Lessons from WHO's H1N1 pandemic scare.

Pandemic-that-never-really-was

It started with the WHO tweaking the definition of pandemic which helped it to declare H1N1 or swine flu as a pandemic in June 2009. Earlier, for an outbreak to be declared a pandemic it had to be “several, simultaneous epidemics worldwide with enormous numbers of deaths and illness”.

One lesson this surely has for national governments, especially those with limited health budgets that they cannot afford to squander away on “fake pandemics” and on stockpiling vaccines of dubious efficacy, is to be more circumspect about WHO advisories. The global epidemiological watchdog it might be, but it would pay to remember that even the WHO advisers could be on the take from drug companies and that even WHO recommendations could be driven by motives other than a pure commitment to public health.

The World Health Organisation, (WHO) born in 1948 with the lofty ideal of providing leadership on global health matters, stands discredited by a major scandal over declaring a "pandemic-that-never-really-was" to benefit pharmaceutical companies. Till today, the world body has been unable to produce conclusive evidence to the contrary.

It started with the WHO tweaking the definition of pandemic which helped it to declare H1N1 or swine flu as a pandemic in June 2009. Earlier, for an outbreak to be declared a pandemic it had to be "several, simultaneous epidemics worldwide with enormous numbers of deaths and illness". The WHO dropped the last two conditions about serious illness and lots of deaths from the definition. On June 11, when the pandemic was declared, though nearly 30,000 confirmed H1N1 cases had been reported from 74 countries, only 144 people had died. Hence, by the old definition H1N1 would not have qualified as a pandemic. So far, the WHO has been unable to explain satisfactorily why the definition had to be changed. Various European countries had signed so-called "sleeping" contracts with large pharmaceutical groups which would take effect only on the declaration of a pandemic by the WHO. This has fueled the allegation that the WHO rushed into declaring a pandemic under pressure from the powerful pharmaceutical lobby.

The Swine flu vaccination program stopped due to 12 people dying of apparent heart attacks.

Remind me how many have died after receiving a Covid-19 vaccine?

Where's the accountability?

Listen to the late Shri Rajeev Dixit ji, how the media is spreading Swine flu (2009) fear for the Pharma company. Dixit ji died suspiciously in 2010. Many leaders and celebs died suspiciously who spoke against the drug mafia.

WHO pushing pandemic fear is nothing new resulting in vaccines being developed in a hurry which cause side effects.
