuted and as Head Constable Mahavir Singh had also not fired at the car, his case fell amongst the five and he was, therefore, entitled to be treated in a like manner. In addition, it has been submitted that Head Constable Mahavir Singh did not share the common intention with the other nine accused. Mr. Lalit has also referred us to question No.53 put to the Head Constable by which the circumstances pertaining to the actual incident had been put to him and he had answered as under:

"I was behind the entire team. Then the team was left with no option but to return fire in self defence and to save members of the public as a large crowd had started gathering suddenly on hearing the faring from inside the car. Some members of our team returned fire. As I was behind and a little away from the car, I held back my fire. But on seeing a crowd gathering and to prevent the members of general public from coming close to the car, I fired one shot in the air. In the meanwhile I heard Constable Subhash Chand scream that he had been hurt. Then the firing was ordered to be stopped. Within moments a PCR Gypsy also arrived. Then the efforts were made to take the injured out and send them to hospital. In the meanwhile press photographers, police of the PS C.P. and Sr. officers also arrived."

47. He has found support for his arguments from the Panchnama Ex. B-67/2 prepared by P.Kailasham, Executive Engineer, CBI on the 11th April, 1997 on the observations of three Shri Ohri, DSP and Sri Sree Deep. It has accordingly been argued by Mr. Lalit that the defence taken by Head Constable Mahavir Singh that he had fired to keep the crowd away was clear from the record and as the incident had happened in a very busy locality i.e. the outer circle of Connaught Place, a crowd had undoubtedly collected. He has further pointed out that the story that a bullet fired by Head Constable Mahavir Singh from his 7.62 mm AK-47 rifle at Jagjit Singh had been disbelieved by the High Court and the falsity of the prosecution story was, thus, clearly spelt out.

48. We have considered the arguments advanced by the learned counsel. Admittedly, as per his own showing, Head Constable Mahavir Singh had used his service weapon and fired one shot therefrom. The prosecution story is that he had fired at the car whereas the defence is that he had fired the shot in the air to keep the crowd away. This argument is based on a clear misconception and does not take into account the normal tendency of a person at a crime scene, (more particularly where indiscriminate gun fire had been resorted to) would be to run far and away. It appears that the crowd had collected only after the shooting had ceased. There is no evidence whatsoever to show that any crowd had collected while the firing was going on or that a single shot had been fired after the volley of 34 shots. We have also perused the large number of photographs of the site and see that the crowd that had gathered after the shooting, was perfectly disciplined and keeping a reasonable distance away from the Esteem car and the dead bodies lying around it. Admittedly also, there is absolutely no evidence with regard to the defence taken by Constable Mahavir Singh. An effort could have been made by the defence to elicit some information about the behaviour of the crowd from the policemen and the Statesman employees who had appeared as prosecution witnesses. Not a single question was, however, put to them on this aspect. We are therefore of the opinion that the story projected by him in his 313 statement is not supported by any evidence whatsoever. His case, therefore, cannot be distinguished from the other seven accused who had admittedly fired at the car.

49. We have already dealt with Mr. Balasubramaniam's arguments in the case of Inspector Anil Kumar who has filed Criminal Appeal No.2484/2009 while dealing with the question of common intention and the self-defence claimed by the appellant. No further discussion is, therefore, required in this appeal.

50. We finally take up Criminal Appeal Nos. 2477-2483 of 2009 in which the arguments have been made by Mr. Vineet Dhanda, Advocate. It is significant that these seven police officers had admitted firing into the vehicle but it is their case in their statements under Section 313 of the Cr.P.C. as also their written statements that they had done so only on the direction of ACP Rathi, a superior officer. They have accordingly sought the benefit of Section 79 of the IPC which provided:

"Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified, by law.- Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law, in doing it."

51. In the written submissions filed by Mr. Vineet Dhanda long after the judgment had been reserved and beyond the time fixed by us for the filing of the written submissions (which have nevertheless been taken on record) the stand taken is completely different and in accordance with that of Mr. Sharan and Mr. Lalit with regard to the defence claimed by the appellants. Mr. Dhanda has also filed a large number of judgments on this aspect. These judgments had not been cited by the learned counsel at the time of hearing. We have however gone through the judgments and find nothing different therein from the judgments cited by the other learned counsel. We, therefore, deem it unnecessary to advert to them at this stage.

52. We have nevertheless examined the submissions with regard to Sections 76 to 79 of the IPC. We see absolutely no evidence that the firing had been resorted to by the seven appellants on the order of ACP Rathi as we have found that it was pursuant to the common intention of all the accused that the incident had happened. It is also relevant that the statements made by these seven appellants are not admissible in evidence against ACP Rathi, being a co-accused, in the light of the judgment of this Court reported in Vijendrajit Ayodhya Prasad Goel vs. State of Bombay AIR 1953 SC 247 and S.P.Bhatnagar and Anr. vs. The State of Maharashtra AIR 1979 SC 826. This Court in the former case has observed that a statement under Section 342 of the Cr.P.C. (now Section 313) cannot be regarded as evidence. The observations in the latter case are equally pertinent wherein it has been held that a defence taken by one accused cannot, in law, be treated as evidence against his co-accused. As already observed, Section 315 of the Cr.P.C. now makes an accused a competent witness in his defence. Had the appellants in this set of appeals chosen to come into the witness box to support their plea based on the orders of ACP Rathi, a superior officer, and claimed the benefit of Section 79 of the IPC, something could be said in their behalf but in the face of no evidence the story projected by them cannot be believed.

53. On an overall view of the evidence in the case and in the light of the arguments raised by the learned counsel for the parties, we find no fault with the judgments of the trial court as well as the High Court. We, accordingly, dismiss all these appeals.

Appeals dismissed.

Judgement

ORDER :-

By way of this writ petition the petitioner prayed for a writ of mandamus for quashment of FIR No. 21/06, dated 27-1-06 registered at Police Station Transport Nagar, Jaipur for the offences punishable under Sections 465, 469, 471, 120-B, I.P.C. and Section 65 of the Information Technology Act, 2000.

2. During the course of investigation, the Investigating Officer has deleted the offence under Section 65 of the I.T. Act, 2000 from the purview of investigation and has proceeded to undertake further investigation only in regard to the offences under Sections 465, 469, 471, 120-B, IPC.

3. In the First Information Report, it has been alleged that some news items were published in the Newspaper which were containing aspersions against Cabinet Minister in Govt. of Rajasthan Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore, founded on some statement of one Ved Prakash Saini. In the report it has also been stated that on the basis of the newspaper reporting an enquiry was launched by the I.G.P. (Special and Economic Offences), C.I.D., Jaipur.

4. The reporting in newspaper related to allegations on Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore pertaining to his involvement in an incident about prostitution by one Vanita wife of Ved Prakash Saini.

5. During the course of enquiry launched by the I.G.P. (Special and Economic Offences), C.I.D., Jaipur, statements of victim Vanita, petitioner Bhim Sen Garg, Police Officers Arun Macha and Pyara Singh etc. were recorded.

6. Vanita, in her statement recorded during the course of enquiry stated that she was in custody at Police Station Shyam Nagar, Jaipur on 10-6-2005 in connection with F.I.R. No. 168/05, she had reported to a News Reporter that she had never gone with any Minister or his P. A.

7. On the conclusion of the enquiry it was found that Vanita had been sent for prostitution by her husband on 10-6-2005 to some other three persons. As such, Mahaka Bharat had published scandalous news on the basis of which the Minister's name was being dragged in the controversy.

8. In the aforesaid backdrop, on the basis of inquiry report, an F.I.R. No. 217/05 was registered under Sections 5 and 6 of PITA Act at Police Station Jamwa Ramgarh, Jaipur. The investigation of the same was given to the Additional Superintendent of Police and it was found that no Minister or his P.A. was found to be involved in the incident.

9. During the course of investigation of F.I.R. No. 217/05, a notice was given to the petitioner-Editor of Mahaka Bharat for providing the original C.D. on the basis of which newspaper reporting was done. In response to the notice, it is alleged that petitioner showed inability in providing the original C.D. However, a copy of C.D. was provided to the Additional Superintendent of Police by one employee of Mahaka Bharat, namely; Shri K. M. Sharma, Accounts Officer. And on receipt of copy of C.D. it was sent to FSL Jaipur for examination and a report was also given. In the report it was found that C.D. was found interpolated and it was also alleged that in the original interview by Electronic Media as also in the statement recorded under Section 164, Cr.P.C. before Magistrate, Vanita had categorically stated that she had not gone with any Minister, but Bhim Sen Garg had removed the said portions from the C.D. and by way of interpolation, committed forgery and on the basis of the interpolated C.D., a scandalous news item was published in Mahaka Bharat with an object to stigmatize the image of a particular Minister in State Government.

10. For the offence committed by the petitioner FIR No. 21/06 was registered at Police Station, Transport Nagar on 27-1-06 for the offences punishable under Sections 465, 467, 471 and 120-B, IPC and Section 65 of Information Technology Act, 2000 and later on during investigation, the offence under Section 65 of the IT Act, 2000 has been deleted from the purview of investigation.

11. The FIR No. 21/06 registered at P. S. Transport Nagar is challenged by the petitioner on the ground that the impugned FIR which as been lodged against the petitioner is outcome of blatant and flagrant malicious action on the part of State Police at behest of Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore. It is also submitted that the alleged FIR has been lodged by Shri Pradeep Mohar, Additional Superintendent of Police (Special and Economic Offences) C.I.D. (C.B.), Jaipur. And after alleging allegation, learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the FIR has been lodged against the petitioner with ulterior motive and to wreak vengeance on the petitioner with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge.

12. It is also contended that the impugned FIR has been lodged in utter disregard of the provisions contained in Code of Criminal Procedure as also the Evidence Act. And from reading the FIR in question it is clearly borne out that no cognizable offence is said to have been committed by the petitioner. When the contents/allegations, even if controverted, do not disclose commission of any cognizable offence, then the Police loses its power to investigate under Section 156 (1), Cr.P.C. without prior order of a Magistrate in consonance with the provisions contained in Section 155 (2), Cr.P.C. Under such circumstances, the Investigating Agency would not have the requisite power to investigate as per Section 156, Cr.P.C. Thus, the alleged FIR completely defies the entire scheme relating to powers of investigation contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure.

13. Learned Sr. Counsel Mr. Bajwa submitted briefs on account of which the impugned FIR has been lodged :-

(I) An earlier F.I.R. No. 217/2005 of Police Station Jamwa Ramgarh was registered for offence punishable under Sections 5 and 6 of PITA Act, in the wake of entire controversy arising in Print and Electronic Media, against number of persons.

(II) That in the said F.I.R. investigation was carried out by the Additional Superintendent of Police (Special and Economic Offences) C.I.D. (C.B.) - the complainant in the impugned FIR. The subject-matter of his investigation was the incident, which took place on 10-3-2005 wherein victim Vanita was forced for prostitution by her husband, at the hands of number of persons.

(III) Additional Superintendent of Police (Special and Economic Offences) C.I.D. (C.B.) conducted investigation in F.I.R. No. 217/05 and during the course of his investigation he came to the conclusion that Ram Pratap Gupta, Vijay Singh Meena, Sardar Singh, Ved Prakash Saini, Bajrang and Badri Narain were involved in the said offence. But, however, he from his investigation, did not find Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore to be involved in the incident and to be prima facie guilty of the said offence.

(IV) Subsequent to the conclusions of Additional Superintendent of Police (Special and Economic Offences) C.I.D. (C.B.) in his investigation in FIR No. 217/05 P.S. Jamwa Ramgarh he ventured to lodge the impugned FIR as a complainant for the alleged false evidence created by Bhim Sen Garg-Editor, Mahaka Bharat, through newspaper reporting and the C.D. Footage.

(V) The impugned FIR is squarely related to the false evidence about involvement of Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore, founded on the basis of tampered C.D. recording.

14. After formulation of aforesaid points Mr. Bajwa submitted that whenever an Investigating Officer is of the opinion that some false evidence was given to implicate a particular accused, then as per the scheme of Cr.P.C., the Investigating Officer is supposed to give his conclusions qua the subject-matter of investigation as also complicity of the accused, in the form of a negative report/final report qua the accused and at the same time has to recommend action against the person giving false information against that accused under Section 182 or 211, I.P.C.

15. The impugned FIR is also challenged on the ground that the FIR has been lodged for the offences in question on the basis of the so-called interpolated C.D. The impugned FIR is also challenged on the ground that it is nowhere borne out that the disputed C.D. in question was ever in the conscious, exclusive custody/control/dominion of the petitioner as the alleged C.D. was handed over to the Police by one Shi K. M. Sharma, employee of the petitioner. Thus, the contents of the entire FIR even if taken on their face value, do not disclose that the petitioner, in any manner, was himself involved in the process of alleged tampering of the C.D. in question. In the absence of the identification of the accused, who were actually involved in preparing the C.D., the petitioner cannot be hauled up for the said offence.

16. Learned Senior Counsel Shri Bajwa also mentioned the dates and events of the incident and submitted that on 10-3-2005, the alleged involvement of Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore in sex orgy which had allegedly taken place in R.T.D.C. Hotel - "Jheel Pryatak" in Village Jamwa Ramgarh.

17. On 16-6-2005, in FIR No. 168/05 Police Station Shyam Nagar, Jaipur, Vineeta had been arrested underr P.I.T.A. and was interviewed by Print/Electronic Media. During interviews involvement of concerned Minister in the sex orgy relating to 10-3-2005 was revealed. On 21-9-2005, the news regarding involvement of the Minister has been published in the Hindi Daily Newspaper "Mahaka Bharat". On 21-9-2005, Inspector General of Police Shri Liyakat Ali was deputed to conduct inquiry about the allegations of involvement of the Minister and Shri Liyakat Ali submitted interim report on 26-9-2005 wherein the Minister was absolved. And on 26-9-2005 Shri Liyakat Ali in the capacity of informant filed FIR under PITA Act at Police Station Jamwa Ramgarh regarding the sex orgy involving the Minister and FIR No. 217/05 under PITA was registered. The statement of Vineeta under Section 164, Cr.P.C. was recorded in FIR No. 217/05 on 28-9-2005 and in the aforesaid FIR challan has been filed against six persons for the offences under PITA on 23-11-05. After filing of challan Shri Pradeep Mohan Sharma, Additional Superintendent of Police C.I.D. filed impugned FIR No. 21/06 at Police Station Transport Nagar on 27-1-2006 against the petitioner Bhim Sen Garg for the offences under Sections 465, 469, 471, 120-B, I.P.C.

18. In the impugned FIR, it is alleged against the petitioner that the petitioner is found guilty of tampering of C.D. in respect of words as well as pictures; forgery was committed by the petitioner to defame the Cabinet Minister and C.D. was misused and on its basis false news was published in the daily Hindi Newspaper "Mahaka Bharat".

19. Mr. Bajwa further submitted that the purpose of cheating (sic). Section 471, IPC contemplates use of forged document. Thus, it is only when ingredients of Section 465, IPC are clearly spelt out in FIR, then the other two offences can be pressed into service.

Mr. Bajwa further submitted that the FIR in the eye of law does not sustain as the original C.D. is not on record. On the basis of some copy no report regarding altering of C.D. can be given. The copy of C.D. was not recovered from the personal custody of petitioner. Offence under Section 469, IPC regarding forgery of C.D. for the purpose of harming reputation is also not made out for the simple reason that FIR completely fails to spell out allegations of forgery itself. And regarding offence under Section 471, IPC there is no allegation in the FIR that the petitioner used the C.D.

20. It is also contended that the alleged impugned FIR is second FIR and referred the case of T.T. Antony wherein Hon'ble the Supreme Court has held that no second FIR in respect of an offence which was subject-matter of investigation in an earlier FIR can be registered. Therefore, second FIR giving it a colour of independent offences under Sections 465, 468, 469 and 471, IPC has been registered with a calculated design to harass the petitioner.

21. Learned counsel for the petitionerr also alleged malice and mala fide allegation against the sitting Cabinet Minister and submitted that the influence of sitting Cabinet Minister for lodging second FIR has been used and Press was gagged and right to information was crushed. Selective targeting of "Mahaka Bharat" while other newspapers and news channels were conveniently left out.

22. And after alleging the mala fide allegation against the Minister concerned, learned counsel Mr. Bajwa referred legal bar in registering impugned FIR as no separate FIR can be registered against the alleged fabrication of false evidence by a witness in the earlier FIR. No second FIR for the same subject-matter can be registered and the impugned FIR is hit by Section 162, Cr.P.C.

23. It is also contended that the impugned criminal proceedings initiated against the petitioner are pre-mature as the concerned Minister has not been exonerated finally as yet and the Trial Magistrate may invoke offence under Sections 366/376, IPC and may commit the same to Court of Session and Sessions Court after recording statement of prosecutrix Smt. Vineeta may proceed against the concerned Minister under Sections 319, Cr.P.C.

24. Further stated that the original C.D. might be produced during the trial and the allegations against the Minister might be fully endorsed and the trial Court may believe the contents of C.D. as true and may rely on the statement of petitioner in that trial as a turthful witness. So after conclusion of trial only it will be clear as to whether the concerned Minister has been rightly indicted and as to whether the contents of C.D. are genuine. If the trial Court concludes otherwise, only then the stage to proceed against the petitioner in respect of fabrication/forgery will arise. Till then any exercise to initiate proceedings against the petitioner is per se premature.

25. It is also contended that the alleged FIR is false at its face value in accordance with the test laid down by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of Bhajan Lal as the allegation do not constitute impugned offence and allegations are prompted by malice and legal bar engrafted in Code stand attracted, should be made applicable to the present petition.

26. Learned counsel for the petitioner has placed reliance on the judgments reported in 2004 (12) SCC 195 : 2005 Cri LJ 3200; 2004 (7) SCC 768 : 2004 Cri LJ 4623; 2004 (7) SCC 775 : AIR 2005 SC 1452; AIR 1997 SC 3433; AIR 1993 SC 2644 : 1993 Cri LJ 3684;

AIR 1993 SC 2466 (sic), 1995 (4) SCC 392 : 1995 Cri LJ 2665; 2001 (6) SCC 181 : 2001 Cri LJ 3329, TT Antony v. State of Kerala and case of Bhajan Lal, 1992 Cri LJ 527.

27. Per contra, learned counsel appearing for the State emphatically denied the submissions made on behalf of the petitioner that the State Police has taken any action at the behest of the Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore as alleged by the petitioner. It is also denied that the contents of the FIR speaks volumes about the mala fide and ulterior motives and denied that the FIR has been lodged to wreak vengeance on the petitioner allegedly with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge. And there is no question of violation of any provision contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act as the FIR in question clearly discloses commission of cognizable offence and the investigation of FIR No. 217/05 lodged with Police Station Jamwa Ramgarh for offence under Sections 5 and 6 of PITA Act is concerned, the same was an altogether different incident. It was only when the petitioner in his newspaper prominently reported about the alleged involvement of a Cabinet Minister of the State Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore and alleged cover up thereof by the Police that he was required to produce the Compact Disk on the basis of which the aforesaid news item was published. When C.D. was provided by the Accounts Manager of the petitioner Shri K. M. Sharma to the Investigating Officer, this C.D. was sent to State Forensic Science Laboratory for examination. The report of the State Forensice Science Laboratory indicated as under "Thirty three clip-discontinuities have been detected in the video footage of the file AVSEQ01.DAT. All these clips joined together make a 9 minutes 46 seconds video footage, whic indicate post-production editing.

Audio examination reveal that the audio recording in the video footage is also cut and broken at some places which correspond with video clip joints."

28. And the conclusion of Forensic Science Laboratory clearly proved that the electronic record contained on the Compact Disk by way of audio and video was tampered with and another Compact Disk was prepared by fabrication. This C.D. was made basis of newspaper reports published in daily newspaper Mahaka Bharat wherein allegations were made not only against the Minister but also against the State Police that it had tried to cover up the incident. It is, therefore, denied that the allegations contained in the FIR do not disclose any cognizable offence. In fact, the result of the examination by the State Forensic Science Laboratory categorically stated that total play time of the AVSEQ01.DAT file contained in the MPEGAV folder is 9 minutes 46 seconds. In the whole of the duration of this time, the report detected 33 clip discontinuities in the video footage of the said file. All these clips when joined together make a 9 minutes 46 seconds video footage which clearly indicate post-production editing. Audio examination further revealed that the audio recording in the video footage was also cut and broken at some places which correspond with video clip joints. The Investigating Officer of the FIR No. 217/05 further requested the State F.S.L. to get an explanation note on the technical terminologies used in the report of their examination. It was thereafter that the office of the Director, Police FSL Rajasthan, Jaipur vide letter dated 25-1-2006 supplemented the aforesaid report by clarifying certain technical terminologies.

29. It is further submitted that the Investigating Officer of FIR No. 217/05 was concerned with the investigation of the offences under Sections 5 and 6 of the PITA Act and in the course of investigation when it was transpired that electronic report contained on the C.D. was tampered with and another C.D. was prepared by way of fabircation which was substantiated from the report of the State F.S.L., this constituted another and independent offence punishable under Sections 465, 469, 471, 120-B, IPC and Section 65 of Information Tecnology Act, 2000. He, therefore, lodged this FIR with the Police Station, Transport Nagar within whose jurisdiction the registered office of Mahaka Bharat is located and C.D. was received by the Investigating Officer. It is, therefore, denied that any scheme contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure was violated. It is denied that any novel method was adopted for lodgment of the FIR. It is also denied that the FIR is intended to harass, humiliate and malign the petitioner. It is denied that FIR has been lodged at the behest of Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore. It is denied that the allegations in the impugned FIR would have constituted an offence under Section 182/211, IPC for giving false information. As already submitted, the fabrication of the C.D. was an independent and separate offence punishable under Sections 465, 469, 471, 120-B, IPC and Section 65 of Information Technology Act, 2000. It is denied that the FIR has been lodged with a view to tiding over the alleged predicament under Section 155 (2), Cr.P.C.

30. It is denied that the State F.S.L. do not give report on the basis of examination of a copy of the C.D. which is interpolated. This precisely is the allegation against the petitioner that he prepared an interpolated C.D. giving completely a new version to it and fabricating its contents. Such a C.D., therefore, cannot be considered as a secondary evidence as for the purpose of offences alleged to have been committed by the petitioner, this C.D. would constitute primary evidence.

31. The C.D. was handed over by Shri K.M. Sharma, Accounts Manager of the petitioner on his behalf in response to the notice given by the Investigating Officer. When the Investigating Officer handed over the notice to the person present in the registered office of the Mahaka Bharat, Shri K.M. Sharma upon receiving telephone instructions from the petitioner handed over the subject C.D. to the Investigating Officer. In so far as the identification of the accused is concerned, the same would be the subject- matter of investigation and petitioner cannot invite this Hon'ble Court into prejudging the issue which are essentially in the domain of the Investigating Officer. Learned counsel for the State with regard to argument that second FIR is barred being hit by provisions of Section 157 and 162, Cr.P.C. submitted that the case of T.T. antony v. State of Kerala and others, reported in 2001 (6) SCC 181 : 2001 Cri LJ 3329, has not been correctly appreciated and understood by the petitioner as Hon'ble the Supreme Court has observed as under (Para 20) :-

"20. From the above discussion it follows that under the scheme of the provisions of Sections 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 170 and 173, Cr.P.C. only the earliest or the first information in regard to the commission of a cognizable offence satisfies the requirements of Section 154, Cr.P.C. Thus there can be no second FIR and consequently there can be no fresh investigation on receipt of every subsequent information in respect of the same cognizable offence or the same occurrence or incident giving rise to one or more cognizable offences. On receipt of information about a cognizable offence or an incident giving rise to a cognizable offence or offences and on entering the FIR in the station house diary, the officer-in-charge of a police station has to investigate not merely the cognizable offence reported in the FIR but also other connected offences found to have been committed in the course of the same transaction or the same occurrence and file one or more reports as provided in Section 173, Cr.P.C."

32. And the respondent-State by referring the observation made by Hon'ble the Supreme in the case T.T. Antony tried to distinguish the present case and submitted that the second FIR according to the Supreme Court judgment is barred only in relation to the same cognizable offence or the same occurrence or the same incident giving rise to one or more cognizable offences. Such restriction cannot be applied in the facts of the present case where the FIR has been lodged against the petitioner on the basis of an altogether (sic) occurrence and for a different offence and being FIR against another set of accused and not against the same set of accused who have been offenders in the FIR No. 217/05. In the present FIR No. 21/06 the allegation against the accused is with regard to terming with and fabrication of electronic record contained on the Compact Disk (CD) which found basis of the newspaper report dated 21-9-2005. This offence has been prima facie established by report of the Forensic Science Laboratory.

33. In view of this fact, it would be clearly evident that the FIR in question is not only pertains to different set of offence but also relates to a different occurrence which has taken place in a different transaction and against different set of accused. There would be, therefore, no prohibition for lodgment of a new FIR even though the discovery of the fact with regard to the fabrication of the electronic record contained on the CD may have come to surface during the course of investigation of another FIR No. 217/05.

34. Learned counsel for the State in support of his submissions, has relied upon the following judgments :-

1. AIR 2004 SC 4320 : (2004 Cri LJ 4219), Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash and others,
2. 2002 (1) SCC 714 : (2002 Cri LJ 923), Kari Choudhary v. Mst. Sita Vedi and Ors.

35. Having heard rival submissions of the respective parties and upon careful perusal of the relevant provisions of Cr.P.C. and IPC and after carefully reading of the judgments referred by the respective parties to decide this question whether the FIR No. 21/06, dated 27-1-06 registered at Police Station, Transport Nagar, Jaipur for the offence punishable under Sections 465, 469, 471 and 120-B, IPC at its face value is false and deserves to be quashed and set aside or not.

36. As the learned counsel for the petitioner raised several legal questions regarding maintainability of the disputed impugned FIR in question and the petitioner referred Section 156, Cr.P.C. and more particularly Section 156 (1) and (2). The provisions of Section 156, Cr.P.C. is reproduced hereunder :-

156. Police Officer's to investigate cognizable cases.-

(1) Any officer in charge of a police station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XIII.
(2) No proceeding of a police officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate.
(3) Any Magistrate empowered under Section 190 may order such an investigation as above-mentioned.

37. Thus, Section 156 deals with the power of the police officer to investigate cognizable cases and as per sub-section (1) any officer in charge of a police station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XIII. And in sub-section (2), no proceeding of a police officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate.
38. By referring Section 156, learned counsel for the petitioner tried to make out the case that the contents of the FIR itself borne out that no cognizable offence can be said to have been committed. Since no cognizable offence is made out, therefore, the investigating agency has power to investigate into the matter.

39. Whereas the contents of FIR clearly indicates that the clips disc continuities out-broken A V footage, post-production editing whereas Vineeta in her statement deposed before the Magistrate under Section 164, Cr. P.C. categorically has not mentioned the involvement of the Minister and his P.A. and this statement has been erased. And since the petitioner himself has shown the inability to produce original C.D., the copy of the same was obtained and sent to the FSL for examination and the offence is made out under Sections 465, 469, 471 and 120-B, IPC which is cognizable. Thus, the police officer is empowered to investigate into the matter under Section 156, Cr. P.C.

40. I have also perused Section 465 of IPC. As referred by the learned counsel for the petitioner Section 465 deals with the punishment for forgery "whoever commits forgery shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both. And after referring Section 465 of IPC, learned counsel for the petitioner tried to make out the case that the petitioner cannot be liable for forgery until and unless clear allegation against the petitioner is made out that the petitioner himself has fabricated/tampered with the electronic record. As evident by the reply submitted on behalf of the respondent and as not disputed by the respondent and the petitioner that the copy of the C.D. was handed over by the petitioner's Accountant Shri K. M. Sharma in the office of Mahaka Bharat for which the petitioner has instructed him on telephone and the allegation can only be established after conducting the investigation.

41. Upon perusal of Section 468, IPC as referred by the petitioner which contains whoever commits forgery, intending that the (document or electronic record forged) shall be used for the purpose of cheating, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine. And Section 471 contains whoever fraudulently or dishonestly uses as genuine any (document or electronic record) which he knows or has reason to believe to be a forged (document or electronic record), shall be punished in the same manner as if he had forged such (document or electronic record).

42. As stated hereinabove, in my considered view, the conclusion can only be drawn after investigation whether any offence is made out or not and in the instant writ petition since the petitioner has challenged the legality of the FIR and prayed for quashment of the FIR in question, therefore, this Court is only confined to determine the question whether the impugned FIR at its face value is false or not.

43. As the petitioner relied upon the case of T.T. Antony, 2001 Cri LJ 3329, wherein Hon'ble the Supreme Court has held as under :-

"After registering the FIR and commencing investigation, registering of second FIR or successive FIRs in respect of the same incident and crime and making of fresh investigations pursuant thereto would be irregular which call for interference by High Court under Articles 226 and 227 or Cr.P.C. and interference by Supreme Court under Article 136 with the fresh investigation to prevent abuse of statutory power of investigation or otherwise to secure ends of justice."

44. Learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondents also placed reliance on the judgment of T.T. Antony, 2001 Cri LJ 3329 and relied on para 20 which reads as under :-

20. From the above discussion it follows that under the scheme of the provisions of Sections 154, 155, 156, 157, 162, 169, 170 and 173, Cr.P.C. only the earliest or the first information in regard to the commission of a cognizable offence satisfies the requirement of Section 154, Cr.P.C. Thus there can be no second FIR and consequently there can be no fresh investigation on receipt of every subsequent information in respect of the same cognizable offence or the same occurrence or incident giving rise to one or more cognizable offence. On receipt of information about a cognizable offence or an incident giving rise to a cognizable offence or offences and on entering the FIR in the station house diary, the officer in charge of a police station has to investigate not merely the cognizable offence reported in the FIR but also other connected offences found to have been committed in the course of the same transaction or the same occurrence and file one or more reports as provided in Section 173 Cr.P.C."

45. Applying the ratio decided by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of T.T. Antony, 2001 Cri LJ 3329, in the instant case, second FIR is of course barred only in relation to same cognizable offence or same occurrence or the same incident giving rise to one or more cognizable offence wherein the present FIR has been lodged against the petitioner on the basis of altogether different occurrence and for a different offence and being FIR against another set of accused and not against the same set of accused who have been offenders in the FIR No. 217/05. In the FIR in question, the allegation against the accused is with regard to tampering with and fabrication of electronic record on the Compact Disk (CD) and which is established by Forensic Science Laboratory Report given by the FSL on 21-9-2005.

46. Thus, even in view of the Hon'ble Supreme Court as held in the case of T.T. Antony wherein Hon'ble Supreme Court has said that the officer in charge of a police station has to investigate not merely the cognizable offence reported in the FIR but also other connected offences found to have been committed in the course of the same transaction or the same occurrence and file one or more reports as provided in Section 173, Cr. P.C.

47. The petitioner strongly pleaded that the impugned FIR has been lodged against the petitioner under the influence of the sitting Cabinet Minister and alleged several mala fides against the Cabinet Minister. Not only mere assertion of the allegation but it was categorically stated that the selective targetting of "Mahaka Bharat" while other newspapers and news channels were conveniently left out as the sitting Cabinet Minister having private and personal grudge.

48. The allegations of mala fide against the Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore are liable to be rejected at the outset because the petitioner has not impleaded him as party respondent to the writ petition and without he being a party to the writ petition, no such allegations against him can be accepted as allegations of mala fide and mere assertion of mala fide allegation does not survive.

49. I am also not convinced with the submission made on behalf of the petitioner that the FIR in question is hit by Section 162, Cr. P.C. and the criminal proceedings initiated against the petitioner cannot be said to be premature as stated by the learned counsel for the petitioner.

50. As both the learned counsel for the parties have placed heavy reliance on the judgment of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of State of Haryana and others v. Bhajan Lal and others reported in AIR 1992 SC 604 : (1992 Cri LJ 527) wherein Hon'ble the Supreme Court has laid down certain tests/guidelines where the High Court may in exercise of powers under Art. 226 or u/S. 482 of Cr. P.C. may interfere in proceedings relating to cognizable offences to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice. However, power should be exercised sparingly and that too in the rarest of rare cases.

51. The points of determination which are laid down by Hon'ble the Supreme Court (sic) as under :-

1) Where the allegations made in the First Information Report or the complaint, even if they are taken at their face value and accepted in their entirety do not prima facie constitute any offence or make out a case against the accused.

2) Where the allegation in the First Information Report and other materials, if any, accompanying the FIR do not disclose a cognizable offence, justifying an investigation by police officers under S. 156 (1) of the Code except under an order of a Magistrate within the purview of S. 155 (2) of the Code.

3) Where the uncontroverted allegations made in the FIR or complaint and the evidence collected in support of the same do not disclose the commission of any offence and make out a case against the accused.

4) Where the allegations in the FIR do not constitute a cognizable offence but constitute only a non-cognizable offence, no investigation is permitted by a police officer without an order of a Magistrate as contemplated under S. 155 (2) of the Code.

5) Where the allegations made in the FIR or complaint are so absurd and inherently improbable on the basis of which no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused.

6) Where there is an express legal bar engrafted in any of he provisions of the Code or the concerned Act (under which a criminal proceeding is instituted) to the institution and continuance of the proceedings and/or where there is a specific provision in the Code or the concerned Act, providing efficacious redress for the grievance of the aggrieved party.

7) Where a criminal proceeding is manifestly attended with mala fide and/or where the proceeding is maliciously instituted with an ulterior motive for wreaking vengeance on the accused and with a view to spite him due to private and personal grudge.
Where allegations in the complaint did constitute a cognizable offence justifying registration of a case and investigation thereon and did not fall in any of the categories of cases enumerated above, calling for exercise of extraordinary powers or inherent powers, quashing of FIR was not justified.

52. Now as per the test laid down by Hon'ble the Supreme Court it is to be seen that the FIR in question constitute any cognizable offence against the petitioner or not. Bare perusal of the contents of the FIR and the factual aspect that the news which was published in the Daily Newspaper of the alleged involvement of Cabinet Minster Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore in sex orgy on 21-9-05 and during enquiry and after obtaining a copy of C.D. and the report submitted by the F.S.L. itself borne out that the C.D. is found tampered with and fabricated and thus on the basis of the report of FSL the FIR No. 21/06 registered by the Police against the petitioner and in view of the test laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Bhajan Lal, the first information report at its face value cannot be said to be false and prima facie constitute offence and make out the case against the accused.
53. Learned counsel for the respondents referred the case of Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash and others of Hon'ble Supreme Court, reported in AIR 2004 SC 4320 : (2004 Cri LJ 4219) wherein the Supreme Court has distinguished the case of T.T. Antony, 2001 Cri LJ 3329 and held that there can be no bar for lodgment of two FIRs even in respect of the same incident because different version may come by the rival parties who lodge counter cases against each other.
54. And also referred the case of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case Kari Choudhary v. Mst. Sita Devi and others, reported in 2002 (1) SCC 714 : (2002 Cri LJ 923) wherein Hon'ble the Supreme Court has held that although there cannot be two FIRs against the same accused in respect of the same case but when there are rival version in respect of the same episode, they would take the shape of two different FIRs and investigation can be carried on under both of them.
55. Hon'ble the Supreme Court further explaining the case of T.T. Antony, (2001 Cri LJ 3329) in the case reported in 2006 (1) SCC 732 : (2006 Cri LJ 964) held that a separate FIR can be lodged in respect of an independent and distinct offences and that the second

FIR could not be prohibited on the ground that some other FIR had been filed against the accused in respect of certain other allegations. It was further made clear that in the case of T.T. Antony, the second FIR in relation to same cognizable offence or same occurrence or incident and against same accused is barred not with regard to different offence and against different accused.

56. With regard to mala fide allegation against the Minister concerned, the respondent placed reliance on the judgment in the case Indian Railway Construction Co. Ltd. v. Ajay Kumar, reported in 2003 (4) SCC 579 : (AIR 2003 SC 1843) wherein Hon'ble the Supreme Court has observed as under :-

"22. Neither learned single Judge nor the Division Bench has examined the question as to practicability or otherwise of holding the enquiry in the correct perspective. They have proceeded on the footing as if the order was mala fide; even when there was no specific allegation of mala fides and without any specific person against whom mala fides were alleged being impleaded in the proceedings. Except making a bald statement regarding alleged victimization and mala fides, no specific details were given.

23. Doubtless, he who seeks to invalidate or nullify any act or order must establish the charge of bad faith, an abuse or a misuse by the authority of its powers. While the indirect motive or purpose, or bad faith or prsonal ill-will is not to be held established except on clear proof thereof, it is obviously difficult to establish the state of a man's mind, for that is what the employee has to establish in this case, though this may sometimes be done. The difficulty is not lessened when one has to establish that a person apparently acting on the legitimate exercise of power has, in fact, been acting mala fide in the sense of pursuing an illegitimate aim. It is not the law that mala fides in the sense of improper motive should be established only by direct evidence. But it must be discernible from the order impugned or must be shown from the established surrounding factors which preceded the order. If bad faith would vitiate the order, the same can, in our opinion, be deducted as a reasonable and inescapable inference from proved facts. It cannot be overlooked that the burden of establishing mala fides is very heavy on the person who alleges it. The allegations of mala fides are often more easily made than proved, and the very seriousness of such allegations demands proof of a high order of credibility. As noted by this Court in E.P. Royappa v. State of T.N., (AIR 1974 SC 555) Courts would be slow to draw dubious inferences from incomplete facts placed before it by a party, particularly when he imputations are grave and they are made against the holder of an offence which has a high responsibility in the administration."

57. And I am not convinced with the submission made on behalf of the petitioner and the allegation alleged against the police as well as against the Cabinet Minister that the police was acting under the influence of Cabinet Minister Shri Rajendra Singh Rathore and were trying to save him in order to get a pat on their back from the said Minister.

58. I am also not convinced with the submission made on behalf of the petitioner that the alleged FIR is outcome of gross mala fides on the part of the concerned Minister. and in view of the settled proposition of law, the allegation of mala fide against the Minister concerned without impleading him as party are not sustained as held by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case of Indian Railway Construction, (AIR 2003 SC 1843) (supra).

59. It is the burden on the petitioner to establish mala fide alleged against the police officials and the Minister concerned. Mere assertion of mala fide allegation would not enough and in support of such allegation specific material should be placed before the Court as held by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case "First Land Acquisition Collector and others v. Nirodhi Prakash Ganguly, reported in 2002 (4) SCC 160 : (AIR 2002 SC 1314).

60. Thus in view of the test laid down by Hon'ble the Supreme Court in the case Bhajan Lal, (1992 Cri LJ 527) and as observed hereinabove, the impugned FIR No. 21/06 cannot be said to be false at its face value and the petitioner also not able to prove the malice against the Minister concerned and police officials.

61. In view of the observations made hereinabove, the present petition is not the rarest of rares case which requires any interference while exercising extraordinary power under Article 226 of Constitution of India.

62. Thus, no interference whatsoever is required in the impugned FIR No. 21/06, dated 27-1-06 and the petitioner has utterly failed to make out any case that the FIR in question is false at its face value.

63. consequently, the writ petition fails and is hereby dismissed with no orders as to cost.

Petition dismissed.

PUBLICATION OF NEWS WITH ATTRACTIVE HEADING AMOUNTS TO DEFAMATION ,- In view of that, the imputation published in "the BRIEF" has to be viewed,- The petitioner has published that imputation as alleged by the complainant. The matter starts with heading in very big letters "the Director behind barsl" It is sure to invite anybody's attention by its nature itself. In that case the person looking to it would be gathering the impression that the aged director has gone behind the bars. Prima facie it would create a stigma to him. The petitioner has not published the remaining portion of the item in the same size of the letters. The remaining portion of the matter is in small letters.

The remaining portion of the matter is in small letters. Even that also starts with some sentences which are prima facie damaging the reputation of the aged director who has been reported to be behind bars. The said heading has been decorated with exclamation mark. That has given more strength to the impact which is likely to be created by it. The reporting of the talk ensued between the Brief spokesperson and Shri kapadia (original complainant) has been mentioned in the said news item at last but one paragraph. Before reading that paragraph one has to read paragraph 1 and paragraph 2.

WHILE considering a complaint of defamation, the Court has to consider the imputation as a whole and the prima facie impact which is likely to be created by it also. In the present case, the impact would create a prima facie case in favour of respondent Kapadia. Therefore, this Court does not find that the Trial Court has committed any error in issuing the process against the petitioner Mr. Anil Thakeraney, because the defence which the present petitioner may take, will have to undergo the process of judicial consideration. He would be obliged to make out a case that he published the said matter with due care and caution.

IT is to be noted that whoever publishes the account of a judicial proceeding, is under an obligation to publish it correctly and in a sober way. There has to be no addition to create "mirch masala" to it at the cost of the person against whom such matter has been published. But tendency of printing Court proceedings by giving pungent heading is at increasing trend. The prestige lost once cannot be restored later on and, therefore, the legislature has put alarms of caution by providing explanations, exceptions and illustrations to section 499 of the I. P. C.

Everybody has an important right to live in the society with dignity and remark slinging has been decided to be curbed out by Legislature and, therefore, section 499 has come with its faces as it is. Whoever endeavours in publishing anything against anybody has to be careful enough to see that he commits no offence and he remains well within four corners of the exceptions satisfactorily.

(1.) BOTH these applications have been mentioned in the Board as fixed for final hearing. Shri Saste is appearing for the State of Maharashtra and has been saddled with the burden of protecting the interest of the prosecution. Therefore, this Court does not wait for Shri Kapadia, the original complainant and hears these applications which are pretty old and which have obstructed the hearing of the criminal prosecutions in the Trial Court.

(2.) SHRI H. N. Vakil appearing for Shri Anil Thakeraney (original accused no. 6 mentioned in the complaint in context with Case No. 1817/s/1998)submitted that the petitioner published the true account of a criminal proceeding in his magazine "the BRIEF" and, therefore, keeping in view the exception provided to section 499 of the I. P. C. , he has not committed the offence of defamation. He submitted that the Trial Court should not have taken the cognizance of the complaint filed by respondent Kapadia and should not have issued the process against him in context with section 500 of the I. P. C. Shri Gangal submitted that his client Shri Kamath has absolutely played no role as per the allegations made in the complaint. Therefore, no cognizance should be taken against him by the Magistrate and the process should not have been Issued against him. Shri Gangal further submitted that this Court has wide powers and, therefore, when it is a case of no case at all, this Court be pleased to quash the order of issuing process against his client Shri Kamath.

(3.) 4th exception under section 499 of the I. P. C. provided that it is not defamation to publish a substantially true report of the proceedings of a court of Justice, or of the result of any such proceedings. If at all anybody has to be within four corners of the exception, he has to act reasonably and in good faith. His action must be with due caution and care. In view of that, the imputation published in "the BRIEF" has to be viewed, The petitioner has published that imputation as alleged by the complainant. The matter starts with heading in very big letters "the Director behind barsl" It is sure to invite anybody's attention by its nature itself. In that case the person looking to it would be gathering the impression that the aged director has gone behind the bars. Prima facie it would create a stigma to him. Before reading that paragraph one has to read paragraph 1 and paragraph 2.

(4.) WHILE considering a complaint of defamation, the Court has to consider the imputation as a whole and the prima facie impact which is likely to be created by it also. In the present case, the impact would create a prima facie case in favour of respondent Kapadia. Therefore, this Court does not find that the Trial Court has committed any error in issuing the process against the petitioner Mr. Anil Thakeraney, because the defence which the present petitioner may take, will have to undergo the process of judicial consideration. He would be obliged to make out a case that he published the said matter with due care and caution.

Whoever endeavours in publishing anything against anybody has to be careful enough to see that he commits no offence and he remains well within four corners of the exceptions satisfactorily. Criminal Application No. 2510 of 1999 stands dismissed.

(6.) AFTER dismissal of Criminal Application No. 2510 of 1999, this Court turns to Criminal Application No. 35 of 2000. After perusal of the complaint, as it is, no case has been made out against the said petitioner shri Kamath. The complainant is obliged to make out a case making out prima facie offence alleged to have been committed by such an accused. When a complaint is filed in the Court, the Magistrate is obliged to give judicial consideration to it before coming to the conclusion whether he should take cognizance of it and whether he should issue the process. In this case, he has failed to do so and, therefore, has landed in gross error of issuing the process against the petitioner Shri Kamath. What is illegal cannot be permitted to survive for a single moment. Therefore, process issued against the said petitioner stands quashed. He stands exonerated. He need not appear in the said Court. Mr. Anil Thakeraney to appear before the Trial Court on 17. 4. 2003 during working hours of that Court. Observations made in this judgment should not weigh at the time of trial. The stay stands vacated. Rule stands discharged.

(7.) PARTIES to act on an ordinary copy of this judgment duly authenticated by the Private Secretary of this Court.

Judgement

THOMAS, J. :- Leave granted.

2. Appellant who scored substantially in a land acquisition proceeding is now facing rough weather as he is arraigned in a criminal proceeding on account of certain documents he produced as evidence. The court which granted a quantum leap in awarding compensation to the land owners later foundthat they had used forged documents for inveigling such a bumper gain as compensation and hence the court ordered some of the claimants to face prosecution proceedings in a criminal court. The only point now canvassed by the appellant is that the court should have heard the appellant before ordering such prosecution. The said plea raised by the appellant before the High Court was repelled as per the impugned judgement. Hence this appeal by special leave.

3. An area of 3.9 acres of land was acquired by the State Government for construction of a canal under Arunwati Project in 1985. The land acquisition officer awarded a total of Rs. 24,000/- as compensation for the entire land. As the owners were not satisfied with the said award they moved for a reference under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act. The reference court (which is a civil court) on the basis of evidence adduced by the parties made a big leap by enhancing the compensation amount from Rupees twenty four thousand to Rupees ten lakhs thirty thousand, besides the other benefits such as solatium, additional compensation and interest as provided in Section 23 of the Land Acquisition Act. The reference court passed the award granting the said enhancement on 23-4-1993. Appellant was one of the beneficiaries of the said award and the enhancement was made on the basis of the evidence adduced by the parties including the appellant. Though the claimants expressed dissatisfaction even with such enhancement and moved the High Court for further enhancement the High Court dismissed the appeal filed by them in 1993.

4. In 1995, some person of the locality brought to the notice of the reference court that the claimants had wangled a whopping enhancement after playing chicanery on the Court by producing forged copies of sale deeds for supporting their claim for enhancement. The documents marked by the reference court as Exts. 31, 32 and 35 were fabricated copies of sale deeds in which the extent of the lands sold had been shown as far less than the real area transferred as per the instruments of sale, according to those persons.

5. The reference court conducted an inquiry on being told by the aforesaid applicants that the above mentioned documents are forged. The court got down the relevant records from the Sub-Registry for the purpose of examining the correctness of the aforesaid three documents and found that they were fabricated copies of the original and found that they were fabricated copies of the original sale deeds. The said court further found that appellant and one Rajkumar Anandrao Gulhane have committed offence affecting the administration of justice by using forged documents. The court then passed the following order :-

"Therefore, it is expedient in the ends of justice on my part to file the complaint in writing against them before Judicial Magistrate of First Class having jurisdiction to take appropriate and proper criminal action against them, as it appears that they have not only cheated the public at large and government but have misguided or tried to misguide my learned procedure by preparing and producing false documentary evidence as well as by giving false oral evidence just to have a wrongful gain."

6. The persons who moved the court for taking action under Section 340 of the Code Criminal Procedure (for short 'the Code') by bringing the above facts to the notice of the reference court were not satisfied as they felt that the other persons who also secured the advantage of such enhancement were also to be proceeded against. So they filed an appeal before the District Court. On 12-8-1996 the District Judge concerned ordered that the complaint shall be filed against five more persons besides the appellant and Rajkumar Ananarao Gulhane. We are told that those five persons moved the High Court and got themselves extricated from prosecution proceedings. Appellant then filed an appeal before the High Court purportedly under Section 341 of the Code in challenge of the order of the reference court which directed the filing of a criminal complaint against him. The main contention he raised before the High Court was that the reference court has overlooked the basic principles of natural justice and proceeded to make an inquiry without giving an opportunity to him to be heard in the matter and hence great prejudice had been caused to him as he had been deprived of the opportunity to be heard. Learned single judge of the High Court while repelling the above contention observed thus :-

"The procedure does not contemplate that before initiating preliminary enquiry the court ought to give notice to the person against whom it may make a complaint on completion of the preliminary enquiry and, obviously so because what is contemplated is only a preliminary enquiry, and if the court chooses to take action against the said person, it does not mean that he will not have full and adequate opportunity under Section 340(1)(b) of the Criminal Procedure Code. Therefore, the contention of the learned counsel for the appellants, that the court, before initiating any enquiry into the matter, ought to have given notice to the appellants and that the appellants have a right to be heard, cannot be accepted."

7. Shri V.A. Mohta, learned senior counsel for the appellant contended that the basic principle of natural justice is violated when the reference court ordered prosecution against the appellant without affording him an opportunity of being heard. In elaborating the said point learned senior counsel submitted that the scheme of Sections 340 to 344 of the Code contains an in-built safety for the persons sought to be proceeded against, by obliging the court to afford an opportunity of being heard to them.

8. Chapter XXVI of the Code contains provisions "as to offences affecting the administration of justice". Among the 12 sections subsumed therein we need consider only three. Section 340 consists of four sub-sections of which only the first sub-section is relevant for the purpose of this case. Hence the said sub-section is extracted below:

"When upon an application made to it in this behalf or otherwise, any court is of opinion that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be made into any offence referred to in clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 195, which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court or, as the case may be, in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in that Court, such Court may, after such preliminary inquiry, if any, as it thinks necessary,-

(a) record a finding to that effect;
(b) make a complaint thereof in writing;
(c) send it to a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction;
(d) take sufficient security for the appearance of the accused before such Magistrate, or if the alleged offence is non-bailable and the Court thinks it necessary so to do, send the accused in custody to such Magistrate; and
(e) bind over any person to appear and give evidence before such Magistrate."

9. Reading of the sub-section makes it clear that the hub of this provision is formation of an opinion by the court (before which proceedings were to be held) that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be made into an offence which appears to have been committed. In order to form such opinion the court is empowered to hold a preliminary inquiry. It is not peremptory that such preliminary inquiry should be held. Even without such preliminary inquiry the court can form such an opinion when it appears to the court that an offence has been committed in relation to a proceeding in that court. It is important to notice that even when the court forms such an opinion it is not mandatory that the court should make a complaint. This sub-section has conferred a power on the court to do so. It does not mean that the court should, as a matter of course, make a complaint. But once the court decides to do so, then the court should make a finding to the effect that on the fact situation it is expedient in the interest of justice that the offence should further be probed into. If the court finds it necessary to conduct a preliminary inquiry to reach such a finding it is always open to the court to do so, though absence of any such preliminary inquiry would not vitiate a finding reached by the court regarding its opinion. It should again be remembered that the preliminary inquiry contemplated in the sub-section is not for finding whether any particular person is guilty or not. Far from that, the purpose of preliminary inquiry, even if the court opts to conduct it, is only to decide whether it is expedient in the interest of justice to inquire into the offence which appears to have been committed.

10. "Inquiry" is defined in Section 2(g) of the Code as "every inquiry, other than a trial, conducted under this Code by a magistrate or court." It refers to the pre trial inquiry, and in the present context it means the inquiry to be conducted by the magistrate. Once the court which forms an opinion, whether it is after conducting the preliminary inquiry or not, that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be made into any offence the said court has to make a complaint in writing to the magistrate of first class concerned. As the offences involved are all falling within the purview of "warrant case" [as defined in Sec. 2 (x)] of the Code the magistrate concerned has to follow the procedure prescribed in Chapter XIX of the Code. In this context we may point out that Section 343 of the Code specifies that the magistrate to whom the complaint is made under Section 340 shall proceed to deal with the case as if it were instituted on a police report, That being the position, the magistrate on receiving the complaint shall proceed under Section 238 to Section 243 of the Code.

11. Section 238 of the Code says that the magistrate shall at the outset satisfy that copies of all the relevant documents have been supplied to the accused. Section 239 enjoins on the magistrate to consider the complaint and the documents sent with it. He may also make such examination of the accused, as he thinks necessary. Then the magistrate has to hear both the prosecution and the accused to consider whether the allegations against the accused are groundless. If he finds the allegations to be groundless he has to discharge the accused at that stage by recording his reasons thereof. Section 240 of the Code says that if the magistrate is of opinion, in the aforesaid inquiry, that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed the offence he has to frame a charge in writing against the accused. Such charge shall then be read and explained to the accused and he shall be asked whether he pleads guilty of the offence charged or not. If he pleads not guilty then the magistrate has to proceed to conduct the trial. Until then the inquiry continues before the magistrate.

12. Thus, the person against whom the complaint is made has a legal right to be heard whether he should be tried for the offence or not, but such a legal right is envisaged only when the magistrate calls the accused to appear before him. The person concerned has then the right to participate in the pre-trial inquiry envisaged in Section 239 of the Code. It is open to him to satisfy the magistrate that the allegations against him are groundless and that he is entitled to be discharged.

13. The scheme delineated above would clearly show that there is no statutory requirement to afford an opportunity of hearing to the persons against whom that court might file a complaint before the magistrate for initiating prosecution proceedings. Learned counsel for the appellant contended that even if there is no specific statutory provision for affording such an opportunity during the preliminary inquiry stage, the fact that an appeal is provided in Section 341 of the Code, to any person aggrieved by the order, is indicative of his right to participate in such preliminary inquiry.

14. Section 341 of the Code confers a power on the party on whose application the court has decided or not decided to make a complaint, as well as the party against whom it is decided to make such complaint, to file an appeal to the court to which the former court is subordinate. But the mere fact that such an appeal is provided, it is not a premise for concluding that the court is under a legal obligation to afford an opportunity (to the persons against whom the complaint would be made) to be heard prior to making the complaint. There are other provisions in the Code for reaching conclusions whether a person should be arrayed as accused in criminal proceedings or not, but in most of those proceedings there is no legal obligation cast on the court or the authorities concerned, to afford an opportunity of hearing to the would be accused. In any event appellant has already availed of the opportunity of the provisions of section 341 of the Code by filing the appeal before the High Court as stated earlier.

15. Once the prosecution proceedings commence the person against whom the accusation is made has a legal right to be heard. Such a legal protection is incorporated in the scheme of the Code. Principles of natural justice would not be hampered by not hearing the person concerned at the stage of deciding whether such person should be proceeded against or not.

16. Be it noted that the court at the stage envisaged in Section 340 of the Code is not deciding the guilt or innocence of the party against whom proceedings are to be taken before the magistrate. At that stage the court only considers whether it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be @page-CriLJ553 made into any offence affecting administration of justice. In M.S. Sheriff and anr. v. State of Madras and ors. (AIR 1954 SC 397) a Constitution Bench of this Court cautioned that no expression on the guilt or innocence of the persons should be made by the court while passing an order under Section 340 of the Code. An exercise of the court at that stage is not for finding whether any offence was committed or who committed the same. The scope is confined to see whether the court could then decide on the materials available that the matter requires inquiry by a criminal court and that it is expedient in the interest of justice to have it inquired into. 1954 CriLJ 1019

17. Learned senior counsel cited the decision of a single Judge of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in Nimmakayala Audi Narrayanamma v. State of Andhra Pradesh (AIR 1970 AP 119) in which learned Judge observed that it is just and proper that the court issues a show cause notice to the would be accused as to why they should not be prosecuted. This was said while interpreting the scope of Section 476 of the old Code of Criminal Procedure (which corresponds with Section 340 of the present Code). The following is the main reasoning of the learned single Judge :-

"The proceedings under Section 476 Criminal P.C. being judicial and criminal in nature, the interpretation that should be placed in construing the section should be just, fair, proper and equitable and must be in accordance with the principles of natural justice. By adopting such interpretation and procedure, the aggrieved party would be afforded with an adequate opportunity to show and satisfy the court that it was not in the interests of justice, to launch the prosecution and thereby avoid further proceeding. That apart, the appellate court also would be in a position to appreciate the reasons assigned in each case and would have the advantage of coming to its own conclusion without any difficulty about the justification or otherwise of launching the prosecution in a particular case. When once the prosecution had been launched, the accused will not be having an opportunity thereafter to raise the question of expediency in the interests of justice to launch the very prosecution itself. The case thereafter will have to be gone into on the merits."

18. We are unable to agree with the said view of the learned single Judge as the same was taken under the impression that a decision to order inquiry into the offence itself would prima facie amount to holding him, if not guilty, very near to a finding of this guilt. We have pointed out earlier that the purpose of conducting preliminary inquiry is not for that purpose at all. The would be accused is not necessary for the court to decide the question of expediency in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be held. We have come across decisions of some other High Courts which held the view that the persons against whom proceedings were instituted have no such right to participate in the preliminary inquiry. (vide M. Muthuswamy v. Special Police Establishment (AIR 1985 Criminal Law Journal 420)).

19. We therefore agree with the impugned judgment that appellant cannot complain that he was not heard during the preliminary inquiry conducted by the reference court under Section 340 of the Code. In the result we dismiss this appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

Order

1.Mr. S.C Pabreja has been issued a show cause notice as to why action in contempt should not be taken against him for having filed an affidavit in this court, containing a statement which is false to his knowledge, with a view to see that the court does not pass an order against the stand taken by NOIDA Authorities before this court.

2.The Facts are as follows: the dispute is regarding allotment of accommodation to 242 members of the appellant Society. Order Passed on 4-4-1991 recorded a statement on behalf of NOIDA Authorities that they would allot in either Sectors 40, 41 or 42. Due to passage of time no plots were available in Sectors 40 and 41. The question was whether plots were available in Sector 42. Whereas the appellant Society claimed that plots were still available in Sector 42, Noida Authorities 1 claimed that no plots were available in Sector 42. Noida Authorities were, therefore, directed to file an affidavit setting out whether plots were available in Sector 42. In the affidavit filed it was claimed by NOIDA Authorities that they had already allotted plots in Sector 42 to one Kendriya Karamchari Society and therefore no plots were available. This position was seriously disputed by the appellant Society. It was orally stated to the Court that the allotment in favour of that Society stood cancelled. b Therefore, NOIDA Authorities were directed to file another affidavit setting out whether or not plots were available after checking up relevant records.

3. In pursuance of this direction, Mr S.C. Pabreja filed an affidavit on 3-2-2003 wherein it is stated as follows;

"The aforesaid matter came up for hearing on 17-1-2003, in which a submissionwas made on behalf of the applicant and the respondent Society, that despite the fact that the land is still available for the construction of 242 LIG flats in Sector 42 itself, Noida Authority has filed an affidavit, saying that no land is available in the said sector.

In this view of the matter the Hon'ble Court was pleased to adjourn this case for 24-1-2003. On the said date an affidavit was submitted on behalf of Noida, saying that, the entire land of Sector 42 has already been allotted for residential and other purposes and no land is available in Sector 42.

After hearing the parties, the Hon'ble Court was of the view, that NoiDA must file a detailed affidavit, giving the names and the area allotted to each member of 'Kendriya Karamchari Society1, who have been allotted plots in Sector 42. In these circumstances the list of the said members who have been allotted plots in Sector 42 is being annexed herewith and marked as Annexure A71"

4.A list of names was also annexed to this affidavit giving an impression that plots had already been allotted in Sector 42 to so many persons.

5.Thereafter, the appellants point out, on affidavit, that the allotment in favour of this Society has already been cancelled. NOIDA Authorities were directed to state on affidavit whether that was so. Now one Mr Ashok Kumar Verma files an affidavit admitting that that allotment had been cancelled. This affidavit states that the "money has been refunded". Today it is stated that all the monies have not been refunded but in only two cases monies have been refunded.

6.It is, thus, clear that Mr S.C. Pabreja has filed an affidavit containing a false statement with a view to give a false picture to this Court i.e. no plots were available in Sector 42. This has been done with a view to see that Noida Authorities were not directed to provide a plot in Sector 42. This in spite of the fact that the affidavit was to be filed after checking up the records and ascertaining whether or not plots were in available in Sector 42. It would not be denied that Mr S.C. Pabreja had checked up the records and knew, when he filed the affidavit, that plots were available in Sector 42.

7. It has been held in Hiralal Chawla v. State of UP.1 that filing of a false affidavit amounts to contempt of court. Mr S.C. Pabreja by making a false statement on affidavit with the intention of inducing this Court not to pass any adverse orderagainst NOIDA Authorities has committed contempt of court.

8.On behalf of Mr S.C. Pabreja it was submitted that he had joined this Department only two months prior and that he was under the impression that since a writ petition was pending in the Allahabad High Court no fresh allotment could be made in favour of the appellant Society. To be noted that in Mr S.C. Pabreja's affidavit there is no mention of any pending writ petition. Mr S.C. Pabreja does not even point out that the allotment in favour of that Society already stood cancelled. On the contrary the impression sought to be given to the Court is that allotment in favour of the persons whose names are mentioned in the list annexed to that affidavit still stands. Mr Pabreja has clearly stated that no plots were available. This is a false statement to his knowledge. We are not satisfied with the explanation. We, therefore, hold that Mr Pabreja has committed contempt of this Court's order.

9. It is submitted that apology has already been tendered and apology should be accepted. It is submitted that in any event a fine would be sufficient. In our view, the apology tendered in this case is worthless. It is tendered after it was found that false statement was made on oath. On his own Mr S.C. Pabreja did not point out to this Court that a wrong statement had been made in that affidavit. The affidavit which was to be filed was to state the correct position after checking up whether plots were available in Sector 42. It was admitted that Mr Pabreja had checked up and was aware that plots were not available in Sector 42. Yet he chose to make a false statement in order to support NoiDA Authorities' stand that no plots were available in Sector 42. Under these circumstances the apology now tendered is only an attempt to get out of consequences of having been caught.

10. Reliance is placed on Radha Mohan Lai v. Rajasthan High Court (Jaipur Bench)2 wherein in para 6 it is held as follows: (SCC p. 430)

"6. Having regard to the aforesaid facts, it appears that although the apology has been tendered after the appellant had been found guilty of contempt of court and after the High Court had inflicted the imprisonment on him but still the apology seems to be sincere and not to ward off the punishment. We accept the contention of Mr Dhankhar that the apology here is evidence of real contrition as also of his consciousness of wrong done by him. In M. Y. Shareefv. Hon 'ble Judges of Nagpur High Court31 a Constitution Bench of this Court accepted the apology that was tendered before thisCourt for the first time.

11.In that case the court accepted that the apology was sincere and that it was not tendered to ward off punishment . The court accepted the apology as evidence of real contrite as also of his consciousness of the wrong done by him.We are no satisfied that the apology tendered in this case is genuine or bona fide. We do not see any reason for accepting such an apology. We, therefore, sentence Mr S.C. Pabreja 10 simple imprisonment for a period of one week under section 12 of the contempt of courts Act, 1971.He shall immediately be taken into custody and remanded to Tihar Jail for Undergoing sentence.

Judgement

ORDER :- This appeal under Section 341, Cr.P.C. is directed against the order dated 11-4-1996 passed by the Additional District Judge, Delhi under Section 340, C.P.C. directing prosecution of the appellant for the offence under Section 193, Cr.P.C.

2. Briefly stated, facts giving rise to this appeal are that on 24-10-1986 the appellant filed a false affidavit in the case RCS No. 158/90 (M/s. A-One India Industries v. D.P. Garg and Co.), pending on the file of the Additional District Judge, Delhi stating therein that by the orders dated 22-10-1986 passed by this Court in RFA No. 199/86, operation of the order dated 29-9-1986 passed by the Additional District Judge had been stayed. On 25-10-

1986, on inspection of the record of case RFA No. 199/86 by the respondent D.P. Garg, it was discovered that no such stay order as mentioned in the said affidavit was granted by this Court. Respondent, therefore, filed an application under Section 340, Cr.P.C. before the Additional District Judge for initiating appropriate proceedings against the appellant. By the impugned order, the Additional District Judge directed prosecution of the appellant for the offence punishable under Section 193, I.P.C. Hence this appeal.

3. It is an admitted position that on 24-10-1986, the appellant had filed his affidavit before the Additional District Judge, Delhi containing the following statement.

"That the Hon'ble High Court of Delhi has been pleased to stay the operation of order dated 29-9-1986 passed by the Hon'ble Court in R.F.A. No. 199/86 dated 22-10-1986. The said order has been passed by Hon'ble Mr. Justice C.L. Choudhary. The said case in the High Court is now fixed for 12-11-1986."

4. It is also undisputed that no such stay order as mentioned in the said affidavit was granted by this Court in RFA No. 199/86. Thus it becomes clear that on 24-10-1986, the appellant had filed a false affidavit in a judicial proceedings pending before the Additional District Judge, Delhi. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the said affidavit was filed under a bona fide mistake. It needs to be highlighted that filing a false affidavit or giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding is a serious matter. In this connection I may usefully excerpt the following observations of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in Dhananjay Sharma v. State of Haryana (1995) 4 JT (SC) 483 : (AIR 1995 SC 795) :-

"..... Filing of false affidavits or making false statement on oath in Court aims at striking a blow at the Rule of Law and no Court can ignore such conduct which has the tendency to shake public confidence in the judicial institution because the very structure of an ordered life is put at stake. It would be a great public disaster if the fountain of justice is allowed to be poisoned by anyone reporting to filing of false affidavits or giving of false statements and fabricating false evidence in a Court of law. The stream of justice has to be kept clear and pure and anyone soiling its purity must be dealt with sternly so that no one can be permitted to undermine the dignity of the Court and interfere with due course of judicial proceedings or the administration of justice."

5. Whether action in such matters should be taken under Section 95, Cr.P.C. is a matter primarily for the Court which hears the application, and its discretion is not to be lightly interfered with an appeal. In the instant case, the material on record clearly makes out a case under Section 193, IPC against the appellant. The order dated 18-11-1996 passed by the learned Metropolitan Magistrate shows that a charge under Section 193, IPC has already been framed against the appellant. At this stage the Court cannot examine the defence of the appellant and record a finding thereon. In my opinion, the impugned order of the learned Additional District Judge does not suffer from any legal infirmity.

6. In the result, the appeal is dismissed.

Judgement

ORDER :- Petitioner, Devinder Mohan -akhmi, seeks quashing of order dated 2-4-2002 (Annexure P-4) passed by Civil Judge (Junior Division), Amritsar, on an application filed by him under Section 340 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (hereinafter referred to as the Code).

2. The facts have to be noticed briefly in order to focus the controversy raised in the present petition.

3. Petitioner had filed suit for mandatory injunction seeking directions against the Amritsar Improvement Trust, Amritsar, through its Chairman (respondent No. 1) and others to allot alternative plot in lieu of plot No. 2564 which was earlier allotted to the petitioner on 16-9-1997 in pursuance to the order passed by this Court as the plot so allotted, was located in a low lying area and it was not possible for the petitioner to carry out any construction on the same. It was also alleged by the petitioner in the suit that a number of other vacant plots were available with the respondent - Improvement Trust at Ranjit Avenue, Amritsar but in the reply filed by respondent No. 1, controverting the stand of the petitioner, the availability of plots was denied.

4. During the pendency of the suit, an application under Order XXXIX, rules 1 and 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure was filed by the petitioner on which the trial Court had directed respondent No. 1 to file an affidavit of the competent Authority to specify that no vacant plot measuring 150 sq. yards was available in Block "B and E" of Ranjit Avenue, Amritsar, Parkash Singh, respondent No. 2, who is posted as Senior Assistant in the office of respondent - Trust filed affidavit dated 23-12-1998 before the trial Court stating therein that no plot measuring 150 sq. yards was available in Blocks B and E in Ranjit Avenue, Amritsar. Thereafter, the petitioner filed an application under Order XI,

Rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to seek direction to respondent No. 1 to produce the allotment Register relating to Block B and E in Ranjit Avenue, Amritsar, which was allowed by the Court. During inspection of the register, the petitioner detected that bogus and fictitious allotments were shown by respondent No. 1 in order to deny the claim of the petitioner. His enquiry disclosed that some vacant plots were available as on 16-7-1999 which was in contradiction to averments made in affidavit dated 23-12-1998. With this back-ground, on 30-7-1999 the petitioner filed an application under Section 340 of the Code for taking action against respondent No. 2 for having committed offence referred to in clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 195 of the Code. Upon this, a preliminary enquiry was conducted by the trial Court in terms of requirement of Section 340 of the Code. Petitioner himself appeared as a witness and thereafter closed his evidence on 29-10-2001 whereafter the trial Court adjourned the application for consideration for 22-11-2001 which was again adjourned to 14-12-2001. Thereafter, written arguments were filed by the petitioner and the matter was adjourned to 4-1-2002. On 4-1-2002, respondents filed an application under Section 195 of the Code for permission to adduce evidence which was allowed by the Civil Judge (Junior Division), Amritsar, as per order dated 2-4-2002. It is this order which has been assailed in the present petition.

5. Notice of the petition was given to the respondents. No one has put in appearance on their behalf.

6. I have heard learned counsel for the petitioner at length.

7. Learned counsel for the petitioner has vehemently contended before me that during the course of preliminary enquiry proceedings in terms of Section 340 of the Code, respondents have no right to participate and adduce evidence and the prayer made by the respondents in this regard allowed by the Civil Judge (Junior Division), Amritsar, as per order dated 2-4-2002 is wholly unjustified and not tenable in law. He placed reliance on the observations made in case Madan Lal Sharma v. Punjab and Haryana High Court through its Registrar, 2000 (1) Rec Cri R 592 : (2000 Cri LJ 1512) wherein it was laid down that no hearing is required to be given to the accused before filing of the complaint because the accused can raise all defences before the Magistrate when the complaint is filed. Further reference was made to observations of the Apex Court in Pritish v. State of Maharashtra, 2002 (1) Rec Cri R 92 : (2002 Cri LJ 548) wherein it was observed in paras 9 and 10 as under :-

"9. Reading of the sub-section makes it clear that the hub of this provision is formation of an opinion by the Court (before which proceedings were to be held) that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be made into an offence which appears to have been committed. In order to form such opinion the Court is empowered to hold a preliminary inquiry. It is not peremptory that such preliminary inquiry should be held. Even without such preliminary inquiry the Court can form such an opinion when it appears to the Court that an offence has been committed in relation to a proceeding in that Court. It is important to notice that even when the court forms such an opinion it is not mandatory that the Court should make a complaint. This sub-section has conferred a power on the Court to do so. It does not mean that the Court should, as a matter of course, make a complaint. But once the Court decides to do so, then the Court should make a finding to the effect that on the fact situation it is expedient in the interest of justice that the offence should further be probed into. If the Court finds it necessary to conduct a preliminary inquiry to reach such a finding it is always open to the Court to do so, though absence of any such preliminary inquiry would not vitiate a finding reached by the Court regarding its opinion. It should again be remembered that the preliminary inquiry contemplated in the sub-section is not for finding whether any particular person is guilty or not. Far from that, the purpose of preliminary inquiry, even if the Court opts to conduct it, is only to decide whether it is expedient in the interest of justice to inquire into the offence which appears to have been committed.

10. "Inquiry" is defined in Section 2(g) of the Code as "every inquiry, other than a trial, conducted under this Code by a magistrate or Court." It refers to the pre-trial inquiry, and in the present context it means the inquiry to be conducted by the Magistrate. Once the court which forms an opinion, whether it is after conducting the preliminary inquiry or not, that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be made into any offence the said Court has to make a complaint in writing to the Magistrate of first class concerned. As the offences involved are all falling within the purview of "warrant case" (as defined in Section 2(x)) of the Code the Magistrate concerned has to follow the procedure prescribed in Chapter XIX of the Code. In this context we may point out that Section 343 of the Code specifies that the Magistrate to whom the complaint is made under Section 340 shall proceed to deal with the case as if it were instituted on a police report, that being the position, the Magistrate on receiving the complaint shall proceed under Section 238 to Section 243 of the Code."

The entertainment of the application of respondents by the trial Court in order to enable them to produce evidence in defence, as such was against the mandate of law. The findings of the trial Court that the provisions of Section 340 of the Code do not propose to shut down all gates for the respondents to place their case before the Court and these provisions are only directive in nature, as such cannot be accepted in the face of the dictum of law laid down in the above-mentioned cases. Manifestly, the trial Judge has committed a patent error in passing order dated 2-4-2002 and for that reason, the same cannot be sustained.

For the foregoing reasons, the petition is allowed and order dated 2-4-2002 set aside.

Petition allowed.

Criminal Application 1115 of 2007 Of Jul 11,2007

==========

Criminal P.C. Sec. 340, 341 – Filing of false affidavit in civil suit – Proceeding under Sec. 340 of Cri. P.C. – The main civil suit was at the end stage and fixed for final arguments held Merely because civil suit was pending that did not prevent the civil Judge from entering in to an enquiry - The Civil Judge should register such application as Miscellaneous Judicial case and then proceed to decide the application according to the provisions of Sec. 340 of Cr. P.C. – Civil suit and application under section 340 of Cr. P.C. has to be decided independently.

(1.) RULE. Heard Finally with consent of parties.

(2.) THIS petition under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal procedure seeks to quash the order passed by Civil Judge (Jr. Dn.) and the Sessions Judge on an application under Section 340 of Code of criminal Procedure and appeal thereon under Section 341 of Code of criminal Procedure.

(3.) A few facts may be stated thus -The petitioner had filed Civil Suit against the non-applicant for injunction and other reliefs. In the said civil suit, it is alleged that the respondent had filed an affidavit in which the petitioner claims that the respondent has made patently false statement. The petitioner, therefore, filed an application purporting to be an application under Section 340 of Code of Criminal Procedure. As said earlier, it is the contention of the petitioner that respondent had made a false statement on oath in the affidavit as regards the height of the compound wall constructed by the respondent. It appears that the petitioner's contention is that respondent while answering to the allegations in para no. 6 of the plaint had undertaken not to increase the height of wall beyond 7 feet even though sanction was given by the Municipal Corporation for construction of a wall of having height of 2 meters equivalent to 6 ft. 6 inches. The petitioner's grievance is that how could defendant/respondent on oath say that he will not increase the height above 7 feet when Corporation has granted sanction for 6. 6 ft. and this amounts to making false statement on oath.

(4.) THE learned Civil Judge rejected the application saying that the evidence of both sids is closed and matter is fixed for arguments and in such circumstances it would not be appropriate to hold separate enquiry and give a finding which may even cause prejudice to both the parties. Holding so, he rejected the application.

(5.) THE learned Sessions Judge concurred with the Civil Judge and dismissed the appeal.

(6.) I have heard the petitioner-in-person and the learned counsel for the non-applicant.

(7.) WHENEVER an application under Section 340 of Code of criminal Procedure is filed, the Civil Manual Chapter XIX para 337 requires that it should be registered as Miscellaneous Judicial Case i. e. a case where a Judicial Enquiry is contemplated. The learned Civil judge should have, therefore, directed the application to be registered as Miscellaneous Judicial Case. Section 340 of Code of Criminal procedure reads thus -340. Procedure in cases mentioned in Section 195

(1) When upon an application made to it in this behalf or otherwise any Court is of opinion that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an inquiry should be made into any offence referred to in clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 195, which appears to have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in that Court or, as the case may be, in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in that Court, such Court may, after such preliminary inquiry, if any, as it thinks necessary, -

(a) record a finding to that effect ; (b) make a complaint thereof in writing; (c) send it to a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction;

(d) take sufficient security for the appearance for the accused before such Magistrate, or if the alleged offence is non-bailable and the Court thinks it necessary so to do send the accused in custody to such Magistrate ; and

(e) bind over any person to appear and give evidence before such Magistrate. (2) The power conferred on a Court by subsection (1) in respect of an offence may, in any case where that Court has neither made a complaint under sub-section (1) in respect of that offence nor rejected an application for the making of such complaint, be exercised by the court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of sub-section (4) of Section 195.

(3) A complaint made under this section shall be signed,- (a) Where the Court making the complaint is a High court, by such officer of the Court as the Court may appoint;

(b) in any other case, by the presiding officer of the court or by such officer of the Court as the Court may authorize in writing in this behalf.

(4) In this section, ?court? has the same meaning as in Section 195.

(8.) THE section thus says that the court should be of opinion that an enquiry should be held. Even for forming an opinion, there should be some evidence and not mere surmises. If there is a prima facie evidence, the court must enter into an enquiry and record a finding as to whether an offence referred to in Section 195 of Code of criminal Procedure is committed. It was, therefore, not proper on part of Judges of the lower courts to have rejected the application. The learned Civil Judge should have, in fact, upon consideration of the application, decided whether it was necessary to hold the enquiry and if found necessary should have held an enquiry. Merely because civil suit was pending, that did not prevent and could not prevent the civil Judge from entering into an enquiry. I would, therefore, set aside both the orders and direct the civil judge to register Exh. 52 as miscellaneous Judicial Case and then proceed to decide the application according to the provisions contained in Section 340 of code of Criminal Procedure. Pendency of this application shall not be and cannot be a constraint on the Civil Judge in deciding the Civil suit on merits. The civil judge may proceed to decide the suit and may also proceed to decide the application under Section 340 of Code of criminal Procedure separately. The application under Section 482 of code of Criminal procedure is thus disposed of in the above terms.

JUDGEMENT

(1.) THIS petition filed under Article 227 of the constitution read with Section 482 of Cr. P. C. prays for quashing the proceedings in Criminal Case No. 15/i and R. /1998 presently pending before the Additional chief Metropolitan Magistrate, 9th Court, Bandra, bombay and to quash and set aside the order dated 7/9/2000 made on the Remand Application No. 184/ra/2000 and the order dated 23/9/1999 passed by the learned additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate.

(2.) THE facts leading to this case and which are not in dispute are that, one Mrs. Serah Henriques was the owner of the property situated at 171, St. Martin?s Road, Bandra, Bombay 400 050, where she was residing with her six sons and one daughter and in addition there were four tenants, one of whom was one mrs. May Rodrigues much before 1950 and she was residing with her nephew Mr. Wallace Hayden, the present petitioner no. 1. The daughter of Mrs. Serah henriques, the present petitioner no. 2, married the petitioner no. 1 in 1961 and petitioner nos. 3,4 and 5 are the sons from the said marriage. The petitioners continued to stay in the tenanted premises occupied by mrs. May Rodrigues. On getting to know the news that the landlady was negotiating with the builder to develop the property Mrs. May Rodrigues sent a legal notice to the landlady in June 1972 and filed RAD Suit no. 5129 of 1972 in the Small Causes Court at Bombay sometimes in August 1972 and joined all the sons of the landlady, including the present respondent no. 3 and the partners of the construction firm by name M/s. Nanavati Construction. Ex parte decree came to be passed in favour of the tenant on 19/10/1973 declaring her to be a tenant and in addition permanent injunction from demolishing the tenanted premises against the builder and the landlady was also granted. The tenant expired in 1981 and the landlady accepted the present petitioner no. 1 as the tenant and issued rent receipts from 1981 to 1985. The partners of M/s. Nanavati Construction filed suit bearing No. 1403 of 1975 for specific performance of agreement to sell against the landlady and her sons and the said suit was decreed and on 9/8/1995 Minutes before the prothonotary of this court in HC - Suit No. 1403 of 1975 were signed. Sometimes in April 1990 the petitioner no. 1 filed RAD Suit No. 2693 of 1990 in the small Causes Court seeking permanent injunction from demolition of the tenanted premises, even though the earlier order of permanent injunction in RAD Suit no. 5129/1972 at the instance of the original tenant was already in operation. On 10/8/1993 order of injunction was passed in RAD Suit No. 2693 of 1990 and the challenge to the same in Appeal No. 150 of 1994 was unsuccessful. Writ Petition No. 663 of 1995 was filed by the Nanavati Builders on 20/3/1995 and prior to this on 10/8/1993 the present respondent no. 3 who was defendant no. 3 in RAD Suit No. 2693 of 1990 made an application to the Small Causes Court for sending the original rent receipts to handwriting expert as according to him those rent receipts were forged. The said application was rejected holding that the documents could be sent to handwriting expert after defendants filed their Written Statement and the issue can be decided during the trial of the suit. An application came to be filed before this court seeking directions to produce the original rent receipts and the said application was rejected. On 17/4/1998 private complaint No. 15/ir/98 came to be filed by the present respondent no. 3 against the Bandra Police for investigation of alleged forgery of rent receipts produced in the Small Causes Court. Investigation was carried out by the Inspector of Bandra Police Station and he submitted his report under Section 156 (3) of cr. P. C. The complainant made an application in the small Causes Court on 14/2/2000 praying to allow the police to take inspection by Expert of the disputed rent receipts and while all these proceedings were pending, the petitioner no. 1 came to be arrested by the Bandra Police Station on 9/7/2000 and was subsequently released on conditional bail on the same day.

(3.) IN his order dated 10/8/1993 the learned Judge of the Small Causes Court stated that admittedly the plaintiff-tenant had produced rent receipts on record in Injunction No. No. 122 of 1990 which were purported to be issued by the landlady and photostat copies of those receipts were supplied to the defendants. As per the provisions of the C. P. C. the court can direct the plaintiff to supply copies of the documents on which he has placed reliance to the other side and that was already done by the plaintiff. In case the defendants had any doubts about the veracity of these receipts, they could raise that point in their Written statement and could very well agitate the same at the time of hearing of the suit. The learned Judge further observed that the defendants were at liberty to convince the court that the signatures on the rent receipts were forged.

(4.) WHEN the veracity of the rent receipts was doubtful, as per the defendants, they were not prevented from making an application to the Small causes Court during the course of the trial of the suit to forward the rent receipts to the handwriting expert so as to obtain his opinion and on submission of the opinion either way, both the parties were at liberty to examine the handwriting expert. Thus the issue regarding the signature of the landlady on the subject rent receipts and its genuineness could have been decided by the Small Causes Court during the trial of the suit in which these receipts were brought on record. It was most unwarranted for the present respondent no. 3 to approach the larned Metropolitan magistrate with a criminal complaint for the offences punishable under Sections 467 to 469, 471 and 420 read with Section 34 of IPC when the issue of the authenticity of the rent receipts was also subjudice before the Small Causes Court. The respondent no. 3 abused the process of law by filing a private complaint before the learned Metropolitan Magistrate, 9th Court, Bandra, Bombay for the very same purpose and even otherwise the issue, whether the rent receipts were signed by the landlady or not has to be proved by the handwriting expert and not by the police. The criminal complaint was aimed at harassing the petitioners-tenants and to make them rush from pillar to post. By way of interim relief granted by this court on 29/9/2000 the trial of the complaint has been stayed and the trial of the complaint, if allowed, is bound to result in duplication of the same action which the Small Causes Court is competent to take for verification of the signatures of the landlady on the rent receipts.

(5.) HENCE, the petition succeeds and the same is hereby allowed partly. Rule is made absolute in terms of prayer clause (b), (c) and (cc). Writ to go forthwith.

Criminal P.C. P.C. (Para 16)

Section 476, Cr. P.C. is conceived in the interests of the public and unless complaints are made against parties or witnesses who are proved to be forgers or perjurers in time, the growing evil of the impunity with which documents are got up and false evidence secured to support false and frivolous claims or to defeat genuine ones, cannot be controlled or eradicated. This cannot be done if the appellate Court suspends the operation of the order of a subordinate Court directing the filing of a complaint as a matter of course when an appeal is filed by a party against that order. It is necessary that the appellate Court should scrutinise the facts of the case with care and give stay only if it is convinced that there is an arguable case for the appellant. (Para 17)

Judgement

K. SUBBA RAO, C. J. :- This is a plaintiff's appeal against the decree and judgment of the Court of the District Judge, Anantapur, in O.S. No. 6 of 1951, a suit filed by the appellant to recover a sum of Rs. 29,264-9-3 from the defendants.

2. The defendants are the partners of a firm carrying on business under the name and style of "S. Lakshminarayana Chetti, V. Hanumantbayya Chetti, Thimmaneherla." The plaintiff is a businessman residing at the same place. The plaintiff's case is that the 1st defendant, on behalf of the firm, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff on 19-7-1947 to buy 2000 bags of coriander seeds, each bag containing 40 seers at Rs. 28-10-0 per bag and to take delivery of the same on or before 30-10-1947. Alleging that the defendants denied that they entered into any such contract with the plaintiff, the plaintiff filed the aforesaid suit for recovery of damages being the difference between the contract rate and the market rate.

3. The defendants denied that they entered into any agreement with the plaintiff either on 19-7-1947 or on any subsequent date to buy 2000 bags or any quantity whatsoever of coriander seeds or any other goods.

4. The learned District Judge, on a consideration of the entire evidence placed before him, came to the conclusion that the defendants did not enter into the alleged contract with the plaintiff. On that finding, the suit was dismissed. Hence, the appeal.

5. The only question in this appeal is whether the defendants entered into a contract with the plaintiff on 19-7-1947 to buy 2000 bags of coriander seeds. Ex. A-1 is the alleged contract. It purports to be a contract form of the defendants firm duly filled up embodying the terms of the suit contract. Appended to the document are the signatures of the 1st defendant as a buyer and the plaintiff, as a seller.

It is dated 19-7-1947, P.W. 1, the plaintiff, says that the document was written by some clerk of the defendants' firm and was signed by the 1st defendant. The 1st defendant as D.W. 2 denies that he executed Ex. A-1 and states that the handwriting is not that of his clerk. The clerk, who is alleged to have written this document, has not been examined.

The evidence of the plaintiff and that of the 1st defendant discloses that they were on bad terms during the crucial period and that there was also litigation between them which was taken up to the High Court. The evidence of P.W. 1, who is obviously an interested witness, cannot, therefore, be accepted unless ft is corroborated by other evidence or supported by convincing and probabilising circumstances.

6. Ex. B-2 is one of the admitted forms of contracts maintained by the defendants. A comparison of the ink and print found in Exs. A-1 and B-2 indicates that Ex. A-1 is not one of the forms printed by the defendants for their use. There is obvious difference in the ink used and print in both the forms. While Ex. B-2 shows a clear perforation at the top indicating that it was removed from the contract form book, Ex. A-1 does not disclose a clear perforation but only a clumsy attempt to make it appear that there is such perforation.

7. A comparison of the signature of the 1st defendant in Ex. A-1 with those found in Exs. B-4 to B-10 brings out the clear differences between the two. While the admitted signatures are in a free and flowing hand, the disputed one appears to be a laboured and constrained one. D.W. 2 says that in his signature ordinarily there will be spacing between the first two letters and the third letter and that the final two letters are written one over the other.

In the admitted signature, the first two letters are written over one another and there is spacing between the 2nd letter and the 3rd letter whereas it is not so in the case of the disputed signature. In this case, we have not had the advantage of a Handwriting Expert scrutinising the signatures and giving his opinion on the genuineness or otherwise of the disputed signature. This is certainly one of those cases where Expert evidence would have been of great use.

But, for one reason or other that was not done in the Court below. The learned Counsel for the appellant suggests that the document may now be sent to an Expert but we think the request is rather too late for the suit is of the year 1950 and six years have passed by. The appellant also filed an application for admission of other documents containing 1st defendant's signatures for comparison. It is alleged in the affidavit filed in support of the petition that the said documents were sent to the High Court in Appeal No. 812 of 1948, and, after the appeal was disposed of, they had been returned to the District Court, Anantapur and they were still there.

But that appeal was disposed of in February 1951, whereas the suit, out of which this appeal arises, was dismissed on 25-2-1952 and the plaintiff had every opportunity to file the documents in the District Court if he had intended to use them for the purpose of comparison. There are no grounds for admitting the fresh documents sought to be filed in this case.

No doubt, a comparison of the signatures without the help of an Expert may not afford a conclusive test in the case of expert forgers. But, in this case, the disputed signature appears to belong to a class different from the group of admitted signatures. It is not as if the admitted signatures were scribbled on some unimportant papers but they were all affixed to promissory notes wherein the 1st defendant was undertaking a liability.

Therefore, the easy flow of the admitted signatures cannot be explained away by stating that in Ex. A-1 the 1st defendant was putting his signature to a solemn document whereas in the other documents he was scribbling away an unimportant document. A comparative study of the signatures in this case certainly supports the case of the def endants.

8. Learned counsel strongly relies upon Ex. A-4, a letter dated 25-10-1947 alleged to have been written By the 1st defendant to the plaintiff in reply to a demand made by him in Ex. A-2 dated 24-10-1947 wherein the 1st defendant intimated to him that, as soon as Sarabhayya came to the village, he would come and take delivery of the goods. This letter, it is said, was received by the plaintiff in an envelope Ex. A-5 with the seal of Thimmancherla dated 26-10-1947.

If this letter was genuine, it would establish the plaintiff's case for it contains a clear admission of the existence of the contract. D.W. 2 denies that he had written any such letter. Ex. A-4 is written on a bill form used by the defendants' firm. D.W. 2 has produced a book containing duplicate copies of the bills of his firm. Ex. A-4, as the learned District Judge points out, fits in with this book. It admittedly contains the initials of the 1st defendant.

A scrutiny of Ex. A-4 discloses that some writing originally written was effaced and the contents of Ex. A-4 were engrossed thereon above the signature. The first question that occurs to one's mind is whether a reply to a demand under Ex. A-2 would have been written on a bill form when the defendants must have had letter headings of their own and that too not signed but initialled by the 1st defendant. The defendants on 27-10-1947 gave a reply Ex. A-2 through their advocate Sri G. Nagi Reddi, Goory.

In that notice, the defendants denied in specific terms that they entered into any contract with the plaintiff for the purchase of coriander. They also alleged that, for the reason that they had obtained a decree against the plaintiff in the District Court, Anantapur, the plaintiff had concocted matters and written a letter in the manner he did.

If really on 25-10-1947 the 1st defendant had admitted the existence of the suit contract, is it likely that, two days thereafter, he would have issued a reply notice denying the existence of such a contract and attributing forgery to the plaintiff for such a belated denial after the clear admission in Ex. A-4 would not have served the defendants' purpose. That apart, the plaintiff sent two telegrams to the defendants dated 29-10-1947 and 30-10-1947 and also a notice Ex. A-10 dated 17-12-1947 through his advocate Sri D.L. Chetti.

If really the defendants admitted the contract in Ex. A-4 and denied it in Ex. A-6, is it likely that the plaintiff would not have mentioned in the telegrams or, at any rate, in the letter dated 17-12-1947 the fact that at the earliest moment he admitted the contract. Even in the plaint no mention was made of Ex. A-4. It is inconceivable that, if there was a document like Ex. A-4 admitting the contract and if that fact was mentioned to the plaintiff's advocate, he would not have prominently stated in the plaint that the defendant was denying the contract notwithstanding the fact that he admitted it as early as 25-10-1947.

The only explanation for this omission the plaintiff can offer in his evidence is that he did not show Ex. A-4 to his advocate at the time he issued the notice Ex. A-10. This is one of those hackneyed explanations witnesses offer when driven to a corner. The explanation is too thin for acceptance. The fact that Ex. A-5, a postal cover addressed to the plaintiff dated 26-10-1947 was produced is not of much consequence.

Both the persons belong to the village of Thimmancherla and the plaintiff, who forged Ex. A-4 could have easily put that letter in Ex. A-5 addressed it to himself and posted it We have no doubt that the plaintiff secured some used bill issued by the defendants and, after erasing the contents, engrossed the reply notice over the initials of the 1st defendant.

9. There are also many circumstances in this case which improbabiblise the existence of any such contract between the parties. The defendants filed O.S. No. 48 of 1946 against the plaintiff for recovering damages to the extent of Rs. 6,000/- in connection with some other contract. The plaintiff, in his turn, filed another suit against the defendants for a sum of Rs. 19,000/- on the basis of some alleged oral contract entered into by the defendants with him.

The District Court decreed the suit filed by the defendants in part and dismissed the suit filed by the plaintiff. The defendants filed an appeal to the High Court against the decree of the Sub Court, in so far as it disallowed their claim, while the plaintiff preferred cross-objections. Pending the appeal, when the defendants sought to execute the decree, the plaintiff filed an application in July 1947 praying for six months time. The defendants were given notice that the said application would be heard on 26-7-1947.

While the plaintiff says that a friendly order was made in that application granting time, the 1st defendant says that notwithstanding the fact that he opposed the application, the Court gave time as the plaintiff deposited a sum of Rs. 1,000/-. In view of the fact that the appeal was pending and the parties were keenly contesting the same, it is not likely that the defendants would have agreed for giving additional time to the plaintiff.

It is more likely that the Court, in view of the part payment made by the plaintiff, granted time. The suit contract was alleged to have been entered into between the parties on 19-7-1947 just a week before the application praying for time came up for hearing and when the appeal was pending in the High Court. It is very improbable that the defendants would have entered into a contract with the plaintiff during the period when they were seriously fighting in respect of other contracts alleged to have been entered into between them.

10. Secondly, there is clear evidence in this case that, during the period the defendants are alleged to have entered into a contract with the plaintiff, there was a downward trend in the market for coriander. Ex. B-11, the account book kept by the firm of Vallamkonda Adeppa and produced by D.W. 1 shows that the market rates for coriander was ranging between Rs. 21/- and Rs. 22/- during the period commencing from 27-2-1947 and ending with 2-11-1947.

On the side of the plaintiff P.W. 2 was examined to establish that on 18-7-1947 the price of coriander had risen upto Rs. 30/- Exs. A-15 and A-1S dated 18-7-1947 are the entries in the account book produced by P.W. 2. The book purports to relate to the firm of Golla Narayanappa in Thimmancherla. The entries do not give any particulars of the persons from whom the coriander was purchased or to whom it was sold.

They do not contain the seals of the Income-tax Officer or the Sales Tax Officer. The said items are also not in the hand-writing of P.W. 2. The items, therefore, are not proved and the evidence of P.W. 2 in the circumstances cannot be accepted, particularly when Ex. B-11, the account book of another firm, shows that, during a period of nine months, the price of coriander did not exceed the rate of Rs. 24/- per bag. It is, therefore clear to our mind that the defendants who are businessmen would not have entered into a contract with the plaintiff at such a high rate when there-was a downward trend in the market for coriander.

11. Further, there is also the evidence of D.W. 2 to the effect that the defendant' firm ceased to do any active business and that they did not wind up the business only because of the pendency of the aforesaid suits. There is no reason to disbelieve the evidence of D.W. 2. We, therefore, hold, on a consideration of the oral and documentary evidence and the probabilities in the case, that thy plaintiff has failed to establish that the defendants entered into the suit contract with him.

12. It is then contended that the learned Judge went wrong in awarding maximum compensatory costs the defendant, namely, Rs. 1000/-. We think, having regard to the glaring forgery committed by the plaintiff in this case presumably to wreck his vengeance upon the defendants, the learned Judge was certainly justified in exercising his power under Section 35A(1)(2), C.P.C. and awarding maximum costs to the defendants. This is a typical example of false and vexatious claims, for which compensatory costs are provided under Section 35 A.C.P.C.

13. In the result, we dismiss the appeal with costs. In our view, the respondents should also be given compensatory costs. Notwithstanding the clear findings of the District Judge, the appellant persisted in his false claim for four long years and put the respondents to unnecessary trouble and expense. We fix the compensatory costs at Rs. 1000/-.

14. C.M.P. No. 1677 of 1955 : There are no grounds for admitting fresh evidence at this very late stage. The appellant could, with some diligence, have filed all the documents now sought to be admitted here in the first court itself. The application is dismissed.

15. C.M.P. No. 1678 of 1955 : Dismissed.

16. C.M.A. No. 270 of 1952 : This is an appeal against the order of the District Judge, Anantapur, directing a complaint to be filed against the plaintiff under Ss. 209, 467 and 471, I.P.C. We have found, agreeing with the learned District Judge, that the appellant had committed acts of deliberate forgery by concocting Exs. A-1 and A-4 in support of his claim. The plaintiff forged the said documents to support his claim for a large amount of Rs. 29,264-9-3.

Such a person is obviously a danger to society and this is a typical case where the Court should file a complaint under S. 476, Cr. P.C. The learned District Judge has rightly exercised his discretion and made the complaint. But, unfortunately, the above appeal was filed against that order and the High Court stayed the operation of the order with the result that four years have passed by from the date of the order of the learned Judge and 9 years from the date the forgery was committed.

The question is whether it is expedient in the interests of justice that an enquiry should be made into the offence within the meaning of S. 476(1), Cr. P.C. We think, that in view of the inordinate delay, no useful purpose will be served by prosecuting the appellant for an act of forgery committed in the year 1947. Though this is a case of the type for which S. 476, Cr. P.C. is really intended, with great reluctance we have come to the conclusion that no further proceedings need be taken against the appellant.

17. Section 476, Cr. P.C. is conceived in the interests of the public and unless complaints are made against parties or witnesses who are proved to be forgers or perjurers in time, the growing evil of the impunity with which documents are got up and false evidence secured to support false and frivolous claims or to defeat genuine ones, cannot be controlled or eradicated.

This cannot be done if the appellate Court suspends the operation of the order of a subordinate Court directing the filing of a complaint as a matter of course when an appeal is filed by a party against that order. It is necessary that the appellate Court should scrutinise the facts of the case with care and give stay only if it is convinced that there is an arguable case for the appellant.

The appellate Courts also-whether it is the High Court or the first appellate Court should try to dispose of such appeals as early as possible so that the purpose of S. 476, Cr. P.C. is not defeated. Learned Counsel appearing for the Government Pleader suggested that, even if the appellate Court suspends the order of a subordinate Court directing the filing of a complaint, the Magistrate before whom such a complaint was filed would have to stay the trial on the ground that an appeal was pending. Section 476(3), Cr. P.C. reads :

"Where it is brought to the notice of such Magistrate or of any other Magistrate to whom the case may have been transferred that an appeal is pending against the decision arrived at in the judicial proceeding out of which the matter had arisen, he may, if he thinks fit, at any stage adjourn the hearing of the case until such appeal is decided."

This sub-section does not enjoin on a Magistrate the obligation to adjourn every such trial, whenever an appeal is filed. It is in his discretion to do so having regard to the facts of each case. This rule, cannot, therefore, be interpreted as to compel a Magistrate to automatically adjourn a case on the ground that an appeal was pending against the decision arrived at in the judicial proceeding out of which the matter has arisen.

He should exercise his discretion with care and if he is of the opinion that the appeal is frivolous he should not adjourn the trial unless the party concerned gets a stay order from the appellate Court. We hope and trust that, in the interests of the administration of justice in the State, the aforesaid procedure would, as far as possible, be followed.

18. The appeal is allowed but, in the circumstances, the appellant is directed to pay the costs of the respondent.

Order accordingly.

JUDGEMENT

KULDIP SINGH, J.:- "Fraud-avoids all judicial acts, ecclesiastical or temporal" observed Chief Justice Edward Coke of England about three centuries ago. It is the settled proposition of law that a judgment or decree obtained by playing fraud on the court is a nullity and non est in the eyes of law. Such a judgment / decree -- by the first court or by the highest court - has to be treated as a nullity by every court, whether superior or inferior. It can be challenged in any court even in collateral proceedings.

2. Predecessor-in-interest of the respondents-plaintiffs filed application for final decree for partition and separate possession of the plaint properties and for mesne profits. The appellants defendants contested the application on the ground that the preliminary decree, which was sought to be made final, was obtained by fraud and, as such, the application was liable to be dismissed. The trial Judge accepted the contention and dismissed the application for grant of final decree. The respondents-plaintiffs went in appeal before the High Court. A Division Bench of the High Court went through plethora of case law and finally allowed the appeal and set aside the order of the trial Court. This appeal is by way of certificate granted by the High Court.

3. One Jagannath was the predecessor-in interest of the respondents. He was working as a clerk with one Chunilal Sowcar. Jagannath purchased at court auction the properties in dispute which belonged to the appellants. Chunilal Sowcar had obtained a decree and the court sale was made in execution of the said decree. Jagannath had purchased the property in the court auction on behalf of Chunilal Sowcar, the decree-holder. By a registered deed dated November 25, 1945, Jagannat relinquished all his rights in the property in favour of Chunilal Sowcar. Meanwhile, the appellants who were the judgment-debtors had paid the total decretal amount to Chunilal Sowcar. Thereafter, Chunilal Sowcar, having received the decretal amount, was no longer entitled to the property which he had purchased through Jagannath. Without disclosing that he had executed a release deed in favour of Chunilal Sowcar Jagannath filed a suit for partition of the property and obtained a preliminary decree. During the pendency of' the suit, the appellants did not know that Jagannath had no locus standi to file the suit because he had already executed a registered release deed, relinquishing all his rights in respect of the property in dispute, in favour of Chunilal Sowcar. It was only at the hearing of the application for final decree that the appellants came to know about the release deed and, as such, they challenged the application on the ground that non-disclosure on the part of Jagannath that he was left with no right in the property in dispute, vitiated the proceedings and, as such, the preliminary decree obtained by Jagannath by playing fraud on the court was a nullity. The appellants produced the release deed (Ex. B- 15) before the trial Court. The relevant part of the release deed is as under:-

"Out of your accretions and out of trust vested on me, purchased the schedule mentioned properties benami in my name through court auction and had the said sale confirmed, The said properties are in your possession and enjoyment the said properties should henceforth be held and enjoyed with all rights by you as had been done;

"So far. If any civil or criminal proceedings have to be conducted in respect of the said properties or instituted by others in respect of the said properties you shall conduct the said proceedings without reference to me and shall be held liable for the profits or losses you incur thereby. All the records pertaining the aforesaid properties are already remaining with you."

4. The High Court reversed the findings of the trial Court on the following reasonings :-

"Let us assume for the purpose of argument that this document, Exhibit B-15, was of the latter category and the plaintiff, the benamidar, had completely divested himself of all rights of every description. Even so, it cannot be held that his failure to disclose the execution of Exhibit B-15 would amount to collateral or extrinsic fraud. The utmost that can be said in favour of the defendants is that a plaintiff who had no title (at the time when the suit was filed) to the properties has falsely asserted title and one of the questions that would arise either expressly or by necessary implication is whether the plaintiff had a subsisting title to the properties. It was up to the defendants, to plead and establish by gathering all the necessary materials, oral and documentary, that the plaintiff had no title to the suit properties. It is their duty to obtain an encumbrance certificate and find out whether the plaintiff had still a subsisting title at the time of the suit. The plaintiff did not prevent the defendants, did not use any contrivance, nor any trick nor any deceit by which the defendants were prevented from raising proper pleas and adducing the necessary evidence. The parties were fighting at arm's length and it is the duty of each to traverse or question the allegations made by the other and to adduce all available evidence regarding the basis of the plaintiff's claim or the defence of the defendants and the truth or falsehood concerning the same. A party litigant cannot be indifferent, and negligent in his duty to place the materials in support of his contention and afterwards seek to show that the case of his opponent was false. The position would be entirely different if a party litigant could establish that in a prior litigation his opponent prevented him by an independent, collateral wrongful act such as keeping his witnesses in wrongful or secret confinement, stealing his documents to prevent him from adducing any evidence, conducting his case by tricks and misrepresentation resulting in his misleading of the Court. Here, nothing of the kind had happened and the contesting defendants could have easily produced a certified registration copy of Exhibit B- 15 and non-suited the plaintiff; and, it is absurd for them to take advantage of or make a point of their own acts of omission or negligence or carelessness in the conduct of their own defence."

5. The High Court further held as under :-

"From this decision it follows that except proceedings for probate and other proceedings where a duty is cast upon a party litigant to disclose all the facts, in all other cases, there is no legal duty cast upon the plaintiff to come to Court with a true case and prove it by true evidence. It would cut at the root of the fundamental principle of law of finality of litigation enunciated in the maxim 'interest republicaent sit finis litium ' if it should be held that a judgment obtained by a plaintiff in a false case, false to his knowledge, could be set aside on the ground of fraud, in a subsequent litigation. "

6. Finally, the High Court held a under:-

"The principle of his decision governs the instant case. At the worst the plaintiff is guilty of fraud in having falsely alleged, at the time when he filed the suit for partition, he had subsisting interest in the property though he had already executed Exhibit B-15. Even so that would not amount to extrinsic fraud because that is a matter which could well have been traversed and established to be false by the appellant by adducing the necessary evidence. The preliminary decree in the partition suit necesarily involves an adjudication though impliedly that the plaintiff has a subsisting Interest in the property."

7. The High Court, in our view, fell into patent error. The short question before the High Court was whether in the facts and circumstances of this case, Jagannath obtained the preliminary decree by playing fraud on the court. The High Court, however, went haywire and made observations which are wholly perverse. We do not agree with the High Court that "there is no legal duty cast upon the plaintiff to come to Court with a true case and prove it by true evidence". The principle of "finality of litigation" cannot be pressed to the extent of such an absurdity that it becomes an engine of fraud in the hands of dishonest litigants. The courts of law are meant for imparting justice between the parties. One who comes to the court, must come with clean hands. We are constrained to say that more often than not, process of the court is being abused. Property-grabbers, tax-evaders, bank-loan-dodgers and other unscrupulous persons from all walks of life find the court process a convenient lever to retain the, illegal-gains indefinitely. We have no hesitation to say that a person whose case is based on falsehood, has no right to approach the Court. He can be summarily thrown out at any stage of the litigation.

8. The facts of the present case leave no manner of doubt that Jagannath obtained the preliminary decree by playing fraud on the Court. A fraud is an act of deliberate deception with the design of securing something by taking unfair advantage of another. It is a deception in order to gain by another's loss. It is a cheating intended to got an advantage. Jagannath was working as a clerk with Chunilal Sowcar. He purchased the property in the court auction on behalf of Chunilal Sowcar. He had, on his own volition, executed the registered release deed (Exhibit B-15) in favour of Chunilal Sowcar regarding the property in dispute. He knew that the appellants had paid the total decretal amount to his master Chunilal Sowcar. Without disclosing all these facts, he filed the suit for the partition of the property on the ground that he had purchased the property on his own behalf and not on behalf of Chunilal Sowcar. Nonproduction and even non-mentioning of the release deed at the trial tantamounts to paying fraud on the Court. We do not agree with the observations of the High Court that the appellants-defend ants could have easily produced the certified registered copy of Exhibit B-15 and non-suited the plaintiff. A litigant, who approaches the court, is bound to produce all the documents executed by him which are relevant to the litigation. If he withholds a vital document in order to gain advantage on the other side than he would be guilty of playing fraud on the Court as well as on the opposite party.

9. We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the impugned judgment of the High Court and restore that of the trial Court. The appellants shall be entitled to their costs which we quantify as Rs. 11,000 / -.

Appeal allowed.

Malice in law— Natural justice— Mala fide— Malice in fact and malice in law— Difference between the two concepts— But question of malice immaterial where discretionary power is used for unauthorised purpose— Malice in law is different from malice in fact and may be assumed from the doing of a wrongful act intentionally but without just cause or excuse, or for want of reasonable or probable cause - Held, gross abuse of legal power to use a rule to a purpose and in a manner unwarranted by it - Order infected with an abuse of power as is based on nonexisting facts (Para 5)

Shearers. Shields, (1914) AC 808, 813, relied on But in the present cose it is not necessary to examine the question of malice in law for if a discretionary power has been exercised for an unauthorised purpose, it is generally immaterial whether its repository was acting in good faith or in bad faith. It will be an error of fact when a public body is prompted by a mistaken belief in the existence of a non-existing fact or circumstance. It is so clearly unreasonable that what is done under such a mistaken belief might almost be said to have been done in bad faith. The influence of extraneous matters will be undoubted where the authority making the order has admitted their influence.It will be gross abuse of legal power to punish a person or destroy her service carrer in a manner not warranted by law by using a rule meant to be exercised in the. public interest to a purpose wholly unwarranted by it and thereby to arrive at quite a contradictory result. An administrative order based on reasons of fact that do not exist must be held to be infected with an abuse of power and must be set aside. (Paras 6 to 10)

A) Practice and Procedure— Abuse of process— New creed of dishonest litigants, misleading court and suppressing facts noticed and strongly deprecated— No relief should be granted to such persons- A litigant, who attempts to pollute the stream of justice or who touches the pure fountain of justice with tainted hands, is not entitled to any relief, interim or final .

A party which has misled the Court in passing an order in its favour is not entitled to be heard on the merits of the case. A person who invokes the Court's jurisdiction is duty-bound to place all the facts before the Court without any reservation. If there is suppression of material facts or twisted facts have been placed before the High Court then it will be fully justified in refusing to entertain a petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution. (Paras 4 and 7)

It is imperative that the petitioner approaching the writ court must come with clean hands and put forward all the facts before the Court without concealing or suppressing anything and seek an appropriate relief. If there is no candid disclosure of relevant and material facts or the petitioner is guilty of misleading the Court, his petition may be dismissed at the threshold without considering the merits of the claim.

The materialism has overshadowed the old ethos and the quest for personal gain has become so intense that those involved in litigation do not hesitate to take shelter of falsehood, misrepresentation and suppression of facts in the court proceedings. In the last 40 years, a new creed of litigants has cropped up. Those who belong to this creed do not have any respect for truth. They shamelessly resort to falsehood and unethical means for achieving their goals. It is now well established that a iltigant, who attempts to pollute the stream of justice or who touches the pure fountain of justice with tainted hands, is not entitled to any relief, interim or final. { Para 1 and 2)

ORDER

For many centuries Indian society cherished two basic values of life i.e. „ satya, (truth) and. ahimsa. (non-violence) . Mahavir, Gautam Buddha and Mahatma Gandhi guided the people to ingrain these values in their daily life. Truth constituted an integral part of the justice- delivery system which was in vogue in the pre-Independence era and the people used to feel proud to tell truth in the courts irrespective of the consequences. However, post-Independence period has seen drastic changes in our value system. The materialism has overshadowed the old ethos and the quest for personal gain has become so intense that those involved in litigation do not hesitate to take shelter of falsehood, misrepresentation and suppression offsets in the court proceedings.

2) In the last 40 years, a new creed of litigants has cropped up. Those who belong to this creed do not have any respect for truth. They shamelessly resort to falsehood and unethical means for achieving their goals. In order to meet the challenge posed by this new creed of litigants, the courts have, from time to time, evolved new rules and it is now wefl established that a litigant, who attempts to pollute the stream of justice or who touches the pure fountain of justice with tainted hands, is not entitled to any relief, interim or final.

3) In Hart Narain v. Badri Dasl this Court adverted to the aforesaid rule and revoked the leave granted to the appellant by making the following observations: (AIR p. 1558)

It is of utmost importance that in making material statements and forth grounds in applications for special leave made under Article 136 of the Constitution, care must De taKen not iu y statements which are inaccurate, untrue or misleading. In dealing with applications for special leave, the Court naturally takes statements of fact and grounds of fact contained in the petitions at their face value and it would be unfair to betray the confidence of the Court by making statements which are untrue and misleading. Thus, if at the hearing of the appeal the Supreme Court is satisfied that the material statements made by the appellant in his application for special leave are inaccurate and misleading, and the respondent is entitled to contend that the appellant may have obtained special leave from the Supreme Court on the strength of what he characterises as misrepresentations of facts contained in the petition for special leave, the Supreme Court may come to the conclusion that in such a case special leave granted to the appellant ought to be revoked..

4) In Welcom Hotels/. State ofA.P.[2] the Court held that a party which has misled the Court in passing an order in its favour is not entitled to be heard on the merits of the case.

5) In G. NarayanaswamyReddyv. Govt, of Karnataka* the Court denied relief to the appellant who had concealed the fact that the award was not made by the Land Acquisition Officer within the time specified in Section 11-A of the Land Acquisition Act because of the stay order passed by the High Court. While dismissing the special leave petition, the Court observed:

(SCC p. 263, para 2)

. 2. \ Curiously enough, there is no reference in the special leave petitions to any of the stay orders and we came to know about these orders only when the respondents appeared in response to the notice and filed their counter-affidavit. !n our view, the said interim orders have a direct bearing on the question raised and the non-disclosure of the same certainly amounts to suppression of material facts. On this ground alone, the special leave petitions are liable to be rejected. It is well settled in law that the relief under Article 136 of the Constitution is discretionary and a petitioner who approaches this Court for such relief must come with frank and full disclosure of facts. If he fails to do so and suppresses material facts, his application is liable to be dismissed. We accordingly dismiss the special leave petitions.

6) In S.P. Chenga/varaya Naiduv. JagannattA the Court held that where a preliminary decree was obtained by withholding an important document from the court, the party concerned deserves to be thrown out at any stage of the litigation.

7) In Prestige Lights Ltd. v. $815 it was held that in exercising power under Article 226 of the Constitution of India the High Court is not just a court of law, but is also a court of equity and a person who invokes the High Court's jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution is duty- bound to place all the facts before the Court without any reservation. If there is suppression of material facts or twisted facts have been placed before the High Court then it will be fully justified in refusing to entertain a petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution. This Court referred to the judgment of Scrutton, LJ. in R v. Kensington Income Tax Commissioner*, and observed:

> (Prestige Lights Ltd cas&>, SCC p. 462, para 35)
> In exercising jurisdiction under Article lib TO the UJnsTituuon, me nigh toun win always Keep in menu the conduct of the party who is invoking such jurisdiction. If the applicant does not disclose full facts or suppresses relevant materials or is otherwise guilty of misleading the court, then the Court may dismiss the action without adjudicating the matter on merits. The rule has been evolved in larger public interest to deter unscrupulous litigants from abusing the process of court by deceiving it. The very basis of the writ jurisdiction rests in disclosure of true, complete and correct facts. If the material facts are not candidly stated or are suppressed or are distorted, the very functioning of the writ courts would become impossible.

8) In A V. Papayya Sastryv. Govt. of A.P 7 the Court held that Article 136 does not confer a right of appeal on any party. It confers discretion on this Court to grant leave to appeal in appropriate cases. In other words, the Constitution has not made the Supreme Court a regular court of appeal or a court of error. This Court only intervenes where justice, equity and good conscience require such intervention.

9) In Sunil Poddarv. Union Bonk of IndiaS the Court held that while exercising discretionary and equitable jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution, the facts and circumstances of the case should be seen in their entirety to find out if there is miscarriage of justice. If the appellant has not come forward with clean hands, has not candidly disclosed all the facts that he is aware of and he intends to delay the proceedings, then the Court will non-suit him on the ground of contumacious conduct.

10) In K.D. Sharmav. SAILS the Court held that the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under Article 32 and of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution is extraordinary, equitable and discretionary and it is imperative that the petitioner approaching the writ court must come with clean hands and put forward all the facts before the Court without concealing or suppressing anything and seek an appropriate relief. If there is no candid disclosure of relevant and material facts or the petitioner is guilty of misleading the Court, his petition may be ismissed at the threshold without considering the merits of the claim. The same rule was reiterated in G. Jayashreev. Bhagwandas S. PatellO.

11) This appeal, which is directed against the order dated 21-5-2001 passed by the Allahabad High Court is illustrative of how unscrupulous litigants can mislead the authorities entrusted with the task of implementing the provisions of the U.P. imposition of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1960 (for short a the Act.) and the courts for retaining possession of the surplus land. The tenure-holder, Praveen Singh did not file statement in terms of Section 9 |2-A) of the Act in respect of his holding as on 24-1-1971. After about four years, the prescribed authority issued notice dated 29-11-1975 under Section 10(2) of the Act and called upon Shri Praveen Singh to show cause as to why the statement prepared under Section dingly. A copy of the statement was sent to Shri Praveen Singh along with the notice in CLH Form 4. For the sake of convenient reference, the notice is reproduced beiow:

, CLH FORM 4 (See Rule 8) [Form of notice under Section 10(2) of the U.P. Imposition of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1960]

To, name of tenure-Holder Shri Praveen Singh,

With parentage Address s/o Shri Raghubir Singh, andr/o Village Tisotara, PO Khas, Pargana Kirat Pur, Tehsil Najibabad, District Bijnor.

Whereas you have failed to submit a statement/have furnished incomplete/incorrect statement in respect of all your holdings in the State of Uttar Pradesh including holdings of your family members with all the required particulars within the time mentioned in the notice in CLH Form 1, published under Section 9;

And whereas the statement of all holdings held by you in the State on 8-6-1973, statement showing proposed ceiling area applicable to you and the proposed surplus land have been prepared under subsection (1) of Section 10, they are sent to you herewith and you are hereby called upon to show cause within a period of 15 days from the date of service of this notice, why the said statement be not taken as correct.

On your failure to dispute the correctness of the statements in any court, within the time allowed, the aforesaid statement shall be treated as final and ceiling area applicable to you and the surplus land shall be determined accordingly.

Given under my hand and seal of the Court this day of 29-11-1975.

Division Tehsil Najibabad..

12} The notice was delivered to Shri Praveen Singh on 3-12-1975, but he neither filed any objection to the proposed determination of his surplus land nor sought extension of time for the said purpose. After service of notice, the prescribed authority adjourned the case on 10-12-1975 and again on 19-12-1975 apparently with the hope that the tenure-holder may file objection to the statement prepared under Section 10(1). This is evident from the proceeding sheets of the two dates, which are reproduced below:

„ Proceedings dated 10-12-1975 File received after service of notice on the tenure-holder on 3-12-1975. It is ordered that the file be put up on 19-12-1975 after receipt of objections.

Prescribed Authority,

13) On 27-12-1975, the prescribed authority noted that Shri Praveen Singh has not filed any objection and eclared that 18.22 acres of irrigated land was surplus in the hands of the tenure- holder. After six months and twelve days, Shri Praveen Singh submitted an application dated 8-7- 1976 along with what was termed as an ffidavit efore the prescribed authority and prayed that ex parte order dated 27-12-1975 may be set aside and he may be given opportunity to file objections and tender evidence. The prescribed authority rejected the application on the same day i.e. 8-7-1976 by observing that no valid ground has been made out for reconsidering the matter after six months.

14) The appeal preferred by Shri Praveen Singh against the order of the prescribed authority was dismissed by the Additional Commissioner (Judicial), Allahabad (Appellate Authority) in default because no one appeared on the date of hearing. The restoration application filed by Shri Praveen Singh wasdismissed on 27-8-1980. He then challenged the orders of the prescribed authority and the appellate authority in Writ Petition No. 8342 of 1980, which was allowed by the High Court and the matter was remitted to the appellate authority with a direction to decide the application of Shri Praveen Singh afresh in accordance with law.

15) In compliance with the direction given by the High Court, the appellate authority reconsidered the appeal of Shri Praveen Singh but dismissed the same on the ground that the tenure-holder had not filed an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act for condonation of the delay and even in the application filed for setting aside the ex parte order, no cause was shown for the delay. The appellate authority also observed that the tenure-holder had not denied receipt of notice dated 29-11 -1975 issued under Section 10(2) of the Act, but did not file any objection till the passing of ex parte order on 27-12-1975 and that his assertion of having come to know of the ex parte order from Lekhpal Halqa on 7-7-1976 is not believable. It appears that after remand of the matter by the High Court, Shri Praveen Singh died and, therefore, his legal representatives (including the appellant herein) were substituted in his place.

16) The legal representatives of Shri Praveen Singh jointly filed Civil Miscellaneous Writ Petition No. 22790 of 1990 and prayed for quashing of orders dated 27-12-1975, 8-7-1976, 7-8-1990 passed by the prescribed authority and the appellate authority respectively. They also prayed for issue of a direction to the appellate authority to remand the case to the prescribed authority for entertaining their objections. In Para 3 of the writ petition, the following statement was made:

. That the petitioner's late father, against whom the proceedings had been initiated under Section 10(2) of the Ceiling Act, filed application on 8-7-1976 supported by an affidavit stating therein clearly that he was seriously ill for about ten months as such he was not in a position to file objection, and as a matter of fact he did not have any knowledge of the date of the proceedings that were being conducted before the prescribed authority. True copy of the application dated 8-7-1976 of the petitioner's late father is annexed herewith as Annexure 2. True copy of the affidavit filed in support of the application dated 8-7-1976 of the petitioner's father is annexed herewith as Annexure 3..

17) By an order dated 7-9-1990, the learned Single Judge of the Ailahabad High Court stayed the operation of the orders passed by the prescribed authority and the appellate authority. The interim and during the interregnum the appeflant continued to enjoy the property. In the special leave petition filed against the order of the High Court, notice was issued on 12-10-2001, but the appellant's prayer for stay was declined. Thereafter, the surplus land of the tenure-holder was distributed among the landless persons who were joined as parties pursuant to order dated 7-3-2006 passed in IA No. 9 of 2004.

18) After service of notice. Respondents 1 to 3 filed counter in the form of an affidavit of Shri Pradip Kumar Singh, Additional Tahsildar, District Bijnor, U.P. In his affidavit, Shri Pradip Kumar gave details of the steps taken by the prescribed authority in terms of Sections 10(1) and 10 (2) of the Act and made a categorical assertion that notice issued on 29-11-1975 was duly served upon Shri Praveen Singh on 3-12-1975. This is evident from Paras 4 (/V) and ($ of the counter-affidavit which read as under:

. (i\) That the averments of facts made in the list of dates against date 7-7-1976 are not admitted being incorrect. The notice in CLH Form 4 having been served on the tenure-holder on 3-12-1975, it was for him to have filed his objection. It was for the tenure-holder to have managed his affairs. It is not for a court or an authority to communicate to the tenure- holder each and every order passed by it once service of the notice is complete, the Act does not require that each and every date of proceedings and the copy or information about the final order ex parte or otherwise be served on him. The tenure-holder avoided to file his objections since he had none. The statement of surplus land is prepared by the Revenue Authorities in accordance with the provisions of the Act which is prepared on the basis of revenue records of land held by a tenure-hoider in his name and there is. presumption of correctness of the revenue record..

(i} That the averments of fact in the list of date against date 8-7-1976 are not admitted as stated. It is submitted that an application dated 8-7-1976 filed by the tenure-holder did not dispute service of notice in CLH Form 4 dated 29-11-1975. The application was of a general nature. If a tenure-holder having been asked to file objections within 15 days of the date of service of him. chooses not to do so. , would proceed to a presumption that he has nothing to say. Section 11 of the Act provides that where a tenure-holder chooses not to dispute and not to file any objection to the statement prepared by the prescribed authority under Section 10 of the Act within the stipulated period, the prescribed authority. shall, accordingly determine the surplus land of the tenure-holder. Sub-section (2) of Section 11 of the Act further provides that where an application is made by a tenure-holder within thirty days of the date of an order under sub-section (11) of the Act that being a statutory duty cast on the prescribed authority. In the present case the prescribed authority after passing order dated 27-12-1975 fixed the next date as 27-1-1976 i.e. after 30 days and it is only on 27-1-1976 that the prescribed authority sent a notification regarding publication of surplus land in the Official Gazette which was so published on 5-6-1976..

Shri Sunil Kumar Singh, son of the appellant Dalip Singh and grandson of late Shri Praveen Singh filed rejoinder-affidavit dated 18-2-2002, In Para 3 of the rejoinder-affidavit Shri Sunil Kumar Singh made the following statement:

That it is denied categorically that the father of the petitioner had ever received the notice dated 29-11-1975 along with the statement of surplus land, prepared under Section 10 (1) of the Act. It is humbly stated that the father of the petitioner could not file any show cause without going through the abovereferred statement prepared under Section 10(1) of the Act.

20) We have heard the learned counsel for the parties and scrutinised the record. In our opinion, the appeal is liable to be dismissed only on the ground that the tenure-holder Shri Praveen Singh did not state correct facts in the application filed by him on 8-7-1976 before the prescribed authority for setting aside the ex parte order and the appellant did not approach the High Court with clean hands inasmuch as, by making a misleading statement in Para 3 of the writ petition, an impression was created that the tenure-holder did not know of the proceedings initiated by the prescribed authority. By making the saidstatement, the appellant succeeded in persuading the High Court to pass an interim order which made by the authority concerned to distribute the surplus land among landless ersons. Even before this Court, a patently false statement has been made in the rejoinder- affidavit on the issue of receipt of notice dated 29-11-1975 by Shri Praveen Singh.

21) A perusal of the application dated 8-7-1976 submitted by Shri Praveen Singh for setting aside the ex parte order dated 27-12-1975 passed by the prescribed authority makes it clear that he had pleaded his continuous illness for ten months as the cause for his inability to file objection, in Para 2 of the application, Shri Praveen Singh made a suggestive assertion that he had no knowledge of the proceedings initiated by the prescribed authority and he came to know about the case having been decided ex parte only on 7-7-1976 when he went to Lekhpal to procure memo. There was not even a whisper in the application that notice dated 29-11-1975 issued by the prescribed authority under Section 10(2) of the Act had not been served upon him and on that account he could not file objections within 15 days.

22) The application fiied by Shri Praveen Singh was not supported by any medical certificate or otherevidence which could prima facie establish that he was really sick for ten months. This is the reason why the prescribed uthority refused to reconsider the order dated 27-11-1975 and the appellate authority declined to entertain his prayer for remand of the case to the prescribed authority for the purpose of fresh determination of surplus area case. Notwithstanding this, in the writ petition filed before the High Court a misleading statement was made that due to serious illness, Shri. Praveen Singh could not file objection and, as a matter of fact, he did not have any knowledge of the dates of proceedings which were conducted by the prescribed authority. In view of that statement, the learned Single Judge of the High Court felt persuaded to stay the orders passed by the prescribed authority and the appellate authority which, as mentioned above, resulted in frustration of the action to be taken by the authority concerned for distribution of the surplus land to landless persons for a good period of more than eleven years and enabled the heirs of Shri Praveen Singh to retain possession of the surplus land and enjoy the same. Before the High Court also, no evidence was produced in support of the assertion regarding serious illness of Shri. Praveen Singh.

23) Insofar as this Court is concerned, Shri. Sunil Kumar Singh, grandson of Shri. Praveen Singh and son of the appellant, boldly made a false statement that his grandfather did not receive notice dated 29- 11-1975 along with the statement of surplus land prepared under Section 10 (1) and he could not file any show cause without going through .the statement. We are amazed at the degree of audacity with which Shri Sunil Kumar Singh could make a patently false statement on oath.

24) From what we have mentioned above, it is clear that in this case efforts to mislead the authorities and the courts have transmitted through three generations and the conduct of the appellant and his son to mislead the High Court and this Court cannot, but be treated as reprehensible. They belong to the category of persons who not only attempt, but succeed in polluting the course of justice. Therefore, we do not find any justification to interfere with the order under challenge or entertain the appellant's prayer for setting aside the orders passed by the prescribed authority and the appellate authority.

25) In the result, the appeal is dismissed. We would have saddled the appellant with exemplary costs but, keeping in view the fact that possession of the surplus land was taken in 2002 and the same has been distributed among landless poor persons, we refrain from doing so.

Advocates who appeared in this case : M.K. Ramamurthy, Senior Advocate (Faqir Chandra, Advocate, with him) , for the Appellant; P.N. Lekhi, Senior Advocate (Girish Chandra, Advocate, with him) , for the Respondents. The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

P.N. SHINGHAL, J.— This appeal by special leave is directed against an order of the Delhi High Court dated November 24, 1976, dismissing the appellant's writ petition in limine.

2. The appellant was promoted to the post of Director in the All India Radio after some thirty years of service under the Government of India. She was working as Joint Director, Family Planning, in the Directorate General of the All India Radio, when she was served with an order dated March 26, 1976, retiring her prematurely from service, with immediate effect, on the ground that she had already attained the age of 50 years on April 11,1972, and the President was of the opinion that her retirement was in the . public interest, . The appellant made a representation on April 6, 1976, but it was rejected on July 1, 1976. She therefore filed a writ petition in the Delhi High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution in which she, inter alia, made a mention of the hostile attitude of one V.D. Vyas who took over as Chairman of the Central Board of Film Censors from her on February 11,1972. She also made a mention of the adverse remarks made by Vyas in her service record after she had ceased to work under him which, according to her, were, totally unfounded, biased, malicious and without any justification. . She stated that, her integrity had never been considered doubtful 28 years before or 4 years after the period of 21/2 months she spent under him. It was also contended that some basless allegations were made against her because of 3 malicious vendetta, carried on by Vyas, and that the order of premature retirement was not in public interest but was 3 arbitrary and capricious, , and that the retiring authority had not. applied its mind to the record, of her case. It was particularly pointed out that as she was confirmed in the post of Director on April 28, 1973, with retrospective effect from July 10, 1970 any adverse remark in her confidential report before that date could not legitimately form the basis of the order of her premature retirement. The appellant also pointed out that the order cast a stigma on her conduct, character and integrity and amounted to the imposition of one of the major penalties under the Central Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1965.

3. It is not in controversy, and has in fact been specifically stated in the order of premature retirement dated March 26, 1976, that the appellant was retired in the . public interest, under clause Q (1) of Rule 56 of the Fundamental Rules. That rule provides as follows:

. Q Notwithstanding anything contained in this rule the appropriate authority shall, if it is of the opinion that it is in the public interest to do so have the absolute right to retire any Government servant by giving him notice of not less than three months in writing or three months' pay and allowances in lieu of such notice.

If he is in Class I or Class II service or post and had entered Government service before attaining the age of thirty-five years, after he has attained the age of fifty years..

It is also not in dispute that the power under the aforesaid rule had to be exercised in accordance with the criteria and the procedure laid down in Office Memorandum No. F-33/13/61-Ests (A) dated June 23, 1969, of the Ministry of Home Affairs Government of India. It is however the grievance of the appellant that her premature retirement was not made in accordance with the requirements of the rule and the memorandum, but was ordered because of malice, and was arbitrary and capricious as the Government did not apply its mind to her service record and the facts and circumstances of her case. It has been specifically pleaded that the power under FR 56 (J) has not been exercised , for the furtherance of public interest, and has been based on. collateral grounds, . The appellant has pointed out in this connection that her service record was examined in March, 1976, by the Departmental Promotion Committee, with which the Union Public Service Commission was associated, and the Committee considered her fit for promotion to the selection grade subject to clearance in the departmental proceedings which were pending against her, and that she was retired because of bias and animosity .Our attention has also been invited to the favorable entry which was made in her confidential report by the secretary of the ministry.

4. Mr Lekhi, learned Counsel for the Union of India, produced the relevant record of the appellant for our perusal. While doing so he frankly conceded that there was nothing on the record which could justify the order of the appellant's premature retirement. He went to the extent of saying that the Government was not in a position to support that unfair order.

5. We have made a mention of the plea of malice which the appellant had taken in her writ petition. Although she made an allegation of malice against V.D. Vyas under whom she served for a very short period and got an adverse report, there is nothing on the record to show that Vyas was able to influence the Central Government in making the order of premature retirement dated March 26, 1976. It is not therefore the case of the appellant that there was actual malicious intention on the part of the Government in making the alleged wrongful order of her premature retirement so as to amount to malice in fact. Malice in law is however, quite different. Viscount Haldane described it as follows in Shearers/. Shields^-:

. A person who inflicts an injury upon another person in contravention of the law is not allowed to say that he did so with an innocent mind; he is taken to know the law, and he must act within the law. He may, therefore, be guilty of malice in law, although, so far the state of his mind is concerned, he acts ignorantly, and in that sense innocently..

Thus malice in its legal sense means malice such as may be assumed from the doing of a wrongful act intentionally but without just cause or excuse, or for want of reasonable or probable cause.

6. It is however not necessary to examine the question of malice in law in this case, for it is trite law that if a discretionary power has been exercised for an unauthorised purpose, it is generally immaterial whether its repository was acting in good faith or in bad faith. As was stated by Lord Goddard. C.J. in Pilling v. Abergele Urban District Council where a duty to determine a question is conferred on an authority which state their reasons for the decision, and the reasons which they state show that they have taken into account matters which they ought not to have taken into account, or that they have failed to take matters into account which they ought to have taken into account, the court to which an appeal lies can and ought to adjudicate on the matter.

7. The principle which is applicable in such cases has thus been stated by Lord Esher, M.R. in Queen on the Prosecution of Richard Westbrooks. The Vestry of St. Pan era &
. If people who have to exercise a public duty by exercising their discretion take guidance of their discretion, then in the eye of the law they have not exercised their discretion take into account matters which the courts consider not to be proper for the
This view has been followed in Sadlers. Sheffield CorporadorA.

8. We are in agreement with this view. It is equally true that there will be an error of fact when a public body is prompted by a mistaken belief in the existence of a non-existing fact or circumstance. This is so clearly unreasonable that what is done under such a mistaken belief might almost be said to have been done in bad faith; and in actual experience, and as things go these may well be said to run into one another.

9.The influence of extraneous matters will be undoubted where the authority making the order has admitted their influence. It will therefore be a gross abuse of legal power to punish a person or destroy her service career in a manner not warranted by law by putting a rule which makes a useful provision for the premature retirement of government servants only in the. publicninterest, , to a purpose wholly unwarranted by it, and to arrive at quite a contradictory result. An administrative order which is based on reasons of fact which do not exist must therefore be held to be infected with an abuse of power.

10.So when it has been conceded by Mr Lekhi that there was nothing on the record which would justify the impugned order dated March 26, 1976, of the appellant's premature retirement under clause (j) of Rule 56 of the Fundamental Rules, and that the Government was not in a position to support that unfair order, that order must be set aside, for it amounts to an abuse of the power which was vested in the authority concerned. The appeal is allowed with costs and it is ordered accordingly.

RESPONSIBILITY OF GOVERNMENT PLEADER / ADVOCATES : -

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Capt. Amrinder Singh Vs. Prakash Singh Badal 2009 (3) Crimis 174 (SC) specifically laid down that the public prosecutor should not act merely on the dictates of the state but he should act fairly and place truth before the court as he is also an officer of the Court.

Full Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Shiv Kumar --Versus- Hukam Chand And Another (1999) 7 Supreme Court Cases 467 observed as under Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 301, 302 and 225 & 24 —Duty of the Public Prosecutor to act fairly and not merely to obtain conviction by any means fair or foul — If the accused is entitled to any legitimate benefit the Public Prosecutor should make it available to him or inform the court even if the defence counsel overlooked it.

Also relied on: (2013) 2 Supreme Court Cases (Cri) 978 where it has been laid down that ;

Duty of the Public Prosecutor to act fairly- He is not a mouthpiece of investigating agency and should scrupulously avoid suppression of material available establishing innocence of accused – He should refuse to use evidence obtained by wroungful means.

Full Bench of Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of STATE OF MAHARASHTRA Vs JAGAN GAGANSINGH NEPALI 2011 ALL MR (Cri) 2961 (Full Bench) held that, > Misuse of Power by police officials as well as Presiding Officers and Public Prosecutors of the Designated courts – held – As has been held by constitution Bench of Apex Court in Prakash Bhutto's Case [(2005) 2 SCC 409] it is many time noted that the prosecution unjustifiably invokes the provisions of the Special Act's like TADA Act with an oblique motive of depriving the accused persons from getting bail – The public prosecutors and the Presiding Officers of the Court are cautioned to act objectively – Public prosecutors are prosecutors on behalf of public and not the police – The Presiding Officers of the Designated Court have been assigned the role of the sentinel on the quivive – They expected to discharge their judicial functions keeping in view the fundamental rights particularly of the personal right and liberty of the citizen – These are essential for achieving legislative intent – The above observation of Apex court is sufficient to caution police officials as wells as Presiding Officers from misusing the Act.

In E.S. Raddi Vs. The Chief Secretary 1987 (3) SCC 258 Hon'ble Supreme Court observed the duties of the senior Counsel some of the portion of para is as follows :

> As an officer of the Court concerned in the administration of justice, he has an overriding duty to the Court, to the standards of his profession, and to the public, which may and often does lead to a conflict with his client's wishes or with what the client thinks are his personal interests. Counsel must not mislead the Court, he must not lend himself to casting aspersions on the other party or witnesses for which there is no sufficient basis in the information in his possession, he must not withhold authorities or documents which may tell against his clients but which the law or the standards of his profession require him to produce. By so acting he may well incur the displeasure or worse of his lost his client would or might seek legal redress if that were open to him.

It has also been laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court that arguing the case before court on basis of overruled citation is a falling standard of professional ethics.

These offences were committed by Raghubir Prasad and, Others in the course of a Civil Suit - No. 298 of 1923, Hari Har Prasad v. Shyam Lai,. At the close of the judgment (page 65) the learned Sessions Judge called the attention of the High Court to the conduct of Ahmad Ashraf, a Vakil engaged along with Raghubir Prasad, particularly in relation to a document, Ex. 37, and to certain statements made by him when under examination by the Committing Magistrate under S. 164 of the Criminal. P. G. which the learned Sessions Judge believed to be deliberately untrue The app.al of Raghubir Prasad having been heard by a Bench of this Court and dismissed, notice was .issued to Ahmad Ashraf to show cause why disciplinary action should not be taken against him for having on the 10th of January 1924, joined with Raghubir Prasad in filing a petition of reply to an application for review of judgment presented by the plaintiffs, well knowing that the said petition contained false statements and intending fraudulently and dishonestly thereby to defeat the said application.

The further charge was in respect of statements made by him on the 24th of September 1924, in the Court of the Committing Magistrate, which were known by him to be untrue, and made with the object of dissociating himself from Raghubir Prasad and the other conspirators.-

By the 10th of January 1924 Raghubir Prasad, Shed Autar, Deo Narain Pande and Ganjeshri were in a position of great peril.

Ganjeshri .had forged three birth certificates of the sons of Jokhu Mal, the father of some of the defendants in the civil suit. Raghubir Prasad. Sheo Autar and Deo Narain Pande were also involved in the conspiracy and had used I these documents in Court. These documents, known as X, Y and Z, purported to be extracts from birth registers, were apparently duly sealed and officially | vouched for, but were in fact forgeries and inventions. That is to say, the registers did not contain any entry corresponding to anything contained in X, Y and Z. They were not copies of any documents. They were entirely fictitious. On the strength of these documents the learned Judge had in the civil suit on the 12th of December 1923, declared brie Sahdeo to be a minor. This was an issue of the greatest importance to the-defendants. By the 17th of December the plaintiffs, being suspicious, had made careful and diligent enquiries and inspected the original registers. On that day they submitted to the Court an application for review, which exposed the whole fraud. The document was drafted with precision and particularity, and was convincing on the face of it. On its perusal Raghubir Prasad, Sahdeo After, Deo Narain Pande and Ganeshji must have been aware that they could escape an ultimate conviction by a miracle only.

In the circumstances it occurred to someone that the position might be alleviated by fresh forgeries. An attempt was made to insert even at this late data entries of births of sons in accordance with the imaginary copies already filed by the defendants. That, however, was too dangerous and was abandoned. Some astute dishonest person suggested that the issue would be greatly confused if instead of Jokhu Lai having only four sons, it could be proved tha[1]; he had a fifth. This was in comparison, an elementary forgery and if was duly carried out by Ganjeshri, who obtained access to the register of deaths of Patarhat and inserted the death of a son as on the 27th of February, 1905. The forgery having been committed, Ahmad Ashraf, at the request of Raghubir Prasad inspected the register: He reported to Raghubir Prasad that he had discovered the entry of the death. In making this inspection Ahmad Ashraf may have been acting innocently Raghubir Prasad's object in getting him to inspect the register was no doubt that he wanted to be on sure ground as to the existence in fact of the entry.

On January 3rd, 1924, an application was made by Ahmad Ashraf for an adjournment of the review on the ground inter alia of Raghubir Prasad's illness and the need for the production of evidence. Ahmad Ashraf admitted before us that the evidence was the entry in the death register of Pa fear hat. So that he must have been to some extent in the confidence of Raghubir Prasad, who was the vakil principally if not exclusive!; engaged in this affair.

It must have struck Ahmad Ashraf a-a most extraordinary circumstance tha the" case had all along been fought or "" the basis of Jokhu Lai having only four sons, and that none of the defendants who w.31-3 the sons of Jokhu Lal, had ever previously mentioned this most important fact. A son born in 190 would have helped the defendants in establishing the minority of Sahdeo.

A conference of the lawyers and the defendants., and their pairokars was held on the 8th of January 1924. The documents of the 17th of December 1923, was considered. For reasons best known Raghubir Prasad and to Ahmad Ashraf no mention was made to the other lawyers present of the notable discovery of the existence between 1901 and 1905 of a son of Jokhu Lai. We can have no doubt that the other lawyers were kept designedly in the dark. Mr. Abmad Ashraf has admitted that a vakil of the plaintiffs had told him, sometime before the meeting ;that forged documents were being used by-his side, he admitted that he thought it was so, and that the forger was Sheo Autar. He says that when he went to the interview he was ' frightened' about the" case. Yet he sat quiet and did not disclose to his fellow vakils anything about the Patarhat discovery. He says that he thought they had already been told. -If so, he must have been amazed that no one mentioned it. Whilst acquitting Ahmad Ashraf of any knowledge of the antecedent forgery arranged by Raghubir Prasad and Ganjeshri Prasad, we believe that at the meeting he acted in concert with Raghubir Prasad and on instructions from him avoided all reference to the alleged fifth son. By this date Raghubir Prasad and the other conspirators had undoubtedly decided to cut their way through if they could, and they did not want inconvenient enquiries from the other vakils. On the assurances of the pairokars that X, Y and Z were genuine and without any effort to substantiate this by inspection of the registers, it was decided to resist the application for review.

Thereupon Raghubir Prasad drafted a document (Ex. 37) which was the answer to the application. Notwithstanding that the plaintiffs had pointed out in their application, which was being answered by Raghubir Prasad, that there were no entries in the registers corresponding to X, Y and Z, the answer opened with an assertion that these documents were genuine copies. This was a falsehood easily and immediately demonstrable on inspection of the registers. Paragraph 3 contained a most offensive charge, entirely without foundation, -of possible malpractice by the plaintiffs, in collusion with officials, of the copying department or record room.

Paragraph 4 was an impudent assertion that the copies filed by the plaintiffs ' are untrustworthy and seam to be altogether fictitious, and concludes with the definite charge that ' whei relating to age was decided and the plaintiffs had no hops of being successful in the principal case, they took invalid proceedings and produced forged copies.'

Then came the allegation that' besides the four sons a son was born to Jokhu Lai in 1901, who died at a very tender age on the 27th of February 1905, at the house of his maternal grandfather at Patarhat ; consequently no documentary or oral evidence was produced in respect of him nor was he mentioned in any way in the course of evidence.' On the - 10th of January 1924, this very disgraceful document was sent by Raghubir Prasad to Ahmad Ashraf and he signed it. The learned Sessions Judge says :

When lie put his signature on Ex. P-37 the defendants' reply to the plaintiffs' application for review, lie must have fully realized that he was making himself responsible for setting up an entirely false case on behalf of the defendants. In fast the whole of his conduct between the 2nd of January 1924 up till the end of the case, is open to the gravest suspicion. T have very carefully considered the question but, I find if most impossible to believe that any vakil appearing on. "behalf of the defendants could have put his signature on Ex. P-37 without realizing that an entirely false case was.. being set up.

We invited Ahmad Ashraf to put, if .he could, any innocent interpretation pf his silence as to the fifth son at the meeting and to give us some reasons which would justify his having identified himself with Raghubir Prasad in the answer of the 10th of January. He could really give no explanation to show that he had any honest belief in the genuineness of the new case set up in para: 5 or of the charges of forgery, collusion and fraud made against the plaintiffs and officials in the copying and record departments.

His defence really amounted to this : that he wasen't if cled'to sign anything that Raghubir Prasad submitted to him, and that, no matter how unfounded or scandalous the statements might be and how great an abuse of the privileges of counselor of the processes of the Court, he was-protected by the fact that the document had been drafted by a man senior to him.

This sort of defence has been put up more than once, and we wish the profession to understand that a man who signs his name to a- document makes himself thereby in every way as responsible for it as if he was the original drafter of it. If it turns out that the document is one which no man acting honestly could in! the circumstances have drafted, then he ' will be bound to answer for every word, line, sentence and paragraph, and it will not be the least defence that somebody else wrote it out and he only signed it. Signature implies association and carries responsibility. We are of opinion that Ahmad Ashraf having already been told that forgeries had been committed, and having accepted that statement, and being, ag he says, frightened on the 8th of January, could not honestly have believed the assertions of forgery by the plaintiffs and Court officials alleged by Raghubir Prasad on the 10th of January. .Even if the very definite statements in the application for review as to the actual non-existence of X, Y and Z had been doubted by him, a visit to the Collector's office and a five minutes' inspection of the registers would have convinced him of what he already had little doubt about, that the defendants were the forgers and not the plaintiffs.

We, therefore, find that Ahmad Ashraf did on the 10th of January 1924, join with Raghubir Prasad in filing the document of that date, and that he well knew .that the petition contained false statements, and that these - were made to deceive the Court and fraudulently and dishonestly to defeat the application.

The second part of the charge against Ahmad Ashraf can be dealt with quite shortly. When he was examined as a witness on the 24th September 1924, the Magistrate was anxious to as certain to what extent he had been previously connected with Sheo Autar, Deo Narain Pande and the defendants. He said had no concern with Sheo Aufear, Deo Narain and the defendants from before and to the best of my recollection did not appear as a pleader for them in any case previous to this. He in fact, was at the very time appearing for the defendants in another case which had been instituted shortly before No. 298 of 1923 and he was in fact engaged in August 1924 (i.e., a month before making his Deposition) in execution proceedings in that very case.

He sought to justify his answer 'to the Magistrate by telling us that he thought point of the question turned upon _the words ' from before' that he made a mistake in not remembering that the Bother case was in fact earlier in date. He also said that on September 24, 1924, he had forgotten that he had signed three-papers in August with reference to the execution proceedings.

These answers did not meet with our approval, nor did we give weight to the argument, which was addressed to us. It was said, as it has been before in these cases, that it is the common practice of clerks in the mufussil to draft applications a not, documents even of importance and, that the vakil almost invariably signs them without reading them. Ahmad Ashraf explained that he had not read any one of the documents in the execution proceedings and that was why he remembered nothing about the concurrent case.

Again we wish it to be understood that a defence of this kind will not be accepted and that if a legal practitioner puts his signature to a document, he will be deemed to have read it and to carry it in his recollection to the extent that an ordinarily competent, careful and reasonable man would carry it, and he will be bound by all the implications arising from it just as much as if he had written every word of it with his own hand. Practitioners must realize that if they make, or associate themselves with, statements which they know are dishonest and untruthful for the purpose of misleading the Court, they must ON Proof of misconduct bear personal responsibility, and that it will be no defence for them to say that it was done in the interests of the client or at his instigation or at the instigation of a colleague at the Bar, or that they were so negligent in the matter that they did not read the document or consider it at all.

We find the second charge proved against Ahmad Ashraf, and we suspend him on both charges for six months, such period of suspension to run concurrently. If subsequently cases similar to this are brought before' the Court, we shall not show the future wrong-doers the leniency we now extend to Ahmad Ashraf, We assess the fee of the learned Government Advocate at Rs. 200. ….Practitioner suspended.

==========

Advocates Act – Professional ethics – Resolution of Bar Association that none of its members will appear for a particular accused is against constitution – Such resolution is in fact, a disgrace to the legal community – All such resolutions of Bar Association in India are declared as null and void – The right minded lawyers should ignore and defy such resolutions if they want democracy and rule of law to be upheld in this country – It is the duty of lawyer to defend irrespective of consequences – To put quietus to the FIR against both the parties stands quashed – Without going in to merits of controversy compensation of Rs. 1,50,000/- awarded to appellant and F.I.R. against him also quashed.

==========

1. Leave granted.

2. Heard learned counsel for the parties.

3. This appeal has been file against the impugned judgment and order of the High Court of Madras dated 29.4.2008 passed in Writ Petition No.716 of 2007.

4. The facts have been set out in the impugned judgment and order and hence we are not repeating the same here.

5. The High Court had appointed a Commission of Enquiry headed by Hon'ble Mr. Justice K.P. Sivasubramaniam, a retired Judge of the High Court of Madras which is on record.

6. During the course of the proceedings today, we had requested Mr. Altaf Ahmad, learned senior counsel, to assist us as Amicus Curiae in this case and we are grateful to Mr. Altaf Ahmad and we appreciate his assistance to us in this case.

7. As suggested by Mr. Altaf Ahmad, without going into the merits of the controversy, we direct that a sum of Rs.1,50,000/- (Rs. One Lakh and Fifty Thousand only) be given to the appellant by the State of Tamil Nadu as compensation. We have been informed that the appellant had already received a sum of Rs.50,000/- (Rs. Fifty Thousand only) and hence the remaining sum of Rs.1,00,000/- (Rs. One Lakh only) shall be paid by the State of Tamil Nadu to the appellant within a period of two months from today.

8. FIR No.2105 of 2006 dated 15.12.2006 on the file of B-4 Police Station (Law and Order), Race Course Police Station, Coimbatore city against the appellant stands quashed.

9. To put quietus to the matter FIR No.2106 of 2006 on the file of B-4 Police Station (Law and Order), Race Course Police Station, Coimbatore city against the police also stands quashed under Article 142 of the Constitution of India.

10. The impugned judgment and order of the High Court is substituted by our order. The appeal is disposed off accordingly. CIVIL APPEAL NOS. 10304-10308 of 2010 (arising out of S.L.P.(C) Nos.26659-26663 of 2008)

11. Leave granted.

12. Mr. P.H. Parekh, learned senior counsel, appears for the Coimbatore Bar Association.

13. We agree with the submission of Mr. P.H. \ that the observations made against the Coimbatore Bar Association in para 13 of the impugned judgment and order of the High Court should be quashed. We order accordingly.

14. Before parting with this case, we would like to comment upon a matter of great legal and constitutional importance which has caused us deep distress in this case. It appears that the Bar Association of Coimbatore passed a resolution that no member of the Coimbatore Bar will defend the accused policemen in the criminal case against them in this case.

15. Several Bar Association all over India, whether High Court Bar Associations or District Court Bar Associations have passed resolutions that they will not defend a particular person or persons in a particular criminal case. Sometimes there are clashes between policemen and lawyers, and the Bar Association passes a resolution that no one will defend the policemen in the criminal case in court. Similarly, sometimes the Bar Association passes a resolution that they will not defend a person who is alleged to be a terrorist or a person accused of a brutal or heinous crime or involved in a rape case.

16. In our opinion, such resolutions are wholly illegal, against all traditions of the bar, and against professional ethics. Every person, however, wicked, depraved, vile, degenerate, perverted, loathsome, execrable, vicious or repulsive he may be regarded by society has a right to be defended in a court of law and correspondingly it is the duty of the lawyer to defend him.

17. We may give some historical examples in this connection.

18. When the great revolutionary writer Thomas Paine was jailed and tried for treason in England in 1792 for writing his famous pamphlet `The Rights of Man' in defence of the French Revolution the great advocate Thomas Erskine (1750-1823) was briefed to defend him. Erskine was at that time the Attorney General for the Prince of Wales and he was warned that if he accepts the brief, he would be dismissed from office. Undeterred, Erskine accepted the brief and was dismissed from office.

19. However, his immortal words in this connection stand out as a shining light even today :

From the moment that any advocate can be permitted to say that he will or will not stand between the Crown and the subject arraigned in court where he daily sits to practice, from that moment the liberties of England are at an end. If the advocate refuses to defend from what he may think of the charge or of the defence, he assumes the character of the Judge; nay he assumes it before the hour of the judgment; and in proportion to his rank and reputation puts the heavy influence of perhaps a mistaken opinion into the scale against the accused in whose favour the benevolent principles of English law make all assumptions, and which commands the very Judge to be his Counsel & quota;

20. Indian lawyers have followed this great tradition. The revolutionaries in Bengal during British rule were defended by our lawyers, the Indian communists were defended in the Meerut conspiracy case, Razakars of Hyderabad were defended by our lawyers, Sheikh Abdulah and his co-accused were defended by them, and so were some of the alleged assassins of Mahatma Gandhi and Indira Gandhi. In recent times, Dr. Binayak Sen has been defended. No Indian lawyer of repute has ever shirked responsibility on the ground that it will make him unpopular or that it is personally dangerous for him to do so. It was in this great tradition that the eminent Bombay High Court lawyer Bhulabhai Desai defended the accused in the I.N.A. trials in the Red Fort at Delhi (November 1945 - May 1946).

21. However, disturbing news is coming now from several parts of the country where bar associations are refusing to defend certain accused persons.

22. The Sixth Amendment to the US Constitution states & quot; In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right .....to have the assistance of counsel for his defence & quot;.

23. In Powell vs. Alabama 287 US 45 1932 the facts were that nine illiterate young black men, aged 13 to 21, were charged with the rape of two white girls on a freight train passing through Tennessee and Alabama. Their trial was held in Scottsboro, Alabama, where community hostility to blacks was intense. The trial judge appointed all members of the local bar to serve as defense counsel. When the trial began, no attorney from the local bar appeared to represent the defendants. The judge, on the morning of the trial, appointed a local lawyer who undertook the task with reluctance. The defendants were convicted. They challenged their convictions, arguing that they were effectively denied aid of counsel because they did not have the opportunity to consult with their lawyer and prepare a defense. The U.S. Supreme Court agreed. Writing for the court, Mr. Justice George Sutherland explained : & quot; It is hardly necessary to say that the right to counsel being conceded, a defendant should be afforded a fair opportunity to secure counsel of his own choice. Not only was that not done here, but such designation of counsel as was attempted was either so indefinite or so close upon the trial as to amount to a denial of effective and substantial aid....."

24. In the same decision Justice Sutherland observed: & quot What, then, does a hearing include? Historically and in practice, in our own country at least, it has always included the right to the aid of counsel when desired and provided by the party asserting the right. The right to be heard would be, in many cases, of little avail if it did not comprehend the right to be heard by counsel. Even the intelligent and educated layman has small and sometimes no skill in the science of law. If charged with crime, he is incapable, generally, of determining for himself whether the indictment is good or bad. He is unfamiliar with the rules of evidence. Left without the aid of counsel he may be put on trial without a proper charge, and convicted upon incompetent evidence, or evidence irrelevant to the issue or otherwise inadmissible. He lacks both the skill and knowledge adequately to prepare his defense, even though he have a perfect one. He requires the guiding hand of counsel at every step in the proceedings against him. Without it, though he be not guilty, he faces the danger of conviction because he does not know how to establish his innocence. If that be true of men of intelligence, how much more true is it of the ignorant and illiterate, or those of feeble intellect. If in any case, civil or criminal, a state or federal court were arbitrarily to refuse to hear a party by counsel, employed by and appearing for him, it reasonably may not be doubted that such a refusal would be a denial of a hearing, and, therefore, of due process in the constitutional sense & quot;.

25. In this connection we may also refer to the legendry American lawyer Clarence Darrow (1857-1930) who was strongly of the view that every accused, no matter how wicked, loathsome, vile or repulsive he may be regarded by society has the right to be defended in court. Most lawyers in America refused to accept the briefs of such apparently wicked and loathsome persons, e.g. brutal killers, terrorists, etc. but Clarence Darrow would accept their briefs and defend them, because he was firmly of the view that every persons has the right to be defended in court, and correspondingly it was the duty of the lawyer to defend. His defenses in various trials of such vicious, repulsive and loathsome persons became historical, and made him known in America as the `Attorney for the Damned', (because he took up the cases of persons who were regarded so vile, depraved and despicable by society that they had already been condemned by public opinion) and he became a legend in America (see his biography `Attorney for the Damned').

26. In Re Anastaplo, 366 US 82 (1961), Mr. Justice Hugo Black of the US Supreme Court in his dissenting judgment praised Darrow and said : & quot; Men like Lord Erskine, James Otis, Clarence Darrow, and a multitude of others have dared to speak in defense of causes and clients without regard to personal danger to themselves. The legal profession will lose much of its nobility and its glory if it is not constantly replenished with lawyers like these. To force the Bar to become a group of thoroughly orthodox, time-serving, government-fearing individuals is to humiliate and degrade it.& quot;

27. At the Nuremberg trials, the Nazi war criminals responsible for killing millions of people were yet defended by lawyers.

28. We may also refer to the fictional American lawyer Atticus Finch in Harper Lee's famous novel `To Kill a Mocking Bird'. In this novel Atticus Finch courageously defended a black man who was falsely charged in the State of Alabama for raping a white woman, which was a capital offence in that State. Despite the threats of violence to him and his family by the racist white population in town, and despite social ostracism by the predominant while community, Atticus Finch bravely defended that black man (though he was ultimately convicted and hanged because the jury was racist and biased), since he believed that everyone has a right to be defended. This novel inspired many young Americans to take up law as a profession in America.

29. The following words of Atticus Finch will ring throughout in history : & quot; Courage is not a man with a gun in his hand. It is knowing you are licked before you begin, but you begin anyway and you see it through no matter what. You rarely win, but sometimes you do & quot;

30. In our own country, Article 22(1) of the Constitution states : & quot; No person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds for which arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult, and to be defended by, a legal practitioner of his choice & quot;.

31. Chapter II of the Rules framed by the Bar Council of India states about `Standards of Professional Conduct and Etiquette', as follows : & quot; An advocate is bound to accept any brief in the Courts or Tribunals or before any other authorities in or before which he proposes to practice at a fee consistent with his standing at the Bar and the nature of the case. Special circumstances may justify his refusal to accept a particular brief & quot;.

32. Professional ethics requires that a lawyer cannot refuse a brief, provided a client is willing to pay his fee, and the lawyer is not otherwise engaged. Hence, the action of any Bar Association in passing such a resolution that none of its members will appear for a particular accused, whether on the ground that he is a policeman or on the ground that he is a suspected terrorist, rapist, mass murderer, etc. is against all norms of the Constitution, the Statute and professional ethics. It is against the great traditions of the Bar which has always stood up for defending persons accused for a crime. Such a resolution is, in fact, a disgrace to the legal community. We declare that all such resolutions of Bar Associations in India are null and void and the right minded lawyers should ignore and defy such resolutions if they want democracy and rule of law to be upheld in this country. It is the duty of a lawyer to defend no matter what the consequences, and a lawyer who refuses to do so is not following the message of the Gita.

33. The Registry of this Court will circulate copies of this judgment/order to all High Court Bar Associations and State Bar Councils in India. The High Court Bar Associations are requested to circulate the judgment/order to all the District Court Bar Associations in their States/Union territories.

34. With these observations, these appeals are disposed of. No costs. ….. J

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judge(s) : K.T.THOMAS, R.P.Sethi, JJ

R.D. Saxena …..Vs…. Balram Prasad Sharma

[A] Change of Advocate – A litigant must have the freedom to change his advocate when he feels that the advocate engaged by him is not capable of handling the case or his conduct is prejudicial to the case of the litigant for any other reason – If for whatever reason the client does not want to continue the engagement of a particular advocate then that advocate is bound to return the brief to the client – It is absolute right of the litigant to get back his brief – The advocate cannot withhold the brief for any reason including his outstanding fee – Failure to observe this procedure is a professional misconduct and the advocate is liable for action.

[B] Civil P.C. order 3, Rule 4 (1) – Article 22 (1) of the constitution – Right to have advocate of his choice – Held- Supreme Court in earlier decision (in AIR 1966 SC 1910) made it clear that the word 'of his choice' in Article 22(1) indicate that the right of the accused to change an advocate whom he once engaged in the same case, cannot be whittled down by that advocate by withholding the case bundle on the premise that he has to get fees for the services already rendered to the client.

[C] Professional Misconduct – Advocates Act Sec.35 – Professional Misconduct may consist in betraying the confidence of a client, in attempting by any means to practice a fraud or deceive the court or the adverse party or his counsel, and any conduct which tends to bring reproach on the legal profession – OR – Anything done which would be regarded as disgraceful or dishonorable by his professional brethren of good repute and competency.

[D] Quantum of Punishment – As the Supreme court had not pronounced any Judgment on this issue earlier therefore the advocate would have bonafidely believed in the light of decisions of certain High courts that his act is legal – Therefore, it is not desirable to impose a harsh punishment – A reprimand would be sufficient in the interest of justice – However it is made clear that the lesser punishment imposed now, need not be counted as a precedent.

JUDGMENT:

THOMAS, J.

The main issue posed in this appeal has sequential importance for members of the legal profession. The issue is this: Has the advocate a lien for his fees on the litigation papers entrusted to him by his client? In this case the Bar Council of India, without deciding the above crucial issue, has chosen to impose punishment on a delinquent advocate debarring him from practicing for a period of 18 months and a fine of Rs.1000/-. The advocate concerned was further directed to return all the case bundles which he got from his client respondent without any delay. This appeal is filed by the said advocate under Section 38 of the Advocates Act, 1961.

As the question involved in this appeal has topical importance for the legal profession we heard learned counsel at length. To appreciate the contentions we would present the factual backdrop as under:

Appellant, now a septuagenarian, has been practicing as an advocate mostly in the courts at Bhopal, after enrolling himself as a legal practitioner with the State Bar Council of Madha Pradesh. According to him, he was appointed as legal advisor to the Madhya Pradesh State Co- operative Bank Ltd. (Bank, for short) in 1990 and the Bank continued to retain him in that capacity during the succeeding years. He was also engaged by the said Bank to conduct cases in which the Bank was a party. However, the said retainership did not last long. On 17.7.1993 the Bank terminated the retainership of the appellant and requested him to return all the case files relating to the Bank. Instead of returning the files the appellant forwarded a consolidated bill to the Bank showing an amount of Rs.97,100/- as the balance payable by the Bank towards the legal remuneration to which he is entitled. He informed the Bank that the files would be returned only after setting his dues.

Correspondence went on between the appellant and the Bank regarding the amount, if any, payable to the appellant as the balance due to him. Respondent Bank disclaimed any liability outstanding from them to the appellant. The dispute remained unresolved and the case bundles never passed from appellants hands. As the cases were pending the Bank was anxious to have the files for continuing the proceedings before the courts/tribunals concerned. At the same time the Bank was not disposed to capitulate to the terms dictated by the appellant which they regarded as grossly unreasonable. A complaint was hence filed by the Managing Director of the Bank, before the State Bar Council (Madhya Pradesh) on 3.2.1994. It was alleged in the complaint that appellant is guilty of professional misconduct by not returning the files to his client.

In the reply which the appellant submitted before the Bar Council he admitted that the files were not returned but claimed that he has a right to retain such files by exercising his right of lien and offered to return the files as soon as payment is made to him.

The complaint was then forwarded to the Disciplinary Committee of the District Bar Council. The State Bar Council failed to dispose of the complaint even after the expiry of one year. So under Section 36-B of the Advocates Act the proceedings stood transferred to the Bar Council of India. After holding inquiry the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar Council of India reached the conclusion that appellant is guilty of professional misconduct. The Disciplinary Committee has stated the following in the impugned order:

On the basis of the complaint as well as the documents available on record we are of the opinion that the Respondent is guilty of professional misconduct and thereby he is liable for punishment. The complainant is a public institution. It was the duty of the Respondent to return the briefs to the Bank and also to appear before the committee to revert his allegations made in application dated 8.11.95. No such attempt was made by him.

In this appeal learned counsel for the appellant contended that the failure of the Bar Council of India to consider the singular defence set up by the appellant i.e. he has a lien over the files for his unpaid fees due to him, has resulted in miscarriage of justice. The Bank contended that there was no fee payable to the appellant and the amount shown by him was on account of inflating the fees. Alternatively, the respondent contended that an advocate cannot retain the files after the client terminated his engagement and that there is no lien on such files.

We would first examine whether an advocate has lien on the files entrusted to him by the client. Learned counsel for the appellant endeavoured to base his contention on Section 171 of the Indian Contract Act which reads thus:

Bankers, factors, wharfingers, attorneys of a High Court and policy- brokers may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, retain, as a security for a general balance of account, any goods bailed to them; but no other persons have a right to retain, as a security for such balance, goods bailed to them, unless there is an express contract to that effect.

Files containing copies of the records (perhaps some original documents also) cannot be equated with the goods referred to in the section. The advocate keeping the files cannot amount to goods bailed. The word bailment is defined in Section 148 of the Contract Act as the delivery of goods by one person to another for some purpose, upon a contract that they shall be returned or otherwise disposed of according to the directions of the person delivering them, when the purpose is accomplished. In the case of litigation papers in the hands of the advocate there is neither delivery of goods nor any contract that they shall be returned or otherwise disposed of. That apart, the word goods mentioned in Section 171 is to be understood in the sense in which that word is defined in the Sale of Goods Act. It must be remembered that Chapter-VII of the Contract Act, comprising sections 76 to 123, had been wholly replaced by the Sales of Goods Act, 1930. The word goods is defined in Section 2(7) of the Sales of Goods Act as every kind of movable property other than actionable claims and money; and includes stock and shares, growing crops, grass, and things attached, to or forming part of the land which are agreed to be severed before sale or under the contract of sale.

Thus understood goods to fall within the purview of Section 171 of the Contract Act should have marketability and the person to whom it is bailed should be in a position to dispose it of in consideration of money. In other words the goods referred to in Section 171 of the Contract Act are saleable goods. There is no scope for converting the case files into money, nor can they be sold to any third party. Hence, the reliance placed on Section 171 of the Contract Act has no merit.

In England the solicitor had a right to retain any deed, paper or chattel which has come into his possession during the course of his employment. It was the position in common law and it later recognized as the solicitors right under Solicitors Act, 1860. In Halsburys Laws of England, it is stated thus (vide paragraph 226 in volume 44): 226. Solicitors rights. At common law a solicitor has two rights which are termed liens. The first is a right to retain property already in his possession until he is paid costs due to him in his professional capacity, and the second is a right to ask the court to direct that personal property recovered under a judgment obtained by his exertions stand as security for his costs of such recovery. In addition, a solicitor has by statute a right to apply to the court for a charging order on property recovered or preserved through his instrumentality in respect of his taxed costs of the suit, matter or proceeding prosecuted ordefended by him.

Before India attained independence different High Courts in India had adopted different views regarding the question whether an advocate has a lien over the litigation files kept with him. In P. Krishnamachariar vs. The Official Assignee of Madras, (AIR 1932 Madras 256) a Division Bench held that an advocate could not have such a lien unless there was an express agreement to the contrary. The Division Bench has distinguished an earlier decision of the Bombay High Court in Tyabji Dayabhai & Co. vs. Jetha Devji & Co. (AIR 1927 Bombay 542) wherein the English law relating to the solicitors lien was followed. Subsequently, a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in 1943 followed the decision of the Division Bench. A Full Bench of the Patna High Court in In re B.N. Advocate in the matter of Misc. Judl. Case No.18/33 (AIR 1933 Pat 571) held the view that an advocate could not claim a right to retain the certified copy of the judgment obtained by him on the premise that an appeal was to be filed against it. Of course the Bench said that if the client had specifically instructed him to do so it is open to him to keep it.

After independence the position would have continued until the enactment of the Advocates Act 1961 which has repealed a host of enactments including Indian Bar Council Act. When the new Bar Council of India came into existence it framed Rules called the Bar Council of India Rules as empowered by the Advocates Act. Such Rules contain provision specifically prohibiting an advocate from adjusting the fees payable to him by a client against his own personal liability to the client. As a rule an Advocate shall not do anything whereby he abuses or takes advantage of the confidence reposed in him by his client,(vide Rule 24). In this context a reference can be made to Rules 28 and 29 which are extracted below:

28. After the termination of the proceeding, the Advocate shall be at liberty to appropriate towards the settled fee due to him, any sum remaining unexpended out of the amount paid or sent to him for expenses, or any amount that has come into his hands in that proceeding.

29. Where the fee has been left unsettled, the Advocate shall be entitled to deduct, out of any moneys of the client remaining in his hands, at the termination of the proceeding for which he had been engaged, the fee payable under the rules of the Court, in force for the time being, or by then settled and the balance, if any, shall be refunded to the client.

Thus, even after providing a right for an advocate to deduct the fees out of any money of the client remaining in his hand at the termination of the proceeding for which the advocate was engaged, it is important to notice that no lien is provided on the litigation files kept with him. In the conditions prevailing in India with lots of illiterate people among the litigant public it may not be advisable also to permit the counsel to retain the case bundle for the fees claimed by him. Any such lien if permitted would become susceptible to great abuses and exploitation.

There is yet another reason which dissuades us from giving approval to any such lien. We are sure that nobody would dispute the proposition that the cause in a court/tribunal is far more important for all concerned than the right of the legal practitioner for his remuneration in respect of the services rendered for espousing the cause on behalf of the litigant. If a need arises for the litigant to change his counsel pendente lite, that which is more important should have its even course flowed unimpeded. Retention of records for the unpaid remuneration of the advocate would impede such course and the cause pending judicial disposal would be badly impaired. If a medical practitioner is allowed a legal right to withhold the papers relating to the treatment of his patient which he thus far administered to him for securing the unpaid bill, that would lead to dangerous consequences for the uncured patient who is wanting to change his doctor. Perhaps the said illustration may be an over-statement as a necessary corollary for approving the lien claimed by the legal practitioner. Yet the illustration is not too far-fetched. No professional can be given the right to withhold the returnable records relating to the work done by him with his clients matter on the strength of any claim for unpaid remuneration. The alternative is that the professional concerned can resort to other legal remedies for such unpaid remuneration.

A litigant must have the freedom to change his advocate when he feels that the advocate engaged by him is not capable of espousing his cause efficiently or that his conduct is prejudicial to the interest involved in the lis, or for any other reason. For whatever reason, if a client does not want to continue the engagement of a particular advocate it would be a professional requirement consistent with the dignity of the profession that he should return the brief to the client. It is time to hold that such obligation is not only a legal duty but a moral imperative.

In civil cases, the appointment of an advocate by a party would be deemed to be in force until it is determined with the leave of the court, (vide order 3, Rule 4(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure). In criminal cases, every person accused of an offence has the right to consult and be defended by a legal practitioner of his choice which is now made a fundamental right under Article 22(1) of the Constitution. The said right is absolute in itself and it does not depend on other laws. In this context reference can be made to the decision of this Court in State of Madhya Pradesh vs. Shobharam and ors. (AIR 1966 SC 1910). The words of his choice in Article 22(1) indicate that the right of the accused to change an advocate whom he once engaged in the same case, cannot be whittled down by that advocate by withholding the case bundle on the premise that he has to get the fees for the services already rendered to the client.

If a party terminates the engagement of an advocate before the culmination of the proceedings that party must have the entire file with him to engage another advocate. But if the advocate who is changed midway adopts the stand that he would not return the file until the fees claimed by him is paid, the situation perhaps may turn to dangerous proportion. There may be cases when a party has no resource to pay the huge amount claimed by the advocate as his remuneration. A party in a litigation may have a version that he has already paid the legitimate fee to the advocate. At any rate if the litigation is pending the party has the right to get the papers from the advocate whom he has changed so that the new counsel can be briefed by him effectively. In either case it is impermissible for the erstwhile counsel to retain the case bundle on the premise that fees is yet to be paid.

Even if there is no lien on the litigation papers of his client an advocate is not without remedies to realise the fee which he is legitimately entitled to. But if he has a duty to return the files to his client on being discharged the litigant too has a right to have the files returned to him, more so when the remaining part of the lis has to be fought in the court. This right of the litigant is to be read as the corresponding counterpart of the professional duty of the advocate.

Misconduct envisaged in Section 35 of the Advocates Act is not defined. The section uses the expression misconduct, professional or otherwise. The word misconduct is a relative term. It has to be considered with reference to the subject matter and the context wherein such term occurs. It literally means wrong conduct or improper conduct.Corpus Juris Secundum, contains the following passage at page 740 (vol.7):

Professional misconduct may consist in betraying the confidence of a client, in attempting by any means to practise a fraud or impose on or deceive the court or the adverse party or his counsel, and in fact in any conduct which tends to bring reproach on the legal profession or to alienate the favourable opinion which the public should entertain concerning it.

The expression professional misconduct was attempted to be defined by Darling, J., in In re A Solicitor ex parte the Law Society [(1912) 1 KB 302] in the following terms: It it is shown that an Advocate in the pursuit of his profession has done something with regard to it which would be reasonably regarded as disgraceful or dishonourable by his professional brethren of good repute and competency, then it is open to say that he is guilty of professional misconduct.

In this context it is to be mentioned that the aforesaid definition secured approval by the Privy Council in George Frier Grahame vs. Attorney-General, Fiji,(1936 PC 224). We are also inclined to take that wide canvass for understanding the import of the expression misconduct in the context in which it is referred to in Section 35 of the Advocates Act.

We, therefore, that the refusal to return the files to the client when he demanded the same amounted to misconduct under Section 35 of the Act. Hence, the appellant in the present case is liable to punishment for such misconduct.

However, regarding the quantum of punishment we are disposed to take into account two broad aspects: (1) this court has not pronounced, so far, on the question whether advocate has a lien on the files for his fees. (2) the appellant would have bona fide believed, in the light of decisions of certain High Courts, that he did have a lien. In such circumstances it is not necessary to inflict a harsh punishment on the appellant. A reprimand would be sufficient in the interest of justice on the special facts of this case.

We, therefore, alter the punishment to one of reprimanding the appellant. However, we make it clear that if any advocate commits this type of professional misconduct in future he would be liable to such quantum of punishment as the Bar Council will determine and the lesser punishment imposed now need not be counted as a precedent.Appeal is disposed of accordingly.

Special Leave Petition (C) 26269 Of 2004 Dec 14,2004

Advocate to gain private profit and to gain ulterior purposes filed petition and claiming it to be in the interest of public- official document annexed to the petition but no explanation is given as to how he come in possession thereof –the attractive brand name of public interest litigation should not be used for suspicious product of mischief and it should not be publicity oriented or founded on personal vendetta – Bar Council and Bar Association directed to ensure that no member of the bar becomes party as petitioner file frivolous petitions- no one should be permitted to bring disgrace to the noble profession and high traditions of the bar. Imposition of cost Rs 25000/ on advocate is proper- Copy of order sent to Bar Council for necerry action against advocate.

Arijit Pasayat, J.

(1.) This case is a sad reflection on members of the legal profession and is almost a black spot on the noble profession. The petitioner who belongs to this profession filed a petition styled as "Public Interest Litigation" before the Nagpur Bench of the Bombay High Court. By the impugned judgment, the High Court dismissed it holding that there was no public interest involved and in fact the petitioner had resorted to black mailing respondent Nos. 6 and 7 and was caught red handed accepting "black mailing" money. The High Court also noticed that the allegations of unauthorized constructions made in the petition were also not true.

(2.) Cost of Rs. 25.000/- (Rupees twenty five thousand only) which was levied, was directed to be paid to the affected respondent Nos. 6 and 7 before the High Court.

(3.) It is, in fact, a black day for the black robed professionals, if the allegation, as found by the High Court to be true and which presently appear to be the subject matter of further proceedings in a criminal case, are true. This will leave the members of the legal profession black faced for the black deed of the petitioner who may be as the High Court found a black sheep in the profession. Though the petition filed by the petitioner carried the attractive brand name of "Public Interest Litigation", the least that can be said is that it smacks of every thing what the Public Interest Litigation should not be.

(4.) When there is material to show that a petition styled as a public interest litigation is nothing but a camouflage to foster personal disputes, said petition is to be thrown out. Before we grapple with the issue involved in the present case, we feel it necessary to consider the issue regarding public interest aspect. Public Interest Litigation which has now come to occupy an important field in the administration of law should not be "publicity interest litigation " or "private interest litigation" or "politics interest litigation" or the latest trend "paise income litigation". The High Court has found that the case at hand belongs to the last category. If not properly regulated and abuse averted, it becomes also a tool in unscrupulous hands to release vendetta and wreck vengeance, as well. There must be real and genuine public interest involved in the litigation and not merely an adventure of knight errant borne out of wishful thinking. It cannot also be invoked by a person or a body of persons to further his or their personal causes or satisfy his or their personal grudge and enmity. Courts of justice should not be allowed to be polluted by unscrupulous litigants by resorting to the extraordinary jurisdiction. A person acting bona fide and having sufficient interest in the proceeding of public interest litigation will alone have a locus standi and can approach the Court to wipe out violation of fundamental rights and genuine infraction of statutory provisions, but not for personal gain or private profit or political motive or any oblique consideration. These aspects were highlighted by this Court in The Janta Dal v. H.S. Chowdhary (1992 (4) SCC 305) and Kazi Lhendup Dorji vs. Centra / Bureau of Investigation, (1994 Supp (2) SCC 116). A writ petitioner who comes to the Court for relief in public interest must come not only with clean hands like any other writ petitioner but also with a clean heart, clean mind and clean objective. (See Ramjas Foundation vs. Union of India, (AIR 1993 SC 852) and K.R. Srinivas v. R.M. Premchand, (1994 (6) SCC 620).

(5.) It is necessary to take note of the meaning of expression 'public interest litigation'. In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, Volume 4 (IV Edition), 'Public Interest' is defined thus:
"Public Interest (1) a matter of public or general interest does not mean that which is interesting as gratifying curiosity or a love of information or amusement but that in which a class of the community have a pecuniary interest, or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected."

(6.) In Black's Law Dictionary (Sixth Edition), "public interest" is defined as follows:
"Public Interest something in which the public, or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected. It does not mean anything the particular localities, which may be affected by the matters in question. Interest shared by national government....."

(7.) In Janata Dal case (supra) this Court considered the scope of public interest litigation. In para 52 of the said judgment, after considering what is public interest, has laid down as follows:
"The, expression litigation' means a legal action including all proceedings therein initiated in a Court of law for the enforcement of right or seeking a remedy. Therefore, lexically the expression "PIL" means the legal action initiated in a Court of law for the enforcement of public interest or general interest in which the public or a class of the community have pecuniary interest or some interest by which their legal rights or liabilities are affected."

(8.) In paras 60, 61 and 62 of the said judgment, it was pointed out as follows:
"Be that as it may, it is needless to emphasis that the requirement of locus standi of a party to a litigation is mandatory, because the legal capacity of the party to any litigation whether in private or public action in relation to any specific remedy sought for has to be primarily ascertained at the threshold."

(9.) In para 96 of the said judgment, it has further been pointed out as follows:
"While this Court has laid down a chain of notable decisions with all emphasis at their command about the importance and significance of this newly developed doctrine of PIL, it has also hastened to sound a red alert and a note of severe warning that Courts should not allow its process to be abused by a mere busy body or a meddlesome interloper or wayfarer or officious intervener without any interest or concern except for personal gain or private profit or other oblique consideration."

(10.) In subsequent paras of the said judgment, it was observed as follows:
"It is thus clear that only a person acting bona fide and having sufficient interest in the proceeding of PIL will alone have as locus standi and can approach the Court to wipe out the tears of the poor and needy, suffering from violation of their fundamental rights, but not a person for personal gain or private profit or political motive or any oblique consideration. Similarly a vexatious petition under the colour of PIL,brought before the Court for vindicating any personal grievance, deserves rejection at the threshold".
(11.) It is depressing to note that on account of such trumpery proceedings initiated before the Courts, innumerable days are wasted, which time otherwise could have been spent for the disposal of cases of the genuine litigants. Though we spare no efforts in fostering and developing the laudable concept of PIL and extending our long arm of sympathy to the poor, the ignorant, the oppressed and the needy whose fundamental rights are infringed and violated and whose grievances go unnoticed, un-represented and unheard; yet we cannot avoid but express our opinion that while genuine litigants with legitimate grievances relating to civil matters involving properties worth hundreds of millions of rupees and criminal cases in which persons sentenced to death facing gallows under untold agony and persons sentenced to life imprisonment and kept in incarceration for long years, persons suffering from undue delay in service matters - government or private, persons awaiting the disposal of cases wherein huge amounts of public revenue or unauthorized collection of tax amounts are locked up, detenu expecting their release from the detention orders etc. etc. are all standing in a long serpentine queue for years with the fond hope of getting into the Courts and having their grievances redressed, the busybodies, meddlesome interlopers, wayfarers or officious interveners having absolutely no public interest except for personal gain or private profit either of themselves or as a proxy of others or for any other extraneous motivation or for glare of publicity break the queue muffing their faces by wearing the mask of public interest litigation and get into the Courts by filing vexatious and frivolous petitions and thus criminally waste the valuable time of the Courts and as a result of which the queue standing outside the doors of the Courts never moves, which piquant situation creates frustration in the minds of the genuine litigants and resultantly they loose faith in the administration of our judicial system.

(12.) Public interest litigation is a weapon which has to be used with great care and circumspection and the judiciary has to be extremely careful to see that behind the beautiful veil of public interest an ugly private malice, vested interest and/or publicity seeking is not lurking. It is to be used as an effective weapon in the armory of law for delivering social justice to the citizens. The attractive brand name of public interest litigation should not be used for suspicious products of mischief. It should be aimed at redressal of genuine public wrong or pubic injury and not publicity oriented or founded on personal vendetta. As indicated above, Court must be careful to see that a body of persons or member of public, who approaches the court is acting bona fide and not for personal gain or private motive or political motivation or other oblique considerations. The Court must not allow its process to be abused for oblique considerations by masked phantoms who monitor at times from behind. Some persons with vested interest indulge in the pastime of meddling with judicial process either by force of habit or from improper motives, and try to bargain for a good deal as well to enrich themselves. Often they are actuated by a desire to win notoriety or cheap popularity. The petitions of such busy bodies deserve to be thrown out by rejection at the threshold, and in appropriate cases with exemplary costs.

(13.) The Council for Public Interest Law set up by the Ford Foundation in USA defined the "public interest litigation" in its report of Public Interest Law, USA, 1976 as follows: "Public Interest Law is the name that has recently been given to efforts provide legal representation to previously unrepresented groups and interests. Such efforts have been undertaken in the recognition that ordinary market place for legal services fails to provide such services to significant segments of the population and to significant interests. Such groups and interests include the proper environmentalists, consumers, racial and ethnic minorities and others."

(14.) The Court has to be satisfied about (a) the credentials of the applicant; (b) the prima facie correctness or nature of information given by him; (c) the information being not vague and indefinite. The information should show gravity and seriousness involved. Court has to strike balance between two conflicting interests; (i) nobody should be allowed to indulge in wild and reckless allegations besmirching the character of others; and (ii) avoidance of public mischief and to avoid mischievous petitions seeking to assail, for oblique motives, justifiable executive actions. In such case, however, the Court cannot afford to be liberal. It has to be extremely careful to see that under the guise of redressing a public grievance, it does not encroach upon the sphere reserved by the Constitution to the Executive and the Legislature. The Court has to act ruthlessly while dealing with imposters and busybodies or meddlesome interlopers impersonating as public-spirited holy men. They masquerade as crusaders of justice. They pretend to act in the name of Pro Bono Publico, though they have no interest of the public or even of their own to protect.

(15.) Courts must do justice by promotion of good faith, and prevent law from crafty invasions. Courts must maintain the social balance by interfering where necessary for the sake of justice and refuse to interfere where it is against the social interest and public good. (See State of Maharashtra vs. Prabhu, (1994 (2) SCC 481), and Andhra Pradesh State Financial Corporation vs. M/s GAR Re-Rolling Mills and Anr., (AIR 1994 SC 2151). No litigant has a right to unlimited draught on the Court time and public money in order to get his affairs settled in the manner as he wishes. Easy access to justice should not be misused as a licence to file misconceived and frivolous petitions. (See Dr. B.K. Subbarao vs. Mr. K, Parasaran, (1996 (7) JT 265). Today people rush to Courts to file cases in profusion under this attractive name of public interest. They must inspire confidence in Courts and among the public. (16.) As noted supra, a time has come to weed out the petitions, which though titled as public interest litigations are in essence something else. It is shocking to note that Courts are flooded with large number of so called public interest litigations where even a minuscule percentage can legitimately be called as public interest litigations. Though the parameters of public interest litigation have been indicated by this Court in large number of cases, yet unmindful of the real intentions and objectives, Courts are entertaining such petitions and wasting valuable judicial time which, as noted above, could be otherwise utilized for disposal of genuine cases. Though in Dr. Duryodhan Sahu and Ors. v. Jitendra Kumar Mishra and Ors. (AIR 1999 SC 114), this Court held that in service matters PILs should not be entertained, the inflow of so-called PILs involving service matters continues unabated in the Courts and strangely are entertained. The least the High Courts could do is to throw them out on the basis of the said decision. The other interesting aspect is that in the PILs, official documents are being annexed without even indicating as to how the petitioner came to possess them. In one case, it was noticed that an interesting answer was given as to its possession. It was stated that a packet was lying on the road and when out of curiosity the petitioner opened it, he found copies of the official documents. Apart from the sinister manner, if any, of getting such copies, the real brain or force behind such cases would get exposed to find out the truth and motive behind the petition. Whenever such frivolous pleas, as noted, are taken to explain possession, the Court should do well not only to dismiss the petitions but also to impose exemplary costs. It would be desirable for the Courts to filter out the, frivolous petitions and dismiss them with costs as afore-stated so that the message goes in the right direction that petitions filed with oblique motive do not have the approval of the Courts. (17.) In S.P. Gupta v. Union of India (1981 Supp. SCC 87) it was emphatically pointed out that the relaxation of the rule of locus standi in the field of PIL does not give any right to a busybody or meddlesome interloper to approach the Court under the guise of a public interest litigant. He has also left the following note of caution: (SCC p.219, para 24)

"But we must be careful to see that the member of the public, who approaches the court in cases of this kind, is acting bona fide and not for personal gain or private profit or political motivation or other oblique consideration. The court must not allow its process to be abused by politicians and others to delay legitimate administrative action or to gain a political objective."

(18.) In State of H.P. vs. A Parent of a Student of Medical College, Simla and Ors. (1985 (3) SCC 169), it has been said that public interest litigation is a weapon which has to be used with great care and circumspection.
(19.) These aspects have been highlighted in Ashok Kumar Pandey v. State of West Bengal (2004 (3) SCC 349) and Dr. B. Singh v. Union of India and Ors. (2004 (3) SCC 363).
(20.) It is disturbing feature which needs immediate remedial measure by the Bar Councils and the Bar Association to see that the process of law is not abused and polluted by its member. It is high time that the Bar Councils and the Bar Associations ensure that no member of the Bar becomes party as petitioner or in aiding and/or abetting files frivolous petitions carrying the attractive brand name of "Public Interest Litigation". That will be keeping in line with the high traditions of the Bar. No one should be permitted to bring disgrace to the noble profession. We would have imposed exemplary cost in this regard but taking note of the fact that the High Court had already imposed costs of Rs. 25.000/-, we do not propose to impose any further cost.
(21.) Let copy of this judgment be sent to Bar Council of India and the Supreme Court Bar Association by the Registry for necessary action.
(22.) The petition deserves to be dismissed, which we direct. Appeal dismissed.

[A] Criminal Trial – Representation by Advocate without filing vakalatnama – Like in Civil cases the advocate need not to file Vakalatnama in criminal cases – Filing of memo of appearance is sufficient – Court should be liberal in such type of cases – The prosecution have no right to put objection on the memo of appearance by the advocate.

[B] Failure by Junior Advocate to file Vakaltnama and memo of appearance on behalf of accused can be no ground for the court to reject the application for exemption filed by the junior advocate – The act of Magistrate rejecting the application and issuing N.B.W. is illegal – Order is set aside and N.B.W. recalled.

ORDER :- Revision filed against the order of the XXI Additional City Civil and Sessions Judge and Special Judge in Special Case No. 131/1997. On 20-9-2002 the accused No. 1 was present before the Court. Accused to 4 were absent. An application was filed for exemption by Smt. Vanitha, a Junior colleague of Sri. Dhanraj. It is unfortunate, on the previous day, Sri Dhanraj had expired. The trial Court took exception that the Junior Counsel has no authority to represent the accused to file an exemption application, thus rejected the application and issued N.B.W. Being aggrieved, the present Revision is filed.

2. The impugned order of the trial Court appears to be palpably erroneous. May be some technical lapse might have occurred on the part of the Junior Counsel in not filing a memo of appearance along with the exemption application. The Court should have considered the matter liberally in the facts and circumstances of the case. Unlike in civil cases, it is not necessary in criminal case that a vakalath has to be filed. In criminal cases, it is sufficient if a memo of appearance is filed by an advocate with a declaration that he has instructions from his client to represent him in the case. Such memo of appearance enable sufficient authority and power to represent the accused. The contents of memo of appearance cannot be challenged by the prosecution. It is only the accused for whose benefit the memo is filed can challenge. In the given set of the legal propositions, the Court was not proper in rejecting the application for exemption.

Accordingly, the Revision is allowed. The order of the trial Court is set aside. The N.B.W. issued against the petitioners is recalled. .. Revision allowed.

Judgement

ORDER :- The Sessions Judge Sarguja at Ambikapur has, by his report under Section 438 of the Criminal Procedure Code, recommended that the order dated 26-7-1973 passed by the Additional District Magistrate (J), Ambikapur in Criminal Case No. 505/73, whereby the prayer of Shri N.N. Singh, Advocate to dispense with the attendance of the accused Lohra on that date of hearing, was rejected on the ground that no Vakalatnama was filed by him authorising him to appear for the accused, be set aside as it was patently illegal and unwarranted.

2. The learned Additional District Magistrate lost sight of the fact that under Article 22, an accused has a right to be defended by a legal practitioner of his choice and in the instant case. Shri Singh Advocate had been so appearing till then and that not only he appeared, but could also appear, act and fully represent the said accused on the basis of a memo of appearance under his own signature declaring himself to be authorised and instructed to so appear. No Vakalatnama, as is required in civil proceedings, is necessary for pleading and acting for any party to any criminal proceedings.

3. 'Pleader' is defined in Section 4(1)(r) of the Criminal Procedure Code as a Pleader or Mukhtyar authorised under any law for the time being in force to practise in a Court of law and includes (1) an Advocate a Vakil and an Attorney of a High Court so authorised ..... Shri Singh, being an Advocate, was authorised to practise in a Court. What the expression 'Practise' means is duly laid down by the Supreme Court to include both acting and pleading. (See AIR 1952 SC 369). Thus on the date of hearing, Shri Singh Advocate, when he proved for grant of exemption to accused Lohra from personal appearance in Court for that date, he was acting for the said accused and he could do that without any formal Vakalatnama in his favour. His own declaration of his being authorised by the said accused Lohra was sufficient.

4. I, therefore, accept this reference, set aside the order dated 26-7-1973 and direct the Additional District Magistrate concerned to formally pass now an order granting exemption to the accused Lohra for the hearing on 21-7-1973. He shall also note for his future guidance that he shall not pass such puerile orders hereafter and waste time not only of his own, but also of higher Courts. Such orders betray a lamentable lack of judicial mind and approach.

Judgement

JUDGMENT :- The Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist Class of 87 Bn. Central Reserve Force Police (hereinafter referred to as 'the CRPF') by his order dated 17-2-88 in Case No. 1/88 convicted the respondent under Sections 10(m) and 10(n) of the Central Reserve Police Force Act, 1949 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') and sentenced him under Section 10(m) till rising of the Court and under Section 10(n) to undergo Simple Imprisonment for 90 days.

2. Being aggrieved by the said conviction, the respondent preferred an appeal under Section 374 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Cr. P.C.) before the learned Addl. District Magistrate (J) Aizawal District, Aizawal being Criminal Appeal No. 19/95 who after hearing the learned counsel for the appellant and recording the absence of present appellant/Union of India (Respondent in the said appeal) despite notice, by his impugned order dated 25-10-1995 set aside and quashed the conviction so awarded by the Asstt. Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist, Class holding that the Asstt. Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist Class, not being a Magistrate according to provisions of Rule 36(B) of Central Reserved Police Rules, 1955 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Rules'), had no power to try charges under sub-clause (m) and (n) of Section 10 of the Act for which the punishment awarded by the said authority against the respondent was held to be illegal.

3. I have heard Mr. P. N. Choudhury, learned Addl. CGSC appearing on behalf of the appellant and also heard Mr. M. N. Ali, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent.

4. The crucial issue involved in this present criminal appeal is whether the Asstt. Commandant exercising power of Judicial Magistrate Ist Class has been vested with the power of Magistrate under Section 16(2) of the Act to try the offences charged under sub-clause (m) and (n) of Section 10 of the Act against the respondent.

5. Assailing the impugned judgment, Mr. P. N. Choudhury, learned Addl. CGSC has vehemently argued that the finding of the Appellate Court is ex-facie perverse because the learned Addl. District Magistrate committed a grave error in coming to the conclusive finding to the effect that the learned Asstt. Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist Class has not been vested with the power of the Magistrate to try the offences against the respondent on the basis of Rule 36(B) of the Rules and as such, the impugned judgment is liable to be quashed. According to Mr. Choudhury the Appellate Court had also no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal so preferred by the respondent before him since the matter relates to the Para Military Force i.e. Central Reserved Police being governed by a special enactment in the nature of the Act.

6. Defending the impugned judgment Mr. M. M. Ali, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent has contended that the Appellate Court had the jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the appeal preferred against the conviction passed by the learned Asstt. Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist Class who is not a Magistrate in terms of Rule 36(B) of the Rules. His further contention is that the respondent was not afforded any opportunity to defend his case by a pleader of his choice as per provisions of Section 303 of the Cr. P.C. It is contended that according to Rule 36 of the Rules all trials in relation to any one of the offences mentioned in Sections 9 and 10 of the Act is required to be held in accordance with the procedure laid down in Cr. P.C. and as such, the conviction imposed by the Asstt. Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist Class cannot be sustained for non compliance of Section 303 Cr. P.C.

7. For better appreciation of the contentions made on behalf of the parties, it would be expedient and necessary to refer to the relevant provisions of law involved in this present case.

8. Sub-section (m) and (n) of Section 10 read as follows :-

"10. Leas heinous offences-Every member of the Force who.....

(m) absent himself without leave, or without sufficient cause over-stays leave granted to him, or

(n) is guilty of any act or omission which, though not specified in this Act, is prejudicial to good order and discipline, or shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year or with fine which may extend to three months' pay or with both".

9. Section 16(2) may be referred as follows :-

"16. Powers and duties conferrable and imposable on members of the Force.

(1) .....

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (now II of 1974), the Central Government may invest the Commandant or an Assistant Commandant with the powers of a Magistrate of any class for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence committed by a member of the force and punishable under this Act, or any offence committed by a member of the force against the person or property of another member :

Provided that :-

(i) When the offender is on leave or absent from duty, or

(ii) When the offence is not connected with the offender's duties as a member of the Force, or

(iii) When it is a pretty offence, even if connected with the offender's duties as a member of the Force,

The offence may, if the prescribed authority within the limit of whose jurisdiction the offences has been committed, so directs, be inquired into or tried by an ordinary Criminal Court having jurisdiction in the matter."

10. Rule 36 and 36(B) may be extracted as follows :-

"36. Judicial Trials - (a) All trials in relation to any one of the offences specified to any one of the offences specified in Sections 9 and 10 shall be held in accordance with the procedure laid down in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (1973).....

(b) All persons sentenced to imprisonment under the Act shall be confined in the nearest jail.

Provided that if the sentence of imprisonment is for one month or less, "or where the Commandant is satisfied that due to the difficulty of transport and escort of the person sentenced to imprisonment to the nearest jail. It is so desirable, such persons shall be confined in the Quarter Guard of the Force."

"36.(B). Definition :- For the purpose of this chapter "Magistrate" means a Magistrate other than the Commandant or an Assistant Commandant on whom the powers of a Magistrate has been conferred under sub-section (2) of Section 16."

11. On perusal of the provisions of law above noted, it is noticed that offences prescribed under Sections 10(m) and 10(n) of the Act are triable by the Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate, 1st Class being invested with the power of Magistrate according to the provision of Section 16(2) of the Act. The said section has clearly enshrined that the Central Govt. may invest the Commandant or Assistant Commandant with the power of Magistrate of any Class for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence committed by a Member of the Force and punishable under this Act. There is no dispute as regards such investing powers of Magistrate upon the Commandant or Assistant Commandant as for such purpose the Central Govt. had already notified vide GSR 161(E) dated 30-3-1974 which was published in Gazette of India dated 30-3-74 (see foot note A of Section 16 of the Act). The Rule 36(B) which was mainly relied upon by the Appellate Court, has been incorporated under Chapter VI-A under the heading of 'place of Trial and Adjustment of Jurisdiction of Ordinary Courts'. The expression 'Magistrate' occurring in Rule 36-B under this Chapter VI-A of the Rules has been defined in the context of place of trial and adjustment of jurisdiction of only ordinary Courts and not in the context of power conferred upon the Central Government under Section 16(2) of the Act to invest the Commandant or Assistant Commandant to exercise power of a Magistrate to try offence under the Act. That being so, the Appellate Court it appears, misconstrued and misinterpreted this provision of Rule 36-B which has clearly referred to ordinary Courts other than Special Courts constituted under the Act. In Section 16(2) of the Act some special power or duties have been conferred or imposed on members of the Force entrusting special judicial powers for inquiry or trial of any offences committed by a member of the Force and also for resultant punishment under the Act. Therefore, the magisterial power so invested by the Central Govt. on the Commandant or the Asstt. Commandant for trial of any offence under the Act cannot be taken away by Rule 36-B wherein the meaning of Magistrate has been defined in relation to the ordinary Courts only. It is clearly provided under Section 16(2) of the Act that in case of offences like

(i) When the offender is on leave or absent from duty or;

(ii) When the offence is not connected with the offender's duty as a member of the force or;

(iii) When it is a petty offence, even if connected with the offender's duties as a member of the Force. the prescribed authorities like Commandant or Asstt. Commandant within the limit of whose jurisdiction such offence has been committed may direct that such offence may be inquired into or tried by an ordinary Criminal Court having jurisdiction in this matter. In case of trial of such offences by the ordinary Courts only, the definition of Magistrate as per the Rule 36-B is significant. In that view of the matter, I unhesitatingly hold that the Assistant Commandant exercising the power of Magistrate under Section 16(2) of the Act has the legal authority to try the offences which are exclusively covered under this Special Act enacted for the purpose of constitution and regulation of an Armed Central Reserve Police Force and the learned Addl. District Magistrate was absolutely wrong in holding that the Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate has no power to convict the respondent.

12. Now coming to the contentions made on behalf of the respondent to the effect that the respondent was not given the privilege of defending his case by engaging a pleader of his choice as envisaged under Section 303, Cr. P.C. which provides that any person accused of an offence before a Criminal Court or against whom proceedings are instituted under this Code may of right be defended by a pleader of his choice. Ordinary reading of this provision makes it amply clear that a person is entitled to defend his case by engaging a pleader of his choice if he is accused of an offence before a Criminal Court or if any proceeding is initiated against him under this Code. Rule 36 of the Rules on the other hand seemingly envisages that all judicial trials in relation to the offences under Section 9 or 10 of the Act shall be held in accordance with the procedure laid down in Cr. P.C. A bare perusal of the provisions of the Act and Rules goes to indicate that no procedure whatsoever for inquiry or trial for any offences committed by a member of the force under this Act has been prescribed under the Act and Rules save and except Rule 36. Therefore, it may be safely said that since a judicial trial of any offence under Section 9 or 10 of the Act is required to be held in accordance with the procedure laid down in the Cr. P.C. in terms of Rule 36 of the Rules, the respondent was entitled to such privilege of defending his case by engaging a pleader of his choice. On perusal of the records made available before this Court by the learned Addl. CGSC it patently transpires that no such opportunity was given to the respondent to defend his case by engaging a lawyer of his choice. Hence this Court finds that the conviction of the respondent by the Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate 1st Class is in contravention of the provision of Section 303, Cr. P.C. and the same is also hit by principles of natural justice as the respondent was deprived of adequate opportunity to defend his case. Rule of natural justice requires that one should not be deprived of his vested right or be punished without having been given an opportunity to offer an explanation on his behalf. This principle stems from the maxim "Audit alteram partem" which means no one should be condemned unheard. The requirement of this maxim has two elements :- (1) The opportunity to make representation must be afforded, and (2) such opprtunity must be reasonable. The instant case is a glaring example of violation of such settled principle being contrary to the provision of Section 303 Cr. P.C. as the respondent was denied of his right to be defended by a pleader of his choice, a fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 22(1) of the Constitution of India.

13. As regards the question of jurisdiction of the appellate Court i.e. the learned Addl. District Magistrate, Aizawl to entertain the appeal in question, raised by the learned counsel for the appellant, on plain reading of the provisions of the Act and Rules, it is seen that there is no provision for appeal prescribed under the Act and the Rules to be preferred before the learned District Judge/District Magistrate under the ordinary Court against the conviction and sentence under Section 10 of the Act passed by the learned Assistant Commandant under Section 16(2) of the Act. Rule 36 only prescribing judicial trials does not speak of any provision of such appeal. In that view of the matter I find enough force in the submissions of the learned CGSC and accordingly it is held that the learned District Magistrate/Addl. District Magistrate in the present case, in absence of any specific provision of appeal in the Act itself, lacks jurisdiction to entertain the appeal in question arising out of conviction and sentence passed under this Special Act.

14. Having regard to the provisions of law referred herein above and upon hearing the learned counsel for the parties, this Court proposes to pass the following orders:-

(a) The learned Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate, Ist Class has the power under Section 16(2) of the Act to try offence committed by the Member of the Force and to punish accordingly and is not a Magistrate as defined under Rule 36-B of the Rules.

(b) The conviction of respondent awarded by the learned Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate, Ist Class is hereby set aside and quashed being violative of Section 303, Cr. P.C.

(c) The learned Additional District Magistrate (J) Aizawl has no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal preferred by the respondent against the conviction and sentence passed by the learned Assistant Commandant/Judicial Magistrate Ist Class exercising power under Section 16(2) of the Act.

For the reasons, discussions and observations as indicated above, this Criminal Appeal is partly allowed.

Records placed before this Court be handed over to Mr. P. N. Choudhury, learned Addl. CGSC forthwith.

Appeal partly allowed.

Constitution of India, Art.226 - Criminal P.C. (5 of 1898), S.304 - COURT OF SESSIONS – Right of accused to be defended by advocate during trial

- Duty is cast on public prosecutor to bring it to notice of Court, so that Court can appoint somebody to defend accused – Non following the procedure entire trial is vitiated- even if the accused at one stage intimated that he would have his own defence but on the date of hearing he is undefended, a duty is cast on the public prosecutor to bring it to the notice of the Court so that the Court can appoint somebody to defend the accused. If none is available as per the list, a gentleman of the Bar present in Court may be requested to defend the accused. The object underlying this provision is that no accused who is accused of a charge which may lead to the extreme penalty under the law should be deprived of a defence. Otherwise this leads to inadequate defence of the accused persons before the court of session and the entire trial is vitiated for the accused not having got a proper and fair trial. (Para 7)

GOSWAMI, J. :- This appeal from jail is directed against the judgement of conviction under Section 304 part I read with Section 34 and also under Section 326 read with Section 34, I.P.C. and sentence of rigorous imprisonment for ten years on the first count and three years under the second count to run concurrently passed by the learned Additional Sessions, Upper Assam Districts at Dibrugarh.

2. The prosecution case is that the deceased Bharat Pradhan was in possession of a plot of land with bamboos standing thereon. There was already a dispute with respect to that land for which there was a proceeding under Section 145, Criminal Procedure Code, and the preliminary order was drawn on 14-5-1962 and also the land was attached on the same day, as will appear from Exhibit 2. It is said that the accused armed with axes and daos started cutting the bamboos on the land, whereupon the deceased Bharat Pradhan along with others went and protested, at which the accused persons dealt dao and axe blows on Bharat, who succumbed to the injuries. Mahi Chandra Pradhan also was in that group and when he intervened, he was also assaulted and he sustained grievous injuries. After the incident they were both lying injured on the land.

3. The defence of the accused is that they claim possession of the land and on that day in order to save their crops from damage by cattle they were cutting bamboos on the land to make some fencing.

4. Initially there were six accused who were charged, but the learned Additional Sessions Judge acquitted Dhaneswar Goala and Pacha Mura on the view that these two persons were merely labourers and had not shared any common intention to assault the complainant party.

5. At the outset our attention has been drawn to the fact that the accused were undefended before the Court of Session. It also appeared that initially there was a counsel appointed by the learned Additional Sessions Judge to defend the accused persons, who appeared to be undefended at that stage. Later on, however, on the adjourned date when they signified their intention to engage their own counsel, the learned Additional Sessions Judge terminated the appointment of the State counsel and allowed their prayer. It so happened that on the adjourned date of hearing when the accused were brought to trial they appeared to be undefended and the order-sheet showed that the trial proceeded. When we have perused the entire record we find that there is some cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses although in a meagre and unsatisfactory way; perhaps the accused themselves did what their wits would allow them to do under the circumstances of the case.

6. Section 340 of the Criminal Procedure Code may be read :

"(1) Any person accused of an offence before a Criminal Court, or against whom proceedings are instituted under this Code in any such Court, may of right be defended by a pleader.

x x "

Even under the Constitution, Article 22 makes provision for an opportunity to be given to the accused to be represented by a lawyer of his own choice. Article 22(1) is in the following words :

"(1) No person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds of such arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult, and to be defended by, a legal practitioner of his choice.

X X X X"

Both Section 340, Cr. P.C. and Article 22 of the Constitution do not refer particularly to a case under Section 302, I.P.C. nor for providing for free legal aid under the law. All the same we find that the State Government in conformity with the object or intention underlying Sec. 340, Cr. P.C. and later engrafted in the Constitution, has made some provision for defence of pauper accused who have got to face a charge where the extreme penalty is provided under the law, namely death. Rule 19 in the Assam Law Department Manual, published under the authority of the State Government of Assam, provided for defence of pauper accused of murder. It runs thus :

"(1) When an accused is committed for trial on a charge of murder, the committing Magistrate shall at the time of passing order for his commitment enquire of the accused whether he will make arrangements for his own defence in the Court of Sessions or wishes to be defended at the expense of Government, and shall communicate the result of his enquiry to the Sess. Judge direct filing a copy of the letter with the commitment record. If the accused expresses a wish to be defended at Government expense, the committing Magistrate shall state in the letter whether in his opinion the accused can afford to engage a pleader in the Sessions Court, giving the grounds for his opinion. It shall be stated whether the accused was defended by a pleader or muktar in the Lower Court.

(2) On receipt of intimation that a prisoner committed to the Court of Sessions on a charge of murder desires to be defended at the expense of Government, it has been arranged that the Sessions Judge shall unless he sees reason to believe that the prisoner is in a position to pay for his own defence, appoint a pleader for the purpose. To this end the Sessions Judge shall maintain a list of Barristers or pleaders of the districts in which Sessions trials are ordinarily held who are willing to accept briefs for the defence of prisoners on their trial for murder; and ordinarily one of the persons on such list should be engaged.

(It is not necessary to refer to some corrections made in this sub-rule by certain correction slip No. 25).

(3) If notwithstanding these precautions it appears at the commencement of the trial that an accused charged with murder is undefended, the public prosecutor shall bring the fact to the notice of the presiding Judge, and request him to appoint a pleader for the defence of the prisoner. The Judge may then appoint any Barrister or pleader on the list referred to above, or any member of the Bar present in Court, to defend the prisoner.

x x x x x"

7. It is clear, therefore, from sub-rule (3) of Rule 19 that even if the accused at one stage intimated that he would have his own defence but on the date of hearing he is undefended, a duty is cast on the public prosecutor to bring it to the notice of the Court so that the Court can appoint somebody to defend the accused. If none is available as per the list, a gentleman of the Bar present in Court may be requested to defend the accused. The object underlying, this provision is that no accused who is accused of a charge which may lead to the extreme penalty under the law should be deprived of a defence. This is a salutary procedure and is in the wake of clamour of all accused persons in a criminal trial who are indigent to receive free defence at the expense of the State. We are, therefore, surprised that the learned Additional Sessions Judge having once appointed a Counsel to defend these accused persons should have thought it fit to terminate the appointment and refrain from resummoning his assistance when the accused were in fact undefended before him. All this has led to inadequate defence of the accused persons before the Court of Session.

According to the prosecution, the land was under attachment, which means that it was in the custody of the Court, and any one entering upon the land after the order of attachment was promulgated would be committing an act of trespass. If the accused had gone there, they were committing trespass; so also the complainant party when they entered the land, it is the prosecution case that the accused were first there and were cutting the bamboos. They claimed to use the bamboos as fencing to protect their crops. We have put the question to the public prosecutor, who is unable to show from the records that this plea of the accused that they were cutting the bamboos in order to preserve their crops has been denied by any prosecution witness. If, therefore, the accused were merely cutting the bamboos in order to put up a fence to save their crops, it may be debatable whether they were actually entering the land with intention to commit an offence. Be that as it may, the land being already under attachment, the complainant party also had no business to enter on the land but only could report to the Court which attached the land for taking appropriate steps against the accused persons. The question which arose in the entire circumstances of the evidence in the case was, who the aggressor was. This point however, was absolutely ignored by the learned Additional Sessions Judge. This has happened because the accused were not properly defended and it is a case where we may say that the entire trial is vitiated for the accused not having got a proper and fair trial. We are, therefore, unable to uphold the conviction of the accused persons under all the sections charged.

8. The next question would be, whether this is a fit case where we should think of remanding the case for retrial. The occurrence took place on 15th October, 1962. Apart from the fact that Bharat Pradhan died as a result of the injuries and Mahi Chandra Pradhan and three others received injuries, amongst the accused we find there are three persons Garbaria Pardhan, Petua Pradhan and Nasia Pradhan, who also had similarly received injuries. The accused have already served three years in jail. We are, therefore, unable to accede to the request of the learned public prosecutor for a remand of the case for retrial of the accused. The accused-appellants are acquitted of the charges under Section 304 Part I, read with Section 34 and also under Section 326 read with Section 34, Indian Penal Code. They shall be discharged from their jail custody forthwith.

9. The appeal is allowed.

10. . C. PATHAK, J. :- I agree.

Appeal allowed.

HIGH COURT OF BOMBAY

Hon'ble Judge(s) : R.M.S.Khandeparkar, J

Bharatiya Bhavan Co-operative Housing Society Limited ..Vs.. Krishna H. Bajaj Writ Petition 197 of 2004 Of Feb 24,2004

Advocate Act – There is no total bar for the private person/non advocate to represent the case of litigant - Court can allow power of attorney holder of a party to appear before the Court.

It is the choice of the party to decide who should represent him or her and such right having been assured in terms of Article 19(1) (A) of the constitution of India and there being no bar for non-advocate being allowed to represent a party in a proceeding – Supreme Court Judgment AIR 1978 SC 1019 relied and referred to.

(1.) THE order of the Co-operative Appellate Court passed on 24th December, 2003 in Revision Application No. 673 of 2003 permitting the respondent No. 1 to plead through his attorney instead of an Advocate, is sought to be challenged in this petition. The notice of the hearing of the matter was issued to the respondents for final disposal of the same, at the admission stage. However, apart from the respondent No. 1, none has appeared. In any case, there is no case for proceeding against the respondent Nos. 2 and 3 and the petition is liable to be dismissed in limine against the said respondents and is accordingly dismissed. Upon hearing the learned Advocate for the petitioner and the respondent No. 1, while issuing the rule, by consent, the matter was heard forthwith for final disposal.

(2.) THE respondent No. 1 filed acase for recovery of amount of Rs. 51 lakhs as damages and Rs. 20 lakhs towards repairs charges from the petitioner No. 1 society and by order dated 19th March, 2003 passed in Writ Petition No. 2661 of 2002, the hearing and disposal of the said dispute was expedited, and it was expected to completed within a period of six months. In the course of recording of evidence before the Co-operative Court, and after the conclusion of the recording of the evidence of the respondent No. 1 and while the 1st witness of the petitioner-society was under cross-examination, after having been partly cross-examined, the Advocate for the respondent No. 1 sought to withdraw his appearance by an application dated 20th December, 2003 which was allowed by the Co-operative Court. Simultaneously, an application was filed by the respondent No. 1 for allowing his power of attorney holder viz. Shailesh H. Bajaj, Constituted Attorney, to represent her and to continue the cross-examination of the witness of the petitioner/society. The said application, however, was rejected by the Co-operative Court on 20th December, 2003 on the ground that the right to plead is not available to any person other than the person practising as an Advocate. The said order was challenged in the revision application and by the impugned order while setting aside the order of the Co-operative Court, the power of attorney holder of the respondent No. 1 was allowed to represent the respondent No. 1 and also to continue with the cross-examination of the witness of the petitioner No. 1-society. Hence, the petition,

(3.) IT is sought to be contended on behalf of the petitioners that in terms of the provisions of law contained in the Advocates Act, 1961 read with the provisions of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 as well as the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Rules, 1961, only the Advocates are entitled to practice and a person who is not qualified as Advocate is not be entitled to practice, and, therefore, the impugned order is bad in law. On the other hand, the learned Advocate for the respondent No. 1 has contended that it is a matter of choice for the parties to decide who should represent him or her and such right having been assured in terms of Article 19 (1) (A) of the constitution of India, and there being no bar for non advocate being allowed to represent a party in a proceeding before the Co-operative Court under the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 or the Rules framed thereunder and in a situation where the Advocate had withdrawn his appearance for the party and it was not possible for the party to engage another advocate within a short span of time and considering that the proceedings were required to be concluded within the specified time in terms of the order of the High Court, there is no case made out for interference in the impugned order. Reliance is sought to be placed in the decisions in the matter of (Aswin Shcunbhuprasad Patel and others v. National Rayon Corporation Ltd.), reported in A. I. R. 1955 Bom. 262, and in the matter of (Murlidhar Datoba Nimanka and others v. Harish Balkrushna Latane and others), reported in 2003 (6) Bom. C. R. 153 : 2003 (4) Mh. L. J. 196, (Sanjay R. Kothari and another v. South Mumbai Consumer Disputes Redressal Forum and another), reported in 2002 (6) Bom. C. R. (O. O. C. J.)637 : A. I. R. 2003 Bom. 15, and of the Apex Court in the matter of (Perfect Paper and Steel Converters Private Ltd. and others v. The Bombay National General Workers Union and others), reported in 1989 (1) C. L. R. 492 and in the matter of (Harishankar Rastogi v. Girdhari Sharma and another), reported in A. I. R. 1978 S. C. 1019.

(4.) IT cannot be disputed that the Advocates Act, 1961 prohibits any person others than Advocate to practice profession of law in any Court or before any authority or person except as otherwise provided in the said Act or in any other law for the time being in force. Section 33 of the Advocates Act 1961 is very clear in that regard, and it reads that "except as otherwise provided in this Act or in any other law for the time being in force, no person shall, on or after the appointed day, be entitled to practices in any Court or before any authority or person unless he is enrolled as an Advocate under this Act. " The provisions of section 33 came into force with effect from 1st June , 1969 consequent to the Notification No. S. O. 1500 dated 5th April, 1969 issued under section 1 (3) of the Advocates Act, 1961. The Division Bench of this Court in Sanjay Kothari's case (supra), after taking note of the said provisions of law, has observed that "the Advocates Act, thus, prohibits any person other than Advocate to practice profession of law in any Court or before any authority or person except as otherwise provided in this Act or in any other law for the time being in force. "

(5.) THE learned Single Judge of this Court in Aswin Shambhuprasad Patel's case (supra), while dealing with the issue as to whether a constituted attorney has right or audience in the High Court on behalf of a party, in a case werein the petitioner in civil revision application was seeking audience through his attorney, after referring to Order III, Rules 1 and 2 as well as Clause X of Letters Patent and section 8 of the Bar Councils Act, 1926 and section 9 of the Bombay Pleaders Act, 1920, held that "the expression" appearance, application or act in or to any Court in Order 3, Rule 1 of Civil Procedure Code does not include pleading. The right of audience in Court, the right to address the Court, the right to examine and cross-examine witnesses, are all parts of pleading. " It was further held that the expression right to practise in section 8 of the Bar Councils Act is an expression much wider than the right to plead and includes both the pleading and acting, and such right is conferred only upon those persons who have been enrolled as Advocates of the High Court under the said Bar Councils Act, which is in conformity with Clause X of letters Patent. In Murlidhar Datoba Nimanka's case (supra), it was held by me that the provisions of Civil Procedure Code are not applicable to the proceed ings before the Co-operative Court while dealing with the disputes under the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 though in relation to such procedure wherever the provisions of law contained in the said Act and the Rules made thereunder are totally silent, the Principles of the Civil Procedure Code can be made applicable to such proceedings.

(6.) THE Apex Court in Harishankar Rastogi's case (supra), while dealing with a case pertaining to criminal proceedings wherein the party was seeking permission of the Court to be represented by a person, who was not an Advocate, held that it is open to a person, who is party to a proceeding to get himself represented by a non-advocate in a particular instance or case. Simultaneously, it was ruled that "a private person, who is not an Advocate, has no right to barge into Court and claim to argue for a party. He must get the prior permission of the Court, for which the motion must come from the party himself. It is open to the Court to grant or withhold permission in its discretion. In fact the Court may, even after grant of permission, withdraw it half-way through if the representative proves himself reprehensible. The antecedents relationship, the reasons for requisitioning the services of the private person and a variety of other circumstances must be gathered before grant or refusal of permission.

(7.) THE Division Bench of this Court in Perfect Paper and Steel Converters Private Ltd. 's case (supra), while dealing with a question as to whether in a proceeding before the Industrial Court under the Maharashtra Recognition of Trade Unions and Prevention of Unfair Labour Practices Act, 1971, a party has a right to be represented by a person of his choice notwithstanding the fact that he does not fall in any of the categories mentioned in Regulation 11 of the Industrial Court Regulation, 1975 made by the Industrial Court pursuant to the power conferred upon it under section 33 of the M. R. T. U. and P. U. L. P. Act, 1971, after taking note of the Article 19 (l){a) of the Constitution of India, held that thereunder every citizen has right to effective speech and expression and that such right would include a right of a party to appoint a person of his choice to represent himself assured under the provisions of section 32 of the Advocates Act, 1961, and observed that :-

"a party may appoint a person to represented himself before any Court or authority because of his expertise in the subject concerned or because he is his friend or adviser. When such a person is appointed in any particular case with the permission of the authority concerned, he does not practise the profession and contravene section 33 of the Advocates Act. Section 32 of the said Act infact permits such appearance notwithstanding the fact that the person concerned is not enrolled as an Advocate under that Act. Secondly, the privileged to practices the legal profession which is conferred on the Advocate enrolled under the said Act who practices as a matter of right and has to be distinguished from the appearance of a person with the permission of the Court or the authority as the case may be. "

It was further observed that:

"in fact, the application to appoint a non-advocate to represent a party must proceed from the party himself. When such application is made, the Court, authority or the person as the case may be has to take into consideration several circumstances before granting or refusing the permission. "

(8.) CONSIDERING the above referred rulings and the provisions of law, it is clear that it is privilege of the Advocate enrolled under the said Act to practices in any Court or before any authority or the person, unless the said privilege is restricted in any manner under any law in force. This conclusion is inevitable from the provisions of law contained in section 33 and well clarified by the two decisions of the Division Bench of this Court, one in Perfect Paper and Steel's case (supra) and another in Sanjay Kothari's case (supra). This is also clear from the decision of the Apex Court in Harishankar Rastogi's case (supra). Infact, it was elaborately clarified by the Apex Court in Harishankar Rastogi's case (supra) after taking note of the provisions of article 19 (l) (a) of the Constitution of India that :-

"while it is true that Article 19 of the Constitution guarantees the freedom to practise any profession, it is open to the State to make a law imposing, in the interest of the general public, reasonable restrictions on the exercise of the right. The Advocates Act, by section 29, provides for such a reasonable restriction, namely, that the only class of persons entitled to practise the profession of law shall be Advocates. "

It was further ruled that:

"practising a profession means something very different from representing some friend or relation on one occasion or in one case or on a few occasions or in a few cases. . . . . It is absolutely clear that anyone who is not an Advocate, cannot as of right, force himself into this Court and claim to plead for another. Permission may, however, be granted by this Court taking the justice of the situation and several other factors into consideration for such non-professional representation. "

Being so, while privilege of practising the profession of law is reserved for the Advocates enrolled under the said Act, there is no total prohibition for allowing a party to be represented by a person of his choice, other than one practising the Advocate, for justifiable reasons, to be established to the satisfaction of the Court by the party seeking leave to be represented by a non-Advocate.

(9.) AS regards the proceedings before the Co-operative Court, the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960, under section 94 (2) provides that "except that the permission of the Co- operative Court, no party shall be represented at the hearing of a dispute by legal practitioners," The said provision of law apparently discloses that a legal practitioner cannot appear in the Co-operative Court as a matter of right. Indeed, section 33 of the Advocates Act, while ensuring right of appearance to the Advocate before any Court or authority clearly carves out an exception to the said Rule in the cases where "otherwise provided in any other law". Obviously, section 94 (2) is one of such provision under which the right of a legal practitioner to appear in the Court is restricted. At the same time, there is no total bar for appearance by the Advocates before the Co-operative Court and this is evident from section 94 (2) itself.

(10.) APART from section 94 (2), there is no other provision either in the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 or in the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Rules, 1961 relating to the representation of the parties to the disputes before the co-operative courts. In other words, the provision of the Advocates Act, 1961, subject to the restrictions imposed in section 94 (2) would be attracted. Consequently, the decision of the Apex Court in Harishankar Rastogi's case (supra) would squarely apply in such cases. Beides, it stands to reason that in a case where the party is unable to secure the assistance of an Advocate and if he is in a position to get the help of his well wisher, who can effectively defend his/her case and assist the Court in arriving at the appropriate solution to the dispute under adjudication by the Court, certainly technicalities cannot be allowed either to imperil the justice or to bulldoze the cause of justice. In such cases, the technicalities will have to be set apart and practical approach will have to be adopted.

(11.) AS regards the decision in, undoubtedly Sanjay Kothari's case (supra), it is restricted to the matters before the Consumer forums. It was held therein that:

'the Party before the Consumer Forum/state Commission cannot be compelled to engage services of an Advocate. If the party before the Consumer Forum/state Commission does not engage an Advocate, it has to appear before the Consumer Forum on date/dates of hearing either in person or through its authorized agents. "

(12.) REVERTING to the facts of the case, it is apparent that the Co-operative Court by its order dated 22nd December, 2003 had rejected the application filed by the respondent No, 1 for allowing her to be represented by her power of attorney holder in the absence of Advocate and to cross-examine the witnesses on her behalf. The Appellate Co-operative Court, however, set aside the said order on the ground that the Advocate had abruptly withdrawn his appearance and there was a direction for expeditious disposal of a case crossexamination was required to be completed expeditiously, and on account of vacation, the party was not able to engage another Advocate immediately, and in those circumstances, the party was justified in seeking representation through her attorney.

(13.) UNDISPUTEDLY, the matter was required to be disposed of within the specified time in terms of the order of this Court. The ground disclosed for allowing the party of be represented by the attorney was the abrupt withdrawal of the appearance by her Advocate and on account of vacation, it was difficult for the party to secure presence of another Advocate, and the said facts were not disputed by the petitioners, and in those circumstances, Shailesh H. Bajaj, the attorney of the party, who is stated to be conversant with the facts, was allowed to represent the party. The main ground for seeking representation through attorney was that the Advocate appearing for the party, had abruptly withdrawn his appearance and it was difficult for the respondent to secure the presence of another Advocate on account of vacation. It cannot be disputed that the vacation was for 15 days. If the matter was required to be concluded expeditiously, certainly the ground that on account of vacation, it wad difficult to secure presence of another Advocate, was also a justifiable ground. In those circumstances, there was a clear case made out for representation of a party through her power of attorney particularly during the period of vacation and till the party was able to secure the presence of another Advocate.

(14.) IT is sought to be contended that the Court even did not consider the antecedents of the person who is allowed to represent the party to the proceedings and that the said attorney was arrested for economic offences. Certainly the said allegation is made for the first time when the matter has come up in this Court and there was no whisper about it till the impugned order was passed. Besides, it cannot be disputed that the permission given to a party to be represented by non-advocate is not final for all purposes, but such order is always subject to the modification, even during the pendency of the proceedings in the same Court, depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case. There is no prohibition for the petitioners from approaching the Co-operative Court for modification of the impugned order, if so desired, on cogent ground to be made for such modification. In case of any such application by the petitioners, the Co-operative Court will have to deal with the same in accordance with law and bearing in mind the rulings in Harishankar Rastogi's case (supra) and the decision of Division Bench in Perfect Paper and Steel's case (supra).

(15.) IN the circumstances, the impugned order does not disclose any cause for interference therein in writ jurisdiction and the petition, therefore, fails and is dismissed. Rule is discharged with no order as to costs. Petition dismissed.

Contempt of Court by Advocate - Criminal contempt – Malicious statement made by an Advocate before Court during pendency of cases is criminal contempt – He is an advocate and not layman – He made statement with having knowledge that the malicious statement is per se contemptuous – Mere offer of unconditional apology by contemnor should not allow him to go scot-free – Contemnor advocate liable to be punished – Fine of Rs. 2000/- imposed and in default to go 3 months imprisonment.

Judgement

VISHNU SAHAI, J. :- On a reference made by Mr. B. A. Shelar, Metropolitan Magistrate, 21st Court, Bandra, Mumbai, under Section 15(2) of the Contempt of the Courts Act to this Court, for taking cognizance of the criminal cotnempt committed by M. S. Menon, Advocate, a Division Bench of this Court (Coram; G.D. Patil and A. M. Khanwilkar, JJ.), vide its order dated 4-12-2000, issued notice to M. S. Menon, Advocate.

2. The fatual matrix from which this notice arises, in short, is as under : In the Court of Mr. B. A. Shelar, Metropolitan Magistrate, 21st Court, Bandra, Mumbai, two criminal cases, namely, Criminal case No. 4/S/2000 and 5/S/2000 : both under Section 500/504 of I.P.C., were pending. In the said cases, M.S. Menon, Advocate, made the following statements :

In criminal case No. 4/S/2000 :-

"I say that the presiding officer intentionally chose to overlook the above evidence as I have filed a complaint against him before SID and CMM and which is pending enquiry.

I say that the process has been issued out of malice/prejudice/vengeance and bias ignoring to look into the contents of letter dated 16-8-99 which in themselves are insufficient to attract an offence under Section 504."

In criminal case No. 5/S/2000 :-

"I say that the presiding officer is admittedly aware of the complaint I have filed against him before the SID and CMM, and which is pending enquiry.

I say that the issuance of process is out of malice/prejudice/bias and Vengeance and with intent to cause injury to me for which too action for criminal contempt and sanction for prosecution of the presiding officer is being sought."

3. Mr. M. S. Menon, Advocate, who, as directed by us vide our order dated 7-3-2001, is present in the Court today. Although he has filed a detailed reply, but has not in any manner sought to justify the statements quoted above. Instead he has offered his unconditional apology and has expressed profound regret at making the said statements. He has urged that we should accept his unconditional apology and discharge the notice.

4. We have reflected over Mr. M. S. Menon's submission. We are constrained to observe that the offence of criminal contempt, under Section 2(c) of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, is made out against Mr. M. S. Menon, the contemnor. In our view, this is not a case, where on a mere acceptance of uncnditional apology, the contemnor Mr. M. S. Menon, should be allowed to go scot-free. The reasons which have warranted us to reach such a conclusion are as under:

The contemnor, on his own admission made before us, is an advocate of 15 years standing. He is not a layman. He was expected to know that the said statements made by him, were per se contemptuous. Despite that, he has made them. We make no bones in observing that an Advocate must always remember that he is an Officer of the Court and should discharge his duties with dignity and restraint. His advocacy should not reflect his identification with the party he represents.

5. It should be borne in mind that the bed-rock on which the Courts survive, is public confidence and when lawyers make such reprehensible imputations against judicial officers, this Court cannot remain a mute spectator. If this Court were to do so, then public confidence in Judiciary would stand eroded and the citizenry would start believing that the imputations may be true. That indeed would be distressing.

6. (sic) It are the said circumstances which have prompted us not to accept the unconditional apology simpliciter made by Mr. M. S. Menon, the contemnor.

7. The question is what should be the punishment that should be inflicted on the contemnor. Since the contemnor has shown penitence and there appears to be contriteness in his apology, in our view, a fine of Rs. 2,000/-, in default, a sentence of three months S.I. would meet the ends of justice.

8. In the result, we find the contemnor Mr. M. S. Menon, guilty of the offence of criminal contempt under Section 2(c) of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 and sentence him to pay a fine of Rs. 2,000/-, in default to undergo three months S.I. The fine shall be paid by the contemnor, within two weeks from today, before the Registrar of this Court, who shall accept the same on production of a true copy of this order duly authenticated by the Sheristedar of this Court.

A true copy of this order shall be sent to the Court of Mr. B.A. Shelar, Metropolitan Magistrate, 21st Court, Bandra, Mumbai by the Office within one week from today.

Coram : A.P.SEN,B.C.RAY, JJ

(E.S.Reddy) T.V.Choudhary,A Member Of The Indian Administrative Service (UnderSuspension) -Versus- Chief Secretary Of Andhra Pradesh

Civil Miscellaneous Petition 25533 Of 1986, Special Leave Petition 14045 Of 1985 May 01,1987

A) Duty of Advocates towards Court – Held, he has to act fairly and place all the truth even if it is against his client – he should not withhold the authority or documents which tells against his client – It is a mistake to suppose that he is a mouthpiece of his client to say that he wants – He must disregard with instruction of his client which conflicts with their duty to the Court. (Para 11 & 12)

B) Duty and responsibility of senior counsel - By virtue of the pre-eminence which senior counsel enjoy in the profession, they not only carry greater responsibilities but they also act as a model to the junior members of the profession. A senior counsel more or less occupies a position akin to a Queen's counsel in England next after the Attorney General and the Solicitor General. It is an honor and privilege conferred on advocates of standing and experience by the chief justice and the Judges of this court. They thus become leading counsel and take precedence on all counsel not having that rank- A senior counsel though he cannot draw up pleadings of the party, can nevertheless be engaged "to settle" i.e. to put the pleadings into "proper and satisfactory form" and hence a senior counsel settling pleadings has a more onerous responsibility as otherwise the blame for improper pleadings will be laid at his doors. (Para 10)

> "(11) Lord Reid in Rondel v. Worsley has succinctly set out the conflicting nature of the duties a counsel has to perform in his own inimitable manner as follows :
> Every counsel has a duty to his client fearlessly to raise every issue, advance every argument, and ask every question, however distasteful, , which he thinks will help his client's case. As an officer of the court concerned in the administration of justice, he has an overriding duty to the court, to the standards of his profession, and to the public, which may and often does lead to a conflict with his client's wishes or with what the client thinks are his personal interests. Counsel must not mislead the court, he must not lend himself to casting aspersions on the other party or witnesses for which there is no sufficient basis in the information in his possession, he must not withhold authorities or documents which may tell against his clients but which the law or the standards of his profession require him to produce. By so acting he may well incur the displeasure or worse of his client so that if the case is lost, his client would or might seek legal redress if that were open to him.

(12) Again as Lord Denning, M. R. in Rondel v. W would say :
He (the counsel) has time and again to choose between his 265 duty to his client and his duty to the court. This is a conflict often difficult to resolve; and he should not be under pressure to decide it wrongly. . . . When a barrister (or an advocate) puts his first duty to the court, he has nothing to fear. (words in brackets added).
In the words of Lord Dinning:
It is a mistake to suppose that he is the mouthpiece of his client to say what he wants :. . . . He must disregard the most specific instructions of his client, if they conflict with his duty to the court. The code which requires a barrister to do all this is not a code of law. It is a code of honor. If he breaks it, he is offending against the rules of the profession and is subject to its discipline. . "

JUDGEMENT

A.P. SEN, J

(1) This is an application made by one T. V. Choudhary, a member of the Indian Administrative Service, under suspension, for recalling the court's orders dated 5/05/1986 and 11/08/1986 passed in Special Leave Petition No. 14045 of 1985.
(2) We shall first deal with the special leave petition of E. S. Reddi, a member of the Indian Administrative Service belonging to Andhra Pradesh cadre and who worked as the Vice-Chairman-cum-Managing Director of the Andhra Pradesh Mining Corporation. It is directed against a judgment of the division bench of the High court dated 18/10/1985 reversing the judgment and order of a learned Single Judge dated 2/09/1985 and dismissing his petition under Article 226 of the Constitution. By the writ petition, the petitioner had called in question the validity of an order of the State government of Andhra Pradesh dated 11/02/1985 placing him under suspension under sub-rule (1) of Rule 13 of the Andhra 260 Pradesh Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1963. The main grievance of the petitioner before the High court was that the impugned order of suspension was wholly mala fide, arbitrary and irrational and violative of Article 14 of the Constitution as there was no justification for the differential treatment meted out to him while the applicant T. V. Choudhary, also a member of the Indian Administrative Service, who worked in various capacities viz. as General Manager, Functional Director, Member, Board of Directors and Vice-Chairman-cum-Managing Director and was involved in the commission of the alleged irregularities, had merely been transferred from the Corporation and posted as Managing Director, Andhra Pradesh State Textile Development Corporation. That objection of his was sustained before the learned Single Judge who by his judgment dated' 2/09/1985 quashed the impugned order of suspension. The Division bench however by the judgment under appeal has reversed that judgment and dismissed the writ petition holding that the findings arrived at by the learned Single Judge are not warranted by the material on record.
(3) Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 25510/86 is filed by R. Parthasarthy, a member of the Indian Administrative Service who was Vice-Chairman-cum-Managing Director of the Corporation for the period from March 197 9/10/1979 and was working as the Commissioner of Commercial Taxes, while Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 25533/86 is by T. V. Choudhary. also a member of the Indian Administrative Service and who was working as the Managing Director of the Andhra Pradesh State Textile Development Corporation.

These two applications are for recalling the court's orders dated 5/05/1986 and August II. 1986 on the ground that they prejudicially affect the applicants. The matter relates to defalcation of a huge amount of Rs.1.50 crores by certain officers of the State government whose services were placed on deputation with the Corporation. Admittedly, the Anti-Corruption Bureau, Andhra Pradesh has registered a case against these officers for having committed alleged offences punishable under S. 120-B read with S. 420 of the Indian Penal Code and S. 5(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 as its preliminary report revealed a prima faces case against them.

(4) On 12/12/1985 the court issued notice on the special leave petition. It appeared from the counter-affidavit filed by the State government that the Anti-Corruption Bureau had finalised the investigation and the Director General had submitted his report dated 25/03/1986 which was under consideration of the government. It also appeared that the State government of Andhra Pradesh had 261 addressed letters dated 2/05/1984 for sanction of the central government under S. 6(l)(a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 for the prosecution of R. Parthasarthy and of the State government of Maharashtra for the prosecution of P. Abraham, INDIAN ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICE as he is borne on the Maharashtra cadre and was on deputation to Andhra Pradesh. In compliance with the court's order, the State government placed before us the letter of the State government dated 2/05/1984 as also the report of the Director General, Anti-Corruption Bureau, Andhra Pradesh dated 25/05/1986. After hearing the parties on 5/05/1986, we made the following order:

In compliance to this court's order, Shri P. Ram Reddy, learned counsel for the Stale government places before us the letter of the State government dated 2/05/1984 .as also the report of the Director General, Anti-Corruption Bureau, Andhra Pradesh dated 25/03/1986. It appears from the letter that sanction of the central government is necessary under S. 6 (1) (a) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947 for the prosecution of R. Parthasarthy, INDIAN ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICE and that of the State government of Maharashtra for the prosecution of P. Abraham. We have perused the report of the Director General and it cannot be said that the charges levelled against the petitioner are groundless. It is somewhat surprising that the petitioner alone should have been placed under suspension by the State government pending contemplated departmental enquiry under Rule 13 of the A. P. Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1963 and not the other two officers T. V. Choudhary and S. M. Rao Choudhary, the then Managing Director who it appears are equally culpable.

The matter is adjourned till after vacation to enable the State government to obtain the requisite sanction from the central government for the prosecution of R. Parthasarthy and that of the State government of Maharashtra for the prosecution of P. Abraham under S. 6(l)(a) of the Act. Shri P. Ram Reddy learned counsel for the State government shall in the meanwhile convey to the State Government the concern expressed by this court that the petitioner alone could have been placed under suspension and not the other officers who are alleged to be co-accused. We are afraid, if the State government does not pass any order placing the other officers under suspension it may become necessary for the court to revoke the suspension of the petitioner at the next hearing.

(5) When the matter came up after vacation on 11/08/1986 it had to be adjourned with a direction that the State government 262 should in the meanwhile pass necessary orders for suspension of the delinquent officers. In anticipation of action by the State government, the two applicants R. Parthasarthy and T. V. Choudhary moved applications on September 2 and September 3, 1986 for recalling the directions made on 5/05/1986 and 11/08/1986. The applications were listed for directions on 5/09/1986. On motion being made by learned counsel appearing for the applicants, it was directed that the applications be placed for hearing on 9/09/1986. The State government in the meanwhile on 6/09/1986 passed orders for suspension of R. Parthasarthy and T. V. Choudhary under Rule 13(1) of the Rules. We were apprised of this fact when the applications came up for hearing on 9/09/1986 that the State government had already placed them under suspension.

(6) In the special leave petition, the only contention of the petitioner E. S. Reddi was that the action of the State government in making selective suspension suffered from the vice of arbitrariness and offended against Article 14 of the Constitution inasmuch as persons like the applicant T. V. Choudhary who were equally culpable have merely been transferred while he has been singled out and placed under suspension under sub-rule (1) of Rule 13 of the Rules without any rational basis and that such arbitrary action of the State government was tantamount to denial of equal treatment to persons similarly placed. In view of the subsequent order passed by the State government on 6/09/1986 placing other officers including the applicant T. V. Choudhary under suspension under Rule 13(1) of the Rules pending their prosecution, the- special leave petition has become infructuous. It is accordingly dismissed.

(7) That takes us to C.M.P. Nos. 25510/86 and 25533/86 filed by R. Parthasarthy and T. V. Choudhary respectively. We impressed upon the learned counsel appearing for them that the proper course for the applicants was to move the government by way of appeal and/or representation against their suspension and not by these applications for recalling the court's orders. After the matter was heard at a considerable length, Smt. Shyamala Pappu, learned counsel appearing for R. Parthasarthy very properly prayed for leave to withdraw C. M. P. No. 25510/86 as the applicant had already made a representation to the State government. She prayed that a direction be made requiring the government to consider the representation at an early date. Dr Y. S. Chitale, learned counsel appearing for the State government fairly agreed that the said representation would be considered by government on merits.

(8) Turning next to C. M. P. No. 25533/86. We must strongly 263 deprecate the conduct of the applicant T. V. Choudhary, a member of the Indian Administrative Service and working as Managing Director of the Andhra Pradesh State Textile Development Corporation, to have made reckless allegations and cast aspersions on the court. After denying his complicity, the applicant T. V. Choudhary goes on to assert :

The order of this Hon'ble court directing the government to suspend the other delinquent officers is made without affording an opportunity to the applicant and presumably without considering the relevant provisions of law, case law and the parameters of judicial power and the necessity to observe the principles of natural justice.

It is submitted that the order of this Hon'ble court dated 11/08/1986 is illegal, insofar as it directed the government to suspend the applicant and others, in view of the fact that the government has exercised its discretion and transferred the applicant taking into consideration the recommendation of the Anti-Corruption Bureau. It is well settled that a court of law cannot compel a statutory authority to exercise its statutory discretion in a particular manner. The legislative will in conferring discretion in an essentially administrative function cannot be interfered with by courts.

To say the least, the averments are highly objectionable. It was expected that the applicant, who is a very senior member of the Indian Administrative Service, should have shown greater responsibility before making such unfounded allegations and uncalled for aspersions. On a motion being made on 5/09/1986 by Shri P. P. Rao, learned counsel for the applicant, it was directed that the application shall be listed for hearing on 9/09/1986. At the same time, we drew the attention of the learned counsel to the -improper and objectionable averments made by the applicant. We were given the impression that the application had been settled by the learned counsel without noticing the offending averments.

(9) We wish we could have rested content with concluding the judgment with the operative portion of our conclusions on the merits of the case but we find with a sense of anguish and heaviness of heart that we have to express our disapproval of the manner in which the arguments were advanced before us on behalf of the applicant T. V. Choudhary. Not only were the arguments advanced with undue vehemence and unwarranted passion, reflecting identification of interests beyond established conventions but were of degrees not usual of enlightened senior counsel to adopt. The majesty of law and the dignity of courts cannot be maintained unless there is mutual respect between the bench and the Bar and the counsel act in full realization 264 of their duty to the court alongside their duty to their clients and have the grace to reconcile themselves when their pleas and arguments do not find acceptance with the court. It is needless for us to say that neither rhetoric nor tempestuous arguments can constitute the sine qua non for persuasive arguments.

(10) By virtue of the pre-eminence which senior counsel enjoy in the profession, they not only carry greater responsibilities but they also act as a model to the junior members of the profession. A senior counsel more or less occupies a position akin to a Queen's counsel in England next after the Attorney General and the Solicitor General. It is an honor and privilege conferred on advocates of standing and experience by the chief justice and the Judges of this court. They thus become leading counsel and take precedence on all counsel not having that rank. A senior counsel though he cannot draw up pleadings of the party, can nevertheless be engaged "to settle" i.e. to put the pleadings into "proper and satisfactory form" and hence a senior counsel settling pleadings has a more onerous responsibility as otherwise the blame for improper pleadings will be laid at his doors.

(11) Lord Reid in Rondel v. Worsley has succinctly set out the conflicting nature of the duties a counsel has to perform in his own inimitable manner as follows :

Every counsel has a duty to his client fearlessly to raise every issue, advance every argument, and ask every question, however distasteful, , which he thinks will help his client's case. As an officer of the court concerned in the administration of justice, he has an overriding duty to the court, to the standards of his profession, and to the public, which may and often does lead to a conflict with his client's wishes or with what the client thinks are his personal interests. Counsel must not mislead the court, he must not lend himself to casting aspersions on the other party or witnesses for which there is no sufficient basis in the information in his possession, he must not withhold authorities or documents which may tell against his clients but which the law or the standards of his profession require him to produce. By so acting he may well incur the displeasure or worse of his client so that if the case is lost, his client would or might seek legal redress if that were open to him.

(12) Again as Lord Denning, M. R. in Rondel v. W would say :

He (the counsel) has time and again to choose between his 265 duty to his client and his duty to the court. This is a conflict often difficult to resolve; and he should not be under pressure to decide it wrongly. . . . When a barrister (or an advocate) puts his first duty to the court, he has nothing to fear. (words in brackets added).

In the words of Lord Dinning:

It is a mistake to suppose that he is the mouthpiece of his client to say what he wants :. . . . He must disregard the most specific instructions of his client, if they conflict with his duty to the court. The code which requires a barrister to do all this is not a code of law. It is a code of honor. If he breaks it, he is offending against the rules of the profession and is subject to its discipline. . ..

(13) We are constrained to give expression to our views with a feeling of remorse to remind the counsel of that sense of detachment and non-identification they are expected to maintain with the causes espoused by them and not with a view to belittle the profession or cast aspersions on counsel.

(14) After bestowing our dispassionate consideration of the matter we found ourselves left with no other alternative but to dismiss the application made by T. V. Choudhary which was clearly misconceived and we direct the applicant to pay Rs.5,000.00 as costs to the State government in view of the disapprobation his case and conduct has warranted.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY

A. M. KHANWILKAR & P. D. KODE, JJ.

High Court on its own Motion Vs. Mr. N. B. Deshmukh
Suo Motu Contempt Petition No.4 of 2008 21st December, 2010.

A) Contempt of Courts Act (1971), S.23 - Contempt of Courts (CAT) Rules (1992), Rr.10, 11, 12 - Advocates Act (1961), Ss.30, 34, 49 - Right to appear in Advocate's robes before Court is statutory right - It is available to person who appears in his capacity as Advocate for any other party and not in his own cause- When the Advocate appears to espouse his own cause or facing proceedings such as for having committed contempt of Court personally, even if he wants to appear in-person before the Court, cannot claim the privileges bestowed on the Advocates and is free to appear like any other ordinary litigant. The right to appear in Advocate's robes before the Court is a statutory right. That right is available only to a person who appears in his capacity as Advocate for any other party or litigant and not in his own cause and more so, while defending contempt action initiated against him personally.(Paras 23 , 24)

B) Action against Advocate for representing the cause of his close relative as Advocate - At the outset, we may notice that the said Writ Petition was filed by Kumari Bhagyashree B. Deshmukh who incidentally is the relative of the Respondent/Contemner. Whether it was appropriate for the Respondent/Contemner to appear as Advocate for his close relative is a matter which will be in the domain of the Bar Council- Therefore, whether the Bar Council should initiate any action against the Respondent/Contemner for representing the cause of his close relative as Advocate in the Writ Petition, is left open. We express no opinion on the said aspect. (Para 8)

DESAI, J.

(1) The appellant was ill-advised in filing this appeal because the more the learned counsel appearing for the appellant dived deep into a veritable dustbin of facts, the further hearing caused deep anguish more on account of the realisation as to how occasionally, and we are happy to record very occasionally, a member of the Nobel profession sinks to the lowest and to vindicate his actions tries to clutch at the highest.

(2) One M. Ram Mohan Rao, who was described as a senior of appellant M. Veerabhadra Rao has been a practising advocate at Hyderabad. Appellant M. Veerabhadra Rao was enrolled as an advocate in the year 1961 as stated in his evidence. He joined the chamber of his senior and at the relevant time he was working in the chamber of his senior. Shri M. Ram Mohan Rao was a tenant of the premises bearing Municipal No. 3242 situated at Rashtrapathi Road, Kingsway, Secunderabad of which respondent Tekchand son of LalaMoti Ram was the owner. It is alleged that the respondent, his wife Mohini and son Subhash Chandra sold and conveyed the house in question by a deed of conveyance in favour of Premlata wife of Sohan Lal Saloot and daughter of Hastimal Jain for a consideration of Rs. 65,000.00 . As the sale was for a consideration of more than Rs. 50,000.00 the vendor was required to produce on income-tax 575 clearance certificate as required by S. 230 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 before the sale deed could be registered. It may be mentioned that sometime before the alleged transaction of sale, a suit was filed by respondent Tek Chand against Shri M. Ram Mohan Rao, the tenant for eviction on the ground of non-payment of rent etc. This suit had ended in a decree and at the relevant time, an appeal preferred by Shri M. Ram Mohan Rao was pending. To resume the narrative Tek Chand had already obtained the necessary income-tax clearance certificate on 5/07/1972. When the sale deed was presented for registration, the Registrar of Conveyances asked for the income-tax clearance certificate and respondent Tek Chand said that on payment of the full consideration, the same will be produced. From thereon the distressing events leading to the present appeal started.

(3) Respondent Tek Chand filed a complaint No. 14 of 1974 under S. 35 of the Advocates Act, 1961 before the Bar council of the State of Andhra Pradesh alleging that one Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao, advocate was a tenant of a house situated at Rashtrapathi Road, Secunderabad of which he was the owner. This house was agreed to be sold for Rs. 65,000.00 to Premlata daughter of Shri Hastimal Jain and Rs. 10,000.00 was paid as earnest money. The sale deed was to be completed within a period of three months on the vendee paying the balance of consideration of Rs. 55,000.00 . The vendee did not pay the amount and the respondent alleged that he had cancelled the agreement for sale. It was further alleged that as the consideration for sale was exceeding Rs. 50,000, the sale deed cannot be registered unless an income-tax clearance certificate is produced, but as the balance of consideration was not paid, agreement to sell the house was cancelled. However as the vendee Premlata wanted to grab the house without paying the balance of consideration, in order to get the sale deed registered, it was decided to get the income-tax clearance certificate and with this end in view an application purporting to be in the name of the respondent with his signature forged thereon bearing the date 31/10/1972 and with an incorrect address was prepared. As an affidavit is necessary in support of the application, the same was prepared on a stamp paper of Rs. 2.00 with the signature of respondent Tek Chand forged thereon. This affidavit was attested by the appellant as he is an advocate authorised to attest affidavits. On the strength of the forged documents, an income tax clearance certificate was obtained in the name of the respondent and the sale deed was got registered. It was alleged that the signature of respondent Tek Chand was attested by the present appellant, the junior of Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao, on being paid Rs. 300.00 through one Mulchand, Munshi of Lalchand, who is the uncle of the father of Premlata, the vendee. It was specifically averred that respondent Tek Chand neither signed the application for income tax clearance certificate nor swore the affidavit. It was alleged that someone impersonated Tek Chand and this must be known to the appellant because he knew respondent Tek Chand for many years 576 prior to the attestation of affidavit. It was alleged that a suit had been filed by Tek Chand against Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao for recovering the arrears of rent in the amount of Rs. 17,000.00 and obviously to cause damage to Tek Chand, appellant the junior of Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao attested a forged signature on the affidavit. The application with the affidavit annexed was submitted to the income-tax department on the same day, and the income-tax clearance certificate was procured through Mulchand which was produced in the office of sub-Registrar, Secunderabad. Thus the vendee Premlata got the sale deed registered on the strength of forged documents to which tlie appellant was a party and that wrongful loss was caused to the appellant in the amount of Rs. 1,35,000.00 which was facilitated by the appellant. It was alleged that this constitutes a very serious professional misconduct and necessary enquiry be made and appropriate action be taken.

(4) The appellant appeared and filed a counter-affidavit denying all the allegations. It was specifically admitted that the affidavit on the strength of which the income-tax clearance certificate was obtained on 2/11/1972 was attested by him. As the decision largely turns upon the explanation offered by the appellant his positive case may be extracted. Says he:

Either on 31/10/1972 or on 1/11/1972 the complainant (Tek Chand) came to this respondent with an affidavit purporting to bear his signature and requested this respondent to attest the same. The complainant admitted that the .signature appearing oh. the affidavit as that of his and therefore this respondent attested the same. On this admission of the complainant in person to this respondent in the office of Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao, advocate, this respondent attested the same in good faith and believing the representations made by the complainant. This respondent was aware that even prior to the date of attestation of the affidavit, the complainant had issued a notice to this respondent's then senior Shri M. Ram Mohan Rao attorning him to pay rents to Premlata as the complainant had sold the house to the said Premlata. It is therefore, emphatically denied that this respondent received Rs. 300.00 from Mulchand and he attested a forged affidavit as alleged. It is only on the admission and representation made by the complainant himself in person, that this respondent attested the affidavit in good faith.

(5) The State Bar council referred the complaint to its Disciplinary Committee. The complainant-respondent examined himself and he examined one Mohan Lal as his witness. He produced four documents marked Ex. A-1 to A-4. The important document is Ex. A-1, the affidavit dated 31/10/1972 purporting to be of respondent Tek Chand. Ex. A-2 is the application addressed to the Income-tax Officer for issuing income-tax clearance certificate. Ex. A-3 is the reply of Income-tax Officer dated 8/03/1973 to the inquiry made by the respondent. Ex. A-4 is another letter from the Income-tax Officer dated 20/03/1973 to the respondent. Ex. A-1 (a) and Ex. A-1 (b) are the disputed signatures of the respondent on the 577 affidavit and the application respectively. The appellant himself gave evidence and examined Mr N. Satyanarayana, advocate who was another junior of Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao as his witness and produced documents marked Ex. B-1 to B-4.

(6) The Disciplinary Committee of the State Bar council ('State Committee' for short) to whom the complaint was referred for disposal after minutely analysing the oral and documentary evidence, rejected the evidence of Public Witness 2 Mohan Lal witness examined by the complainant and RW 2 Mr N. Satyanarayana, advocate examined as witness by the appellant, observing that both were partisan witnesses and no credence can be given to their evidence. The Committee also rejected the allegation that the appellant was paid Rs. 300.00 by Mr Hastimal for attesting affidavit Ex. A-1, observing that there was no cogent and unimpeachable evidence in support of this allegation. The Committee further held that complainant Tek Chand never approached the appellant with Ex. A-1 and therefore, the explanation of the appellant that he attested the affidavit on the statement made by the respondent that it bears his signature cannot be accepted. The Committee concluded that the attestation of Ex. A-1 amounts to witnessing the fact that the deponent affirmed the truthfulness and genuineness of what was stated in the affidavit and signed in his presence, but this would be untrue without the presence of deponent Tek Chand and therefore, the endorsement becomes false and rendered the attestation invalid. The Committee concluded that the appellant advocate attested Ex. A-1 knowing that the respondent-complainant had not sworn the affidavit in his presence nor was it signed in his presence by the respondent and therefore, this act of attestation of the affidavit giving a misleading information is improper and comes within the mischief of professional misconduct and contrary to the norms of the professional etiquette. The State Committee also concluded that on account of this misconduct on the part of the appellant, income-tax clearance certificate was obtained and therefore, the appellant was guilty of professional misconduct. Having found the appellant guilty of serious misconduct, namely, attesting an affidavit which appears to be a forged one and which was used to obtain an unfair advantage by Premlata by obtaining income-tax clearance certificate on the strength this respondent with an affidavit purporting to bear his signature and requested this respondent to attest the same. The complainant admitted that the .signature appearing oh. the affidavit as that of his and therefore this respondent attested the same. On this admission of the complainant in person to this respondent in the office of Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao, advocate, this respondent attested the same in good faith and believing the representations made by the complainant. This respondent was aware that even prior to the date of attestation of the affidavit, the complainant had issued a notice to this respondent's then senior Shri M. Ram Mohan Rao attorning him to pay rents to Premlata as the complainant had sold the house to the said Premlata. It is therefore, emphatically denied that this respondent received Rs. 300.00 from Mulchand and he attested a forged affidavit as alleged. It is only on the admission and representation made by the complainant himself in person, that this respondent attested the affidavit in good faith.

(5) The State Bar council referred the complaint to its Disciplinary Committee. The complainant-respondent examined himself and he examined one Mohan Lal as his witness. He produced four documents marked Ex. A-1 to A-4. The important document is Ex. A-1, the affidavit dated 31/10/1972 purporting to be of respondent Tek Chand. Ex. A-2 is the application addressed to the Income-tax Officer for issuing income-tax clearance certificate. Ex. A-3 is the reply of Income-tax Officer dated 8/03/1973 to the inquiry made by the respondent. Ex. A-4 is another letter from the Income-tax Officer dated 20/03/1973 to the respondent. Ex. A-1 (a) and Ex. A-1 (b) are the disputed signatures of the respondent on the 577 affidavit and the application respectively. The appellant himself gave evidence and examined Mr N. Satyanarayana, advocate who was another junior of Mr M. Ram Mohan Rao as his witness and produced documents marked Ex. B-1 to B-4.

(6) The Disciplinary Committee of the State Bar council ('State Committee' for short) to whom the complaint was referred for disposal after minutely analysing the oral and documentary evidence, rejected the evidence of Public Witness 2 Mohan Lal witness examined by the complainant and RW 2 Mr N. Satyanarayana, advocate examined as witness by the appellant, observing that both were partisan witnesses and no credence can be given to their evidence. The Committee also rejected the allegation that the appellant was paid Rs. 300.00 by Mr Hastimal for attesting affidavit Ex. A-1, observing that there was no cogent and unimpeachable evidence in support of this allegation. The Committee further held that complainant Tek Chand never approached the appellant with Ex. A-1 and therefore, the explanation of the appellant that he attested the affidavit on the statement made by the respondent that it bears his signature cannot be accepted. The Committee concluded that the attestation of Ex. A-1 amounts to witnessing the fact that the deponent affirmed the truthfulness and genuineness of what was stated in the affidavit and signed in his presence, but this would be untrue without the presence of deponent Tek Chand and therefore, the endorsement becomes false and rendered the attestation invalid. The Committee concluded that the appellant advocate attested Ex. A-1 knowing that the respondent-complainant had not sworn the affidavit in his presence nor was it signed in his presence by the respondent and therefore, this act of attestation of the affidavit giving a misleading information is improper and comes within the mischief of professional misconduct and contrary to the norms of the professional etiquette. The State Committee also concluded that on account of this misconduct on the part of the appellant, income-tax clearance certificate was obtained and therefore, the appellant was guilty of professional misconduct. Having found the appellant guilty of serious misconduct, namely, attesting an affidavit which appears to be a forged one and which was used to obtain an unfair advantage by Premlata by obtaining income-tax clearance certificate on the strength of Ex: A-1 which did not appear to be genuine to the Committee, and which caused wrongful loss to the respondent, the Committee developed cold feet and imposed a ludicrously paltry punishment of reprimand which is no punishment strict sensu.

(7) Emboldened by this timid performance of the Disciplinary Committee of the State Bar council, the appellant filed D.G. Appeal No. 6 of 1976 before the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar council of India. ('Appellate Committee' for short). The Appellate Committee held that the explanation of the appellant that he attested the affidavit on the strength of the statement made to him by the respondent that the affidavit bears 578 his signature and that there was nothing improper in attesting the affidavit on the acknowledgement made by the deponent about his signature cannot be accepted because the affidavit in question categorically states that the party deponent put his signature before the attesting advocate, when it was common ground that it was not so done and the affirmation by the advocate clearly amounts to a false statement. The Appellate Committee then became facetious and observed that it would take a serious and strict view of the matter and hold that an advocate should not be a party to such an irregular procedure amounting to a false declaration by him. After so observing the Committee affirmed the order made by the State Committee imposing the punishment of reprimand and conveying a warning to the appellant that he should be careful in future in such matters. The Appellate Committee then proceeded to accept one contention on behalf of the learned advocate appearing for the appellant and expunged the observation of the State Committee that the appellant had not attested Ex. A-1 in the presence of the complainant and that this act of the appellant was improper and comes within the mischief of professional misconduct and contrary to the norms of professional etiquette on the ground that these observations were uncalled for especially in view of the fact that the Committee disbelieved the evidence of Public Witness 2 on the question of payment of Rs. 300.00 and presentation of affidavit by Mulchand. It would be presently pointed out that the expunging of those remarks was uncalled for and betrays total non-application of mind while disposing of the appeal.

(8) Undaunted by two failures but presumably encouraged by the ludicrous punishment, the appellant filed this appeal in this court under S. 38 of the Advocates Act, 1961. By the order made on 7/08/1978, the appeal was admitted and directed to be included in the list of short matters.

(9) The respondent on being served, appeared and filed cross-objections inter alia contending that there was a conspiracy between M. Ram Mohan Rao, senior of the present appellant and vendee Premlata as well as Hastimal to cause wrongful loss to the respondent. To this conspiracy even the appellant was a party. M. Ram Mohan Rao, who was a tenant of the house which Premlata claims to have purchased was under a decree of eviction and in order to thwart it he hatched the plot to which the appellant lent his assistance by purchasing two stamp papers of Rs. 2.00 each in the name of the respondent and after drawing up a false affidavit in the name of the respondent a signature was forged thereon to which the appellant lent his attestation so as to give it an appearance that the forged signature was a genuine signature of the respondent knowing full well that on the strength of this forged affidavit an income-tax clearance certificate was to be obtained which would facilitate registration of the sale deed which Premlata claimed to have taken and which was objected to by the respondent. It was alleged that for rendering such service he charged and accepted 579 Rs. 300.00 in the presence of Public Witness 2 witness Mohan Lal. It was alleged that this forged affidavit was submitted to the Income-tax officer on the strength of which an income-tax clearance certificate was obtained which enabled M. Ram Mohan Rao and Premlata to get registration of the sale deed. The respondent prayed for enhancement of punishment imposed upon the appellant.

(10) The appellant filed his rejoinder to the cross-objections filed by the respondents inter alia contending that in the absence of any provision in the Advocates Act, 1961, the respondent is not entitled to file cross objections. It was submitted that if the respondent was aggrieved by the order of the State Committee or the Appellate Committee, it was open to him to prefer an appeal but that having not been done, the cross-objections cannot be entertained.

(11) The appeal came up for hearing on 23/09/1980 before a bench comprising A.C. Gupta and A.P. Sen, JJ. After hearing Mr Vepa P. Sarathi, learned counsel appearing for the appellant, the court proceeded to hear Mr V.A. Bobde who appeared amicus curiae for the respondent. After hearing both the sides, the court made the following order:

Issue notice to the appellant in this appeal as to why having regard to the findings recorded by the State Bar council and the other facts and circumstances of the case the punishment awarded against him should not be enhanced. This appeal will be heard along with cross-objection filed by the respondent. C.A. No. 1019/78 to be treated as P.H.

(12) Mr Govindan Nair, learned counsel who appeared for the appellant submitted that the facts found both by the State Committee and the Appellate Committee would not constitute professional misconduct for which the appellant may incur a penalty.

(13) Before we proceed to examine what constitutes professional misconduct, we may briefly point out the facts concurrently found by the State Committee and the Appellate Committee.

(14) After extensively reproducing the evidence led in the case and after rejecting the evidence of Public Witness 2 Mohan Lal, a witness examined by the respondent and RW 2 N. Satyanarayana, a witness examined by the appellant, the State Committee concluded that the affidavit Ex. A-1 was not taken to the appellant by the respondent nor did he admit his signature on the affidavit Ex. A-1 in the presence of the appellant. The affidavit Ex. A-1 contains certain obviously incorrect statements in that even though respondent was aged more than 60 years, his age was shown to be 45 years in Ex. A-1 and that the address of the respondent shown in the affidavit on the date of the affidavit was incorrect because he was not residing in the House No. 3242, Rashtrapathi Road, Secunderabad as set out in Ex, A-1 but was residing at Red Hills, Hyderabad. It was also found that the respondent did not go to the office of advocate Shri M. Ram Mohan Rao 580 where the appellant was at the relevant time sitting for getting Ex. A-1 attested. It was noticed that the appellant admitted that Exs.A-1 (a) and A-1(b) were not signed by the respondent in the presence of the appellant and that he attested the same on the statement of the respondent complainant. It was found as a fact that the affidavit bears the date 31/10/1972 and was filed in the income-tax department on the same date, while the attestation of the appellant thereon bears the date 1/11/1972. It was concluded that either without the presence of the respondent or his so-called admission of his signature the appellant should not have attested his signature on an affidavit and therefore the attestation was invalid. And that this constitutes professional misconduct.

(15) The Appellate Committee in a cryptic albeit laconic order, brevity being its only merit, broadly agreed with the findings recorded by the State Committee observing that the affidavit on its own face would tend to show that the attestation was done after the signatory had put his signature in the presence of the appellant and there after the appellant attested the signature while it is admitted by the appellant that the signature was not put by the respondent on the affidavit in his presence but merely stated that he had signed the same. Therefore according to the Appellate Committee the affirmation of the same by the appellant clearly amounts to a false statement and that the appellant was a party to a false declaration and therefore, he is guilty of professional misconduct as found by the State Committee. Curiously thereafter, the Appellate Committee for reasons which are neither comprehensible nor convincing deleted the observation made by the State Committee which was clearly borne out by the evidence observing "that the finding was uncalled for in view of the fact that the State Committee disbelieved the evidence of Public Witness 2 on the question of payment of Rs. 300.00 and presentation of the affidavit by Mulchand". It has been very difficult for us to appreciate this disjointed reasoning. However, it is crystal clear that both the fact-finding authorities concurrently agreed that the respondent did not put his signature on Ex. A-1 in the presence of the appellant and yet the appellant by contributing his attestation to the affidavit made a declaration that the signature was of the appellant made in his presence, and admittedly that not being true the appellant was guilty of misconduct. Does this constitute professional misconduct is the question?

(16) The narrow question that falls for our consideration in this case is whether the appellant, an enrolled advocate, who was authorised to attest an affidavit that can be used in civil or criminal proceedings committed impropriety in attesting an affidavit which attestation would apply that the deponent subscribed his signature to the affidavit in his presence after taking the requisite oath that ought to be administered to him because there is no dispute that an affidavit is a sworn statement of the deponent.

(17) The expression 'affidavit' has been commonly understood to mean a sworn statement in writing made especially under oath or on affirmation 581 before an authorised Magistrate or Officer. Affidavit has been defined in sub-clause (3) of S. 3 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 to include "affirmation and declaration in the case of person by law allowed to affirm or declare instead of swearing". The essential ingredients of an affidavit are that the statements or declarations are made by the deponent relevant to the subject matter and in order to add sanctity to it, he swears or affirms the truth of the statements made in the presence of a person who in law is authorised either to administer oath or to accept the affirmation The responsibility for making precise and accurate statements in affidavit were emphasised by this court in Krishan Chander Nayar v. Chairman, central Tractor Organisation. The part or the role assigned to the person entitled to administer oath is no less sacrosanct. S. 3 of the Oaths Act, 1969 specifics persons on whom the power to administer oath or record affirmation is conferred. It inter alia includes "any court. Judge, Magistrate or person who may administer oaths and affirmations for the purpose of affidavits, if empowered in this behalf - (a) by the High court, in respect of affidavits for the purpose of judicial proceedings; or (b) by the State government, in respect of other affidavits". The Schedule to the Act prescribes forms of oaths or affirmation that is required to be administered to the party seeking to make his own affidavit. Rule 40 of the Civil Rules of Practice framed by the Andhra Pradesh High court provides that "the officer before whom an affidavit is taken shall state the date on which, and the place where, the same is taken, and sign his name and description at the end, as in Form No. 14, otherwise the same shall not be filed or read in any matter without the leave of the court". Form No. 14 prescribes the form of affidavit on solemn affirmation. It requires a solemn affirmation or oath before the person authorised to administer the same and then at the foot of which the signature of the deponent must appear and below that the officer entitled to administer oath must put his signature in token of both that he administered the oath and that deponent signed in his presence and by his attestation he has subscribed to both the aspects. Rule 34 of the aforementioned rules sets out officers authorised to administer oath for the purpose of affidavits and an advocate or pleader other than the advocate or pleader who has been engaged in such a proceeding have been included in the list of officers authorised to administer oath. The appellant as an advocate enrolled by the State Bar council was thus authorised to administer oath for the purpose of an affidavit and attest the same. This was not disputed before us.

(18) It is not in dispute that Ex. A-1 is an affidavit purporting to have been made by the respondent in the presence of the appellant and attested by him. The appellant admits in no uncertain terms that Ex. A-1 bears his attestation. If the matter were to rest here, it would mean that the respondent appeared before the appellant with his affidavit. Thereupon, the appellant administered oath to him and on the respondent taking the 582 oath and affirming the truth of the statement made in the affidavit, put his signature on the affidavit in the presence of the appellant and then the appellant subscribed his signature to the affidavit in token of his having administered the oath and the respondent having affixed his signature in his presence. The content of the affidavit clearly spells out the purpose for which the affidavit was being made namely for obtaining an income-tax clearance certificate which the respondent as vendor had to produce before the Registrar of Conveyances acting under the Indian Registration Act for the purpose of registering the sale deed which the respondent was alleged to have executed in favour of Smt. Premlata. To narrow down the area of controversy, it may be mentioned that the appellant admits that the affidavit Ex. A-1 is attested by him. He further concedes that the respondent did not affix his signature in his presence on the affidavit Ex. A-1 but admitted the same in his presence whereupon he attested the same. This statement of the appellant clearly shows dereliction of duty in two aspects: (i) that he did not administer any oath or did not call up the respondent to make an affirmation though Ex. A-1 purports to be an affidavit and secondly, the respondent did not subscribe his signature in the presence of the appellant and the appellant merely acted on an alleged statement of the respondent that the affidavit bears his signature. The enquiry therefore, in this case is a very narrow one. It centres round whether the respondent personally appeared before the appellant when he was sitting in the office of his senior M. Ram Mohan Rao and produced the affidavit Ex. A-1 for attestation by the appellant?

(19) The State Committee clearly recorded an unambiguous finding which we consider wholly incontrovertible in the facts of this case that the appellant never appeared before the respondent either on 31/10/197 2/11/1972. There are tell-tale circumstances on record which would clearly render this finding unassailable. The appellant was the junior of M. Ram Mohan Rao who claimed to be occupying the very house as tenant of the respondent which was the subject matter of the disputed sale and the respondent had filed a suit against M. Ram Mohan Rao for eviction on the ground of non-payment of rent in the aggregate amount of over Rs. 11,000.00 and the suit had already ended in a decree in favour of the respondent against M. Ram Mohan Rao and the matter was pending in appeal. There was thus no love lost between M. Ram Mohan Rao and the respondent. In this background the respondent would never think of going to the office of M. Ram Mohan Rao to contact his junior the present appellant for the purpose of swearing the affidavit. If the Oath Commissioners were a scarce commodity, one may have to go in search of a rare commodity but the relevant Rules 34 and 40 clearly show that every advocate was authorised to administer oath for the purpose of affidavit and attest the same. Secondly, the affidavit was for the purpose of obtaining an income-tax clearance certificate. Now there is unimpeachable evidence on record that the respondent had already obtained an income-tax clearance 583 certificate way back on 5/07/1972. In his examination-in-chief in the course of disciplinary proceedings, the respondent stated that on 5/07/1972, he obtained income-tax clearance certificate from the income-tax office. There is no cross-examination on this point. It clearly amounts to an acceptance of the fact that way back on 5/07/1972 the respondent had already obtained an income-tax clearance certificate. Therefore, it is not necessary for him to obtain any fresh income-tax clearance certificate. He had therefore no reason to approach the appellant for attesting the affidavit for the avowed object of obtaining an income-tax clearance certificate. Add to this the circumstance that the respondent at the relevant time was not staying at House No. 3242, Rashtrapathi Road, Secunderabad and this is not in dispute. If he was not staying at Rashtrapathi Road, Secunderabad, the Income-tax Officer, J Ward, Circle III, Hyderabad to whom the application appears to have been addressed for income-tax clearance certificate on 31/10/1972 would have no jurisdiction to entertain the application. The appellant at the relevant time was staying at Red Hills, Hyderabad. It was obviously not necessary for him to approach the appellant at such a long distance for attesting an affidavit, more so in view of the fact that he had already obtained an income-tax clearance certificate. There is also a letter on record from the Income-tax Officer, J Ward, Circle III, Hyderabad dated 21/04/1973 addressed to the respondent in which he has categorically stated that the income-tax clearance certificate issued on the basis of the affidavit dated 31/10/1972 was collected from his office by one Mulchand and let it be recalled that Mulchand is none other than the person against whom allegations were made that he was acting on behalf of Premlata and Hastimal, and whom the appellant knew intimately as it transpired from his statement in the course of the investigation wherein he has stated that if he remembered correctly Sri Mulchand and one Sohanlal son-in-law of Hastimal also followed

Tek Chand and were present while he (the appellant) was attesting the affidavit. Thus the appellant knew both the respondent and Mulchand and it is this Mulchand whom the I.T.O. referred as having taken away the income-tax clearance certificate which was issued on the basis of a forged affidavit along with a forged application. There is further intrinsic evidence to show that document Ex. A-1 is either a forged one or fake one. Ex. A-1 the affidavit bears the date 31/10/1972. Attesting the same, the appellant appended his own signature which he admits he has put. It bears the date 1/11/1972. Therefore, one can say with reasonable certainty that this affidavit Ex. A-1 was attested by the appellant on 1/11/1972. Now if we refer to the letter Ex. A-2 addressed to the Income-tax Officer, J Ward, Circle III, Hyderabad for the purpose of obtaining the income-tax clearance certificate, it bears the date 31/10/1972. The Income-tax Officer in his letter Ex. A-3 addressed to the respondent states that an application for obtaining an income-tax clearance certificate was presented in the name of the respondent on 31/10/1972. If the application 584 was thus made to the Income-tax Officer on 31/10/1972, it creates a grave doubt about the existence of affidavit Ex. A-1 which has been attested by the appellant on 1/11/1972. Of course, we are not inclined to attach much importance to this aspect for the reason that the Income-tax Officer may have committed a mistake in referring to the application dated 31/10/1972 by merely looking at. the date on the application and not the date on which it was presented. Now the cumulative effect of these various pieces of evidence accepted as wholly reliable and practically un controverted is that the respondent did not approach the appellant either on 31/10/197 2/11/1972 nor did he present any affidavit for attestation nor did he admit his signature on Ex. A-1 to the appellant.

(20) What conclusion can be deduced from the totality of aforementioned evidence? And this has to be ascertained in the context of the affirmative stand taken by the appellant. The appellant admits that he knew the respondent long before the attestation on Ex. A-1. Therefore, one can easily rule out impersonation or the appellant being taken by someone for a joy-ride. If the appellant knew the respondent intimately before the date of Ex. A-1 and if the incontrovertible conclusion is that the respondent did not appear before the appellant either on 31/10/1972 or on 1/11/1972 nor did he present any affidavit for the attestation by the appellant nor did he admit his signature, the stark albeit unpalatable conclusion that flows therefrom is that the appellant is a party to a document which is not genuine. It can be safely said that it was a false document purporting to be in the name of the respondent. It would- in law become a forged document. The appellant by attesting his signature to it gave a solemnity which is being relied upon by the Income-tax Officer on which a very valuable document namely, income-tax clearance certificate was issued which facilitated registration of a sale deed in respect of which the contention is that the consideration has not been paid to the respondent. The appellant thus facilitated commission of a fraud by becoming a party to the forged document. In reaching this conclusion we have completely kept out of consideration the opinion of the handwriting expert which was not placed on record in the enquiry proceedings but which was submitted to the criminal court in criminal proceedings.

(21) The appellant is thus shown to have violated his statutory duty conferred by the Oaths Act, 1969. He has also acted in a manner unbecoming of a member of a noble profession. He has knowingly become a party to the forgery of a very valuable document and he has by his conduct facilitated the commission of a fraud which would to some extent benefit his senior M. Ram Mohan Rao.

(22) Does this conduct constitute professional misconduct? After the initial enthusiasm of arguing the appeal evaporated when distressing and disturbing dirty facts started un raveling from the evidence and when Mr Govindan Nair, learned counsel for the appellant was requested by us to submit his reply 585 to the notice issued by this court to the appellant to show cause why the punishment imposed should not be enhanced, he practically buckled up and almost conceded that the conduct attributed to the appellant would certainly constitute professional misconduct. Let us keep this concession aside and come to our own conclusion whether the actions indulged in by the appellant by becoming a party to the forged documents so as to facilitate commission of fraud would constitute professional misconduct.

(23) Provisions contained in Ch. II in Part VI of the Bar council of India Rules of 1975 prescribe "Standards of Professional Conduct and Etiquette". In the preamble to this part, it is stated that "an advocate shall, at all times, comport himself in a manner befitting his status as an officer of the court, a privileged member of the community, and a gentleman, bearing in mind that what may be lawful and moral for a person who is not a member of the Bar, or for a member of the Bar in his non-professional capacity may still be improper for an advocate". There follows enumeration of the conduct expected of a member of the profession. It is however, made clear that the rules in Ch. II contain canons of conduct and etiquette adopted as general guides ; yet the specific mention thereof shall not be construed as a denial of the existence of others equally imperative though not specifically mentioned. It inter alia includes that an advocate shall not act on the instructions of any person other than his client or authorised agent. If Mulchand followed the respondent as admitted by the appellant to his office and if Mulchand presented the forged documents to the Income-tax Officer, one can say that the appellant has acted to the detriment of his client at the instance of an outsider whose interest was detrimental to his client. But apart from anything else, under Rule 34 of the Civil Rules of Practice if the appellant was authorised to administer oath in respect of affidavits to be used in judicial proceedings, in the absence of any authorisation by the State of Andhra Pradesh, the appellant could not have subscribed to aft affidavit claiming to be authorised by Rule 34 in respect of an affidavit not likely to be used in a judicial proceeding. An affidavit to be placed before an Income-tax officer for claiming an income-tax clearance certificate could not be said to be one sworn in for the purpose of being used in judicial proceedings, under the Oaths Act. In the absence of any authorisation from the State government, the appellant would not have the power to attest an affidavit which could be used in a proceeding other than judicial proceeding. One can legitimately expect an advocate of 10 years' standing to know that under Rule 34, the appellant was not entitled to attest an affidavit which includes administration of oath which was likely to be used in a proceeding other than a judicial proceeding and yet he pretended to act in his assumed capacity, arrogated to himself the jurisdiction which he did not possess and attested the affidavit in the name of someone whom he knew personally and who was not present before him personally and successfully misled the Income-tax Officer to issue the income-tax clearance certificate. Add to 586 this that he made a blatantly false statement in the proceedings of disciplinary enquiry that the respondent had appeared before him and admitted his signature. This is not only a false statement but it is false to his knowledge. If this is not professional misconduct, it would be time to wind up this jurisdiction.

(24) Both the State Committee and the Appellate Committee have soft-peddled the matter when. imposing adequate punishment. The appellant is guilty of gross professional misconduct.

(25) The Appellate Committee clearly committed an error in deleting some of the observations of the State Committee and that shows not only non-application of mind but a conclusion contrary to record which is wholly unsustainable. This aspect is open to us for our consideration as this court has issued a notice as contemplated by the proviso to S. 38 of the Advocates Act, 1961 under which the appeal lies to this court. This court has jurisdiction to vary the order of the Appellate Committee which may even prejudicially affect the person aggrieved subject to this prerequisite that it can do so only after a notice to such person and after giving him an opportunity of being heard. By Act 60 of 1973, specific power has been conferred on this court that in an appeal by the person aggrieved by the decision of the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar council of India to this court, this court may pass such order including the order varying the punishment awarded by the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar council of India thereon as it deems fit. This jurisdiction will comprehend the jurisdiction to vary the finding of the Appellate Committee.

(26) The next question is: what should be the adequate punishment that must be imposed upon the appellant? The ludicrously low punishment frankly no punishment imposed by the State Committee makes a mockery of its finding. The appellant has merely been reprimanded for his professional misconduct and this punishment has been upheld in the appeal of the appellant by the Appellate Committee.

(27) Ss. (3) of S. 35 of the Advocates Act, 1961 prescribes the various punishments that may be imposed upon a delinquent advocate: They are: (a) reprimand the advocate, (b) suspend the advocate from practice for such period as it may deem fit, and (c) remove the name of the advocate from the State roll of advocates.

(28) Adjudging the adequate punishment is a ticklish job and it has become all the more ticklish in view of the miserable failure of the peers of the appellant on whom jurisdiction was conferred to adequately punish a derelict member. To perform this task may be an unpalatable and onerous duty. We, however, do not propose to abdicate our function howsoever disturbing it may be.

(29) Mr Nair urged that there are certain extenuating and mitigating circumstances that may be kept in proper perspective before this court 587 proceeds to review the punishment already imposed upon the appellant. It was pointed out that by the relevant time in October-November, 1972, the appellant had put in only ten years of practice at the Bar. He was still attending the office of his senior who may have influenced his decision. Further there is no material to show that the respondent had already obtained an income-tax clearance certificate. It was urged that affirmance of affidavit is a routine job and the court should not view it with such seriousness as to charge the appellant with dereliction of duty. And add to this the finding that the allegation of payment of Rs. 300.00 is not held proved. None of these grounds are either valid or persuasive. If the appellant had been in practice for a period of ten years at the Bar at the relevant time, he had qualified not only for being appointed as a High court Judge but as a Judge of this court. This is sufficient to dispel arguments of immaturity. It was said he may be acting under pressure from his senior. In fact this itself should have awakened him all the more to his responsibility when he attested the affidavit. And if he knew the respondent, one can only say that it was not because he did not discharge the duty with the amount of seriousness expected of him in attesting the affidavit, but he was consciously becoming a party to a serious conspiracy. None of the extenuating or mitigating circumstances appeals to us.

(30) Legal profession is monopolistic in character and this monopoly itself inheres certain high traditions which its members are expected to upkeep and uphold. Members of the profession claimed that they are the leaders of thought and society. In the words of Justice Krishna Iyer in Bar council of Maharashtra v. M.V. Dabholkar the role of the members of the Bar can be appreciated. He said :

The Bar is not a private guild, like that of 'barbers, butchers and candlestick-makers' but, by bold contrast, a public institution committed to public justice and porno public service. The grant of a monopoly licence to practice law is based on three assumptions: (1) There is a socially useful function for the lawyer to perform, (2) The lawyer is a professional person who will perform that function, and (3) His performance as a professional person is regulated by himself and more formally, by the profession as a whole. The central function that the legal profession must perform is nothing less than the administration of justice ('The Practice of law is a Public Utility'-'The Lawyer, the Public and Professional Responsibility' by F. Raymond Marks et al-Chicago American Bar Foundation, 1972, pp. 288-289). A glance at the functions of the Bar council, and it will be apparent that a rainbow of public utility duties, including legal aid to the poor, is cast on these bodies in the national hope that the members of this monopoly will serve society and keep to canons of ethics befitting an honourable order. If pathological cases of member mis behaviour occur, the reputation and credibility of the Bar suffer a mayhem and who, but the Bar council, is more concerned with and sensitive to this potential disrepute the few black sheep bring about? The official heads of the Bar, i.e. the 588 Attorney General and the Advocates-General too are distressed if a lawyer 'stoops to conquer' by resort to soliciting, touting and other corrupt practices.

If these are the high expectations of what is described as anoble profession, its members must set an example of conduct worthy of emulation. If any of them falls from that high expectation, the punishment has to be commensurate with the degree and gravity of the misconduct. We need not reiterate the seriousness of the misconduct as we have repeatedly pointed out the same above. Usually, precedent-minded as we generally are, we searched for some precedent to assist us in determining adequate penalty. In P. J. Ratnam v. D. Kanikaram this court upheld suspension from practice for a period of five years for a misconduct of not refunding the amount which was taken by the advocate on behalf of his client observing that the court was surprised at the request of the learned counsel for reducing the punishment and in fact it is a case in which the court left to itself would have struck off the name of the advocate from the State roll of advocates. The court concluded by saying that suspension of five years errs on the side of leniency and no case is made out for interfering with the same. In Dabholkar case, the professional misconduct charged was that the advocate Dabholkar stood at the entrance of the court House at the Presidency Magistrate's court, Esplanade, Fort, Bombay and solicited work and generally behaved at that place in an undignified manner. Frankly speaking, if Dabholkar was starving, his professional misconduct could have been overlooked because between hunger and soliciting work, the latter is less pernicious. However, the seven-Judges Constitution bench of this court at that stage did not interfere with the punishment of suspension from practising as advocate for a period of three years. Of course, the Constitution bench was concerned with the narrow point about the maintenance of the appeal by the Bar council of India. In V. C. Rangudurai v. D. Gopalan, the delinquent lawyer Rangadurai was charged with duping the complainant T. Deivasenapathy, an old deaf man aged 70 years and his aged wife Smt. D. Kamalammal by not filing suits on two promissory notes. The Disciplinary Committee of the state Bar council had ' imposed a penalty of suspension from practice for a period of six years. Sen, J. in his judgment had grave reservations about the majority decision by which the period of suspension was reduced and the advocate was directed to work under an Official/Legal Aid Board in Tamil Nadu where his service free of charge were required. Justice Sen would dismiss the appeal without the slightest reduction in punishment.

(31) Having given the matter our anxious consideration, looking to the gravity of the misconduct and keeping in view the motto that the punishment must be commensurate with the gravity of the misconduct, 589Swe direct that the appellant M. Veerabhadra Rao shall be suspended from practice for a period of five years that is up to and inclusive of 31/10/1989. To that extent we vary the order both of the Disciplinary Committee of the State Bar council as well as the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar council of India.

(32) Accordingly this appeal fails and is dismissed and the punishment of reprimand imposed upon the appellant is varied and he is suspended from practice for a period of five years i.e. up to and inclusive of 31/10/1989. The appellant shall pay the costs of the respondent quantified at Rs. 3,000.00.

Criminal appeal no. 1048 of 1998, decided on august 30, 1999

A) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 301, 302 and 225 & 24 — Duty of the Public Prosecutor to act fairly and not merely to obtain conviction by any means fair or foul — If the accused is entitled to any legitimate benefit the Public Prosecutor should make it available to him or inform the court even if the defence counsel overlooked it .

The legislature reminds the State that the policy must strictly conform to fairness in the trial of an accused. A Public Prosecutor is not expected to show a thirst to reach the case in the conviction of the accused somehow or the other irrespective of the true facts-involved in the case. The expected attitude of the Public Prosecutor while conducting prosecution must be couched in fairness not only to the court and to the investigating agencies but to the accused as well. If an accused is entitled to any legitimate benefit during trial the Public Prosecutor should not scuttle or conceal it On the contrary, it is the duty of the Public Prosecutor to winch it to the fore and make it available to the accused. Even if the defence counsel overlooked it, the Public Prosecutor has the added responsibility to bring it to the notice of the court if it comes this knowledge. A private counsel, if allowed a free hand to conduct prosecution, would focus on bringing the case to conviction even if it is not a fit case to be so convicted. That is the reason why Parliament applied a bridle on him and subjected his role strictly to the instructions given by the Public Prosecutor. (Para 13) privately engaged counsel is permitted to act on his behalf. The role which a private counsel in such a situation can play is, perhaps, comparable with that of a junior advocate conducting the case of his senior in a court. The private counsel is to act on behalf of the Public Prosecutor albeit the fact that he is engaged in the case by a private party. If the role of the Public Prosecutor is allowed to shrink to a mere supervisory role the trial would become a combat between the private party and the accused which would render the legislative mandate in Section 225 of the Code a dead letter. (Para 14)

B) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 301 and 302 — Unlike S. 302, S. 301 is applicable to all courts of criminal jurisdiction- Right of private counsel to conduct prosecution in a Sessions Court — Prosecution in sessions case cannot be conducted by anyone other than the Public Prosecutor — Role of private counsel is limited to act under the direction of the Public Prosecutor — However, he can submit written arguments after closure of the evidence with prior permission of the court.

Advocates who appeared in this case:

B.S. Mor, M.S. Dahiva and Ms Kusum Singh, Advocates, for the Appellant;

C.S. Ashri and Mahabir Singh, Advocates, for the Respodents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by THOMAS, J.— It is as well for the protection of the accused persons in sessions trials (in India) that provision is made to have the case against him prosecuted only by a Public Prosecutor and not by any counsel engaged by any aggrieved private party. Fairness to the accused who faces prosecution is the raison d'etre of the legislative insistence on that score.

2. In this case, the appellant is aggrieved because a counsel engaged by him was not allowed by the High Court to conduct prosecution in spite of obtaining a consent from the Public Prosecutor concerned. The first respondent was the accused in the sessions trial wherein the appellant wanted his counsel's active role to be played. The appellant and the respondent are advocates practising at the same station. The grievance of the appellant developed in the following fact situation:

Hie appellant is the brother of five sisters, and the youngest among them, Suman, had secured creditable academic laurels; She was given in marriage to Dr Dinesh Kumar Gupta (the son of the respondent). But about 4 months after her marriage she met with a tragic death by burns. On a complaint lodged by the appellant, FIR under Sections 302 and 120-B of the Indian Penal Code (IPC) was registered by the local police against the respondent. But after completion of the investigation a charge-sheet was laid against him for the offence under Section 304-B of the Indian Penal Code.

3. The appellant, on his part, engaged Shri R.C. Gugnani, Advocate to appear for him in the Sessions Court during trial of the case. On 1-7-1996 when the appellant was to be examined as a witness for prosecution, Shri R.C. Gugnani, Advocate ventured to conduct the chief examination of that witness. It was objected to by the counsel for the accused on the premise that a private counsel cannot conduct prosecution in a sessions trial. The appellant then moved an application on the same day, the relevant portion of which reads thus:

"That the Public Prosecutor has no objection if the case is conducted by Shri R.C. Gugnani, Advocate. That as per the prevailing practice being followed by this Hon'ble Court and as per provisions of Section 301 (2) Cr.P.C. my counsel has a right to conduct the case under the directions of the Public Prosecutor. It is , therefore, prayed that in view of the facts stated above, necessary permission may please be given to the applicant for conducting the case under the directions of the Public Prosecutor."

4. It seems, the Public Prosecutor in the trial court endorsed the said application. The trial court passed an order thereon, the material portion of which is the following:

"I accept the application and allow Shri R.C. Gugnani, Advocate of the complainant to conduct under the supervision, guidance and control of the Public Prosecutor, while conducting the same case and the Public Prosecutor shall retain with himself the control over the proceedings."

5. The accused was not prepared to have his case prosecuted by the complainant's counsel and hence he approached the High Court in revision. The impugned order of the High Court was passed by a Single Judge, The operative portion of the said order reads thus:

"I allow this revision and direct that the lawyer appointed by the complainant or private person in this case shall act under the directions from the Public Prosecutor and may with the permission of the Court submit written arguments after evidence is closed in the case. I further direct that the Public Prosecutor in charge of the case shall conduct the prosecution. Revision petition is disposed of accordingly."

6. Learned counsel for the appellant informed us that trial in the case is over by now. Nonetheless he pleaded for consideration of the issue as he feels that a decision thereon by this Court is necessary for future guidance also. He contended that Section 302(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure (for short "the Code") must be so construed as to enable the pleader of an aggrieved private person to conduct the prosecution in as best a manner as he deems fit. Section 301 of the Code reads thus:

"301. Appearance by Public Prosecutors.—(1) The Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor in charge of a case may appear and plead without any written authority before any court in which that case is under enquiry, trial or appeal.

2) If in any such case any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute any person in any court, the Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor in charge of the case shall conduct the prosecution, and the pleader so instructed shall act therein under the directions of the Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor, and may, with the permission of the court, submit written arguments after the evidence is closed in the case."

7. Section 302 of the Code has also some significance in this context and hence that is also extracted below:

"302. Permission to conduct prosecution.—(1) Any Magistrate enquiring into or trying a case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than a police officer below the rank of Inspector; but no person, other than the Advocate-General or Government Advocate or a Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor, shall be entitled to do so without such permission:

Provided that no police officer shall be permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken part hi the investigation into the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted.

(2) Any person conducting the prosecution may do so personally or by a pleader."

8. It must be noted that the latter provision is intended only for Magistrate Courts. It enables the Magistrate to permit any person to conduct the prosecution. The only rider is that Magistrate cannot give such permission to a police officer below the rank of Inspector. Such person need not necessarily be a Public Prosecutor.

9. In the Magistrate's Court anybody (except a police officer below the rank of Inspector) can conduct prosecution, if the Magistrate permits him to do so. Once the permission is granted the person concerned can appoint any counsel to conduct the prosecution on his behalf in the Magistrate's Court.

10. But the above laxity is not extended to other courts. A reference to Section 225 of the Code is necessary in this context. It reads thus:

"'225. Trial to be conducted by Public Prosecutor.—In every trial before a court of Session, the prosecution shall be conducted by a Public prosecutor."

11. the Old Criminal Procedure Code (1898) contained an identical provision in Section 270 thereof. A Public Prosecutor means "any person appointed under Section 24, and includes any person acting under the directions of a Public Prosecutor" [vide Section 2(«) of the Code].

12. In the backdrop of the above provisions we have to understand the purport of Section 301 of the Code. Unlike its succeeding provision in the Code, the application of which is confined to Magistrate Courts, this particular section is applicable to all the courts of criminal jurisdiction. This distinction can be discerned from employment of the words "any court in Section 301. In view of the provision made in the succeeding section as for Magistrate Courts the insistence contained in Section 301(2) must be understood as applicable to all other courts without any exception. The first sub-section empowers the Public Prosecutor to plead in the court without any written authority, provided he is in charge of the case. The second subsection, which is sought to be invoked by the appellant, imposes the curb on a counsel engaged by any private party. It limits his role to act in the court during such prosecution "under the directions of the Public Prosecutor". The only other liberty which he can possibly exercise is to submit written arguments after the closure of evidence in the trial, but that too can be done only if the court permits him to do so.

13. From the scheme of the Code the legislative intention is manifestly clear that prosecution in a Sessions Court cannot be conducted by anyone other than the Public Prosecutor. The legislature reminds the State that the policy must strictly conform to fairness in the trial of an accused in a Sessions Court. A Public Prosecutor is not expected to show a thirst to reach the case in the conviction of the accused somehow or the other irrespective of the true facts involved in the case. The expected attitude of the Public Prosecutor while conducting prosecution must be couched in fairness not only to the court and to the investigating agencies but to the accused as well. If an accused is entitled to any legitimate benefit during trial the Public Prosecutor should not scuttle/ conceal it. On the contrary, it is the duty of the Public Prosecutor to winch it to the fore and make it available to the accused. Even if the defence counsel overlooked it, the Public Prosecutor has the added responsibility to bring it to the notice of the court if it comes to his knowledge. A private counsel, if allowed a free hand to conduct prosecution would focus on bringing the case to conviction even if it is not a fit case to be so convicted. That is the reason why Parliament applied a bridle on him and subjected his role strictly to the instructions given by the Public Prosecutor.

14. It is not merely an overall supervision which the Public Prosecutor is expected to perform in such cases when a privately engaged counsel is permitted to act on his behalf. The role which a private counsel in such a situation can play is, perhaps, comparable with that of a junior advocate conducting the case of his senior in a court. The private counsel is to act on behalf of the Public Prosecutor albeit the fact that he is engaged in the case by a private party. If the role of the Public Prosecutor is allowed to shrink to a mere supervisory role the trial would become a combat between the private party and the accused which would render the legislative mandate in Section 225 of the Code a dead letter.

15. An early decision of a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Queen-Empress v. Durga[1] has pinpointed the role of a Public Prosecutor as follows:

"It is the duty of a Public Prosecutor to conduct the case for the Crown fairly. His object should be, not to obtain an unrighteous conviction, but, as representing the Crown, to see that justice is vindicated; and, in exercising his discretion as to the witnesses whom he

1 ILR (1894-96) 16 All 84 : 1894 AWN 7 should or should not call, he should bear that in mind. In our opinion, a Public Prosecutor should not refuse to call or put into the witness box for cross-examination a truthful witness returned in the calendar as a witness for the Crown, merely because the evidence of such witness might in some respects be favourable to the defence. If a Public Prosecutor is of opinion that a witness is a false witness or is likely to give false testimony if put into the witness box, he is not bound, in our opinion, to call that witness or to tender him for cross-examination."

16. As we are in complete agreement with the observation of a Division Bench of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in Medichetty Ramakistiah v. State ofA.P.[2] we deem it fit to extract the said observation:

'"A prosecution, to use a familiar phrase, ought not to be a persecution. The priniciple that the Public Prosecutor should be scrupulously fair to the accused and present his case with detachment and without evincing any anxiety to secure a conviction, is based upon high policy and as such courts should be astute to suffer no inroad upon its integrity. Otherwise there will be no guarantee that the trial will be as fair to the accused as a criminal trial ought to be. The State and the Public Prosecutor acting for it are only supposed to be putting all the facts of the case before the Court to obtain its decision thereon and not to obtain a conviction by any means fair or foul. Therefore, it is right and proper that courts should be zealous to see that the prosecution of an offender is not handed over completely to a professional gentleman instructed by a private party."

17. Another Division Bench of the same High Court in Bhupalli Malliah, had in fact deprecated the practice of the Public Prosecutor's sitting back and permitting private counsel to conduct prosecution, in the following terms:

"We would like to make it very clear that it is extremely undesirable and quite improper that a Public Prosecutor should be allowed to sit back, handing over the conduct of the case to a counsel, however eminent he may be, briefed by the complainant in the case."

18. Equally forceful is the observation of Bhirnasankaram, J. for the Division Bench in Medichetty Ramakistiah[2] which is worthy of quotation here:

> "Unless, therefore, the control of the Public Prosecutor is there, the prosecution by a pleader for a private party may degenerate into a legalised means for wreaking private vengeance. The prosecution instead of being a fair and dispassionate presentation of the facts of the case for the determination of the court, would be transformed into a battle between two parties in which one was trying to get better of the other, by whatever means available. It is true that in every case there is the overall control of the court in regard to the conduct of the case by either party. AIR 1959 AP 659 : 1959 Cn LJ 1404 AIR 1959 AP 477 : 1959 Cri LJ 1045. But it cannot extend to the point of ensuring that in all matters one party is fair to the other."

19. We, therefore, conclude that the High Court in the impugned order has correctly approached the issue and it does not warrant any interference. We, therefore, dismiss this criminal appeal.

CRIMINAL WRIT PETITION NO. 8 OF 2010

Kishore Wadhwani s/o Shri Khanchand WadhwaniAppellant VERSUS
State of MaharashtraRespondents

Criminal P.C. (1973), Ss.239, 301, 302 -Application for discharge - First informant- No right to address orally - Opportunity of hearing cannot be refused to him - His role will be limited and he cannot take place of Public Prosecutor - He cannot be allowed to take over the control of prosecution by allowing to address the court directly.

If the first informant appears before the Court and desires to participate in the application, opportunity cannot be refused to him. Now the next question would be about the nature of the hearing to be given to the first informant. Should the hearing be independent to the hearing to the Public Prosecutor or it be through the Public Prosecutor, His role will have to be limited as under Section 301 Cr.P.C. and keeping in focus the role of the Public Prosecutor. He cannot be allowed to take over the control of prosecution by allowing to address the court directly.

JUDGEMENT
1. THE single question that arises for consideration in this writ petition is whether the first informant has a right of hearing at the time of consideration of the application for discharge under Section 239 of Code of Criminal Procedure (hereinafter Cr.P.C." for short). THE brief facts of the case required to be stated for consideration of the question are that the petitioners are accused in Case No.927/PW/2007 pending in the Court of Additional Chief Metropolitan Magistrate, 8th Court, Mumbai. THE case had been registered, pursuant to the order passed under Section 156(3) Cr.P.C. by the Court on the complaint filed by respondent no.2. THE petitioners had filed Criminal Writ Petition No.93 of 2007 seeking quashing of MECR No.16 of 2006 registered by the police. That writ petition was dismissed on 16th April 2007. THE petitioners then approached the Hon'ble Supreme Court by filing S.L.P. (Cri.) No. 2414 of 2007, during the pendency of which, chargesheet came to be filed before the trial court. THErefore on 16th November 2009, the petitioners withdrew the S.L.P. and filed application for discharge under Section 239 Cr.P.C. In that application, respondent no.2 appeared before the trial Court with a request to be heard in the matter. THE request made was an oral request. THE petitioners objected to the request. After hearing rival arguments, the oral request of respondent no.2 was allowed by the trial Court by it's order dtd. 30th August 2010, impugned in the present petition. THE reasons set out in the short order read as follows:

"3) Especially I have gone through the ratio laid down in the authorities of the Hon'ble Apex Court in the case of Bhagwant Singh vs. Commissioner of Police, AIR 1985 SC page 1288 and the ratios down in other authorities mentioned supra. 4) THE question that has been raised by Defence is as to whether, at this stage i.e. at the stage of discharge of accused, whether the original complainant could have a right to be heard. On this point, it was argued that the complainant can be heard at the initial stage, but he has no right to be heard at this stage. 5) I have carefully gone through the submissions made at the bar as well as ratios laid down in reported authorities as discussed supra. It is pertinent to note that golden principle of law is that nobody should be condemned unheard. May it be any stage and the original complainant is not an alien to this proceeding. So as per the ratios laid down in the authorities relied upon by Ld. Counsel for the original complainant, the original complainant has a right to be heard even at this stage. Hence, as there is no application filed on record by either of the parties and as everything went on orally, this order is passed below Exhibit No.1. THE original complainant has got a right to be heard even at this stage. Hence, matter shall proceed further."

2. THE petitioners challenge the impugned order contending that Section 239 Cr.P.C., under which the application for discharge is made, in express terms, gives right of hearing only to the prosecution and the accused. THE section does not contemplate hearing to the first informant either in person or through advocate. Secondly under the scheme of Cr.P.C., it is the public prosecutor who has to conduct the case and the first informant can only assist the public prosecutor and can address the court through the public prosecutor. THErefore according to the petitioners, the trial Court could not have passed the impugned order. In reply, respondent no. 2 seeks to justify the impugned order contending that it is in keeping with the evolvement of law in giving equal importance to the first informant and victim of the crime. Besides, participation by way of advancing arguments on law and facts would not bring any element of unfairness but would actually assist the court.

Undoubtedly the first informant and to some extent, the injured i.e. victim of crime or relatives of the deceased, if the incident has resulted into death have now been vested with better rights. with increased participation at different stages of criminal proceedings. Before going into the question arising for consideration in the petition, it will be convenient to take note of the rights conferred upon them by the statute as well as by judicial pronouncements. It will also be necessary to refer to few provisions of Cr.P.C. to appreciate the submissions advanced.

Section 154(1) Cr.P.C. requires that every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence if given orally to an officer-in-charge of a police station shall be reduced in writing by him or under his direction and be read over to the informant and every such information whether given in writing or reduced into writing shall be signed by the person giving it. Section 154(2) requires that a copy of such information shall be given forthwith, free of cost, to the first informant. Section 157(2) requires that if it appears to the officer-in-charge of the police station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation, he shall forthwith notify to the first informant the fact that he will not investigate into the complaint or cause it to be investigated. In case investigation is undertaken, Section 173(2)(ii) provides that on completion of investigation, the officer shall communicate, in such manner as may be prescribed by the State Government, the action taken by him to the first informant. It can be noted that all the above three provisions relate to the action to be taken by the police i.e. the officerin7 charge of the police station. The purpose and reasons of the three provisions have been stated by the Apex Court in it's decision in Bhagwant Singh Vs. Commissioner of Police, reported in A.I.R. 1985 Supreme Court, page 1285 relied upon by respondent no.2 and also referred to in the impugned order. The reasons stated are as under :

"3. ..... Obviously the reason is that the informant who sets the machinery of investigation into motion by filing the First Information Report must know what is the result of the investigation initiated on the basis of the First Information Report. The informant having taken the initiative in lodging the First Information Report with a view to initiating investigation by the police for the purpose of ascertaining whether any offence has been committed and, if so, by whom, is vitally interested in the result of the investigation and hence the law requires that the action taken by the officer in charge of a police station on the First Information Report should be communicated to him and the report forwarded by such officer to the Magistrate under subsection 2(i) of Section 173 should also be supplied to him."

3. NEXT are the provisions of Section 301 and 302 Cr.P.C., which allow participation of the first informant into the conduct of the trial to the extent permitted therein. Section 301 permits a first informant to instruct a pleader to prosecute any person in any court but limits participation of such pleader to assistance to the Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor. The pleader may, with the permission of the Court, submit written arguments after the evidence in the case is closed in the case. Section 302 relates to the proceedings before a Magistrate. Any Magistrate enquiring into trying a case, may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than a police officer below the rank of Inspector. No such permission is required for the prosecution to be conducted by Advocate General or Government Advocate or Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor. In other words, ordinarily the prosecutions are conducted by Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor. However, it is open for a private person to seek permission to conduct the prosecution by himself. If the Court thinks that the cause of justice would be served better by granting such permission, the Court would grant such permission. The scope of Sections 301 and 302 Criminal Procedure Code has been commented upon by the Apex Court in its decision in J.K. International V/s. State Govt of NCT of Delhi & Ors. reported in (2001) 3 SCC page 462. The same reads as under :

"12. The private person who is permitted to conduct prosecution in the Magistrate"s Court can engage a counsel to do the needful in the Court in his behalf. It further amplifies the position that if a private person is aggrieved by the offence committed against him or against any one in whom he is interested he can approach the Magistrate and seek permission to conduct the prosecution by himself. It is open to the Court to consider his request. If the court thinks that the cause of justice would be served better by granting such permission the Courts would generally grant such permission. Of course, this wider amplitude is limited to Magistrate's Courts, as the right of such private individual to participate in the conduct of prosecution in the Sessions Court is very much restricted and is made subject to the control of the Public Prosecutor. The limited role which a private person can be permitted to play for prosecution in the Sessions Court has been adverted to above. All these would show that an aggrieved private person is not altogether to be eclipsed from the scenario when the criminal court takes cognizance of the offences based on the report submitted by the police. The reality cannot be overlooked that the genesis in almost all such cases is the grievance of one or more individual that they were wronged by the accused by committing offences against them."

Coming to the judicial pronouncement, the decisions relied upon on behalf of respondent no.2, on recognising right of hearing to the first informant in different stages of criminal proceedings are as follows :

(i) Bhagwant Singh's case (supra). (ii) J.K. International's case (supra) (iii) Vinay Poddar V/s. State of Maharashtra & anr. reported in 2009 ALL M.R. (Cri.) page 687.

4. IN Bhagwant Singh's case, the question considered by the Apex Court was whether in a case where the First INformation Report is lodged and after completion of investigation initiated on the basis of the First INformation Report, the police submits a report that no offence appears to have been committed, the Magistrate can accept the report and drop the proceedings without issuing notice to the first informant or to the injured or in case the incident has resulted in death, to the relatives of the deceased. The Apex Court held that if the Magistrate decides that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding further and drops the proceedings or takes a view that though there is sufficient ground for proceeding against some, there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against those mentioned in the First INformation Report, the informant would certainly be prejudiced because the First INformation Report lodged by him would have failed of its purpose, wholly or in part. It opined that if the interest of the first informant in prompt and effective action being taken on the First INformation Report lodged by him is recognised by the provisions contained in Section 154(2), Section 156(2) and Section 173(2)(ii), it must be presumed that he would be equally interested in seeing that the Magistrate takes cognizance of the offence and issues process. Therefore, it held that in a case where the Magistrate to whom a report is forwarded under Section 173(2)(i) decides not to take cognizance of the offence and to drop the proceedings or takes a view that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against some of the persons mentioned in the First INformation Report, the Magistrate must give notice to the informant and provide him an opportunity to be heard at the time of consideration of the report. The Apex Court, however, treated the injured or in case of the incident resulting into death, the relatives of the deceased differently. It held that they were not entitled to any notice from the Magistrate, however, if they chose to remain present before the Court and desired to make submissions, the Magistrate is bound to hear him.

The question in the case of J.K. International (supra) related to hearing of the first informant in the petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution of India praying for quashing of the criminal proceedings pending before the Magistrate's Court pursuant to the chargesheet filed by the police. In the petition, the first informant was not made a party. He had therefore applied for impleading himself to the petition. That application came to be dismissed on the ground that in a case proceeding on a police report, a private party has no locus-standi. For deciding that application, the High Court had placed reliance on the decision of the Apex Court in the case of Thakur Ram V/s. State of Bihar reported in A.I.R. 1966 SC page 911. The Apex Court opined that reliance upon the decision in Thakur Ram's case by the High Court was not correct as the situations in the two cases were different. In Thakur Ram's case, the complainant had sought to challenge the order of the trial Court rejecting prosecution application for amending the charge and committing the case to the Court of Sessions. The Apex Court in that case, had disapproved a private person trying to interject in the case to rechannelise the course of the prosecution when the Public Prosecutor was in management of the prosecution case. The situation in J.K. International's case was found to be different, where the accused had approached the High Court for quashing of the criminal proceedings initiated by the appellant. The Apex Court held that in case of a petition for quashing of criminal proceedings, it would be a negation of justice to the complainant, if he is foreclosed from being heard.

The stage of hearing in the third case i.e. Vinay Poddar (supra) was completely different. The first informant had sought hearing in an application for anticipatory bail. While allowing the application, what had weighed with the Court was that when an application for anticipatory bail is considered, the police may not place all factual details before the Court as the investigation in most of such cases, is at a preliminary stage. Therefore, some role can be played by the complainant by pointing out the factual aspects. The other factor that had weighed with the Court was recognition of right of the first informant by the Apex Court to challenge the order granting bail.
5. THUS, it can be seen that the different stages of criminal proceedings in which participation of the first informant was allowed by judicial pronouncements, in the absence of specific provision in Criminal Procedure Code are (i) dropping of the proceedings by the Magistrate on receiving report under Section 173 Criminal Procedure Code from police, (ii) quashing of the criminal proceedings on the petition made by the accused and (iii) hearing of an application for anticipatory bail. The third stage is an entirely different stage, unconnected to the first two stages where one of the outcome of the application was the criminal complaint initiated by the first informant coming to an end.
6. THE above is the background against which the question arising in the present petition is required to be considered.
Mr. Mahesh Jethmalani, the learned Senior Counsel appearing for the petitioners submits that Sections 238 and 239 of Code of Criminal Procedure are a complete code in themselves in the matter of procedure to be followed for the purpose of discharging the accused or for framing of charge in any warrant case instituted on a police report. He points out that Section 239 makes provision for every aspect of hearing of the application for discharge. It provides for the parties to be heard, documents to be considered, the test to be applied and the order to be passed. He refers to the principle of 'Expressio unis est exclusio alterius" in the matter of statutory construction to submit that express mention of one or more persons of a particular class has to be regarded as by implication exclusion of all others of that class. According to Mr. Jethmalani, since Section 239 enumerates class of persons to be heard i.e. Prosecutor and the accused, by implication, it would exclude any other person from the hearing. Mr. Jethmalani relies upon decision of Kerala High Court in R. Balakrishna Pillai Vs. State of Kerala, reported in 1995 Criminal Law Journal, 1244 in the connection. In the proceeding before the Kerala High Court, a third party i.e. the Leader of Opposition in Kerala Legislative Assembly had filed an objection to the discharge application filed by the accused. The Kerala High Court held that Sections ' 238 and 239 being a complete code in the matter of procedure to be followed for the purpose of discharging the accused, a third party cannot have any say in the matter". In my opinion, the facts of the present case are different from the facts before the Kerala High Court. The person making an application before the Kerala High Court for hearing was an altogether a third person, whereas the applicant herein is the first informant. He cannot be said to be a third person. As regards Section 239 of Cr.P.C. being a complete code by itself for the procedure to be followed for the purpose of discharging the accused, that by itself need not deter the court in considering the question in view of the expanded scope given to the first informant in the matter if hearing to him.
Mr. Jethmalani next emphasises the role of a public prosecutor. By referring to Sections 24 and 25 Cr.P.C., he submits that prosecutions in the Court of Magistrates and the Court of Sessions are conducted by the Assistant Public Prosecutor and Public Prosecutor/Additional Public Prosecutor respectively appointed by the State Government. An advocate privately engaged is not permitted to conduct prosecution. He submits that there is a sound reason for the criminal prosecutions to be conducted by public prosecutors appointed by the State Government. The State is the custodian of social interest of the community at large. Therefore though all the offences relate to public as well as the individual, in all the prosecutions, the State is the Prosecutor and the Public Prosecutor appointed by the State acts only in the interest of administration of justice. He is not a protagonist of any party. He stands for justice. Mr. Jethmalani draws support for his submission from following observations of Sind High Court in the case of Ahmed Mahomed Ismail vs. Emperor, reported in A.I.R. 1940 Sind 220. an advocate privately engaged ' to represent the complainant should have no other place than that of one strictly subordinate to the officer who prosecutes on behalf of the Crown, for, as I have already said, the Crown stands not necessarily for a conviction but for justice. It also does not stand for the acquittal of one accused represented by a particular advocate at the cost of others and at the cost of justice"

7. MR. Jethmalani submits that because the function of a Public Prosecutor relates to a public purpose, he is in-charge of the prosecution all the time. For the very reason, the private counsel engaged by the first informant is given the limited role of assisting the Public Prosecutor under Section 301 and 302 Cr.P.C. MR. Jethmalani relies upon decision of a Single Judge of this Court in Anthony D'Souza vs. MRs. Radhabai Brij Ratan Mohatta and Others, reported in 1984(1) Bombay C.R. page 157, wherein Sections 301 and 302 of Cr.P.C. were interpreted. The decision holds that the first subsection of 301 gives absolute power to the Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor to appear and plead without written authority before any court in any inquiry trial or appeal Sub-Section (2) provides that if in such a case any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute any person, the pleader so instructed shall act under the directions of the Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor-in-charge of the case. This would mean that the Public Prosecutor or Assistant Public Prosecutor as the case may be, is the sole master of the prosecution and conduct of the prosecution is solely governed by his decision as to the policy to be adopted during the course of the trial and another pleader instructed has to act under the directions of the Public Prosecutor. No permission of the court is required for a private person to instruct a Pleader under Subsection (2). Permission is required for submitting written arguments after the evidence is closed in the case. As regards Section 302(1), the court observed the power is undoubtedly vested 'in the court to authorise conduct of prosecution by a private person. This power cannot be used by the court except on special grounds. It must not be the intention of the legislature that any other pleader or advocate be permitted to conduct the prosecution before a trying Magistrate". (emphasis supplied).

Mr. Amit Desai, the learned Senior Counsel appearing for respondent No. 2 seeks to distinguish Anthony D'Souza's case with the submission that it deals with a different stage of criminal proceedings and that the decision is of a period prior to Bhagwant's case. The submissions of Mr. Desai are self destructive. The fact that the decision is of a period prior to Bhagwant's case becomes irrelevant because the two cases deal with different situations. The stage in Bhagwant's case is a preliminary stage of consideration of Police report filed under Section 173(2) Cr.P.C. for which, there is no statutory provision for hearing to the first informant. The stage in Anthony D'Souza's case is of recording of evidence in the criminal trial for which there are specific provisions of Sections 301 and 302 Cr.P.C. Therefore merely because the first informant is recognised at the preliminary stage of hearing, the decision cited does not lose it's significance.

8. MR. Desai submits that the impugned order should be sustained since it is in keeping with the evolvement of law in giving increased participation to the first informant in the matter of prosecution. Undoubtedly the first informant now enjoys a role higher than earlier as already seen in the preceding paragraphs. In fact perusal of the petition shows that the petitioners also not wish to deny participation of the first informant altogether. They only want his role to be limited as under Section 301 Cr.P.C. An application for discharge can result into putting an end to the prosecution either partly or fully. This stage is in that respect similar to the stage of consideration of the police report by the Magistrate under Section 173(2) Cr.P.C and the proceedings for quashing of the complaint filed by the accused person. The first informant, therefore, is likely to be interested in seeing that the matter reaches the stage of trial and is disposed off after recording of evidence. If by judicial pronouncements, he is now granted hearing at the earlier two stages, he can be granted hearing at the stage of discharge also, though the Criminal Procedure Code does not make provision for hearing to him at that stage. If the first informant appears before the Court and desires to participate in the application, opportunity cannot be refused to him. Now the next question would be about the nature of the hearing to be given to the first informant. Should the hearing be independent to the hearing to the Public Prosecutor or it be through the Public Prosecutor. In my opinion, his role will have to be limited as under Section 301 Cr.P.C. for the same reasons, as given in Anthony D'Souza's case and keeping in focus the role of the Public Prosecutor. He, cannot be allowed to take over the control of prosecution by allowing to address the court directly. In this connection, the decisions in Bhagwant Singh's case and J.K. International's case will have no bearing since the situations considered in the two proceedings were different. In one case, it was a very preliminary stage and in the other, it was invocation of inherent powers of the High Court. Therefore, the petition is partly allowed. The impugned order is modified to the extent that the Counsel engaged by respondent no. 2 shall act under the directions of the Assistant Public Prosecutor in-charge of the case.

Public Prosecutor for respondents No.2 and 3.

ORAL JUDGMENT : (Per A.P. LAVANDE, J.)

Heard Ms. Mathkar for the applicant, Mr. Pangam for respondent No.1 and Mr. Nadkarni, learned Advocate Generalappearing on behalf of respondents No.2 and 3.

2. Rule. By consent heard forthwith.

3. By this application, the applicant seeks cancellation of bail granted to respondent No.1 by the Sessions Judge, North Goa, Panaji by order dated 23rd August, 2012. The applicant has also sought further relief to the extent of holding an inquiry against the learned Sessions Judge for not disposing of the matter expeditiously.

4. Since the issue regarding delay in disposal of the anticipatory bail was raised in the application, we deemed it appropriate to take up the matter although the application seeking only cancellation of bail or anticipatory bail would lie before learned Single Judge in terms of the Bombay High Court, Appellate Side Rules.Moreover, learned Single Judge before whom the matter was placed,ordered that the same be placed before Division Bench. Even Mr.Pangam, learned Counsel appearing for respondent No.1 stated that he has no objection if we take up the matter and lay down some guidelines regarding disposal of the anticipatory bail applications filed before the Sessions Courts.

5. Briefly, the facts leading to the filing of the present application are as under :An FIR No.113/2009 dated 24.7.2009 was registered at Pernem Police Station at the instance of Assistant Director of Education under Section 406 r/w. Section 334 of Indian Penal Code. In the said report, respondent No.1 and other members of the erstwhile School Managing Committee of Durga English School were shown as accused. The allegation was that an amount of Rs.18.00 lakhs sanctioned by the Directorate of Education for the purpose of upkeep and maintenance of the school was misappropriated and in the said misappropriation, the said accused were involved. The applicant herein filed Criminal Writ Petition No.41/2012, inter alia, making a grievance that investigation was not being carried out properly by the investigating agency. In the course of hearing, we noticed that the investigation was not being carried out properly as it ought to have been carried out and issued directions to file affidavit by the Inspector General of Police and accordingly, affidavits were filed. Ultimately, by Judgment dated 5th September, 2012, the writ petition was disposed of, and the statement made by the learned Public Prosecutor that the investigation would be completed within a period of 3 months was accepted.

6. Respondent No.1 herein filed an application seeking anticipatory bail before the learned Sessions Judge on 29th March, 2012.

7. Since a grievance has been made that there has been an inordinate delay in disposal of the bail application, we deem it appropriate to refer in some detail to various dates to which the said application was adjourned.

8. On 29.3.2012, respondent No.1 filed anticipatory bail application in respect of FIR No.113/09. On the same day, notice was issued to the respondent returnable on 31st March, 2012, on which date, respondent/State sought time and on 3.4.2012 reply was filed on behalf of the respondent and arguments were also heard. Thereafter, the matter was fixed on 7.4.2012 for order. However, the order could not be passed and the matter was adjourned to 18.4.2012. At that stage, an intervention application came to be filed by the present applicant, of which reply was sought on 21.4.2012. Reply was accordingly filed. Ultimately, the application came to be allowed by order dated 11.5.2012. It appears that the learned Sessions Judge was transferred to the South Goa, Margao from June, 2012.

9. The bail application was placed before the new incumbent on 27.6.2012, on which date, the learned Sessions Judge was on leave and, as such, it was adjourned to 12.7.2012, on which day, the matter was adjourned for reargurments. On 20.7.2012, arguments were heard and the matter was fixed on 24.7.2012 for order by directing the intervenor to file written arguments, if any. Thereafter, the matter was adjourned from time to time for order, and ultimately, by the impugned order dated 23rd August, 2012, the learned Sessions Judge allowed the application on certain terms and conditions.

10. Ms. Mathkar, learned Counsel appearing for the applicant who is intervenor in the said application, submitted that having regard to the nature of the offence alleged against respondent No.1 and other accused, the learned Sessions Judge ought not to have granted the relief under Section 438 of Cr.P.C. to respondent No.1. According to the learned Counsel, the offence was of grave nature and in the facts and circumstances of the case, learned Sessions Judge was not justified in granting the relief under Section 438 of Cr.P.C. to respondent No.1.According to the learned Counsel, respondent No.1 was the main accused who was involved in the misappropriation of huge amount belonging to the State and, as such, respondent No.1 should not have been released on anticipatory bail. According to the learned Counsel, the investigation was at the preliminary stage and considering that the misappropriation was of public funds, the impugned order is clearly not justified. Ms. Mathkar placed reliance upon unreported order dated12.3.2012 passed by the learned Single Judge at Aurangabad in Mohd. Rafioddin Rehan Siddiqui v/s. The State of Maharashtra and others (Criminal Application No. 578/2012 with connected matters.) Learned Counsel further submitted that there is inordinate delay in disposal of the anticipatory bail application.

11. On the other hand, learned Counsel Mr. Pangam, appearing for respondent No.1 submitted that absolutely no case was made out by the applicant for cancellation of the anticipatory bail granted to respondent No.1 inasmuch as the impugned order cannot be said to be patently illegal or perverse and there are no supervening circumstances, warranting cancellation of the anticipatory bail. According to the learned Counsel, there are irrelevant pleadings, both in the main application, as well as in the rejoinder. In any case, according to Mr. Pangam, the applicant has not even urged the grounds on which custodial interrogation of respondent No.1 is warranted. Mr. Pangam further pointed out that even the State has not challenged the said order by filing appropriate proceedings before this Court. According to Mr. Pangam, considering the nature of the offence alleged and the punishment prescribed under the Indian Penal Code, no fault can be found with the learned Judge in passing the impugned order. Mr. Pangam pointed out that the maximum punishment provided for the offence punishable under Section 406 of IPC is 3 years imprisonment and hence, the said offence cannot be said to be serious offence, warranting custodial interrogation of respondent No.1 and that too after a period of three years from the date of registration of the FIR. Mr. Pangam pointed out that the FIR was registered on 24.7.2009, whereas the impugned order was passed on 23.8.2012. Lastly, Mr. Pangam submitted that absolutely no interference is warranted with the impugned order. Mr. Pangam submitted that at times the disposal of anticipatory bail applications are delayed by prolix and/or irrelevant submissions made by the first informant/ complainant. Mr. Pangam placed reliance upon the following judgments:-

(1)Hazari Lal Das vs. State of West Bengal and another, 2009 (10)
SCC 652; and

(2) Sanjay Chandra vs. Central Bureau of Investigation, (2012) 1
SCC 40.

12. Mr. Nadkarni, learned Advocate General appearing on behalf of respondents No.2 and 3 fairly submitted that having regard to the materials available before the learned Sessions

Judge, no fault can be found with the impugned order. Mr. Nadkarni invited our attention to the Order dated 5.9.2012 passed by the Division Bench of this Court in Criminal Writ Petition No.41/2012, in which this Court clearly took note of the negligent and lackadaisical manner in which the investigation was carried out till notices were issued by this Court in the said Writ Petition. However, Mr. Nadkarni submitted that the State reserves its right to file proceedings for cancellation of the anticipatory bail granted, if situation demands. Learned Advocate General submitted that the parameters to be considered by the Court while considering an application for anticipatory bail have been clearly laid down by the Apex Court in the case of Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre vs. State of Maharashtra and ors. (2011) 1 SCC 694.

13. We have carefully considered the submissions made by the learned Counsel for the parties and the learned Advocate General, as also the judgments relied upon. We have also perused the original record in the anticipatory bail application No.115/2012.

14. Coming to the merits of the application filed by the applicant seeking cancellation of anticipatory bail, it is pertinent to note that the FIR was registered on 24/7/2009 and practically for a period of almost two and half years hardly any investigation was carried out by the investigating officers, who were incharge of Pernem Police Station. Moreover, from a perusal of the judgment dated 5/9/2012, in Criminal Writ Petition No.41/2012, it is evident that the investigation carried out in Crime No.113/2009 was lethargic and lackadaisical and in this factual background, we accepted the statement made by the learned Public Prosecutor that the investigation would be carried out in right earnest and would be completed within a period of three months which period, of course, has been extended by a further period of three months pursuant to the order passed by this Court. Thus, it is evident that for a period of almost two and half years, hardly any investigation was carried out in Crime No.113/2009 and no arrest was effected by the investigating agency of any of the accused, including respondent No.1 who were very much available for interrogation and for effecting arrest, if warranted. In addition, as rightly pointed out by Mr. Pangam, for the offence alleged against the accused under Section 406, read with Section 34 IPC, the maximum punishment is three years imprisonment.

15. A perusal of the impugned order dated 23.8.2012 which is assailed by the applicant, discloses that the learned Sessions Judge has taken into consideration the legal position emanating from several judgments of the Apex Court, including the judgment in the case of Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre (supra). The learned Sessions Judge has further observed that though the offence was registered in July, 2009, there was no allegation that respondent No.1 had not cooperated with the investigating agency. Moreover, in the intervening period, respondent No.1 had reported to the police station and his statement was recorded. Learned Sessions Judge, therefore, held that it was not a fit case for custodial interrogation. The learned Sessions Judge also held that there was no possibility of respondent No.1 absconding or thwarting the course of justice. What transpires from the findings recorded by the learned Sessions Judge is that the findings were based on material placed before the learned Sessions Judge and, therefore, the impugned order granting anticipatory bail to respondent No.1 cannot be faulted and in any case, cannot be termed as perverse, warranting interference by this Court.

16. It is well settled by a catena of decisions of the Apex Court that bail or anticipatory bail granted to the accused can be interfered in two circumstances. Firstly such bail can be cancelled on account of supervening circumstances like tampering with evidence, noncooperation with the investigating agency, breach of conditions, etc., and in such a case, it is necessary to approach the same Court for cancellation of bail/anticipatory bail granted by that Court. However, if the order granting bail/anticipatory bail passed by the Sessions Judge is patently illegal or perverse, the only option available to the investigating agency or the person having locus to challenge the said order is to approach this Court under Section 439(2) and seek cancellation of such bail; (See Puran vs. Rambilas and another, (2001) 6 SCC 338). Considering the material available before the learned Sessions Judge at the time of passing of the impugned order, we are of the considered opinion that no fault can be found with the impugned order, granting anticipatory bail to respondent No.1. We do not deem it necessary to refer to the various judgments relied upon on behalf of the applicant, as well as respondent No.1, having regard to the findings given hereinabove. Moreover, the parameters to be considered by the Court while considering the anticipatory bail by now are well settled in view of the judgment of the Apex Court in the case of Siddharam Satlingappa Mhetre (supra).

17. In the case of Joginder Kumar vs. State of U.P. and others, (1994) 4 SCC 260, a Three Judge Bench of the Supreme Court, after considering the guidelines laid down by the Third Report of the National Police Commission, held that no arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing and the justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self-esteem of a person. No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person and it would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief, both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. The maximum sentence prescribed for the offence punishable under Section 406, I.P.C. is three years imprisonment. Having regard to the principles laid down in the case of Joginder Kumar (supra), we are of the considered opinion that the findings of the learned Sessions Judge cannot be faulted.

18. Coming to the aspect of delay in disposal of the anticipatory bail application by the learned Sessions Judge, what transpires from the record is that the application was filed on 29.3.2012 and the same was disposed of on 23.8.2012 i.e. almost after five months. The record also discloses that the application was fixed for passing orders before the learned Sessions Judge and before any order could be passed, an application for intervention was filed by the present applicant and, thereafter, the matter was adjourned on several occasions for one reason or the other, including transfer of the incumbent to South Goa, as the Principal District and Sessions Judge. We find merit in the submission made by the learned Counsel for the applicant that the applications for anticipatory bails have to be decided expeditiously. When an application for anticipatory bail is filed, the learned Judge dealing with the same, while passing order, has to balance the right of the applicant of his liberty and the right of the investigating agency to carry out proper investigation, having regard to the nature of the offence/s alleged against the accused. Needless to mention that an application for anticipatory bail deals with liberty of an accused ordinarily at the stage of investigation and, therefore, it is expected of the investigating agency to render all assistance to the Sessions Judge dealing with the application for its early disposal. At times, in applications for anticipatory bail replies are not filed for quite some time, thereby jeopardizing the interest of the applicant, more particularly when interim order is not passed in favour of the applicant. In the present case also it is to be noted that no interim protection was granted to respondent No.1 and an order came to be passed almost after a period of five months. We are conscious of the fact that at times, several bail/anticipatory bail applications are on the daily board of learned Sessions/Additional Sessions Judge and it may not be possible for the learned Judge to dispose of all such applications on the same day. But, it is surely expected of the Sessions/Addl. Sessions Judges to deal with such applications on priority basis and dispose of the same, expeditiously. However, it is not possible to fix outer time limit for disposal of anticipatory bail applications, since it would depend upon the number of matters which come up before the learned Judge on a particular day and the facts and circumstances of each case.

19. Be that as it may, the Sessions Judge dealing with such applications has to make endeavour to dispose of the applications at the earliest. As stated above, the investigating agency to whom the notice is given by the Sessions Judge is expected to be ready with reply at the earliest point of time and to cooperate with the Sessions Judge for early disposal of the application inasmuch as pendency of such applications for considerable length of time seriously prejudices the investigating agency in case interim order is granted and prejudices the applicant in case no interim protection is granted. Therefore, the investigating agency and the concerned Public Prosecutor appearing in the matter are expected to ensure that reply to anticipatory bail application is filed within a shortest possible time, so as to enable early disposal of such application.

20. Coming to the aspect of intervention in an application seeking anticipatory bail filed by the accused, learned Single Judge of this Court in the case of Vinay Poddar vs. State of Maharashtra and anr., 2009 ALL MR (Cri.) 687 after considering several judgments of the Apex Court, as well as of the High Courts, in paragraph 13 observed that when an application for anticipatory bail is considered, the police may not place all factual details before the Court as the investigation in most of such cases is at a preliminary stage and, therefore, some role can be played by the complainant by pointing out factual aspects. The learned Single Judge further held that the complainant or the first informant can appear before the Court and claim right of hearing in the said anticipatory bail application. But the said right cannot be allowed to be exercised in a manner which would delay the disposal of an application for anticipatory bail and the delay in disposal of such application may adversely affect the investigation. The learned Single Judge further held that the complainant/first informant has a right to make oral submissions pointing out factual aspects of the case during the course of hearing of such application and such a right can be exercised either by himself or through his Counsel. Learned Single Judge further held that though the complainant or the first informant has such a right, but it is not necessary for the learned Judge to issue notice either to the complainant or the first informant.

21. In the course of hearing, Mr. Pangam submitted that at times the disposal of anticipatory bail applications are delayed on account of prolix and/or irrelevant lengthy submissions made by the first informant/complainant appearing in person who is not well versed with the legal provisions, which also ultimately delay disposal of such applications. In our view, although the complainant/first informant is entitled to be heard in an anticipatory bail application filed by the accused his rights are not unfettered and cannot be construed as giving him liberty to make submissions for any length of time. In our view, the interest of justice would be served if the complainant/first informant is called upon to file his say, in writing containing facts and legal submissions pointing out as to why the anticipatory bail should not be granted to the accused. If such a course is adopted, the same would save valuable time of the Court. No doubt, the complainant/first informant is entitled to make oral submissions, but in the event the complainant/first informant files his say pointing out the material available with him against the accused/the applicant seeking relief, the Sessions Judge would be in a position to restrict the oral hearing to be given to the applicant/intervenor, having regard to the material placed by the investigating agency against the accused. Moreover, the accused would also be in a position to meet the case set up by the complainant/first informant. Therefore, although we are in respectful agreement with the view taken by the learned Single Judge in the case of Vinay Poddar (supra), that the complainant/first informant is entitled to be heard in an application for anticipatory bail filed by the accused, the same has to be understood in the light of the observations made above, so that the disposal of the anticipatory bail application is not delayed, thereby causing no prejudice either to the applicant or to the investigating agency.

22. With the above observations, the present application stands disposed of. Prayer clauses (i) and (ii) stand rejected. The application stands accordingly disposed of.

23. Considering the importance of the issue involved in the matter, we deem it appropriate to direct the Registrar (Judicial) to circulate copies of this order to the Principal District and Sessions Judges, both North and South Goa Districts who shall, in turn, circulate the same to the Additional Sessions Judges, functioning within their jurisdiction.

24. The original record in Bail Application No. 115/2012 be sent expeditiously to the learned Sessions Court, North Goa, Panaji.

Contempt of Courts Act (32 of 1952), S.1 - CONTEMPT OF COURT - Threatening by a party to prosecute plaintiff's Advocate in course of argument before Judge- The threat was intended to operate upon the mind of the Advocate so that he should flinch from performing his duties towards his client amounts to contempt of Court - Not words but conduct is essence of matter- Disrespect or disregard to an advocate in certain circumstances so as to deter him from discharging his duties would amount to contempt of Court. Conduct which is intended or calculated to bring pressure upon a party and his advocate, not to pursue the matter according to his choice, amounts to interference with the administration of justice even though such threat is not direct, in the sense that the contemner specifically asserted that he would take such action- In Nandlal Bhalla v. Kishori Lal, 48 Cri LJ 757 (Lah) the Inspector of Police issued threats and used insulting language towards an advocate. It was held that the Advocate was threatened in the performance of his duties, and although there was no contempt of the Court directly, there was contempt inasmuch as an officer of the Court such as an advocate appearing for the party- In (1824) 1 Hog 134 an insult was given to a counsel while he was attending in the Master's office, which was situated within the precincts of the Court. It was held that "Advocates who appear for the parties being officers of Court, any abuse or insult or aspersions cast on them, which would interfere with the course of administration of justice, must necessarily be held to amount in contempt of Court."

Contempt of Court may be said to be constituted by any conduct that lends to bring the authority and administration of law into disrespect of disregard, or to interfere with or prejudice parties litigant or their witnesses during the litigation If the context showed that the action contemplated was the action of the contemner himself, it is sufficient.

In order to amount to a threat, the language used need not necessarily be aimed at causing bodily injury or hurt. If it is calculated to injure the reputation so as to restrain the freedom of action of that person, it is sufficient. The essence of the matter is the course of conduct adopted by the contemner and not that the words amounted to a threat. It is enough if the conduct on the whole has tendency to interfere with the course of administration of justice or to subvert the court of justice. The nexus between the threat and the demand for doing something or refraining from doing something need not be express or need not lie expressly staled. It is enough it from the context the link between the two is apparent. The subsequent conduct of the contemner in so far as it relates to the carrying out of the threat would, also be relevant.

V. K. Punwani, for Plaintiff; S. Vaney, Defendant, in Person; V. S. Deshpande, Asst. Govt. Pleader, for the State.

Judgement

NAIK, J. : This proceeding for contempt of Court has been initiated by the High Court on the report submitted by Mr. Vimadalal, Judge, City Civil Court, Bombay, (as be then was) in respect of an incident which took place in his Court on 4th March 1963. The facts leading up to the incident on 4th March 1963 may be briefly outlined as follows : The Plaintiff, Mrs. Damayanti G. Chandiramani, filed a suit against the defendant, S. Vaney, for recovery of possession and arrears of compensation on the basis that the defendant was a licensee and that the licence was revoked. That suit was filed on 26th October 1962. After the service of the summons, the defendant attended the office of Advocate Punwani, who appeared on behalf of the Plaintiff in the suit, for inspection of the documents. This was on 10th November 1962. On 10th January 1963 the defendant started prosecution under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act against the plaintiff, her parents and Advocate Punwani on the basis that the Plaintiff had withheld essential services in respect of the flat which he had taken from the Plaintiff. The Presidency Magistrate, before whom the prosecution was launched, issued process only against the plaintiff and not against the rest. The plaintiff then loot out a Notice of Motion in the suit for possession asking for temporary injunction restraining the defendant from proceeding with the prosecution launched by him under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act. The mother of the plaintiff, who held the power of attorney for the plaintiff, put in an affidavit in support of the Notice of Motion. The Notice came up for hearing on 4th March 1963, and it is in the course of the arguments on the Notice of Motion that the incident, from which this proceeding has arisen, took place. Before dealing with the happenings of 4th March 1963 in the Court of Judge Vimadalal, it is necessary to set out a few more facts.

2. On 10th January 1963 the defendant launched a prosecution against Advocate Punwani for defamation. This complaint arose in the following circumstances. The defendant had started a criminal case (No. 588/S of 1962) on 23rd October 1902 against the members of the managing committee of Bela Housing Society for defamation. It may be mentioned that the flat in respect of which the plaintiff had asked for possession in the suit in the City Civil Court was a part of the building known as Bela Court, which belonged to Bela Co-operative Housing Society. In Criminal Case No. 588/8 of 1962 Advocate Punwani appeared for the accused, i.e., the members of the managing committee. Mr. Punwani argued that the defendant, who complained of a libel against himself, had no reputation to defend, it was the case for the Defendant that the statements made by Mr. Punwani in the course of the argument amounted to defamation and that is why he started prosecution against Advocate Punwani on 10th January 1963 under Section 500 Indian Penal Code. On 20th February 1963 the defendant started a criminal case against the plaintiff's lather, her mother, members of the managing committee and Advocate Punwani for intimidation and insult and abetment of the said offence. It may he mentioned at this stage that Advocate Punwani happens to be the legal adviser of the Bela Co-operative Housing Society. The defendant had refused to become a member of the said Housing Society. Because of his refusal to become a member of the said Society, the managing committee passed a resolution that the use of the lift should be refused to the occupants who were not members of the Housing Society. A notice was put up in that regard. The defendant alleged that the two lift-men and Advocate Punwani actually prevented him from using the lift and in that way insulted him. It is on that basis that he lodged the complaint on 26th February 1963 for insult and intimidation. It would thus be seen that the two cases launched by the defendant against Advocate Punwani were pending on the day, when the Notice of Motion came up for hearing before Judge Vimadalal on 4th March 1963. It appears that the criminal case launched by the defendant on 26th February 1963 was dismissed on 13th March 1963 without issuing process against any of the accused.

3. Let us now turn to the happenings of 4th March 1963. Advocate Punwani, in the course of his arguments, referred to the contents of paragraph (6) of the affidavit put in by the Plaintiff's attorney in support of the Notice of Motion. Paragraph (6) of the affidavit runs thus :

"I say that the defendant seems to be a notorious litigant. He has been convicted four limes for offences under the Indian Penal Code, the last of which was for assaulting a lady (Case No. 135/P of 1951) for which he was sentenced lo rigorous imprisonment for three months, as recorded in the judgment, dated 3rd October 1952 of the 8th Court, Esplanade, Bombay. He has filed many cases against the owners of the Guest Houses or Hotels, where he used to reside before shifting lo the suit premises . ..."

The apparent object of Advocate Punwani in referring to the contents of paragraph (6) of the said affidavit was to show that the defendant was in the habit of launching upon vexatious cases and complaints and the complaint lodged by him under S. 24 of the Rent Control Act against the plaintiff stood in the same category. It may be recalled that by the Notice, of Motion, the plaintiff had asked for a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from proceeding with the criminal complaint lodged by him under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act. The learned City Civil Court Judge asked the defendant as to whether he had to say anything with regard to the allegations contained in paragraph (6) of the affidavit. The defendant stated that he would see to it that the plaintiff's advocate, Mr. Punwani would go to jail, that two criminal cases had already been filed by the defendant himself against the plaintiff's advocate the said Mr. Punwani and that he would file two more criminal cases against him shortly. It appears that Judge Vimadalal made a note of these statements on the docket sheet and asked the defendant to explain as to why he should not be proceeded with for contempt of Court. The defendant did not offer any explanation and on the 12th March 1968, Judge Vimadalal submitted a report to the High Court requesting that action for contempt of Court should be taken against the defendant. On the same day, he disposed of the Notice of Motion and made the rule, which was already granted restraining the defendant from proceeding with criminal case under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act, absolute.

4. It is also necessary to refer to certain events, which took place after 4th March 1963, because one of the contentions raised by Mr. Punwani in the course of these proceedings was that, the threat given by the defendant was not just a piece of bravado, but he actually carried that threat into action. We will consider the question as to whether and how far these happenings are relevant for deciding the present case, at a later stage of this judgment, for the time being, we will proceed to narrate the events as have taken place after 4th March 1963. On 6th March 1963 the defendant stinted prosecution against the plaintiffs father, members of the managing committee, two lift-men and Advocate

Punwani for insult and intimidation in respect of an incident which took place on 5lh March 1963, in which, according to the defendant, he was refused the use of the lift. On 7th March 1963 the criminal case No. 588/S of 1962, to which a reference has already been made, was taken up for hearing. Advocate Punwani was appearing on behalf of the accused in that case. The defendant made an application requesting that Advocate Punwani should be made a co-accused on the ground that he had instigated the managing committee to pass the resolution refusing the services of the lift to the defendant. Notice was issued to Advocate Punwani and on his showing cause, Mr. Punwani was discharged on 26th June 1963. The defendant went in appeal from the order in the Notice of Motion passed on 12th March 1963. He obtained an interim stay order on 30th March 1963. On 3rd April 1963 he launched a second prosecution under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act against the plaintiff, her parents, members of the managing committee, the two lift-men and Advocate Punwani. The plaintiff appeared in the appeal before the High Court and eventually, the stay was vacated. The High Court passed an order restraining the defendant from starting fresh proceedings under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act pending the hearing of the appeal. The High Court, however, refused to pass any stay order in respect of the prosecution already launched by the defendant on 3rd April 1963 and suggested that the plaintiff may approach the Magistrate for such relief. On 9th May 1963 the defendant started another prosecution for defamation against the plaintiff's mother and Advocate Punwani in regard lo the contents of paragraph (6) of the affidavit put in by the plaintiff's mother in support of the Notice of Motion.

5. The defendant has appeared in answer to the notice and put in his affidavit showing cause as to why he should not be punished for contempt of Court. He has given his own version as to what transpired on 4th March 1963 and denied some of the statements attributed to him by Judge Vimadalal in his report. The defendant has complained that Judge Vimadalal did not allow him to read his affidavit. At paragraph (8) of the affidavit, the defendant has set out a lengthy conversation which according to him, took place between him and Judge Vimadalal. He has suggested that it was only after the Judge asked him as to what was his occupation that he told him that he was engaged in writing a book about the administration of justice and when the Judge further asked him as to what he was doing prior to his engagement of writing the book, the defendant told the Judge that he could have become a Judge if he wanted to. When further asked as to what Government posts were offered to him, the defendant told the Judge that he was offered a nomination to the Indian Civil Service and if he had accepted the same, he would have started as an Assistant Judge and in that case, he would have become senior to the present Chief Justice of Bombay in the Civil Service Cadre. At paragraph (11), he has explained as to how Advocate Punwani has gone on making defamatory statements about him wherever he appeared against the defendant. According to him, Mr. Punwani made some defamatory statements on 10th December, 1962 at the hearing of the Notice of Motion before Judge Walavalkar; that again he made the same statements before the Court of the Sixteenth Presidency Magistrate on 10th January 1963 and that he repeated the same statements on 4th March 1963. He has admitted that he filed a criminal case for defamation against Advocate Punwani (No. 101/S of 1963), which is pending in the 28th Presidents Magistrate's Court in regard to the defamatory statements made by Mr. Punwani on 10th January 1963 in the Court of the 16th Presidency Magistrate. He has then referred to the incident, which took place in the Court of Judge Vimadalal and according to the defendant, this is what has happened :

"In this court the learned Judge Vimadalal himself asked me, if I had anything to say regarding the allegations made against me. I replied, 'Yes, a good deal, Sir. Then the learned Judge asked, 'Have you suffered imprisonment for three months ?' I replied, 'These are false allegations. I have never suffered any sentence of imprisonment at any time. But, apart from that your Honour would appreciate that even if it were true that I had spent a number of years in prison, there is no occasion or justification for the plaintiff's Advocate to make that fact known here as it has no bearing on the issues before the Court. I respectfully submit that the purpose of this Advocate in making these statements is to defame me and create an atmosphere of prejudice and provoke me to make a brawl in Court or indulge in violence and, therefore, he is guilty of contempt of Court, and I request that the Court will be pleased to take action against him .....'. I thereupon continued, '.. .. .. If the certificate granted to the Society is cancelled, this advocate stands to lose his job. He, therefore, bears me great malice und everywhere he goes, he makes defamatory statements about me. Already I have filed a complaint of defamation against him which is case No. 101/S of 1963 in the 28th Presidency Magistrate's Court. Also he is an accused in another criminal case in his capacity of an employee of the said Housing Society. And in a day or two, I intend to file two more criminal cases in which this Advocate will he one of the accused for his 'wrong doing'. I have also made an application to the Bar Council for suspending him on account of his professional misconduct in five counts, one being that he has been an employee of the Housing Society for more than two years, and the President of the Bar Council informed me that my application would be kept pending and action will be taken when the Chapter V of the Advocates Act comes into force. I am hoping that there would be a conviction in each of the four cases in which he will appear as an accused, and that there will be a jail sentence.' "

The defendant has denied that he gave any threat or intimidated the advocate. He hits also denied that he uttered the words 'I would sec to it that the plaintiffs advocate would go to jail". He has argued that he has no power of sending anybody to jail and therefore, it is unlikely that he would utter any such words towards the advocate. In short, his contention is that he warned the advocate of the consequences of his own 'wrong doing' and what he contemplated was to take action against the advocate to vindicate his own legal rights.

6. It is also necessary to refer to certain stages through which the contempt proceedings have gone on in this Court. The proceedings came up for hearing before a Division Bench comprising Patel and Kantawala, JJ. on 7th August 1963. It appears that the defendant was then represented by Mr. K.L. Gauba, a senior advocate of this Court. After some brief discussion, the Division Bench adjourned the case and gave a direction to the City Civil Court Judge to expedite the suit filed by the plaintiff against the defendant. It appears that thereafter the suit was heard and disposed of in March 1964. On 15th April 1964 this case came up for hearing before another Division Bench comprising the Chief Justice and Gokhale, J. It was adjourned and then it was placed before the Division Bench comprising Kotwal and Palekar, JJ. This was on 25th June 1964. At that time, the defendant put in a written affidavit stating that Patel, J. had expressed the view that the statements attributed to the defendant, even if true, would not amount to contempt. The Division Bench felt that in view of the various allegations contained in the affidavit put in by the defendant against Judge Vimadalal, it would be more appropriate if a report was called for from Judge Vimadalal. Accordingly, a report was called for from Judge Vimadalal, who submitted the report on 26th August 1964. In May 1964 the defendant launched another prosecution against the plaintiff, her parents, Advocate Punwani and certain lift-men.

7. In the affidavit put in by the defendant, in order to show that the case was part-heard and that certain views were expressed by the Division Bench comprising Patel and Kantawala, JJ., the defendant has formulated four propositions as follows :-

"(a) Whether the report against me which is made by a senior Judge of the Bombay City Civil Court bears a semblance of correctness ?
(b) Whether the alleged vague statements amount to contempt ?
(c) Whether if the statements amount to contempt, they fall within the mischief of S. 228, Indian Penal Code and the jurisdiction of this Court is excluded by Section 3(2) of the Contempt of Courts Act ?
(d) Whether Section 3(1) of the Contempt of Courts Act offends Article 14 of the Constitution and is invalid."
The defendant, who has himself argued his case in detail has developed his arguments on the basis of the tour propositions formulated by him in his affidavit, dated 22nd June 1964.
8. The defendant has strenuously contended that the version set out by Judge Vimadalal as to what transpired on 4th March 1963 is not correct. He has argued that there is intrinsic evidence in the report to show that some of the statements attributed to him could not possibly be true. In that connection, be pointed out that he is a man of good education; that he knows English very well and that he has also considerable experience about the working of Courts. In these circumstances, it is unimaginable that he would make a statement to the effect that he would see to it that Advocate Punwani would go to jail. He has pointed out that he has no powers in send even a thief of a murderer to jail and all that he can do is to make a report in regard to the offence of theft or murder. That being the case, it is unlikely that he would utter the said words as regard Advocate Punwani. It is necessary to note that Judge Vimadalal has made the following note on the docket sheet presumably on the day of the argument on 4th March 1963;
"The defendant states that the advocate would go to jail. Two cases already filed and two more proceedings".
The defendant has argued that assuming that the learned Judge made the said note at the time of the argument in his Court, even so, the note does not say that he (defendant) uttered the words 'He would see to it that advocate Punwani would go to jail'. There is undoubtedly slight difference in the wording of the report on this point and the wording in the note made on the docket sheet. But the distinction is without difference and no importance can be attached to the small hairsplitting distinction, which the defendant has ingeniously pointed out to us. The version that the defendant has set out in great detail at paragraph (11) of his affidavit is not also materially different from the one which the learned Judge has set out in his report. The defendant has admitted in the affidavit at paragraph (11) that he has lodged a complaint for defamation against Advocate Punwani and has gone a step further and stated that Advocate Punwani bears malice towards him. This complaint of defamation relates to the statements made by Advocate Punwani in the course of his arguments in criminal case No. 588/S of 1962. The statements made by Mr. Punwani were similar to the statements which he made in the course of the arguments in support of the Notice of Motion in the City Civil Court. The defendant has also admitted that Advocate Punwani is an accused in another criminal case, which was filed against the members of the managing committee of the Housing Society. He has also admitted that he stated that he intended to file two more criminal cases in which Advocate Punwani would be an accused. He has then proceeded to say. 'I am hoping that there would be a conviction in each of the four cases in which he will appear as an accused and that there will be a jail sentence'. This is what he stated before Judge Vimadalal on his own admission in this affidavit. Therefore, whether the version set out by judge Vimadalal is accepted as true in its entirely, and we see no reason as to why we should not accept the same or not, on his own admissions contained in the affidavit, it is quite clear that the defendant did say in the course of his arguments in respect of the Notice of Motion that he had already launched a criminal not for defamation against Advocate Punwani in respect of the statements made by the advocate to the effect that the defendant is a notorious litigation-monger and that he has been convicted four times. On his own admission, the defendant also gave a threat that he intended to file two more criminal cases for what he calls the advocate's 'wrong doing'. Of course, in this affidavit, he does not admit that he told the Court that he would launch a prosecution for defamation against Advocate Punwani for the defamatory words uttered by him on 4th March 1963. At the same time, taking the context into account, it is clear that what the defendant hinted was that, he would launch such a prosecution and that too in respect of the statement made by the advocate in the course of the arguments. According to the defendant, the statements made by him do not amount to threat and what he stated was that he would take such legal action as he would be entitled to take on the basis of the wrong deeds committed by Advocate Punwani. The question as to whether the statements made by the defendant amounted to threat or not would be considered by us at a later stage of this discussion. We will also consider the question as to whether, assuming that the statements do not amount to threat, they amounted to a conduct, which would interfere with or subvert the administration of justice. For the time being, we are only considering the two rival versions that have been placed before us and on a due consideration of the two versions, we have no hesitation in preferring the version put forward by the learned Judge, Vimadalal, particularly, when the admissions contained in the affidavit of the defendant support the version of the learned Judge in its broad outline. It may be pointed out that Advocate Punwani also has put in his affidavit fully supporting the version set out by Judge Vimadalal.

9. The next point that was urged by the defendant was that he had sufficient justification to make the comments which he made. According lo him, the statements made by Advocate Punwani were entirely irrelevant and beside the point, which was being considered by the City Civil Court. The defendant suggested that Advocate Punwani went out of his way to make these defamatory statements so that he would be provoked into engaging himself into a brawl with the Advocate. In the course of his arguments, he went so far as to say that had he been a little younger, he would perhaps have engaged himself in a brawl with the advocate on account of the highly provocative statements made by him. We are unable to accept that Advocate Punwani's statements were beside the point or that they were provocative. Advocate Punwani was within his rights in referring to the past history of the defendant, and in particular, his conduct in launching upon unwarranted prosecutions and indulging in frivolous litigation. Mr. Punwani wanted to suggest that the defendant's action in launching the prosecution under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act was a piece of his genera! conduct. In other words, his argument was that the action of the defendant in going to the Criminal Court under Section 24 of the Rent Control Act was utterly vexatious and made with a view to bring pressure upon the plaintiff to withdraw the suit. Nor do we think that the reference made by Advocate Punwani in regard to the previous convictions of the defendant was beside the point. In the first place, these statements were based on the contents of the affidavit sworn to by the attorney of the plaintiff. In the second place, Mr. Punwani says that not only he was instructed by his client but that he tried to ascertain the truth of these statements and that he was supplied with a copy of the judgment in criminal case No. 135/P of 1951, which was pronounced on 3rd October 1952. That was a prosecution under Section 323 Indian Penal Code against the defendant initialed by the Colaba Police Station, in which the defendant was sentenced to undergo three months' rigorous imprisonment and to pay a fine of Rs.

150 or in default to undergo further three months rigorous imprisonment. The defendant admitted in the above case that he had three previous convictions to his credit. In view of these circumstances, Advocate Punwani was fully justified and enjoyed a privilege in making the statements, which he made in the course of his arguments, it is significant to note that in his affidavit the defendant has not denied the fact of any of these four previous convictions. He has only stated that these statements were defamatory. In the course of his arguments before us, the defendant asserted with considerable vehemence that he had preferred an appeal or a revision (he said, he did not remember which) from the conviction and sentence in criminal case No. 135/P of 1951 and that the conviction and sentence were quashed by the higher authorities. He has gone to the length of adding that the higher authorities had passed strictures against the Magistrate, who recorded the conviction. We repeatedly asked the defendant to give us the number of the appeal or revision or at least the year in which these proceedings were instituted. He told us frankly that he did not know either the number or the year when he preferred the appeal or revision. He has, however, advanced a somewhat ingenious argument before us in this respect. He quoted the maxim 'every saint has a past and every sinner a future', he pointed out that the convictions to which reference was made is a matter of past history and that many developments had taken place since 1952 and there has been no conviction against him since then. It is not necessary for us to pursue this line of reasoning any further. It is sufficient for us to observe that it is implicit in the argument advanced by the defendant himself that he does not dispute the factum of previous convictions. If that is so, Advocate Punwani would be within his rights to make that statement.

10. In the course of his arguments, the defendant also made reference to the fact that he had made applications to the Bar Council for starting proceedings for misconduct against Advocate Punwani. It is not disputed that the defendant has made an application on 20th April 1963 to the High Court for starting proceedings for misconduct in respect of certain acts committed by Advocate Punwani between April 1963 and April 1964. It is not necessary for us to enter into the details of this question. The defendant however contended that this was not the first application made by him, but that he had made applications earlier, one in December 1962 and another in February 1968. Whatever that may be it is quite clear that he has made these applications against Advocate Punwani after the institution of the suit by the plaintiff against the defendant for eviction. We have referred to the multiplicity of the proceedings, which the defendant had started against Advocate Punwani. We have to see in perspective as to whether the object of the defendant in launching these cases was to deter Advocate Punwani from appearing on behalf of the plaintiff in the said suit or at least preventing him from discharging his duties fearlessly and impartially towards his client. The answer to this question will depend upon the answer to another question viz., whether the statements attributed to the defendant by Judge Vimadalal amount to threat or, at any rate, amount to a course of conduct motivated with the object of frightening the advocate from discharging his duties towards his client. One of the arguments advanced by the defendant was that, assuming that all the statements attributed to him are true, still they do not amount to any kind of threat.

11. We will first consider the effect, in law of the words uttered to the defendant. In the present case, the defendant has not been accused of having committed any act of contempt, disregard or defiance or disobedience to the Judge. He has been accused of having made statements in reaped of an advocate of the opposite party, and the point for consideration is, whether the statements amount to interference with the administration of justice. Oswald in his book on Contempt of Court, 3rd Edition, page 6, says :

"To speak generally, contempt of Court may be said to be constituted by any conduct that lends to bring the authority and administration of law into disrespect or disregard, or to interfere with or prejudice parties litigant or their witnesses during the litigation".

At p. 91 of 'Contempt, Committal and Attachment' by Oswald, occurs the following passage :

"An insult to counsel may be punished as contempt. All publications which offend against the dignity of Court or calculated to prejudice the course of justice will constitute contempt".

It is settled law that disrespect or disregard to an advocate in certain circumstances so as to deter him from discharging his duties would amount to contempt of Court. The decision very much to the point was given by Niyogi, J. in Telhara Cotton Ginning Co. Ltd. v. Kashinath Gangadhar, AIR 1940 Nag 110. In that case, the defendant had addressed a notice to the Advocate of the plaintiff demanding that certain allegations in the written statement of his client should he withdrawn unconditionally and an apology tendered on pain of legal proceedings being taken against him. Another letter was sent by the defendant or somebody interested in him to the plaintiff complaining against the counsel for his refusal to withdraw the allegations described as foolish. It was held :

"In sending the notice containing threats to the counsel, the defendant made a clear invasion of the counsel's right to represent his client's case loyally and properly and further interfered with the due performance of his duty towards his client. The addressing of notice and the letter was calculated to interfere with and to obstruct or divert the course of justice. Hence, he was guilty of contempt of Court."

In the course of his judgment, Niyogi, J. observed :

"The law of contempt covers the whole field of litigation itself. The real end of a judicial proceeding, civil or criminal, is to ascertain the true facts and dispense justice. Various persons have their respective contributions to make in the proper fulfilment of that task. They are necessarily the Judges or the Magistrates, the parties to the proceeding, their agents or pleaders or advocates, the witnesses and the ministerial or menial staff of the Court. All these persons can well be described as the limbs of the judicial proceedings. For proper administration of justice, it is essential that all these persons are in the performance of their respective duties, ensured such fullness of freedom as is fail and legitimate. Anything that tends to curtail or impair the freedom of the limbs of the judicial proceedings must of necessity result in hampering the due administration of law and in interfering with the course of justice. It must therefore be held to constitute contempt of Court."

The view taken by the Nagpur High Court has been endorsed by the Allahabad. Madras and Lahore High Courts. In Rajendra Singh v. Uma Prasad, ILR 57 All 573 : (AIR 1935 All 117) during the pendency of the suit a notice was sent on behalf of the plaintiff through his advocate to the defendant, threatening him that unless he withdrew the plea and paid a certain sum as damages he would be criminally prosecuted for defamation of the plaintiff's deceased father. Proceedings for contempt were taken out on this notice. It was held :

"Interference with the administration of justice is one of the well recognised heads of contempt of Court. In the present case, the notice was undoubtedly intended to put extraneous pressure on the defendant in order to compel him, under threat of drastic action being taken against him, to withdraw the plea which had been taken by him specifically in the written statement. It amounted to a direct interference with the administration of justice in preventing or attempting to prevent the defendant from pressing the plea, which might prove in be a very substantial and legitimate defence; and in that way an indirect attempt was made to exclude that plea from the consideration of the Court."

In the course of the judgment, the learned Judges relied upon the decision in Smith v. Lakeman, (1856) 26 LJ Ch 305 in which an unsigned letter had been sent by the plaintiff to the defendant with a view to intimidating him in the conduct of his defence. The letter warned the defendant that he had a suit pending in Chancery and should it go up for judgment, he would at once be indicted for swindling, perjury and forgery and thus bring disgrace on his family. If was not mentioned who would start such prosecution, but the threat was that certain legal action in court would be taken if the matter was pressed to final conclusion. Stuart, V.C., in committing the plaintiff for contempt remarked that the letter amounted to a threat for the purpose of intimidating him as a suitor, and therefore, whether it had had that effect or not, was unquestionably a contempt of Court. It would be clear from the above decisions that a piece of conduct intended or calculated to bring pressure upon a party, which must necessarily include his advocate, not to pursue the matter according to his choice, would amount to an attempt to interfere with the administration of justice. Secondly, the threat need not be direct, in the sense that the contemner specifically, asserted that he would take such action. It is sufficient if the context showed that the action contemplated was the action of the contemner himself. A similar question arose in Thirumalaiappa v. Kumaraswami, AIR 1956 Mad 621, The Madras High Court referred to the leading case of French v. French, (1824) 1 Hog. 134, which formed the basis of the statement on this subject contained in Oswald's Contempt of Court. The passage in Oswald (part of which has already been quoted) runs thus :

"An insult to counsel may be punished as a contempt. All publications which offend against the dignity of the Court, or are calculated to prejudice the course of justice, will constitute contempt Offences of this nature are of three kinds, namely, those which (1) scandalise the Court, or (2) abuse the parties concerned in causes there, or (3) prejudices mankind against persons before the cause is heard. Under the first head fall libels on the integrity of the Court, its Judges, officers or proceedings; under the second and third beads anything which tends to excite prejudice against the parties or their litigation, while it is pending. For example, attacks on or abuse of a party, not amounting to an interference with the course of justice, does not amount to contempt, the party being left to his remedy by action". In (1824) 1 Hog 134 an insult was given to a counsel while he was attending in the Master's office, which was situated within the precincts of the Court. It was held : (p. 623) -

"Advocates who appear for the parties being officers of Court, any abuse or insult or aspersions cast on them, which would interfere with the course of administration of justice, must necessarily be held to amount in contempt of Court."

Reference was made by the Madras High Court to the Nagpur case and the observations of Niyogi, J. have been cited with approval. At the same time, the Madras High Court did not take any action in regard to the insult levelled against the counsel, because the incident took place two days after the termination of the case.

12. In Nandlal Bhalla v. Kishori Lal, 48 Cri LJ 757 (Lah) the inspector of Police issued threats and used insulting language towards an advocate. It was held that the Advocate was threatened in the performance of his duties, and although there was no contempt of the Court directly, there was contempt inasmuch as an officer of the Court such as an advocate appearing in his professional capacity was threatened and insulted while in the performance of his professional duties in the Court.

13. In this background, let us now examine some of the arguments that were advanced by the defendant-contemner. The defendant referred to the meaning of the word 'threat' contained in the Concise Oxford Dictionary. Several meanings of that word are mentioned. The defendant wanted to rely on the first and second meanings viz., 'Declaration of intention to punish or hurt'; 'such menace of bodily hurt or injury to reputation or property as may restrain person's freedom of action'. The third meaning of that word as given is, 'indication of coming evil' and the fourth meaning is, 'threat of calamity". Even under the second meaning, it is quite clear that the language in order to amount lo a threat need not necessarily be aimed at causing bodily injury or hurt. It is enough if it is calculated to cause injury to the reputation sit as to restrain the freedom of action of that person. On examining the words used by the defendant, we feel no hesitation in holding that in effect the words amounted to a threat. As stated above, the question as to whether the words amounted to a threat is not of the essence of the matter. What is of the essence of the matter is the course of conduct adopted by the contemner, and if, on the whole, the conduct has a tendency to interfere with the course of administration of justice or subvert the course of justice, it would amount to contempt of Court. The defendant also argued that unless the threat is accompanied by a demand that the party or the counsel should not proceed with his action, the threat does not amount to contempt of Court. We do not think that the nexus between the threat and the demand for doing something or refraining from doing something need be express or need be expressly stated, it is enough if from the context the link between the two is apparent. In the present case, it is necessary to note that the threat was issued in the presence of the Court and in the course of the arguments before the Judge. It is quite clear that the object of the defendant was to bring undue pressure upon the Advocate not to perform his duties in a fearless and proper manner. As we have already mentioned, the defendant had started a prosecution for defamation against Advocate Punwani on account of similar statements made by him in the course of his arguments in criminal case No. 588/S of 1962. He also expressly stated that he would start two more prosecutions against the advocate and actually, he did start a prosecution on the 9th May 1968 in connection with the arguments advanced by Mr. Punwani on 4th March 1963. The subsequent conduct of the defendant in so far as it relates to the prosecutions having been started against Advocate Punwani is concerned, would, in our view, he relevant, and taking an overall view of the matter and having regard to the entire conduct of the defendant and further taking into account the circumstance that the threat was uttered in the course of the arguments and in the presence of the Judge, we feel no hesitation in holding that the threat was intended to operate upon the mind of the counsel so that he should flinch from performing his duties towards his client.

14. The defendant relied upon a decision of the Allahabad High Court in Kamta Prasad v. Ram Agyan, ILR 1950 All 530 : (AIR 1952 All 674). In that case the privity to the dispute had made an offer for settlement of the dispute between the parties out of Court and as part of the settlement he suggested that the pending litigation should be withdrawn. He suggested that failing this, he would take legal proceedings open to him under the law. It was held that the party could not be said to be interfering with the course of justice, because all that he suggested was that if the suggested terms were not accepted, he would take such proceedings us were open to him to lake in the matter. We are unable to understand how the decision of the Allahabad High Court, which proceeded on the peculiar facts of that case would in any way help the defendant in the arguments, which he is advancing. We notice that the Allahabad High Court referred to its earlier decision in Ranjendra Singh's case, ILR 57 All 573 : (AIR 1935 All 117) and expressed its approval of the view taken in that Case. It also referred to the decision in (1856) 26 LJ Ch 305 and pointed out that in the circumstances of that case, the threat issued by the party amounted to contempt of Court. The Allahabad High Court explained that in the notice merely an offer for compromise of a pending dispute was made and that offer was coupled with a warning that proceedings which were open in law to the opposite parties would be taken in case the offer was rejected. At pages 541 and 542 (of ILR All) : (at p. 678 of AIR) the learned Judges have set out five propositions, and it was the contention of the defendant, in the present case, that these propositions assist him in the argument, which he is advancing. Now, the first proposition was based on the decision of (1856) 26 LJ Ch 305, and in our view, the present case would fall within the ambit of the first proposition laid down in the said case. The other propositions enunciated in that case have no relation to the facts of the present case. Some of the propositions were not necessary, even for the decision of the case and therefore, will have to be treated as obiter dicta. The facts of the present case are particularly strong, as we have repeatedly pointed out, because unlike in most of the cases referred to above wherein the threats were given outside the Court in the present case, the threat was given in the presence of the Court and in the course of the hearing of the case, and one prosecution for defamation was launched before the threat was administered and again a second prosecution for defamation against the Advocate Punwani, for the arguments advanced by him in the present case, was actually started by the defendant and in that way, the threat was carried out.

15. It may he pointed out that just as the statements made by Advocate Punwani viz., that @page-Bom28 the defendant was an ex-convict, was supported by the judgment, a certified copy of which was with him, in the same way, his statement that the defendant was a notorious litigant was also supported from the observations made by Stone, C.J. in Emperor v. Jehangir M. Jassawala, 49 Bom LR 393 : (AIR 1948 Bom 6). It is not necessary to refer to the facts, of that case and it is enough to point out that the defendant had started as many as twenty prosecutions against one Jasawalla, who in his turn had also started some prosecutions against the defendant restraining him from starling subsequent prosecutions against the same party and it was in that connection that the learned Chief Justice observed :

"..... in Mr. Vaney's case there is no doubt that he is a vexatious litigant."

Now, to give a threat to an advocate suggesting that prosecution for defamation would be launched against him in respect of the statements made by him against the defendant which were supported by unimpeachable evidence, is certainly to try to bring pressure on the Advocate with the object of deterring him from performing his duties towards his client. It is established law that a statement made by an advocate on the basis of instructions taken from the client and after verifying that it is well founded is privileged and protected. It is in respect of a privileged statement that the defendant had taken the extra-ordinary step of launching prosecution for defamation. Again, it is in respect of a similar statement made in support of the notice of motion that the defendant brandished a threat of prosecution. Later on, he has implemented that and started a second prosecution. And in his affidavit in this Court, he has repeatedly stated that the statements of the Advocate are per se defamatory. The course of conduct on which the defendant had launched himself will have to be taken into account for the purpose of finding out whether it was the object of the defendant to pressurise Advocate Punwani into withdrawing from the case so as to avoid further harassment or, at any rate, to deter him from discharging his duties to his client, honestly, efficiently and fearlessly, by keeping the sword of prosecution hanging over his head.

16. The law on this question has been clarified in n recent judgment of the Supreme Court in Partap Singh v. Gurbaksh Singh, AIR 1962 SC 1172. In that case, after citing the passage from Oswald's Contempt of Court, which has already been quoted by us above, their Lordships referred to the facts of the case and observed that although departmental proceedings were started against the officer in accordance with the directions contained in the circular still the launching of these proceedings would have a deterring effect upon the officer, who had already filed a suit to ventilate his grievances. At page 1177, their Lordships observed :

"..... What would be the effect of these proceedings mi the suit which was pending in the Court of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Amritsar ? From the practical point of view, the institution of the proceedings at a time when the suit in the Court of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Amritsar, was pending could only be to put pressure on the respondent to withdraw his suit, or face the consequences of disciplinary action. This, in our opinion, undoubtedly amounted lo contempt of Court. There are many ways of obstructing the Court and any conduct by which the course of justice is perverted, cither by a party or a stranger, is a contempt; thus the use of threats, by letter or otherwise, to a party while his suit is pending; or abusing a party in letters lo persons likely to be witnesses in the cause have been held to be contempts.' The question is not whether the action in fact interfered, but whether it had a tendency to interfere with the due course of justice. The action taken in ibis case against the respondent by way of a proceeding against him can, in our opinion, have only one tendency, namely, the tendency to coerce the respondent and force him to withdraw his suit or otherwise not press if. If that be the clear and unmistakable tendency of the proceedings taken against the respondent, then there can be no doubt that in law the appellants have been guilty of contempt of Court, even though they were merely carrying out the instructions contained in the circular letter".

It may be noted that in the above case, there were no threats issued by the Government. What the Government did was that it started departmental disciplinary action against the respondent, and it was this action which was taken by the Government in accordance with a circular issued by it which raised the question as to whether it amounted to contempt. Their Lordships held that launching of departmental proceedings itself amounted to contempt of Court, because it would exert pressure upon the respondent either to withdraw from the case or at any rate not to press if. Their Lordships have considered the question from the practical point of view and have considered the possible effect of the institution of the proceedings upon the respondent. In the present case also, Advocate Punwani would be placed on the horns of dilemma either withdraw from the case or face the consequences of multiplicity of criminal proceedings and all these in respect of the statements made by him in the discharge of his duties as a counsel. We, therefore, feel no hesitation in holding that judged, as a whole, the words used by the defendant and his conduct amounted to contempt of Court.

17. We may consider one more argument that was urged by the defendant. The defendant contended that since the words, which, according to the Judge, amount to contempt, were uttered in his presence, the matter can be dealt with under Section 228, Indian Penal Code, and therefore, the High Court cannot take cognizance of that matter in view of the provisions of Section 3(2) of the Contempt of Courts Act. Sub-Section (2) of Section 3 of the said Act runs thus :

"No High Court shall take cognizance of a contempt alleged to have been committed in respect of a court subordinate to it where such contempt is an offence punishable under the Indian Penal Code."

Section 228 Indian Penal Code, runs thus :

"Whoever intentionally offers any insult, or causes any interruption any public servant, while such public servant is sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend in one thousand rupees or with both". The offence under Section 228 Indian Penal Code can arise only in the case of a public servant, while he is sitting in a judicial proceeding. In the present case, the threat has not been addressed to the Judge, but it has been addressed to the Advocate. Although the Advocate is a part of the machinery of the administration of justice, he is not a public servant within the meaning of that expression in Section 228, Indian Penal Code. It is on this short ground that the argument advanced by the defendant can be disposed of. But the matter does not rest there. In order that the proceedings are barred under Section 3(2) of the Contempt of Courts Act, it is further necessary to establish that the offence committed by the contemner in the presence of the Court is such as can be punished as contempt. It is not enough that the offence is punishable under any other law. This position is clear from the wording of Section 3(2) of the Contempt of Courts Act. There is also ample authority in support of the said proposition, vide B. Ramakrishna v. State of Madras, AIR 1952 S.C. 149 and State of Madhya Pradesh v. Revashankar AIR 1959 SC 102. As against this, the defendant relied upon the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Allu v. Emperor, ILR 45 All. 272 : (AIR 1923 All 193 (2)). We, however notice that the learned Judge (it was a decision of a single Judge) has not discussed the question at all and since the conclusion is slated without any discussion or reasoning, we do not think that that conclusion is entitled to much weight. Although the defendant had urged as one of the points in the affidavit that Section 3 of the Contempt of Courts Act was ultra vires the Constitution, in the course of his arguments however he fairly conceded that that would not be position and did not press the matter further.

18. Before concluding, we may refer to one more circumstance and it is this. We are told at the bar that when this matter came up before the Division Bench comprising the Chief Justice and Gokhale, J. and when it was suggested that the defendant should offer an apology the defendant told the Court that he would offer an apology if he was convinced that he had committed a wrong. The defendant accepted the above statement made by Advocate Punwani at the bar. When the matter came up before the Division Bench comprising Patel and Kantawala, JJ. the defendant told us that he did offer an apology, but he added that the Government Pleader as also the plaintiff's advocate objected to accepting his apology and requested that the matter should he proceeded with. When the defendant started his arguments before us, he began by asking us as to what would happen if he were to tender an apology. We told him that if he thought it proper, he may tender an unconditional apology, because after all, the apology should be born out of repentance or remorse. We also pointed out to him that he could not enter into any kind of stipulation with the Court. The matter rested at that.

19. We have now to consider the quantum of punishment to be imposed on the defendant. We asked the learned Assistant Government Pleader as also the defendant as to what should he the proper punishment for this offence. The learned Assistant Government Pleader pointed out that this is a third contempt committed by the defendant. The first contempt committed by the defendant appears to have taken place before 1947. Reference to the same is to be had at p. 395 in 49 Bom LR 393 : (AIR 1948 Bom 6 at p. 7) where Stone C.J. during the course of the narration of the antecedents of the defendant observed :

'.. .. ... Mr. Vancy was fined for his contempt of Court."

The learned Assistant Government Pleader also drew our attention to a recent case, wherein the defendant was charged with the same offence by this Court. That was in Misc.

Civil Appln. No. 188 of 1960 (Bom). That matter came up before the Chief Justice and one of us viz., Tambe, J. on 9th January 1961. The defendant having tendered an unconditional apology the proceedings were dropped. It, therefore, appears that the defendant has been in the habit of making reckless allegations against the Court or the officers of the Court. Ordinarily, we would have awarded a sentence which would have deterred him from taking similar action in future. When we asked the defendant as to what he has to say about the punishment, he stated that the matter is left in our hands. In the course of his arguments, the defendant told us that he was suffering from low blood pressure and he found it difficult to argue the matter beyond the first part of the day on the 14th. He, therefore, requested that the matter should be adjourned to the next day. The defendant also appears to be an old man. In view of his age and the condition of his health, we feel averse to sending him to jail. In our view, the ends of justice would be met if we direct him to pay a fine of Rs. 1,000. We hope that the imposition of the said punishment, which errs on the side of leniency, would have a sobering effect upon the defendant. We also direct that the defendant should pay the costs of these proceedings. We grant two months' time from today the defendant to pay the amount of fine

Order accordingly.

(2012) 3 Supreme Court Cases (Cri) 1183

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

(BEFORE P. SATHASIVAM AND RANJAN GOGOI, JJ.)

Central Bureau Of Investigation -Vs- K. Narayana Rao

Criminal Appeal No. 1460 of 2012t, decided on September 21, 2012

A) Advocates — Duties — Legal opinion rendered by advocate — Negligent or improper legal advice or opinion — Criminal liability cannot be fastened — Criminal conspiracy to defraud Bank — Panel Advocate of Bank when can be made liable for such criminal conspiracy — Need for evidence to show that lawyer in question aided or abetted the other conspirators — Held, although a lawyer owes an unremitting loyalty to clients interest, however , merely because his legal opinion may not be acceptable (in present case respondent Panel Advocate had been given ownership documents of conspirators' pledged properties, for vetting), he cannot be fastened with criminal prosecution in absence of tangible evidence that he had aided or abetted other conspirators — At the most, he may be liable for gross negligence or professional misconduct if established by evidence — In present case, there being no such tangible evidence against respondent, criminal proceedings against him, held, rightly quashed .

B) Tort Law — Negligence — Professional negligence — Standard of requisite skill applicable — Held, a professional's only assurance which can be given by implication is that: (1) he is possessed of the requisite skill in that branch of profession which he is practising, and (2) while undertaking performance of the task entrusted to him, he would exercise his skill with reasonable competence —A professional may thus be held liable for negligence on one of the two findings viz. either he was not possessed of the requisite skill which he professed to have possessed, or, he did not exercise, with reasonable.

C) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 — Ss. 227, 228 and 209 — Framing of charge /Discharge of accused — Exercise of jurisdiction— Held, Judicial Magistrate enquiring into a case is not to act as a mere post office or mouth piece of the prosecution and has to arrive at a conclusion whether the case before him is fit for commitment of accused to Court of Session — He is entitled to sift and weigh materials on record, but only to see whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment, not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction — If Magistrate finds no prim a facie evidence or evidence placed on record is totally unworthy of credit, it is his duty to discharge accused at once — While exercising jurisdiction under S. 227, Magistrate should not make a roving enquiry into pros and cons of the matter or weigh the evidence as if he were conducting a trial (para 14)

"Exercise of jurisdiction under Sections 227 and 228 CrPC

On consideration of the authorities about the scope of Sections 227 and 228 of the Code, the following principles emerge:

(i) The Judge while considering the question of framing the charges under Section 227 CrPC has the undoubted power to sift and weigh the evidence for the limited purpose of finding out whether or not a prima facie case against the accused has been made out The test to determine prima facie case would depend upon the facts of each case.

(ii) Where the materials placed before the court disclose grave suspicion against the accused which has not not been properly explained, the court will be fully justified in farming a charge and proceeding with the trial. (iii) The court cannot act merely as a office or a mouthpiece of the prosecution but has to consider the broad probabilities of the case, the total effect of the evidence and the documents produced before the court, any basic infirmities, etc. However, at this stage, there cannot be a roving enquiry into the pros and cons of the matter and weigh the evidence as if he was conducting a trial.

(iv) If on the basis of the material on record, the court could form an opinion that the accused might have committed offence, it can frame the charge, though for conviction the conclusion is required to be proved beyond reasonable doubt that the accused has committed the offence.

(v) At the time of framing of the charges, the probative value of the material on record cannot be gone into but before framing a charge the court must apply its judicial mind on the material placed on record and must be satisfied that the commission of offence by the accused was possible.

(vi) At the stage of Sections 227 and 228, the court is required to evaluate the material and documents on record with a view to find out if the facts emerging therefrom taken at their face value disclose the existence of all the ingredients constituting the alleged offence. For this limited purpose, sift the evidence as it cannot be expected even at that initial stage to accept all that the prosecution states as gospel truth even if it is opposed to common sense or the broad probabilities of the case.

(vii) If two views are possible and one of them gives rise to suspicion only, as distinguished from grave suspicion, the trial Judge will be empowered to discharge the accused and at this stage, he is not to see whether the trial will end in conviction or acquittal.""

H.P. Raval, Additional Solicitor General (Rajiv Nanda, Ms Padmalakshmi Nigam and Arvind Kr. Sharma, Advocates) for the Appellant;

R.Venkataramani , senior Advocate (Ashok Panigrahi , Aljo Joseph and Surajit Bhaduri, Advocates) for the Respondent.

JUDGEMENT

1. LEAVE granted.

2. THIS appeal is directed against the final judgment and order dated 09.07.2010 passed by the High Court of Judicature, Andhra Pradesh at Hyderabad in Criminal Petition No. 2347 of 2008 whereby the High Court allowed the petition filed by the respondent herein under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (in short "the Code ") and quashed the criminal proceedings pending against him in CC No. 44 of 2007 (Crime No. 36 of 2005) on the file of the Special Judge for CBI cases, Hyderabad.

Brief facts:

(a) According to the prosecution, basing on an information, on 30.11.2005, the CBI, Hyderabad registered an FIR being RC 32(A)/2005 against Shri P. Radha Gopal Reddy (A-1) and Shri Udaya Sankar (A-2), the then Branch Manager and the Assistant Manager, respectively of the Vijaya Bank, Narayanaguda Branch, Hyderabad, for the commission of offence punishable under Sections 120-B, 419, 420, 467, 468 471 read with Section 109 of the Indian Penal Code, 1860 (in short 'the IPC ') and Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 for abusing their official position as public servants and for having conspired with private individuals, viz., Shri P.Y. Kondala Rao the builder (A-3) and Shri N.S. Sanjeeva Rao (A-4) and other unknown persons for defrauding the bank by sanctioning and disbursement of housing loans to 22 borrowers in violation of the Bank 's rules and guidelines and thereby caused wrongful loss of Rs. 1.27 crores to the Bank and corresponding gain for themselves. In furtherance of the said conspiracy, A-2 conducted the pre-sanction inspection in respect of 22 housing loans and A-1 sanctioned the same. (b) After completion of the investigation, the CBI filed charge sheet along with the list of witnesses and the list of documents against all the accused persons. In the said charge sheet, Shri K. Narayana Rao, the respondent herein, who is a legal practitioner and a panel advocate for the Vijaya Bank, was also arrayed as A-6. The duty of the respondent herein as a panel advocate was to verify the documents and to give legal opinion. The allegation against him is that he gave false legal opinion in respect of 10 housing loans. It has been specifically alleged in the charge sheet that the respondent herein (A-6) and Mr. K.C. Ramdas (A-7)-the valuer have failed to point out the actual ownership of the properties and to bring out the ownership details and name of the apartments in their reports and also the falsity in the permissions for construction issued by the Municipal Authorities. (c) Being aggrieved, the respondent herein (A-6) filed a petition being Criminal Petition No. 2347 of 2008 under Section 482 of the Code before the High Court of Andhra Pradesh at Hyderabad for quashing of the criminal proceedings in CC No. 44 of 2007 on the file of the Special Judge for CBI Cases, Hyderabad. By impugned judgment and order dated 09.07.2010, the High Court quashed the proceedings insofar as the respondent herein (A-6) is concerned. (d) Being aggrieved, the CBI, Hyderabad filed this appeal by way of special leave. Heard Mr. H.P. Raval, learned Additional Solicitor General for the appellant-CBI and Mr. R. Venkataramani, learned senior counsel for the respondent (A-6).

3. AFTER taking us through the allegations in the charge sheet presented before the special Court and all other relevant materials, the learned ASG has raised the following contentions:

(i) The High Court while entertaining the petition under Section 482 of the Code has exceeded its jurisdiction. The powers under Section 482 are inherent which are to be exercised in exceptional and extraordinary circumstances. The power being extraordinary has to be exercised sparingly, cautiously and in exceptional circumstances; (ii) The High Court has committed an error in holding that no material had been gathered by the investigating agency against the respondent herein (A-

That he had conspired with the remaining accused for committing the offence; and

(iii) There is no material on record to show That the respondent herein (A- 6) did not verify the originals pertaining to housing loans before giving legal opinion and intentionally changed the proforma and violated the Bank 's circulars.

4. ON the other hand, Mr. Venkataramani, learned senior counsel for the respondent (A-6), after taking us through the charge sheet and the materials placed before the respondent seeking legal opinion, submitted that he has not committed any offence much less an offence punishable under Section 120-B read with Sections 419, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 109 of IPC and Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. He further submitted that based on the documents placed, the respondent herein after perusing and on satisfying himself, furnished his legal opinion for which he cannot be implicated as one of the conspirators for the offence punishable under Section 420 read with Section 109 IPC. We have carefully perused all the relevant materials and considered the rival submissions.

In order to appreciate the stand of the CBI and the defence of the respondent, it is necessary to refer the specific allegations in the charge sheet. The respondent herein has been arrayed as accused No. 6 in the charge sheet and the allegations against him are as under:

"Para 20: Investigation revealed that legal opinions in respect of all these 10 loans have been given by Panel Advocate Sri K. Narayana Rao (A-6) and valuation reports were given by Approved Valuer Sri V.C. Ramdas(A-7). Both, the advocate and the valuer, have failed to point out the actual ownership of the property and failed to bring out the ownership details and name of the apartments in their reports. They have also failed to point out the falsehood in the construction permission issued by the municipal authorities. Para 28: Investigation revealed that the municipal permissions submitted to the bank were also fake. Para 29: Expert of Finger Print Bureau confirmed that the thumb impressions available on the questioned 22 title deeds pertain to A-3, A-4 and A-5. Para 30: The above facts disclose that Sri P. Radha Gopal Reddy (A-1) and Sri M. Udaya Sankar (A-2) entered into criminal conspirary with A- 3 and abused their official position as public servants by violating the bank norms and in the process caused wrongful gain to A-3 to the extent of Rs.1,00,68,050/- and corresponding wrongful loss to the bank in sanctioning 22 housing loans. Sri P.Y. Kondal Rao(A-3) registered false sale deeds in favour of borrowers using impostors as site owners, produced false municipal permissions and cheated the bank in getting the housing loans. He is liable for conspiracy, cheating, forgery for the purpose of cheating and for using forged documents as genuine. Sri B. Ramanaji Rao(A-4) and Sri R. Sai Sita Rama Rao(A-5) impersonated as site owners, executed the false sale deeds. They are liable for impersonation, conspiracy, cheating, forging a valuable security and forgery for the purpose of cheating. Sri K. Narayana Rao (A-6) submitted false legal opinions and Sri K.C. Ramdas(A-7) submitted false valuation reports about the genuineness of the properties in collusion with A-3 for sanction of the loans by Vijaya Bank, Narayanaguda branch, Hyderabad and abetted the crime. Sri A.V. Subba Rao(A-8) managed verification of salary slips of the borrowers of 12 housing loans in collusion with A-3 and abetted the crime. Para 33: In view of the above, the accused A-1, A-2, A-3, A-4, A-5, A- 6, A-7 and A-8 are liable for offences punishable under Section 120-B read with Sections 419, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 109 read with Section 420 IPC and Section 13(2) read with Section 13(1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act and substantive offences thereof. "

With the above details, let us consider whether there is prima facie allegation(s) and material(s) in order to pursue the trial against the respondent herein. In the same way, we have to see whether the reasoning and the ultimate conclusion of the High Court in quashing the charge sheet against the respondent herein (A-6) is sustainable. We are conscious of the power and jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code for interfering with the criminal prosecution at the threshold.

Mr. Raval, learned ASG in support of his contentions relied on the following decisions:

i) State of Bihar vs. Ramesh Singh, (1977) 4 SCC 39; ii) P. Vijayan vs. State of Kerala and Another, (2010) 2 SCC 398; and iii) Sajjan Kumar vs. Central Bureau of Investigation, (2010) 9 SCC 368.

5. THE first decision Ramesh Singh (supra) relates to interpretation of Sections 227 and 228 of the Code for the considerations as to discharge the accused or to proceed with trial. Para 4 of the said judgment is pressed into service which reads as under:

"4. Under Section 226 of the Code while opening the case for the prosecution the Prosecutor has got to describe the charge against the accused and state by what evidence he proposes to prove the guilt of the accused. THEreafter comes at the initial stage the duty of the Court to consider the record of the case and the documents submitted therewith and to hear the submissions of the accused and the prosecution in that behalf. THE Judge has to pass thereafter an order either under Section 227 or Section 228 of the Code. If "the Judge considers that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused, he shall discharge the accused and record his reasons for so doing ", as enjoined by Section 227. If, on the other hand, "the Judge is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence which - ... (b) is exclusively triable by the Court, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused ", as provided in Section 228. Reading the two provisions together in juxtaposition, as they have got to be, it would be clear that at the beginning and the initial stage of the trial the truth, veracity and effect of the evidence which the Prosecutor proposes to adduce are not to be meticulously judged. Nor is any weight to be attached to the probable defence of the accused. It is not obligatory for the Judge at that stage of the trial to consider in any detail and weigh in a sensitive balance whether the facts, if proved, would be incompatible with the innocence of the accused or not. THE standard of test and judgment which is to be finally applied before recording a finding regarding the guilt or otherwise of the accused is not exactly to be applied at the stage of deciding the matter under Section 227 or Section 228 of the Code. At that stage the Court is not to see whether there is sufficient ground for conviction of the accused or whether the trial is sure to end in his conviction. Strong suspicion against the accused, if the matter remains in the region of suspicion, cannot take the place of proof of his guilt at the conclusion of the trial. But at the initial stage if there is a strong suspicion which leads the Court to think that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence then it is not open to the Court to say that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. THE presumption of the guilt of the accused which is to be drawn at the initial stage is not in the sense of the law governing the trial of criminal cases in France where the accused is presumed to be guilty unless the contrary is proved. But it is only for the purpose of deciding prima facie whether the Court should proceed with the trial or not. It the evidence which the Prosecutor proposes to adduce to prove the guilt of the accused even if fully accepted before it is challenged in cross-examination or rebutted by the defence evidence, if any, cannot show that the accused committed the offence, then there will be no sufficient ground for proceeding with the trial. An exhaustive list of the circumstances to indicate as to what will lead to one conclusion or the other is neither possible nor advisable. We may just illustrate the difference of the law by one more example. If the scales of pan as to the guilt or innocence of the accused are something like even, at the conclusion of the trial, then, on the theory of benefit of doubt the case is to end in his acquittal. But if, on the other hand, it is so at the initial stage of making an order under Section 227 or Section 228, then in such a situation ordinarily and generally the order which will have to be made will be one under Section 228 and not under Section 227. "

6. DISCHARGE of accused under Section 227 of the Code was extensively considered by this Court in P. Vijayan (supra) wherein it was held as under:

"10. ... . If two views are possible and one of them gives rise to suspicion only, as distinguished from grave suspicion, the trial Judge will be empowered to discharge the accused and at this stage he is not to see whether the trial will end in conviction or acquittal. Further, the words "not sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused " clearly show that the Judge is not a mere post office to frame the charge at the behest of the prosecution, but has to exercise his judicial mind to the facts of the case in order to determine whether a case for trial has been made out by the prosecution. In assessing this fact, it is not necessary for the court to enter into the pros and cons of the matter or into a weighing and balancing of evidence and probabilities which is really the function of the court, after the trial starts. 11. At the stage of Section 227, the Judge has merely to sift the evidence in order to find out whether or not there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. In other words, the sufficiency of ground would take within its fold the nature of the evidence recorded by the police or the documents produced before the court which ex facie disclose that there are suspicious circumstances against the accused so as to frame a charge against him. "

While considering the very same provisions i.e., framing of charges and discharge of accused, again in Sajjan Kumar (supra), this Court held thus:

"19. It is clear that at the initial stage, if there is a strong suspicion which leads the court to think that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence, then it is not open to the court to say that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. The presumption of the guilt of the accused which is to be drawn at the initial stage is only for the purpose of deciding prima facie whether the court should proceed with the trial or not. If the evidence which the prosecution proposes to adduce proves the guilt of the accused even if fully accepted before it is challenged in cross-examination or rebutted by the defence evidence, if any, cannot show that the accused committed the offence, then there will be no sufficient ground for proceeding with the trial. 20. A Magistrate enquiring into a case under Section 209 CrPC is not to act as a mere post office and has to come to a conclusion whether the case before him is fit for commitment of the accused to the Court of Session. He is entitled to sift and weigh the materials on record, but only for seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment, and not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction. If there is no prima facie evidence or the evidence is totally unworthy of credit, it is the duty of the Magistrate to discharge the accused, on the other hand, if there is some evidence on which the conviction may reasonably be based, he must commit the case. It is also clear that in exercising jurisdiction under Section 227 CrPC, the Magistrate should not make a roving enquiry into the pros and cons of the matter and weigh the evidence as if he was conducting a trial. Exercise of jurisdiction under Sections 227 and 228 CrPC 21. On consideration of the authorities about the scope of Sections 227 and 228 of the Code, the following principles emerge: (i) The Judge while considering the question of framing the charges under Section 227 CrPC has the undoubted power to sift and weigh the evidence for the limited purpose of finding out whether or not a prima facie case against the accused has been made out. The test to determine prima facie case would depend upon the facts of each case. (ii) Where the materials placed before the court disclose grave suspicion against the accused which has not been properly explained, the court will be fully justified in framing a charge and proceeding with the trial. (iii) The court cannot act merely as a post office or a mouthpiece of the prosecution but has to consider the broad probabilities of the case, the total effect of the evidence and the documents produced before the court, any basic infirmities, etc. However, at this stage, there cannot be a roving enquiry into the pros and cons of the matter and weigh the evidence as if he was conducting a trial. (iv) If on the basis of the material on record, the court could form an opinion that the accused might have committed offence, it can frame the charge, though for conviction the conclusion is required to be proved beyond reasonable doubt that the accused has committed the offence. (v) At the time of framing of the charges, the probative value of the material on record cannot be gone into but before framing a charge the court must apply its judicial mind on the material placed on record and must be satisfied that the commission of offence by the accused was possible. (vi) At the stage of Sections 227 and 228, the court is required to evaluate the material and documents on record with a view to find out if the facts emerging therefrom taken at their face value disclose the existence of all the ingredients constituting the alleged offence. For this limited purpose, sift the evidence as it cannot be expected even at that initial stage to accept all that the prosecution states as gospel truth even if it is opposed to common sense or the broad probabilities of the case. (vii) If two views are possible and one of them gives rise to suspicion only, as distinguished from grave suspicion, the trial Judge will be empowered to discharge the accused and at this stage, he is not to see whether the trial will end in conviction or acquittal. " From the above decisions, it is clear that at the initial stage, if there is a strong suspicion which leads the Court to think that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence, in that event, it is not open to the Court to say that there is no sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused. A judicial magistrate enquiring into a case under Section 209 of the Code is not to act as a mere post office and has to arrive at a conclusion whether the case before him is fit for commitment of the accused to the Court of Session. He is entitled to sift and weigh the materials on record, but only for seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment, and not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction. On the other hand, if the Magistrate finds that there is no prima facie evidence or the evidence placed is totally unworthy of credit, it is his duty to discharge the accused at once. It is also settled law that while exercising jurisdiction under Section 227 of the Code, the Magistrate should not make a roving enquiry into the pros and cons of the matter and weigh the evidence as if he was conducting a trial. This provision was introduced in the Code to avoid wastage of public time and to save the accused from unavoidable harassment and expenditure. While analyzing the role of the respondent herein (A-6) from the charge sheet and the materials supplied along with it, the above principles have to be kept in mind.

In Rupan Deol Bajaj (Mrs.) and Another vs. Kanwar Pal Singh Gill and Another, (1995) 6 SCC 194, this Court has considered the scope of quashing an FIR and held that it is settled principle of law that at the stage of quashing an FIR or complaint, the High Court is not justified in embarking upon an enquiry as to the probability, reliability or genuineness of the allegations made therein. By noting the principles laid down in State of Haryana vs. Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335, this Court held that an FIR or a complaint may be quashed if the allegations made therein are so absurd and inherently improbable that no prudent person can ever reach a just conclusion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding against the accused.

7. IN Mahavir Prashad Gupta and Another vs. State of National Capital Territory of Delhi and Others, (2000) 8 SCC 115, this Court considered the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 482 of the Code and held as under:

"5. The law on the subject is very clear. IN the case of State of Bihar v. Murad Ali Khan (1988) 4 SCC 655 it has been held that jurisdiction under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has to be exercised sparingly and with circumspection. It has been held that at an initial stage a court should not embark upon an inquiry as to whether the allegations in the complaint are likely to be established by evidence or not. Again in the case of State of Haryana v. Bhajan Lal 1992 Supp. (1) SCC 335 this Court has held that the power of quashing criminal proceedings must be exercised very sparingly and with circumspection and that too in the rarest of rare cases. It has been held that the court would not be justified in embarking upon an inquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR or the complaint. It has been held that the extraordinary or inherent powers did not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the court to act according to its whim or caprice. Regarding conspiracy, Mr. Raval, learned ASG after taking us through the averments in the charge sheet based reliance on a decision of this Court in Shivnarayan Laxminarayan Joshi and Others vs. State of Maharashtra, (1980) 2 SCC 465 wherein it was held that once the conspiracy to commit an illegal act is proved, act of one conspirator becomes the act of the other. By pointing out the same, learned ASG submitted that the respondent herein (A-6), along with the other conspirators defrauded the Bank 's money by sanctioning loans to various fictitious persons.

8. WE have already extracted the relevant allegations and the role of the respondent herein (A-6). The only allegation against the respondent is that he submitted false legal opinion to the Bank in respect of the housing loans in the capacity of a panel advocate and did not point out actual ownership of the properties. As rightly pointed out by Mr. Venkataramani, learned senior counsel for the respondent, the respondent was not named in the FIR. The allegations in the FIR are that A-1 to A-4 conspired together and cheated Vijaya Bank, Narayanaguda, Hyderabad to the tune of Rs. 1.27 crores. It is further seen that the offences alleged against A-1 to A-4 are the offences punishable under Sections 120B, 419, 420, 467, 468 and 471 of IPC and Section 13(2) read with Section 13 (1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988. It is not in dispute that the respondent is a practicing advocate and according to Mr. Venkataramani, he has experience in giving legal opinion and has conducted several cases for the banks including Vijaya Bank. As stated earlier, the only allegation against him is that he submitted false legal opinion about the genuineness of the properties in question. It is the definite stand of the respondent herein that he has rendered Legal Scrutiny Reports in all the cases after perusing the documents submitted by the Bank. It is also his claim that rendition of legal opinion cannot be construed as an offence. He further pointed out that it is not possible for the panel advocate to investigate the genuineness of the documents and in the present case, he only perused the contents and concluded whether the title was conveyed through a document or not. It is also brought to our notice that LW-5 (Listed Witness), who is the Law Officer of Vijaya Bank, has given a statement regarding flaw in respect of title of several properties. It is the claim of the respondent that in his statement, LW-5 has not even made a single comment as to the veracity of the legal opinion rendered by the respondent herein. In other words, it is the claim of the respondent that none of the witnesses have spoken to any overt act on his part or his involvement in the alleged conspiracy. Learned senior counsel for the respondent has also pointed out that out of 78 witnesses no one has made any relevant comment or statement about the alleged involvement of the respondent herein in the matter in question. In order to appreciate the claim and the stand of the respondent herein as a panel advocate, we have perused the legal opinion rendered by the respondent herein in the form of Legal Scrutiny Report dated 10.09.2003 as to the title relating to Sri B.A.V.K. Mohan Rao, S/o late Shri Someshwar Rao which is as under. 6-8 xxx xxx xxx 9. CERTIFICATE I am of the opinion that Shri NS Sanjeeva Rao is having clear marketable title by virtue of Regd. Sale Deed No. 1243/1980 dated 19.09.1980 referred document No. 5 of this opinion. He can convey a valid clear marketable title in favour of Shri BAVK Mohan Rao (applicant) in respect of the schedule property (referred under Item No. 3 of this opinion) by duly executing a Regd. Sale Deed in his favour. Shri BAVK Mohan Rao (applicant) can create a valid equitable mortgage with the Bank by depositing the original Regd. Sale deed executed in his by the vendors and also depositing all the documents as mentioned in the list in Item No. 2 of this opinion. Sanjeeva Rao in the office of sub-Registrar of Uppal, Hyderabad on 18.07.2003 and found that the sale transaction between parties, schedule property stamp papers, regd. Sale Deed No. 1243/1980 are genuine. The verification receipt is enclosed herewith. (K. NARAYANA RAO) ADVOCATE " The above particulars show that the respondent herein, as a panel advocate, verified the documents supplied by the Bank and rendered his opinion. It also shows that he was furnished with Xerox copies of the documents and very few original documents as well as Xerox copies of Death Certificate, Legal heir-ship Certificate, Encumbrance Certificate for his perusal and opinion. It is his definite claim that he perused those documents and only after that he rendered his opinion. He also advised the bank to obtain Encumbrance Certificate for the period from 21.04.2003 till date. It is pointed out that in the same way, he furnished Legal Scrutiny Reports in respect of other cases also. We have already mentioned that it is an admitted case of the prosecution that his name was not mentioned in the FIR. Only in the charge- sheet, the respondent has been shown as Accused No. 6 stating that he submitted false legal opinion to the Bank in respect of the housing loans in the capacity of a panel advocate and did not point out actual ownership of the properties in question.

9. MR. Venkataramani, learned senior counsel for the respondent submitted that in support of charge under Section 120B, there is no factual foundation and no evidence at all. Section 120A defines criminal conspiracy which reads thus:

"120A. Definition of criminal conspiracy.- When two or more persons agree to do, or cause to be done,- 1) an illegal act, or 2) an act which is not illegal by illegal means, such an agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy: Provided that no agreement except an agreement to commit an offence shall amount to a criminal conspiracy unless some act besides the agreement is done by one or more parties to such agreement in pursuance thereof. Explanation.- It is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement, or is merely incidental to that object. "

Section 120B speaks about punishment of criminal conspiracy. While considering the definition of criminal conspiracy, it is relevant to refer Sections 34 and 35 of IPC which are as under:

"34. Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention.- When a criminal act is done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone. " "35. When such an act is criminal by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention. - Whenever an act, which is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention, is done by several persons, each of such persons who joins in the act with such knowledge or intention is liable for the act in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone with that knowledge or intention. "

10. THE ingredients of the offence of criminal conspiracy are that there should be an agreement between the persons who are alleged to conspire and the said agreement should be for doing of an illegal act or for doing, by illegal means, an act which by itself may not be illegal. In other words, the essence of criminal conspiracy is an agreement to do an illegal act and such an agreement can be proved either by direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence or by both and in a matter of common experience that direct evidence to prove conspiracy is rarely available. Accordingly, the circumstances proved before and after the occurrence have to be considered to decide about the complicity of the accused. Even if some acts are proved to have committed, it must be clear that they were so committed in pursuance of an agreement made between the accused persons who were parties to the alleged conspiracy. Inferences from such proved circumstances regarding the guilt may be drawn only when such circumstances are incapable of any other reasonable explanation. In other words, an offence of conspiracy cannot be deemed to have been established on mere suspicion and surmises or inference which are not supported by cogent and acceptable evidence.

In the earlier part of our order, first we have noted that the respondent was not named in the FIR and then we extracted the relevant portions from the charge-sheet about his alleged role. Though statements of several witnesses have been enclosed along with the charge-sheet, they speak volumes about others. However, there is no specific reference to the role of the present respondent along with the main conspirators. The High Court while quashing the criminal proceedings in respect of the respondent herein has gone into the allegations in the charge sheet and the materials placed for his scrutiny and arrived at a conclusion that the same does not disclose any criminal offence committed by him. It also concluded that there is no material to show that the respondent herein joined hands with A-1 to A-3 for giving false opinion. In the absence of direct material, he cannot be implicated as one of the conspirators of the offence punishable under Section 420 read with Section 109 of IPC. The High Court has also opined that even after critically examining the entire material, it does not disclose any criminal offence committed by him. Though as pointed out earlier, a roving enquiry is not needed, however, it is the duty of the Court to find out whether any prima facie material available against the person who has charged with an offence under Section 420 read with Section 109 of IPC. In the banking sector in particular, rendering of legal opinion for granting of loans has become an important component of an advocate 's work. In the law of negligence, professionals such as lawyers, doctors, architects and others are included in the category of persons professing some special skills.

11. A lawyer does not tell his client that he shall win the case in all circumstances. Likewise a physician would not assure the patient of full recovery in every case. A surgeon cannot and does not guarantee that the result of surgery would invariably be beneficial, much less to the extent of 100% for the person operated on. The only assurance which such a professional can give or can be given by implication is that he is possessed of the requisite skill in that branch of profession which he is practising and while undertaking the performance of the task entrusted to him, he would be exercising his skill with reasonable competence. This is what the person approaching the professional can expect. Judged by this standard, a professional may be held liable for negligence on one of the two findings, viz., either he was not possessed of the requisite skill which he professed to have possessed, or, he did not exercise, with reasonable competence in the given case, the skill which he did possess.

In Jacob Mathew vs. State of Punjab and Anr. (2005) 6 SCC 1 this court laid down the standard to be applied for judging. To determine whether the person charged has been negligent or not, he has to be judged like an ordinary competent person exercising ordinary skill in that profession. It is not necessary for every professional to possess the highest level of expertise in that branch which he practices.

12. IN Pandurang Dattatraya Khandekar vs. Bar Council of Maharashtra & Ors. (1984) 2 SCC 556, this Court held that " ...there is a world of difference between the giving of improper legal advice and the giving of wrong legal advice. Mere negligence unaccompanied by any moral delinquency on the part of a legal practitioner in the exercise of his profession does not amount to professional misconduct. Therefore, the liability against an opining advocate arises only when the lawyer was an active participant in a plan to defraud the Bank. In the given case, there is no evidence to prove that A-6 was abetting or aiding the original conspirators.

However, it is beyond doubt that a lawyer owes an "unremitting loyalty " to the interests of the client and it is the lawyer 's responsibility to act in a manner that would best advance the interest of the client. Merely because his opinion may not be acceptable, he cannot be mulcted with the criminal prosecution, particularly, in the absence of tangible evidence that he associated with other conspirators. At the most, he may be liable for gross negligence or professional misconduct if it is established by acceptable evidence and cannot be charged for the offence under Sections 420 and 109 of IPC along with other conspirators without proper and acceptable link between them. It is further made clear that if there is a link or evidence to connect him with the other conspirators for causing loss to the institution, undoubtedly, the prosecuting authorities are entitled to proceed under criminal prosecution. Such tangible materials are lacking in the case of the respondent herein.

13. IN the light of the above discussion and after analysing all the materials, we are satisfied that there is no prima facie case for proceeding in respect of the charges alleged insofar as respondent herein is concerned. We agree with the conclusion of the High Court in quashing the criminal proceedings and reject the stand taken by the CBI.

14. IN the light of what is stated above, the appeal fails and the same is dismissed.

(A) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437, S.438 - BAIL - ANTICIPATORY BAIL - Criminal Miscellaneous Application before High Court for anticipatory bail - Withdrawn - Regular bail application filed before lower Court - Can be allowed - It is true that a petition being dismissed as withdrawn is also a dismissal, but if no merit has been touched by the Court in passing such dismissal order on account of withdrawal of the petition then in that case it could never be creating a situation under which the lower Courts could be said to have acted against the rejection order passed by the superior Court so as to allowing or refusing it. Even if the superior Courts touched upon the merits of the case while dismissing a petition under S. 438, Cr. P.C. it could not create a bar for any of the lower Courts to proceed to hear a petition for bail and direct the release of the accused from custody after consideration of all the facts and circumstances. (Para 20)

(B) Criminal P.C. (2 of 1974), S.437(5) - BAIL – Accused an advocate - Application for bail - Rejected by Magistrate - Copies for rejection order made available within few hours - On same day application for release on bail filed before Sessions Court - Such fact could not disentitle Sessions Judge to pass order allowing bail application - More so when applicant was advocate and to avoid revolt by members of bar, the order could have been passed - Moreover as the accused-applicant was an advocate, to avoid situation like the members of the Bar going up in arms and rising in revolt against the Judicial Officers as soon as one of their colleagues is either remanded to custody or is refused the prayer for bail the order for allowing bail could have been passed. It could have been one of the reasons for directing the release of the accused on the same day on which his prayer was rejected by the Chief Judicial Magistrate. (Para 17)

Where on the very date on which the prayer for bail was rejected by the Magistrate, the petition for bail was filed before the Sessions Court and the order for release the accused on bail was passed, the order was not liable to be set aside though this may not be a normal phenomenon obtained in all judgeships of the State that copies of rejection orders or petitions for bail were made available within a few hours and on the same day the orders were passed, but, that could hardly disentitle the Sessions Judge to entertain the petition and hear the same on the same day. There is no rule forbidding any Court to receive petitions on the very day on which a subordinate Court has passed an order. The practice might be otherwise only with a view not to causing discomfiture to the general litigants in presenting their petitions. The normal judicial behaviour do require uniformity and it was expected that the same uniformity would have been observed in the present case as well as the office of the Sessions Judge, but for that the Sessions Judge could not be faulted. Moreover as the accused-applicant was an advocate, to avoid situation like the members of the Bar going up in arms and rising in revolt against the Judicial Officers as soon as one of their colleagues is either remanded to custody or is refused the prayer for bail the order for allowing bail could have been passed. It could have been one of the reasons for directing the release of the accused on the same day on which his prayer was rejected by the Chief Judicial Magistrate. (Para 17)

R/o, Vasant Nagar, Pusad
Tah. Pusad, Dist. Yavatmal.

Sub. :- 1) Violation of Article 14 of the constitution of India in case of Smt. Kanimozi, Shahid Balwa etc in 2-G Scam and in case of Shri. Amar Singh in cash for vote scam, Shri Suresh Kalmadi and others in case of CWG scam, Shri Janardana Reddy of Karnataka & all citizens of India who did not get the bail inspite of clear directions from Hon'ble Supreme court in Siddharam Mehtre's case.

2) Appropriate directions to Union of India to formulate rules and making amendments in I.P.C. by making violation of constitution as cognizable non-bailable offence.

3) Filing of Writ Petition before Hon'ble Supreme Court for implementation and strict compliance of Article 14 of the constitution and law of precedents in its letter and spirit.

4) Granting compensation to the accused as per provision 18 (3) of the Human Rights Protection Act 1993 for violation of their fundamental human rights.

5) Direction to appropriate authority to initiate action against counsel for C.B.I. for not following the directions of Hon'ble Supreme Court and also for not bringing to the notice of Court the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court.

6) Appropriate action against Adv. Prashant Bhushan and Mr. Arvind Kejriwal for their unconstitutional acts.

Respondents :-

1) Union of India through appropriate Authority.

2) Director, Central Bureau of Investigation North Block, New Delhi.

3) Adv. Uday Lalit
Senior Counsel,
Supreme court of India.

4) Adv. Prashant Bhushan
Advocate Supreme Court of India.

5) Shri Arvind Kejriwal
Member, India Fights against Corruption.

6) Registrar General
High Court of Delhi.

Hon'ble Sir

1) The petitioner is a social activist and National Secretary of the Human Rights Security Council (NGO)

2) The organization is working for the awareness of the Fundamental Rights as Guaranteed by our constitution and thereby serving the nation.

3) From many days we are watching the cases relating to the 2 G and CWG scam. As being patriot citizen I am of the firm view that the guilty should punished. If the offence is proved in the court to the effect that accused have defrauded the nation then they should be severely punished but for that purpose the condition precedent is that they should be proved guilty the competent court of law. (Vide 2011 AIR SC (Criminal) 897 State of M.P. Vs. Ramesh)

4) It is Constitutional mandate as guaranteed by Article 19, 21 of our constitution is that no person shall be deprived of his life and liberty except under due process of the law.

5) To safeguard this fundamental human rights National Human Rights Commission is formed in India also Hon'ble high Courts have power of Suo-motu cognizance.

6) But to the surprise that the gross violation of fundamental rights of the accused in 2G scam and in CWG scam and that of various citizens is not been noticed by any one.

7) The settled principle of law and violation, discrimination of it in case of above accused is capulized as under.

8) As per our constitutional mandate and criminal Justice System it is mandatory presumption that, "Every accused is innocent unless proved guilty by the competent court" (2011 AIR SC (Criminal) 897)

9) So far as the law of bail is concerned it is settled by catena of judgements that the bail is rule and jail is exception.

10) As per the landmark judgement of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Joginder Kumar's case 1994 SCC, National Human Rights Commission have framed 'Guidelines Regarding Arrest' A copy of which is also enclosed herewith at Annexure – A.

Where it has been laid down that except in heinous crimes like murder, rape, dacoity arrest should be avoided and investigation can be done by issuing notice to the accused.

11) The above law is now been modified in humanitarian aspect more efficiently in the case of Siddharam Mehetre Vs. State of Maharashtra 2011 (1) SCC (Cri) 514, where, after taking in to consideration the Joginder Kumar's case (Supra) and all the settled principles of law Hon'ble Supreme Court granted anticipatory bail in murder case (section 302 of I.P.C.). Hon'ble Supreme Court also suggested some guidelines for investigating agency to follow. These guidelines are.

> "[Para 107] In case, the State considers the folio-wing suggestions in proper perspective then perhaps it may not be necessary to curtail the personal liberty of the accused in a routine manner. These suggestions are only illustrative and not exhaustive:
> (1) Direct the accused to join the investigation and only when the accused does not cooperate with the investigating agency, then only the accused be arrested.
>
> (2) Seize either the passport or such other related documents, such as, the title deeds of properties or the fixed deposit receipts/share certificates of the accused.
>
> (3) Direct the accused to execute bonds.
> (4) The accused may be directed to furnish sureties of a number of persons which according to the > prosecution are necessary in view of the facts of the particular case.

> (5) The accused be directed to furnish undertaking that he would not visit the place where the witnesses reside so that the possibility of tampering of evidence or otherwise influencing the course of justice be avoided……(etc)

12) It is settled principle of law that even obitor dicta of the Supreme Court is also binding on all courts in India in absence of direct pronouncement on the subject by Supreme Court [Jinraj Paper Udyog Pvt. Ltd. Vs. Dinesh Associates 2009 ALL MR (Cri) 89]

13) It is also settled law that there should be equality before law and equal protection of law. This law is specifically incorporated in the Article 14 of the constitution. Therefore when Mr. Siddharam Mehetre was granted anticipatory bail by Hon'ble Supreme Court in serious charge of murder then the accused in 2-G scam and CWG Scam and all other citizens must be granted bail by the trial court or by the High Court.

In, Arunachalam Swami -Vs- State AIR 1956 Bombay 695 held that,

> "(para 4) Mr. Kavelkar is right when he urges that Article 14 assures to the citizen equality not only in respect of a substantive law but also procedural law, and if any procedure is set up which deprives a citizen of substantive rights of relief and defence the citizen is entitled to complain of this procedure if two persons equally situated the older procedure is still available where these substantive rights of relief and defence were secured. "

14) Moreover, the matter of worth mention is that the cases where Ex-Supreme Court Judges are accused and Charge-sheeted by C.B.I. are not arrested nor sent to jail but on similar allegations of corruption the other accused are sent to jail. This is a clear violation of Article 14 of the constitution.

In recent landmark Judgement in the case of Rathinam Vs. State 2011 (3) SCC (Cri) III it has been observed by Hon'ble Supreme Court that the Court should not be influenced by the gravity of the charges but he should act only on the legal evidence and law in that regard.

It has been held that,

> 23. We must, however, understand that a particularly foul crime imposes a greater caution on the court which must resist the tendency to look beyond the file, and the insinuation that the rich are always the aggressors and the poor always the victims, is too broad and conjectural a supposition. It has been emphasised repeatedly by this Court that a dispassionate assessment of the evidence must be made and that the Court must not be swayed by the horror of the crime or the character of the accused and that the judgment must not be clouded by the facts of the case. In Kashmira Singh v. State ofM.P.[1] it was observed as under: (AIR p. 160, para 2)
> "2. The murder was a particularly cruel and revolting one and for that reason it will be necessary to examine the evidence with more man ordinary care lest the shocking nature of the crime induce an instinctive reaction against a dispassionate-judicial scrutiny of the facts and law."
>
> 24. Likewise in Ashish Batham v. State of M.P.[2] it was observed thus: (SCC p. 327, para 8)
> "8. Realities or truth apart, the fundamental and basic presumption in the administration of criminal law and justice delivery system is the innocence of the alleged accused and till the charges are proved beyond reasonable doubt on the basis of clear, cogent, credible or unimpeachable evidence, the question of indicting or punishing an accused does not arise, merely carried away by the heinous nature of the crime or the gruesome manner in which it was found to have been committed.

Mere suspicion, however strong or probable it may be is no effective substitute for the legal proof required to substantiate the charge of commission of a crime and graver the charge is, greater should be the standard of proof required. Courts dealing with criminal cases at least should constantly remember that "there is a long mental distance between 'may be true' and 'must be true' and this basic and golden rule only helps to maintain the vital distinction between 'conjectures' and 'sure conclusions' to be arrived at on the touchstone of a dispassionate judicial scrutiny based upon a complete and comprehensive appreciation of all features of the case as well as quality and credibility of the-evidence brought on record."

Consistency is necessary to maintain certainity in Law :-

Moreover in the case of Abhay Singh Chautala Vs. CBI 2001 (3) SCC (Cri) 1 Hon'ble Supreme court held that the case Laws/Precedents which stood the time for long years should not be disturbed.

It has been held that,

35. There is one more reason, though not a major one, for not disturbing the law settled in Antulay case[2]-. That decision has stood the test of time for last over 25 years and it is trite that going as per the maxim stare decisis et non quieta movere, it would be better to stand by that decision and not to disturb what is settled. This rule of interpretation was approved of by Lord Coke who suggested—"those things which have been so often adjudged ought to rest in peace". This Court in Shanker Raju v. Union of India[22], confirmed this view while relying on the decision in Tlverton Estates Ltd. v. Wearwell Ltd.[23] and more particularly, the observations of Scarman, L.J., while not agreeing with the view of Lord Denning, M.R. about the desirability of not accepting previous decisions. The observations are to the following effect: (Shanker Raju case[22], SCC p. 142, para 17)

*"77. ... '... I decline to accept his lead only because I think it is damaging to the law in the long term—though it would undoubtedly do justice in the present case. To some it will appear that justice is being denied by a timid, conservative, adherence to judicial precedent. They would be wrong. Consistency is necessary to certainty—one of the great objectives of law.'

The Court also referred to the following other cases: Woman Rao v. Union of India[24], Manganese Ore (India) Ltd. v. CST[25], Ganga Sugar Corpn. Ltd. v. State of U.P.[26], Union of India v. Raghubir Singh[21], Krishena Kumar v. Union of India[2], Union of India v. Paras Laminates (P) Ltd.[29] and lastly, Hari Singh v. State of Haryana[30].*

15) But till today the accused are in Jail and they are denied bail even by Higher Courts is clear violation of their fundamental rights.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in Hari Singh's case (1999 SCC) laid down that the Courts of Co-ordinate jurisdiction should have consistent opinion on the identical question of law if this procedure is not followed then instead of achieving judicial harmony it will lead to judicial anarchy. And the person approaching the different courts should get different orders.

[Shri Srinivas cut piece cloth shop Vs. State 2004 ALL MR (Cri) 1802].

16) It may be argued by some of the Judges that they are having discretion in granting or denying bail. In fact it is illegal to have such an issue because the discretion is not arbitrary but it has to be exercised judicially and should be guided by the sound principles of the law. When the case Law is clear then there is no discretion to lower Courts.

The Judge/Magistrate who exercise discretion are expected to bear in mind that

"Discretion when applied to a court of justice, means sound discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule, not by humour, it must not be arbitrary, vague and fanciful, but legal and regular"

[Tinqlev-vs- Dalby, 14 NW 146]

"An appeal to a Judgejs discretion is an appeal to his judicial conscience. The discretion must be exercised, not in opposition to, but in accordance with established principles of law."

Gudianti Narsimha -Vs- Public Prosecutor. High Court 1978 Cri. L.J. 502.

"The Judge, even when he is free, is still not wholly free. He is not to innovate at pleasure He is not a Knight - errant roaming at will in pursuit of his own ideal of beauty or of goodness. He is to draw his inspiration from consecrated principles. He is not to yield to spasmodic sentiment to vague and unregulated benevolence. He is to exercise a discretion informed by tradition, methodized by analogy, disciplined by system, and subordinated to 'the primordial necessity or order in the social life.

The Nature of the Judicial Process - Benjamin Cardozo, Yale University press (1921)]

17) The law of Precedent is also clear in this regard. Rule of precedent is an important aspect of legal certainty in the rule of law. It is an accepted precept of law. It is an accepted precept of administration of justice to follow rule of ratio decidendi. In India the rule of precedent is given strict meaning. The law laid down by Supreme Court be followed even by Co-ordinate benches with all its rigours. It is a principle of great significance in the system of administration of justice. One of the essential rudiments of law of precedent is consistency in the judicial decision making.

"The doctrine of binding precedent has the merit of promoting a certainty and consistency in judicial decisions, and enables an organic development of the law, besides providing assurance to the individual as the consequence of transactions forming part of his daily affairs. And, therefore, the need for a clear and consistent enunciation of legal principle in the decisions of a court."

Union of India Vs. Raghubir Singh
1989 (2) SCC 754

(90) "We are distressed to note that despite several pronouncements on the subject, there is substantial increase in the number of cases involving violation of the basics of judicial discipline. The learned Single Judges and Benches of the High Courts refuse to follow and accept the verdict and law laid down by coordinate and even larger Benches by citing minor difference in the facts as the ground for doing so. Therefore, it has become necessary to reiterate that disrespect to the constitutional ethos and breach of discipline have grave impact on the credibility of judicial institution and encourages chance litigation. It must be remembered that predictability and certainty is an important hallmark of judicial jurisprudence developed in this country in the last six decades and increase in the frequency of conflicting judgments of the superior judiciary will do incalculable harm to the system inasmuch as the courts at the grass roots will not be able to decide as to which of the judgments lay down the correct law and which one should be followed.

Official Liquidator Vs. Dayanand
(2008) 10 SCC 1

"The rule of per incuriam can be applied where a court omits to consider a binding precedent of the same court or the superior court rendered on the same issue or where a court omits to consider any statute while deciding that issue."

Govt. of A.P. Vs. B. Satyanarayana Rao (2000) 4 SCC 262

But in the present case the law of precedent is not followed in their proper perspectives, either by the investigating agency or by the courts.

The act on behalf of I.O. and others "We do not care", seems as an affront to the Judicial system as a whole and law declared by Hon'ble Supreme, Court. This cavalier fashion and contemptuous attitude of not obeying the law with regard to judicial administration is gross contempt. It would erode the dignity of the court and even corrode the majesty of it besides impairing the confidence of the public in the efficacy of the institution of the courts.

18) In catena of decisions and more particularly in the case of 2005 ALL MR (Cri) Journal 12 it has been laid down that the pretrial detention could only be for the purpose of helping the investigation and not as a punishment because the accused are not even give chance to defence and directly sending them to put their Jail Placing reliance on the submission of prosecuting agency as a gospel truth is gross violation of fundamental rights and offending the constitutional mandate.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Siddharam Mehetre's case Supra Specifically observed that the rate of Conviction is less than 10% then police should be slow in arresting the accused it has further been observed that as per the National Police Commission's Report it has been revealed that nearly 60% arrest are unjustified and the power of arrest is one of the chief source of corruption by police. It is also made clear by Hon'ble Apex Court that there is no requirement that accused must make out a 'Special Case' for exercise of power for anticipatory bail.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case Sami Ullah Vs. Suprentendant 2008 (4) B. Cr. C. 716 (SC) speciafically held that when two views are possible in respect of commission of crime then view which leans in favour of accused must be favoured.

Moreover as per our constitutional provision in Article 20 (3) of the constitution of India, the accused has a right of silence till the end of the trial. [Nandini Satpathy Vs. P.I. Dani 1978 SCC (2) 424] Secondly the police cannot exert pressure on the accused to give answers which may goes against the accused. Even mental torture is violative of fundamental rights [Arvinder Singh Bagga Vs. State AIR 1995 SC 117]. Thirdly the accused is entitled to have a legal advisor with him even during the period of remand. [State Vs. Navjot Siddhu 2005 ALL MR (Cri) 2805 (SC)]. Fourthly for the purpose of recovery accused need not be in police custody [Harsh –Sawhney Vs. Union Territory AIR 1978 SC 1016]

Hence there is no use of PCR or MCR and it is nothing but means of harassment by the police. Therefore the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Siddharam Mehre's case (Supra) is the perfect law and right interpretation of the intent of legislature.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in Arvinder Singh Bagga's case (AIR 1995 SC 117) held as follows,

> "(4).....Torture is not merely physical there may be mental torture and psychological torture calculated to create fright and submission to the demands or commands. When the threats proceed from person in authority and that too by a police officer the mental torture caused by it is even more grave.(A) On a perusal of all the above, we are very pained to note that such things should happen in a country which is still governed by the rule of law. We cannot but express our strong displeasure and disapproval of conduct of the concerned police officers. Therefore, we issue the following direction
> (1) The State of Uttar Pradesh will to take immediate steps to launch prosecution against all the police officers involved in this affair.

> (2) The state shall pay a compensation of Rs. 10,000/- to Nidhi Rs. 10,000/- to Charanjit Singh Bagga and Rs. 5,000/- to each of the other persons who were illegally detained and humiliated for no fault of theirs. Time for making payment will be three months from the date of this judgment. Upon such payment it will be open to the state to recover personally the amount of compensation from the concerned police officers.

19) Strict compliance of law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court is binding on all Courts in India and even if the High Court did not follow it then the High Court Judge is also guilty of contempt of Court (Vide : Rabindra Nath Singh Vs. Rajesh R. Yadav 2010 (3) SCC (Cri) 165)

20) Why the above law is required to be settled is the part of our constitutionals rights. But also it has been proved from various cases that how the criminal justice system is misused by the Police Officers & Judges for ulterior purposes out of the thousands and lakhs of examples I would like to quote two classic example where the accused were charged of 'X' person in fact that 'X' person was found to be alive.

These two landmark Judgements are :

Darshan Singh Vs. State 1985 Cri. L.J. (NOC) 71 (DB)

So it will be very dangerous to put any person behind the bar on the basis of police papers which are not been cross-examined in the light of defence version. Non followance of the law of precedent gives room for corruption in the head of discretion. Moreover the poor people are not able to go to higher courts every time.

21) The another serious issue which I would like to raise is the working of C.B.I. in partisian manner. As per the Shangalu committee's report the Chief Minister of Delhi Smt. Sheela Dixit is also involved in CWG scam but she is not made accused by the C.B.I. In 2G scam Neera Radia & others were not prosecuted even if they are liable to be prosecuted as per provisions of section 120 (B) of I.P.C. Therefore in view of law of parity all the accused are liable to be discharged from the charges.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of State of M.P. Vs. Sheetla Sahai & ors 2010 ALL SCR 980 upholding the acquittal under Prevention of Corruption Act held that the proceedings in 'Pick & Choose' manner is indicative of lack of bonafides of prosecution and makes prosecution being illegal. It has been held that;

> "(56) It is interesting no notice that the prosecution had proceeded against the officials in a pick and choose manner. We may notice the following statements made in the counter-affidavit which had not been denied or disputed to show that not only those accused who were in office for a very short time but also those who had retired long back before the file was moved for the purpose of obtaining clearance for payment of additional amount from the government, viz., M.N. Nadkami who worked as Chief Engineer till 24.03.1987 and S. W. Mohogaonkar, Superintending Engineer who worked till 19.06.1989 have been made accused but, on the other hand, those who were one way or the other connected with the decision, viz., Shri J.R. Malhotra and Mr. R.D. Nanhoria have not been proceeded at all. We fail to understand on what basis such a discrimination was made.
> (57) In Soma Chakravarty, [(2007) 5 SCC 403 : [2007 ALL MR (Cri) 1707 (S.C.)] (supra), whereupon strong reliance has been placed by Mr. Tulsi, this Court opined :
> 23. In a case of this nature, the learned Special Judge also should have considered the question having regard to the "doctrine of parity" in mind. An accused similarly situated has not been proceeded against only because, the departmental proceedings ended in his favour. Whether an accused before him although stands on a similar footing despite he having not been > departmentally proceeded against or had not been completely exonerated also required to be considered. If exoneration in a departmental proceeding is the basis for not framing a charge against an accused person who is said to be similarly situated, the question which requires a further consideration was as to whether the applicant before it was similarly situated or not and/or whether the exonerated officer in the departmental proceeding also faced same charges including the charge of being a party to the larger conspiracy. "

In the another Judgment while quashing the FIR and proceeding under Prevention of Corruption Act, Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Baijnath Jha Vs. Sitaram and others 2008(3) SCC (Cri) 428 held that,

> "8. The backgrounds clearly show that the proceedings instituted were mala fide, based on vague assertions and were initiated with mala fide intents and constitute shee abuse of process of law. No reason was shown before the High Court as to why the complainant chose not to proceed against one of the four persons initially named. The cases at hand fit in with Category (7) of Bhajan Lai Case. "

Hence on this ground of picking and choosing of accused the case of prosecution is vitiated and liable to be quashed.

22) The second illegality is misuse of machinery to harass the political opponents. The partisan manner of C.B.I. can be seen from the very fact that in, the case of 'Adarsh Society Scam' the C.B.I. does not think it necessary to arrest the Ex-Chief Minister Shri. Ashok Chavan and on the other hand they hushed up to arrest the leaders of non ruling party as in Karnataka they arrested Shri. Janardhan Reddy. Hence it is necessary that the C.B.I. should be called to give explanation for their violation of Article 14 of the constitution of India and acting in a partisan and one – sided manner. Further more the guilty officer should be prosecuted.

23) The another violation done by the investigating agency is regarding their one sided investigation. It is settled principle of law that investigation should be done from both the angles. If the defence version of the accused is probable and acceptable the I.O. is bound to verify it and should place the truth before the Court.

(1) Investigation - Fair investigation is expected from the prosecution - It is to be carried out not only from the stand of the prosecution but also the defence, because onus of proof may shift to the accused at a latter stage.

2007 ALL MR (Cri.) 555 (S. C.)

(2) 1990 Cri. L. l. 2257

One sided investigation Failure to investgate Plea of accused - A dishonest, unfair or one sided investigation would, therefore, violate the constitutional guarantee and justify interfence by a court of Law. (Para 3,4,5)

Simply because the investigation offecer does not conduct full, fair and independant investigation the accused cannot be required to go through the formality of trial and get acquitted by putting the entire material on record by way of defence.

To put an accused person to long lasting trial on an incomplete and one sided investigation and promise to consider full facts only when they are brought before the court at the defence stage amounts ignoring default of the 1.0. and clothe him with to authority to harass such a person. It may even amount to judicial sanction of substitution of rule of law by the Police Raj and subversion of our constitutional ideals. These Consequences deserve notice of the

Additional Sessions judge while interpreting the his own authority and jurisdiction in the matter. 1990 Cri. L. I. 2257

But in almost all the cases the C.B.I. and others are not following these guidelines and only in case of rich and influential persons and in rarest rare cases they are discharging the accused. There can be no case where any poor should get the justice in such system therefore it is necessary that the uniform application of law should be followed.

Hon'ble Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar's vision that the citizen's of India should get equal justice irrespective of their wealth, power, cast etc is not followed in their right perspective therefore it is necessary that the violation of constitution should be made as cognizable and non-bailable offence.

So it is necessary that Hon'ble National Human Rights Commission may pass appropriate directions to standing Committee of parliament to formulate the "Strong Jan Lokpal Bill' but in conformity with the basis laws of Human Rights.

24) Whether National Human Rights commission is having jurisdiction to entertain the petition alleging violation fundamental rights of the citizen at the hands of Courts is the question no more res integra. Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Ramdev Chauhan Vs. Banikant AIR 2011 SC (Criminal) 31 specifically made it clear that where party is denied protection of any law to which he is entitled even by Courts of law the Human Rights Commission is having jurisdiction to enquire it.

25) Illegality on the part of Adv. Uday Lalit Spl. Counsel appointed by the Supreme Court :-

In the 2G Scam Hon'ble Supreme Court appointed, Mr. Uday Lalit as special counsel for prosecution. It is not doubt that the decision is highly appreciable and whole country appreciated the firm stand taken by Hon'ble Supreme Court against the corruption. As far as Mr. Lalit is concerned, he is highly talented, genius, sober and good advocate to present the prosecution's case. The only illegality which is committed by him is regarding the withholding of authorities of Hon'ble Supreme Court from the trial Court when the accused applied for bail.

In E.S. Raddi Vs. The Chief Secretary 1987 (3) SCC 258 Hon'ble Supreme Court observed the duties of the senior Counsel some of the portion of para is as follows :

> As an officer of the Court concerned in the administration of justice, he has an overriding duty to the Court, to the standards of his profession, and to the public, which may and often does lead to a conflict with his client's wishes or with what the client thinks are his personal interests. Counsel must not mislead the Court, he must not lend himself to casting aspersions on the other party or witnesses for which there is no sufficient basis in the information in his possession, he must not withhold authorities or documents which may tell against his clients but which the law or the standards of his profession require him to produce. By so acting he may well incur the displeasure or worse of his lost his client would or might seek legal redress if that were open to him.

It has also been laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court that arguing the case before court on basis of overruled citation is a falling standard of professional ethics.

[2004 ALL MR (Cri) 3421 (SC)]

The law of bail is much clear in the case of Siddharam Mehatre's case (2011) (Supra).

Moreover as per the ratio laid down by 3-Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Chandraswami Vs. C.B.I. 1997 Cri. L.J. , it has been made clear that whenever the accused appears or brought before the court and offence committed by him is not punishable for death or life then the accused normally entitled to be released on bail.

That being the position of the law then it was expected from C.B.I. and more particularly from the advocate like Uday Lalit that he should have brought this legal position to the notice of the Court and fairly contended that the accused entitled to be released on bail however appropriate conditions may be imposed. As being counsel of prosecutor what he can do that he should have made strong efforts for early disposal of the case and nothing more. Moreover in case of Smt. Kanimozi, Shri Amar Singh the I.O. does not feel to arrest them.

However we do not think that action should be taken against Mr. Lalit, but something should be done which can meets the ends of justice and that a massage should go to the public prosecutors.

26) Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Capt. Amrinder Singh Vs. Prakash Singh Badal 2009 (3) Crimis 174 (SC) specifically laid down that the public prosecutor should not act merely on the dictates of the state but he should act fairly and place truth before the court as he is also an officer of the Court.

Hon'ble High Court in the case of Harsha Sisodia Vs. State 2010 ALL MR (Cri) Journal 209 held that;

> "9. It is the duty of the State to protect the life and properties of its citizens and to prevent the crime and punish the accused in accordance with law. As a part of criminal justice delivery system, the Courts have been established and the Public Prosecutors have been appointed to assist the courts in conducting trials and other criminal proceedings. The Public Prosecutors and the Advocates are the officers of the court. They have to assist the Court and place all the facts before the court. The Public Prosecutors must present the facts without any bias and without undue emphasis on any aspect of the case leaving the decision to the court. They have to act independently and in the interest of justice. The Public Prosecutors are not the representatives of the investigating officers and the investigating agency. When a defect in the investigation or in the prosecutioin case is noticed by Public Prosecutor, it is his duty to bring the same to the notice of the court. They have to make fair submissions with regard to the facts and circumstances of the case and also legal position. In Vijay Valia's case 1988 Cri.L.J. 2093, it was held as follows:

"The role of the prosecutor in any criminal trial (whether at the instance of the State or of a private party) is to safeguard the interests of both the Complainant and the accused. The right to be heard includes the right to be represented by an able spokesman of one's confidence. This right belongs to the Complainant and to the accused, both. The Complainant also needs assistance. The prosecutor is bound by law and professional ethics and by his role as an officer of court to employ only fair measures. Hence, it cannot be said that when Special Public Prosecutors are appointed, whether paid by the state or private party, the trial must be presumed to be biased.

Hon'ble High Court in the case of Seethalakshmi -Vs- State 1991 Cri.L.J. 1037 held that,

"161 This Court has on several occasions pointed out that affidavits should not be treated in a light-hearted fashion and prepared in a hap-hazard manner. Every litigant should understand that an affidavit is a sworn statement and it takes the place of deposition. Responsibility of Government officials is much more in this regard. Their affidavits are not intended fust to point out the flaws in the case of the opponent. Their affidavits should always place all the facts before the Court whether such facts would support the contention of the Government in the case or not."

27) The another important aspect is regarding non-supply of the copy of order when bail is rejected. In this regard the law/ratio/guidelines laid down by Hon'ble Kerala High Court in the case of Usman Vs. State 2003 Cri. L.J. 3928 may kindly be taken in to consideration and be followed throughout the country.

28) Illegalities committed by Mr. Arvind Kejriwal and Mr. Prashant Bhushan :-

As discussed earlier the law is very clear that every accused should be presumed innocent unless he is proved guilty by the competent court. [2011 AIR SC (cri) 897]. The above arguments are advanced by Adv. Prashant Bhushan and Adv. Shanti Bhushan in many cases. More particularly Mr. Shanti Bhushan himself represented the case of Siddharam Mehtre (Supra)] where the anticipatory bail was granted to the accused in murder case.

On the contrary in the interview given in 'Aap ki Adalat' anchored by Mr. Rajat Sharma on 2/09/2011, Mr. Arvind Kejriwal made a categorical Statement that "The parties should ensure that they should not give party tickets to the person against whom cases are filed." It has also been asserted by him that there are around 150 MPS in the a parliament against whom serious criminal cases are pending.

Mr. Kejriwal was sitting along with Adv. Prashant Bhushan and there was implied admission and support of Mr. Prashant Bhushan to Mr. Kejriwal. This is highly condemnable. Moreover the Arvind Kejriwal is now posing himself to be member of team of Hon'ble Shri. Anna Hazare then he is expected to act with more care and caution. He should not have made such a unconstitutional and irresponsible statement.

It seems that Mr. Arvind Kejriwal is having half backed knowledge of the law and he is going to influence the people, investigation machinery and justice delivery system by way of such unconstitutional arguments. His submission with impact of media is the main ground for rejection of bail of Smt. Kanimozi, A-Raja, Janardan Reddi, Suresh Kalmadi and other citizens of India.

Even otherwise their double standard game can be seen from the fact that they themselves accepted the mediation of Shri. Vilasrao Deshmukh who himself is accused in 'Adarsha Society Scam'

Hence it is necessary that Mr. Arvind Kejriwal and Adv. Prashant Bhushan should be dealt for their unconstitutional arguments, and Hon'ble National Human Rights Commission should take appropriate action against them by imposing heavy penalty.

29) So far as the intention of Hon'ble Shri Anna Hazare is concerned. Whole nation is thankful to their work who ignited the nationality in our citizens and lined up the Mission For Corruption Free India.

However, as Gandhiji said, 'The aim should also not be the good, but the way of achieving good aim should also be good.' Therefore it is necessary that the corruption free India mission" should go through the paths of our constitution and Laws of Human Rights.

30) Need for the prosecution of Judges not following the law uniformly. :-

Hon'ble Supreme Court in Re: M.P. Dwivedi AIR 1996 SC 2299 (Medha Patkar's case) punished the Trial Judge under contempt of court Act, because he failed to discharge his judicial duty to safeguard the Fundamental rights of the accused.

As the tendency in the lower judiciary and in bureaucracy is increasing to subvert the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme court and to stick to their own either due to Judicial indifference or for corrupt the assures stand therefore it is necessary that stern action is required to be taken against the concerned Judges and Magistrates which will be deterrent to others also.

Moreover it will be misappropriation of public funds to make huge payment of 70,000 to a person as Judge of Court of law, who does not know the law or having half backed knowledge of the law.

There are following cases where the Judges are dealt sternly.

However it is sad to say that the judges violating the fundamental rights and sending accused to jail illegally are never sent to jail as per section 220 of the I.P.C.

a) Wrong interpretation of Supreme Court's order is contempt of Court. Promote Telecom Engineers Forum Vs. D.S. Mathur 2008 ALL SCR 2320.

b) Sessions Judge acted in violation of Supreme Court order -Supreme Court issued Severe Reprimand - Copy of order forwarded to disciplinary committee for further action against said Judge.

AIR 2001 SC 1975

31) The violation of Article 14 of the constitution and unequal treatment to the accused of different category can also be seen from the examples of accused from higher judiciary. In the case of P.F. scam the Supreme Court Judges Viz. Tarun Chaterjee and others were accused. When they were charge sheeted by the C.B.I. then the trial court did not send them to jail as has been done in the case of Smt. Kanimozi, Shri. Amar Singh & others.

The Judges have no immunity from prosecution and they can be dealt as that of any citizen of India [Vide Hon'ble Supreme court 5-Judge Bench) in the case of K. Veerswami Vs. Union of India 1991 (3) SCC 655.

32) The following extracts of some of the landmark judgements of Hon'ble Supreme Court is required to be circulated to all the police officers, Government pleaders and Magistrate.

Hon'ble Supreme Court (3 Judge Bench) in the case of Nandinisatpathy -Vs- P.I. Dani 1978 SCC 121 424 had given specific law regarding Punishment to Police Officers who defy the lawful order of the Court.

It has been held that.

"(17.) Before discussing the core issues we wish to note our regret, in this case, at a higher level police officer, ignorantly insisting on a woman appearing at the police station, in flagrant contravention of the whole-some proviso to Section 160 (1) of the Cr. P.C. Such deviance must be idsited with prompt punishment since policemen may not be a law unto themselves expecting others to obey the law. The wages of indifference is reprimand, of transigence disciplinary action. If the alibi is that the Sessions Court had directed to accused to appear at the police station, that is no absolution for a police officer from disobedience of the law. There is public policy, not complimentary to the police personnel, behind this legislative proscription which keeps juveniles and females from police company except at the former's safe residence. May be, in later years, community confidence and consciousness will regard the police force as entitled to better trust and soften the stigmatizing or suspicious provisions not writ across the code.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Bijav Kuma Mohanty -Vs- Jadu 2002 STPL (LE Crim) 27377 laid down that,

"(1) Police officers are supposed to be members of a disciplined force it is of utmost importance to curb any tendency in them to flout orders of the court. It is more so when flouting of order results in deprivation of personal liberty of an individual. If protector of law to take revenge, defy court orders they will have to be sternly dealt with and appropriate punishment inflicted also with a view to send a message across the board that such an act cannot be countenanced."

(b) Tainted and biased Investigation :-

Investigation by complainant Police officer himself is illegal. The complainant is expected to seek material in support of his complaint and if he himself was investigation independent investigation would be jeopardized :

2001 Cri. L.J. NOC 75 (A.P.)

1976 Cri. L.J. 713 (S.C.)

(c) When investigation is tainted and biased causing serious prejudice to the parties then it is vitiated and liable to be quashed is vitiated and liable to be quashed – Null and void. [Babubhai Vs. State 2011 (1) SCC (Cri) 336]

In view of guidelines of Hon hie Supreme Court and in view of provision of Sec. 50 of Cr. P.C. It is mandatory for Police to give details of allegation against accused in writing. Full Bench of Hon'ble High Court in the case of Selvanathan @ Raghavan -Vs- State 1988 Mad LW fCri) 503 (FB) specifically laid down that the accused is entitled to get copy of F.I.R. at the time of arrest itself.

Taking Suo motu note of such illegality Hon'ble High court in the recent judgement of Court on its own Motion -Vs- state 2011 Cri. L.J. 1347 (DB) passed some guidelines for state of Delhi. The same guidelines are required to be given to police in entire country

> Moreover, where there is a clash of two Fundamental Rights, as in the instant case, 'namely the appellant's right to privacy as part of right to life and Ms. 'Y' 'S' right to lead a healthy life which is her Fundamental Right under Article 21, the RIGHT which would advance the public morality or public interest, would alone be enforced through the process of Court, for the reason that moral consideration's cannot be kept at bay and the Judges are not expected to sit as mute structures of clay, in the Hall, Known as Court Room, but have to be sensitive, "in the sense that they must keep their fingers firmly upon the pulse of the accepted morality of the day " (See : Legal Duties : Allen)

33) Media Trial :- Hon'ble Supreme Court in M.P. Lohiya's case 2005 Cri. L.J. 1416. Specifically observed that when the matter is subjudice then there could be no media trial. This is contempt of court and also against the constitutional mandate. Hon'ble High Court in the case of 2005 ALL MR (Cri) Journal 143 Specifically prohibited the media persons to take interview of the accused. (D.N. Prasad Vs. Principal Secretary to the State)

It has been held that,

> 8. The scope of the right of a News Agency, or News Reporter, to interview the persons, who are facing criminal charges, fell for consideration by the Courts in the recent past. A distinction has been maintained between the right to interview the persons, who are already convicted of offences and are serving sentences, on the one hand, and those who are facing charges, but yet to be convicted, on the other hand. In the former category of cases, a relatively liberal approach was adopted and permissions were accorded to interview them, so that the society at large would be appraised of the feelings of the convict, or the factors that led to his conviction, and the like. Reference, in this context, may be made to the judgments of the Supreme Court in Prabha Dutt Vs. Union of India, (1982)1 SCC 1. While granting permission to interview two individuals, who were sentenced to death; the Supreme Court made the following observations :
>
> ".....The Press is entitled to exercise its freedom of speech and expression by publishing a matter which does not invade the rights of other citizens and which does not violate the sovereignty and integrity of India, the security of the State, public order, decency and morality. But in the instant case, the right claimed by the petitioner is not the right to express any particular view or opinion but the right to means of information through the medium of an interview of the two prisoners who are sentenced to death. No such right can be claimed by the Press, unless in the first instance, the person sought to be interviewed is willing to be interviewed. The existence of a free Press does not imply or spell out any legal obligation on the citizens to supply information to the Press, such, for example, as there is under Section 161(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code...."
> 9. In the latter category of cases, the approach has been further cautious and careful. The reason is that any information touching upon the involvement or innocence of a person accused in a crime, even while the trial is pending, is likely to hamper the investigation or impair the trial. Such instances may result in an unsatisfactory and imperfect disposal of the case. It is immaterial whether the impact of the same is felt by the complainant or the accused.

11. In the Criminal Law, as it prevails in India, the State has the sole prerogative to prosecute an individual for committing an offence. It connotes one of the facets of sovereignty. Prosecution, in turn, has several facets, such as investigation and trial. In the prevalent system, a person, accused of committing an offence, is accorded the right of silence. It is for the prosecution to prove and establish the involvement of an accused in a crime. It is no part of the duty of a person, accused of an offence, to explain or clarify his stand. The provisions of the Cr.P.C. as well as the Evidence Act, make it amply clear that any statement recorded from an accused, during the course of investigation, cannot be used as evidence against him. Similarly (Clause 3) of Article 20 of the Constitution mandates that no person, accused of an offence, shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. It is the cumulative effect of these provisions, that constitute right of silence of an accused.

12. When the State itself cannot violate or infringe such a right, neither any individual nor an agency, like the Press, can be permitted to invade the same. Any intrusion into such right of an accused would certainly expose him to several perils, or make his condition vulnerable. For example, the prosecution may present a case, which proceeds on the footing that the accused was at the scene of offence. If, in fact, the accused was at a different place, he can take the plea of alibi, and demolish the case presented by the prosecution. Such a plea can be effectively taken, only after the prosecution comes with a particular stand, during the course of trial. If the accused is made or forced to speak as to where he was, when the relevant incident occurred, the prosecution would become alert and may frame its evidence in such a way as to suit and conform to the stand taken by the accused. In such an event, the immediate impact is felt by the accused. He would be deprived of the benefit arising out of the loophole in the case of the prosecution, on account of the untimely and unnecessary revelation elicited through him, in an interview. Examples can be multiplied.

14. The freedom of Press, in the context of trial of criminal cases, came to be considered by the Supreme Court in a recent judgment in State of Maharashtra Vs. Rajendra Jawanmal Gandhi, (1997)8 SCC 386 : [1997 ALL MR (Cri) (S.C.) 1767], The Court expressed its displeasure over the phenomenon, which it called as "trial by Press, electronic media, or public agitation". The case related to an offence of rape of a minor girl. The accused therein, was convicted for the offence and sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for seven years, by the trial Court. In appeal, the High Court upheld the conviction under Section 354 but set aside the one under Section 376,1.P.C., and the sentence is also modified. An agitation was undertaken by an organization called Nagaric Kriti Samiti, Kolhapur, against the acquittal of accused for the offence under Section 376, I.P.C. The Samithi filed an appeal before the Supreme Court, after obtaining leave. The State of Maharashtra has also filed an appeal.

15. In its judgment, the High Court expressed its displeasure and concern over the unnecessary publicity that was given to the entire incident and opined that it had caused great harm to the victim. In its Judgment, the Supreme Court held as under:

"Para-37 : We agree with the High Court that a- great harm had been caused to the girl by unnecessary publicity and taking out of morcha by the public. Even the case had to be transferred from Kolhapur to Satara under the orders of this Court. There is procedure established by law governing the conduct of trial of a person accused of an offence. A trial by Press, electronic media or public agitation is the very antithesis of rule of law. It can well lead to miscarriage of justice...."

16. Learned counsel for the petitioners place reliance upon a judgment of the Supreme Court in State Vs. Charulata Joshi, (1999)4 SCC 65. In that case, the person, who was accused of an offence under Section 302, I.P.C., was sought to be interviewed by the reporter of a magazine. The trial Court granted the permission without any conditions. In the appeal preferred by the State, the High Court imposed certain restrictions. The State preferred an appeal to the Supreme Court. After referring to its own judgments in Prabha Dutta Vs. Union of India (supra), and that one in Sheela Barse Vs. State of Maharashtra, (1987)4 SCC 373, the Supreme Court observed that blanket permission to Journalists to interview an under-trial prisoner, is impermissible. The relief aspect of it could not be dealt with, because of the reason that the under-trial prisoner was shifted from the Jail, and it was left open to the magazine to renew its request, if the situation warranted.

17. In the recent past, accuracy and decency of reporting has suffered a set back. It is particularly so, in case of the electronic media. By the time the inaccuracy or indecency is noticed and remedial steps are taken, the damage is already caused. In view of the bitter competition that exists among the various agencies, one tries to excel the other. Ghastly incidents, or those, which by any standard, ought not to have been presented or propagated are telecast live; that too continuously or constantly. The comments made, or the clipping displayed during such telecast, are leaving very little for the prosecution or the Courts to do. Unfortunately, it is not realized that any item of news telecast in the channels would reach persons of all categories, irrespective of age, literacy, and their capacity to understand or withstand. The impact of such a telecast on the society is phenomenal. If any proof in this regard is needed, the consequences of undue publicity, given to the execution of death sentence against Danunjay Chaterjee, would provide one. The telecast was so out of proportion and frequent that the boys of tender age were tempted to test, what hanging would be about. In the process, two boys are said to have lost their lives. Unfortunately, this uncontrolled or unedited telecast or propagation of news is resorted to, in the name of exercise of right to freedom of speech and expression, or freedom of Press. In England, an agency known as Broadcasting Standards Commission is constituted to regulate these matters. Such an agency does not exist in our country.

19. It must be said to the credit of Press in India that it had played pivotal role at various challenging and testing times. Investigative journalism undertaken by it had unearthed important instances, which were otherwise unnoticed. However, as is common with any other institution, certain disturbing tendencies have crept into this institution also. There cannot be any doubt that such a glorious institution would have the resilience to overcome the shortcomings, before the latter exhibit and unfold their malignancy. The effort of the petitioners cannot be treated an attempt to misuse their freedom, or to sensationalize the matter. They may be having laudable objectives or an intention to dispassionately inform the society of the facts, that may emerge from the person sought to be interviewed. However, it is difficult to accede to the request, because of the reason that, such permission is not only prone to have its impact on the investigation and effectiveness of the trial, but is also likely to invade the rights of privacy of the person, whom they intend to interview.

20. In R. Vs. Taylor (Michelle Ann) and Taylor (Lisa Jane), (1994)98 Cr App R 361, an English Appellate Court has this to say about the impact of the Press coverage of sensational instances on the trial of the matters.

"……Further, it was clear that the Press coverage had been sensational, unremitting, extensive inaccurate and misleading and despite the Judges warning it was impossible to say that the Jury had not been influenced by it. The nature of the publicity was such that a retrial would not be appropriate...."

21. The right to privacy, vis-a-vis the freedom of Press was considered by the Court of Appeal in Regina Vs. Broadcasting Standards Commission, Ex p. British Broadcasting Corporation, (2001) QB 885. The Court observed,

"It would be departure from proper standards, if, for example the B.B.C., without justification, attempts to listen clandestinely to the activities of a Board meeting, the same would be true of secret filming of Board meeting."

22. In Express Newspapers Pvt. Ltd. Vs. Union of India, AIR 1986 SC 872 (at Para 76), the Supreme Court, even while upholding the freedom of Press and recognizing its importance, sounded a note of caution. It said.

"This right is one of the pillars of individual liberty - freedom of speech, which our Court has always unfailingly guarded. I wish to add that however precious and cherished the freedom of speech is under Art. 19(l)(a), this freedom is not absolute and unlimited at all times and under all circumstances but is subject to the restrictions contained in Art. 19(2). That must be so because unrestricted freedom of speech and expression which includes the freedom of the Press and is wholly free from restraints, amounts to uncontrolled licence which would lead to disorder and anarchy and it would be hazardous to ignore the vital importance of our social and national interest in public order and security of the State."

23. It is not in dispute that the investigation of the case, in which the person sought to be interviewed, figures as an accused, is at initial stage. Several inconsistent theories have already been highlighted. It was rather surprising that, one after the other persons came forward owning their complicity of the crime. An average man gathers a feeling that a concerted attempt is being made to divert the attention of the prosecution as well as the public and to cover the real culprits. The investigating agency should be accorded the freedom, to proceed in the matter, and any step, which is likely to divert its attention or otherwise interfere with it, may compliciate the issues and make the investigation to deviate from the correct line. The petitioners can certainly extend their services to the society, at large, at appropriate time, for instance, after the charge-sheet is filed. There is nothing, which prevents the petitioners or other agencies, to help the investigation by providing such information as they possess. However, it is impermissible to provide access to the petitioners to one of the accused, at this stage. They can renew their request after the charge- sheet is filed.

30) Publication of News in pending Matter/F.I.R. isContempt of Court

Interference with course of justice - Prejudicing the public in favour of or against a party in a pending case by writing an article in the Press is contempt'. The reason is that such articles tend to prejudice the mind of the court, to deter witness from giving evidence, to induce a party to abandon his defence and to possibly affect the decision of the court, though as a rule courts are not affected. Such writings tend to prejudice the public opinion by incubating the public with definite opinion about the matter. The result may be that public confidence in court might be lost if the result was otherwise than the opinion formed. In the instant case of Mankad Probodh Chandra v. Sha Panlal Nanchand, AIR 1954 Kutch. 2, a police officer was searched by the anti-corruption police on suspicion of bribery against the officer. Meantime a newspaper published a series of articles under the guise of publishing information, suggesting that the officer had accepted the bribe, that the trap was cent per cent successful, that the acceptance of the bribe of Rs. 100 had been ill- ominous to others and hence would be so in the case of that officer also, that the officer had become nervous, he had no other hope of escape except invoke the aid of God, that attempts were being made by the friends of the officer to tamper with the witnesses and that at the instance of some outside agency the Court had advanced the date of the hearing of the case against the officer.

This kind of news conveying was held as flagrant contempt, scandalizing the Court and prejudicing the public mind against the office. The editor, the printer and the publisher are responsible for such publication and cannot escape the consequences by pleading that it was factual news as they bona fide got it or that they had no intention to offend the Court proceedings; intention does not come in at all in such matters. It is the result or the consequence of such publication that counts. There was no doubt that it created disastrous results in interfering with the course of justice.

31) The law of contempt throws a ring of protection around the entire course of litigation. Party, witness, Judge or counsel are all integral parts of that process. Anything which tends to impair the legitimate freedom of any these cannot but result in obstructing the course of justice. In Gaini Ram v. Ramnath Dutt, AIR 1955 Raj 123 (DB), a superior official gave a charge-sheet to his subordinate who was figuring as a witness in a pending case. His evidence was not yet over. The departmental charge-sheet asked him to explain certain statements made by him as a witness. It was held that the action of the superior official was clear interference with the course of justice. He was hampering evidence being given, as he put the witness under departmental censure for the lacuna in the evidence. The Court is thereby deprived of valuable testimony being given without fear or favour.

For a person to be convicted of Contempt of Court for interfering with the course of justice it has to be shown :

(a) that something has been published which is either clearly intended or at least is calculated to prejudice a trial which is pending;

(b) that the offending article was published with the knowledge of the pending cause or with the knowledge that the cause was imminent; and

(c) that the matter published intended substantially to interfere with the due course of justice or was calculated to create prejudice in the public mind.

It has to be borne in mind that an offending act, though not influencing the Judge's mind, may affect the conduct of parties to the proceeding which is likely to affect the course of true justice [Awadh Narain Singh v. Jwala Prasad, AIR 1956 Pat 321 (DB)

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Anil Tackrey Vs. M.D. 2003 (3) B.Cr. C. 570 held that publication of new with attractive heading in news paper such as 'Director behind bar" is a offence under section 500, 501 etc of I.P.C.

32) PRAYER :- It is therefore humble prayed that this Hon'ble National Human Rights commission may please to

(i) Consider this petition as a public interest Litigation (P.I.L.) and take cognizance of it.

(ii) Call for the explanation from the respondent.

(iii) Appoint committee of expert to formulate guidelines to safeguard the fundamental rights of the accused.

(iv) File appropriate writ before Hon'ble Supreme Court for proper implementation of those guidelines.

(v) Give appropriate suggestions to standing parliamentary committee to include laws of Human Rights in the 'LOKPAL BILL'

(vi) Initiate appropriate proceedings against Mr. Arvind Kejriwal, Adv. Prashant Bhushan and others for their unconstitutional acts.

(vii) File appropriate writ before Hon'ble Supreme Court for violation of Article 14 of the constitution of India and for release of accused like Suresh Kalmadi & others which does not get the bail even if they entitled to the same.

(viii) Give appropriate directions to the respondent No. 6 to take disciplinary action and to initiate appropriate criminal proceedings against the Magistrate/Judges for their willful disregard and disobedience of Hon'ble Supreme Court's direction.

(ix) Form a committee to publish another book for the law relating to prosecution of Judges.

(x) Direct Central Government to provide appropriate Police Protection to the Petitioner.

FOR THIS ACT OF KINDNESS AND JUSTICE THE APPLICANT AS IN DUTY BOUND SHALL EVER PRAY.

SUPREME COURT OF INDIA

Hon'ble Judges: G. S. Singhvi and H.L. Dattu, JJ.

CRIMINAL APPEAL NO.2178 OF 2011 (Arising out of SLP (Crl.) No. 5650 of 2011)

Sanjay Chandra …Vs…. C.B.I.

A) Cri. P.c. 439, 437, Bail – Bail is the Rule and Jail an exception – Accused entitled for presumption of innocence till he is convicted – constitutionally protected liberty of accused must be respected unless detention becomes necessary – If any accused is detained before conviction then it will put unnecessary burden on state to keep a person who is not proved guilty – Normally bail should be granted to accused – Apprehension of tampering of evidence without sound proof could not be accepted and this ground could not be considered in each case to deny the bail.

B) Discretion while granting bail – The Jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well settled principles and not in arbitrary manner- The law in regard to grant or refusal of bail is very well settled. The Court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. At the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken.

C) DISCRETION : Any order devoid of reasons would suffer from non-application of mind. In the case of Gudikatil Narasimhulu V. Public Prosecutor, (1978) 1 SCC 240, V.R. Krishna Iyer, J., sitting as Chamber Judge, Enunciated the principles of bail thus:

> "3. What, then, is "judicial discretion" in this bail context ? In the elegant words of Benjamin Cardozo : "The Judge, even when he is free, is still not wholly free. He is not to innovate at Pleasure. He is not a knight-errant roaming at will in pursuit of his own ideal of beauty or of goodness. He is to draw his inspiration from consecrated principles. He is not to yield to spasmodic sentiment, to vague and unregulated benevolence. He is to exercise a discretion informed by tradition, methodized by analogy, disciplined by system, and subordinated to "the primordial necessity of order in the social life". Wide enough in all conscience is the field of discretion that remain.

D) Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 – Ss. 437 and 439 – Prejudices which may be avoided in deciding bail matters – Public Scams, scandal and heinous offences – Public sentiments and disapproval of alleged misconduct – Bail, held, ought not be denied to teach lesson to a person whose offence is yet to be proved – Conditional bail, is a solution in such types of cases.

E) The approach adopted by the trial court and affirmed by the High Court, is a denial of the whole basis of the Indian system of law and normal rule of bail system. It transcends respect for the requirement that a man shall be considered innocent until he is found guilty. If such power is recognized, then it may lead to chaotic situation and would jeopardize the personal liberty of an individual. Bail is the rule and committal to jail an exception. Refuse of bail is a restriction on the personal liberty of the individual guaranteed under Article 21 of the constitution. When there is a delay in trail, bail should be granted to the accused.

F) Cr. P.C. Sec. 437, 439 – Change in circumstances – Pre-Charge and post – charge stages – SLP before supreme court dismissed before farming of charges – Bail application filed after framing charges – Held, is change in circumstances – Earlier order is no bar in granting bail to the appellant.

RS. 6 LAKH COMPENSATION TO 79 YEAR OLD LADY AND HER SON

[News published in MID- DAY Dt. 14 / 06 /2013]

BOMBAY HIGH COURT

CORAM : P.V. HARDAS & MRS. MRIDULA BHATKAR, JJ.

Cr. P.C. 151- Illegal Arrest – Petitioner Lady and her son were detained and sent to Judicial custody alleging that she wants to commit suicide – Held, we are constrained to come to the conclusion that the petitioners on the day they were called to the police station had not taken any steps at committing suicide. In fact, the petitioners had withdrawn such a threat. The petitioners were called to the police station under a false pretext that an offence would be wregistered on the basis of the report of the first petitioner. We find no reason to question the case of the petitioners that they were detained in the police station and, thereafter, suddenly produced in the court of the Magistrate and to their dismay learnt that they had been arrested. There was no impending threat of the petitioners for committing suicide and in passing, therefore, we may say that their arrest and detention itself was not justified - the authorities have committed a blatant violation of the directives of the Supreme Court in D. K. Basu's case and the petition on that score deserves to succeed - petition is partly allowed. We direct the respondents to pay each of the petitioners an amount of Rs.3,00,000/- (Rupees Three Lakhs Only) within a period of eight weeks

JUDGMENT (PER P.V. HARDAS, J.):-Rule. Rule returnable forthwith. With the consent of the learned Counsel for the parties this Petition is heard finally at the stage of admission. Initially this Petition was filed on behalf of Mohini Naraindas Kamwani as the sole Petitioner.Subsequently, with the leave of the Court this Petition was amended and Dilip Naraindas Kamwani was permitted to be joined as Petitioner No.2. Initially, this Petition was argued by the Advocate representing the Petitioner but subsequently on the Advocate of the Petitioner being discharged, the entire Petition was being conducted and argued by the Petitioner No.2 in-person.

2. Facts in brief as are necessary for the decision of this Petition may briefly be stated thus. The First Petitioner resides with the Second Petitioner, who is her son alongwith a mentally challenged daughter by name Kanta Kamwani. The Second daughter of the First Petitioner named Sumita Karani resides in Vashi alongwith her husband. Sumita Karani has three sons one of whom resides at Andheri while the other two resides in Dubai and in U.S.A. respectively. According to the Petitioners, somewhere in August 2010, Manoj Karani, son of Sumita Karani and grandson of the First Petitioner approached the Petitioner with an intention of forcibly obtaining the signature of the First Petitioner on some documents and also for obtaining the Bank details of the First Petitioner. According to the First Petitioner, she had severed her relations with her daughter Sumita Karani and the grand children of the First Petitioner some time in 2007. Since the First Petitioner had protested the overtures of her grand son Manoj Karani in obtaining the signature and Bank details of the First Petitioner, Manoj Karani left the premises but had threatened the First Petitioner and the Second Petitioner. The Petitioner No.1 therefore had approached the Respondent on 24.12.2010 for lodging of a report and registration of criminal case against her grandson. It appears that on the basis of the complaint the First Petitioner, a non-cognizable offence was registered and no further action was taken. Despite the registration of the non-cognizable offence, the grandson of the First Petitioner i.e. Manoj Karani continued to visit the house of the First Petitioner on several occasions and threatened the Petitioner with dire consequences. According to the Petitioner, her grandson Manoj Karani had stated that he had links with the underworld and with Hiten Sampat, who had criminal antecedents.

3. Since the Petitioners continued to pursue the report lodged by them, the Petitioners were informed that the dispute which was complained of by the Petitioners was of a civil nature and therefore, no cognizance could be taken. According to the First Petitioner, she had informed the Police that her life was in danger because of the threats of her grandson Manoj Karani. Since no action was being taken onthe complaint of the Petitioner, the Petitioner addressed a communication to the Chief Minister on 11.11.2011 pointing out her grievance and the harassment faced by her. The said communication dated 11.11.2011 is annexed to the Petition as Exhibit 'A'. In the aforesaid communication, the Petitioner had highlighted her plight and had also stated that her entire family had decided to commit suicide. According to the Petitioner, after addressing the said communication to the Chief Minister, the Police Officer approached her on 26.12.2011 promising the Petitioner that appropriate action would be taken and asked her to give a written undertaking stating that she would not sit on a protest fast and accordingly, statement of the First Petitioner was recorded on 27.12.2011 wherein the Petitioner had assured that she would not undertake any protest fast and would not commit suicide. The said statement of the Petitioner is annexed to the Petition as Exhibit 'B'.

4. If further appears that the Petitioner had filed certain proceedings before the Maharashtra State Human Rights Commission. The aforesaid proceedings were closed by the Human Rights Commission, according to the Petitioner, on the basis of the incorrect information/statement made by the Police Inspector of the Azad Maidan Police Station. The Petitioner, therefore, addressed a communication on 2nd January 2012 to the Senior Inspector of Police, Azad Maidan Police Station informing the Police that the Petitioner intended to sit on "peaceful protest hunger strike" on 16.01.2012 atAzad Maidan. The Petitioner accordingly started her peaceful protest fast from 16.01.2012 at Azad Maidan and continued it for three days. The Petitioner addressed variouscommunications to the authorities informing them that she would continue her hunger fast for an indefinite period until justice was done to her. It also appears that the Petitioner had addressed a communication to the High Court and accordingly, the Registrar (Legal and Research) of the Public Grievance Cell of this Court, addressed a communication to the Commissioner of Police dated 21.01.2012, requesting the Commissioner of Police to look into the complaint/grievance of the First Petitioner and to intimate the Registrar (Legal and Research) in respect of the action which was taken.

5. According to the Petitioner, after receipt of the aforesaid communication by the Police, a high ranking Police Officer of the Azad Maidan Police Station visited the Petitioner and convinced her that action would be taken on her grievance and she should not take any steps which would be contrary to the law of the land. The Petitioner therefore called off her fast and gave the same in writing to the Police Officer. The aforesaid communication of the Petitioner is at Exhibit 'D'. It would be useful to refer hereinbelow the ad-verbatim communication of the First Petitioner :-" Sir I respect law. We have never broken any laws in our lives. Now at age 77 years I do not wish to start breaking any law. The accused have again and again broken laws and Vashi Police is not following/respecting any law. I am a freedom fighter widow senior citizen. My husband went to jail with Mahatma Gandhi for freedom fight ". Thus, according to the Petitioner, by virtue of Exhibit 'E', she had in clear terms intimated to the authorities that the protest was called off and she had also withdrawn her threat to commit suicide.

6. According to the Petitioners, two Police Officers, one of whom was addressed as Shri Kadam and another a lady PoliceOfficer who was addressed as Mrs. Chikne, came to her house on 25.01.2012 at about 8.30 a.m. The Petitioners were informed by the Police Officials that they had come to the residence of the Petitioners for registration of a FIR on the complaint of the Petitioners. The Petitioners were, therefore, asked to accompany the Police Officers to the Police Station. Since it was early morning, the Petitioners asked the Police Officers to proceed ahead and they would come to the Police Station in about half an hour. The Petitioners were informed that their presence at the Police Station would be required for about an hour. The Petitioners therefore left the mentally challenged daughter of the First Petitioner in the house and arrived at the Vashi Police Station at about 9.00 a.m. on 25.01.2012. Till about 1.30 p.m. the Petitioner and her son were made to sit inside the Police Station without being informed and without being provided with any food or water.

At about 2.30 p.m. the Petitioner and her son were escorted to the Court premises by the Police Officers and were made to sit on a bench outside the Court room of the Magistrate's Court. At about 4.45 p.m. the Petitioner and her son were produced before the Magistrate and it was only at that stage that the Petitioners realized that they were being produced as accused and not as complainants for completing the formalities. The Petitioners were sent to Judicial Custody for a period of three days. The Second Petitioner requested the Respondents that he be produced before the learned Magistrate once again so that the Petitioner could apprise the learned Magistrate all the facts but instead the Second Petitioner was handcuffed by a Police Officer Shri Kadam and was pushed into the Police Van alongwith the First Petitioner. The First Petitioner requested the Police Officer to allow her to take an extra set of clean clothes and other articles and also to ensure that the neighbors were informed to look after her mentally challenged daughter who was alone at home. The request of the First Petitioner was turned down by the Police Officers. The Second Petitioner had forwarded a complaint to the Commissioner of Police expressing the grievance and complaining about the illegal arrest of the Petitioners. The said complaint dated 10.02.2012 has been annexed by the Petitioners as Exhibit 'G'.

7. On 27.01.2012 the Petitioners were produced before the Trial Magistrate and were ordered to be released. It appears that the principal reason for arrest of the Petitioners was that the Petitioners had addressed an e-mail to the Police Officer intimating that on 26.01.2012 the Petitioners would commit suicide by self-immolation either in front of the Mantralaya or in front of the official residence of the Chief Minister. In the entire report which was submitted to the Magistrate seeking remand of the Petitioners, there was no reference at all to the fact that the Petitioners vide the document at Exhibit 'E' had intimated that the fast was being called off and that they had not broken any law in their lives and did not wish to start breaking any law.

8. Pursuant to the order passed by the Magistrate on 27.01.2012 ordering the release of the Petitioners, the Petitioners were taken back to the Kalyan Jail for completing the formalities of their release. According to the Petitioners, the Petitioner No.2 was handcuffed on way to the Kalyan Prison despite his protest. The Petitioners claim that their arrest is illegal and contrary to the guidelines laid down by the Supreme Court in D.K. Basu v/s. State of West Bengal [(1997) 1 SCC 416]. The Petitioners have therefore prayed for prosecution of the Police Authorities who were responsible for detaining the Petitioners and for illegally handcuffing the Petitioner No.2. The Petitioners further pray for issuance of a writ of mandamus directing the Respondents to register an offence on the basis of the complaint of the Petitioners against one Shri Manoj Karani. The Petitioners have also prayed for grant of monetary compensation for violation of their fundamental rights. The other reliefs are in respect of the ad-interim reliefs. This Petition was amended by the Petitioners when they were appearing in-person and certain other reliefs are also sought by the Petitioners. By virtue of the amendment dated 27.02.2013, the Petitioners have prayed for issuance of a writ directing the suspension and prosecution of Respondent No.1 – Superintendent of Police Laxman Kale, Superintendent of Police Raosaheb Sardesai and DCP of Vashi Zone. Amendment is also sought by incorporating a prayer for grant of ad-interim relief of compensation of Rs.10.00 lakhs to the Petitioners as well as Rs.10.00 lakhs to the mentally challenged daughter of the First Petitioner by name Kanta Kamwani. The Petition was again subsequently amended by the Petitioners and a relief of a issuance of a writ of mandamus was sought for directing the Police Officers to perform their statutory duties of taking legal action against Sanjeev Karani and Rekha Sanjeev Karani for being in the contact with the underworld person named Hiten Sampat. A writ of mandamus was also sought for directing the Respondents to take "urgent and immediate stern legal action" against all the family members of Karani for threatening the Petitioners. A relief of monetary compensation was again sought. The Petition was subsequently amended and a relief of issuance of a writ was sought for directing the Police Officials for making 114 and 105 calls to suspected Bijlani and for suspension of the Police Officers named in the prayer clause.

9. In response to the notice issued by this court, the respondents have filed affidavits-in-reply. In the affidavit filed by Raosaheb Sardesai, Senior Police Inspector, it is stated that on the basis of the complaint of the first petitioner, N.C. Complaint bearing No. 1571 of 2010 was registered on 24/12/2010 under Sections 506 and 507 of I.P.C. It is also stated that a cross complaint was also registered as N.C. Complaint No. 1580 of 2010 under Sections 506 and 507 of I.P.C. All allegations about illegal arrest and detention by the police officers of Vashi Police have been denied. It is further stated that various complaints have been forwarded by the petitioners, but since no case was made out, no offence was registered. It is further stated that the petitioners had approached the Human Rights Commission and the Human Rights Commission by order dated 22/12/2011, directed the Vashi Police to examine the complaints and take appropriate action in accordance with law, provided a case was made out in the complaints. It is also stated that the petitioner no.1 had forwarded an application that she would commit suicide along with her son, petitioner no.2 and daughter after hunger strike on 27/12/2011 and 16/1/2012. The affidavit states that the petitioner no.1 had forwarded an application that on 26/1/2012 she would immolate herself in front of the Mantralaya or Varsha Bungalow of the Chief Minister. It is stated that in these set of facts, an action of detaining the petitioners under Section 151(3) of Criminal Procedure Code was taken and the petitioner no.1 was produced before the Magistrate within 24 hours and so also apprised of her right to engage an Advocate of her choice. It is further stated thatthe petitioners were detained on 25/1/2012 at 11.40 a.m. and was then produced before the Magistrate. It is also stated that since the first petitioner had threatened to commit suicide, she was detained along with other petitioner. All allegations about the petitioner no.2 being handcuffed are denied.

10. Another affidavit, styled as additional affidavit, came to be filed by one Laxman Bhausaheb Kale, Police Inspector, who is presently attached to the Nerul Police Station. In the affidavit, it is stated that since the first petitioner and her son had made an application stating that they would commit suicide, counseling was attempted and the petitioner no.1 was persuaded not to take such an extreme step, but the petitioner no.1 declined. It is further stated that, therefore, in accordance with the provisions of Section 151(3) of Cr.P.C., the petitioner and her son were detained. It is also stated that the allegations regarding ill-treatment and handcuffing are false.

11. A reference, at this juncture, to the orders passed by this court needs to be made in order to effectively deal with therival submissions of the parties. Upon filing of the first affidavit of one Raosaheb Sardesai, who at the time of filing of the affidavit was attached to the Vashi Police Station, the Divison Bench of this court by its order dated 20/11/2012, at paras 2 and 3, has observed thus:

"2. We have perused the affidavit of Raosaheb Baburao Sardesai, Senior Police Inspector, presently attached to Vashi Police Station, Navi Mumbai. The affidavit does not throw light on compliance with the directions issued by the Apex Court in the case of D. K. Basu. The so called arrest Panchanama or arrest Memorandum is shown to us, which does not bear signature of the arrestee. Though it is contended that information regarding arrest was given to the petitioner's daughter by name Kanta, no record is shown to us to prove in what manner such information was given. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioner states that said Kanta is mentally challenged. The affidavit filed is totally unsatisfactory. 3. Prima facie, the affidavit shows that the directions of the Apex Court in the case of D. K. Basu have not been complied with. We direct the concerned officer to remain present in this Court on 23 rd November, 2012 at 3 p.m. along with entire record."

12. During the subsequent hearing of the petition, the Division Bench of this court by its order dated 23/11/2012 recorded certain findings, which we find it appropriate to reproduce below:

"1 We have perused the record produced by the learned A.P.P. The learned A.P.P. states that it is true that on the arrest panchnama signatures of the petitioner and her son were not obtained but there is arrest form drawn at the time of arrest. She states that the petitioner and her son declined to sign on the arrest form.

2 We may note here that in the station diary entry no.26 which is made at the time of arrest of the petitioner and her son, there is not even a reference to the arrest form. There is no entry in the station diary that arrest form was drawn and the petitioner and her son declined to sign the same. Moreover, in the affidavit of Shri Raosaheb Baburao Sardesai dated 3rd August 2012, there is no reference whatsoever to the arrest form being drawn.

3 The learned A.P.P seeks time to file additional affidavit. The prayer will have to be rejected for the simple reason that in the petition not only the violation of directions issued by the Apex Court in case of of D.K.Basu Vs. State of West Bengal [1997 (1) SCC 416] has been alleged, but the directions in the Judgment have been reproduced in the petition. Moreover, the station diary entry does not contain such reference to such arrest form. We have perused the original arrest form of the petitioner and her son. Prima facie, it appears to us that endorsement that arrestees declined to sign the same has been subsequently made as the handwriting appears to be different than the handwriting in which various details have been filled in. In any case, additional affidavit cannot be permitted to be filed to fill up any lacuna.

4 As far as giving of information of arrest to the close relative of the petitioner is concerned, the learned A.P.P stated that the petitioner's daughter Kanta was informed about her arrest. On instructions she stated that a woman constable was deputed for the said work. We may note here that there is no record to show that a constable was deputed and any report was submitted by the constable on record. The learned A.P.P on instructions states that there is no such entry in the station diary or there is no such report. We have noted that the mode by which the communication was allegedly made to the said daughter of the petitioner is not mentioned in the station diary. On the last date, in our order dated 20th November 2012, we have specifically noted that the said Kanta is mentally challenged. The learned A.P.P on instructions states that she is not mentally challenged but disabled.

5 We have also heard the submissions of the learned counsel for the petitioner and the learned A.P.P on other aspects of the case. The learned A.P.P seeks time to take instructions as regards prayer clause (b).6 Stand over till 10th December 2012, to be shown at 3.00 p.m for Judgment."

13. We have heard the petitioner no.2, who appeared in person and the learned APP on behalf of the respondents. The petitioner no.2 has urged before us that there was a gross violation of the human rights and the arrest of the petitioners was in contravention of the directives by the Supreme Court in D.K. Basu vs. State of West Bangal [(1997) 1 SCC 416]. The petitioner no.2 has further urged before us that the petitioners were called to the police station under a false pretext and were never formally arrested, but produced before the Magistrate. It is further stated that no formal arrest panchanama was drawn and, therefore, there was no question of the petitioners declining to sign the arrest form. It is also stated that the sister of petitioner no.2 i.e. daughter of petitioner no.1 is mentally challenged person and consequently the police could not have informed her about the arrest of the petitioners. It is also urged before us that the petitioner no.1 had communicated to the authorities that she had never breached the law earlier and did not intend to breach it and, therefore, there was no impending threat of the petitioners committing suicide. The petitioner no.2 has further urged before us that the petitioners are, therefore, entitled to be compensated for their illegal arrest and detention which was in gross violation of the directives of theSupreme Court in D.K. Basu's case (Supra) and also are entitled for the issuance of a writ directing the police to register an offence on the basis of the complaint of petitioner no.1. The learned APP has urged before us that the directivesof the Supreme Court in D.K. Basu's case have been followed to the latter and the arrest of the petitioners was justified in the light of the impending threat of the petitioners of committing suicide.

14. The principal challenge in this petition is about the illegal arrest and detention of the petitioners. Whether their arrest was justified or not in the facts of the present case is not a question which this court is called upon to examine. We are required to examine if the petitioners have been arrested contrary to the directives issued by the Supreme Court in D. K. Basu' case. The second question which this court is called upon to examine is, whether a writ of mandamus could be issued directing the police to register an offence against the accused named in the complaint filed by the petitioner no.1.

15. In passing, we may state that the petitioner no.1, though, had initially given threats of committing suicide, subsequently informed the authorities that she had not breached the law earlier and did not intend to do so. It is thus clear that at the time when the police officers visited the residence of the petitioner no.1, the petitioner no.1 was neither sitting on hunger fast nor had the petitioner no.1 taken any steps at initiating the fulfillment of the threat of suicide. If the petitioners had been arrested, as is contended by the respondents, the signatures of the petitioners ought to have appeared on the arrest panchanamas. The contention of the respondents that the petitioners declined to sign the arrest panchanama, according to us is an after thought. Thereis no corresponding station diary entry which would fortify the submission of the respondents that the petitioners had declined to sign the arrest form. We also find that the respondents had not taken any steps whatsoever of informing the petitioners of their rights and had also not informed the relative of the petitioners about arrest of the petitioners. The daughter of the first petitioner, who was alone at home, was a mentally challenged girl, as is borne out from the certificate filed by the petitioners and consequently the respondents could not have effectively communicated to her about the arrest of the petitioners. In these set of facts, therefore, we are constrained to come to the conclusion that the petitioners on the day they were called to the police station had not taken any steps at committing suicide. In fact, the petitioners had withdrawn such a threat. The petitioners were called to the police station under a false pretext that an offence would be wregistered on the basis of the report of the first petitioner. We find no reason to question the case of the petitioners that they were detained in the police station and, thereafter, suddenly produced in the court of the Magistrate and to their dismay learnt that they had been arrested. There was no impending threat of the petitioners for committing suicide and in passing, therefore, we may say that their arrest and detention itself was not justified. However, the fact remains that the authorities have committed a blatant violation of the directives of the Supreme Court in D. K. Basu's case and the petition on that score deserves to succeed.

16. In respect of relief prayed by the petitioners for issuance of a writ of mandamus directing the authorities to register an offence, the petitioners have relied on the judgment of this court in Mrs. Charu Kishor Mehta vs. State of Maharashtra and anr. [2011 ALL MR (Cri) 173]. The Division Bench of this court in Charu Kishor's case came to the conclusion that in the peculiar facts of that case that a serious economic offence of fraud, embezzlement were alleged in relation to public trust property, the court directed the registration of the offence. A reference at this juncture may usefully be made to the judgments of the Supreme Court in Aleque Padamsee and ors. vs. Union of India and ors. [(2007) 6 SCC 171], Sakiri Vasu vs. State of U.P. [(2008) 2 SCC 409 and Kunga Nima Lepcha and ors. vs. State of Sikkim and ors. [(2010) 4 SCC 513]. The ratio of the said judgments of the Supreme Court clearly indicates that a writ of mandamus cannot be issued directing the police to register an offence as the party, who is aggrieved, has the alternate remedy of filing either a private complaint or an application under Section 156 (3) of Cr.P.C. In that light of the matter, therefore, according to us, the petitioners would not be entitled for a relief of issuance of a writ of mandamus directing the authorities to register an offence against the accused named by the petitioner no.1 in her complaint. We, therefore, relegate the petitioners to the remedies available to them in law.

17. A very disquieting incident is brought to our notice bythe petitioner by filing of an affidavit. The petitioners have filed an affidavit on 2/5/2013 during the midst of the hearing of the petition. In the affidavit, it is stated by the petitioner no.2 that on 26/4/2013 at about 10 p.m. two persons had assaulted him by stating that he had lodged a complaint against them. The petitioner no.2 further states that he hadimmediately gone to the Vashi Police Station, but the police refused to register his complaint and also arrested him by stick. Accordingly, petitioner no.2 was taken to theGovernment Hospital on 26/4/2013 and ultimately it appears that there is a fracture of the left thumb. It further appears that on the next day, the petitioner no.2 was taken to the Vashi Police Station and ultimately a non-cognizable offence under Sections 504 and 323 of IPC has been registered. Thedocuments submitted by the petitioner no.2 clearly indicate that there was a fracture of the thumb. It is extremely disturbing to note that during the pendency of this petition, which involved the illegal arrest and detention of the petitioners, the petitioner no.2 was subjected to this assault. Though no specific prayer is made in the petition, we are inclined to issue direction to the police officers to examine the necessary documents and if the report of the petitioner discloses the commission of a cognizable offence to take such steps as are available in law. We further direct that this exercise be carried out within a period of four weeks from today.

18. Coming to the question of awarding damages / compensation to the petitioners for their illegal arrest and detention, according to us, compensation / damages of Rs.3,00,000/- (Rupees Three Lakhs only) each to the petitioners would sub-serve the interest of justice.

19. Accordingly, this petition is partly allowed. We direct the respondents to pay each of the petitioners an amount of Rs.3,00,000/- (Rupees Three Lakhs Only) within a period of eight weeks from today, failing which the respondents shall be liable to pay interest at the rate of 10% per annum on the amount of Rs.3,00,000/- to each of the petitioners from that day till the amount is actually paid to the petitioners. We further direct the police officers of the Vashi Police Station to examine the complaint submitted by the petitioner no.2 and other necessary documents in support of the grievous injury and if the complaint and the document discloses the commission of a cognizable offence, action in accordance with law be initiated. This petition stands dismissed in so far as it relates to the prayer of issuance of a writ of mandamus directing the police to register an offence on the basis of the complaint of the first petitioner. In that respect, we relegate the petitioners to avail alternate remedies available to them in law.

20. Rule is thus made absolute on the above terms. We quantify the costs of this petition at Rs.15,000/-. (MRS. MRIDULA BHATKAR, J.) (P.V. HARDAS, J.)

WRIT PETITION NO. 2697 OF 2010 , June 16,2010

Protection of Human Rights Act, 1993 – Custodial Death – Illegal arrest – Section 151 of Cri. P.C. – The victim was asenior citizen of 78 years old – He was illegally detained by P.S.O. U.S. 151 of cri. P.C. under directions of S.P Wardha Smt. Ashwati Dorje – The Victim was not granted bail by the Tahsildar Deepak Karande – The victim died in jail – The son of victim filed petition before State Human Rights commission, Mumbai through Shri. Nilesh C. Ojha National President of Manav Adhikar Suraksha Parishad – Commission accepted the contention of the petitioner and directed Home secretary to take action against Smt. Ashwati Dorje, S.P. Wardha Shri. Deepak Karande, Tahsildar, Wardha and Shri V.D. Boite Jail Supreintendant, Wardha. The petitioner filed Writ petition challenging the legality of the order - It has been held by High court that the order passed by State Human Rights commission is legal and does not require interference.

(1.) Heard learned counsel for the petitioner. The petitioner has challenged order of the Maharashtra State Human Rights Commission, Mumbai recommending that the disciplinary authority shall hold Departmental Enquiry into conduct of the petitioner and two others, in accordance with law, and complete the same as early as possible and preferably within three months. The learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the order of the State Human Rights Commission is vitiated since admittedly, as recorded by the Commission itself, the petitioner was not heard. Learned counsel for the petitioner further submits that the Commission was bound to hear the petitioner before directing the initiation of enquiry since the proceedings before the Commission are judicial proceedings.

(2.) The Maharashtra State Human Rights Commission (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission") took cognizance of the complaint of one Nilesh Ojha, President of Manav Adhikar Suraksha Parishad, Pusad, who complained about the custodial death of one Shankar Ghume, at Wardha District Prison while in illegal detention due to the negligence of three officers of the Police including the petitioner. It is not necessary to go into the details of the custodial death except to observe that the Commission found, after hearing the Collector, Superintendent of Police and Superintendent, District Prison, Wardha that many questions arise regarding action of the police and the Jail authority and that the police should have exercised their discretion to release the deceased on bail, which was granted to him by the Court. The Commission has observed that it is reasonable to believe that the petitioner mechanically passed the order under Section 151 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and illegally refused the bail. However, without giving any finding whether the petitioner and other Police officers are indeed responsible for the custodial death, the Commission found it appropriate to direct that an enquiry should be held against them in connection with the custodial death in the light of its observations, particularly since the officers, including the petitioner, have not been heard.

(3.) Having heard the matter, there is no reason for us to hold that the order of the Commission directing the disciplinary authority to enquire into the conduct of the petitioner is vitiated only because the petitioner was not heard. Section 18 of the Protection of Human Rights Act, 1993, which is relevant, reads as follows.

"18. Steps during and after inquiry.- The Commission may take any of the following steps during or upon the completion of an inquiry held under this Act, namely:- (a) where the inquiry discloses the commission of violation of human rights or negligence in the prevention of violation of human rights or abetment thereof by a public servant, it may recommend to the concerned Government or authority - (i) to make payment of compensation or damages to the complainant or to the victim or the members of his family as the Commission may consider necessary; (ii) to initiate proceedings for prosecution or such other suitable action as the Commission may deem fit against the concerned person or persons; (iii) to take such further action as it may think fit; (b) approach the Supreme Court or the High Court concerned for such directions, orders or writs as the Court may deem necessary; (c) recommend to the concerned Government or authority at any stage of the inquiry for the grant of such immediate interim relief to the victim or the members of his family as the Commission may consider necessary; (d) subject to the provisions of clause (e), provide a copy of the inquiry report to the petitioner or his representative; (e) the Commission shall send a copy of its inquiry report together with the recommendations to the concerned Government or authority and the concerned Government or authority shall, within a period of one month, or such further time as the Commission may allow, forward its comments on the report, including the action taken or proposed to be taken thereon, to the Commission; (f) the Commission shall publish its inquiry report together with the comments of the concerned Government or authority, if any, and the action taken or proposed to be taken by the concerned Government or authority on the recommendations of the Commission."

It is obvious from Sub-Section (ii) above that upon completion of the enquiry before the Commission, which in this case has undoubtedly been completed, the Commission has discretion to recommend the Government or the concerned authority for prosecution or such other action as the Commission may deem fit. The words "such other suitable action" in (a) (ii) above, would clearly cover the holding of Departmental Enquiry.

(4.) The order of the State Human Rights Commission does not hold the petitioner guilty of custodial death but merely directs an enquiry into the matter. In this view of the matter, we see no reason to interfere with the impugned order. The writ petition is, therefore, dismissed. No order as to costs.

Proceedings
Per :Justice Khsitiji R. Vyas (Former Chief Justice), Chairperson.

1. The complainant Nilesh Ojha, National President,Manav Adhikar Surakhsa Parishad,Pusad, has taken up the Cause regarding custodial death of Shankar Ghume in this complaint.He has filed this complaint on the complaint received from Dilip Ghume, the son of the deceased .The complainant alleges that the victim expired at wardha District Prison due to negligence and illegal detention by the respondent . The complainant alleged that though bail had been granted to the victim , for the alleged offences under the Gambling Act, with a view to frustrate the said order, the victim was again booked U/S .151Cr.P.C. .The deceased was not released from prison ,Despite the fact that he has undergoing treatment for a heart/respiratory ailment , he was not given proper medical attention .The complainant has therefore , prayed /inquiry and action against the respondents. No. 2 and 3.

2. Dr. S,B. Yadav and Dr.P.G Dixit.,head of forensic Medical Dept., Government Medical College , Nagpur , in their report did not notice any marks of injury, fracture on the body of the deceased. As per the Chemical analyzer report of Shri .Sarothe . the Asstt. Chemical Analyzer,Regional Lab., Nagpur ,No poisonous substance was found in his body , and death occurred due to cirrhosis of Liver with Chornic Venous congestion. As per report dated 12.06.2009 submitted by Dr. .P.G. Dixit, he has also confirmed the death occurred due to above mentioned cause.

3. Over and above , the aforesaid reports, the S.P., Wardha , in his report it has pointed out that the deceased had never told the police regarding he being a patient of Asthma or heart problem.He also didn't complained regarding paining in the chest When P.I., Dhule met him .It is also pointed out that the p[olice infact took deceased to the hospital , when he complained about sever chest pain at 2 a.m. In Substance S.P., Wardha justified , police action taken against the complainant .

4. This being a CD Case , the District Magistrate , Wardha asked sub-divisional Magistrate , Hinganghat to hold magisterial enquiry, the commission vide its order dated 09.11.09 also called for the report of the enquiry.

InC ompliance with the said order the sub-divisional Magistrate ,Hinganghat produced the report. In the report the subdivisional Magistrate has recorded statements of as many as 29 persons. It is concluded that deceased Shankar Ghume, aged 67 died in wardha Central Jail , because of cirrhosis of Liver with Chronic Venous Congestion, could have been saved if proper treatment was provided to him.

5. After having gone through all reports produced in the case following facts emerge.

a. On 14.08.08 A.S.I., Gopal Singh Kochar of Wardha Police Station arrested 26 persons including Shankar Ghume , playing cards, Under prevention of Gambling Act. Deceased Shankar Ghume was kept in the lock up of the police station, wardha, at 5p.m. The complainant and his brother went to see their father in the police station, wardha with Advocate , shri Ramteke , who applied for bail .It is the say of the complainant , that his father , complained regarding sever pain in his chest and told them to take him to the house. Whole , completing the formalities of bail , the District Superintendent of Police , Wardha , Smt. Dorje reached the police station, at about 10.30 pm ., asked P.S.O shri. Ghule not to release any persons arrested and orderd to book all U/S. 151 Cr.P.C. . Accordingly deceased Shankar Ghume was again arrested U/S .151 Cr.P.c and couldn't be released on bail .On the same night at 2a.m , because of sever pain in the chest , wardha police took him to General Hospital , Wardha , Where doctors gave medicine and injection to him .Again Wardha Police took station and kept in lock up.

b. On 15.08.08 the deceased along with others produced before the Deputy Tahasildar , Wardha Shri Karande U/S .151 Cr.P.C . There also an application for bail along with documents to release the deceased was filed by the brother of the complainant .It was also requested that his father is heart and asthma patient and was not keeping well and was under continuous treatment .It is alleged in the complaint , though denied in the report that bail application was rejected deliberately by shri.Karande for nonpayment of bribe of Rs.2000/- In the result was sent to District Prison , wardha on the same day along with other accused persons.

It is alleged that the complainant and his brother thereafter went to wardha and requested the jail superintendent to admit the deceased in the hospital for his proper treatment , as he was heart and asthma patient having sever pain in his chest. The jail Superintendent didn't accept the said request .

c. On 16.08.08 the deceased was released on bail. The complainant and his brother rushed to the jail with release warrant, however , the jail superintendent told them that as the time was over he would release on the next day.
d. On 17.08.08 before the complainant and his brother went to jail to take their father , one jal employee ,come to their house and told them that their father Shri. Shankar Ghume died in jail in the early morning .It is alleged that the deceased was not given proper treatment and was also not admitted in the hospital even though on 16.08.08 in the morning he complained the doctors of the jail about severe pain in his chest and difficulty in breathing .

With the aforesaid facts many question arise regarding the action taken by the police as well as the jail authorities. Even ignoring the gambling raid carried out by A.S.I , Shri Kochar and arresting accused including the deceased , on the ground , that the case is subjudice , the subsequent acts of the police are totally unreasonable and uncalled for and , therefore , not acceptable .looking to the gravity of the offence , and the age and the aliment of the deceased, the police could have shown grace and discretion by releasing the deceased on bail. Prima Facie we find substance in the allegations of the complainant that at 10.30 a.m. on 14.08.08 P.S.I. shri .Ghule of Wardha police station was , inclined to release the deceased on bail , he was prevented by S.P. Smt. Aswati Dorje , who ordered to book everybody U/S .151 Cr.P.C with the result the deceased had to remain in the lockup on the night of 14/15.08.08. In our opinion. S.P. Dorje couldn't have taken recourse to section 151 Cr. P.c against the deceased, since the deceased was charged not in the serious offences. Smt. Dhorje could have appreciated the old age and aliment of the deceased. There is no reason for us, not to believe the version , of the complainant that he had already informed the police about the development of chest pain of the deceased Hon'ble Supreme Court in Jogindar Kumar's Case (1994) 4 S.C.C 260 has laid down that Except in heinous offences like murder , dacotiy, robbery , rape etc .an arrest must be avoided . The power to arrest must be avoided when the offences are bailable and in that there is strong apprehension of the suspect absconding.

In our opinion S.P Dorje while totally ignoring the aforesaid guidelines in the judgment rendered by the Hon'ble Supreme court, misuse her power in ordering arrest of the deceased u/s 151 Cr.P.C

6. It was a matter of fact, the deceased had severe chest pain and was infact taken to the hospital at 2 a.m. on the same night. We have reason to believe that the said facts must have been brought to the notice of Naib Tahasiladar ,Shri Karande, Wardha when the deceased was produced before him on the nest day that is on 15.08.08. Even without giving any importance to the allegations of Rs .2000/- being demanded by She. Karande in releasing the deceased on bail, prima facie it appears that he has failed to take into consideration the request made to release the deceased on bail , prima facie it appears that he has failed to take into consideration the request made to release the deceased on bail because of his sever pain .BY ignoring the fact that the deceased , was already given medical treatment in the Government Hospital ,at Mid–night of the same day, it is reasonable to believe that he has mechanically passed the order, U/S 151 Cr.pc and illegally refused bail.

7. Like wise in our opinion the jail superintendent of District Prison, wardha is also Prima Facie responsible for not admitting deceased Shankar Ghume in the hospital even though he was specially informed regarding sever chest pain of the deceased and thus denying him proper treatment on 16.08.08 It is to be noted that the deceased died in the early morning of 17.08.08.

8. The aforesaid findings prima facie will hold three officers namely smt. Aswati Dor je , S.P., Wardha , Shri Dipak Karande , Naib Tahasiladar , Wardha and Shri V.D. Bhotie, the jail superintendent in performance of their duties responsible for the untimely death of shri.Ghume.We agree with findings recorded by sub divisional Magistrate ,Hinganghat, that proper and timely medical treatment could have, then saved the life of the deceased.

9. Since we have not heard the aforesaid officers' .It is necessary that an inquiry should be held against them in connection, with the untimely death of deceased Shankar Ghume in light of observation made by us.

10. In the result the following recommendatory directions are given . The appointing authorities of Smt. Aswati Dorje, S.P., Wardha ,Shri .Dilip Karande, Naib Thasildar, Wardha,Shri .V.D.Bhoite,jail Superintendent, Wardha shall hold Departmental Enquiry ,against them , in accordance with law and rules made under and shall complete the same as early as possible preferably within 3 months from the date of the receipt of his order, and shall file compliance report to this commission.

Subject to giving further , recommendations , on the compliance report, the case is closed.

The secretary of this commission to communication these recommendation to Government (through secretaries of concerned departments) and expedite compliance as his level.

2ND ADDITIONAL SESSIONS JUDGE, THANE.

ORDER BELOW EXH. I

IN CRIMINAL BAIL APPLN. NO. 712/2013

Date : 17.04.2013

1. The applicant/accused who has been arrested on 03.04.2013 for offences punishable under sections 465, 468/ 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 420 read with section 34 of the I.P.C. registered under section C.R.No.1-110/2013 of Kasar Vadavali Police Station by crime Branch, Wagle Estate Unit, Thane on the basis of the F.I.R. dated 26.03.2013 has preferred this application for being released on bail on the ground that he is innocent. There is no evidence to link the applicant with the alleged offence and that in view of the specific law laid down by the Hon'ble High Court in the case of KHEMLO SAKHARAM SAWANT VS. STATE 2002-BCR-(I)-689 and also in the case of SANJAY CHANDRA VS. C.B.I. 2012(1) SCC (Cri) 26 the accused is entitled for bail. The applicant/accused is ready to abide by all the conditions which may be imposed by the Court. There are no criminal antecedents shown by the police against the applicant. Hence prayed for allowing the application.

2. The prosecution resisted the said application by filing the reply through police inspector Mr. Vijay Shinde of Crime Branch Wagle Estate Unit, Thane below Exh.4 where they went on to submit that the accused Deenadayal Yadav had prepared false and fabricated documents relating to the police licence in respect of running of the security agencies and one of such fake licences was given to the applicant who was running his security agency by representing that the said licence was genuine and the said fake licence came to be seized from the applicant. Since the investigation is going on in order to ascertain as to whom all such fake licences have been given for running security agencies and further an offence under section 20 of Maharashtra Private Security Agency Act, 2005 has been lodged against the above said applicants under C.R.No. 385/2009, he may not be released on bail and therefore for all the above reasons pressed for the rejection of the bail application.

3. The learned advocate for the applicant argued that Section 467 I.P.C. will not be attracted in the instant case against the applicant as going by the prosecution case itself the preparation of the forged documents was carried by accused Deendayal Yadav. He pointed out that the said Deendayal Yadav is an office bearer of the union of security agencies and therefore it explains as to how the present applicant may have contacted Deenadayal Yadav who may have promised to get the said licence from the competent authority. Therefore, probably he may have acted as an agent for getting the said licence. So it is very difficult at this stage prima facie to believe that the applicant/accused was having any knowledge as to whether the said licence was a fake one.

4. There is no quarrel regarding the proposition of law that ordinarily the person suspected to have committed offence under section 420, 120B I.P.C. would be entitled to bail as laid down by the Apex Court in the case between CHANDRASWAMI VS. C.B.I. 1997 CRI.L.J. 3124. In the case between SANJAY CHANDRA VS. C.B.I. 2012(1) SCC (Cri) 26 bail is the rule and jail is an exception. The jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well settled principles and not in arbitrary manner. The court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. Further, at the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken. In the case between KHEMLO SAKHARAM SAWANT VS. STATE 2002-BCR-(I)-689 also it has been held that the Court should not get swayed away by perception of morality but should confine its decision to the requirement of law. In case of offences not punishable with death or imprisonment for life, grant of bail is rule and jail is an exception.

6. Now, in the instant case since the allegation of preparing false and fabricated licence is against accused Deendayal Yadav, naturally on the face of it section 467 of I.P.C. will not be applicable against the aplicant. Since I have already held that accused Deendayal Yadav was the office bearer of the union of security agencies and may have promised the applicant to procure licence from the Commissioner of Police, there is every likelihood of the said applicant/accused having approached the said accused Deendayal for getting the licence from him. So at this stage it is too early to say that the applicant/accused was having knowledge that the said licence which was being used by him for running security agency a forged and fabricated document. The said aspect would be certain taken into consideration at the time of the evidence at appropriate stage by the Court.

6. Now, the police is seeking rejection of the bail application on the sole ground that they are required to ascertain as to whom, apart from the applicant, such fake licences have been given by the accused Deendayal Yadav. Now, for ascertaining said fact there is no question of detaining the present applicant in jail. On the other hand, if the applicant/accused is released on bail and if any condition is imposed on him to co-operate the investigating machinery, that will be more helpful to investigate as to who are the other persons who have been provided such fake licence by accused Deendayal Yadav. Thus, if under such circumstance the applicant/accused is detained in jail, that will amount to punishment without any trial which of course will take some time for its disposal. Hence at this stage I am inclined to release the applicant/accused on bail. I therefore pass the following order –

ORDER

The application is allowed.

The applicant/accused is released on P.R. bond of Rs. 15,000/- (rupees fifteen thousand only) with one surety in the like amount, subject to following conditions -

The applicant shall attend before the investigating officer on' Monday and Friday of each week between 5.00 p.m. to 800 p.m. till further orders and shall co-operate with the investigating machinery in all respects.

He shall not tamper with prosecution evidence and shall also not threaten any prosecution witnesses.

Bail before the concerned J.MF.C.Thane.

(2011) 6 Supreme Court Cases 508

(BEFORE G.S. SINGHVI AND DR. B.S, CHAUHAN, JJ.)

Noida Intrapriniurs Association Petitioner Writ Petitions (C) No. 150 of 1997t with No, 529 of 1998,

A) Inference regarding mala fide exercise of power — When can be made — Undue haste — Allegedly public authority awarding similar work to contractor without inviting tenders when there was no urgency for said haste — On account of such haste in the absence of any urgency, Court can draw an adverse inference regarding the conduct of said public authority — Therefore, it is a matter of investigation to find out whether there was any ulterior motive – C.B.I. directed to conduct preliminary enquiry.

B) Constitution of India — Arts. 32, 14 and 21 — Public Interest Litigation (PIL) — Alleged corruption by public servant — Preliminary CBI inquiry — Public servant allegedly indulging in illegal, arbitrary and colourable exercise of power for favouring himself in allotment and conversion of land and also favouring contractors in awarding tenders and illegally "extending" contractual work for large sums awarding to same contractor additional work worth Crores more than the original work without inviting fresh tenders, without following prescribed procedure and without verifying as to whether contractor was eligible for said additional work — Said award of contract, held, is not permissible — Awarding the contract under the garb of so-called extension amounts to doing something indirectly which may not be permissible to be done directly — Work being worth in Crore more than the amount of original contract cannot be termed as an "addition" or "additional work"

C) Administrative Action — Administrative or Executive Function — Scope for initiating criminal proceedings distinguished from disciplinary proceedings -Doctrine of public trust and manner of utilisation of power vested in State and public authorities, reiterated — Actions of State or its instrumentality must be reasonable and fair and must be exercised for a bona fide purpose - The State or the public authority which holds the property for the public or which has been assigned the duty of grant of largesse, etc., acts as a trustee and, therefore, has to act fairly and reasonably. A public authority is ultimately accountable to the people in whom the sovereignty vests. (Para 38)

D. Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 — Ss. 19 and 13 — Corruption cases against public officers after retirement — Held, criminal proceedings after delay against a public officer would depend upon the gravity of offence — Scope for initiating criminal proceedings distinguished from disciplinary proceedings — In present case, despite the matter being 17-18 years old, being of 1993-1995, preliminary CBI inquiry directed by Supreme Court, to determine if there were grounds to initiate criminal proceedings against retired IAS officers concerned — Offence liable to be punished with more than 3 years' imprisonment — No limitation therefore.

Vidya Sagar, Ms Sangeeta Kumar, Nikhil Sharma, T.A. Khan, M. Khairati, A.K. Sharma, Ravi Prakash Malhotra, Vibhu Tiwari, Ms Deepti R. Mehrotra, Ravinder Singh* M.S. Yadav and Jogy Searia, Advocates] for the appearing parties;

Dr. B.S. CHAUHAN, J.

1. The Legislature of Uttar Pradesh enacted the U.P. Industrial Area Development Act, 1976, (hereinafter referred to as `Act 1976') for the purpose of proper planning and development of industrial and residential units and to acquire and develop the land for the same. The New Okhla Industrial Development Authority (hereinafter referred to as the `Authority'), has been constituted under the said Act, 1976. The object of the Act had been that genuine and deserving entrepreneurs may be provided industrial and residential plots and other necessary amenities and facilities. Thus, in order to carry out the aforesaid object, a new township came into existence. All the activities in the Authority had to be regulated in strict adherence to all the statutory provisions contained in relevant Acts, Rules and Regulations framed for this purpose. However, from the very inception of the township, there has always been a public hue and cry that officials responsible for managing the Authority are guilty of manipulation, nepotism and corruption. Wild and serious allegations of a very high magnitude had been leveled against some of the officials carrying out the responsibilities of implementing the Act and other statutory provisions.

2. The instant writ petition was originally filed seeking a large number of reliefs including the allotment of industrial and residential plots to the members of the petitioner-Association and a large number of officials who had acted as Chief Executive Officers (hereinafter referred to as `CEO') of the Authority had been impleaded therein as respondents. However, considering the fact that relief for personal benefits of the members had been sought and alternative means for seeking the redressal of grievances in that respect were available, the petitioner made a request to the Court that its petition may be treated as a public interest litigation (in short `PIL') for a limited purpose. This Court vide order dated 21.4.1997 treated the matter as PIL and issued show cause notice only to the extent of the following reliefs:

"(1) Issue writ of mandamus and/or any appropriate writ and direct the CBI to investigate into all the land allotments and conversion of lands made by the NOIDA during the past 10 years.

(2) Issue an appropriate writ and directions and frame guidelines for allotment of lands by the NOIDA."

3. Dr. Rajeev Dhavan, learned senior counsel who had been appearing for the petitioner in the matter was requested by this Court vide order dated 29.8.1997 to act as Amicus Curiae. The matter was heard several times by this Court and after scrutinising of a very large number of documents, the Court was of the opinion that the allegations made in the petition required investigation. Thus, vide order dated 15.12.1997, this Court issued notice to the State of U.P. to indicate its consent to an investigation being made by the Central Bureau of Investigation (hereinafter referred to as CBI), in view of the very serious nature of the allegations. The State of U.P. had also received similar complaints and thus, it constituted a Commission of Inquiry headed by Justice Murtaza Hussain, a former Judge of Allahabad High Court to enquire about the same. The Commission completed its task and submitted its report. The said report was also placed before this Court in the first week of January 1998. As the report indicated, prima facie view of the 3 Commission, that Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7 had committed serious irregularities and illegalities, a copy of the report of the Commission was also directed to be given to her and this Court vide order dated 6.1.1998 asked the State of U.P. as to whether this report had been accepted by the State Government and, if so, what was the likely follow up measure pursuant thereto. The State Government submitted a reply in response to the said show cause pointing out that the State Government proposed to initiate disciplinary proceedings against her.

4. In view of the material on record, this Court expressed tentative opinion that it would be more appropriate that the matter is investigated by the CBI and if such investigation discloses the commission of criminal offence(s), the persons found responsible should be prosecuted in a criminal court. However, considering the fact that allegations of a very high magnitude and gravity had been made against a large number of officials, this Court wanted the CBI to investigate first the cases against Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7, as is evident from the proceedings dated 20.1.1998, which reads as under:

"For the time being, we are directing the CBI to conduct an investigation in respect of the 4 irregularities in the matter of allotments and conversions of the plots.....

Shri G.L. Sanghi, the learned senior counsel appearing for respondent no.7 states that though the respondent no.7 does not admit that she has committed any irregularity in the matter of allotment or conversion of plots in NOIDA but according to respondent no.7 there are other persons who might have committed such irregularity and she seeks leave to file an affidavit in this regard. She may file an affidavit giving particulars of such irregular allotments and in the event of such affidavit being filed further directions in that regard will be given." (Emphasis added)

This Court by the same order also issued certain directions with regard to irregular allotments and conversion of plots which had been found to have been made in the report of Justice Murtaza Hussain Commission.

5. In view of the above referred to order, Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7 filed her affidavit with regard to irregularities committed by other officers, namely, Shri P.K. Mishra, respondent no.5; Shri Bijendra Sahay, respondent no.8; Shri Ravi Mathur, respondent no.4; and one Shri S.C. Tripathi. The affidavit filed by Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7 was considered by this Court on 24.2.1998 and took note of the fact that in respect of the 5 same/similar allegations made against Shri Bijendra Sahay, respondent no.8, the State Government had already accepted his explanation. So far as the allegations made against Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, and Shri P.K. Mishra, respondent nos. 4 and 5 respectively and one Shri S.C. Tripathi are concerned, the State Government vide order dated 18.7.1997 had referred the same to the Chairman of the Board of Revenue for inquiry and the same was pending.

6. In the meanwhile, Shri Mahinder Singh Yadav, husband of Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7 and one Shri Bali Ram, Ex. Member of Parliament also filed complaints against the aforesaid officials in 1996-1997, which were also referred to the Chairman, Board of Revenue for inquiry.

7. One Shri Naresh Pratap Singh also filed a complaint against some officers including Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 on 27.6.1997 before the Lok-Ayukta of U.P. However, the Lok-Ayukta vide letter dated 21.4.1998 to the State Government expressed his inability to conduct an enquiry against Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 and suggested that the matter be referred to the CBI. 6

8. This Court vide order dated 11.1.2005 constituted a Commission headed by Justice K.T. Thomas to examine a large number of issues, including as to why disciplinary proceedings had been dropped by the State of U.P. against several officials who had been impleaded as respondents in this case. The Commission submitted the report dated 24.12.2005, and after considering the same, this Court vide order dated 8.12.2008 closed the proceedings against Shri Bijendra Sahay, respondent no.8. One Shri S.C. Tripathi also stood exonerated in earlier proceedings.

In view of the order passed by this Court, the CBI conducted the enquiry against Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7 and filed a charge sheet against her. She was put on trial and proceeded with in accordance with law.

9. Thus, in view of the aforesaid factual matrix, this Court has to examine as to whether any action is warranted against Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 and if so, whether it is permissible to initiate the disciplinary proceedings against him as he reached the age of superannuation and has retired and the alleged misconduct had been committed by him in 1993-94, and as to whether the misconduct is of such a grave nature that it warrants the criminal prosecution and 7 if so, what should be the agency which may be entrusted with the investigation and prosecution.

10. Shri K.T.S. Tulsi, learned senior counsel appearing for respondent no.7 submitted that on similar allegations, this Court had directed CBI to initiate criminal proceedings against his client and criminal prosecution has been launched and ended in logical conclusion, thus, there could be no justification not to initiate the similar proceedings against Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4. Not initiating the proceedings on the similar or more grave charges would amount to treating the said respondent no.7 with hostile discrimination. The disciplinary proceedings cannot be initiated against him in view of delay and latches as the statutory rules applicable do not permit such a course at such a belated stage. The criminal prosecution can easily be launched. The matter requires investigation as to whether the said respondent no.4 had committed an offence under the provisions of Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 (hereinafter called the Act 1988).

11. Dr. Rajeev Dhavan, learned senior counsel/Amicus Curiae would submit that the gravity of allegations made against the said 8

respondent no.4 is of such a high magnitude that it warrants the same treatment as given to Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7. Dr. Dhavan has taken us through all the proceedings including the reports of the Chairman, Board of Revenue and K.T. Thomas Commission and submitted that it is a fit case directing the CBI to conduct enquiry against the respondent no.4. However, Dr. Rajeev Dhavan has raised serious objection in respect of intervention of the respondent no. 7 and opportunity of hearing accorded to Shri K.T.S. Tulsi, learned senior counsel on her behalf that in a case of this nature the respondent no.7 had no locus standi and right to raise any grievance whatsoever.

12. Shri Rakesh Dwivedi, learned senior counsel appearing for respondent no.4, has vehemently opposed the initiation of disciplinary proceedings or criminal prosecution on the ground that the Authority did not suffer any financial loss. There is nothing on record to show that the said respondent indulged in corruption, thus, the provisions of the Act 1988 were attracted. The said respondent had acted in good faith. The disciplinary proceedings cannot be initiated, being time barred. All the allegations had been made against the said respondent no.4 at the behest of respondent no.7, thus, suffers from mala fide and bias. The said respondent had paid the transfer charges only once to 9 the tune of Rs.1.80 lacs. The second conversion had subsequently been cancelled by the respondent no.7 herself. Due to pendency of this case, the said respondent could not get the physical possession of any of the plots. The change of user of the land in Sector 32 was made in good faith. More so, such a change was cancelled and the green area was restored by the respondent no.7 herself. The contract given by the respondent no.4 to certain contractors had been at the rate on which they had been working earlier. Thus, the Authority did not suffer any loss whatsoever.

13. Before we proceed with the case on merits, we would like to make it clear that Mrs. Neera Yadav, IAS, respondent no.7, had been given an opportunity by this Court vide order dated 20.1.1998 to file her affidavit disclosing the delinquency committed by other officers. In pursuance of the said order, she submitted her affidavit. Therefore, it is not possible for us at such a belated stage to deny her the right of hearing and ignore the submissions made by her counsel, Shri K.T.S. Tulsi. (vide: V.S. Achuthanandan v. R. Balakrishna Pillai & Ors., (2011) 3 SCC 317).

14. We have considered the rival submissions made by learned counsel for the parties and perused the record.

15. The services of Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 stood governed by All India Services (Death-cum-Retirement Benefits) Rules, 1958. Rule 6(b), thereof, provides that in case the delinquent had already retired, the proceedings shall not be instituted against him without the sanction of the Central Government and shall be in respect of an event which took place not more than four years before the institution of such proceedings. Thus, it is evident that law does not permit holding disciplinary proceedings against Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 at this belated stage and this view stands fortified by the judgments of this Court in B.J. Shelat v. State of Gujarat & Ors., AIR 1978 SC 1109; State Bank of India v. A.N. Gupta & Ors., (1997) 8 SCC 60; State of U.P. & Ors. v. Harihar Bholenath, (2006) 13 SCC 460; UCO Bank & Anr. v. Rajinder Lal Capoor, AIR 2007 SC

2129; Ramesh Chandra Sharma v. Punjab National Bank & Anr., (2007) 9 SCC 15; and UCO Bank & Anr. v. Rajinder Lal Capoor, AIR 2008 SC 1831.

16 So far as the initiation of criminal proceedings is concerned it is governed by the provisions of Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (hereinafter referred to as Cr.P.C.). Section 468 thereof puts an embargo on the court to take cognizance of an offence after expiry of 1 limitation provided therein. However, there is no limitation prescribed for an offence punishable with more than 3 years imprisonment. Section 469 declares as to when the period of limitation would start. Sections 470-471 provide for exclusion of period of limitation in certain cases. Section 473 enables the court to condone the delay provided the court is satisfied with the explanation furnished by the prosecution or where the interest of justice demands extension of the period of limitation.

This Court in Japani Sahoo v. Chandra Sekhar Mohanty, AIR 2007 SC 2762, dealt with the issue and observed as under: "14. The general rule of criminal justice is that a crime never dies. The principle is reflected in the well-known maxim nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi (lapse of time is no bar to Crown in proceeding against offenders)..... It is settled law that a criminal offence is considered as a wrong against the State and the Society even though it has been committed against an individual. Normally, in serious offences, prosecution is launched by the State and a Court of Law has no power to throw away prosecution solely on the ground of delay. Mere delay in approaching a Court of Law would not by itself afford a ground for dismissing the case though it may be a relevant circumstance in reaching a final verdict."

17. The aforesaid judgment was followed by this Court in Sajjan Kumar v. Central Bureau of Investigation, (2010) 9 SCC 368. 1

18. Thus, it is evident that question of delay in launching criminal prosecution may be a circumstance to be taken into consideration in arriving at a final decision, but it cannot itself be a ground for dismissing the complaint. More so, the issue of limitation has to be examined in the light of the gravity of the charge.

19. Thus, we have to examine as to whether the said respondent could be tried for commission of an offence, if any, under the provisions of the Act, 1988.

Section 13 thereof, reads:

"Criminal misconduct by a public servant.- (1) A public servant is said to commit the offence of criminal misconduct,-

(b) .....

(c) if he dishonestly or fraudulently misappropriates or otherwise converts for his own use any property entrusted to him or under his control as a public servant or allows any other person to do so; or

(d) if he, -

(i) by corrupt or illegal means, obtains for himself or for any other person any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage; or

(ii) by abusing his position as a public servant, obtains for himself or for any 1 other person any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage; or

(iii) while holding office as a public servant, obtains for any person any valuable thing or pecuniary advantage without any public interest." (Emphasis added)

20. Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 had been the CEO, NOIDA from July 1993 to 9.1.1994 and the CEO, Greater NOIDA from 10.1.1994 to 26.1.1995. Altogether, there had been 14 allegations against him which the Chairman, Board of Revenue had examined. The findings recorded by the Chairman, Board of Revenue were also placed before Justice K.T. Thomas Commission. However, at the time of arguments, Dr. Rajeev Dhavan, learned Amicus Curiae has submitted that there are three major allegations in respect of which this Court must direct the CBI enquiry. He has drawn our attention to the findings recorded by the Chairman, Board of Revenue on allegation nos. (iv), (ix) and (xiii) which are as under : Allegation No. (iv) :

Shri Ravi Mathur allotted contracts worth Rs.10 crores to different contractors on selection basis without inviting tenders.

Findings:

(i) The award of the contract to M/s. Anil Kumar & Co., was approved by the CEO. The argument that the usual 1 process was not followed on account of urgency is not acceptable. (para 1.4.3.2)

(ii) The award of the contract to M/s. Techno Construction Co. was a pre-detemined decision. No satisfactory explanation why this company only was selected. (para 1.4.3.3.) (iii) The notes in the file for the award of the contract to M/s. Anil Kumar & Co. in Sector Gamma were tailor made and the urgency projected cannot be accepted. (para 1.4.3.4) (iv) There was no urgency warranting the award of contract to Mr. J.K. Jain, which was approved by the CEO also. (para 1.4.3.5)

(v) The proposal to award work to M/s. Fair Deal Engineers was faulty and the urgency clause was not well defined. The note was approved by the CEO. (para 1.4.3.6)

(vi) The argument of urgency advanced is not acceptable in some cases (para 1.4.4). At least in one case there was not even a necessity to award the work. (para 1.4.4) (vii) No cogent regions were given in the note file for selecting a particular contractor. Some of the notes appear to be tailor made. The works were got done by the Manager/Senior Manager through hand picked contractors without inviting tenders and without following financial norms. (para 1.4.4.)

Allegation No. (ix):

Shri Ravi Mathur caused financial loss to NOIDA by not paying conversion charges with respect to the plot allotted to him. He initially asked for conversion from Sector 35 to Sector 27 but since he did not deposit the required amount the offer of conversion was withdrawn. Subsequently he applied for conversion from Sector 35 to Sector 44.

Findings:

The only conversion which took place was from Sector 35 to Sector 44 for which conversion charges were deposited. It is a matter under the exclusive competence of the Authority and its Chief Executive as to whether it was to be treated as two conversions or one conversion only. It appears that it was a subtle and fine way to help a fellow officer. In any event Smt. Neera Yadav had approved the second application on 26.10.1994. The file regarding the allotment and conversion of plot of Shri Ravi Mathur is not traceable in NOIDA but that is for the Authority to take appropriate action. (para 1.9.5) Allegation No. (xiii):

A 13 hectare City Park situated near Sectors 24, 33 and 35 in NOIDA was destroyed and a new residential Sector 32 in violation of the Master Plan was carved out comprising of 200 plots.

Findings:

(i) The procedure as prescribed in the 1991 Regulations was not followed while making the change of land use. (para 1.13.7)

(ii) The decision of land use change was based on logic but the proposal should have been put up before the Board. The then Chief Architect Planner did not point out this legal requirement and failed in his primary duty in advising the ACEO and CCEO. (para 1.13.7)

(iii) There was no urgency for the development work in this sector. The development work was started and awarded without following the tender procedure in flagrant violation of established procedure for which the then Chief Project Engineer and the then General Manager (F) are responsible. (para 1.13.7)

(iv) The Board has taken its duties casually and there was no serious effort to check, analyse and advise. (para 1.13.7) 1

21. So far as these allegations are concerned, it is evident from the record that M/s Anil Kumar & Co. had been allotted originally the work on the basis of tender for Rs. 2.75 crores in Sector `Gamma' in Greater NOIDA, in connection with the construction of water drains. However, they had been awarded additional work by Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no. 4, worth Rs.3.75 crores on a &quot;deviation basis&quot;. In fact, awarding such work cannot be termed as an `addition' or `additional work' because the work is worth Rs.1 crore more than the amount of original contract. In such a fact-situation, even if there had been no financial loss to the Greater NOIDA, indisputably, the additional work for such a huge amount had been awarded without following the procedure prescribed in law. More so, there is nothing on record to show as to whether the said contractor M/s Anil Kumar & Co. was eligible to carry out the contract worth Rs.6.50 crores. Awarding the contract under the garb of so-called extension, amounts to doing something indirectly which may not be permissible to do directly. Admittedly, such a course of action is not permissible in law.

22. It is a settled proposition of law that whatever is prohibited by law to be done, cannot legally be affected by an indirect and circuitous contrivance on the principle of "quando aliquid prohibetur, prohibetur at omne per quod devenitur ad illud", which means" "whenever a thing is prohibited, it is prohibited whether done directly or indirectly". (See: Swantraj & Ors. v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 517; Commissioner of Central Excise, Pondicherry v. ACER India Ltd., (2004) 8 SCC 173; and Sant Lal Gupta & Ors. v. Modern Co-operative Group Housing Society Ltd. & Ors., JT (2010) 11 SC 273).

23. In Jagir Singh v. Ranbir Singh & Anr., AIR 1979 SC 381, this Court has observed that an authority cannot be permitted to evade a law by "shift or contrivance." While deciding the said case, the Court placed reliance on the judgment in Fox v. Bishop of Chester, (1824) 2 B &C 635, wherein it has been observed as under:- "To carry out effectually the object of a statute, it must be construed as to defeat all attempts to do, or avoid doing in an indirect or circuitous manner that which it has prohibited or enjoined."

24. The second work had been allotted to M/s Techno Construction Co. worth Rs.1.00 crore without inviting fresh tenders etc., on the ground that earlier a contract for execution of similar work i.e. construction of road had been awarded to it. In view of the fact that there was no urgency, such a contract should not have been awarded. Undoubtedly, the respondent no.4 is guilty of proceeding in haste and that amounts to arbitrariness.

25. While dealing with the issue of haste, this Court in the case of Bahadursinh Lakhubhai Gohil v. Jagdishbhai M. Kamalia & Ors., (2004) 2 SCC 65, referred to the case of Dr. S.P. Kapoor v. State of Himachal Pradesh & Ors., AIR 1981 SC 2181 and held that:

".....when a thing is done in a post-haste manner, mala fide would be presumed."

26. In Zenit Mataplast Private Limited v. State of Maharashtra & Ors., (2009) 10 SCC 388, this Court held : "Anything done in undue haste can also be termed as arbitrary and cannot be condoned in law".

27. Thus, in case an authority proceeds in undue haste, the Court may draw an adverse inference from such conduct. It further creates a doubt that if there was no sufficient reason of urgency, what was the occasion for the respondent no.4 to proceed in such haste and why fresh tenders had not been invited.

28. It is evident from the record that the respondent no.4 had originally been allotted plot no.118, Sector-35 measuring 360 sq. meters which was converted to plot no.G-25, Sector-27 measuring 392 sq. meters. However, as the respondent no.4 did not deposit the required charges the said order of conversion stood withdrawn. By subsequent conversion, respondent no.4 got plot no.A-15 in Sector-44. Thus, two conversions had been made on different dates. However, he paid the transfer charges only once to the tune of Rs.1.80 lacs. It is alleged that by first conversion, the respondent no.4 not only got the plot in a better location, but also a plot of bigger size. Second allotment was further, as alleged, in a far better geographical position.

29. There is no provision under the Act 1976 or Regulation 1991 for conversion. It is rather governed by Office Order No.4070/ NOIDA/DCEO/92 dated 3.7.1992. The relevant part thereof basically provides that conversion was permissible only in case of residential plots. Relevant part thereof reads as under:

"3. In case of residential plots, only cancelled and surrendered properties shall be offered for conversion.....

The details of availability of properties shall be available in the office of Dy. Chief Executive Officer.

xx xx xx

xx xx xx

6. All expenses pertaining to conversion such as conversion charges, locational benefit charges, stamp duty, registration charges etc. shall be borne by the allottee.

xx xx xx

8. Conversion shall not be allowed more than once to any allottee.

xx xx xx

11. Chairman-cum-Chief Executive Officer may relax the above guidelines in exceptional circumstances."

30. The aforesaid Office Order dated 3.7.1992 stood modified vide order dated 27.9.1993 (when the respondent no.4 was the CEO, NOIDA) to the effect that a large number of vacant plots were available in old developed sectors. The same may be included in the plots availability list.

31. That the list of available plots had been expanded during the period when the respondent no.4 was CEO, NOIDA and unallotted plots of various sectors including Sector 27 were also included in that list in which the respondent no.4 himself got the first conversion. It is a matter of investigation as to whether the Order dated 3.7.1992 was modified vide Order dated 27.9.1993 with ulterior purpose.

32. Section 12 of the Act 1976 makes the provisions of Chapter VII and Sections 30, 32, 40 to 47, 49, 50, 51, 53 and 58 of the U.P. Urban Planning and Development Act 1973 (hereinafter referred to as the `Act 1973') mutatis mutandis applicable to the Act 1976. Section 17 of the Act 1976 declares that the Act 1976 would have an over- riding effect over the provisions of the Act 1973. Section 18 confers the power on the State Government to make rules by issuing a Notification for carrying out the purposes of the Act 1976. Section 19 of the Act 1976 provides for the framing of regulations by the NOIDA in respect of holding of meetings; defining the powers and duties of the CEO; and management of properties of the Authority etc. In view thereof, the New Okhla Industrial Development Area (Preparation and Finalisation of Plan) Regulations 1991 (hereinafter called as `Regulations 1991') had been framed with the prior approval of the State Government as required under Section 19 of the Act 1976 and, therefore, have statutory force. By virtue of the provisions of sub- section 2(b) of Section 6 of the Act 1976, it is a statutory requirement that in the plan to be prepared by the NOIDA, it must necessarily provide as to for what particular purpose any area/site is to be used, namely, industrial, commercial or residential. The Authority is competent under sub-section 2(c) of Section 6, to regulate the construction etc. having regard to the nature for which the site has been earmarked. Section 8 of the Act 1976 restrains the use of any site for the purpose other than for which it is earmarked in the Master Plan. Section 9 prohibits the use of any area or erection of any building in contravention of Regulations 1991. Section 14 of the Act 1976 clearly provides for cancellation of allotment and resumption/re- entry, where the allotment had been made in contravention of the rules and regulations. In case the Authority wants to change the user of the land, condition precedent remains to amend the Master Plan.

33. There is nothing on record to show that any amendment had ever been made either in the Master Plan or in the Regulations 1991 before the change of user of land, when a 13 hectare City Park situated near Sectors 24, 33 and 35 was abolished and a new residential Sector 32 was carved out comprising 200 plots. Even if the said change made by Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4 stood nullified, subsequently by Smt. Neera Yadav, respondent no.7, it does not exonerate him from committing an illegality. It is a matter of investigation as to what was the motive for which such a change had been made by Shri Ravi Mathur, IAS, respondent no.4, unauthorisedly and illegally. Admittedly he was not competent to do so without seeking the amendments as mentioned hereinabove. 2

34. The State or the public authority which holds the property for the public or which has been assigned the duty of grant of largesse etc., acts as a trustee and, therefore, has to act fairly and reasonably. Every holder of a public office by virtue of which he acts on behalf of the State or public body is ultimately accountable to the people in whom the sovereignty vests. As such, all powers so vested in him are meant to be exercised for public good and promoting the public interest. Every holder of a public office is a trustee. State actions required to be non-arbitrary and justified on the touchstone of Article 14 of the Constitution. Action of the State or its instrumentality must be in conformity with some principle which meets the test of reason and relevance. Functioning of a "democratic form of Government demands equality and absence of arbitrariness and discrimination". The rule of law prohibits arbitrary action and commands the authority concerned to act in accordance with law. Every action of the State or its instrumentalities should neither be suggestive of discrimination, nor even apparently give an impression of bias, favouritism and nepotism. If a decision is taken without any principle or without any rule, it is unpredictable and such a decision is antithesis to the decision taken in accordance with the rule of law. The Public Trust Doctrine is a part of the law of the land. The doctrine has grown from Article 21 of the Constitution. In essence, the action/order of the State or State instrumentality would stand vitiated if it lacks bona fides, as it would only be a case of colourable exercise of power. The Rule of Law is the foundation of a democratic society. (Vide: M/s. Erusian Equipment & Chemicals Ltd. v. State of West Bengal & Anr., AIR 1975 SC 266; Ramana Dayaram Shetty v. The International Airport Authority of India & Ors., AIR 1979 SC 1628; Haji T.M. Hassan Rawther v. Kerala Financial Corporation, AIR 1988 SC 157; Kumari Shrilekha Vidyarthi etc. etc. v. State of U.P. & Ors., AIR 1991 SC 537; and M.I. Builders Pvt. Ltd. v. Radhey Shyam Sahu & Ors., AIR 1999 SC 2468).

35. Power vested by the State in a Public Authority should be viewed as a trust coupled with duty to be exercised in larger public and social interest. Power is to be exercised strictly adhering to the statutory provisions and fact-situation of a case. "Public Authorities cannot play fast and loose with the powers vested in them". A decision taken in arbitrary manner contradicts the principle of legitimate expectation. An Authority is under a legal obligation to exercise the power reasonably and in good faith to effectuate the purpose for which power stood conferred. In this context, "in good faith" means "for legitimate reasons". It must be exercised bona fide for the purpose and for none other. (Vide: Commissioner of Police, Bombay v. Gordhandas Bhanji, AIR1952 SC 16; Sirsi Municipality v. Ceceila Kom Francis Tellis, AIR 1973 SC 855; The State of Punjab & Anr. v. Gurdial Singh & Ors., AIR 1980 SC 319; The Collector (Distt. Magistrate) Allahabad & Anr. v. Raja Ram Jaiswal, AIR 1985 SC 1622; Delhi Administration (Now NCT of Delhi) v. Manohar Lal, (2002) 7 SCC 222; and N.D. Jayal & Anr. v. Union of India & Ors., AIR 2004 SC 867).

36. In view of the above, we are of the considered opinion that these allegations being of a very serious nature and as alleged, the respondent no.4 had passed orders in colourable exercise of power favouring himself and certain contractors, require investigation. Thus, in view of the above, we direct the CBI to have preliminary enquiry and in case the allegations are found having some substance warranting further proceeding with criminal prosecution, may proceed in accordance with law.

It may be pertinent to mention that any observation made herein against respondent no.4 would be treated necessary to decide the present controversy. The CBI shall investigate the matter without being influenced by any observation made in this judgment. The writ petition stands disposed of accordingly. Before parting with the case, we would like to express our gratitude and record appreciation to Dr. Rajeev Dhavan, learned senior counsel for rendering commendable assistance to the Court as Amicus Curiae.

Hon'ble Judge(s) : B.N.AGRAWAL, A.K.MATHUR,JJ

Civil Appeal 3157 Of 1998, Oct 13,2004
E.T.Sunup ..Vs…C.A.N.S.S.Employees Association

A) CONTEMPT OF COURT – deliberate attempt on the part bureaucracy to circumvent order of court and try to take recourse to one justification or other– this shows complete lack of grace in accepting the order of the Court -this tendency of undermining the court's order cannot be countenanced –in democracy the role of Court cannot be subservient to the administrative fiat – the executive and legislature had to work within constitution framework and judiciary has been given role of watch dog to keep the legislature and executive within check- the appellant office flouted order of this court is guilty of contempt of court.

B) PUNISHMENT TO BUREAUCRATS - apology tendered – order of court complied- held – if the Court's are flouted like this , then people will loose faith in the court –therefore it is necessary that such violation should be dealt with strong hands and to convey to the authorities that the courts are not going to take things lightly - order of the high court convincing the officer under contempt of court's act and imposition of fine of Rs 5000 is affirmed .

A.K.MATHUR, J.

(1) This appeal is directed against the order passed by the Gauhati High Court dated 26th May 1998 whereby the Division Bench has convicted Shri S.T. Sunup, Commissioner-cum-Secretary to Govt Finance Department , Government of Nagaland: and sentenced him to undergo simple imprisonment of one month and also to pay a fine of Rs 10,000/-, in default, further simple imprisonment of one month However respondent no. 2, A.C. Saikia was impleaded as party in this contempt petition but he was not party in civil rule no 40(K)96 against which this contempt arises, therefore he was discharged More so he stood retired on reaching superannuation some time in the month of June/ July 1997.

(2) The brief facts which are necessary for the disposal of the appeal are as follows. That by a W.T. Message dated 30th December, 1995 the State Government in the Department of Finance had stopped all payments of the employees of the State Government except salaries and pensions. The W.T. Message reads as under:

" NO. BUD/1-2/95-96 DTD 30.12.1995(.) STOP ALL STATES GOVT PAYMENTS RPT STOP ALL STATE GOVT PAYMENTS WITH IMMEDIATE EFFECT UNTIL FURTHER ORDERS EXCEPT SALARIES AND PENSIONS FOR DECEMBER 1995 TO BE PAID FROM 5.1.96 RPT 5.1.96. ONWARDS (.) NO OTHER PAYMENT RPT NO OTHER PAYMENT SHALL BE ALLOWED EVEN AGAINST DRAWAL AUTHORITIES ALREADY ISSUED UNTIL FURTHER ORDERS (.) PLEASE CONFIRM STRICT COMPLIANCE(.)"

(3) The above message was amended on 30th January. 1996 and the ban imposed was relaxed with regard to payment of salaries to regular staff, pension, including arrear of pension, leave encashment and GIS of the retired Government employees.

(4) Earlier on 29th September 1994 it was stated that no application for special relaxation of G.P.P. will be entertained The message reads as under:

" NO FIN/GEN/39/93 DT KMA THE 29th SEPT '94 (.) NO APPLICATION FOR SPECIAL RELAXATION OF G.P.F. WILL BE ENTERTAINED TILL FINANCIAL POSITION IMPROVES (.) REQUEST NOT TO FORWARD ANY APPLN DURING OCT '94 "

(5) Thereafter the above orders were challenged by the Confederation of All Nagaland State Services Empioyees Association (in short CANSSEA). CANSSEA filed a Civil Rule 40(K)96 by its General Secretary The grievance of the petitioner association was banning of withdrawal of G.P F While issuing a rule returnable within 6 weeks the court on 17.5.96 after hearing both the parties, passed an interim order which reads as under:

"In the facts and circumstances of this case and in the light of submission made at the Bar I am of the view that an interim order has become necessary. Accordingly, the impugned order dated 30.12.95 issued by the Finance Department in so far as it concerns withdrawal of G P.F money shall remain suspended until further orders."

(6) The interim order was not complied with by the respondent. Therefore, the CANSSE Association filed a contempt petition which came to be registered as civil original (contemot) petition no 17(K)96 in which the present contemnor Shri E.T. Sunup, Finance Commissioner, Government of Nagaiand. Kohima was arrayed as respondent no. 1 and a notice was issued and he filed a counter. Since the earlier Civil Rule was complete in all respect, therefore, both the Civil Rule and contempt petition were heard together and they were accordingly disposed of vide court's order dated 25.2.97 and the following directions were given:
"14 Having said enough, this petition is disposed with the following directions:- (a) Second respondent is directed to lift the ban with regard to withdrawal/advance of G.P. F. within a week from the date of receipt of this order (b) The G.P.F. withdrawal/advance shall be allowed only after submission of statements with regard to the availability of the amount in the credit of the subscriber. (c) Every Treasury Officer shall, before honouring of withdrawal/advance of G.P.F insist that latest statement showing the accounts in the credit of the subscriber are made available before him. (d) The Accountant General shall see that the latest statements are issued correctly and on the basis of actual subscription subscribed by the subscriber (e) Every Head of the Department shall also see that before they forward the application of G.P. Fund withdrawal/advance, the latest statement indicating the availability of money in the credit of the subscriber is made available "

(7) The Orders dated 30th September 1995, 30th January, 1996 and 29th September, 1994 were quashed, so far as the withdrawal and advance of GPF was concerned. The contempt petition was also disposed of and it was observed by the High Court under para 4 of the aforesaid order that the contemnor has made a misleading statement in paragraph 3 of the counter because it has been categorically stated by the contemnor that impugned W T. message dated 30.12.95 was effectively withdrawn However the order of withdrawal of ban imposed on 30th December, 1995 was not produced by the contemnor. While disposing of the contempt petition, the following observations were made by the Court

" This Court has given seven days' time from the date of receipt of the order to the contemnors to lift the ban imposed on withdrawal/advance of G.P. Fund on 30 12.95 Contemnors also in paragraph 8 of its counter tender unqualified apology if there is some omission of commission which might have taken place in giving to the effective order of the court Contemnors also categorically averred that he has the highest respect for this Court and he has no intention of showing any disregard or disobedience to any order or direction passed by this Court Wherever the direction of this Court is not carried out to its logical conclusion, it is the Ruler of law that suffers. Carrying out the order of this Court is an enforcement of the Rule of Law. We therefore, insist that our order should be carried out to enforce the Rule of Law. However, although the contempt has been made out, in view of tne averment made in paragraph 8 of the counter by contemnors terdering unqualified apology, this Court with great hesitation accept the unqualified apology tendered by the contemnor keeping in view that the court has already directed the contemnors to lift ban on withdrawal/advance of G P Fund imposed on 30.12 95 and 29th September, 1994 passed in Civil Rule 40(K)96"

(8) Despite the aforesaid order, it was not complied with and, therefore, a second contempt petition was filed which is the subject matter of the present appeal

(9) It was submitted before the Court that despite leniency shown by the court for withdrawing the order within one week, the respondent has deliberately and wilfully not abided by the order and flouted the same thereby bringing the administration of justice into disrespect. A reply was filed to this contempt petition and it was submitted that the copy of the order was not received by the respondent and therefore it could not be complied with and he denied that he had violated the order of the court It was submitted that meanwhile an appeal was filed and operation of order was stayed by the Division Bench. Therefore, no contempt was committed, however, an apology was also tendered for omission and commission if any.

(10) An issue with regard to receipt of the certified copy of order was dealt with by the court at length to show that certified copy was delivered in office of Finance Commission but it is irrelevant now because impugned order was stayed by the Division Bench of High Court on 28.5.1997. However, fact remains that no application was moved for extension of time given by court i.e. one week

(11) Subsequently, the writ appeal was also disposed of by the Division Bench of the Gauhati High Court vide its order dated 11 th March, 2004 and it was observed as under:

"In view of the discussion, we find no good reason to interfere with the order passed by the learned single judge and dismiss the appeal with an observation that whatever applications may be pending or moved for withdrawals by the subscribers/employees, they shall be dealt with in accordance with Rule applicable as contained in the General Provident Fund(Central Services) Rules, 1960."

(12) A statement was made before the Division Bench by the advocate-general that he is authorized to make a statement that now no ban is there against withdrawal of amount by the employees from their Provident Fund accounts. However, the order of the single judge bench was affirmed by Division Bench The learned counsel for the appellant submitted that there was no ban in reality because provident fund amount was released from time to time, and in support of it he drew our attention to Annexure-'G' showing GPF receipts and disbursements in the year 1996-97 Accordingly, total receipt towards GPF was Rs. 67.36 crore and disbursement was Rs. 25.29 crore. The amount of Rs. 25.29 crore was disbursed after the order passed by the learned single judge. However, learned counsel for appellant was unable to point out at the time of argument whether administrative order passed by authorities was revoked or not. But subsequently he filed an affidavit of Mr. E.T. Sunup, the then Finance Commissioner that Govt. now on 23 9.2004 has withdrawn the Order. The orderreads as under -

" In compliance so the Honourable Gauhati High Court orders dated 2.5.2.97 in Civil Rule 40(K)96 and dated 11.3.99 in writ appeal No 262/97 the following orders of the State Govt given by the Finance Department, in so far relating to advances and withdrawals of G P F by the State government employees that were quashed by the Hon'ble Gauhati High Court, are hereby being revoked with immediate effect (i) NO FIN/GEN/39/93 OF 29.9.1994 (ii) NO. BUS/1-2/95-96 OF 30.12.1995 AND (iii) W/T message of 30.1 1996 (H. KHULU) IAS Finance Commissioner"(13) (But this administrative order was issued after close of arguments.) He also submitted that subsequently a similar ban was imposed and a contempt petition 5/99 was filed in the Gauhati High Court and the Hon'ble Court on 14th March, 2000 set aside the impugned order and directed that whatever applications were pending or moved for withdrawal by the subscribers/ employees be dealt with in accordance with Rules. The contempt petition was thereafter disposed of.

(14) Learned Counsel submitted that on account of subsequent event now the ban does not survive and GPF is being disbursed and order has been withdrawn, appellant's apology be accepted and he be discharged. He submitted that appellant has put in long 30 years of service and he has never shown any disrespect to court's order. Learned counsel for the respondent supported the order of the High Court

(15) We have heard both the learned counsel at length. We are of the opinion that the present order passed by the High Court in the facts and circumstances the case is fully justified. Once a stand was taken by the advocate general that the ban does not survive and amount of GPF was disbursed during the period 1996-97, then there was no reason why the order banning of disbursement of GPF was not revoked The stand taken by the State on one hand that amount of GPF was disbursed still they were not prepared to revoke the order we fail to understand this inconsistent stand. Once the administrative order is issued then it cannot be revoked by oral submission before court. It has to be revoked by another administrative order (which they have now passed). If the advocate general had made a statement before the court then it should have been followed with the administrative order revoking the ban. Till the date of argument learned counsel for the appellant could not produce before us the order revoking the ban, on the contrary the ban was kept in force and the second contempt petition was filed before the court and the advocate genera! again made a statement that GPF applications will be processed that makes the matter worse for the petitioner and it does not mitigate the situation. It is different that now a realization has dawn upon the authorities as they find no escape route for them, therefore, they have now revoked the order dated 25.2.1997 by the Order dated

23.9,2004 after close of arguments(16) It has become a tendency with the Government Officer to somehow or the other circumvent the orders of court and try to take recourse to one justification or other This shows complete lack of grace in accepting the orders of the court This tendency of undermining the court's order cannot be countenanced This Court time and again has emphasized that in democracy the role of the court cannot be subservient to the administrative fait. The executive and legislature has to work within Constitutional frame work ana the judiciary has been given a role of watch dog to keep the legislature and executive witnin check. In the present case we fail to understand the counter filed by the appellant before the Court. On one hand they say that all the cases of GPF have been processed and on the other hand they are not prepared to revoke the administrative order. This only shows a deliberate attempt OR the part of the bureaucracy to circumvent the order of the court and stick to their stand. This is ciear violation of court's order and appellant is guiity of flouting the court's Order,

(17) In the facts and circumstances of the case, the view taken by the High Court does not call for interference.

(18) While coming to the question of sentence, learned counsel for the appellant submitted that the incumbent is on the verge of retirement and he has suffered a lot and he has an unblemished career of 30 years of service. More so now order dated 25.2.1997 has been revoked though belated therefore a mercy be shown to him and his apology may be accepted. But if the court's orders are flouted like this, then people will loose faith in the courts. Therefore, it is necessary to deal with such type of violation of court's order with strong hands and to convey to the authorities that the courts are not going to take things lightly. However, looking to the long career of this Officer and now order has been revoked, we do not propose to punish him with imprisonment but we propose to impose a fine of Rs. 5,000/- (Rupees five thousand) only and in default of payment of fine, to undergo a simple imprisonment for one month. The incumbent shall deposit the amount in the State Treasury within one month from today.

(19) Hence, as a result we affirm the order of the High Court and punish the respondent no. 1 for committing contempt of court's order and impose a fine of Rs. 5.000/- (Rupees five thousand) only, in default of payment of fine, sentence him simple imprisonment for one month. The impugned order is modified to this extant. The civil appeal is disposed of accordingly.

HON'BLE JUDGE : WALSH, J.

Sukhnandan Lal – Accused – Applicant…Vs…King – Emperor – Non Applicant.

==========

I.P.C. Sec. 167 – Officer tampering with official records and issuing false copies is liable to be punished severely – Not merely for his own conduct but as a deterrent to others,

Kumuda Prasad—for Applicant, Assistant Government Advocate—for the Crown,

Walsh, J.—I am surprised at the judgment which the learned Sessions Judge has permitted himself to deliver in this case. In the first place, it is not disputed that the applicant before me is a public official charged by Government in the public interest to preserve permanent records of the rights, and positions of parties and interest in land, in order that people may not be injured by false claims, and that there always may be a reliable record available for Courts of justice; and whether or not he had any ulterior motive, nobody in this world can say, he did what he Show was wrong, and a breach of his duty to the Governments-conduct which is constantly complained of in the case of patwaris, and which causes untold trouble to poor people who, are compelled to lose their rights because of the "uncertainty and difficulty of establishing clear evidence. To my mind any of &ciai| however humble, who deliberately tampers with official records and issues false copies, (whatever his motives, deserves; severe punishment, not merely for --his own '[conduct, but as a deterrent to others who .may be tempted to follow his- example. In this case the Magistrate convicted Jihe Patwari, and according to the view of the Sessions Judge rightly convicted him, and sentenced him to twdv-terms of one year each to run concurrently, In addition to a small fine, with two months additional imprisonment in lieu of the fine.

In my opinion, and I am always ready .to overlook offences committed by persons who yield to sudden temptation for the first time and to take a lenient view of their conduct, in the case of found guilty of such conduct as this, a year's imprisonment is quite a reasonable sentence which no Court ought to interfere with. The learned Judge has reduced it to three months. He has written a labored judgement in potion of which I regret to find that the has rather gone out of his way to minimize the conduct of the patwari in issuing false copies. I do not stop to consider whether the Sessions Judge is right in that view or not, but I-take the opinion which he has formed and has expressed in other parts of his judgment. He finds that when the Munsif's attention was called to discrepancy, and he, the Munsif, in the pursuance of his duty,. rightly examined the Patwari and his papers and reported the matter to the Collector, the patwari in the meantime interpolated another year in his copy of the khasra, and made a note that the khasra had ' been taken by the Munsif, and imported that the Government work of preparing annual records was suffering in consequence of the conduct of the Munsif. The learned Sessions Judge says:

I am of opinion that in order to save himself he kept back the khasra of 1332 "Fasli and has not produced it,

In other words the Sessions Judge is of opinion that in order to create greater difficulty, when his original conduct was complained of, this man was degraded enough to alter his official documents and make an improper complaint against the Munsif, which 'he knew to be unfounded. To my mind that is a grave.....and gross aggravation of his offence, and compels me to reconsider the whole matter, which I do, and in the interests of justice I restore the original sentence passed by the Magistrate, and set aside the reduction of the Sessions Judge,, which held no business to make. If the appellant has any objection .to raise-to my order, he can appeal to the Local Government. He must surrender to his bail and serve out his sentence.....'

It is objected that I cannot restored the sentence. I am satisfied that I have power to restore the original sentence and even TO enhance id when an accused applies under S. 439. The section clearly provides it. The rule about a two-Judge Bench only applies where the Court issues notice, of its own motion, or on an application % someone else, to show cause why the sentence should not be enhanced. In this case the whole matter has been brought before me for revision by the accused himself, and I hold that I have power to restore the original sentence.

Ref : Letter forwarded to PPS to the Chief Justice, Bombay, High Court, Mumbai from Ministry of Law & Justice Govt. of India on the directions given by His Excellency Hon'ble President of India.
Date : 25th Nov. 2011, No. K-14012/3/2011-US-1

Hon'ble Sir,

1) The petitioner is a Citizen of India and a law abiding Citizen.
2) The petitioner is a National. Secretary of Human Rights Security Council (NGO). The NGO is working for the awareness of the Fundamental Rights as guaranteed by our Constitution and thereby to serve the Nation.

3) The NGO has defaced the various crimes committed by corrupt Government Officials and prosecuted them. Most of the action was taken against the criminal Police Officers, who violates the fundamental rights of the citizens.

4) Therefore some accused Police Officer hatched the conspiracy to falsely implicate the applicant and other members of the NGO. Many of the cases and proceedings against applicant are proved to be false in the police investigation itself but no action is taken against the guilty police officers. Therefore the applicant has filed a petition- for transferring the investigation to C.B.I. vide Writ Petition No. 328/2011 before Hon'ble Bombay High Court, Nagpur Bench, Nagpur.

5) In the meantime one accused police Inspector posted at Police Station Pusad 'City Mr. Dnyaneshwar Kadu, who was prosecuted by our NGO U/S 194 of I.P.C. for falsely implicating 8 Muslim boys, hatched conspiracy against the applicant and registered a false F.I.R. against the applicant and one.

6) As the F.I.R. was false and illegal and without having, time, Date, place of offence, name of victim etc and also the investigation was illegal in view of the law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court therefore the applicant filed petition before Hon'ble High Court, Nagpur being Cri. Application No. 1254/2010.

7) In reply to the petition as the Investigation Officer Mr. Dnyaneshwar Kadu and complainant filed false and misleading affidavit before Hon'ble High Court therefore the applicant filed application under Section 340of Cr. P.C. for taking action against them under Section 191, 192, 199, 200, 465, 466, 471, 474 etc. of I.P.C. and also against the Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari and Adv. N.S. Deshpande who conspired and helped in creating such a false evidences. Also the entire falsity of the reply is cleared by rejoinder affidavit.

8) The matter came up before Justice Shri A.P. Xyz for final hearing on 07-07-2011 and without giving opportunity to applicant's Counsel to argue his case and with a ulterior purpose to save the accused from serious charges the learned Judge Shri A.P. Xyz dismissed the petition of Applicant being Cri. Application No.1264/2010.

9) In order to prosecute the said Judge Shri A.P. Xyz and to save the pure fountain of justice from further pollution and also with a view to put lid on arbitrary exercise of power by corrupt Judges of Higher Judiciary I send complaint as my National duty and pious obligation as enshrined in Article 51 (A) (h) of the Constitution of India.

10) The petitioner filed an petition before His Excellency Hon'ble President of India on 23/07/2011 for initiating criminal prosecution against Shri Justice A.P. Xyz.

11) The above said complaint was referred to Dept. of Justice from the office of Rashtrapati Bhavan on 9th Sept. 2011 Sr.No.l P1/E/0809110009.

12) The Ministry of Law and Justice (Dept. of Justice) after verifying the legality of the facts decided to forward it to the PPS to the Chief Justice of Bombay High Court, Mumbai through outward No. K-1402/3/2011-US-1 dated the 21st November, 2011.

13) Hence It is clear that there is deemed sanction on the part of the His Excellency Hon'ble President for initiation of Criminal prosecution against Shri. Justice A.P. Xyz.

Moreover in view of the law laid down in Ramlal –vs- State 2001 Cri.L.J. 800 for registration of Criminal case against a High Court Judge sanction is not necessary. In another case of Shri. Shameet Mukharjee –Vs- C.B.I. 2003 DRJ (70) 327 the corrupt High Court Judge was arrested and detained to PCR for 12 days.

14) Moreover the serious allegation of the complaint of the petitioner is that it require thorough investigation at the hands of C.B.I. for disclosing the complete conspiracy in the matter.

15) It is worth to mention here that the one of the co-conspirator Shri A.S. Kale, District & Sessions Judge, Pusad is recently terminated from service by the order of Hon'ble High Court.

16) Apart from the details of allegations given in the complaint the petitioner would like to bring to the notice of Hon'ble Chief Justice & C.B.I., the malafides, clear illegalities and clear biasness on the part of Shri. Justice A.P. Xyz which are essential for the charges under Section 217, 218, 219, 465, 466, 471, 474 etc. of I.P.C.

THE CRIMINAL MISCONDUCT & INCAPACITY OF SHRI JUSTICE A.P. XYZ

I.P.C. 217, 201, 218, 219 ETC. MISUSE OF POWER TO SAVE THE ACCUSED.

The applicant filed application under section 340 of the Cri. P.C. for taking action against I.O. & Complainant for filling false and misleading affidavit before Hon'ble High Court. The application being no. 1063/2011 in Cri.- Application No. 1254/2010 was neither allowed nor rejected. This was an act done to save the accused.

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of AIR 1921, Bom. 115 held that,

AIR 1921 Bom. 115

"IPC 218:- The gist of the section is stifling of truth and the perversion of the course of justice in case where an offence has been committed, to screen any particular person. It is sufficient that he knows it to be likely that justice will not be executed and that someone will escape from punishment"

'The Apex Court in a decision in the case of Smt. S.R. Venkataraman Vs. Union of India and another reported in (1979) 2 Supreme Court cases 491 wherein while considering the question of malice in law by quoting the observations of Viscount Haldane in the decision in the case of Shearer .vs. Shields reported in (1914) AC 808, it has been observed by Apex Court in paragraph no.5 of the said decision:

"5..... Malice in law is, however, quite different Viscount Haldane described it as follows in Shearer V. Shields:

A person who inflicts an injury upon another person in contravention of the law is not allowed to say that he did so with an innocent mind; he is taken to know the law, and he must act within the law. He may, therefore, be guilty of malice in law, although, so far the state of his mind is concerned; he acts ignorantly and in that sense innocently.

Thus malice in its legal sense means malice such as may be assumed from the doing of a wrongful act intentionally but without just cause or excuse, or for want of reasonable or probable cause."

18) CHARGE NO. 2 #

VIOLATION OF OATH TAKEN AS HIGH COURT JUDGE AND VIOLATION OF ARTICLE 14 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF INDIA.

The constitution of India Schedule III Articles 75 (4), 99, 124 (6) 148 (2) 164 (3), 188 and 219 provides that forms of oaths or Affirmation No. VIII is as follows.

" Form of oath or a affirmation to be made by the Judges of a High Court."

I, A.B., having been appointed Chief Justice (or a Judge) of the High Court at (or of) ---------- do Swear in the name of God / Solemnly affirm that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of India as by law established, [that I will uphold the sovereignty and integrity of India] that, I will duly and faithfully and to the best of my ability, Knowledge and judgement perform the duties of my office without fear or favour, affection or illwill and that I will uphold the Constitution and the laws.

Article 14 of the constitution of India makes it mandatory to give equal treatment to all citizens (1956 Cri. L.J. (Bom.) Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Amnachalam Swami -Vs- State AIR 1956 Bombay 695 held that,

> "(Para 4) Mr. Kavelkar is right when he urges that Article 14 assures to the citizen equality not only in respect of a 0substantive law but also procedural law, and if any procedure is set up which deprives a citizen of substantive rights of relief and defence the citizen is entitled to complain of this procedure if two persons equally situated the older procedure is still available where these substantive rights of relief and defence were secured."

In the judgment of Cri. Application No. 1254/2010 dated 07/07/2011 while refusing to go through the various (around 30) case Laws Justice Shri A.P. Xyz passed a one line order that there is no need to go through that authority.

In the order dated 07/07/2011 Shri Justice A. P. Xyz passed the order that the accused has no right to apply for quashing the F.I.R.

The malafides on the part of the Shri. A. P. Xyz are writ large as can be seen from the fact that in another various cases he allowed the petition of accused for quashing the F.I.R. one of that judgment is reported in 2011 (4) AIR Bom. R. 597 decided on 13/06/2011.

This is a clear case of personal bias and violation of mandate of Art. 14 of the Constitution.

(B) The 3rd example of biasness on the part of Shri Justice A. P. Xyz is can be seen in the another petition being filed by one accused being Criminal Application No. 1005/2010 where the National President of petitioner NGO Adv. Nilesh Ojha was complainant and respondent in petition. The petition being No. 1005/2010 was filed by accused to challenge the order passed by the J.M.F.C. Pusad u/s. 156 (3) of Cr. P.C.

The counsel for Shri. Nilesh Ojha, Adv. Onkar Kakade specifically argued the case on the ground that in view of alternate remedy petition u/s. 482 of Cr. P. C. was not maintainable but Shri Justice A. P. Xyz refuse to dismiss the said petition. It is worth to mention here that Shri Justice A.P. Xyz himself was a Judge of Division Bench in the case of 2008 ALL MR (Cri.) 2737, where such law is laid down. Moreover, the similar petition of another petitioner was dismissed with costs on 11/08/2011 in the case of 2011 ALL MR (Cri.) 3107, by Shri A. P. Xyz on the same ground that the petition u/s. 482 of Cr. P. C. is not maintainable. This is a clear violation of Art. 14 of the Constitutions of India.

Hence it is clear that Shri Justice A. P. Xyz is acting with personal bias and malafidely in the cases relating to the petitioner.

(C) The another example of clear bias and malafides of Shri A. P. Xyz is that he passed one order in 2011 ALL MR (Cri.) 3248 where it has been observed that,

> "Applicant earlier to the report of respondent field report to police and expressed apprehension that respondent may implicate him falsely – In such cases chances of conviction are remote – If prosecution is allowed to continue it may result in to harassment to the accused applicant – F.I.R. quashed.

The same ground was specifically raised by the petitioner in his petition being Criminal Application No. 1254/2010, but the contention of the petitioner was not considered by Shri Justice A. P. Xyz and a different treatment was given to the different petitioner.

This is also against the Judicial propriety as has been laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Hari Singh case and followed by Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Shri. Srinivas cut pieces cloth shop Vs. State 2004 ALL MR (Cri) 1802 (Bom).

Where it has been held that the Courts of Co-ordinate jurisdiction should have consistent opinions in respect of identical set of facts or on a question of law. If this rule is not followed then instead of achieving harmony in the judicial system it will lead to judicial anarchy. Like questions should be decided alike. Hence it is clear that as the applicant belongs to minority Muslim community therefore his case was not heard and the case of a Non-Muslim is allowed. Hence the constitutional mandate under Article 15 (2), 17 and 21 which guarantees freedom from discrimination and right to live with dignity are offended, by the learned Judge Shri. A.P. Xyz.

CONTEMPT OF ORDER OF SUPREME COURT

It is worth to mention here that Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Bharat A. Kothari Vs. Dosukhan S. Sindhi 2010 Cri. L.J. 379 specifically laid down that only the accused can apply for quashing of F.I.R. and not the third person is having right to challenge the same. But Justice Shri. Xyz passed the order that accuse can not challenge the F.I.R.

Hence the observations of Shri. Justice A.P. Xyz are not only biased but against the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court and are per incuriam.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Rabindra Nath Singh Vs. Raiesh R. Yadav 2010 (3) SCC, (Cri) 165. Held that the conduct of High Court in passing order against the direction of Supreme Court amounts to contempt of order of Supreme Court.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of SPENCER & COMPANY LTD –Vs-VISHWADARSHAN DISTRIBUTORS PVT. LTD (1995) 1 SCC 259 it is held that the Supreme Court's order even if is only in the form of a request instead of explicit command or direction it is a judicial order and is binding and enforceable throughout the territory of India – In case of flouting of the order by High Court, it is open to Supereme Court to initiate Contempt proceedings against the erring Judges of High Court.

CLEAR VIOLATION OF DIRECTION OF HON'BLE SUPREME COURT 3 – JUDGE BENCH.

The various judgments of Hon'ble Supreme Court along with notes of arguments were given on record were neither discussed nor even the citations were referred in the judgment and by way of cryptic order he dismissed the petition. In his judgment Shri Xyz J, observed as follows:

> "The learned Advocate appearing for the petitioners made a reference to plethora of rulings in support of the petition in order to argue that the FIR ought not to have been registered against the petitioners and it is their second submission that the FIR shall be quashed as also the proceedings, on the ground that the FIR do not spell off necessary ingredients of the offences alleged against the accused.--------"
> I need not refer to all the rulings cited before me since the legal position in this regard is crystal clear. U/s. 154 of the code of Criminal Procedure every information related to commission of cognizable offence is required to be reduced into writing.

Moreover refusing to explain the authorities /case laws in the judgment is clear violation of law laid down by 3-Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Dwarkesh Industries –vs- Prem Heavy Engineering 1997 S.C.C. (6) 450 where it has been laid down that,

"Judicial Adventurism – High Court ignoring various laws settled by Supreme Court – Held – When a position in law is well settled as a result of pronouncement by Supreme Court then it will be judicial impropriety for the sub-ordinate courts including the High Courts to ignore the settled decisions and then to pass a judicial order which is clearly contrary to the settled legal position – The observation of High Court that reference to judicial decisions will not be of much importance was clearly a method adopted by it to avoid to follow the law laid down by the Supreme Court – Such judicial adventurism cannot be permitted – The tendency of the subordinate courts in not applying the settled principles and passing whimsical order granting wrongful and unwarranted relief to one of the parties is strongly deprecated – It is the time that such tendency should be stopped.

It is unfortunate that in spite of authoritative pronouncements by Supreme Court, the High Courts and Subordinate Courts, still seem intent on affording opportunities for dealing with this area of law which was brought to be well settled by the Supreme Court – Order of High Court set aside – The appellant granted to costs quantified at Rs. 20,000/-.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Sundarjas Kanyalal Bhathija and others –Vs- The Collector, Thane, Maharashtra AIR 1990 SUPREME COURT 261 held that, Constitution of India, Art.141- PRECEDENTS - Judges are bound by precedents and procedure - They could use their discretion only when there is no declared principle to be found, no rule and no authority - where a single judge or a Division Bench does not agree with the decision of a Bench of coordinate jurisdiction, the matter shall be referred to a larger Bench. It is a subversion of judicial process not to follow this procedure - it is the duty of judges of superior courts and tribunals to make the law more predictable. The question of law directly arising in the case should not be dealt with apologetic approaches. The law must be made more effective as a guide to behaviour. It must be determined with reasons which carry convictions within the Courts, profession and public. Otherwise, the lawyers would be in a predicament and would not know how to advise their clients. Sub-ordinate courts would find themselves in an embarrassing position to choose between the conflicting opinions. The general public would be in dilemma to obey or not to obey such law and it ultimately falls into disrepute- One must remember that pursuit of the law, however glamorous it is, has its own limitation on the Bench. (Paras 17, 20)

Moreover the another judgment of binding nature of the same High Court was in the case of The Bank of Rajasthan Ltd., Vs. SiyamSunder Tavaria 2006 ALL MR (Cri) 2269, (Bom), where it has been held that

"The courts are not expected to pass such cryptic orders. The learned Judge, in the present case, ought to have recorded short reasons demonstrating as to how the case in hand was covered by the judgment of the Apex Court in S.M.S. Pharmaceuticals Pvt. Ltd., Vs. Neeta Bhalla and Anr. AIR 2005 S.C. 3512 [2005(5) ALL MR (S. C.)lll 8J. The learned Judge even did not feel it necessary to mention full title of the judgment of the Apex Court and the citation thereof while dismissing all the complaints relying upon the said judgment. His approach while passing drastic orders, dismissing the complainants under section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments act, 1881 filed by the Bank involving huge amounts, was absolutely casual. The courts should exhibit from their conduct and their orders, concern for the justice to be done in the cases and not casualness, as seen from the impugned order in the present case. The learned counsel for the parties have fairly agreed that need not examine the merits of the case and record reasons for setting aside the impugned order and that all the matters be remanded to the Sessions Court for deciding the same on merits in accordance with law. In the circumstances I am satisfied that the following order shall meet the ends of justice. "

Hence the learned Judge himself is giving orders acting against his own judgement proves the malafides and biasness on the part of the concerned Judge.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of SPENCER & COMPANY LTD –Vs- VISHWADARSHAN DISTRIBUTORS PVT. LTD (1995) 1 SCC 259 it is held that the Supreme Court's order even if is only in the form of a request instead of explicit command or direction it is a judicial order and is binding and enforceable throughout the territory of India – In case of flouting of the order by High Court, it is open to Supereme Court to initiate Contempt proceedings against the erring Judges of High Court.

The complaint given against the petitioner No. 2. does not contain the date, time, place of offence and even name of victims. Therefore the applicant relied on the case Laws of Hon'ble Supreme Court and Hon'ble Bombay High Court to buttress his contention that the police is justified in registering the F.I.R. only when the complaint disclose a cognizable offence at prima facie stage unless it has to be quashed. [2004 AIR SCW 4329] [Nitin P. Jondhale Vs. State 2006 ALL MR (Cri) 2469] [Man Mohan Thapar Vs. State 2009 AIR Bom R. (3) 429]

And in overall the counsel for another petitioner relied on 64 case Laws but the learned Judge did not consider the case laws nor even quoted the full title of the Judgments.

On the other hand the learned Judge in his Judgment written his view as follows.

"----------Although a number of rulings have been cited before me, it has to be stated that each case is required to be examined and decided in the light of its peculiar facts and circumstances. There can be no hard and fast rule to invoke inherent powers of this Court to quash the F.I.R. and investigation which is in progress."

The learned Judge lost the sight that he is bound by the ratio decided by the Hon'ble Supreme Court

21) CHARGE NO. 4 #

SHRI JUSTICE A.P. XYZ BOUND TO RESIGN FROM POST OF HIGH COURT JUDGE BUT HE DID NOT RESIGN.

But from the above documentary proofs it is clear that Shri. Justice A.P. Xyz acted against the oath and thereby ceased his right to continue as a Judge of Hon'ble High Court.

As per law laid down by 5-Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of K. Veerswami Vs. Union of India 1991 (3) SCC 655 it is obligatory on the part of Shri. Justice A. P. Xyz to resign from his post but he is still working. It is surprising to mention here that even after lapse of 8 months from lodging of the complaint Shri. Xyz is still working as High Court Judge.

It has been laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in K. Veerswami's case (Supra) that,

(53) …… The judiciary has no power of the purse or the sword. It survives only by public confidence and it is important to the stability of the society that the confidence of the public is not shaken. The Judge whose character is clouded and whose standards of morality and rectitude are in doubt may not have the judicial independence and may not command confidence of the public. He must voluntarily withdraw from the judicial work and administration.

(54) …….. The emphasis on this point should not appear superfluous. Prof. Jackson says "Misbehavior by a Judge, whether it takes place on the bench or off the bench, undermines public confidence in the administration of justice, and also damages public respect for the law of the land; if nothing is seen to be done about it, the damage goes unrepaired. This a must be so when the judge commits a serious criminal offence and remains in office". (Jackson's Machinery of Justice by J.R. Spencer, 8th Edn. pp. 369-70.

(55) The proved "misbehaviour" which is the basis for removal of a Judge under clause (4) of Article 124 of the Constitution may also in certain cases involve an offence of criminal misconduct under Section 5(1) of the Act. But that is no ground for withholding criminal prosecution till the Judge is removed by Parliament as suggested by counsel for the appellant. One is the power of Parliament and the other is the jurisdiction of a criminal court. Both are mutually exclusive. Even a government servant who is answerable for his misconduct which may also constitute an offence under the Indian Penal Code or under S. 5 of the Act is liable to be prosecuted in addition to a departmental enquiry. If prosecuted in a criminal court he may be punished by way of imprisonment or fine or with both but in departmental enquiry, the highest penalty that could be imposed on him is dismissal. The competent authority may either allow the prosecution to go on in a court of law or subject him to a departmental enquiry or subject him to both concurrently or consecutively. It is not objectionable to initiate criminal proceedings against public servant before exhausting the disciplinary proceedings, and a fortiori, the prosecution of a Judge for criminal misconduct before his removal bu Parliament for proved misbehaviour is unobjectionable.

".....But we know of no law providing protection for Judges from criminal prosecution. Article 361(2) confers immunity from criminal prosecution only to the President and Governors of States and to no others. Even that immunity has been limited during their term of office. The Judges are liable to be dealt with just the same way as any other person in respect of criminal offence. It is only in taking of bribes or with regard to the offence of corruption the sanction for criminal prosecution is required.

(61) For the reasons which we have endeavored to outline and subject to the directions issued, we hold that for the purpose of clause (c) of S. 6(1 of the Act the President of India is the authority competent to give previous sanction for the prosecution of a Judge of the Supreme court and of the High court.

(79) Before parting with the case, we may say a word more. This case has given us much concern. We gave our fullest consideration to the questions raised. We have examined and re-examined the questions before reaching the conclusion. We consider that the society's demand for honesty in a judge is exacting and absolute. The standards of judicial behaviour, both, on and off the bench, are normally extremely high. For a Judge to deviate from such standards of honesty and impartiality is to betray the trust reposed in him. No excuse or no legal relativity can condone such betrayal. From the standpoint of justice the size of the bribe or scope of corruption cannot be the scale for measuring a Judge's dishonour. A single dishonest Judge not only dishonours himself and disgraces his office but jeopardizes the integrity of the entire judicial system.

(80) A judicial scandal has always been regarded as far more deplorable than a scandal involving either the executive or a member of the legislature. The slightest hint of irregularity or impropriety in the court is a cause for great anxiety and alarm. "A legislator or an administrator may be found guilty of corruption without apparently endangering the foundation of the State. But a Judge must keep himself absolutely above suspicion" to preserve the impartiality and independence of the judiciary and to have the public confidence thereof.

Let us take a case where there is a positive finding recorded in such a proceeding that the Judge was habitually accepting bribe, and on that ground he is removed from his office. On the argument of Mr Sibal, the matter will have to be closed with his removal and he will escape the criminal liability and even the ill-gotten money would not be confiscated. Let us consider another situation where an abettor is found guilty under S. 165-A of the Indian Penal Code and is convicted. The main culprit, the Judge, shall escape on the argument of the appellant. In a civilized society the law cannot be assumed to be leading to such disturbing results.

The communication from Ministry of Law & Justice is dated 21st November, 2011 addressed to PPS to The Chief Justice, Bombay High Court.

But till today no communication is made from the office of Chief Justice to the petitioner. Neither the petitioner was called to given proof, evidence and produce witnesses nor it has been conveyed that his case being enquired or not. Nor the Justice A. P. Xyz was transferred. This creates a doubt in the mind of the petitioner.

22) CHARGE NO. 5 #

PERMITTING THE ACCUSED ADVOCATE SUBODH DHARMADHIKARI TO ARGUE HIS OWN CASE BY WEARING ADVOCATE ROBES AND VIOLATION OF LAW LAID DOWN BY DIVISION BENCH OF BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

The Letter No. 28593/2010 is a complaint of 38 pages explaining the malafides of advocate Subodh Dharmadhikari and others. But no issues in the complaint were discussed nor the counsel for complainant Adv. Vivek Ramteke was given any permission to put forth his case and straightway the observation were made that due conduct of a applicant for making complaint against Mr. Dharmadhikari complaint against applicant be investigated and petition is dismissed.

The argument advanced by Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari on the issues related to Letter No. 28593/2010 is itself illegal and contemptuous as he himself being accused in that Letter complaint he could not argue his own case by wearing Advocate robes as has been laid down by Full Bench of Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of High Court on its own Motion -Vs- Mr. N.B. Deshmukh 2011 ALL MR (Cri.) 381 and also in the case of M.C.S. Barna Vs. State 2002 Cri.L.J. 2852. Moreover the lerned Judge by allowing the Adv.

Subodh Dharmadhikari to argue his own cause by wearing advocate robes also committed contempt of his own Court.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Nirankar Nath Wahi Vs. Fifth Addl. District Judge, AIR 1984 SC 1268 where it has been held that the misuse of power by a Judge to favour a leading influential member of Bar is highly illegal and such judgment is vitiated.

23) CHARGE NO. 6 #

FRAUD ON POWER PASSING THE ORDER BY IGNORING MATERIAL ON RECORD AND TAKING EXTRANED FACTORS IN TO CONSIDERATION.

The complainant filed a application u/s 91 of Cr. P.C. being Criminal application NO. 612/2011 for directing the respondents to produce the copy of First F.I.R. and if that copy is produced then it will make clear that the F.I.R. No. 191/2010 which is prayed to be quashed is second F.I.R. of same transaction or not. It is clearly mentioned in the said application that the investigation in second F.I.R. is illegal and violative of Hon'ble Supreme Court's direction in the case of T.T. Antony 2001 Cri. L.J. 3329 and in the case of Babubhai Vs. State 2011 (1) SCC (CriO 336 but that application was neither allowed not rejected nor this issue is discussed in the judgement and straightway the impugned order is passed this clearly shows the misuse of power by learned Judge to satisfy the accused Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari.

Hon"ble Supreme Court (3-Judge Bench) in the case of Vijay Shekhar Vs. Union of India 2004 (3) Crimes (SC) 33 held that > "Fraud on power voids the order if it is not exercised bonafide for end design. There is a distinction between exercise of power in good faith and misuse in bad faith . The former arises when on authority misuses its power in breach of law , by taking in to account bonafide, end with best intentions, some extraneous matters or by ignoring relevant matter that would render the impugned act or order powers.

>
> The misuse in bad faith arises when the power is exercised for an improper motive, say, to satisfy a private or personal grudge or for wreaking vengenence of a minister as in S. Pratap Singh - Vs - State (AIR 1964 SC 733)

A power is exercised maliciously if its repository is motived by personal animosity towards those who are directly affected by its exercise Use of power for on alien purpose other than the one for which the power is conferred is malafide use of power. Same is the position when an order is made for a purpose other than that which finds place in the order. The ulterior or alien purpose clearly speaks of the misuse of the power.

It was said by Warangton C. J. in Short - Vs - Poole corporation (1926) 1 ch 66 that:

No public body can be regarded as having statutory authority to act in bad faith or from corrupt motives and any action purporting to be of that body, but proved to be committed in bad faith or from corrupt motives would certainly be held to be inoperative.

In Lazarus Estates Ltd - Vs - Beasely (1956) 2 QB 702 at Pp 712-13 Lord Denning L.J. Said

"No judgment of a court no order of Minister can be allowed to stand if it has been obtained by fraud , fraud unravels everything ".(emphasis supplied

See also in Lazarus case at p.722 per Lord Parker C.J.

"Fraud" Vitiates all transactions know to the law of however high a degree of solemnity.

(Para 10) Similar is the view taken by this court in the case of Ram Chandra Singh - Vs - Savitridevi and ors. (2003 (8)) SCC 319*) Wherein this court speaking through one of us (Sinha J.) Held thus:*

"Fraud as is well known vitates every soleman act .Fraud and justice never dwell together. Fraud is a conduct either by letter or words which induces the other person or authority to take a definite determinative stand as a response to the conduct of the former either by word or letter. It is also well settled that misrepresentation itself amounts to fraud. Indeed, innocent representation may also give reason to claim relief against fraud. A fraudlent misrepresentation is called deceit and in leading a man into damage by willfully or recklessy causing him to believe an act on falsehood.

It is a fraud in law if a party makes representation which he knows to be false and injury ensues there from. Although the motive from which the representation proceeded may not have been had. An act of fraud on court is always viewed seriously. A collusion or conspiracy with a view to deprive the rights of others in relation to a property would render the transaction void - ab -intio Fraud and deception is synonymous. Although in a given case a deception may not amount to fraud, fraud is anathema to all equitable principles and any o flair tainted with fraud cannot be perpetuated or saved by the application of any equitable doctrine including res judicata.

24) CHARGE NO. 7 #

NOT FOLLOWING THE GUIDELINES OF HON'BLE SUPREME COURT TO SAVE THE ACCUSED.

The rejoinder affidavit filed by the applicant was neither disputed nor denied by the respondent by filling any counter affidavit and hence the learned Judge Shri. A.P. Xyz was duty bound to accept our contention as final in view of law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court (3-Judge Bench) in the case of Express Newspaper Pvt. Ltd. Vs. Union of India 2009 All SCR O.C.C. 193 where it has been laid down that,

"(Para 115) Where mala fides are alleged it is necessary that the person against whom such allegations are made should come forward with an answer refuting or denying such allegations. For otherwise such allegations remain unrehutted and the Court would in such a case he constrained to accept the allegations so remaining unrebutted and unanswered on the test of probability. That precisely is the position in the present case, in the absence of any counter-affidavit by any of the respondents. One should have thought that the Minister for Works and Housing should have sworn an affidavit accepting or denying the allegations made by the petitioners. At our instance, M. K. Mukherjee, Secretary, Ministry of Works and Housing has filed a supplementary affidavit ……."

This case law is clearly mentioned in rejoinder. But in the Judgement even the fact of rejoinder affidavit is also not mentioned nor discussed. This ex-facie proves malafides of Shri. A.P. Xyz.

The contention raised by the petitioner that the impugned F.I.R. being second F.I.R. was not disputed by the A.P.P./I.O. in his say and on this ground the F.I.R. against the petitioners was liable to be quashed.

On the same ground another Hon'ble Judge Shri. A. H. Joshi in Cri. Application No. -1876-/2011 quashed the second F.I.R. A copy of that Judgement was filed on the record but the learned Judge Shri. A.P. Xyz did not mention this fact in the Judgement. It is settled law that the court of Co-ordinate jurisdiction should have consistent opinion on same set of facts and points of law and if this procedure is not followed then instead of achieving judicial harmony it will lead to a judicial anarchy, [2004 ALL MR (Cri) 1802.]

25) CHARGE NO. 8 #
INCAPACITY/LACK OF KNOWLEDGE TO ACT AS AN HIGH COURT JUDGE.

Shri Justice A.P Xyz is not having the sufficient and basic knowledge to act as a High Court Judge.

He passed the order stating that the accused is not having locus standi to file petition for quashing the F.I.R. In fact only accused can apply for the quashing of F.I.R. [2010 Cri. L.J. 379 (SC)]

The learned Judge in his Judgement held as follows.

"It appears that, on 16-7-2010 Mr. Meghraj Dhule President of Bar Association lodged report at Police Station, Pusad, District Yavatmal which was registered as F.I.R. No. 191/2010 on 17-07-2010 "

Hence it is clear that the written complaint was given on 16/07/2010 and it was not registered on that day but it was registered on next day i.e. on 17/07/2010 and it is treated as F.I.R.

This shows that the learned Judge does not know the provision of section 154 of code of criminal procedure and law laid doen by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of State of A.P. Vs. Punati Ramalu AIR 1993 SC 2644. In this Judgement Hon'ble Supreme court clearly laid down the law that whenever the police station officer did not register the F.I.R. on the same day when complaint was given but register it after due deliberation and consultation then such F.I.R. is illegal and it cannot be treated as F.I.R. and no reliance can be placed on such a tainted investigation.

Hence the document which is not a F.I.R. and bears the stamp of illegality in view of the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court. Then passing order of further investigation to continue that too against the law of Supreme Court makes it clear that either the Judge Shri. A.P. Xyz does not know the law or he passed the order for extraneous considerations and in both cases his continuance as Judge of High Court is highly dangerous as the fate of thousands and Lakhs of Citizen are put to jeopardy.

The appropriate order which could have been passed in the case of such a tainted investigation is already been decided by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Babubhai Vs. State 2011 (1) SCC (Cri) 336 where it has been specifically laid down that the investigation agency cannot be permitted to conduct an investigation in a tainted and biased manner. It has further been made clear that any action taken by police pursuant to such tainted investigation is vitiated and liable to be quashed.

In another landmark judgement in the case of 'Dr. 'X' Vs. Hospital 'Z' 1991 (1) ALL MR 469 (SC) Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that,

> "(para 43) .....
> Moreover, where there is a clash of two Fundamental Rights, ….which is her Fundamental Right under Article 21, the RIGHT which would advance the public morality or public interest, would alone be enforced through the process of Court, for the reason that moral consideration's cannot be kept at bay and the Judges are not expected to sit as mute structures of clay, in the Hall, Known as Court Room, but have to be sensitive, "in the sense that they must keep their fingers firmly upon the pulse of the accepted morality of the day "

(See : Legal Duties : Allen)

The totality of above settled law makes it clear that the learned Judge Shri. A. P. Xyz is unable to perform his duty of Judge and to do the justice and therefore he is liable to be removed from his post and he is also liable for strict punishment which will be deterrent to others also.

26) CHARGE NO. 9 #
INCAPACITY TO INTERPRET THE CASE LAWS OF SUPREME COURT.

Justice A.P. Xyz does not have the caliber even to interpret the case laws of Hon'ble Supreme Court.

Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of promote Telecom Engineers Forum – Vs- D.S. Mathur 2008 ALL SCR 2320 loid down that,

"……. Wrong interpretation of Supreme Court's order is contempt of Court.
2008 ALL SCR 2320.

The main contention of the applicant was that the complaint does not contain the date, time, place of offence, name of victims and exact role played by each accused and it only contains the sections and language of those sections. Such complaints are called as highly illegal by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Neelu Chopra Vs. Bharati 2010 (1) SCC (Cri) 286. This case law was also referred in the judgement by learned Judge Shri. A.P. Xyz but whether it is applicable or not and why it is not applicable to the case in hand is not mentioned in the Judgement, only because, if discussed then the result must have gone in favour of the applicant. Even otherwise it is out of logic of any prudent man that if any person relied on a case law of Hon'ble Supreme Court then without discussing its applicability how a High Court Judge can pass the order that too against the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court.

It is worth to mention here that even if this case law was discussed in the Judgement the learned Judge wrote a sentence which is clear contempt of Hon'ble

Supreme Court. The observations against the above case Law of Hon'ble Supreme Court in Neelu Chopra's case made by the learned Judge Shri Xyz are as follows :

> "Therefore, non-mention of some facts or vague reference to some facts cannot be considered as fatal. In present case looking in to the contents of F.I. R. which appears to have been signed by the President of Pusad Bar Associations against the accused, it appears that the first informant has listed various acts as also penal sections under which such acts are punishable with a request to take action against the accused for the offences allegedly committed. Therefore it cannot be said that the allegations contained in the F.I.R. in this case do not constitute any cognizable offence. Furthermore, one cannot say that no any case is made out against the accused in respect of the alleged commission of cognizable offence"

This is exact contrary to the ratio laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Neelu Chopra's Case (Supra). Moreover the learned Judge himself is unable to point out that which cognizable offence is disclosed from the complaint but by a cryptic sentence he only said that cognizable offence is made out from the complaint. Passing of such order is arbitrary and amounts to colorable exercise of power by the judge as has been held by Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the landmark Judgements in the case of Vaidya Vs. State 2002 (2) Mh. L.J. 830 (Bom)

It has been held that,

> (para 7) - ..What was expected of the learned magistrate was to find out that whether any offence is made out in the complaint. The entire order of learned magistrate does not even remotely indicate how he came to the conclusion that offence is disclosed. He has observed that at this stage main allegation is that documents produced before the selection committee of the M.P.S.C. were false and matter was decided only after a trial, this reasoning of the learned magistrate in his order simply stated that it is a fit case for full fledged trial which reasoning is incomprehensible and it appears that for some reasons not on record the learned magistrate took cognizance of offence without having been himself satisfied that an offence was in fact committed.

The order of learned magistrate if read in its entirety clearly shows that the magistrate was aware that complaint discloses no offence and inspite of having become aware he issued the process for reasons which can only be extraneous.

The order not only suffers from non - application of mind but clearly show that it is passed for some extraneous considerations. As a senior additional chief metropolitan magistrate he is expected to know what is the effect of summoning a person as accused to criminal court - To cause harassment to the petitioner recourse taken to criminal court and the court lend necessary assistance to the complainant to abuse the process of law by passing a vague order consciously . It is not a case of some order passed hurriedly due to pressure of work the learned magistrate had passed an order running in seven pages which does not speak of a single sentence as to how and what offence is committed . I am convinced that the learned Magistrate also found that no o ffence is disclosed even thereafter going out of the way he wanted to help the complainant. The process of law was misused not only by the complainant but also by the learned magistrate . It is a clear case of misuse of judicial power by the court.

In another case of similar nature it has been observed by Hon'ble High Court in the case of Brajo Sunder K. Banerjee Vs. State of Maharashtra 2008 ALL MR (Cri) 2773 Where it has been held that "The averments in the F.I.R. are not germane to constitution of any Criminal offence nor the learned Judicial Magistrate ascribed any valid reasons to proceed against the applicant. His simple disagreement with the Police report cannot be foundation to proceed against the applicant without there being any tangible reason recorded by him. The impugned order is arbitrary and amounts to colourable exercise of the judicial power. Under these circumstances, I have no hesitation in holding that the impugned order and the Criminal proceedings amount to abuse of the process of the Court.

It is also settled law that mis-interpretation of Hon'ble Supreme Court's order is also contempt. (Promote Telecom Engineers Forum Vs. D.S. Mathur 2008 ALL SCR 23201

The malafides of the learned Judge Shri. A.P.Xyz is writ at large that he not only dismissed the petition but also with costs. If the record of orders passed by him in all other cases is checked then it will disclose the malafides and pecuniary interest of the learned Judge. Because as per my knowledge the learned Judge Shri. Xyz did not dismissed the petition with costs.

27) CHARGE NO. 10 #

INABILITY TO PERFORM THE DUTY EVEN WHEN VIOLATION OF CONSTITUTION IS BROUGHT TO THE NOTICE BY FILING WRITTEN APPLICATION.

The applicant clearly point out the illegality committed by the complainant and it was brought to the notice of learned Judge that the complaint is based on the resolution of Bar Association Pusad which is declared null and void by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of A.S. Mohd. Rafi's Vs. State 2011 AIR SC (Cri) 193 as there was a order to advocates at Pusad to not to accept the Vakalatnama of the applicants and not to defend their cases. Considering this fact Hon'ble Supreme Court Quashed the F.I.R. against the accused. The same relief was prayed by the applicant in view of Article 14 of the constitution. Moreover the resolution which is itself declared null and void then the proceeding based on such unconstitutional resolution is vitiated. This thing was clearly mention in the application U/s. 91 of Cr. P.C. being Cri. Application No. 612/2011. Which is neither allowed nor rejected and even not discussed in the Judgement.

This raises a question that whether a person which can not perform his duty as a Judge can be allowed to continue as a Judge of the High Court and the fundamental legal rights of the citizens be put in to jeopardy.

In another landmark judgement in the case of 'Dr. 'X' Vs. Hospital 'Z' 1991 (1) ALL MR 469 (SC) Hon'ble Supreme Court observed that,

>
> Moreover, where there is a clash of two Fundamental Rights, .. Fundamental Right under Article 21, the RIGHT which would advance the public morality or public interest, would alone be enforced through the process of Court, for the reason that moral consideration's cannot be kept at bay and the Judges are not expected to sit as mute structures of clay, in the Hall, Known as Court Room, but have to be sensitive, "in the sense that they must keep their fingers firmly upon the pulse of the accepted morality of the day "
> (See : Legal Duties : Allen)

The totality of above settled law makes it clear that the learned Judge Shri. A. P. Xyz is unable to perform his duty of Judge and to do the justice and therefore he is liable to be removed from his post and he is also liable for strict punishment which will be deterrent to others also.

28) CHARGE NO. 11
INCAPACITY TO UNDERSTAND BASIC PROVISIONS OF THE LAW.

Apart from all other ground the specific ground taken by the applicant was that the complaint is filed for the defamation of unknown citizens by the complainant who is not the person defamed and therefore the cognizance is barred as per the section 199 of Cr. P.C. but the learned Judge did not consider this ground. The applicant relied on the case Law of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the Khushboo's case 2010 (2) SCC (Cri) 1299 and on the case of Swamy Apporvananda 2000 Cri. L.J. 4296.

In Apporvananda's case (Supra) it has been specifically been laid down that the complaint of defamation by an advocate for defamation of a third party is barred. Even regarding the lack of knowledge of Judge regarding the provisions of section 199 of Cri. P.C. are also discussed as follows.,

> "(6) ……. It shocked my conscience, that a Magistrate having been empowered to take cognizance of the offence is in dark about the statutory provision. In my opinion them pugned order taking cognizance nothing but an abuse of the process of the Court – Quashed"

Hence it shows the incapacity of Shri. Justice A. P. Xyz.

29) CHARGE NO. 12 #

MISUSE OF POWER FOR SAVING THE ACCUSED FROM PROVED CHARGES OF CONTEMPT OF COURT AND U.S. 191, 192, 193, 199, 200, 201, 217, 218, 219, 166, 119, 465, 466, 471, 474, R/W 120 (B) OF I.P.C.

The application given under section 340 of Cr. P.C. has to registered separately and decided separately irrespective of the main proceedings in relation to which such offences are committed. This is made clear by the catena of decisions of Hon'ble Bombay High Court and Hon'ble Supreme Court.

i) Kenneth Desa Vs. Gopal Narang 2007 ALL MR (Cri) 2281 (Bom) (Nagpur Bench)
ii) Pritish Vs. State 2002 Cri. L.J. 540.
iii) Afzal Vs. State AIR 1996 SC 2326 etc.

But this procedure is not followed by the learned Judge in this case.

The False affidavit filed by P.S.O. Mr. Dnyaneshwar Kadu, Adv. Meghraj Dhule, Adv. N.S. Deshpande and Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari was ex- facilely proved. This fact was neither disputed nor denied by the persons filing false affedevit before Hon'ble High Court. The accused did not file their apology. The learned Judge was bound to punish them in view of specific law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme court in the case of U.P. Resident Employeed Co-Op. House Building Society and others Vs. New Okhla Industrial Development Authority 2010 (3) SCC (Cri) 586. Also in view of law laid down by Division Bench of Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of B.A. Shelar Vs. M.S. Menon 2002 Cri. L.J. 788 & Manlavak Singh Vs. Rmakirit AIR 1940 Pat 631 etc.

But he did not pass any order on that application with ulterior motive to help the accused.

The above application was neither allowed nor rejected.

It is settled principle of to law that the discretion given to Judge are not unfettered discretion but it has to be guided by sound principles of law.

The Judge/Magistrate who exercise discretion are expected to bear in mind that:

>
> [Tingley-vs- Dalby, 14 NW 1461
>
> "An appeal to a Judge]s discretion is an appeal to his judicial conscience. The discretion must be exercised, not in opposition to, but in accordance with established principles of law."
>
> Gudianti Narsimha -Vs- Public Prosecutor. High Court 1978 Cri. L.J. 502.
>
> "The Judge, even when he is free, is stili not wholly free. He is not to innovate at pleasure He is not a Knight - errant roaming at will in pursuit of his own ideal of beauty or of goodness. He is to draw his inspiration from consecrated principles. He is not to yield to spasmodic sentiment to vague and unregulated benevolence. He is to exercise a discretion informed by tradition, methodized by analogy, disciplined by system, and subordinated to 'the primordial necessity or order in the social life.
>
> The Nature of the Judicial Process - Benjamin Cardozo, Yale University press (1921)]

But the learned Judge Shri. A.P. Xyz misused his discretion to satisfy the accused Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari.

In another similar case it has been observed by Hon'ble High Court in the case of N. Balaji Vs. Smt. Savitri 2004 Cri. L.J. 2818 that,

> "-------- Whereas in the case in hand the Magistrate has only acted against the warranting procedures established by Law in one sided manner absolutely without giving any opportunity for the girl to speak out her mind and as though treating her dumb founded animal, the Magistrate, had acted in a biased manner absolutely bereft of any reason of legal consideration but only as an instrument of the first respondent for reasons known to himself"
> N. Balaji Vs. Smt Savitri 2004 Cri. L.J. 2818

The same is the Position in the case of applicant.

30) CHARGE NO. 13 #

NOT PERMITTING THE COUNSEL FOR PETITIONER TO ARGUE THE CASE BECAUSE THE PETITIONER MADE COMPLAINT AGAINST ADV. SUBODH DHARMADHIKARI.

The petitioner No. 2 was represented by Adv. O.D. Kakade and Adv. S.R. Narnaware their arguments were heard but the Counsel for petitioner NO. 1 Mr. Vivek Ramteke was not allowed to argue the case. The counsel for applicant Mr. Vivek Ramteke belongs to minority Christian Community. This is clear violation of principles of natural justice and it is also against the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Himanshu Singh Sabharwal* -Vs- State 2008 ALL SCR 1252 where it has been held that,

> "(para 12) Failure to accord fair hearing either to the accused or the prosecution violates even minimum standards of due process of law. It is inherent in the concept of due process of law, that condemnation should he rendered only after the trial in which the hearing is a real one, not sham or a mere farce and pretence. Since the fair hearing requires an opportunity to preserve the process, it may be vitiated and violated by an overhasty stage-managed, tailored and partisan trial.*

(para 13) The fair trial for a criminal offence consists not only in technical observance of the frame and forms of law, but also in recognition and just application of its principles in substance, to find out the truth and prevent miscarriage of justice. ”

Also in the case of W.B.E.R.C. Vs. CESC Ltd 2002 (8) SCC 715 it has been held that,

(para 100) The High Court by its order dated 7-5-2002 has declined to hear the arguments of the appellants in CA No. 4048 of 2002, on the ground that they had alleged bias against the Judges. In case where an allegation of bias made against the Judges is found to be not proved, it is open to the court to initiate such action against the person who made the allegation of bias, as is permissible in law. That in our opinion would not empower the court to deny a right of hearing, if the person alleging they said bias is otherwise entitled to. We think denial of hearing which is reasonably due to a party cannot be made on the ground of the conduct of the party attributing bias.'

(para 101) The right of audi alteram partem is a valuable right recognised even under the Indian Constitution (see Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India[21]) wherein it is held, the principle of the maxim which mandates that no one should be condemned unheard, is a part of the rule of natural justice. We have already held that such right of hearing conferred by a statute cannot be taken away even by courts. While reckless and motivated allegations against the court should be severely dealt with by appropriate proceedings, in our opinion, imposition of the punishment of denying a right of hearing would amount to a violation of the principles of natural justice and, hence, should not be resorted to. However, in the instant case since we have heard these appellants on the merits of the case, the said prejudice, if any, caused to them stands obliterated and requires no further consideration.

31) CHARGE NO. 14 #

PASSING THE ORDER BY TAKING EXTRANEOUS FACTORS WHICH WERE NOT RAISED BY THE PROSECUTION OR PETITIONER.

It has been observed by Justice Shri. A.P. Xyz in the judgment that the accused have no right to apply for quashing the F.I.R. It is shocking that the person acting as High Court Judge does not know the basic principles of law.

Needless to mention here that the above issue was never raised by the prosecution nor the learned Judge had given any opportunity to the counsel for applicant to put their stand on this issue. This is also violation of various orders passed by Hon'ble Supreme Court.

> "[It is not possible for the court to decide an issue, not raised/agitated by the authority for the reason that other party did not have opportunity to meet it and such a course would violate the Principles of natural justice (Vide Delhi Municipal Council Vs. state of Punjab AIR 1997 SC 2841.)] Similarly in Majotra Vs. Union of India and Ors 2003 (8) SCC 40 the Apex Court held as under –
>
> "The Courts would be well advised to decide the petitions on the points raised in the petition and if in a rare case keeping in view the facts and circumstances of the case any additional points are to be raised then the concerned and affected parties should be put to notice on the additional points to satisfy the principles of natural justice. Parties cannot be taken by surprise."

The same principles is reiterated by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of 2008 ALL MR (Cri) 1151 (SC)

> "where it has been laid down that, the Court cannot travel beyond observation alien to case. Even if it becomes necessary to do so, it may do so only after notifying parties concerned so that they can put forth their view on such issue.

32) CHARGE NO. 15 #

PASSING THE ORDER IN VIOLATION OF ORDER OF HON'BLE SUPREME COURT IN THE CASE OF 2009 ALL SCR 2575.

The petition of the applicant was filed on various grounds and main ground was about the present F.I.R. being Second F.I.R. and therefore investigation is illegal and liable to be quashed as per the law laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of T. T. Antony Vs. State 2001 Cri. L.J. 3329.

But while passing the order no other grounds were discussed in the judgment and not decided. And the petition was dismissed without examining any of the issues raised. It is a clear violation of Hon'ble Supreme Court's directions in the case of Ram Phal Vs. State 2009 ALL SCR 2575. It has been laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court that

> "7. Having gone through the impugned order, in our considered view, we cannot sustain the same for the reasons, that, in the writ petition filed, the appellant had raised several issues in support of the relief sought in the writ petition. The High Court without examining any one of the issues raised and canvassed, by cryptic and non-reasoned order, has dismissed the writ petition. In our view, this is not the way a petition filed under Article 226 or 227 of the Constitution of India is to be disposed of. The duty to give reasons for coming to a decision is of decisive importance which cannot be lawfully disregarded. The giving of the satisfactory reasons is required by the ordinary man's sense of justice and also a healthy discipline for all those who exercise power over others. This Court in the case of Raj Kishore Jha Vs. State of Bihar and Or s., (2003)11 SCC 519 : [2003 ALL MR (Cri) 2339 (S.C.)] has stated:
> "Reason is the heartbeat of every conclusion. Without the same, it becomes lifeless ".

In another judgment Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Suga Ram - Vs- State 2007 ALL MR (Cri) 546 (SC) held that,

> "[para 7] Leave much to be desired Reasons introduce clarity in an order. On plainest consideration of justice, the High Court ought to have set forth its reasons, howsoever brief, in its order indicative of an application of its mind, all the more when its order is amenable to further avenue of challenge. The absence of reasons has rendered the High Court order not sustainable. Similar view was expressed in State of U.P. Vs. Battan and Ors. (2001(10) SCC 607). About two decades back in State of Maharashtra Vs. Vithal Rao Pritirao Chawan (AIR 1982 SC1215) the desirability of a speaking order while dealing with an application for grant of leave was highlighted. The requirement of indicating reasons in such cases has been judicially recognized as imperative. The view was reiterated in Jawahar Lai Singh Vs. Naresh Singh and Ors.

(1987(2) SCC 222). Judicial discipline to abide by declaration of law by this Court, cannot be forsaken, under any pretext by any authority or Court, be it even the highest Court in n State, oblivious to Article 141 of the Constitution of India, 1950 (in short the 'Constitution').

7. Even in respect of administrative orders Lord Denning M. R. in Breen Vs. Amalgamated Engineering Union (1971(1) A11E.R. 1148) observed "The giving of reasons is one of the fundamentals of good administration". In Alexander Machinery (Dudley) Ltd. Vs. Crabtree (1974 LCR120) it was observed: "Failure to give reasons amounts to denial of justice". Reasons are live links between the mind of the decision taker to the controversy in question and the decision or conclusion arrived at". Reasons substitute subjectivity by objectivity. The emphasis on recording reasons is that if the decision reveals the "inscrutable face of the sphinx", it can, by its silence, render it virtually impossible for the Courts to perform their appellate function or exercise the power of judicial review in adjudging the validity of the decision. Right to reason is an indispensable part of a sound judicial system, reasons at least sufficient to indicate an application of mind to the matter before Court. Another rationale is that the affected party can know why the decision has gone against him. One of the salutary requirements of natural justice is spelling out reasons for the order made, in other words, a speaking out.

The "inscrutable face of a sphirvc" is ordinarily incongruous with a judicial or quasi- judicial performance.

The conduct of Judge in not following the directions of Hon'ble Supreme Court amounts to contempt of Supreme Court as has been held by Apex Court in the case of Robindra Nath Singh -Vs- Rajesh Ranjan 2010 (3) SCC Cri. 165.

In fact whenever any offence pertaining to administration of justice is committed and more particularly when it is regarding interpolation of orders by the Judge then in fact is duty of the Government pleader to take effective steps for prosecution of guilty Judge. As every citizen belongs to state and even the permission to end his own life is not granted to any citizen.

In this regard it must be noted that in an identical case in --------AIR 1971 SC 1708 it has been held that, if the Judge made some interpolation in his order then he is liable to be prosecuted under section 167, 465, 471 etc of I.P.C. and the complaint was in fact filed by the Govt. pleader.

However no such steps were taken by the Govt. pleaders office of High Court, Nagpur. This fact requires a thorough investigation because copy of the petition was also sent to G.P. office at High Court Nagpur but no steps were taken which the law makes obligatory for the Govt. Pleader.

33) CHARGE NO. 15 #

JOINING CONSPIRACY OF CORRUPTION AND OTHERS CRIMNAL OFFENCES AND THEREBY COMMITING OFFENCE UNDER SECTION 120-B OF I.P.C.

In the case of Ramanlal –Vs- State 2001 Cri. L. J. 800, it has been held that, the High Court Judge is liable to be prosecuted in view of Sec. 120 (B) of I.P.C. if he supports the conspirators. It has been held that,

Conspiracy – I.P.C . Sec. 120 (B) --Apex Court made it clear that inference of conspiracy has to be drawn on the basis of circumstantial evidence only because it become difficult to get direct evidence on such issue – The offence can only be proved largely from the inference drawn from act or illegal omission committed by them in furtherance of a common design – Once such a conspiracy is proved, act of one conspirator become the act of the other – A conspirator who joins subsequently and commits overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy must also be held liable – proceeding against accused can not be quashed.

In present case Shri. A. P. Xyz misused his power to help the accused and tried to harass the complainant hence, he is co-conspirator in the main crimes and therefore, liable to be punished as per Section 120-B of Indian Penal Code.

34) The law regarding prosecution of Judges are summarized below.

"However, apart from the absence_ of jurisdiction the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate released the accused persons on bail on the face of verdicts successively given by me Higher COLITIS. He had a conscience Knowledge of those orders. This venture of the Chief Judicial Magistrate is certainly derogatory to well defined judicial responsibility. It lacks both good faith and bona fide. It is well intended deliberate and tainted with suspicion also. It tends to exhibit utter disregard to the judicial authority of the Courts in high rank. From the narration of events in the reference which are not controverted the act of the respondent is explicitly well calculated with a design to undermine the authority of the Higher Court. We, therefore, hold the contemnor Shri R.A. Khan guilty of having committed the contempt.

35) The all other illegalities and malafides are given in detail in the petition attached herewith.

36) Since the matter is relating to serious criminal charges of misuse of power by Judge to save the accused therefore the all responsible persons including Shri. Justice A. P. Xyz, A.P.P., Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari are liable to be dealt under Section 340, 344 of Cr. P. C. as per ratio laid down by division Bench of Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of State –vs- Kamlakar N. Bhavsar 2002 ALL MR (Cri.) 2640.

37) As per ratio laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Subramanyan Swami –Vs- Manmohan Singh 2012 (Vol. 1) SCC (Cri.) 1041 if after receipt of complaint sanction u/s. 197 of Cr. P. C. is not granted with 4 months then it may amount to deemed sanction.

In present case the complaint was lodged on 23/07/2011 and even after lapse of 8 months no communication regarding sanction to prosecute Shri A. P. Xyz was given therefore, it is a deemed sanction. Moreover sanction is required for taking cognizance and no question of sanction for the investigation. Apart from this the petitioner complaint is forwarded from the office of Hon'ble President therefore it is clear that no question remain for sanctioned to investigate the case against Shri Justice A.P. Xyz.

38) The applicant requests the C.B.I. to initiate appropriate Criminal prosecution against Shri. Justice A. P. Xyz.

39) The main allegations in Letter No. 28593/2010 are that the petitioners are falsely implicated by P.S.O. Dnyaneshwar Kadu and he paid a bribe of Rs. 15 Lakh to session Judge Pusad Shri. A. S. Kale. Also the same sessions Judge A.S. Kale who is involved in the conspiracy have intimated to Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari to manage the High Court and this fact was admitted by Adv. Subodh Dharmadhikari openly before various persons and advocates. Hence it is a clear case of corruption and the act of Justice A.P. Xyz to help these accused makes them liable for prosecution in view of section 201 & 120 (B) of I.P.C. The conspiracy is hatched in secrecy but the chain of circumstantial evidence is sufficient to prosecute all the accused. The fact that the accused advocate Mr. Subodh Dharmadhikari was avoiding to argue the case before other judges un-of-sudden was in hurry to decide the case before Shri. A.P. Xyz is sufficient ground to complete the chain of conspiracy. In the this regard law is settled by Hon'ble Supreme Court and various Hon'ble High Courts of India.

40) The applicant sent complaint to Hon'ble Chief Justice of Hon'ble Supreme Court of India for initiating contempt proceeding against Shri Justice A.P. Xyz on 23/7/2011.

By Letter dated 27th Sept. 2011 (Dy. No. 306/N-RTI/11-12/SCI). It has been informed that the matter is under consideration. Copy of Complaint and all communication are attached herewith.

41) PRAYER : It is therefore, humbly prayed that, i] S.P., C.B.I, A.C.B., Nagpur be directed to register F.I.R. against Shri A. P. Xyz, Judge, Bombay High Court u/s. 217, 218, 219, 191, 192, 193, 199, 200, 201, 465, 466, 471, 474 r/w. Sec. 120-B of Indian Penal Code along with provisions of Prevention of Corruption of Act.

ii] till the enquiry/investigation of the matter Shri A. P. Xyz be transferred out of the State of Maharashtra.

iii] Since the misbehavior, Criminal offences, incapacity, illegality, malafides and biasness of Shri. Justice A. P. Xyz are ex-facially proved therefore, he be directed to resign from his post in view of law laid down by 5-Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of K. Veerswami –vs- Union of India 1991 (3) S.C.C. 655.

iv] Register General be directed to seize the records of the case.

v] The C.B.I. will be directed to collect the mobile phone details of all the accused involved in the conspiracy.

FOR THIS ACT OF KINDNESS AND JUSTICE THE APPLICANT WILL ALWAYS REMAIN GRATEFUL.

Whenever any authority is relied by the counsel then it is bounded duty of the judge to meticulously examine the issues and rulings in support thereof. Simply listing the rulings in the Judgement without going in to the ratio decidendi of the same is illegal (Adarsh Graming Sahakari patsanstha – Vs- Dattu R. Paithankar 2010 (1) Crimes 714 (Bom))

Also in the case of the Bank of Rajasthan Ltd. – Vs- Shyam Sunder Tapariya 2006 ALL MR (Cri) 2269 It has been laid down that the judge Should recorded short reasons demonstrating how the case law is applicable to the case. The conduct of judge about passing of cryptic orders even without mentioning full title of the judgement and citation thereof is illegal courts are expected to exhibit from their conduct and their orders concern for justice and not casualness.

In Dwarikesh Suger Industries – Vs- Prem Heavy Industries AIR 1997 SC 2477 Hon'ble Supreme Court laid down that.

Judicial Adverturism – High Court ignoring various laws settled by Supreme Court - - When a position in law is well settled as a result of pronouncement of Supreme Court then it would be judicial impropriety for the sub ordinate Courts including the High Court to ignore the settled decisions and then to pass a judicial order which is clearly contrary to the settled legal position- The observation of High Court that reference to judicial decisions will not be of much importance was clearly a method adopted by the Supreme Court – Such judicial adventurism cannot be permitted –

The tendency of the subordinate courts in not applying the settled principles and unwarranted relief to one of the parties is strongly deprecated – It is the time that such tendency should be stopped (para 32)

Parameters of judicial interference in such matters. In the first place, arrest of an accused is a part of the investigation and is within the discretion of the investigating officer. Section 41 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides for arrest by a police officer without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant. (Para 13)

In such a case there was no justification for the High Court to direct the State to arrest the appellants against whom the first information report was lodged, as it amounted to unjustified interference in the investigation of the case. The mere fact that the bail applications of some of the appellants had been rejected is no ground for directing their immediate arrest. In the very nature of things, a person may move the Court on mere apprehension that he may be arrested. The Court may or may not grant anticipatory bail depending upon the facts and circumstances of the case and he material placed before the Court. There may, however, be cases where the application for grant of anticipatory bail may be rejected and ultimately, after investigation, the said person may not be put up for trial as no material is disclosed against him in the course of investigation. The High Court proceeded on the assumption that since petitions for anticipatory bail had been rejected, there was no option open for the State but to arrest those persons. This assumption, to our mind, is erroneous. A person whose petition for grant of anticipatory bail has been rejected may or may not be arrested by the investigating officer depending upon the facts and circumstance of the case, nature of the offence, the background of the accused, the facts disclosed in the course of investigation and other relevant considerations. In Sanjay Chandra – Vs- C.B.I. 2012 (1) SCC (Cri) 26 Hon'ble Supreme Court held, that

Cri. P.c. 439, 437, Bail – Bail is the Rule and Jail an exception – Accused entitled for presumption of innocence till he is convicted – constitutionally protected liberty of accused must be respected unless detention becomes necessary – If any accused is detained before conviction then it will put unnecessary burden on state to keep a person who is not proved guilty – Normally bail should be granted to accused – Apprehension of tampering of evidence without sound proof could not be accepted and this ground could not be considered in each case to deny the bail.

Discretion while granting bail - The Jurisdiction to grant bail has to be exercised on the basis of well settled principles and not in arbitrary manner – The law in regard to grant or refusal of bail is very well settled. The Court granting bail should exercise its discretion in a judicious manner and not as a matter of course. At the stage of granting bail a detailed examination of evidence and elaborate documentation of the merit of the case need not be undertaken.

Criminal procedure Code, 1973 – Ss. 437 and 439 – prejudices which may be avoided in deciding bail matters – public scams, scandal and heinous offences – public sentiments and disapproval of alleged misconduct – Bail, held, ought not be denied to teach lesson to a person whose offence is yet to be proved – Conditional bail, is a solution in such types of cases.

The approach adopted by the trial court and affirmed by the High court, is a denial of the whole basis of the Indian system of law and normal rule of bail system. It transcends respect for the requirement until he is found guilty. If such power is recognized, then it may lead to chaotic situation and would jeopardize the personal liberty of an individual. Bail is the rule and committal to jail an exception. Refuse of bail is a restriction on the personal liberty of the individual guaranteed under Article 21 of the, bail should be granted to the accused.

Hon'ble Bombay High Court in CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. 514 OF 2013 Lalita Soni.. Vs. .. Union held that;

Index Note – Bail – Sections 406 and 420 of the Indian penal Code (IPC) read with Section 34 – The learned Magistrate directed the applicants to be released on bail – The Sessions Judge canceled the bail granted order of Magistrate granting Bail- Held, Bail is not to be refused merely because a prime facie case exists – It is not possible to accept the reasoning of the learned Sessions Judge – The principals governing grant of bail is discretionary. The law does not favour pretrial detention for an unduly long period. It is also well settled that the power to refuse bail is not to be exercised, as if punishment before the trial, is being imposed – All said and done, the elementary principle that 'pretrial detention can never be punitive in nature, has not undergone any change over the years – Bail is not to be refused merely because a prime facie case exists (except in cases of statutory prohibition, as imposed by some special statutes) Bail is not to be refused merely because a prima facie case exists (except in cases of statutory prohibition, as imposed by some special statutes)- The learned Sessions

Judge overlooked the learned Magistrate – The orders passed by the learned Sessions Judge, cancelling the bail granted to the applicants, are set aside – The applicants shall remain on bail. (para 8,9,13,14)

Moreover Hon'ble Supreme Court (3-Judge Bench) in the case of Chandraswami – Vs- C.B.I. 1997 Cri. L.J. 3124 laid down that whenever accused appears or bough before the court and if the offences are not covered by c/s (i) and (ii) of Sec. 437 (i) of Cri. P. C. then the accused would be released on bail. (e.g. in cases of I.P.C. 420,471 etc.) Hon'ble Bombay High Court in the case of Khemlo Sawant-Vs- State 2002 BCR (1) 689 also held that in all cases except punishable with death or for life the bail is rule and jail is an exception. Hon'ble Supreme Court in Siddharam's (Supra) 2011 FIL SCC (Cri) 514 laid down following guidelines of investigation.

"(Para 107) In case, the State considers the following suggestions in proper perspective then perhaps it may not be necessary to curtail the personal liberty of the accused in a routine manner. These suggestions are only illustrative and not exhaustive:

(1) Direct the accused to join the investigation and only when the accused does not cooperate with the investigating agency, then only the accused be arrested.

(2) Seize either the passport or such other related documents, such as, the title deeds of properties or the fixed deposit receipts/share certificates of the accused.

(3) Direct the accused to execute bonds.

(4) The accused may be directed to furnish sureties of a number of persons which according to the prosecution are necessary in view of the facts of the particular case.

(5) The accused be directed to furnish undertaking that he would not visit the place where the witnesses reside so that the possibility of tampering of evidence or otherwise influencing the course of justice be avoided.

Fraud on power order passed by ignoring relevant materials and considering extraneous factors is fraud on power-order vitiated as void ab initio-

A) FRAUD ON POWER VOIDS THE ORDER if it is not exercised bond fide for the end design. – there is a distinction between exercise of power in good faith and misuse in bad faith. – when an authority misuses its power in breach of law, say, by taking into account, some extraneous matters or by ignoring relevant matters. That would render the impugned act or order ultra vires when the power is exercised for an improper motive, say, to satisfy a private or personal grudge or for wreaking vengeance of a party – a power is exercised maliciously if its repository is motivated by personal animosity towards those who are directly affected by its exercise . – use of a power for an 'alien' purpose other than the one for which the power is conferred is mala fide use of that power. Same is the position when an order is made for a purpose other than that which finds place in the order. –and any action proved to be committed in bad faith for from corrupt motives, would certainly be held to be inoperative."- "no judgment of a court, no order of minister, can be allowed to stand if it has been obtained by fraud. Fraud unravels everything." (emphasis supplied) see also, in Lazarus case at p. 722 per lord parker, c.j. : "fraud vitiates all transactions known to the law of however high a degree of solemnity."

B) "FRAUD AS IS WELL KNOWN VITIATES EVERY SOLEMN ACT. – Fraud and justice never dwell together. Fraud is a conduct either by letter or words, which induces the other person or authority to take a definite determinative stand as a response the conduct of the former either by word or letter. It is also well settled that misrepresentation itself amounts to fraud. Indeed, innocent misrepresentation may also give reason to claim relief against fraud. A fraudulent misrepresentation is called deceit and consists in leading a man into damage by willfully or recklessly causing him to believe an act on falsehood. It is fraud in law if a party makes representations which he known to be false and injury ensues there from although the motive from which the representations proceeded may not have been bad. An act of fraud on court is always viewed seriously. A collusion or conspiracy with a view to deprive the rights of others in relation to a property would render the transaction void ab initio. Fraud and deception are synonymous. Fraud is anathema to all equitable principles and any affair tainted with fraud cannot be perpetuated or saved by the application of any equitable doctrine including res judicate."

The Apex Court in a decision in the case of Smt. S.R.Venkataraman .vs. Union of India and another reported in (1979) 2 Supreme Court cases 491 wherein while considering the question of malice in law by quoting the observations of Viscount Haldane in the decision in the case of Shearer .vs. Shields reported in (1914) AC 808, it has been observed by Apex Court in paragraph no. 5 of the said decision:

> "5..... Malice in law is, however, quite different Viscount Haldane described it as follows in Shearer V. Shields:
> A person who inflicts an injury upon another person in contravention of the law is not allowed to say that he did so with an innocent mind; law, and he must act with an innocent mind; he is taken to know the law, and he must act within the law. He may, therefore, be guilty of malice in law, although, so far the state of his mind is concerned; he acts ignorantly and in that sense innocently.
> Thus malice in its legal sense means malice such as may be assumed from the doing of a wrongful act intentionally but without just cause or excuse or for want of reasonable or probable cause.

(191) Exercise of jurisdiction under Section 438 Cr. P.C. is an extremely important judicial function of a judge and must be entrusted to judicial officers with some experience and good track record. Both the individual and society have vital interest in orders passed by the courts in anticipatory bail application.

(120) It is imperative for the High Court's through its judicial academies to periodically organize workshops, symposiums, seminars and lectures by the experts to sensitive judicial officers police officers and investigating officers so that they part properly comprehend the importance of personal liberty vis-à-vis social interests. They must learn to maintain fine balance between the personal liberty and the social interests.

(121) The performance of the judicial officers must be periodically evaluated on the basis of the cases- they have not been able to maintain balance between personal liberty and societal interests, the lacunae must be pointed out to them and they may be asked to take corrective measures in future. Ultimately, the entire discretion of grant or refusal of bail has to be left to the judicial officers and all concerned must ensure that grant or refusal of bail is considered basically on the facts and circumstances of each case.

Contempt by Magistrate – Contemnor B.K. Nigam was J.M.F.C. – When prisoners were produced before him Magistrate was completely insensitive about the serious violation of the human rights he did not take any action against handcuffing by police – The magistrate simply passed order calling explanation by police – Held, the Magistrate was bound to take immediate actions for removal of handcuffs – Magistrate was completely insensitive about the serious violation of the human rights – This is a serious lapse on the part of judicial officer – The Magistrate was expected to ensure that the basic human rights of the citizens are not violated – The Magistrate should also expected to take action against police officer for bringing the accused to the court in handcuffs and taking them away in the handcuffs without his authorization – Keeping in view that contemnor Magistrate is a young judicial officer Supreme court did not imposed punishment on him – However recorded strong disapproval of his conduct and directed that a note of this disapproval shall be kept in his personal file.

A] Cri. P.C. Sec. 197 – Sanction for prosecution – Accused are Additional High Court Judge, Suprintendant of Police Sanjeev Bhatt and others – The accused hatched conspiracy to falsely implicate a shop owner in a case under N.D.P.S. Act and when shop owner submitted to their demands he was discharged – Complaint u.s. 120-B, 195, 196, 342, 347, 357, 368, 388, 458, 482, I.P.c. and Sec. 17, 58 (1), (2) of NDPS Act – Held – there is no connection between official duty and offence – No sanction is required for prosecution – Registration of F.I.R. and investigation legal and proper.

B] Cri. P.C. Sec. 156 – Investigation against accused Addl. High Court Judge – Whether prior consultation with Chief Justice is necessary prior filling of F.I.R. against a High Court Judge as has been laid down by Supreme Court in K. Veerswami's case (1991) (3) SCC 655) – Held – In K. Veerswami's case Supreme Court observed that the Judges are liable to be dealt with just the same as any other person in respect of criminal offence and only in offence regarding corruption the sanction for criminal prosecution is required – the directions issued by Hon'ble Supreme Court are not applicable in instant case.

C] The applicant – Ram Lal Addl. High Court Judge hatched criminal conspiracy – The Bar Association submitted a representation to Hon'ble Chief Justice of India on 11-09-1997 requesting to not to confirm Raman Lal as Judge of the High Court – Later on he was transferred to Principal Judge of city Civil and Sessions Court at Ahmedabad – S.P. (C.I.D.) Jaipur sent a questionnaire through the registrar, Gujrat High Court to accused Addl. High Court Judge – Chief Justice granted permission to I.O. to interrogate – Later on I.O. sent letter to applicant to remain present before Chief Judicial Magistrate at the time of filing the charge-sheet – Applicant filed petition before High Court challenging it – Petition of applicant was rejected by High Court and Supreme Court in limine – No relief is required to be granted to petitioner in view of the facts of the case.

D] Conspiracy – I.P.C. Sec. 120 (B) – Apex court made it clear that an inference of conspiracy has to be drawn on the basis of circumstantial evidence only because it becomes difficult to get direct evidence on such issue – The offence can only be proved largely from the inference drawn from acts or illegal ommission committed by them in furtherance of a common design – Once such a conspiracy is proved, act of one conspirator becomes the act of the others – A Co-conspirator who joins subsequently and commits overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy must also be held liable – Proceeding against accused cannot be quashed.

MODEL DRAFT OF BAIL APPLICATION

SUSPENSION OF SENTENCE PENDING THE APPEAL; RELEASE OF APPELLANT ON BAIL

Code of Criminal Procedure – Section - 389

Suspension of sentence pending the appeal; release of appellant on bail—

(1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended and, also, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail, or on his own bond.

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of an appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto.

(3) Where the convicted person satisfies the Court by which he is convicted that he intends to present an appeal, the Court shall,—

(i) where such person, being on bail, is sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years', or

(ii) where the offence of which such person has been convicted is a bailable one, and he is on bail,

Order that the convicted person be released on bail, unless there are special reasons for refusing bail, for such period as will afford sufficient time to present the appeal and obtain the orders of the Appellate Court under sub-section (1); and the sentence of imprisonment shall, so long as he is so released on bail, be deemed to be suspended.

(4) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment for a term or to imprisonment for life, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced.

WHEN BAIL MAY BE TAKEN IN CASE OF NON-BAILABLE OFFENCE

Code of Criminal Procedure: section 437 when ball may be taken in case of non-bailable offence—

(1) When any person accused of, or suspected of, the commission of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer-in-charge of a police station or appears or is brought before a Court other than the High Court or Court of Session, he may be released on bail, but—

(i) such person shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life;

(ii) such person shall not be so released if such offence is a cognizable offence and he had been previously convicted of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for seven years or more, or he had been previously convicted on two or more occasions of a non-bailable and cognizable offence:

Provided that the Court may direct that a person referred to in clause

(i) or clause (ii) be released on bail if such person is under the age of sixteen years or is a woman or is sick or infirm :

Provided further that the Court may also direct that a person referred to in clause (ii) be released on bail if it is satisfied that it is just and proper so to do for any other special reason :

Provided also that the mere fact that an accused person may be required for being identified by witnesses during investigation shall not be sufficient ground for refusing to grant bail if he is otherwise entitled to be released on bail and gives an undertaking that he had comply with such directions as may be given by the Court.)

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, the there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, [the accused shall, subject to the provisions of Section 446-A and pending such inquiry, be released on bail] or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) When a person accused or suspected of the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or more or of an offence under Chapter VI, Chapter XVI or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860) or abetment of, or conspiracy or attempt to commit, any such offence, is released on bail under sub-section (1). the Court may impose any condition which the Court considers necessary—

(a) in order to ensure that such person shall attend in accordance with the conditions of the bond executed under this Chapter, or

(b) in order to ensure that such person shall not commit an offence similar to the offence of which he is accused or of the commission of which he is suspected, or

(c) otherwise in the interests of justice.

(4) An officer or a Court releasing any person on bail under subsection (1) or sub-section (2), shall record in writing his or its '[reasons or special reasons) for so doing.

(5) Any Court which has released a person on bail under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), may, if it considers it necessary so to do, direct that such person be arrested and commit him to custody.

(6) If, in any case triable by a Magistrate, the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within a period of sixty days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, such person shall, if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing the Magistrate otherwise directs.

(7) If, at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non-bailable offence and before judgment is delivered, the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused, if he is in custody, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered.

APPLICATION NO. 10

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT BOMBAY MUMBAI BENCH, MUMBAI.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION NO. OF 2011.

APPLICANT :- A.B.C.
..Versus. .
RESPONDENTS:- C.B.I., ACB
Tanna House, A-11 Nathalal Parekh Marg, Colaba, Mumbai – 4400039.

APPLICATION UNDER SECTION 438 OF Cr. P.C. FOR ANTICIPATORY BAIL.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR:

Most respectfully submitted on behalf of Applicant as under:

1] The applicant above named is permanent resident of Navi Mumbai and residing along with her family members at the above-mentioned address.

2] That the Applicant is the proprietor of 'X' Group and the Chief Promotor of Co.Op. Housing Society.

3] The Applicant submits that it has come to her knowledge that C.B.I. has registered a case vide R.C.No.197(A)/2010 against the (Commissioner of Income Tax and XYZ (Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax) for alleged offences punishable under section 120-B of I.P.C. R/W. 7 & 13(1) (d) of P.C. Act 1988 alleging that they have compelled to the Complainant to pay a bribe amount. A copy of FIR is marked at Annexure –A.

4] The brief facts of the prosecution story are as under:-

It is alleged that XYZ Additional C.I.T. Thane and Mr. PQR Assistant CIT demanded a bribe of Rs.2 Crores from the complainant Mr. TRS. It is alleged by the complainant that the complainant had been compelled to pay bribe amount of Rs.20 Lakhs under duress on 25th March 2011 and on 29th March 2011. It is further alleged by the complainant that during verification conducted on 15th April 2011 the demand for the bribe was confirmed and the remaining bribe amount was reduced from 5 Crores to 3 Crores.

It is alleged that after verification the said case came to be registered on 15.01.2011 and it is further alleged that the trap was laid on 16.04.2011 to apprehend Mr. XYZ. It is also alleged that as per the instructions of Mr. XYZ his agent was apprehended red handed while accepting the cash of Rs. 1.50 Crores on the Eastern Express Highway on 16.04.2011.

It is further alleged that XYZ during the investigation, admitted having received bribe amount of from the said complainant and asked him to deliver the same to Mr. PQR Asstt. CIT. It is therefore alleged that the Mr. PQR Asstt. CIT criminally conspired with Mr. XYZ and in pursuance of the criminal conspiracy Mr. XYZ demanded a bribe amount of Rs.2 Crores and accepted a bribe amount of Rs.20 Lakhs in two installments.

That, the C.B.I. officers visited the residential premises of present applicant, at that time he was not found at her residential premises. The residential premises of Applicant was sealed on 22.04.2011 and unsealed by C.B.I. officers on 16.09.2011.

6] The applicant submits that he was in the flying club at MUMBAI in the year 1990 for Pilot Training and MR. PQR was also a member of flying club and being members they came in contact with each other and their relations developed into friendship.

7] The applicant submits that 6 months back the applicant had entered into an Agreement of Sale with said MR. PQR in connection with Plot no.5, 'B' Nagar Co-op. Housing Society.

8] The applicant submits that it was agreed by him to purchase the said property from Mr. PQR for a consideration of Rs.19,00,000/- and so far paid an amount of Rs.1,29,000/- to Mr. PQR and except this transaction there is no any other transaction between Mr. PQR and the Applicant.

10] The applicant submits that on 16.09.2011 the applicant had himself went to the office of C.B.I. Colaba Mumbai and on the very day the Investigating officer and two other officer unsealed the said flat of the applicant in her presence and on the same date the search operation was taken by the C.B.I.

12] The applicant above named in apprehending arrest at the hands of the Respondents filed Anticipatory Bail Application before Sessions Judge, Mumbai under Section 438 of Cr. P.C. to secure his liberty, being Bail Application No. 189/2011

13] As the respondent failed to file any reply the application therefore on _____ the learned Spl. Judge granted, a-interim anticipatory bail to the present applicant. A copy of the order dated _____ granting anticipatory bail to the applicant is marked at Anexure –B.

14] Thereafter the applicant approached the respondent and co-operated them time to time. On _____ the respondent arrested the applicant and released her on the bail. A copy of bail bond executed by the applicant is marked at Annexure –C.

15] In meantime the respondent filed a false and misleading reply on _____ before Special Court, Mumbai and raised the issue of jurisdiction of the court to entertain the application. A copy of say filed by the respondent is marked at Annexure –D.

16] The applicant filed all documentary proofs proving falsity of the contention of the respondent. But by order dated _____ the learned Special Judge dispose off the application of the applicant directing the applicant to approach the court at Mumbai and accepted the contention of the respondent that the Court at Mumbai is not having the jurisdiction.

17] Being aggrieved by the said order the applicant approaches the Hon'ble High Court under Section 438 of Cr. P.C. on following grounds which are stated without prejudice to others.

G R O U N D S

a) That the applicant is falsely implicated in this case and has no connection with the said offence.

b) The applicant is not named in the F.I.R. nor he is a Government Officer.

c) The learned Special Judge failed to give proper appreciation to the provisions of Section 157 of Cr. P.C. which provides the procedure to be followed by the Police Oficer, and makes it mandatory that the copy of the F.I.R. is to be send to the Court having jurisdiction. In present case the S.P., C.B.I. , A.C.B., Mumbai vide its letter dated 2005-2010 send the copy of the F.I.R. to the Special Judge, Mumbai. Copy of Letter sent by SP, CBI, ACB is marked at Annexure –F. Further more the order passed by the Spl. Judge, Gr. Bombay in M.A. No. 291/2011 where on the basis of submission given by the Spl. P.P. 'XTR', the counsel for respondent and on perusing the record Ld. Spl. Judge had given cler finding that the copy of F.I.R. was not filed in the court at Gr. Bombay and the Court at Thane is the concerned court.

A copy of order passed by Spl. Judge, Gr. Bombay in M.A. No. 291/2011 is annexed herewith and marked at Annexure –G to the present application. Moreover another co-accused Mrs. MAR and Mr. BSR filed bail application before the same Court i.e. Special Judge, Thane vide Baill Application No. 683/2010 and while giving say in that matter the respondent did not raise any ground of jurisdiction. A copy of the said Bail application along with roznama and orders thereon is marked herewith at Annexure –H. And copy of say filed by respondent in that bail application is marked at Annexure –I.

This makes it clear that the Special Court at Thane is having jurisdiction in the case, but with malafide intention to harass the applicant the ground of jurisdiction is raised.

d) That, as per the provisions of 157 of Cr. P.C. the copy of F.I.R. was sent by the S.P., CBI, ACB to deciding the jurisdiction at the Court of Special Judge, Mumbai. But the Officer subordinate and in lower rank i.e. Dy. S.P. Mr. 'B' had given the submission against the same. This is not permissible in the procedure established by the law.

e) The malafides on the part of I.O. can easily be seen from his say filed before Special Judge, Thane where he made various false and contradictory statements, which itself make it clear that the I.O. is interested in falsely implicating the applicant.

f) That, the respondents are trying to falsely implicate the applicant by creating false evidence against him. This is ex-faciely proved from prosecutions own documents.

In the Search List prepared by the Respondent I.O. dated 16-09-2011 it has been stated that:

".. Accused PQR during Police custody remand made a statement to the effect that she had given Rs. 22,00,000/- approax. In cash to ABC for developing a plot in Mumbai out of the bribe amount collected by her."

On the contrary the same I.O. in his written statement before Spl. Judge, Mumbai in bail application No. 191/2010 had given another version about the statement made by said accused PQR. In para (5) of the say (Annexure –C) the Respondent NO. 4 had submitted as follows.

"(5)…. That during investigation accused PQR was arrested. During interrogation she was questioned about the bribe amount collected by him. To which she stated that she had given Rs. 22 Lakhs to present applicant Mr. ABC for safe custody. "

Hence it is clear that the I.O. had prepared a false evidence only with a view to harass the applicant only because the present petitioner raised voice against the illegalities committed by Respondent I.O.

g) It is settled principle of law andmore particularly as has been laid down by Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case B. Suresh Yadva –Vs- Sharifa Bee 2008 Cri.L.J. 431 (SC), it is the basic principle of criminal jurisprudence that whenever the prosecution takes inconsistent or self contradictory stand then no case is made out for proceeding with criminal case. Hence on this ground alone the proceedings against the petitioner is liable to be quashed forthwith.

h) No case is made out: For the sake of arguments and without prejudice to the rights of the applicant even if the version given by the prosecution about giving rupees to applicant for the construction work is taken on their face value and accepted in its entirety then also no offence is made out against the petitioner. This fact also gets support from the prosecutions own documents, because, when applicant's house at Mumbai was searched by I.O. on 16-09-2011 and the applicant was present with the I.O. for more than 14 hours then the I.O. did not think it proper to arrest the applicant.

More over in the say filed by the I.O. before Ld. Spl. Judge, Mumbai in Bail application No. 191/2011 the I.O. nowhere stated that they are having any new material which was not present on search dated 16-09-2011. As such it is clear that the present act of the I.O. is nothing but the means of harassment to the applicant.

i) Even otherwise as per law laid down by 3- Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Central Bureau of Investigation A.H.D. Patna –Vs- Braj Bhushan Prasad 2001 SCC (9) 432 it has been held in para (45) that the place of jurisdiction would be determined by reference to the place where the main offence was committed. The fact that other allied acts were committed at different places would be hardly sufficient to change the venue of the trial to other places. Hon'ble High Court in the case of 1986(3) Crimes 305 laid down the ratio that the place of office assumes importance, and it would determine the jurisdiction in which the offence is triable.

Apart from that if the allegations in the F.I.R. are taken on face value then they indicate the demand and first acceptance at Thane under these circumstances the Court at Thane is only the Court having jurisdiction. Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Vishnu Kondaji Jadhao –Vs- State of Maharashtra 1994 AIR (SC) 167 specifically laid down that the each demand of bribe is a separate offence. Hence as the demand was allegedly to be made at Thane therefore the Spl. Judge, Mumbai is the Court having the jurisdiction. The more specific view is taken by Hon'ble High Court in the case of 1997 Cri.L.J. 4485.

j) Already the applicant was on interim Anticipatory bail for more than 6 months. The applicant fully co-operated the investigating agency and joined the investigation many times therefore the applicant deserve to be granted anticipatory bail in view of the law laid down by Hon"ble Supreme Court in the case of Siddharam Mehtre –Vs- State of Maharashtra 2011 (1) SCC.(Cri) 514.

k) That the respondent never denied the version put up by the applicant.

l) That, considering the entire nature of the case and the allegations leveled therein no offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act is made out against the present applicant in the absence of any prima-facie material against the applicant. That the applicant cannot be indicted in any offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act.

m) That during the entire course of investigation which the respondents office has been apprising of before the various courts it is stated that, there is not a singular whisper about the present applicant being involved in the alleged conspiracy carried out by the other accused. Moreover, to the farthest stretch of imagination, the applicant cannot be alleged to have in any manner involved to the alleged offence or has been beneficiary of any kind as the present applicant is in not a public servant and is in no manner contributor to the alleged favour of which illegal gratification was demanded.

n) That the applicant hails from a respectable family and any such overt act on her part is completely imaginary in nature, in any event the applicant is ready and willing to co-operate with the investigating agency as and when called upon to do so.

o) That the applicant is a law abiding and has never come to adverse notice of any investigation agency.

p) The applicant respectfully submits that as far as she is concerned there is no involvement of the applicant with other accused.

q) That prima facie the allegations leveled against the present applicant no where connects him with the alleged offence and the allegations are made by the respondents with a sole motive to shield their own guilt.

r) That, the applicant denies committing any offence alleged against him moreover nature of allegations is such that custodial interrogation of the applicant in this case is unwarranted.

s) It is learnt that the investigation in the case is already completed.

t) That, the applicant hails from respectable family having deep roots in the society and any such overtact by her is beyond imagination.

u) That in any event the applicant is ready and willing to co-operate with the investigating agency as and when required.

v) That the applicant submits that they have not filed any other application for similar relief's before this Hon'ble Court or any other courts in India.

P R A Y E R:- It is therefore prayed that, this Hon'ble Court be pleased to :-

a) direct the respondents to release the present applicant on bail in connection with R.C.No.197(A)/2010 under section 120-B of I.P.C. r/w. 7 & 13(1) (d) of P.C. Act 1988 in the event of his arrest, on any terms and conditions as this Hon'ble Court may deem fit to impose in the circumstances of the case.

b) That, interim and ad-interim relief's may be granted in terms of prayer clause (a) to the applicant.

8. The applicants could not be held responsible for any alleged act from any stretch of imagination.
9. It is further submitted that there is no allegation of any investor or complainant regarding any thing is committed or alleged act against any daily collector from the applicant. There is absolutely no complaint against the applicant. I f they found guilty for any thing regarding any alleged act the office bearer could have lodged the report against the applicant.
10. That the investor of the said Credit Society lodged the report-dated 13.4.2010 against the Bank, its President Secretary and Vice-President, falsely alleging that their amount has been mis-appropriated and NAGPUR police registered crime no. 111/2010 for the offence punishable u/s 409,506,504,34 of IPC and u/s 3 of MPID Act against President, Vice-President and its secretary. The same report further lodged by them to the Registrar of Co-Op. Society who appointed Shri B. W. Advocate an " Inquiry Officer " under Sec. of 83 of Maharastra Co-Op.Society Act 1960. The Inquiry Officer inquired in to the matter and opined that there is no misappropriation of the amount of the investor vide its report dated 1.8. 2010.

11. President, Vice-President and its Honorary secretary of the Credit Society applied for Anticipatory Bail before the Honb'le Court and same came to be rejected and against this order these three person approached before Honb'le High Court for Anticipatory Bail vide Criminal Application no……/2010, and Honb'le High Court pleased to released them on anticipatory Bail vide order dated 30.9.2010, after hearing the prosecution. The Honb'le Court also pleased to release the some Director and one daily Collector named Sham Gahlot by common order dated 27.04.06 in misc. Cri. Application no.306 /10 and 309/10 on the principle of parity.
12. That the NAGPUR Police has recently prior couple of days added near about 40 persons as accused in the said crime including the collector under Political pressure, by adding the other sections 420, 467 of IPC.
13. It is submitted that the applicant have not committed any alleged offence and they are not directly and indirectly involved in the alleged crime from any stretch of imagination.
14. As the applicant are innocent, honest and respectable person, NAGPUR Police falsely involved in the alleged crime under Political pressure without any direct and circumstantial evidence with malafide intention to defame them before society at large
15. It is further submitted that due to insolvency of the Bank the applicant suffer huge financial loses and they have lost their jobs.
16. That the applicant is innocent and they are ready to furnish the solvent surety for their appearance.
17. That all applicants are permanent residence of NAGPUR, living with their family, having the deep roots in the society with the jurisdiction of the Honb'le Court and there is no chance of absconding. That applicant No. 1 & 4 is the heart patient
18. That there is no prima facie case against the applicants.
19. The entire investigation is completed in the alleged crime and investigation in the alleged crime is going on since last one year.
20. The applicant are ready to cooperate investigating agency if whenever required, and custody of the applicant are absolutely not essential in this matter.
21. The applicants are ready to abide any condition if imposed by the Honb'le Court.
22. That the applicant shall not hamper or temper to any witness.

Prayer:-

It, is therefore prayed that Honb'le Court may kindly pleased to order to release the all applicant on Anticipatory Bail, in the event of their arrest by NAGPUR police in Crime No. 111/10 for the offence punishable u/s 409, 504,420,467 +34 of I. APPENDIX-3
ARREST OF PERSONS

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 1973 Chapter V (Sections 41 to 60)

41. When police may arrest without warrant.—(1) Any police officer may without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person—

(a) who has been concerned in any cognizable offence, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists, of his having been so concerned; or

(b) who has in his possession without lawful excuse, the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person, any implement of house-breaking; or

(c) who has been proclaimed as an offender either under this Code or by order of the State Government; or

(d) in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be suspected to be stolen property and who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing; or

(e) who obstructs a police officer while in the execution of his duty, or who has escaped, or attempts to escape, from lawful custody; or

(f) who is reasonably suspected of being a deserter from any of the Armed Forces of the Union; or

(g) who has been concerned in, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists, of his having been concerned in, any act committed at any place out of India which, if committed in India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in India; or

(h) who, being a released convict, commits a breach of any rule made under sub-section (5) of section 365; or

(i) for whose arrest any requisition, whether written or oral, has been received from another police officer, provided that the requisition specifies the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made and it appears there from that the person might lawfully be arrested without a warrant by the officer who issued the requisition.

(2) Any officer in charge of a police station may, in like manner, arrest or cause to be arrested any person, belonging to one or more of the categories of persons specified in section 109 or section 110.

42. Arrest on refusal to give name and residence.—(1) When any person who, in the presence of a police officer, has committed or has been accused of committing a non-cognizable offence refuses, on demand of such officer, to give his name and residence or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, to appear before a Magistrate if so required:
Provided that, if such person is not resident in India, the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in India.

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond, or, if so required, to furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

43. Arrest by private person and procedure on such arrest.—(1) Any private person may arrest or cause to be arrested any person who in his presence commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence, or any proclaimed offender, and, without unnecessary delay, shall make over or cause to be made over any person so arrested to a police officer, or, in the absence of a police officer, take such person or cause him to be taken in custody to the nearest police station.

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of section 41, a police officer shall re-arrest him.

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non-cognizable offence and he refuses on the demand of a police officer to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of section 42; but if there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released.

44. Arrest by Magistrate.—(1) When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate, whether Executive or Judicial, within his local jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody.

(2) Any Magistrate, whether Executive or Judicial, may at any time arrest or direct the arrest, in his presence, within his local jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant.

45. Protection of members of the Armed Forces from arrest.—(1) Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 41 to 44 (both inclusive), no member of the Armed Forces of the Union shall be arrested for anything done or purported to be done by him in the discharge of his official duties except after obtaining the consent of the Central Government.

(2) The State Government may, by notification, direct that the provisions of sub-section (1) shall apply to such class or category of the members of the Forces charged with the maintenance of public order as may be specified therein, wherever they may be serving, and thereupon the provisions of that sub-section shall apply as if for the expression "Central Government" occurring therein, the expression "State Government" were substituted.

46. Arrest how made.—(1) In making an arrest the police officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action.

(2) If such person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him, or attempts to evade the arrest, such police officer or other person may use all means necessary to effect the arrest.

(3) Nothing in this section gives a right to cause the death of a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death or with imprisonment for life.

47. Search of place entered by person sought to be arrested.—

(1) If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any police officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into, or is within, any place, any person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such police officer, allow him such free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

(2) If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under sub-section (1), it shall be lawful in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue, but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for a police officer to enter such place and search therein and in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person, if after notification of his authority and purposes, and demand of admittance duly made, he cannot otherwise obtain admittance:

Provided that, if any such place is an apartment in the actual occupancy of a female (not being the person to be arrested) who, according to custom, does not appear in public, such person or police officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such female that she is at liberty to withdraw and shall afford her every reasonable facility .for withdrawing, and may then break open the apartment and enter it.

(3) Any police officer or other person authorised to make an arrest may break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who, having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest, is detained therein.

48. Pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions.—A police officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorized to arrest, pursue such person into any place in India.

49. No unnecessary restraint.—The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape.

50. Person arrested to be informed of grounds of arrest and of right to bail.—(1) Every police officer or other person arresting any person without warrant shall forthwith communicate to him full particulars of the offence for which he is arrested or other grounds for such arrest.

(2) Where a police officer arrests without warrant any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence, he shall inform the person arrested that he is entitled to be released on bail and that he may arrange for sureties on his behalf.

51. Search of arrested persons.—(1) Whenever a person is arrested by a police officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail but the person arrested cannot furnish bail, and whenever a person is arrested without warrant, or by a private person under a warrant, and cannot legally be admitted to bail, or is unable to furnish bail.

The officer making the arrests or, when the arrest is made by a private person, the police officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person, and place in safe custody all articles, other than necessary wearing-apparel, found upon him and where any article is seized from the arrested person, a receipt showing the articles taken in possession by the police officer shall be given to such person.

(2) Whenever it is necessary to cause a female to be searched, the search shall be made by another female with strict regard to decency.

52. Power to seize offensive weapons.—The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take away from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person, and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested.

53. Examination of accused by medical practitioner at the request of police officer.—(1) When a person is arrested on a charge of committing an offence of such a nature and alleged to have been committed under such circumstances that there are reasonable grounds for believing that an examination of his person will afford evidence as to the commission of an offence, it shall be lawful for a registered medical practitioner, acting at the request of a police officer not below the rank of sub-inspector, and for any person acting in good faith in his aid and under his direction, to make such an examination of the person arrested as is reasonably necessary in order to ascertain the facts which may afford such evidence, and to use such force as is reasonably necessary for that purpose.

(2) Whenever the person is a female to be examined under this section, the examination shall be made only by, or under the supervision of, a female registered medical practitioner.

Explanation.—In this section and in section 54, "registered medical practitioner" means a medical practitioner who possesses any recognized medical qualification as defined in clause (h) of section 2 of the Indian Medical Council Act, 1956 (102 of 1956), and whose name has been entered in a State Medical Register.

54. Examination of arrested person by medical practitioner at the request of the arrested person.—When a person who is arrested, whether on a charge or otherwise, alleges, at the time when he is produced before a Magistrate or at any time during the period of his detention in custody that the examination of his body will afford evidence which will disprove the commission by him of any offence or which will establish the commission by any other person of any offence against his body, the Magistrate shall, if requested by the arrested person so to do direct the examination of the body of such person by a registered medical practitioner unless the Magistrate considers that the request is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice.

55. Procedure when police officer deputes subordinate to arrest without warrant.—(1) When any officer in charge of a police station or any police officer making an investigation under Chapter XII requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant, he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing, specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made and the officer so required shall, before making the arrest, notify to the person to be arrested the substance of the order and, if so required by such person, shall show him the order.

(2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall affect the power of a police officer to arrest a person under section 41.

56. Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police station.—A police officer making an arrest without warrant shall, without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police station.

57. Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours.—No police officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court.

58. Police to report apprehensions.—Officers in charge of police stations shall report to the District Magistrate, or, if he so directs, to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise.

59. Discharge of person apprehended.—No person who has been arrested by a police officer shall be discharged except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate.

60. Powers, on escape, to pursue and retake.—(1) If a person in lawful custody escapes or is rescued, the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued may immediately pursue and arrest him in any place in India.

(2) The provisions of section 47 shall apply to arrests under subsection (1) although the person making any such arrest is not acting under a warrant and is not a police officer having authority to arrest.

SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 1973 Chapter VIII (Sections 106 to 124)

106. Security for keeping the peace on conviction.—(1) When a Court of Session or Court of a Magistrate of the first class convicts a person of any of the offences specified in sub-section (2) or of abetting any such offence and is of opinion that it is necessary to take security from such person for keeping the peace, the Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit.

(2) The offences referred to in sub-section (1) are—

(a) any offence punishable under Chapter VIII of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860), other than an offence, punishable under section 153A or section 153B or section 154 thereof;

(b) any offence which consists of, or includes, assault or using criminal force or committing mischief;

(c) any offence of criminal intimidation;

d) any other offence which caused, or was intended or known to be likely to cause, a breach of the peace.

(3) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(4) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by a Court when exercising its powers of revision.

107. Security for keeping the peace in other cases.—(1) When an Executive Magistrate receives information that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquility or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquility and is of the opinion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding, he may in the manner hereinafter

Security for Keeping the provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with or without sureties for keeping the peace for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

(2) Proceeding under this section may be taken before any Executive Magistrate when either the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended is within his local jurisdiction or there is within such jurisdiction a person who is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act as aforesaid beyond such jurisdiction.

108. Security for good behaviour from persons disseminating seditious matters.—(1) When an Executive Magistrate of the first class receives information that there is within his local jurisdiction any person who, within or without such jurisdiction,—

(i) either orally or in writing or in any other manner, intentionally disseminates or attempts to disseminate or abets the dissemination of,—

(a) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A or section 153A or section 153B or section 295A of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860), or

(b) any matter concerning a Judge acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code.

(ii) makes, produces, publishes or keeps for sale, imports, exports, conveys, sells, lets to hire, distributes, publicly exhibits or in any other manner puts into circulation any obscene matter such as is referred to in section 292 of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860), and the Magistrate is of opinion that there is sufficient ground for proceeding, the Magistrate may, in the manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

(2) No proceeding shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under, and edited, printed and published in conformity with, the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867 (25 of 1867), with reference to any matter contained in such publication except by the order or under the authority of the State Government or some officer empowered by the State Government in this behalf.

109. Security for good behaviour from suspected persons.—When an Executive Magistrate receives information that there is within his local jurisdiction a person taking precautions to conceal his presence and that there is reason to believe that he is doing so with a view to committing a cognizable offence, the Magistrate may, in the manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

110. Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders.—
When an Executive Magistrate receives information that there is within his local jurisdiction a person who—

a) is by habit a robber, house-breaker, thief, or forger, or
b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen, or
c) habitually protects or harbours thieves, or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or
d) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, the offence of kidnapping, abduction, extortion, cheating or mischief, or any offence punishable under Chapter XII of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860), or under section 489A, section 489B, section 489C or section 489D of that Code, or
e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences, involving a breach of the peace, or
f) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of—
g) any offence under one or more of the following Acts, namely:—
h) the Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940 (23 of 1940);
i) the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 (46 of 1973);
j) the Employees' Provident Funds and Family Pension Fund Act, 1952 (19 of 1952);
k) the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 (37 of 1954);
l) the Essential Commodities Act, 1955 (10 of 1955);
m) the Untouchability (Offences) Act, 1955 (22 of 1955);
n) the Customs Act, 1962 (52 of 1962); or

(ii) any offence punishable under any other law providing for the prevention of hoarding or profiteering or of adulteration of food or drugs or of corruption, or

(g) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, such Magistrate may, in the manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

111. Order to be made.—When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110, deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

112. Procedure in respect of person present in Court.—If the person in respect of whom such order is made is present in Court, it shall be read over to him, or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

113. Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.—If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is to bring him before the Court:
Provided that whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

114. Copy of order to accompany summons or warrant.—Every summons or warrant issued under section 113 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 111, and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

115. Power to dispense with personal attendance.—The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

116. Inquiry as to truth of information.—(1) When an order under section 111 has been read or explained under section 112 to a person in Court, or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant, issued under section 113, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trial and recording evidence in summons-cases.

(3) After the commencement, and before the completion, of the inquiry under sub-section (1), the Magistrate, if he considers that immediate measures are necessary for the prevention of a breach of the peace or disturbance of the public tranquility or the commission of any offence or for the public safety, may, for reason to be recorded in writing, direct the person in respect of whom the order under section 111 has been made to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour until the conclusion of the inquiry and may detain him in custody until such bond is executed or, in default of execution, until the inquiry is concluded:
Provided that—

(a) no person against whom proceedings are not being taken over under section 108, section 109, or section 110 shall be directed to execute a bond for maintaining good behaviour;

(b) the conditions of such bond, whether as to the amount thereof or as to the provision of sureties or the number thereof or the pecuniary extent of their liability, shall not be more onerous than those specified in the order under section 111.

(4) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is an habitual offender or is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(5) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt within the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

(6) The inquiry under this section shall be completed within a period of six months from the date of its commencement, and if such inquiry is not so completed, the proceedings under this Chapter shall, on the expiry of the said period, stand terminated unless, for special reasons to be recorded in writing, the Magistrate otherwise directs :

Provided that where any person has been kept in detention pending such inquiry, the proceeding against that person, unless terminated earlier, shall stand terminated on the expiry of a period of six months of such detention.

(7) Where any direction is made under sub-section (6) permitting the continuance of proceedings, the Sessions Judge may, on an application made to him by the aggrieved party, vacate such direction if he is satisfied that it was not based on any special reason or was perverse.

117. Order to give security.—If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly:

Provided that—

(a) no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 111;

(b) the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive;

(c) when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

118. Discharge of person informed against.—If, on an inquiry under section 116, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made, should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

119. Commencement of period for which security is required.—

(1) If any person, in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 117, is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason, fixes a later date.

120. Contents of bond.—The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

121. Power to reject sureties.—(1) A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered, or may reject any surety previously accepted by him or his predecessor under this Chapter on the ground that such surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond:

Provided that, before so refusing to accept or rejecting any such surety, he shall either himself hold an enquiry on oath into the fitness of the surety, or cause such inquiry to be held and a report to be made thereon by a Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Such Magistrate shall, before holding the inquiry, give reasonable notice to the surety and to the person by whom the surety was offered and shall, in making the inquiry, record the substance of | the evidence adduced before him.

(3) If the Magistrate is satisfied, after considering the evidence so adduced either before him or before, a Magistrate deputed under subsection (1), and the report of such Magistrate (if any), that the surety is an unfit person for the purposes of the bond, he shall make an order refusing to accept or rejecting, as the case may be, such surety and recording his reasons for so doing:

Provided that, before making an order rejecting any surety who has previously been accepted, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, and cause the person for whom the surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

122. Imprisonment in default of security.—(1) (a) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 117 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or, if, he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it.

(b) If any person after having executed a bond without sureties for keeping the peace in pursuance of an order of a Magistrate under section 117, is proved, to the satisfaction of such Magistrate or his successor-in-office, to have committed breach of the bond, such

Magistrate or successor-in-office may, after recording the grounds of such proof, order that the person be arrested and detained in prison until the expiry of the period of the bond and such order shall be without prejudice to any other punishment or forfeiture to which the said person may be liable in accordance with law.

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, and after giving the concerned person a reasonable opportunity of being heard, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit:
Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security shall not exceed three years.

(4) If security has been required in the course of the same proceeding from two or more persons in respect of any one of whom the proceedings are referred to the Sessions Judge under sub-section (2), such reference shall also include the case of any other of such persons who has been ordered to give security, and the provisions of subsections (2) and (3) shall, in that event, apply to the case of such other person also except that the period (if any) for which he may be imprisoned, shall not exceed the period for which he was ordered to give security.

(5) A Sessions Judge may in his discretion transfer any proceeding laid before him under sub-section (2) or sub-section (4) to an Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge and upon such transfer, such Additional Sessions Judge or Assistant Sessions Judge may exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge under this section in respect of such proceedings.

(6) If the security is tendered to the officer-in-charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

(7) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple.

(8) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour shall, where the proceedings have been taken under section 108, be simple and, where the proceedings have been taken under section 109 or section 110, be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.

123. Power to release persons imprisoned for failing to give security.—(1) Whenever the District Magistrate in the case of an order passed by an Executive Magistrate under section 117, or the Chief Judicial Magistrate in any other case is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, the High Court or Court of Session, or, where the order was made by any other Court, the District Magistrate, in the case of an order passed by an Executive Magistrate under section 117, or the Chief Judicial Magistrate in any other case, may make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) An order under sub-section (1) may direct the discharge of such person either without conditions or upon any conditions which such person accepts:

Provided that any condition imposed shall cease to be operative when the period for which such person was ordered to give security has expired.

(4) The State Government may prescribe the conditions upon which a conditional discharge may be made.

(5) If any condition upon which any person has been discharged is, in the opinion of the District Magistrate, in the case of an order passed by an Executive Magistrate under section 117, or the Chief Judicial Magistrate in any other case by whom the order of discharge was made or of his successor, not fulfilled, he may cancel the same.

(6) When a conditional order of discharge has been cancelled under sub-section (5), such person may be arrested by any police officer without warrant, and shall thereupon be produced before the District Magistrate, in the case of an order passed by an Executive Magistrate under section 117, or the Chief Judicial Magistrate in any other case.

(7) Unless such person gives security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion of the term for which he was in the first instance committed or ordered to be detained (such portion being deemed to be a period equal to the period between the date of the breach of the conditions of discharge and the date on which, except for such conditional discharge, he would have been entitled to release), the District Magistrate, in the case of an order passed by an Executive Magistrate under section 117, or the Chief Judicial Magistrate in any other case may remand such person to prison to undergo such unexpired portion.

(8) A person remanded to prison under sub-section (7) shall, subject to the provisions of section 122, be released at any time on giving security in accordance with the terms of the original order for the unexpired portion aforesaid to the Court or Magistrate by whom such order was made, or to its or his successor.

(9) The High Court or Court of Sessions may at any time, for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by any order made by it, and the District Magistrate, in the case of an order passed by an Executive Magistrate under section 117, or the Chief Judicial Magistrate in any other case may make such cancellation where such bond was executed under his order or under the order of any other Court in his district.

(10) Any surety for the peaceable conduct or good behaviour of another person, ordered to execute a bond under this Chapter may at any time apply to the Court making such order to cancel the bond and on such application being made, the Court shall issue a summons or warrant, as it thinks fit, requiring the person for whom such surety is bound to appear or to be brought before it.

124. Security for unexpired period of bond.—(1) When a person for whose appearance a summons or warrant has been issued under the proviso to sub-section (3) of section 121 or under sub-section (10) of section 123, appears or is brought before the Magistrate or Court, the Magistrate or Court shall cancel the bond executed by such person and shall order such person to give, for the unexpired portion of the term of such bond, fresh security of the same person description as the original security.

(2) Every such order shall, for the purposes of sections 120 to 123 (both inclusive) be deemed to be an order made under section 106 or section 117, as the case may be.

APPENDIX - 5

PROVISIONS AS TO BAIL AND BONDS
THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE,1973
Chapter XXXIII (Sections 436 to 450)

436. In what cases bail to be taken.—(1) When any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer or at any stage of the proceeding before such Court to give bail, such person shall be released on bail:

Provided that such officer or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided:

Provided further that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of sub-section (3) of section 116 or section 446A.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1), where a person has failed to comply with the conditions of the bail-bond as regards the time and place of attendance, the Court may refuse to release him on bail, when on a subsequent occasion in the same case he appears before the Court or is brought in custody and any such refusal shall be without prejudice to the powers of the Court to call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof under section 446.

437. When bail may be taken in case of non-bailable offence.—

(1) When any person accused of, or suspected of, the commission of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained- without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station or appears or is brought before a Court other than the High Court or Court of Session, he may be released on bail, but—

(i) such person shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life;

(ii) such person shall not be so released if such offence is a cognizable offence and he had been previously convicted of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or imprisonment for seven years or more, or he had been previously convicted on two or more occasions of a non-bailable and cognizable offence:

Provided that the Court may direct that a person referred to in clause (i) or clause (ii) be released on bail if such person is under the age of sixteen years or is a woman or is sick or infirm:

Provided further that the Court may also direct that a person referred to in clause (ii) be released on bail if it is satisfied that it is just and proper so to do for any other special reason:

Provided also that the mere fact that an accused person may be required for being identified by witnesses during investigation shall not be sufficient ground for refusing to grant bail if he is otherwise entitled to be released on bail and gives an undertaking that the shall comply with such directions as may be given by the Court.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, subject to the provisions of section 446A and pending such inquiry, be released on bail], or, at the discretion of such officer or Court on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) When a person accused or suspected of the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or more or of an offence under Chapter VI, Chapter XVI or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860) or abetment of, or conspiracy or attempt to commit, any such offence, is released on bail under sub-section (1) the Court may impose any condition which the Court considers necessary—

(a) in order to ensure that such person shall attend in accordance with the conditions of the bond executed under this Chapter, or

(b) in order to ensure that such person shall not commit an offence similar to the offence of which he is accused or of the commission of which he is suspected, or

(c) otherwise in the interests of justice.

(4) An officer or a Court releasing any person on bail under subsection (1), or sub-section (2), shall record in writing his or its reasons or special reasons for so doing.

(5) Any Court which has released a person on bail under subsection (1), or sub-section (2), may, if it considers it necessary so to do, direct that such person be arrested and commit him to custody.

(6) If, in any case tribal by a Magistrate, the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within a period of sixty days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, such person shall, if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing, the Magistrate otherwise directs.

(7) If, at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non-bailable offence and before judgment is delivered the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused, if he is in custody, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered.

438. Direction for grant of bail to person apprehending arrest.—

(1) When any person has reason to believe that he may be arrested on an accusation of having committed a non-bailable offence, he may apply to the High Court or the Court of Session for direction under this section; and that Court may, if it thinks fit, direct that in the event of such arrest, he shall be released on bail.

(2) When the High Court or the Court of Session makes a direction under sub-section (1), it may include such conditions in such directions in the light of the facts of the particular case, as it may thinks fit, including—

(i) a condition that the person shall make himself available for interrogation by a police officer as and when required;

(ii) a condition that the person shall not, directly or indirectly, make any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to any police officer;

(iii) a condition that the person shall not leave India without the previous permission of the Court;

(iv) such other condition as may be imposed under subsection (3) of section 437, as if the bail were granted under that section.

(3) If such person is thereafter arrested without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station on such accusation, and is prepared either at the time of arrest or at any time while in the custody of such officer to give bail, he shall be released on bail, and if a Magistrate taking cognizance of such offence decides that a warrant should issue in the first instance against that person, he shall issue a bailable warrant in conformity with the direction of the Court under sub-section (1).

439. Special powers of High Court or Court, of Session regarding bail.— (1) A High Court or Court of Session may direct—

(a) that any person accused of an offence and in custody be released on bail, and if the offence is of the nature specified in sub-section (3) of section 437, may impose any condition which it considers necessary for the purposes mentioned in that sub-section;

(b) that any condition imposed by a Magistrate when releasing any person on bail be set aside or modified:

Provided that the High Court or the Court of Session shall, before granting bail to a person who is accused of an offence which is triable exclusively by the Court of Session or which, though not so triable, is punishable with imprisonment for life, give notice of the application for bail to the Public Prosecutor unless it is, for reasons to be recorded in writing, of opinion that it is not practicable to give such notice.

(2) A High Court or Court of Session may direct that any person who has been released on bail under this Chapter be arrested and commit him to custody.

440. Amount of bond and reduction thereof.—(1) The amount of every bond executed under this chapter shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive.

(2) The High Court or Court of Session may direct that the bail required by a police officer or Magistrate be reduced.

441. Bond of accused and sureties.—(1) Before any released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such StU| money as the police officer or Court, as the case may sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released i bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such t shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police' Court, as the case may be.

(2) Where any condition is imposed for the release of any person on bail, the bond shall also contain that condition.

(3) If the case so requires, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court, of Session or other Court to answer the charge.

(4) For the purpose of determining whether the sureties are fit or sufficient, the Court may accept affidavits in proof of the facts contained therein relating to the sufficiency or fitness of the sureties or, if it considers necessary, may either hold an inquiry itself or cause an inquiry to be made by a Magistrate subordinate to the Court, as to such sufficiency or fitness.

442. Discharge from custody.—(1) As soon as the bond has been executed, the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released; and when he is in jail the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer on receipt of the orders shall release him.

(2) Nothing in this section, section 436 or section 437 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

443. Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.—If, through mistake, fraud, or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail.

444. Discharge of sureties.—(1) All or any sureties for the attendance and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond, either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him.

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties, and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to jail.

445. Deposit instead of recognizance.—When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court of officer may if in lieu of executing such bond.

446. Procedure when bond has been forfeited.—(1) Where a bond under this Code is for appearance, or for production of property, before a Court and it is proved to the satisfaction of that Court or of any Court to which the case has subsequently been transferred, that the bond has been forfeited, or where in respect of any other bond under this Code, it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which the bond was taken, or of any Court to which the case has subsequently been transferred, or of the Court of any Magistrate of the first class, that the bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof or to show cause why it should not be paid.

Explanation.—A condition in a bond for appearance, or for production of property, before a Court shall be construed as including a condition for appearance, or as the case may be, for production of property before any Court to which the case may subsequently be transferred.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same as if such penalty were a fine imposed by it under this Code:

Provided that where such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered in the manner aforesaid, the person so bound as surety shall be liable, by order of the Court ordering the recovery of the penalty, to imprisonment in civil jail for a term which may extend to six months.

(3) The Court may, at its discretion, remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(4) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond.

(5) Where any person who has furnished security under section 106 or section 117 or section 360 is convicted of an offence the commission of which constitutes a breach of the conditions of his bond, or of a bond executed in lieu of his bond under section 448, a certified copy of the judgment of the Court by which he was convicted of such offence may be used as evidence in proceedings under this section against his surety or sureties, and, if such certified copy is so used, the Court shall presume that such offence was committed by him unless the contrary is proved.

446A. Cancellation of bond and bail bond.—Without prejudice to the provisions of section 446, where a bond under this Code is for appearance of a person in a case and it is forfeited for breach of a condition—

(a) the bond executed by such person as well as the bond, if any, executed by one or more of his sureties in that case shall stand cancelled; and

(b) thereafter no such person shall be released only on his own bond in that case, if the Police Officer or the Court, as the case may be, for appearance before whom the bond was executed, is satisfied that there was no sufficient cause for the failure of the person bound by the bond to comply with its condition:

Provided that subject to any other provision of this Code he may be released in that case upon the execution of a fresh personal bond for such sum of money and bond by one or more of such sureties as the Police Officer or the Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient.

447. Procedure in case of insolvency or death of surety or when ; a bond is forfeited.—When any surety to a bond under this Code becomes insolvent or dies, or when any bond is forfeited under the provisions of section 446, the Court by whose order such bond was taken, or a Magistrate of the first class may order the person from whom such security was demanded to furnish fresh security in accordance with the directions of the original order, and if such security is not furnished, such Court or Magistrate may proceed as if there had been a default in complying with such original order.

448. Bond required from minor.—When the person required by any Court, or officer to execute a bond is a minor, such Court or officer may accept, in lieu thereof, a bond executed by a surety or sureties only.

449. Appeal from orders under section 446.—All orders passed under section 446 shall be appealable,—

(i) in the case of an order made by a Magistrate, to the Sessions Judge;

(ii) in the case of an order made by a Court of Sessions, to the Court to which an appeal lies from an order made by such Court.

450. Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizance's.—The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond for appearance or attendance at such High Court or Court of Session.

FROM CRIMINAL MANUAL

REMAND

1) It is observed that Magistrates allow remand of the accused to custody under Section 167 of the Code of Criminal procedure. 1973. Or allow remand under Section 309 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 1973. Without satisfying themselves that there are reasonable grounds for such remand. The law requires that Magistrates should not allow remand in such cases without being satisfied that there are really good grounds for it Magistrates should not, therefore, allow remand applications as a matter of course, but only after being satisfied that further time is really necessary for the purpose of investigation. In this connection, the attention of all the Courts is invited to the rulings reported in A.I.R 1975 SC 1465 Natabar Parida V. State of Orissa, and 78 B.L.R. 411 State of Maharashtra v. Tukaram Shiva Patil.

2) In this connection attention of the Magistrates is drawn to the provisions of Section 167 (1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 1973 which makes it obligatory on the police to send copies of entries in the diary relating to the case when forwarding the accused for the purposes of remand. Magistrates should invariably insist upon copies of such entries and material should be carefully examined by the Magistrates in order to satisfy themselves that there are good grounds for remand.

3) While it is not intended to fetter the discretion of the Magistrates in matters of remand, the following general principles are stated for their guidance:-

i) A ramand to police custody of an accused person should not ordinarily be granted unless there is reason to believe that material and valuable information would thereby be obtained, which cannot be obtained except by his remand to police custody.

ii) Where a remand is required merely for the purpose of verifying a statement made by the accused, the Magistrate should ordinarily remand the accused person to Magisterial custody.

iii) If the Magistrate thinks that it is not necessary for purposes of investigation to remand the accused to police custody, he should place the accused person in Magisterial custody : and in case he has no jurisdiction to try the offence charged, he should issue orders for forwarding the accused person to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

iv) If the Magistrate thinks that the police not only require more time for their investigation but that for some good reason they require the accused person to be present with them in that investigation the Magistrate may remand him to police custody, but while doing so, he must record the reasons for his order.

Remand execution:- State must show that at the stage of remand the Magistrate directed detention in jail custody after applying his mind to all relevant matters. Madhu Limaye v. State of Bihar. AIR 1969 SC 1014: 1969 Cri. L.J. 1440 : (1969) 1 SCC 292: (19669) 1 SCWR 470.

Remand of accused to police custody: Proviso of S. 162 (2) of Cr. P. C. which is relating to criminal justice involving personal liberty, must be construed strictly in favour of individual liberty. The delay in completion of the investigation can be on pain of the accused being released on bail Therefore cancellation on the ground that charge-sheet was filed subsequently is not permissible. After arrest of accused. Initial custody cannot exceed fifteen days as a whole. It may be police or judicial custody. Any further extension will be for judicial custody only. C. R. I.v. Anupam J. Kullkarni, 1992 AIR S.C.W. 1976 AIR 1992 S.C. (1992) 3 SCC 141 : 1768: 1992 Cr.L.J.2768.

After expiry of period of fifteen days of police remand, order for police remand for a further period of 7 days was held to be violative of section 167 of Cr.P.C. Budh Singh v. State of Punjab (2000) 9 SCC 266, CBI v. Anupam Kulkarni, (1992) 3 SCC 141 followed.

"Accused if in custody: Distinction between section 167 & Section 309(2), Cr. P.C. : Even after taking cognizance of an offence the Court can authorise detention in police custody of a person arrested during further investigation Words accused if in custody" in section 309(2) does not refer to a person who is arrested in course of further investigation.

Remand and custody referred to in first proviso to Section 309 relates to post-cognizance stage and can only be to judicial custody.

The remand and the custody referred to in the first proviso to Section 309 are different from detention to custody under S. 167. While remand under the former relates to a stage after cognizance and can only be to judicial custody.

Detention under the latter relates to the stage of investigation and can initially be either in police custody or judicial custody. Since, however even after cognizance is taken of an offence the police has a power to investigate into it further, which can be exercised only in accordance with Chapter XII, there is no reason whatsoever why the provisions of Section 167 thereof would not apply to a person who comes to be later arrested.

Under-trials for longer period:- When certain under trial prisoners remained in jail without trial for periods longer than the maximum term for which they could have been sentenced if convicted and such person had been in detention for periods longer than the maximum terms (as prescribed in proviso to Seetion 167(2) Cr. P.C.) without their trial having been commenced, their continued detention was clearly illegal and in violation of their fundamental right under Art. 21 of the Constitution. As such they must be released forthwith . Hussainara Khatoon v. State of Bithar, A.I.R. 1979, SC 1377: 1979 Cr. L.J. 1052 : (1980) 1 SCC 108 : (1979) 2 S.C. J. 536.

Invalid remand followed in valid orders:- In view of the earlier conflicting decisions of the Single Judge, as the single judge hearing the petition referred to the Division Bench the following two questions for decision.

i) Whether any illegality in the detention arising out of an invalid order of remand, can be cured by a subsequent valid order of remand:

ii) What is the date with reference to which the illegality of the detention should be considered in a bail application.

The Division Bench accordingly answered the two questions as below:

i) The accused will not be entitled to be released on bail even though at some anterior period his detention was illegal. In such a case if there is a last valid order of remand the application of grant of bail under Section 437(1) and 439 (1) of the Code. The question is not whether a later order of remand validates the earlier order of remand, but the question is whether in the face of a later valid order of remand ,the Court can direct the release of the accused. In other words, there is no question of curing an illegality in the earlier invalid order of remand.

ii) The date of illegality of the detention of the accused is the date when the bail application is finally disposed of Taju Khan v. State of Rajasthan . 1983 Cri. L.J. 1518 (Raj).

Mischievous and Malicious Arrest:- J & K.M.L.A. was arrested while enroute to seat of Assembly by the police, obtained remand but not produced him before Magistrate within requisite period. Held that his fundamental right was infringed and the arrest was malicious and mischievous. Therefore Rs. 50,000/- was awarded by way of compensation. Bhim Singh v. State of J & K, 1968 Cri. L.J. 192.

4. When the accused person is remanded either to police custody or to some safe custody for the purpose of further investigation by the police it must be borne in mind that. However incomplete an investigation may be an accused person in every case must be produced before a Magistrate having jurisdiction within a maximum period of 16 days (1 day allowed by the a Magistrate on proper cause shown).

Rights of suspects /accused person/prisoners in custody:- Law in India provides certain rights to above referred category of persons. The rights are fundamental. If they are violated, it is illegal. Though Indian constitution does not specifically provide any right against custodial torture there are various judgments of Supreme Court upholding various rights of suspects/accused/prisoners in custody. These rights are contained in Articles. 19, 20, 21, 22, 32 and 226 of the Constitution.

Beside these rights there are other legal rights provided under the Indian penal Code (S.330 & 331). The Bombay police Act. 1951 Ss. 66(b) & (c) Cr. P. Code (S. 57 r/w S. 167) for persons detained, arrested or imprisoned in the custody. Also police Manual and Jail Manual provide various facilities to the persons in police custody and jail custody.

Under Indian Law following are fundamental rights of the persons custody or imprisoned.

i) Right to Life :- The Supreme Court held that the procedure for deprivation of life and personal liberty could no longer be any procedure. It held that the procedure contemplated in Art. 21 must be "right just and fair" and not arbitrary, fanciful or oppressive". Otherwise it would be no procedure at all and the requirement of Art. 21 would not be satisfied Maneka Ghandhi v. Union of India A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 659.

In Kharak Singh v. State of U.P. A. I. R. 1978 S.C.659 the Supreme Court held that the term life in Art. 21 meant not merely the continuance of one's animal existence but right to the possession of each organ of the body. The every limb or faculty through which life is enjoyed is protected under Art. 21 and includes the faculties of thinking and feeling also.

The scope of expression life was further extended which means something much more than just physical survival. It means right to live with human dignity and all that goes with it viz. the basic necessities of the life such as adequate nutrition. Clothing shelter and facilities for reading writing and expressing oneself. Francis Corlie Mullin v. the Administrator Union Territory of Delhi, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 1973; BLF v. Union of India A.I.R. 1984 S. C. 802.

ii) Right against self incrimination: The suspect/accused has right to refuse to answer all the self-incriminatory questions. The presumption of innocence until proved guilty according to law is the right of the suspect/accused person. The Constitution of India. Art 20(3) confers this right to these categories of person (See also S. 24.26 and 27 of the Court. In Nandini Satpati v. P. I. Dani A.I.R. 1978 S.C. 1075.

iii) Right to be informed of ground for arrest See. Art. 22 (1) of the Constitution of India.

iv) Right to consult a legal practitioner: The Supreme Court held in Nandini Satpati case that an accused person under circumstances of near custodial interrogation has right to have his lawyer by his side. But the directive principle of State policy provided.

Completion of Part-Heard Cases by Magistrates under Orders of Transfer

1) Whenever an order of transfer or an advance intimation of the transfer is received by a Judge or Magistrate he should endeavour to dispose of all part-heard cases before handing over charge.

Vakalatnnama

2) (a) Vakalatnama shall be filed by all pleaders as defined in the Code of Criminal Procedure appearing on behalf of any part in all classes of cases including appeals and revisional or miscellaneous applications in all criminal Courts in the State of Maharashtra provided that no Vakalatnama shall be necessary in the cases of.

i) a public Prosecutor appearing on behalf of Government.

ii) a pleader appointed by the Court in any case to defend persons who are too poor to engage counsel for themselves;

iii) a pleader appearing as amicus curiae

iv) a pleader engaged to plead on behalf of any pleader who has been duly appointed to act as a pleader on behalf of such party.

b) When a pleader who has filed a Vakalatnama for a party wishes to withdraw his appearance, he shall serve a written notice of his intention to do so on his client at least seven days in advance of the case coming up for hearing before the Court. Leave of the Court to withdraw appearance may also be applied for if the client has instructed the pleader to that effect. The Pleader shall file a note in writing requesting the Court for permission to withdraw appearance and shall also file along with the Note the letter of the client instructing him to withdraw his appearance or a copy of the intimation given to the client as above together with his written acknowledgment by the client. The Court if it is satisfied that no inconvenience is likely to be caused to the Court or the client may permit the pleader to withdraw his appearance and while permitting the pleader to do so may also impose such terms and conditions as it may deem proper either in public interest or in the interest of the parties.

JUDGE FINE HIMSELF

Needless to mention here that conscientious Judges would blame themselves it something goes wrong in their Court due to their own act or omission to do an act in discharge of his or their duty. Please see page 429 of Contempt of court by V.G. Ramchandran (Edition 1983). A Judge Ralph Kohn of Adrian (Michigan , U.S.A.) (Vide ` Judge Fine Himself' Hindu 9-3-1974, Page 7) fined himself dollar 50. He came ten Minutes late for a case he was hearing. He expressed regret in open court and fined himself. The charge to which he pleaded guilty was contempt of court – his own court. Such Judge should adorn the Indian Courts.

The best thing for condemner Judge is to punish himself as he had offended the seat of justice by such behavior. This he should do by getting up from the Judges seat and address the seat , I am indeed sorry , I apologiese. This purges his contempt. For other criminal offence he may be proceeded.

3 CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 1410 OF 2011
4 CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 1267 OF 2007 AND CONTEMPT PETITION (C) NO. D26722 OF 2008 IN WRIT PETITION (CRIMINAL) NO. 68 OF 2008
==========

A) When complaint of commission of a cognizable offence given to Police registration of FIR is mandatory and no preliminary inquiry is permissible in such a situation .

In view of the aforesaid discussion, we hold:

i) Registration of FIR is mandatory under Section 154 of the Code, if the information discloses commission of a cognizable offence and no preliminary inquiry is permissible in such a situation.

ii) If the information received does not disclose a cognizable offence but indicates the necessity for an inquiry, a preliminary inquiry may be conducted only to ascertain whether cognizable offence is disclosed or not.

iii) If the inquiry discloses the commission of a cognizable offence, the FIR must be registered. In cases where preliminary inquiry ends in closing the complaint, a copy of the entry of such closure must be supplied to the first informant forthwith and not later than one week. It must disclose reasons in brief for closing the complaint and not proceeding further.

iv) The police officer cannot avoid his duty of registering offence if cognizable offence is disclosed. Action must be taken against erring officers who do not register the FIR if information received by him discloses a cognizable offence.

v) The scope of preliminary inquiry is not to verify the veracity or otherwise of the information received but only to ascertain whether the information reveals any cognizable offence.

vi) As to what type and in which cases preliminary inquiry is to be conducted will depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. The category of cases in which preliminary inquiry may be made are as under:

a) Matrimonial disputes/ family disputes

b) Commercial offences

c) Medical negligence cases

d) Corruption cases

e) Cases where there is abnormal delay/laches in initiating criminal prosecution, for example, over 3 months delay in reporting the matter without satisfactorily explaining the reasons for delay.

The aforesaid are only illustrations and not exhaustive of all conditions which may warrant preliminary inquiry.

vii) While ensuring and protecting the rights of the accused and the complainant, a preliminary inquiry should be made time bound and in any case it should not exceed 7 days. The fact of such delay and the causes of it must be reflected in the General Diary entry. viii) Since the General Diary/Station Diary/Daily Diary is the record of all information received in a police station, we direct that all information relating to cognizable offences, whether resulting in registration of FIR or leading to an inquiry, must be mandatorily and meticulously reflected in the said Diary and the decision to conduct a preliminary inquiry must also be reflected, as mentioned above. (Para 111)

B) The registration of FIR under Section 154 of the Code and arrest of an accused person under Section 41 are two entirely different things. It is not correct to say that just because FIR is registered, the accused person can be arrested immediatelyExcept in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave the Station without permission would do(Para 100)

It is also relevant to note that in Joginder Kumar vs. State of U.P. & Ors. (1994) 4 SCC 260, this Court has held that arrest cannot be made by police in a routine manner.

Some important observations are reproduced as under:-

"20…No arrest can be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness and bona fides of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest. Denying a person of his liberty is a serious matter. The recommendations of the Police Commission merely reflect the constitutional concomitants of the fundamental right to personal liberty and freedom. A person is not liable to arrest merely on the suspicion of complicity in an offence. There must be some reasonable justification in the opinion of the officer effecting the arrest that such arrest is necessary and justified. Except in heinous offences, an arrest must be avoided if a police officer issues notice to person to attend the Station House and not to leave the Station without permission would do." (Para 99)

A) Every person subjected to arrest is entitled to a copy of FIR free of cost at the time of arrest - No doubt, it is true that if a duty is cast on the arresting officer to comply with certain statutory formalities, there is a corresponding duty cast on the Magistrate who is called upon to pass remand orders to satisfy himself whether the statutory formalities have been strictly complied with or not. In case the Magistrate is not satisfied that the requirements of Sec.50 of the Code have not been complied with, he can limit the remand in the first instance to such period as would be necessary, thereby affording an opportunity to the police officer to communicate in writing the full particulars of the offence for which the accused is arrested or the other grounds of such arrest .

B) The Magistrates shall not grant remands to the police custody unless they are satisfied that there is good ground for doing so and shall not accept a general statement made by the investigating or other Police Officer to the effect that the accused may be liable to give further information, that a request for remand to police custody shall be accompanied by an affidavit by setting out briefly the prior history of the investigation and the likelihood of further clues which the police expect to derive by having the accused in custody, sworn by the investigating or other police officer, not below the rank of a Sub Inspector of Police and that the Magistrate after perusing the affidavit and satisfying himself about the request of the police officer, shall entrust the accused to police custody and at the end of the police custody, the Magistrate shall question the accused whether he had in any way been interfered with during the period of custody.

The cherished legal right vested in the accused under Art.22(1) of the Constitution and Sec.50(1) of the Code to obtain full particulars of the offence or the grounds for his arrest, is based on well settled principles of law, as enunciated in a number of judicial pronouncements which we have already referred to. In this connection, it would be useful to bear in mind Arts.3 and 29 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948 and Art.9(2) of the International Covenant of Civil and Political Rights, published by the United Nations (New York 1978) at page 24, reading: 'Any one who is arrested shall be informed at the time of arrest of the reasons for his arrest and shall be promptly informed of any charges against him.' Further, if the first information report is laid by the accused himself, he is entitled to get a copy of the information free of cost as per Sec.154(2) of the Code, since the expression 'informant' appearing in Sec.154(2) does not exclude the accused giving information about the crime. When it is so, we are unable to understand as to what would be the legal impediment to furnish a copy to the accused, who as per Sec.50(1) has to be informed of the full particulars, of the offence for which he is arrested or other grounds for such arrest.

Though in the heading of Sec.50 of the Code, the word 'informed' is used, in the body of the section, the expression 'communicate' is found. In legal parlance, there is a lot of difference between the expression 'inform' and 'communicate'. As Patanjali Sastri, J., pointed out in his separate judgment in Income-tax Commissioner v. Ahmedbhai Umarbhai and Company, A.I.R. 1950 S.C. 134, 'marginal notes in an Indian Statute, as in an Act of Parliament cannot be referred to for the purpose of construing the statute. Nor can the title of a Chapter be legitimately used to restrict the plain terms of an enactment.' See also Balraj Kunwar v. Jagatpal Singh, 26 All. 393: 31 I.A. 132 (P.C.). Hence, in the light of the above decisions, we have to approach Sec.50(1) only with reference to the specific word used in that section, and not with reference to the word used in the heading of the section. This section requires the arresting person to communicate to the arrestee the full particulars of the offence for which he is arrested or the other grounds for such arrest. Though, the section does not mean that any technical or precise language need be used, it demands that all the particulars of the offence for which the accused is arrested should be communicated to him. If it is to be construed that the communication could be oral also, then it would lead to a dispute, when the accused denies that full particulars of the grounds have not been communicated to him. Even if any communication of the offence is orally made to the accused, the Court may not be in a position to come to a definite conclusion as to what kind of communication was made, whether communication of the mere particulars of the offences was made or whether mere section of the offence was told to the arrestee. THEREfore, in order to avoid any controversy or dispute, it will always be desirable to give the particulars of the grounds in writing. We may point out at this juncture that the Supreme Court in Lallubhai Jagibhai v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1981 S.C. 728, while interpreting the word 'communicate', observed that if the 'grounds' are only verbally explained to the arrestee and nothing in writing is left with him, then the purpose of Sec.50 of the Code is not served and strictly complied with.

As repeatedly pointed out by the authoritative judicial pronouncements of the Supreme Court and the various High Courts, it is unconstitutional illegal, unjust and unfair not to let the arrestee know the accusation him or the full particulars of the offence or the grounds on the basis of which the arrest has been effected. To expect an arrestee to a blind and unquestioned obedience in ignorance of the particulars of the offence or the accusation made against him is only the law of the tyrants. After the advent of the Constitution of India, in our view, it should not be allowed to flourish or exist on our soil. Every person subjected to arrest is entitled to know why he is deprived of his freedom. It is only with this underlying principle, Sec.50 is now introduced in the Code.

We are of the firm view that it would be desirable that the particulars enumerated by us above be communicated to the arrestee in writing and free of cost, which would be in strict compliance of Art.22(1) of the Constitution of India and Sec.50 of the Code.

The accused is entitled to get a copy of the First Information Report Articles 21 and 22 provides that the liberty of a citizen cannot be interfered or curtailed lightly by the authorities. So it is to be determined, whether at the stage of initial investigation, the accused has a right of receiving information regarding the accusation or allegation made against - a person, who is in custody of the same, has the liability to give a copy thereof to the person who has interest in the same or whose interest is adversely affected by the same.

> Thus, we allow the writ application and direct that : (i) The accused is entitled to get a copy of the First Information Report at an earlier stage than as prescribed under Section 207 of the Cr.P.C. (ii) An accused who has reason to suspect that he has been roped in a criminal case and his name may be finding place in a First Information Report can submit an application through his representative/ agent for grant of a certified copy before the concerned police officer or to the Superintendent of Police on payment of such fee which is payable for 8 > obtaining such a copy from the court. On such application being made, the copy shall be supplied within twenty-four hours. (iii) Once the First Information Report is forwarded by the police station to the concerned Magistrate or any Special

Judge, on an application being filed for certified copy on behalf of the accused, the same shall be given by the court concerned within two working days. The aforesaid direction has nothing to do with the statutory mandate inhered under Section 207 of the Code.

(iv) The copies of the F.I.Rs., unless reasons recorded regard being had to the nature of the offence that the same is sensitive in nature, should be uploaded on the Odisha Police website or by the district police website, as the case may be, within twenty-four hours of lodging of the F.I.R. so that the accused or any person connected with the same can download the F.I.R and the appropriate application before the Court as per law for redressal of his grievances.

(v) The decision not to upload the copy of the F.I.R. on the website of Odisha police/District police office shall not be taken by an officer below the rank of Deputy Superintendent of Police or Assistant Commissioner of Police, as the case may be, and that too by way of a speaking order. A decision so taken by the DSP/ACP shall also be duly communicated to the Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(vi) The word 'sensitive' apart from the other aspects which may be thought of being sensitive by the competent authority as stated hereinbefore 9 would also include concept of privacy regard being had to the nature of the F.I.R.

(vii) In case a copy of the F.I.R. is not provided on the ground of sensitive nature of the case, the person aggrieved by the said action, after disclosing his identity, can submit a representation with the Commissioner of Police/Superintendent of Police of the District, who shall constitute a committee of three high officers and the committee shall deal with the said grievance within three days from the date of receipt of the representation and communicate it to the aggrieved person.

(viii) The Superintendent of Police shall constitute the committee within eight weeks from today.

(ix) In cases wherein decisions have been taken not to give copies of the F.I.Rs. regard being had to the sensitive nature of the case, it will be open to the accused/his authorized representative to file an application for grant of certified copy before the court to which the F.I.R. has been sent and the same shall be provided in quite promptitude by the concerned court not beyond three days of the submission of the application.

(x) The directions for uploading the F.I.R. on the website of Odisha Police shall be given effect from 3Ist January, 2013.

S.K.Mishra, J. - In this writ petition, the petitioner has prayed for issuance of a writ of mandamus to the State of Odisha to make provision for supply of copy of F.I.R. registered by the police to the accused persons and/or their relatives and to direct 2

the Odisha Police to upload the F.I.Rs. in their website within a reasonable time after registration.

2. The petitioner is an Advocate and has filed this writ petition in the nature of a public interest litigation to solve the difficulties faced by the accused persons, who were named in the F.I.R. registered against them in receiving copy of the F.I.R. for seeking appropriate relief for protecting their right to life and personal liberty. It is brought to the notice of the Court that most of the times the accused named in the F.I.R. is not aware of lodging an F.I.R. or contents thereof and, therefore, without an authenticated copy of the same, he faces handicap in moving appropriate applications before the Courts for protecting his liberty.

3. The State has filed a counter affidavit and in the said counter affidavit, the State has sought to bring to the notice of the Court that there is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code or in the G.R. & C.O. (Crl.) to provide copies of the F.I.R. to the accused by the Police Officers.

4. In order to appreciate the contentions raised by the learned counsel for the petitioner, it is appropriate to take note of various provisions those are applicable. Section 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, hereinafter referred as the 'Code' for brevity, provides for information in cognizable cases. Section 154 of the Code is quoted below:

"154. Information in cognizable cases :- (1) Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant; and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid, shall be signed by the person giving it, and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such 3 officer in such form as the State Government may prescribe in this behalf.

(2) A copy of the information as recorded under sub-section (1) shall be given forthwith, free of cost, to the informant. (3) Any person aggrieved by a refusal on the part of the officer in charge of a police station to record the information referred to in sub-section (1) may send the substance of such information, in writing and by post, to the Superintendent of Police concerned who, if satisfied that such information discloses the commission of a cognizable offence, shall either investigate the case himself or direct an investigation to be made by any police officer subordinate to him, in the manner provided by this Code, and such officer shall have all the powers of an officer in charge of the police station in relation to that offence."

5. Section 154 of the Code provides for information as to the cognizable cases and investigation of such cases, whereas Section 156 of the Code provides for police officer's power to investigate cognizable cases. After investigation, final report is submitted by the police to the Magistrate having territorial jurisdiction.

6. After completion of investigation and submission of charge-sheet, before trial, the accused is entitled to copies of the police report as provided in Section 207 of the Code. The said Section reads as follows: "207. Supply to the accused of copy of police report and other documents.- In any case where the proceeding has been instituted on a police report, the Magistrate shall without delay furnish to the accused, free of cost, a copy of each of the following:-

(i) the police report;

(ii) the first information report recorded under section 154; (iii) the statements recorded under sub-section (3) of section 161 of all the persons whom the prosecution proposes to examine as its witnesses, excluding therefrom any part in regard to which a request for such exclusion has been 4 made by the police officer under sub-section (6) of section 173;

(iv) the confessions and statements, if any, recorded under section 164;

(v) any other document or relevant extract thereof forwarded to the Magistrate with the police report under sub-section (5) of section 173;

Provided that the Magistrate may, after perusing any such part of a statement as is referred to in clause (iii) and considering the reasons given by the police officer for the request, direct that a copy of that part of the statement or of such portion thereof as the Magistrate thinks proper, shall be furnished to the accused: Provided further that if the Magistrate is satisfied that any document referred to in clause (v) is voluminous, he shall, instead of furnishing the accused with a copy thereof, direct that he will only be allowed to inspect it either personally or through pleader in Court."

7. Section 207 of the Code therefore mandates that after completion of investigation and submission of final form before the learned Magistrate, it is the duty of the learned Magistrate to furnish the accused a free copy of the documents, which includes police report, F.I.R., statements recorded under Sections 161 and 164 of the Code etc. However, this provision comes into play only after the investigation is over and after submission of the final form. Prior to that, there is no provision under the Code for an accused to be supplied with a copy of the F.I.R. It is argued at length that in absence of the copy of the F.I.R., the very right of the accused to get himself defended cannot be fulfilled as he is not in a position to know the nature of the allegation, so that he will approach the appropriate forum for obtaining necessary relief for protecting his right and liberty. 5

8. Article 21 of the Constitution of India clearly provides for protection of life and personal liberty, which is quoted below:

"21. Protection of life and personal liberty.- No person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law."

Thus, it is luculent that Article 21 of the Constitution of India provides for protection of citizens' life and personal liberty and it can be only curtailed by due procedure established by law. Thus, if a person is accused of committing a crime and there is chance of being apprehended by the police, he has a right to have an information about the allegations against him even at the initial stage of investigation. The Constitution of India provides in Article 22 regarding protection against arrest and detention in certain cases, which is quoted below: "22. Protection against arrest and detention in certain cases.- (1) No person who is arrested shall be detained in custody without being informed, as soon as may be, of the grounds for such arrest nor shall he be denied the right to consult, and to be defended by, a legal practitioner of his choice. (2) Every person who is arrested and detained in custody shall be produced before the nearest magistrate within a period of twenty four hours of such arrest excluding the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Court of the magistrate and no such person shall be detained in custody beyond the said period without the authority of a magistrate.

(3) Nothing in clauses (1) and (2) shall apply-

(a) to any person who for the time being is an enemy alien; or

(b) to any person who is arrested or detained under any law providing for preventive detention.

4. No law providing for preventive detention shall authorize the detention of a person for a longer period than three months unless-

(a) an Advisory Board consisting of persons who are, or have been, or are qualified to be appointed as, Judges of a High Court has reported before the expiration of the said period of three months that there is in its opinion sufficient cause for such detention:

Provided that nothing in this sub-clause shall authorize the detention of any person beyond the maximum period prescribed by any law made by Parliament under sub-clause (b) of Clause (7); or

(b) such person is detained in accordance with the provisions of any law made by Parliament under sub-clauses (a) and (b) of clause (7).

5. When any person is detained in pursuance of an order made under any law providing for preventive detention, the authority making the order shall, as soon as may be, communicate to such person the grounds on which the order has been made and shall afford him the earliest opportunity of making a representation against the order.

6. Nothing in clause (5) shall require the authority making any such order as is referred to in that clause to disclose facts which such authority considers to be against the public interest to disclose.

7. Parliament may by law prescribe-

(a) the circumstances under which, and the class or classes of cases in which, a person may be detained for a period longer than three months under any law providing for preventive detention without obtaining the opinion of an Advisory Board in accordance with the provisions of sub-clause (a) of clause (4); (b) the maximum period for which any person may in any class or classes of cases be detained under any law providing for preventive detention; and Lucknow Development Authority, Appellant v. M. K. Gupta, Respondent.

==========

Misconduct by Public Officer - Damages to be recovered from erring official -Misfeasance in public offices - Liability to pay damages - Can be fastened on erring official- Relief that can be granted - Not limited to award of value of goods or service - Compensation for harassment, mental agony or oppression suffered by consumer can also be awarded - Commission should direct recovery of the same from persons responsible for that.- When the Court directs payment of damages or compensation against the State the ultimate sufferer is the common man. It is the tax payers' money which is paid for inaction of those who are entrusted under the Act to discharge their duties in accordance with law. It is, therefore, necessary that the Commission when it is satisfied that a complainant is entitled to compensation for harassment or mental agony or oppression, which finding of course should be recorded carefully on material and convincing circumstances and not lightly, then it should further direct the department concerned to pay the amount to the complainant from the public fund immediately but to recover the same from those who are found responsible for such unpardonable behaviour by dividing it proportionately where there are more than one functionaries. -

(Paras 8, 11)

In Lala Bishambar Nath v. Agra Nagar Mahapalika, Agra, AIR 1973 SC 1289. It was held that where the authorities could not have taken any action against the dealer and their order was invalid, 'it is immaterial that the respondents had acted bona fide and in the interest of preservation of public health. Their motive may be good but their orders are illegal. They would accordingly be liable for any loss caused to the appellants by their action.' The theoretical concept that King can do no wrong has been abandoned in England itself and the State is now held responsible for tortuous act of its servants. The first Law Commission constituted after coming into force of the Constitution on liability of the State in Tort, observed that the old distinction between sovereign and non-sovereign functions should no longer be invoked to determine liability of the State. Friedmann observed,

"It is now increasingly necessary to abandon the lingering fiction of a legally indivisible State, and of a feudal conception of the Crown, and to substitute for it the principle of legal liability where the State, either directly or through incorporated public authorities, engages in activities of a commercial, industrial or managerial character. The proper test is not an impracticable distinction between governmental and non-governmental function, but the nature and form of the activity in question."

Even M/s. Kasturi Lal Ralia Ram Jam v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1965 SC 1039 did not provide any immunity for tortuous acts of public servants committed in discharge of statutory function if it was not referable to sovereign power. Since house construction or for that matter any service hired by a consumer or facility availed by him is not a sovereign function of the State the ratio of Kasturi Lal (supra) could not stand in way of the Commission awarding compensation. We respectfully agree with Mathew, J., in Shyam Sunder v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 1 SCC 690 : (AIR 1974 SC 890) that it is not necessary, 'to consider whether there is any rational dividing line between the so-called sovereign and proprietary and commercial functions for determining the liability of the State'. In any case the law has always maintained that the public authorities who are entrusted with statutory function cannot act negligently.

Under our Constitution sovereignty vests in the people. Every limb of the constitutional machinery is obliged to be people oriented. No functionary in exercise of statutory power can claim immunity, except to the extent protected by the Statute itself. Public authorities acting in violation of constitutional or statutory provisions oppressively are accountable for their behaviour before authorities created under the Statute like the Commission or the Courts entrusted with responsibility of maintaining the rule of law. Each hierarchy in the Act is empowered to entertain a complaint by the consumer for value of the goods or services and compensation. The word 'compensation' is again of very wide connotation. It has not been defined in the Act. According to dictionary it means, 'compensating' or being compensated; thing given as recompense;'. In legal sense it may constitute actual loss or expected loss and 'may extend to physical, mental or even emotional suffering, insult or injury or loss. Therefore, when the Commission has been vested with the jurisdiction to award value of goods or services and compensation it has to be construed widely enabling the Commission to determine compensation for any loss or damage suffered by a consumer which in law is otherwise included in wide meaning of compensation. The provision in our opinion enables a consumer to claim and empowers the Commission to redress any injustice done to him. Any other construction would defeat the very purpose of the Act. The Commission or the forum in the Act is thus entitled to award not only value of the goods or services but also to compensate a consumer for injustice suffered by him.

* From judgment and order of National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission, New Delhi, in First Appeal No. 25 of 1990, D/- 25-7-1990.

JUDGEMENT

R. M. SAHAI, J.:- The question of law that arises for consideration in these appeals, directed against orders passed by the National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission (referred hereinafter as National Commission), New Delhi is if the statutory authorities such as Lucknow Development Authority or Delhi Development Authority or Bangalore Development Authority constituted under State Acts to carry on planned development of the cities in the State are amenable to Consumer Protection Act 1986 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') for any act or omission relating to housing activity such as delay in delivery of possession of the houses to the allottees, non-completion of the flat within the stipulated time, or defective and faulty construction etc. Another aspect of this issue is if the housing activity' carried on by the statutory authority or private builder or contractor came within the purview of the Act only after its amendment by the Ordinance No. 24 in 1993 or the Commission could entertain a complaint for such violations even before.

2. How the dispute arose in different appeals is not of any consequence except for two appeals which shall be adverted later, for determining right and power of the Commission to award exemplary damages and accountability of the statutory authorities. We therefore come straightway to the legal issue involved in these appeals. But before doing so and examining the question of jurisdiction of the District Forum or State or National Commission to entertain a complaint under the Act, it appears appropriate to ascertain the purpose of the Act, the objective it seeks to achieve and the nature of social purpose it seeks to promote as it shall facilitate in comprehending the issue involved and assist in construing various provisions of the Act effectively. To begin, with the preamble of the Act, which can afford useful assistance to ascertain the legislative intention, it was enacted. 'to provide for the protection of the interest of consumers'. Use of the word 'protection' furnishes key to the minds of makers of the Act. Various definitions and provisions which elaborately attempt to achieve this objective have to be construed in this light without departing from the settled view that a preamble cannot control otherwise plain meaning of a provision. In fact the law meets long felt necessity of protecting the common man from such wrongs for which the remedy under ordinary law for various reasons has become illusory. Various legislations and regulations permitting the State to intervene and protect interest of the consumers have become a haven for unscrupulous ones as the enforcement machinery either does not move or it moves ineffectively, inefficiently and for reasons which are not necessary to be stated. The importance of the Act lies in promoting welfare of the society by enabling the consumer to participate directly in the market economy. It attempts to remove the helplessness of a consumer which he faces against powerful business, described as, 'a network of rackets' or a society in which, 'producers have secured power' to 'rob the rest' and the might of public bodies which are degenerating into store house of inaction where papers do not move from one desk to another as a matter of duty and responsibility but for extraneous consideration leaving the common man helpless, bewildered and shocked. The malady is becoming so rampant, widespread and deep that the society instead of bothering, complaining and fighting for it, is accepting it as part of life. The enactment in these unbelievable yet harsh realities appears to be a silver lining, which may in course of time succeed in checking the rot. A scrutiny of various definitions such as 'consumer', 'service', 'trader', 'unfair trade practice' indicates that legislature has attempted to widen the reach of the Act. Each of these definitions are in two parts, one, explanatory and the other expandatory. The explanatory or the main part itself uses expressions of wide amplitude indicating clearly its wide sweep then its ambit is widened to such things which otherwise would have been beyond its natural import. Manner of construing an inclusive clause and its widening effect has been explained in Dilworth v. Commissioner of Stamps, 1899 AC 99 as under :

" 'include' is very generally used (in) interpretation clauses in order to enlarge the meaning of the words or phrases occurring in the body of the statute, and when it is so used these words or phrases must be construed as comprehending, not only such things as they signify according to their natural, import, but also those things which the definition clause declares that they shall include".

It has been approved by this Court in Regional Director, Employees' State Insurance Corporation v. Highland Coffee Works of P. F. X. Saldanha and Sons, (1991) 3 SCC 617: (1991 AIR SCW 2821); C. I. T., Andhra Pradesh v. M/s. Taj Mahal Hotel, Secunderabad (1971) 3 SCC 550 : (AIR 1972 SC 168) and State of Bombay v. Hospital Mazdoor Sabha, AIR 1960 SC 610. The provisions of the Act thus have to be construed in favour of the consumer to achieve the purpose of enactment as it is a social benefit oriented legislation. The primary duty of the Court while construing the provisions of such an Act is to adopt a constructive approach subject to that it should not do violence to the language of the provisions and is not contrary to attempted objective of the enactment.

3. Although the legislation is a milestone in history of socio-economic legislation and is directed towards achieving public benefit we shall first examine if on a plain reading of the provisions unaided by any external aid of interpretation it applies to building or construction activity carried on by the statutory authority or private builder or contractor and extends even to such bodies whose ancillary function is to allot a plot or construct a flat. In other words could the authorities constituted under the Act entertain a complaint by a consumer for any defect or deficiency in relation to construction activity against a private builder or statutory authority. That shall depend on ascertaining the jurisdiction of the Commission. How extensive it is? A National or a State Commission under Ss. 21 and 16 and a consumer forum under S. 11 of the Act is entitled to entertain a complaint depending on valuation of goods or services and compensation claimed. The nature of, 'complaint' which can be filed, according to clause (c) of S. 2 of the Act is for unfair trade practice or restrictive trade practice adopted by any trader or for the defects suffered for the goods bought or agreed to be bought and for deficiency in the service hired or availed of or agreed to be hired or availed of, by a 'complainant' who under clause (b) of the definition clause means a consumer or any voluntary consumer association registered under the Companies Act 1956 or under any law for the time being in force or the Central Government or any State Government or where there are one or more consumers having the same interest then a complaint by such consumers. The right thus to approach the Commission or the forum vests in consumer for unfair trade practice or defect in supply of goods or deficiency in service. The word 'consumer' is a comprehensive expression. It extends from a person who buys any commodity to consume either as eatable or otherwise from a shop, business house, corporation, store, fair price shop to use of private or public services. In Oxford Dictionary a consumer is defined as a, 'purchaser of goods or services'. In Black's Law Dictionary it is explained to mean, one who consumes. Individuals who purchase, use, maintain, and dispose of products and services. A member of that broad class of people who are affected by pricing policies, financing practices, quality of goods and services, credit reporting, debt collection, and other trade practices for which State and federal consumer protection laws are enacted.' The Act opts for no less wider definition. It reads as under :

" "Consumer" means any person who,-

(i) buys any goods for a consideration which has been paid or promised or partly paid and partly promised, or under any system of deferred payment and includes any user of such goods other than the person who (buy) such goods for consideration paid or promised or party paid or partly promised or under any system of deferred payment when such use is made with the approval of such person but does not include a person who obtains such goods for resale or for any commercial purpose; or

(ii) hires or avails of any services for a consideration which has been paid or promised or partly paid and partly promised, or under any system of deferred payment and includes any beneficiary of such services other than the person who hires or avails of the service for consideration paid or promised, or partly paid and partly promised, or under any system of deferred payment, when such services are availed of with the approval of the first mentioned person:

[Explanation - For the purposes of sub-clause (i) "commercial purpose" does not include use by a consumer of goods bought and used by him exclusively for the purpose of earning his livelihood, by means of self-employment;]"

It is in two parts. The first deals with goods and the other with services. Both parts first declare the meaning of goods and services by use of wide expressions. Their ambit is further enlarged by use of inclusive clause. For instance, it is not only purchaser of goods or hirer of services but even those who use the goods or who are beneficiaries of services with approval of the person who purchased the goods or who hired services are included in it. The legislature has taken precaution not only to define 'complaint', 'complainant', 'consumer' but even to mention in detail what would amount to unfair trade practice by giving an elaborate definition in clause (r) and even to define 'defect' and 'deficiency' by clauses (f) and (g) for which a consumer can approach the Commission. The Act thus aims to protect the economic interest of a consumer as understood in commercial sense as a purchaser of goods and in the larger sense of user of services. The common characteristics of goods and services are that they are supplied at a price to cover the costs and generate profit or income for the seller of goods or provider of services. But the defect in one and deficiency in other may have to be removed and compensated differently. The former is, normally, capable of being replaced and repaired whereas the other may be required to be compensated by award of the just equivalent of the value or damages for loss. 'Goods' have been defined by Clause (i) and have been assigned the same meaning as in Sale of Goods Act, 1930 which reads as under :

'" "goods" means every kind of movable property other than actionable claims and money; and includes stock and shares, growing crops, grass, and things attached to or forming part of the land which are agreed to be severed before sale or under the contract of sale".

It was therefore urged that the applicability of the Act having been confined to moveable goods only a complaint filed for any defect in relation to immovable goods such as a house or building or allotment of site could not have been entertained by the Commission. The submission does not appear to be well founded. The respondents were aggrieved either by delay in delivery of possession of house or use of sub-standard material etc. and therefore they claimed deficiency in service rendered by the appellants. Whether they were justified in their complaint and if such act or omission could be held to be denial of service in the Act shall be examined presently, but the jurisdiction of the Commission could not be ousted because even though it was service it related to immoveable property.

4. What is the meaning of the word 'service'? Does it extend to deficiency in the building of a house or fiat? Can a complaint be filed under the Act against the statutory authority or a builder or contractor for any deficiency in respect of such property. The answer to all this shall depend on understanding of the word 'service'. The term has variety of meanings. It may mean any benefit or any act resulting in promoting interest or happiness. It may be contractual, professional, public, domestic, legal, statutory etc. The concept of service thus is very wide. How it should be understood and what it means depends in the context in which it has been used in an enactment. Clause (o) of the definition section defines it as under:

" "Service" means service of any description which is made available to potential users and includes the provision of facilities in connection with banking, financing, insurance, transport, processing, supply of electrical or other energy, board or loading or both (housing construction) entertainment, amusement or the purveying of news or other information, but does not include the rendering of any service free of charge or under a contract of personal service".

It is in three parts. The main part is followed by inclusive clause and ends by exclusionary clause. The main clause itself is very wide. It applies to any service made available to potential users. The words 'any' and 'potential' are significant. Both are of wide amplitude. The word 'any' dictionarily means 'one or same or all'. In Black's Law Dictionary it is explained thus, 'word "any" has a diversity of meaning and may be employed to indicate 'all" or "every" as well as "same" or "one" and its meaning in a given statute depends upon the context and subject matter of the statute'. The use of the word 'any' in the context it has been used in clause (o) indicates that it has 'been used in wider sense extending from one to all. The other word 'potential' is again very wide. In oxford Dictionary it is defined as 'capable of coming into being, possibility'. In Black's Law Dictionary it is defined as extending in possibility but not in act'. Naturally and probably expected to come 'into existence at some future time, though not now existing; for example, the future product of grain or trees already planted, or the successive future instalments or payments on a contract or engagement, already made.' In other words service which is not only extended to actual users but those who are capable of using it are covered in the definition. The clause is thus very wide and extends to any or all actual or potential users. But the legislature did not stop there. It expanded the meaning of the word further in modern sense by extending it to even such facilities as are available to a consumer in connection with banking, financing etc. Each of these are wide ranging activities in day to day life. They are discharged both by statutory and private bodies. In absence of any indication, express or implied there is no reason to hold that authorities created by the statute are beyond purview of the Act. When banks advance loan or accept deposit or provide facility of locker they undoubtedly render service. A State Bank or nationalised bank renders as much service as private bank. No distinction can be drawn in private and public transport or insurance companies. Even the supply of electricity or gas which throughout the country is being made, mainly, by statutory authorities is included in it. The legislative intention is thus clear to protect a consumer against services rendered even by statutory bodies. The test, therefore, is not if a person against whom complaint is made is a statutory body but whether the nature of the duty and function performed by it is service or even facility.

5. This takes us to the larger issue if the public authorities under different enactments are amenable to jurisdiction under the Act. It was vehemently argued that the local authorities or government bodies develop land and construct houses in discharge of their statutory function, therefore, they could not be subjected to provisions of the Act. The learned counsel urged that if the ambit of the Act would be widened to include even such authorities it would vitally affect functioning of official bodies. The learned counsel submitted that the entire objective of the Act is to protect a consumer against malpractices in business. The argument proceeded on complete misapprehension of the purpose of Act and even its explicit language. In fact the Act requires provider of service to be more objective and caretaking. It is still more in public services. When private undertakings are taken over by the government or corporations are created to discharge what is otherwise State's function, one of the inherent objectives of such social welfare measures is to .provide better, efficient and cheaper services to the people. Any attempt, therefore, to exclude services offered by statutory or official bodies to the common man would be against the provisions of the Act and spirit behind it. It is indeed unfortunate that since enforcement of the Act there is a demand and even politcal pressure is built up to exclude one or the other class from operation of the Act. How ironical it is that official or semi-official bodies which insist on numerous benefits, which are otherwise available in private sector, succeed in bargaining for it on threat of strike mainly because of larger income accruing due to rise in number of consumers and not due to better and efficient functioning claim exclusion when it comes to accountability from operation of the Act. The spirit of consumerism is so feeble and dormant that no association, public or private spirited, raises any finger on regular hike in prices not because it is necessary but either because it has not been done for sometime or because the operational cost has gone up irrespective of the efficiency without any regard to its impact on the common man. In our opinion, the entire argument found on being statutory bodies does not appear to have any substance. A government or semi-government body or a local authority is as much amenable to the Act as any other private body rendering similar service. Truly speaking it would be a service to the society if such bodies instead of claiming exclusion subject themselves to the Act and let their acts and omissions scrutinised as public accountability is necessary for healthy growth of society.

6. What remains to be examined is if housing construction or building activity carried on by a private or statutory body was service within meaning of clause (o) of S. 2 of 'the Act as it stood prior to inclusion of the expression housing construction in the definition of "service" by Ordinance No. 24 of 1993. As pointed out earlier the entire purpose of widening the definition is to include in it not only day to day buying and selling activity undertaken by a common mar but even to such activities which are otherwise not commercial in nature be in which some benefit is conferred on the consumer Construction of a house or flat is for the benefit of person for whom it is constructed. He may do it himself or hire services of a builder or contractor. The latter being for consideration is service as defined n the Act. Similarly when a statutoty authority develops land or allots a site or constructs a house for the benefit of common man it is as much service as by a builder or contractor. The one is contractual service and their statutory service. If the service is defective or it is not what was represented then it would be unfair trade practice as defined in the Act. Any defect in construction activity would be denial of comfort and service to a consumer. When possession of property is not delivered within stipulated period the delay so caused is denial of service. Such disputes or claims are not in respect of immoveable property as argued but deficiency in rendering of service of particular standard. quality or grade. Such deficiencies or omissions are defined in sub-clause (ii) of' Clause (r) of S. 2 as unfair trade practice. If a builder of a house uses sub-standard material in construction of a building or makes false or misleading representation about the condition of the house then it is denial of the facility or benefit of which a consumer is entitled to claim value under the Act. When the contractor or builder undertakes to erect a house or fiat then it is inherent in it that he shall perform his obligation as agreed to. A flat with a leaking roof, or cracking wall or substandard floor is denial of service. Similarly when a statutory authority undertakes to develop land and frame housing scheme, it, while performing statutory duty renders service to the society in particular. The entire approach of the learned counsel for the development authority in emphasising that power exercised under a Statute could not be stretched to mean service proceeded on misconception. it is incorrect understanding of the statutory functions under a social legislation. A development authority while developing the land or framing a scheme or housing discharges statutory duty the purpose and objective of which is service to the citizens. As pointed out earlier the entire purpose of widening the definitions is to include in it not only day to day buying of goods by a common man but even to such activities which are otherwise not commercial but professional or service oriented in nature. The provisions inthe Acts, namely, Lucknow Development Act, Delhi Development Act or Bangalore Development Act clearly provide for preparing plan, development of land, and framing of scheme etc. Therefore if such authority undertakes to construct building or allot houses or building sites to citizens of the State either as amenity or as benefit then it amounts to rendering of service and will be covered in the expression service made available to potential users'. A person who applies for allotment of a building site or for a flat constructed by the development authority or enters into an agreement with a builder or a contractor is a potential user and nature of transaction is covered in the expression 'service of any description'. It further indicates that the definition is not exhaustive. The inclusive clause succeeded in widening its scope but not exhausting the services which could be covered in earlier part. So any service except when it is free of charge or under a constraint of personal service is included in it. Since housing activity is a service it was covered in the clause as it stood before 1993.

7. In Appeal No. 2954 filed by a builder it was urged that the inclusion of 'housing construction, in clause(o) and 'avail, in clause (d) in 1993 would indicate that the Act as it stood prior to the amendment do not apply to hiring of services in reamendment retrospective it should be held to be prospective as it is settled that any law including amendments which materially affect the vested rights or duties or obligations in respect of past transactions should remain untouched. Reliance was placed on Jose Da Costa v. Bascora Sadasiva Sinai Narcornim (1976) 2 SCC 917: (AIR 1975 SC 1843), State of Madhya Pradesh v. Rameshwar Rathod, AIR 1990 SC 1849 and Re Pulborough School Board Election Case (1891-94) All ER Rep 831 (834). It was also argued that when definition of 'service' in Monopolies and Restrictive Trade Practices Act was amended in 1991 it was made retrospective. Therefore, in absence of use of similar expression in this Act it should be deemed to be prospective. True, the ordinance does not make the definition retrospective in operation. But it was not necessary. In fact it appears to have been added by way of abundant caution as housing construction being service was included even earlier. Apart from that what was the vested right of the contractor under the agreement to construct the defective house or to render deficient service? A legislation which is enacted to protect public interest from undesirable activities cannot be construed in such narrow manner as to frustrate its objective. Nor is there any merit in the submission that in absence of the word 'avail of in the definition 'consumer' such activity could not be included in service. A perusal of the definition of 'service' as it stood prior to 1993 would indicate that the word 'facility' was already there. Therefore, the legislature while amending the law in 1993 added the word in clause (d) to dispel any doubt that consumer in the Act would mean a person who not only vires but avails of any facility for consideration. It in fact indicates that these words were added more to clarify than to add something new.

8. Having examined wide reach of the Act and jurisdiction of the Commission to entertain complaint riot only against business or trading activity but even to service rendered by statutory and public authorities the stage is now set for determining if the Commission in exercise of its jurisdiction under the Act could award compensation and if such compensation could be for harassment and agony to a consumer. Both these aspects specially the latter are of vital significance in the present day context. Still more important issue is the liability of payment. That is should the society or the tax payer be burdened for oppressive and capricious act of the public officers or it be paid by those responsible for it. The administrative law of accountability of public authorities for their arbitrary and even ultra vires actions has taken many strides. It is now accepted both by this Court and English Courts that the State is liable to compensate for loss or injury suffered by a citizen due to arbitrary actions of its employees. In State of Gujarat v. Memon Mahomed Haji Hasam, A.I.R 1967 SC 1885, the order of the High Court directing payment of compensation for disposal of seized vehicles without waiting for the outcome of decision in appeal was upheld both on principle of bailee's, 'legal obligation to preserve the property intact and also the obligation to take reasonable care of it to return it in same condition in which it was seized' and also because the Government was, 'bound to return the said property by reason of its statutory obligation or to pay its value if it had disabled itself from returning it either by its own act or by act of its agents and servants'. It was extended further even to bona fide action of the authorities if it was contrary to law in Lala Bishambar Nath v. Agra Nagar Mahapalika, Agra, AIR 1973 SC 1289. It was held that where the authorities could not have taken any action against the dealer and their order was invalid, 'it is immaterial that the respondents had acted bona fide and in the interest of preservation of public health. Their motive may be good but their orders are illegal. They would accordingly be liable for any loss caused to the appellants by their action.' The theoretical concept that King can do no wrong has been abandoned in England itself and the State is now held responsible for tortuous act of its servants. The first Law Commission constituted after coming into force of the Constitution on liability of the State in Tort, observed that the old distinction between sovereign and non-sovereign functions should no longer be invoked to determine liability of the State. Friedmann observed,

"It is now increasingly necessary to abandon the lingering fiction of a legally indivisible State, and of a feudal conception of the Crown, and to substitute for it the principle of legal liability where the State, either directly or through incorporated public authorities, engages in activities of a commercial, industrial or managerial character. The proper test is not an impracticable distinction between governmental and non-governmental function, but the nature and form of the activity in question."

Even M/s. Kasturi Lal Ralia Ram Jam v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1965 SC 1039 did not provide any immunity for tortuous acts of public servants committed in discharge of statutory function if it was not referable to sovereign power. Since house construction or for that matter any service hired by a consumer or facility availed by him is not a sovereign function of the State the ratio of Kasturi Lal (supra) could not stand in way of the Commission awarding compensation. We respectfully agree with Mathew, J., in Shyam Sunder v. State of Rajasthan, (1974) 1 SCC 690 : (AIR 1974 SC 890) that it is not necessary, 'to consider whether there is any rational dividing line between the so-called sovereign and proprietary and commercial functions for determining the liability of the State'. In any case the law has always maintained that the public authorities who are entrusted with statutory function cannot act negligently. As far back as 1878 the law was succinctly explained in Geddis v. Proprietors of Bann Reservoir. (1878)3 App Gas 430 thus,

"I take it, without citing cases, that it is now thoroughly well established that no action will lie for doing that which the Legislature has authorised, if it be done without negligence, although it does occasion damage to anyone; but an action does lie for doing what the Legislature has authorised, if it be done negligently."

Under our Constitution sovereignty vests in the people. Every limb of the constitutional machinery is obliged to be people oriented. No functionary in exercise of statutory power can claim immunity, except to the extent protected by the Statute itself. Public authorities acting in violation of constitutional or statutory provisions oppressively are accountable for their behaviour before authorities created under the Statute like the Commission or the Courts entrusted with responsibility of maintaining the rule of law. Each hierarchy in the Act is empowered to entertain a complaint by the consumer for value of the goods or services and compensation. The word 'compensation' is again of very wide connotation. It has not been defined in the Act. According to dictionary it means, 'compensating' or being compensated; thing given as recompense;'. In legal sense it may constitute actual loss or expected loss and 'may extend to physical, mental or even emotional suffering, insult or injury or loss. Therefore, when the Commission has been vested with the jurisdiction to award value of goods or services and compensation it has to be construed widely enabling the Commission to determine compensation for any loss or damage suffered by a consumer which in law is otherwise included in wide meaning of compensation. The provision in our opinion enables a consumer to claim and empowers the Commission to redress any injustice done to him. Any other construction would defeat the very purpose of the Act. The Commission or the forum in the Act is thus entitled to award not only value of the goods or services but also to compensate a consumer for injustice suffered by him.

9. Facts in Civil Appeal No. 6237 of 1990 may now he adverted as it is the only appeal in which the National Commission while exercising its appellate power under the Act not only affirmed the finding of State Commission directing the appellant to pay the value of deficiency in service but even directed to pay compensation for harassment and agony to the respondent. The Lucknow Development Authority with a view to ease the acute housing problem in the city of Lucknow undertook development of land and formed plots of different categories / sizes and constructed dwelling units for people belonging to different income groups. After the construction was complete the authority invited applications from persons desirous of purchasing plots or dwelling house. The respondent applied on the prescribed form for registration for allotment of a flat in the category of Middle Income Group (M. I.G.) in Gomti Nagar Scheme in Lucknow on cash down basis. Since the number of applicants was more, the authority decided to draw lots in which flat No. II / 75 in Vinay Khand-II was allotted to the respondent on 26th April, 1988. He deposited a sum of Rs. 6132/- on July 2, 1988 and a sum of Rs. 1,09,975/- on July 29, 1988. Since the entire payment was made in July, 1988 the fiat was registered on 18th August, 1988. Thereafter the appellant by a letter dated 23rd August, 1988 directed Executive Engineer-VII to hand over the possession of the flat to the respondent. This information was given to him on 30th November, 1988, yet the flat was not delivered as the construction work was not complete. The respondent approached the authority but no steps were taken nor possession was handed over. Consequently he filed a complaint before the District Forum that even after payment of entire amount in respect of cash down scheme the appellant was not handing over possession nor they were completing the formalities and the work was still incomplete. The State Commission by its order dated 15th February, 1990 directed the appellant to pay l2% annual simple interest upon the deposit made by the respondent for he period 1-1-89 to 15-2-90. The appellant was further directed to hand over possession of the flat without delay after completing construction work up to June. 1990. The Commission further directed that if it was not possible for the appellant to complete the construction then it should hand over possession of the flat to the respondent by 5th April, 1990 after determining the deficiencies and the estimated cost of such deficient construction shall be refunded to the respondent latest 20th April, 1990. The appellant instead of complying with the order approached the National Commission and raised the question of jurisdiction. It was overruled. And the appeal was dismissed. But the cross appeal of the respondent was allowed and it was directed that since the architect of the appellant had estimated in October, 1989 the cost of completing construction at Rs. 44615 the appellant shall pay the same to the respondent. The Commission further held that the action of he appellant amounted to harassment, mental torture and agony of the respondent, therefore, it directed the appellant to pay a Sum of Rs. 10,000/- as compensation.

10. Who should pay the amount determined by the Commission for harassment and agony, the statutory authority or it should be realised from those who were responsible for it. Compensation as explained includes both the just equivalent for loss of goods or services and also for sufferance of injustice. For instance in Civil Appeal No.....of 1993 arising out of S.L.P. (Civil) No. 659 of 1991 the Commission directed the Bangalore Development Authority to pay Rupees 2446/- to the consumer for the expenses incurred by him in getting the lease-cum-sale agreement registered as it was additional expenditure for alternative site allotted to him. No misfeasance was found. The moment the authority came to know of the mistake committed by it took immediate action by allotting alternative site to the respondent. It was compensation for exact loss suffered by the respondent. It arose in due discharge of duties. For such acts or omissions the loss suffered has to be made good by the authority itself. But when the sufferance is due to mala fide or oppressive or capricious acts etc. of a public servant, then the nature of liability changes. The Commission under the Act could determine such amount if in its opinion the consumer suffered injury to what is called misfeasance of the officers by the English Courts. Even in England where award of exemplary or aggravated damages for insult etc. to a person has now been held to be punitive exception has carved out if the injury is due to, 'oppressive, arbitrary or unconstitutional action by servants of the government' (Salmnond and Heuston on the Law of Torts). Misfeasance in public office is explained by Wade in his book on Administrative Law thus,

"Even where there is no ministerial duty as above, and even where no recognised tort such as trespass, nuisance, or negligence is committed, public authorities or officers may be liable in damages to or malicious, deliberate or injurious wrong-doing. There is thus a tort which has been called misfeasance in public office, and which includes malicious abuse of power, deliberate maladministration, and perhaps also other unlawful acts causing injury."

The jurisdiction and power of the Courts to indemnify a citizen for injury suffered due to abuse of power by public authorities is founded as observed by Lord Hailsham in Cassell and Co. Ltd. v. Broome, 1972 AC 1027, on the principle that, 'an award of exemplary damages can serve a useful purpose in vindicating the strength of law'. An ordinary citizen or a common man is hardly equipped o match the might of the State or its instrumentalities. That is provided by the rule of law It acts as a check on arbitrary and capricious exercise of power. In Rookes v. Barnard, 1964 AC 1129 it was observed by Lord Devlin. 'the servants of the government are also the servants of the people and the use of their power must always be subordinate to heir duty of service'. A public functionary if be acts maliciously or oppressively and the exercise of power results in harassment and agony then it is not an exercise of power but to abuse. No law provides protection against it. He who is responsible for it must suffer it. Compensation or damage as explained earlier may arise even when the officer discharges his duty honestly and bona fide. But when it arises due to arbitrary or capricious behaviour then it loses its individual character and assumes social significance. Harassment of a common man by public authorities is socially abhorring and legally impermissible. It may harm him personally but the injury to society is far more grievous. Crime and corruption thrive and prosper in the society due to lack of public resistance. Nothing is more damaging than the feeling of helplessness. An ordinary citizen instead of complaining and fighting succumbs to the pressure of undesirable functioning in offices instead of standing against it. Therefore the award of compensation for harassment by public authorities not only compensates the individual, satisfies him personally but helps in curing social evil. It may result in improving the work culture and help in changing the outlook. Wade in his book 'Administrative Law' has observed that it is to the credit of public authorities that there are simply few reported English decisions on this form of malpractice, namely, misfeasance in public offices which includes malicious use of power, deliberate maladministration and perhaps also other unlawful acts causing injury. One of the reasons for this appears to be development of law which, apart, from other factors succeeded in keeping a salutary check on the functioning in the government or semi-government offices by holding the officers personally responsible for their capricious or even ultra vires action resulting in injury or loss to a citizen by awarded damages against them. Various decisions rendered from time to time have been referred by Wade on Misfeasance by Public Authorities. We shall refer to some of them to demonstrate how necessary it is for our society. In Ashby v. White, (1703) 2 Ld Raym 938, the House of Lords invoked the principle of ubi jus ibi remedium in favour of an elector who was wrongfully prevented from voting and decreed the claim of damages. The ratio of this decision has been applied and extended by English courts in various situations. In Roncarelli v. Duplessis, (1959) 16 D.L.R (2d) 689, the Sureme Court of Canada awarded damages against the Prime Minister of Quebec personally for directing the cancellation of a restaurant-owner's liquor licence solely because the licensee provided bail on many occasions for fellow members of the sect of Jehovan's Witnesses, which was then unpopular with the authorities. It was observed that 'what could be more malicious than to punish this licensee for having done what he had an absolute right to do in a matter utterly irrelevant to the Alcoholic Liquor Act? Malice in the proper sense is simply acting for a reason and purpose knowingly foreign to the administration, to which was added here the element of intentional punishment by what was virtually vocation outlawry. In Smith v. Fast Elloe Rural District Council, 1956 AC 736 the House of Lords held that an action for damages might proceed against the clerk of a local authority personally on the ground that he had procured the compulsory purchase of the plaintiffs property wrongfully and in bad faith. In Farrington v. Thomson, 1959 VR 286, the Supreme Court of Victoria awarded damages for exercising a power the authorities knew they did not possess. A licensing inspector and a police officer ordered the plaintiff to close his hotel and cease supplying liquor. He obeyed and filed a suit for the resultant loss. The Court observed, 'Now I take it to be perfectly clear, that if a public officer abuses his office, either by an act of omission or commission, and the consequence of that is an injury to an individual, an action may be maintained against such public officer'. In Wood v. Blair (The Times 3, 4, 5 July 1957) a dairy farmer's manageress contracted typhoid fever and the local authority served notices forbidding him to sell milk, except under certain conditions. These notices were void, and the farmer was awarded damages on the ground that the notices were invalid and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages for misfeasance.' This was done even though the finding was that the officers had acted from the best motives.

11. Today the issue thus is not only of award of compensation but who should bear the brunt. The concept of authority and power exercised by public functionaries has many dimensions. It has undergone tremendous change with passage of time and change in socio-economic outlook. The authority empowered to function under a Statute while exercising power discharges public duty. It has to act to subserve general welfare and common good. In discharging this duty honestly and bona fide loss may accrue to any person. And he may claim compensation which may in circumstances be payable. But where the duty is performed capriciously or the exercise of power results in harassment and agony then the responsibility to pay the loss determined should be whose? In a modern society no authority can arrogate to itself the power to act in a manner which is arbitrary. It is unfortunate that matters which require immediate attention linger on and the man in the (street is) made to run from one end to other with no result. The culture of window clearance appears to be totally dead. Even in ordinary matters a common man who has neither the political backing nor the financial strength to match the inaction in public oriented departments gets frustrated and it erodes the credibility in the system. Public administration, no doubt involves a vast amount of administrative *9discretion which shields the action of administrative authority. But where it is found that exercise of discretion was mala fide and the complainant is entitled to compensation for mental and physical harassment then the officer can no more claim to be under protective cover. When a citizen seeks to recover compensation from a public authority in respect of injuries suffered by him for capricious exercise of power and the National Commission finds it duly proved then it has a statutory obligation to award the same? It was never more necessary than today when even social obligations are regulated by grant of statutory powers. The test of permissive form of grant are over. It is now imperative and implicit in the exercise of power that it should be for the sake of society. When the Court directs payment of damages or compensation against the State the ultimate-sufferer is the common man. It is the tax payers' money which is paid for inaction of those who are entrusted under the Act to discharge their duties in accordance with law. It is, therefore, necessary that the Commission when it is satisfied that a complainant is entitled to compensation for harassment or mental agony or oppression, which finding of course should be recorded carefully on material and convincing circumstances and not lightly, then it should further direct the department concerned to pay the amount to the complainant from the public fund 'immediately but to recover the same from those who are found responsible for such unpardonable behaviour by dividing it proportionately where there are more than one functionaries.

12. For these reasons all the appeals are dismissed. In Appeal No. 6237 of 1990 it is further directed that the Lucknow Development Authority shall fix the responsibility of the officers who were responsible for causing harassment and agony to the respondent within a period of six months from the copy of this order is produced or served on it. The amount of compensation of Rs. 10,000/- awarded by the Commission for mental harassment shall be recovered from such officers proportionately from their salary. Compliance of this order shall be reported to this Court within one month after expiry of the period granted for determining the responsibility. The Registrar General is directed to send a copy of this order to the Secretary, Lucknow Development Authority immediately.

13. In Appeal Nos. 6237 of 1900, 5257 of 1990, 3963 of 1989 and 2954-59 of 1992 the appellant shall pay costs to the contesting respondents which is assessed at Rs. 5,000/- in each case. Since the respondents have not put in appearance in other appeals there shall be no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

in October 2009, one of the judges of Madras HC, Justice K Chandru had banned lawyers from addressing his court as 'My lord' and 'Your lordship'

Call me Sir or Mr Judge, not My Lord: HC Justice

RAGHAV OHRI : Chandigarh, Wed May 15 2013, 00:21 hrs

In a first, a judge of Punjab and Haryana High Court has asked that he not be addressed as 'My Lord'.

"It is desired by Justice K Kannan that his Lordship should not be addressed as 'My Lord' in any official communication. His lordship be addressed as Sir or Mr Judge or Justice Kannan. This be circulated to all branches for compliance," says a letter issued by the registrar of the court. The letter has been circulated to all branches.

In an address to the high court bar a fortnight ago, Justice Kannan had urged lawyers to give up the "colonial" practice of addressing judges as 'My Lord'.

Senior judges and lawyers of the high court have appreciated Justice Kannan's step. The Bar Council of India had decided in April 2006 that lawyers could address the court as 'Your honour' and refer to it as 'honourable court' and, in the case of a subordinate court, use 'Sir' or an equivalent word.

The Bar Council agreed that 'My Lord' and 'Your Lordship' were "relics of the colonial past".

In April 2011, the Bar Association of Punjab and Haryana High Court passed a similar resolution; however, a majority of lawyers continued to address judges as 'My Lord'.

CHANDIGARH: In a historical move to discard the colonial practice of addressing the judges of the high court as 'My Lord' or 'Your Lordship', the Punjab and Haryana High Court Bar Association on Thursday passed a resolution asking its members not to address the court using the traditional phrase 'My Lord'.

In its resolution passed unanimously by around 4500 members strong lawyers association has decided that in future the judges should be addressed as 'Sir' or 'Your Honour'. The decision was taken in the general house meeting of the bar held in the jam-packed bar room of the high court on Thursday afternoon. With this, the Punjab and Haryana high court has become second high court in the country after Kerala high court advocates Association that had passed such resolution in June 2007 to take such step.

Talking to the development, President of the High Court Bar Association, Kulbir Singh Dhaliwal said that the bar body has unanimously resolved to stop addressing judges as 'My Lord' or 'Your Lordship' from Thursday.

Dhaliwal further stated, "We passed the resolution to endorse the already existing rules in this concerned framed by the Bar Council of India (BCI) in 2006 that had resolved that the form of address in the Supreme Court and high courts should be 'Your Honour' or 'Honourable Court'. About the forcibility of the resolution, Dhaliwal added that because of habit, some lawyers may continue to say 'My Lord', but gradually they will get used to the new phrase. He also said that bar has received positive response from the judges on this issue.

Background:

The BCI - apex body of the lawyers in country had adopted a resolution in April 2006 and added a new Rule 49(1)(j) in the Advocates Act. As per the rule, lawyers can address the court as 'Your Honour' and refer to it as 'Honourable Court'. If it is a subordinate court, lawyers can use terms such as 'Sir' or any equivalent phrase in the regional language concerned. Explaining the rationale behind the move, the Bar Council had held that the words such as 'My Lord' and 'Your Lordship' were "relics of the colonial past".

The resolution has since been circulated to all state councils and the Supreme Court for adoption but over five years now, the resolution largely remained on paper.

However, in an unprecedented move in October 2009, one of the judges of Madras HC, Justice K Chandru had banned lawyers from addressing his court as 'My lord' and 'Your lordship'

P T I : 7th JAN 2014

New Delhi: Judges should be addressed in courts in a respectful and dignified manner and it is not compulsory to call them 'my lord', 'your lordship' or 'your honour', the Supreme Court today said.

"When did we say it is compulsory. You can only call us in a dignified manner," a bench comprising justices H.L. Dattu and S.A. Bobde observed during the hearing of a petition which said addressing judges as 'my lord or your lordship' in courts is a relic of colonial era and a sign of slavery.

"To address the court what do we want. Only a respectable way of addressing. You call (judges) sir, it is accepted. You call it your honour, it is accepted. You call lordship it is accepted. These are some of the appropriate way of expression which are accepted," it said while refusing to entertain the PIL filed by 75-year-old advocate Shiv Sagar Tiwari.

The bench said his plea for banning the use of such terms and directing the courts that the judges should not be addressed in such a traditional manner cannot be accepted.

"How can this negative prayer be accepted by us," the bench asked, adding "Don't address us as lordship. We don't say anything. We only say address us respectfully."

"Can we direct the high courts on your prayers? It is obnoxious," the bench further said while making it clear that "It is for you to say Sir, Your Lordship or Your Honour.

We can't direct how you have to address the court." "It is the choice of the lawyer to address the court. Why should we say that brother judges should not accept being addressed as lordship.

We have not taken exception when you call as sir," the bench said

The apex court did not accept the advocate's contention that when the rules of Bar Council of India making it mandatory to appear in courts in a particular dress code were followed, the BCI's resolution of 2006 saying that nobody will address the court in India as 'my lord' and 'your lordship' should also be accepted by courts across the country.

The advocate had sought the apex court's direction to strictly prohibit the use of 'my lord' and 'your lordship' in courts alleging that "it is against the dignity of the country."

"Using the words 'my lord' and 'your lordship' which are symbols of slavery should be strictly prohibited to be used in the courts throughout India as it is against the dignity of the country," he had submitted during the last hearing on November 11, 2013 before a bench of Chief Justice P Sathasivam and Justice Ranjan Gogoi.

However, after brief hearing, Justice Gogoi had recused himself from hearing the case and the matter was referred to the bench headed by Justice Dattu.

Tiwari had said that Justice S Muralidhar of Delhi High Court has acted on the resolution and he insists that no advocate address the court by 'my lord' and 'your lordship'.

"The petitioner submits that the same principle should be adopted by all the judges in the judiciary including the Supreme Court, high courts and subordinate courts," he said, adding "My Lords or Your Lordships are signs of relics of colonial posts which in other words are symbol of slavery".

"Unless this court issues a writ in the nature of mandamus, the judges in the courts and the advocates appearing in the courts will not follow the amended Bar Council of India Rules which are mandatory now," Tiwari had said in his petition.

K. S. RADHAKRISHNAN, J.

1. Leave granted.

2. Appellant herein had invoked the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India seeking the following reliefs:
i) Issue a writ, order or direction in the nature of Certiorari thereby quashing the impugned FIR dated 21.12.2011, contained in Annexure No. 1 to this writ petition, lodged at crime No. 97/11 under Sections 419/420 IPC, at Police Station Zaidpur, District Barabanki;
ii) Issue a writ, order or direction in the nature of Mandamus thereby directing the Superintendant of Police, Barabanki, the opposite Party No. 2, and the Investigating Officer, Case Crime No. 797/11, under Sections 419/420 IPC, Police Station, Zaidpur, District Barabanki, the opposite party No. 3, to defer the arrest of the petitioner until collection of the credible evidence sufficient for filing the charge-sheet by following the amended proviso to Sections 41(1)(b) read with Section 41A CrPC;

iii) Issue a writ, order or direction in the nature of Mandamus thereby directing the Superintendent of Police, Barabanki, the opposite party No. 2, for compliance of the provision of Sections 41(1)(b) and 41A CrPC in the investigation of the impugned FIR dated 21.12.2011 contained in Annexure No. 1 to this writ petition, lodged in crime No. 797/11, under Sections 419/420 IPC, Zaidpur, District Barabanki; and
iv) Allow this writ petition with costs.
3. The High Court, after hearing the parties as well as the State, dismissed the writ petition on 9.1.2012 and passed the following order:
"Heard learned counsel for the petitioner and learned Additional Government Advocate. Under challenge in the instant writ petition is FIR relating to Case Crime No. 797 of 2011, under Sections 419 & 420 IPC, police station Zaidpur, district Barabanki. We have gone through the FIR, which discloses commission of cognizable offence, as such, the same cannot be quashed. The writ petition lacks merit and is accordingly dismissed. However, the petitioner being lady, it is provided that if she surrenders and moves application for bail the same shall be considered and decided by the courts below expeditiously."
4. The appellant, complaining that she was falsely implicated in the case, has approached this Court contending that the High Court had failed to exercise its certiorari jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India in not quashing the FIR dated 21.12.2011 and in refusing to grant anticipatory bail to the appellant. Appellant submitted that the High Court ought to have issued a writ of mandamus directing the Superintendent of Police, Barabanki to defer the arrest of the appellant until the collection of credible evidence sufficient for filing the charge-sheet, following the amended proviso to Section 41(1)(b) read with Section 41A Cr.P.C.
5. The Secretary, Up. Secondary Education Board, Allahabad and the District School Inspector vide their letter dated 8.12.2011 registered a complaint alleging that the appellant had committed fraud and forgery in the matter of preparation of documents of Government Office regarding selection for the post of Assistant Teacher and, consequently, got appointment as the Assistant Teacher in Janpad Inter-College at Harakh, District Barabanki, with payment of salary amounting to Rs. 1,10,000/- from the Government exchequer. On the basis of the FIR, Case Crime No. 797 of 2011 was registered under Sections 419/420 IPL before the police Station, Jaizpur, District Barabanki. After having come to know of the registration of the crime, the appellant filed a representation on 27/12/2011 before the Superintendent of police, District Barabanki and the investigating Officer making the following prayer.
"As such through this application/ representation the applicant prays that keeping in view the willingness of the applicant for cooperating in investigating officer upon being called in case crime no. 797/11 u/Ss 419/420 IPC, PS Jaipdur, District Barabanki, order for staying the arrest of applicant be passed so that compliance to the provision 41 (1) (B) Section 41 (A) amended to CrPC 1973 be made."
6. Since the appellant did not get any reply to the said representation, she invoked the extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India by filing Writ Petition Misc. Bench No. 171 of 2012 which was dismissed, as already indicated, on 9.1.2012.
7. When the matter came up for hearing before this Court, it passed an interim order on 1.3.2013, the operative portion of which reads as under:
"Considering the facts and circumstances of the case, we are inclined to direct that in the event of arrest of the petitioner, she shall be released on bail on furnishing personal bond of Rs.50,000/- (Fifty Thousand only) with two solvent sureties for the like amount to the satisfaction of the Trial Court, subject to the condition that she will join investigation as and when required and shall abide by the provisions of Section 438(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure."

8. Shri Aseem Chandra, learned counsel appearing for the appellant, submitted that the High Court has committed an error in not quashing the FIR, since the registration of the crime was with mala fide intention to harass the appellant and in clear violation of the fundamental rights guaranteed to the appellant under Articles 14, 19 and 21 of the Constitution of India. Learned counsel submitted that the appellant was falsely implicated and that the ingredients of the offence under Sections 419/420 IPC were not prima facie made out for registering the crime. Learned counsel also pointed out that the High Court has not properly appreciated the scope of Sections 41(1)(b) and 41A CrPC, 1973 and that no attempt has been made to follow those statutory provisions by the State and its officials.

9. Shri Gaurav Bhatia, learned AAG, appearing for the State, submitted that the investigation was properly conducted and the crime was registered. Further, it was also pointed out that the President has also withheld the assent of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Uttar Pradesh Amendment) Bill, 2010, since the provisions of the Bill were found to be in contravention to Section 438 of the Cr.P.C. and hence the High Court rightly declined the stay sought for under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

10. Shri Siddharth Luthra, Additional Solicitor General, who appeared on our request, submitted that the High Court can in only rarest of rare cases grant pre-arrest bail while exercising powers under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, since the provision for the grant of anticipatory bail under Section 438 Cr.P.C. was consciously omitted by the State Legislature. The legislative intention is, therefore, not to seek or provide pre-arrest bail when the FIR discloses a cognizable offence. Shri Luthra submitted that since there is a conscious withdrawal/deletion of Section 438 CrPC by the Legislature from the Code of Criminal Procedure, by Section 9 of the Criminal Procedure (Uttar Pradesh) Amendment Act, 1976, the relief which otherwise the appellant could not have obtained under the Code, is sought to be obtained indirectly by invoking the writ jurisdiction of the High Court, which is impermissible in law.

11. Shri Luthra also submitted that since the appellant has no legal right to move for anticipatory bail and that practice is not an integral part of Article 21 of the Constitution of India, the contention that the High Court has failed to examine the charges levelled against the appellant, was mala fide or violative of Articles 14 and 21 of the Constitution of India, does not arise. Shri Luthra also submitted that the High Court was not correct in granting further reliefs after having dismissed the writ petition and that, only in extraordinary cases, the High Court could exercise its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India and the case in hand does not fall in that category.

12. I may indicate that the legal issues raised in this case are no more res integra. All the same, it calls for a relook on certain aspects which I may deal with during the course of the judgment.

13. I am conscious of the fact that since the provisions similar to Section 438 Cr.P.C. being absent in the State of Uttar Pradesh, the High Court is burdened with large number of writ petitions filed under Article 226 of the Constitution of India seeking pre-arrest bail. Section 438 was added to the Code of Criminal Procedure in the year 1973, in pursuance to the recommendation made by the 41st Law Commission, but in the State of Uttar Pradesh by Section 9 Criminal Procedure (Uttar Pradesh) Amendment Act, 1976, Section 438 was specifically omitted, the legality of which came up for consideration before the Constitution Bench of this Court in Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab (1994) 3 SCC 569 and the Court held that the deletion of the application of Section 438 in the State of Uttar Pradesh by Section 9 of the above mentioned Amendment Act does not offend either Article 14, Article 19 or Article 21 of the Constitution of India and the State Legislature is competent to delete that section, which is one of the matters enumerated in the concurrent list, and such a deletion is valid under Article 254(2) of the Constitution of India.

14. I notice, therefore, as per the Constitution Bench, a claim for pre-arrest protection is neither a statutory nor a right guaranteed under Article 14, Article 19 or Article 21 of the Constitution of India. All the same, in Karatar Singh's case (Supra), this Court in sub-para (17) of para 368, has also state as follows:

"368 xxx xxx xxx

(17) Though it cannot be said that the High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for bail under Article 226 of the Constitution and pass orders either way, relating to the cases under the Act 1987, that power should be exercised sparingly, that too only in rare and appropriate cases in extreme circumstances. But the judicial discipline and comity of courts require that the High Courts should refrain from exercising the extraordinary jurisdiction in such matters;

xxx xxx xxx"

15. The High Court of Allahabad has also taken the same view in several judgments. Reference may be made to the judgments in Satya Pal v. State of U.P.(2000 Cri.L.J. 569), Ajeet Singh v. State of U.P.(2007 Cri.L.J. 170), LaljiYadav & Others v. State of U.P. & Another(1998 Cri.L.J. 2366), Kamlesh Singh v. State of U.P. & Another(1997 Cri.L.J. 2705) and Natho Mal v. State of U.P.(1994 Cri.L.J. 1919).

16. We have, therefore, no concept of "anticipatory bail" as understood in Section 438 of the Code in the State of Uttar Pradesh. In Balchand Jain v. State of M.P. (1976) 4 SCC 572, this Court observed that "anticipatory bail" is amisnomer. Bail, by itself, cannot be claimed as a matter of right under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, except for bailable offences (Section 436 Cr.P.C., 1973). For non-bailable offences, conditions are prescribed under Sections 437 and 439 Cr.P.C. The discretion to grant bail in non-bailable offences remains with the Court and hence, it cannot be claimed as a matter of right, but the aggrieved party can only seek a remedy and it is on the discretion of the Court to grant it or not. In this connection reference may also be made to the Judgment of the seven-Judge Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Smt. Amarawati and Ors. V. State of U.P.(2005) Cri.L.J. 755, wherein the Court, while interpreting the provisions of Sections 41, 2(c) and 157(1) Cr PC as well as the scope of Sections 437 and 439, held as follows:

"47. In view of the above we answer the questions referred to the Full Bench as follows: (1) Even if cognizable offence is disclosed, in the FIR or complaint the arrest of the accused is not a must, rather the police officer should beguided by the decision of the Supreme Courtin Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1981 before deciding whether to make an arrest or not.

(2) The High Court should ordinarily not direct any Subordinate Court to decide the bail application the same day, as that would beinterfering with the judicial discretion of the Court hearing the bail application. However,as stated above, when the bail application is under Section 437 Cr.P.C. ordinarily the Magistrate should himself decide the bail application the same day, and if he decides in a rare and exceptional case not to decide it on the same day, he must record his reasons in writing. As regards the application under Section 439 Cr.P.C. it is in the discretion of the learned Sessions Judge considering the facts and circumstances whether to decidethe bail application the same day or not, andit is also in his discretion to grant interim bail the same day subject to the final decision on the bail application later.

(3) The decision in Dr. Vinod Narain v. State of UPis incorrect and is substituted accordingly by this judgment."

17. This Court in Lal Kamlendra Pratap Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh and Others(2009) 4 SCC 437, while affirming the judgment in Amarawati (supra), held as follows:
"6.Learned counsel for the appellant apprehends that the appellant will be arrested as there is no provision for anticipatory bail in the State of U.P. He placed reliance on a decision of the Allahabad High Court in Amarawativ. State of U.P.in which a seven-Judge Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court held that the court, if it deems fit in the facts and circumstances of the case, may grant interim bail pending final disposal of the bail application. The Full Bench also observed that arrest is not amust whenever an FIR of a cognizable offence islodged. The Full Bench placed reliance on the decision of this Court in Joginder Kumarv. State of U.P. (1994) 4 SCC 260.
7.We fully agree with the view of the High Court in Amarawati caseand we direct that the said decision be followed by all courts in U.P. in letter and spirit, particularly since the provision for anticipatory bail does not exist in U.P. 8.In appropriate cases interim bail should be granted pending disposal of the final bail application, since arrest and detention of a person can cause irreparable loss to a person's reputation, as held by this Court in Joginder Kumar case. Also, arrest is not a must in all cases of cognizable offences, and in deciding whether to arrest or not the police officer must be guided and act according to the principles laid down inJoginder Kumar case."
18. Later, a two-Judge Bench of this Court in Som Mittal v. State of Karnataka(2008) 3 SCC 753, while dealing with an order of the Karnataka High Court under Section 482CrPC, one of the Judges made some strong observations as well as recommendations to restore Section 438 in the State of U.P. Learned Judges constituting the Bench also expressed contrary views on certain legal issues, hence, the matter was later placed before a three-Judge Bench, the judgment of which is reported in same caption (2008) 3 SCC 574, wherein this Court opined that insofar as the observations, recommendations and directions in paras 17 to 39 of the concurrent judgment is concerned, they did not relate to the subject matter of the criminal appeal and the directions given were held to be obiter and were set aside.
19. I notice in this case FIR was lodged for offences, under Sections 419 and 420 IPC which carry a sentence ofmaximum of three years and seven years respectively with or without fine. Benefit of Section 41(a) Cr.P.C. must be available in a given case, which provides that an investigating officer shall not arrest the accused of such offences in a routine manner and the arrest be made, only after following the restrictions imposed under Section 41(b). The relevant provisions, as it stands now reads as follow:
"41. When police may arrest without warrant.- (1) Any police officer may without anorder from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person –
(a) who commits, in the presence of a police officer, a cognizable offence;
(b) against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists that he has committed a cognizable offence punishable with imprisonment for a term which may be less than seven years or which may extend to seven years whether with or without fine, if the following conditions are satisfied, namely:-(i) the police officer has reason to believe on the basis of suchcomplaint, information, or suspicion that such person has committed the said offence;
(ii) the police officer is satisfied that such arrest is necessary –
(a) to prevent such person from committing any further offence; or
(b) for proper investigation of the offence; or
(c) to prevent such person from causing the evidence of the offence to disappear or tampering with such evidence in any manner, or(d) to prevent such person from making any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade him from disclosing such facts to the Court or to the police officer; or

(e) as unless such person is arrested, his presence in the Court whenever required cannot be ensured,and the police officer shall record while making such arrest, his reasons in writing:
Provided that a police officer shall, in all cases where the arrest of a person is notrequired under the provisions of this sub-section; record the reasons in writing for not making the arrest."
20. Amended provisions make it compulsory for the police to record the reasons for making arrest as well as for not making an arrest in respect of a cognizable offence for which the maximum sentence is upto seven years. Reference in this connection may also be made to Section 41A inserted vide Act 5 of 2009 w.e.f. 01.11.2010, which reads as follows:
"41A. Notice of appearance before police officer– (1) The police officer shall, in all cases where the arrest of a person is not required under the provisions of sub-section
(1) of section 41, issue a notice directing the person against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists that he has committed a cognizable offence, to appear before him or at such other place as may be specified in the notice.
(2) Where such a notice is issued to any person, it shall be the duty of that person to comply with the terms of the notice.
(3) Where such person complies and continues to comply with the notice, he shall not be arrested in respect of the offence referred to in the notice unless, for reasons to be recorded, the police officer is of the opinion that he ought to be arrested.
(4) Where such person, at any time, fails to comply with the terms of the notice or is unwilling to identify himself, the police officer may, subject to such orders as may have been passed by a competent Court in this behalf, arrest him for the offence mentioned in the notice."
21. Above mentioned provisions make it compulsory for the police to issue a notice in all such cases where arrest is not required to be made under Clause (b) of sub-section (1) of the amended Section 41. But, all the same, unwillingness of a person who has not been arrested to identify himself and to whom a notice has been issued under Section 41A, could be a ground for his arrest. Legislation has laid down various parameters, warranting arrest of a person, which itself is a check on arbitrary or unwarranted arrest and the right to personal liberty guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution of India.
22. I may, however, point out that there is unanimity in the view that in spite of the fact that Section 438 has been specifically omitted and made inapplicable in the State of Uttar Pradesh, still a party aggrieved can invoke the jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, being extraordinary jurisdiction and the vastness of the powers naturally impose considerable responsibility in its application. All the same, the High Court has got the power and sometimes duty in appropriate cases to grant reliefs, though it is not possible to pin-point what are the appropriate cases, which have to be left to the wisdom of the Court exercising powers under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.
23. I am also faced with the situation that on dismissal of the writ by the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, while examining the challenge for quashing the FIR or a charge-sheet, whether the High Court could grant further relief against arrest for a specific period or till the completion of the trial. This Court in State of Orissa v. Madan Gopal Rungtareported in AIR 1952 SC 12, while dealing with the scope of Article 226 of the Constitution, held as follows :-"Article 226 cannot be used for the purpose of giving interim relief as the only and final relief on the application. The directions had been given here only to circumvent the provisions of Section 80 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that was not within the scope of Article 226. An interim relief can be granted only in aid of and as ancillary to the main relief which may be available to the party on final determination of his rights in a suit or proceeding. If the Court was of opinion that there was no other convenient or adequate remedy open to the petitioners, it might have proceeded to investigate the case on its meritsand come to a decision as to whether the petitioners succeeded in establishing that therewas an infringement of any of their legal rights which entitled them to a writ of mandamusor any other directions of a like nature; and pending such determination it might have made a suitable interim order for maintaining the status quo ante. But when the Court declined to decide on the rights of the parties and expressly held that they should be investigated more properly in a civil suit, it could not, for the purpose of facilitating the institution of such suit, issue directions in the nature of temporary injunctions, under Article 226 of the Constitution. The language of Article 226 does not permit such an action."

24. The language of Article 226 does not permit such an action and once the Court finds no merits in the challenge, writ petition will have to be dismissed and the question ofgranting further relief after dismissal of the writ, does not arise. Consequently, once a writ is dismissed, all the interim reliefs granted would also go.

25. This Court has already passed an interim order on 1.3.2013 granting bail to the appellant on certain conditions. The said order will continue till the completion of the trial. However, if the appellant is not co-operating with the investigation, the State can always move for vacating the order. The appeal is accordingly dismissed as above.

A.K.SIKRI,J.

26. I have carefully gone through the judgment authored by my esteemed brother, Justice Radhakrishnan. I entirely agree with the conclusions arrived at by my learned brother in the said judgment. At the same time, I would also like to make some observations pertaining to the powers of High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India to grant relief against pre-arrest (commonly called as anticipatory bail), even when Section 438,Cr.P.C. authorizing the Court to grant such a relief is specifically omitted and made inapplicable in so far as State of Uttar Pradesh is concerned. I would like to start with reproducing the following observations in the opinion of my brother, on this aspect which are contained in paragraph 21 of the judgment. It reads as under:

"We may, however, point out that there is unanimity in the view that in spite of the fact that Section 438 has been specifically omitted and made inapplicable in the State of Uttar Pradesh, still a party aggrieved can invoke the jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution of India, being extraordinary jurisdiction and the vastness of the powers naturally impose considerable responsibility in its application. All the same, the High Court has got the power and sometimes duty in appropriate cases to grant reliefs, though it is not possible topin-point what are the appropriate cases, which we have to leave to the wisdom of the Court exercising powers under Article 226 of the Constitution of India."

27. Another aspect which is highlighted in the judgment rendered by Justice Radhakrishnan is that many times in the Writ Petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution of India seeking quashing of the FIR or the charge-sheet, the petitioners pray for interim relief against arrest. While entertaining the Writ Petition the High Court invariably grants such an interim relief. It is rightly pointed out that once the Writ Petition claiming main relief for quashing of FIR or the charge-sheet itself is dismissed, the uestion of granting further relief after dismissal of the Writ Petition, does not arise. It is so explained in para 22 and 23 of the judgment of my learned brother.

28. I would like to remark that in the absence of any provisions like Section 438 of Cr. P.C. applicable in the State of Uttar Pradesh, there is a tendency on the part of the accused persons, against whom FIR is lodged and/or charge-sheet is filed in the Court to file Writ Petition for quashing of those proceedings so that they are able to get protection against the arrest in the interregnum which is the primary motive for filing such petitions. It is for this reason that invariably after the lodging of FIR, Writ Petition under Article 226 is filed with main prayer to quash those proceedings and to claim interim relief against pre-arrest in the meantime or till the completion of the trial. However, the considerations which have to weigh with the High Court to decide as to whether such proceedings are to be quashed or not are entirely different than that of granting interim protection against the arrest. Since the grounds on which such an FIR or charge sheet can be quashed are limited, once the Writ Petition challenging the validity of FIR or charge-sheet is dismissed, the grant of relief, incidental in nature, against arrest would obviously not arise, even when a justifiable case for grant of anticipatory bail is made out .

29. It is for this reason, we are of the opinion that in appropriate cases the High Court is empowered to entertain the petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India where the main relief itself is against arrest. Obviously, when provisions of Section 438 of Cr.P.C. are not available to the accused persons in the State of Uttar Pradesh, under the normal circumstances such an accused persons would not be entitled to claim such a relief under Art. 226of the Constitution. It cannot be converted into a second window for the relief which is consciously denied statutorily making it acase of casus omissus. At the same time, as rightly observed in para 21 extracted above, the High Court cannot be completely denuded of its powers under Article 226 of the Constitution, to grant such a relief in appropriate and deserving cases; albeit thispower is to be exercised with extreme caution and sparingly in those cases where arrest of a person would lead to total miscarriage of justice. There may be cases where pre-arrest may be entirely unwarranted and lead to disastrous consequences. Whenever the High Court is convinced of such a situation, it would be appropriate to grant the relief against pre-arrest in such cases. What would be those cases will have to be left to the wisdom of the High Court. What is emphasized is that the High Court is not bereft of its powers to grant this relief under Art. 226 of the Constitution. A Bench of this Court, headed by the then Chief Justice Y.V.Chandrachud, laid down first principles of granting anticipatory bail in the Gurbaksh Singh v. State of Punjab 1980 Crl. L.J. 417 (P&H), reemphasizing that liberty… - 'A person who hasyet to lose his freedom by being arrested asks for freedom in the event of arrest. That is the stage at which it is imperative to protect his freedom, in so far as one may, and to give full play to the presumption that he is innocent.

30. In Joginder Kumar v. State of U.P. and Others, 1994 Cr L.J. 1981, the Supreme Court observed:"No arrest can be made because it is lawful for the police officer to do so. The existence of the power to arrest is one thing. The justification for the exercise of it is quite another. The police officer must be able to justify the arrest apart from his power to do so. Arrest and detention in police lock-up of a person can cause incalculable harm to the reputation and self esteem of a person. No arres tcan be made in a routine manner on a mere allegation of commission of an offence made against a person. It would be prudent for a police officer in the interest of protection of the constitutional rights of a citizen and perhaps in his own interest that no arrest should be made without a reasonable satisfaction reached after some investigation as to the genuineness of a complaint and a reasonable belief both as to the person's complicity and even so as to the need to effect arrest."

31. It is pertinent to explain there may be imminent need to grant protection against pre-arrest. The object of this provision is to relieve a person from being disgraced by trumped up charges so that liberty of the subject is not put in jeopardy on frivolous grounds at the instance of the unscrupulous or irresponsible persons who may be in charge of the prosecution. An order of anticipatory bail does not in any way, directly or indirectly; takeaway for the police their right to investigate into charges made or to be made against the person released on bail.
32. The purposes for which the provisions of anticipatory bail are made are quite obvious. One of the purposes of the arrest is that the accused should be available to the investigating machinery for further investigation and questioning whenever he is required. Another purpose is that the trial should not be jeopardized and for this purpose the restrictions on the movements of the accused are necessary. The genuineness of the alleged need for police custody has to be examined and it must be balanced against the duty of courts to uphold the dignity of every man and to vigilantly guard the right to liberty without jeopardizing the state objective of maintenance of law and order.
33. I would also like to reproduce certain paragraphs from Kartar Singh and Ors. V. State of Punjab(1994) 3 SCC 569, wherein Justice K. Ramaswamy, speaking for the Court, discussed the importance of life and liberty in the following words.
"The foundation of Indian political and social democracy, as envisioned in the preamble of the Constitution, rests on justice, equality, liberty and fraternity in secular and socialist republic in which every individual has equal opportunity to strive towards excellence and of his dignity of person in an integrated egalitarian Bharat. Right to justice and equality and stated liberties which include freedom of expression, belief and movement are the means for excellence. The right to life with human dignity of person is a fundamental right of every citizen for pursuit of happiness and excellence. Personal freedom is a basic condition for full development of human personality. Art.21 of the Constitution protects right to life which is the most precious right in a civilized society. The trinity i.e. liberty, equality and fraternity always sblossoms and enlivens the flower of human dignity. One of the gifts of democracy to mankind is the right to personal liberty. Life and personal freedom are the prized jewels under Art.19 conjointly assured by Art.20(3), 21 and 22of the Constitution and Art.19 ensures freedom of movement. Liberty aims at freedom not only from arbitrary restraint but also to secure such conditions which are essential for the full development of human personality. Liberty is the essential concomitant for other rights without which a man cannot be at his best. The essence of all civil liberties is to keep alive the freedom of the individual subject to the limitations of social control envisaged in diverse articles in the chapter of Fundamental Rights Part III in harmony with social good envisaged in the Directive Principles in Part IV of the Constitution. Freedom cannot last long unless it is coupled with order. Freedom can never exist without order. Freedom and order may coexist. It is essential that freedom should beexercised under authority and order should been forced by authority which is vested solely in the executive. Fundamental rights are the means and directive principles are essential ends in a welfare State. The evolution of the State from police State to a welfare State is the ultimate measure and accepted standard of democratic society which is an avowed constitutional mandate. Though one of the main functions of the democratic Government is to safeguard liberty of the individual, unless its exercise is subject to social control, it becomesanti-social or undermines the security of the State. The Indian democracy wedded to rule of law aims not only to protect the fundamental rights of its citizens but also to establish an egalitarian social order. The individual has to grow within the social confines preventing his unsocial or unbridled growth which could be done by reconciling individual liberty with social control. Liberty must be controlled in the interest of the society but the social interest must never be overbearing to justify total deprivation of individual liberty. Liberty cannot stand alone but must be paired with a companion virtue; liberty and morality; liberty andlaw; liberty and justice; liberty and common good; liberty and responsibility which are concomitants for orderly progress and social stability. Man being a rational individual has to life in harmony with equal rights of others and more differently for the attainment of antithetic desires. This inter twined net work is difficult to delineate within defined spheres of conduct within which freedom of action may be confined. Therefore, liberty would notalways be an absolute license but must arm itself within the confines of law. In other words, here can be no liberty without social restraint. Liberty, therefore, as a social conception is a right to beassured to all members of a society. Unless restraint is enforced on and accepted by all members of the society, the liberty of some must involve the oppression of others. If liberty be regarded a social order, the problem of establishing liberty must be a problem of organizing restraint which society controls over the individual. Therefore, liberty of each citizen isborne of and must be subordinated to the liberty of the greatest number, in other words common happiness as an end of the society, lest lawlessness and anarchy will tamper social weal and harmony and powerful courses or forces would be at work to undermine social welfare and order. Thus the essence of civil liberty is to keepalive the freedom of the individual subject to the limitation of social control which could be adjusted according to the needs of the dynamic social evolution. The modem social evolution is the growing need to keep individual to be as free as possible, consistent with his correlative obligation to the society. According to Dr. Ambedkar in his closing speech in the Constituent Assembly, the principles of liberty, equality and fraternity are not to betreated as separate entities but in a trinity. They form the union or trinity in the sense that to divorce one from the other is to defeat the very purpose of democracy. Liberty cannot be divorced from equality. Equality cannot be divorced from liberty. Nor can equality and liberty be divorced from fraternity. Without equality, liberty would produce supremacy of law. Equality without liberty would kill individual initiative. Without fraternity, liberty and equality would not become a natural course of things. Courts, as sentinel on the qui vive, therefore, must strike a balance between the changing needs of the society for peaceful transformation with orders and protection of the rights of the citizen.(Para 374)

34. It was also held in that judgment that the High Courts under Art.226 had the right to entertain writ petitions for quashing of FIR and granting of interim protection from arrest. This position, in the context of contours of Art.226, is stated as follows in the same judgment: "From this scenario, the question emerges whether the High Court underArt.226 would be right in entertaining proceedings to quash the charge-sheet or to grant bail to a person accused of an offence under the Act or other offences committed during the course of the same transaction exclusively triable by the Designated Court. Nothing is more striking than the failure of law to evolve a consistent jurisdictional doctrine or even elementary principles, if it is subject to conflicting or inconceivable or inconsistent result which lead to uncertainty, incongruity and disbelief in the efficacy of law. The jurisdiction and power of the High Court under Art.226 of the Constitution is undoubtedly constituent power and the High Court has untrammeled powers and jurisdiction to issue any writ or order or direction to any person orauthority within its territorial jurisdiction for enforcement of any of the fundamental rights or for any other purpose. The legislature has no power to divest the court of the constituent power engrafted under Art.226. A superior court is deemed to have general jurisdiction and the law presumes that the court has acted within its jurisdiction. This presumption is denied to the inferior courts. The judgment of a superior court unreservedly is conclusive as to all relevant matters thereby decided, while the judgment of the inferior court involving a question of jurisdiction is not final. The superior court, therefore, has jurisdiction to determine its own jurisdiction, may be rightly or wrongly. Therefore, the court in an appropriate proceeding may erroneously exercise jurisdiction. It does not constitute want of jurisdiction, but it impinges upon its propriety in the exercise of the jurisdiction. Want of jurisdiction can be established solely by a superior court and that in practice no decision can be impeached collaterally by an inferior court. However, acts done by a superior court are always deemed valid wherever they are relied upon. The exclusion thereof from the rule of validity is indispensable in its finality. The superior courts, therefore, are the final arbiters of the validity of the acts done not only by other inferior courts or authorities, but also their own decisions. Though they are immune from collateral attack, but to avoid confusion the superior court's decisions lay down the rules of validity; are not governed by those rules. The valid decision is not only conclusive, it may affect, but it is also conclusive in proceedings where it is sought to be collaterally impeached. However, the term conclusiveness may acquire other specific meanings. It may mean that the finding upon which the decision is founded as distinct or it is the operative part or has to be conclusive or these findings bind only parties on litigated disputes or that the organ which has made the decision is itself precluded from revoking, rescinding or otherwise altering it."

35. It would be pertinent to mention here that in light of above mentioned statements and cases, the High Court would not be incorrect or acting out of jurisdiction if it exercises its power under Art.226 to issue appropriate writ or direction or order in exceptional cases at the behest of a person accused of an offence triable under the Act or offence jointly triable with the offences under the Act.

36. It is pertinent to mention that though the High Courts have very wide powers under Art.226, the very vastness of the powers imposes on it the responsibility to use them with circumspection and in accordance with the judicial consideration and well established principles, so much so that while entertaining writ petitions for granting interim protection from arrest, the Court would not go on to the extent of including the provision of anticipatory bail as a blanket provision.

37. Thus, such a power has to be exercised very cautiously keeping in view, at the same time, that the provisions of Article 226 are a devise to advance justice and not to frustrate it. The owers are, therefore, to be exercised to prevent miscarriage of justice and to prevent abuse of process of law by authorities indiscriminately making pre-arrest of the accused persons. In entertaining such a petition under Art.226, the High Court is supposed to balance the two interests. On the one hand, the Court is to ensure that such a power under Art.226 is not to be exercised liberally so as to convert it into Section 438,Cr.P.C. proceedings, keeping in mind that when this provision is specifically omitted in the State of Uttar Pradesh, it cannot be resorted to as to back door entry via Art.226. On the other hand, wherever the High Court finds that in a given case if the protection against pre-arrest is not given, it would amount to gross miscarriage of justice and no case, at all, is made for arrest pending trial, the High Court would be free to grant the relief in the nature of anticipatory bail in exercise of its power under Art. 226 of the Constitution. It is again clarified that this power has to be exercised sparingly in those cases where it is absolutely warranted and justified.
